Australian trial finds POSITIVE bias towards women in employment, government stops trial...

https://pmc.gov.au/resource-centre/domestic-policy/going-blind-see-more-clearly-unconscious-bias-australian-public-services-shortlisting-processes - PDF of study is at the bottom of the page.

The Australian Government recently released a study done by world leading Professor Michael J. Hiscox (Professor of International Affairs in the Department of Government, Harvard University) about gender biases in Australian Government Employment.

The purpose of the trial was to increase the amount of women in senior positions of the government by de-identifying applications for senior positions in the Australian Public Service. We all knew what was going to happen. Turns out, when the CV or Resume is de-indentified, more men are employed than women, and women are FAVOURED in employment over men when their gender appears on the CV. The Australian Government (which is full of cucks) has decided to stop the trial because it was not helping women have more representation in the senior positions of the Government work force.

Excerpt from study:

"We found that the public servants engaged in positive (not negative) discrimination towards female and minority candidates:

- Participants were 2.9% more likely to shortlist female candidates and 3.2% less likely to shortlist male applicants when they were identifiable, compared with when they were de-identified.
- The positive discrimination was strongest for Indigenous female candidates who were 22.2% more likely to be shortlisted when identifiable compared to when the applications were de-identified."

Good luck trying to find this reported or discussed in the news anywhere. The SJW mass media and government has suppressed this study massively.

This is one of the most frustrating things we deal with on reddit: the belief that scientists are these pure, unbiased beings who only seek the objective truth. Try to look into the actual data or question the political motives behind a study, and you get mobbed.

It doesn't necessarily mean the science is wrong, just that certain areas of science that could be funded with that money instead are starved of funding and science that will further the states agenda is advanced. So things like cancer research are inhibited so we can make more advanced weapons.

There is no monolithic "science". It's a human run endeavor with all the typical human failings including often not being a meritocracy (of ideas) that over time will correct itself (hopefully) but in the shortterm is often wrong. Science was often pushed forward when old thinkers died and new ideas they suppressed took hold.

Science isn't pure and often misleading because it can be brought. I think the tobacco industry had something like 700-1000 studies on its side back when the Surgeon General made his landmark report back in 1963 (opposing side have over 5,000 studies).

Lead industry had similiar preeminent scientists producing studies in the 1960s and early 1970s before leaded gas was banned (stuff was known as dangerous hundreds of years before and the specific stuff used to make leaded gas pretty much right when it came out because the health of the workers in those industries).

This is especially relevant today as the biggest cigarette companies moved since then to buy the biggest food companies and are doing the same tactics because they know their own history all too well.

Also, since 1980, federal government has slashed research budgets and that left a vacuum for private companies and guess what? Private companies don't fund what makes them look bad and money will corrupt anyone.

There are 3 types of lies: Lies, damned lies, and statistics. Scientists need to eat, sleep, and shit like anyone else and they make use of all three if it puts money on the plate. Paying off college ain't cheap and grants are few and far in between and need to be chased. Various industries will get nice and cozy real quick if you produce something they can spout to the newspapers loud and proud and clear.

One of those studies done at the behest of an oil company was ripped apart as heavily biased, not based in reality, and so horribly skewed as to be completely useless. Pimental/Patzek study on ethanol fuel is utterly and completely wrong, showing ethanol fuel to be negative in eroei (energy return on energy invested) when the reality is ethanol provides more energy than it requires to be made. Doesn't matter if it's true, as long as people believe it and keep buying their product.

Shit, I bet you even believe that study since its shouted all the time, despite being so very wrong. It's only value is to oil companies as propaganda. Every study not using the base numbers from Pimental shows ethanol, even supposedly bad corn ethanol, to be quite positive in eroei.

Future_Alpha • 1 point • 1 August, 2017 01:48 AM

It doesn't necessarily mean the science is wrong

Actual yes it does. There is such a thing as 'conflict of interest' and if you read a scientific paper you will see a section where the authors must state a conflict of interest. If they do not and it turns out that they had a conflict of interest, a huge scandal will erupt, the editorial will pull the paper and invalidate all of the results.

For example, there are a crap ton of 'health' studies funded by Gatorade but although the conclusions SOUND reasonable, they are based on faulty experimental design and faulty results and fudged statistics - all designed to validate the fundamental premise that Gatorade wants them to validate.

This is the same case with the often touted 'Food pyramid' that the American and Canadian government releases claiming it is the 'most nutritious' way to eat. The food pyramid is wrong and was not based upon strong science, but was rather done for political reasons.

grandaddychimp • 1 point • 1 August, 2017 02:16 PM
```

No, that doesn't prove the science wrong. Saying the science is wrong just because the people conducting it had an agenda is an ad hominem logical fallacy.

```
Future_Alpha • 2 points • 1 August, 2017 02:29 PM ad hominem logical fallacy

Not it isn't. If the scientists had an agenda, that means that they set up the experiment in such a way to 'prove' their preconcieved notions (you don't really 'prove' anything in science but for lack of a better word atm I am using it). That is why the 'science' is thrown out.

You'd be surprised at how easy it is to set up an experiment to validate any conclusion you want. That is how feminist bullshit gets touted as science.

grandaddychimp • 1 point • 1 August, 2017 02:35 PM

If the experiment was flawed, it will be ripped to shreds by criticizing the methodology or by experiments that prove it false. Simply saying that the scientists are wrong because they had an agenda does not prove the science is wrong. You have to actually prove it wrong in order for it to be wrong.

Future_Alpha • 2 points • 1 August, 2017 02:46 PM

If the experiment was flawed, it will be ripped to shreds by criticizing the methodology or by experiments that prove it false

You'd think that would be the case, but often times it isn't.

There are two types of scientific journals: there are the 'big' ones like Nature or New England Journal of Medicine or Stem Cells that have a very rigorous peer review process with a strong vetting process/editorial process that will filter out bunk science by 'ripp[ing] to shreds by criticizing the methodology or by experiments that prove it false'.

Then there is the second type of journal. These journals are usually smaller, not as well known and often do not have much (if any) affiliation with large research institutions. There is no peer review process and if it exists its just cursorary or it confirms ideas that sound nice. They will publish anything as 'science'. This is why there is so much information/studies out there that demonstrate opposite things. This is also often times where companies like Gatorade will publish there studies 'confirming' that their drink is the gift of god (not literally) and should be consumed by anyone. They then publicize it widely that their 'study' got published and any dissenting voices of actual scientists criticizing the methodology get drowned out. Another example of such bunk science being published is that vaccines cause autism.

grandaddychimp • 1 point • 1 August, 2017 02:57 PM

That's always been the case with science though. The beauty is that the objective truth always wins out in the end. Science doesn't give a shit about politics or your opinions.

Or as Max Planck put it:

"A scientific truth does not triumph by convincing its opponents and making them see the light, but rather because its opponents eventually die..."

The problem is with people failing to recognize the difference between credible and non credible sources. You can't fix stupid, but science will.

This is absolutely right. Most women should not be in STEM or logic based professions. The amount of special treatment is so systemic that it's become engrained. Little engineer Susie having a hard time, fine someone to "help" her. Which means have another engineer do most of the work. If it's a serious project then they insulate the fuck out of her by filling the team with guys known for "giving it their all" or whatever beta hardworking bullshit motivational quotes they use.

The worst part is they make just as much without having to work as hard and the imperative means they'll still get promoted up the ranks.

related to unbiased judgement has been covered. Not only that tho, if a woman succeeds at the interview better than other candidates I would hire her. There's a lot of tests & profiling these days in the hiring process that try to improve fairness. The problem is that currently I've read & heard of candidates getting picked for interviews cause of the gender.

In the quest for equality & diversity companies have ended up hiring more women and more incapable workers resulting in massive losses and eventual business crashes. Vasiliy would tell u a whole more about all this. There's a reason women are put more into HR cause they love starting shitt and drama.

Of all departments in a company with politics involved HR will have the most issues. It's really crazy now.

Short-changedChad • 20 points • 30 July, 2017 07:12 AM*

This is outrageous, but the one positive we can take is that scenarios such as this can be a stepping stone to 'waking-up'.

Scientific disciplines are, for the time being, still filled mostly by beta males trained to be rational thinkers (again for the time being). Imagine working on this study as a male only to see a gross injustice like this that flies in the face of everything you've ever trained in- I'm angry and I don't even like science.

It's bullshit like this that creates the Gamergates, the Seth Richs etc. Every little bit helps to swing the pendulum back to where it should be.

Also- this was reported on by the ABC (our government funded national broadcaster) albeit on the 24 news channel that nobody watches and early in the morning. Some how they managed to spin that it was men's fault-no surprises there

EDIT: Changed 'subsidised' to 'funded' laserdicks • 16 points • 30 July, 2017 11:15 AM

I think science beta males (and they truly are shockingly beta) are too thirsty to ever take a stand.

Business men though don't give a fuck and will just find ways around any enforced feminism (finding ways around regulation is pretty well the main structure these days already).

MattyAnon • 6 points • 30 July, 2017 07:07 PM

"Wimmin are equal but oppressed" is believed so deeply as to be believed as axiomatic truth.

Why? Because people literally DARE NOT EVEN THINK that women might be unequal. Just try and say "women are different to men" in polite company and see what happens.

The feminist/left/whiteknights/gullible fools of the world have shut down the discussion into gender differences.

If the facts contravene women-are-equal-but-oppressed? Well in that case, the facts must simply be wrong.

Young Australian here.

Australia is by far one of the most SJW cucked countries on the planet.

www.TheRedArchive.com Page 7 of 18

As ethnic minorities have migrated over the years they have not assimilated into Australian culture - and in turn they have become demanding on the government. Since there is so many cultures - the government can't play favourites and made a mistake in giving handouts (the doll) to a few, and then eventually all of them. They are too afraid to take a stance because of Murdoch media. This has invaded all aspects into Australian life where companies are forced to keep gender and culture ratios balanced in the workplace.

Australia is pretty much America 2.0 - except imagine every single woman is up themselves and entitled as - and don't throw away pussy what so ever.

AussiecuntTRP • 54 points • 30 July, 2017 08:40 AM

Yep. Also a young Australian here.

I think this is becoming the way of the world unfortunately. I read about shit like this coming from many countries. America, Canada, UK, Sweden, Germany to name a few. And of course I've seen it first hand in Australia.

Pretty much every guy and girl I meet is BP to some extent. Believing that man should always provide for the woman and listen to what she says etc. My dad, mum, two sisters and their boyfriends all believe this.

The facade of "male privilege" is still running rampant. Victorian children are going to be taught about how they're bad for being born male.

Every university in the country has safe spaces, diversity councils etc. and some even have mandatory antirape seminars.

This country is entering a dark and scary place. You'll see in 20 years massive increases in male suicide because of being taught from kindergarten that men are bad and that all women's problems are their fault.

And here is the absolute worst thing about it. We don't have free speech laws. It is well within the realm of possibility that laws will be passed to prevent RP ideas being discussed altogether. It could become illegal to stand against feminism. Can you fucking believe that.

exit sandman • 14 points • 30 July, 2017 01:50 PM*

It could become illegal to stand against feminism. Can you fucking believe that.

As a European: Yes, I can. Section 2, bullet point e.

Granted, it's just a framework and not a law, but it shows the thought processes of some people. To them, being opposed to feminism is like being an antisemitic gay-hating racist totalitarian (i.e. a Nazi).

In Canada, we have a city, Richmond, (suburb of Vancouver) that is over 70% Asian, as of 2011. Trudeau government stopped the ethnicity question in the 2016 census. The problem is that our west coast is largely dependent on land value (real estate is 30% of GDP) and foreign (Chinese) yen artificially inflate the value of housing to the point where no young Canadian will be able afford Vancouver in their lifetime. And we won't do anything about it soon because Canada is a primary industry nation that has the rest of GDP in Softwood Lumber and Crude Oil and Gas. Of course, Oil price has been shit on by Saudi Arabia, and Canadian Softwood Lumber got shit on by Donald Trump's tariff policy. Land value is all Canada has. Everyone wants to live here. So selling out the land from under our children's feet is the only way to maintain GDP, taxation, and growth. Ignoring completely the problems of Gen X, and Millennials, who can't afford homes, can't afford women, and are being ethnically cleansed from the centers outwards while our boomers waste 8 hours a day in front of the TVs watching CNN, and worse CBC to maintain status quo.

I don't know if Canada is different. But I was in a huge hook up culture about 7 years ago in College. Having up to 3 girls a night. But I think Tinder has actually changed the game in the other direction.

I had a girl who texted me saying she "is wet". So I texted back asking what she was wearing and she said only a towel. So I called her and she didn't want me to come over. 7 years ago that would be code word for being horny.

I think all millennials want is validation. I can't say this is the free sex era anymore. This is the instant validation era.

I live in Melbourne, I don't think its quite that bad actually. I've seen a fair few programs and ads and stuff around here that even show some support for men which is quite surprising. It's still more femcentric biased, but what first world country isn't these days. Girls here still put out super easy as well. Better quality average of girls as well than most other places I've been (europe, U.S etc)

[deleted] • 1 point • 1 August, 2017 12:23 AM and don't throw away pussy what so ever.

Look, I'm on this sub so I've had my issues with women/s, no doubt. But Australian women are the easiest lays on the planet, equal first with every other anglosphere country, and Sweden.

The feminst media in Australia is Fairfax, not Murdoch. Murdoch papers are mostly rubbish (The Australian is the exception and has some high quality journalism) but SMH is much worse, see the Daily Life section which is an ode to female victimhood.

Re any cultures: Living in London, I like the diversity. Diversity itself isn't the problem, how it's managed is.

Australian immigrants don't integrate very well. I believe this due to the planning laws as much as anything else. E.g. London has house's living next to billionaires, where's Australian cities are stratifed by money. Hence Sydney and Melbourne are segregated on class and ethnic lines. However Australia has done a remarkable job at peacefully bringing in large numbers of immigrants: 27% of all Australians weren't born there, the largest of any major country by far. By comparison, the US and UK are about 11% each.

The issue is time. We are an incredibly young culture (as opposed to nation). Australia's identity is permanently in flux and more so than any other nation for the reason above, there are always people redefining what it is to be Australian and undermining what few values we have.

Future_Alpha • 1 point • 1 August, 2017 01:53 AM

Australia is by far one of the most SJW cucked countries on the planet.

I think Canada would give you guys a run for your money.

lopsidedlucky • 1 point • 1 August, 2017 02:05 AM

Here's what I'd like to know about Australia. How many single late 30's and 40's women are there? I'm imagining even the most beta males wouldn't wife up these women. Especially since I heard the aussie girls are grown large.

You would think once half the population of middle aged women are single people would start waking the fuck up.

If any country deserves to be overrun by SJWs and cucks it's yours. Sorry mate but big daddy govt needs to keep her main voterbase happy.

Stop lying America would never treat native americans the way you lot treat aborigines. LMAO

Short-changedChad • 16 points • 30 July, 2017 08:23 AM

Being overrun by SJW's and cucks would mean aboriginals were treated better. You need to make up your mind.

[deleted] • 0 points • 30 July, 2017 10:09 AM in which way are aboriginals treated bad?

The positive discrimination was strongest for Indigenous female candidates who were 22.2% more likely to be shortlisted when identifiable compared to when the applications were deidentified."

Short-changedChad • 8 points • 30 July, 2017 10:23 AM

They are not. They are supported by governments, communities, churches, local councils, businesses, virtue signalers ad infinitum to the tune of billions of dollars ($45,000 per person if I recall correctly)..

Most of their issues are brought upon them by themselves. But it is all blamed on white settlers because we 'invaded' their land with our invasion force of 2 ships and a couple of sheep. Now we are stuck in the situation where you are rasicst if you say come and join us in modern society because it doesn't respect their heritage, but also racist if you leave them to their own devices which involves alcohol, drug, chemical, spousal and child abuse.

In the past we did what we thought was right and removed children from these homes so they could have a proper up bringing. That is now called the 'stolen generation' and if you don't apologise for past generations doing this, even though you weren't even alive then, you are also called a racist.

GroundhogLiberator • 2 points • 30 July, 2017 02:16 PM

What are aboriginals really like? I've only read some ridiculously over-the-top stories on /pol/.

I feel a little bad saying this, but they don't even look fully human to me. If they weren't still walking around and someone dug up an old aboriginal skull, I guarantee the scientific community's first thought would be that they had found evidence of a new species.

Short-changedChad • 1 point • 31 July, 2017 02:35 AM

Anyone who tells you they are the same as us has never lived near them. They are human, but on the whole they are primitive and not suited to living in modern society (there are exceptions of course- but these are mostly not full-blooded)

It would be nice to not be racist, but facts are facts: they are one generation out of the trees. /pol/ is right.

GroundhogLiberator • 1 point • 31 July, 2017 02:44 AM

www.TheRedArchive.com Page 13 of 18

I appreciate the insight.

I heard that rape in their communities was rampant, and that they drink gasoline to get high. I also read about cannibalism but that had me skeptical.

Short-changedChad • 1 point • 31 July, 2017 03:01 AM

They sniff and drink petrol to get high in remote communities where there is no access to other drugs. So much so that the petrol that is sent there has to be doctored to stop them sniffing it. This only worked for so long as recently it was discovered that they were breaking into airport compounds and stealing the av gas from planes. Now the government (read tax payer) has to pay for security guards and patrol dogs to stop them from doing this.

Rates of sexual abuse and domestic violence in aboriginal communities are far higher than any other segment of society. But that didn't stop our national broadcaster (government funded) from running a story last week about domestic violence in Christian communities. It's disgusting

If you want a laugh- look up Penile Subinscision. That's what aboriginals were doing to each other before white settlers got here. Yet they tell us to respect their culture and heritage

GroundhogLiberator • 1 point • 31 July, 2017 03:25 AM

I remember seeing that on 4chan too.

Fucking savages.

[deleted] • 2 points • 30 July, 2017 10:29 AM so australia is as bad as my country (germany) then... are there any decent countries left?

Short-changedChad • 6 points • 30 July, 2017 10:51 AM

It would be if we weren't so isolated. Australia is a hostile place- one that was tamed by hard working men so that everyone can now live in abundance (for the moment). So most people aren't awake to this SJW cultural marxism yet.

I'm hoping that Sweden collapses and serves as a warning before it gets as bad as it sounds in Germany here. Viel Glück mein deutscher Freund...

Look Ma Im On Reddit • 7 points • 30 July, 2017 08:47 AM

Cunt if they actually wanted to work we wouldn't have a problem, they'd rather lay around drunk or high on petrol and abuse every white person that walks by.

The same happened recently when GitHub decided their call for paper process would be gender unbiased. Only men where selected.

newls • 1 point • 8 September, 2017 10:55 PM

GitHub also stopped their patchwork quilt of Employees of the Month by objective criteria because male employees consistently won it every month. Blatant sexism!

Similar results have been reported when phone interviews obfuscate the applicants voice. Turned out women were getting preferential treatment, and when anonymised women did worse.

End result same as this study: quietly dismissed because it didn't fit the narrative.

Obviously "men are being prejudiced against, we should fix this" never occurred to anybody.

desbest • 8 points • 30 July, 2017 11:20 AM

Can I see the source of this telephone study?

MattyAnon • -5 points • 30 July, 2017 01:39 PM

I hate that I can't say anything on here without people demanding "cite sources or I invalidate your argument", as if THEY are right because I haven't provided enough references.

Do your own research. I'm not publishing scientific papers here, I'm telling you what I've found out about the world. I don't have a list of references. The study exists, go do your own work.

desbest • 16 points • 30 July, 2017 03:12 PM

If we never had to provide evidence for any social phenomenon, anyone could make any claim and demand anyone to believe it without merit. Feminists would be able to say we live in a patriarchy and rape culture and demand others believe it without providing a shred of evidence.

I found a source now damanamathos • 27 points • 30 July, 2017 08:15 AM

You do a trial to find out what the results are. They did that, and published it in a paper. Of course they stopped the trial after the study is done. Strange title.

hatefulreason • 7 points • 30 July, 2017 03:42 PM

but we've known this for like 20 years, the jobs can be done with a little less staff so let's hire some females to entertain and do the menial tasks. not to mention that in hospitality, tv and any job that involves dealing with people, the females are predominant because dumbasses would rather look at them than appreciate quality content

BigSloppySunshine • 7 points • 30 July, 2017 05:53 PM

Seriously. When's the last time you saw a woman on a construction site not holding a sign or a man answering phones at a receptionist desk?

Women get the easy jobs. Always. Working in a factory I saw that first hand. It pissed me off so much but HR basically told me to fuck off. They were all women, of course. With easy fucking desk jobs sitting around talking all day.

Short-changedChad • 6 points • 31 July, 2017 02:28 AM

There is a special place in hell reserved for the women on construction sites holding a sign. The look on their faces like they are about to be shipped to the Gulag, while they stand there earning the same amount per hour as the man using tools and equipment that could easily end his life if he is not careful. Fuck those entitled cunts.

Mechanical_One • 6 points • 30 July, 2017 09:37 AM

It's obvious that the average competent of women is far lower than that of men and a mixture of SJW conditioning and male protective instinct has pushed women into positions far in excess of their actual commercial value.

laserdicks • 1 point • 30 July, 2017 11:17 AM

I wouldn't say far lower. Just 6% lower. And then, only lower in the areas of work that the study was focused.

They're much more competent than men at more feminine tasks such as nurturing and home related activities.

Mechanical One • 1 point • 2 August, 2017 06:24 PM

Women do less well than men as things are and 6% worse than that when their sex is hidden.

chief-w • 5 points • 30 July, 2017 12:08 PM

There name is BETA. That alone made me laugh. The rest pretty clear. Having scientific proof that women have it easier in the job market isn't enough. They are setting the stage to move into "bigger and better" things for themselves.

I applied to a bank a little while ago. At the end of the application it had a bunch of questions regarding gender/sexual orientation/disability.

I made the mistake of answering these questions. I can't help but feel they didn't hire me because I'm white and a male. Bare in mind this particular bank you can go into any branch in my city and count on one hand the number of white males that work there.

Now if I get the minority test again I decline to answer.

For what it's worth:

I applied to a hospital for about 5 positions the beginning of the summer. Among one was an office receptionist of sorts. I got a phone interview and even before that I knew I wasn't going to get the job. Honestly, how many men do you see taking patient information?

Any who, i got the phone interview and apparently the job pays $14.50 an hour. I'm finishing up my Bachelors and that money would've helped so much. I have an associates on SCIENCE. Not Arts, not Gen Ed. I also am majoring in computer science. I have two certificates in C++ and Java. Typing is no issue for me. I also work full time while attending school. Long list of customer facing experience. I also worked at a kids arcade for 2.5 years and am very comfortable around kids.

I really hope I didn't get the job because someone with less qualifications than me had tits. Maybe they did pick someone better than me but I highly doubt you're gonna get someone more efficient than a CS major at typing in data, with years of customer service, and great academic achievements for a receptionist job.

Maybe it has something to do with the fact that unjustly favoring blacks and women is called POSITIVE! discrimination whereas favoring white males is called NEGATIVE discrimination...

because white males are evil and supporting them in any fashion is negative...

PowerVitamin • 1 points • 30 July, 2017 06:29 PM [recovered]

You should look a little deeper and find out that minorities were even more harshly judged for being male.

WhereIsTheEvidence1 • 1 point • 30 July, 2017 09:45 PM

Depends on where you live. In countries with a higher density population in a specific race, you'll see that country supports that race. In the west everyone thinks that white people are privileged, when it actuality, the west offers a level of equality higher than any other civilisation on the planet. To the point where minorities are more privileged than the locals in some instances which is fucking ridiculous that a government would support other people over its own citizens.
