

Remember the female Assistant District Attorney who got fired for harassing a male Uber driver? Here is her satisfying apology.

December 30, 2017 | 689 upvotes | by [\[deleted\]](#)

I've never thrown my head back so hard in laughter. Most satisfying, real life confirmation of TRP at its finest.

If you haven't seen the original video, the short news clip is here.

Apology video here. What's the TRP confirmation? She never apologizes to him. She only apologizes for her language, and not her behavior. She then continues to defend herself by claiming she didn't feel safe, when her tone in the incident was nothing but belligerent. Another example of women not taking responsibility for their actions.

In the original incident, an overtly drunken assistant district attorney gets in a car with a male Uber driver. She starts berating him when she gets uncomfortable with the route because it's "not familiar", even though he's just trying to follow GPS. She curses at him, calls him stupid, belittles and mocks him, and tells him to "shut the fuck up". A fancy job title really inflates a woman's ego.

He starts recording. Politely asks her to get out of the vehicle or he'll call the cops. She doesn't budge. He calls the cops. She gets fired.

In the aftermath/apology video, she immediately pulls out the tears card. States her career is over, shouldn't have talked the way that she did, blah blah blah.

What really tickled my humor was her last statement near the end. Literally made me laugh out loud.

Far too often we see the justice system go after innocent men. This was not one of those cases.

Protect yourself.

WOOOOOW. she pulled the "feared for her safety" card... what a piece of shit htown42 • 67 points • 31 December, 2017 04:01 PM

I feared for my safety with this guy, so I refused to leave his vehicle and stayed around cursing at him
I'M SO SCARED

BiggieTheDoc • 153 points • 30 December, 2017 05:37 PM

I'm the assistant district attorney I want the cops to fuck you up..... yet she's not a horrible person.

ShitBoy_StinkerBomb • 37 points • 31 December, 2017 01:37 PM that statement right there proves she can't have any position with any power at all, because she can and will abuse it

babaner1 • 354 points • 30 December, 2017 05:59 PM

She's not sorry at all, she's sorry that she got caught. That's why filming is key guys , have some secret cameras just in case, sure you might get prosecuted for violating privacy in some countries/states, but rather than being wrongfully guilty for rape. It's one thing to be playing the game well, but it's important to be wise and better be safe than sorry. Especially in this day and age.

DatingCoach111 • 83 points • 30 December, 2017 09:10 PM

Applies directly to cheating, as well. Completely guilt free until they've got a spotlight on them.

MarvelousWhale • 74 points • 30 December, 2017 11:12 PM

I want to reinforce your point heavily, I recently slept with an ex a few times after dumping her years ago, and after sex she told me she was using tinder and other datings apps recently. I was curious if I could fish out some TRP truths by lightly asking her more about her experience with it since it's rare as fuck girls admit the use of those apps to me or friends.

Short story, she admits she feels guilty that she's seeing me whilst in a somewhat relationship with one of the guys she met on tinder, he's buying her nice shit, treating her like an angel, works as a software developer in Manhattan, loaded with cash... Etc. But she didn't feel guilty when she came twice while riding me reverse cowgirl style five minutes later when we started fucking again.

She only stated she was guilty as a minor defense mechanism because of what she was divulging to me, she was only using it as a trick word to defend against me developing a negative perspective of her. I saw right through it however.

dr_warlock • 23 points • 31 December, 2017 12:27 AM

You shouldn't feel guilt about anything you intentionally did. Because if you do something, it should be with conviction. You do something because want to and don't need any other reason.

destraht • 18 points • 31 December, 2017 12:59 AM

Its amazing how often we "beg for our character" in Western life. Simply wanting something has become a dirty idea in many contexts. Fuck I was an edgier guy in Northern California but they had me beat down in many ways that I couldn't realize. Then I sold all of my shit and bounced around until I was living in Nicaragua for 1.5 years like it was Cuba Lite. One day an older expat told me "man those lesbians have your head all fucked up". My home city is man-hating lesbian central. The mental head tyranny goes deep and I thought that I was free. Its deep.

[deleted] • 15 points • 31 December, 2017 01:53 AM

That is an extension of the liberal feminist mentality that's destroying western manhood (and society in general tbh)

UncleChido • 4 points • 31 December, 2017 07:38 AM

Not exactly. Almost all actions are from volition. Guilt is regret of taking a wrong action.

TheIceReaver • 0 points • 31 December, 2017 04:48 AM

If something you intentionally did went awry, blocking yourself from feeling guilt is such a dumb thing to do. We are humans, humans make mistakes plenty. If you really want to maintain this demigod, no morals, apathetic vibe around you I'd just ask why the heck you care so much what women think of you. Don't bother replying

[deleted] • -1 points • 31 December, 2017 05:02 AM

You're an optimist. You film a woman cheating and this is what you get.

He raped her.

It's because you didn't give her enough attention.

You're an untrusting asshole

You probably broke a law by invading her privacy.

So clearly you're the one that needs to be punished for her cheating.

RedPillFusion • 33 points • 31 December, 2017 12:10 AM*

You can tell just from the original incident tape and her follow up video exactly what she's really saying when the cameras are off.

"That retard drives a fucking Uber for a living! He can't fucking do this shit to me. I will dedicate my life to finding a way to get him back, that ugly piece of retarded shit. He probably didn't even finish high school, that fucking loser. Fuck him. And FUCK the DA for siding with him and all the other low lifes supporting him. I'm an attorney actually doing something with my life. Idiots like him shouldn't even be allowed to drive an Uber."

All women lie about sexual assault unless due process reveals otherwise timowens862 • 1 point • 31 December, 2017 12:08 AM

That actually wouldn't protect you I believe. If it's illegal to record then those recordings can't be used as evidence babaner1 • 18 points • 31 December, 2017 12:29 AM

They can be used as evidence. The worst thing that could happen however is that you get a charge on invading privacy, and if you ask me it rather be guilty of that than rape.

Overkillengine • 2 points • 31 December, 2017 01:14 AM

In the court of law.

There still remains that far more powerful court of public opinion.

timowens862 • 11 points • 31 December, 2017 03:22 AM

I don't think anyone gives a fuck about the court of opinion when they're doing 20 years in prison for rape because the jurors weren't allowed to see the recording

Overkillengine • 6 points • 31 December, 2017 06:44 AM

The judges and local officials do when a leaked tape of what actually happened ruins their careers.

But by all means, keep blindly trusting trusting the system to do the right thing. See where it gets you.

timowens862 • 1 point • 31 December, 2017 11:41 PM

If evidence legally cannot be used because of the way it was obtained then it is as if it does not exist. The public getting a hold of it would not get anyone in trouble because the judge would be following the law

destraht • 10 points • 31 December, 2017 05:15 AM

I don't date women at all in the US. I take a look around at the DMV, Starbucks, etc where very typical people go to and she would easily stand out as one of the better looking among them. Maybe you haven't looked around at how ugly the "average" woman is or you live in a very high rent go getter place that has tons of babes.

[deleted] • 0 points • 31 December, 2017 08:45 PM

Freedom most likely doesn't see women outside of porn. There are a lot of neckbeards who LARP what can only be described as a 14 year olds fantasy. She's clearly attractive, especially for her age. She's still a raging thot though and this whole episode with her is a very good case study of red pill teachings in the real world.

TheDevilsAdvokaat • 59 points • 30 December, 2017 06:23 PM

Treefactnum1 • 4 points • 31 December, 2017 05:01 AM

I was on the news once getting a tree off a house after a tornado and people lowballed me offers to do their tree work on Facebook. Point is take it with a grain of salt cause "other job offers" could just be news stations offering 50 bucks for an interview.

MattyAnon • 27 points • 31 December, 2017 02:43 AM

States her career is over, shouldn't have talked the way that she did, blah blah blah.

"I felt scared" is bullshit... if you're scared you don't stay in a car and attack the driver.

She should go to prison for this.

Far too often we see the justice system go after innocent men. This was not one of those cases.

If there wasn't a recording, he'd be facing jail time based on her account of events.

ktchong • 22 points • 31 December, 2017 09:18 AM*

Here is the full apology video: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tbzSxtGhYtQ>

She apologized to everyone except the driver, and then she accused him of lying, (i.e., "not everything he said was true,"... but he had not said anything: he recorded her words and used her own words against her;) and then she further accused him by insinuating that he intended to sexually assault her, (i.e., "I felt unsafe with him," "he took me into a dark street;") Thank goodness he recorded everything and had proof that he did not sexually assault her, otherwise she would have falsely accused him of sexual assault.

Here's an interesting question why would you have to mature beyond the teenager stage if between the ages of 18 and 24 you could have literally anything you wanted by hinting you might spread your legs?

People who have everything don't mature because they don't need to. The rich kid in elementary school got everything he wanted he never had to learn to barter and negotiate. Likewise wealthy spoiled kids always develop a drug problem because they never had to deal with negative emotion from not having, rich daddy always fixed it for them.

destraht • 18 points • 31 December, 2017 12:12 AM

Likewise wealthy spoiled kids always develop a drug problem because they never had to deal with negative emotion from not having, rich daddy always fixed it for them.

From what I can tell of even middle class kids who didn't go without and developed problems is that there is also a huge emptiness in their home. We are increasingly putting kids on cold storage until they are quite old, meaning that it is very difficult for them to casually find work because of labor laws, insurance clauses about working near some fairly harmless trash compactor, etc. They have few ways to be productive and generally go without any sort of coming of age practices. For too many It is a vacuous empty existence without love, broken ass shitty homes or parents who both work and TV out. Its an excruciating existence that honestly isn't worth living while the system is telling them that everything is cool and that it must be just them so take these drugs but then don't take these other drugs. I'm from a middle class suburb and honestly, what a shit hole of pointlessness. Its ridiculous how many of the neighbor kids fell into stupid crap.

Don't think it's the reason, otherwise fat/ugly chicks would be paragons of maturity. It's even simpler and more general than this in my experience: chicks are cowards, they are scared by things we outgrew at around 12 years old, things as ridiculous as spiders, the dark, mild pain, ghost movies, etc. I'm sure there is a biological reason for it and it balances our risk-loving nature (e.g. I'm very happy that my GF is risk-averse when it comes to taking care of my kids), but it remains that fear is a hindrance in learning real-life stuff and maturing.

GayLubeOil • 46 points • 30 December, 2017 07:23 PM

Fat Chicks styling in their mobility scooters have no problem getting laid and manipulating beta males with that beluga pussy. They are just upset because they deserve Brad Pit and that they can't fit into a size 2 because of raycism.

Romerike • 16 points • 31 December, 2017 01:51 AM

You could see by the way she held her eyes that she was angry and incredulous that anybody was even questioning her integrity or anything about her. Reminds me of a friend of mine who was slammed by a female judge about how he "didn't get" that he was to be punished only to have her two weeks later be pulled over for drunk driving and then give the cop the old "don't you know who I am?" routine. He knew who she was, she was a judge that was about to be kicked off the bench. True story.

Women never doubt themselves on ethical grounds. They only 'apologise' once they feel their actions have damaged themselves, e.g. when they get caught.

[deleted] • 3 points • 31 December, 2017 05:06 PM

Lmao there's this lady that lives in my parent's home. A few weeks after i bought a new iron into the home (where she contributes absolutely nothing). She knocks on my door one morning complaining that the new iron i bought burnt her favourite top which my sister gave to her as a gift. I suggested well maybe you turned the heat up too high for the material and goes "noo, steam irons aren't supposed to burn clothes". This is someone who's a qualified, practising lawyer and has her Masters already. She hamstered a way to blame me for her stupidity because she didn't want to take responsibility for her action. She's never apologized for that nonsense till today.

Reformed65 • 1 points • 30 December, 2017 07:53 PM [recovered]

Crocodile tears, it's as if she was told to make a speech immediately after she got fired when in reality she had enough time to cry and empty it all out.

"A different route" my ass, her excuses. If you were concerned for your life, why was one of the 2 options she gave to the driver was "Take me home.".

I'd love to keep an eye on the company that has their offer accepted by the DA Assistant.

Leave_em_leakin • 9 points • 30 December, 2017 08:02 PM

If she honestly feared for her safety, she would have gotten out of his car. She's so stupid. You don't start acting that way and cursing at someone you feel threatened by.

RPangerandacceptance • 19 points • 30 December, 2017 08:28 PM

I love doing shit like that. "I'm sorry you got so upset" is my favorite. Once they accuse me of insincerity I can move to "what more do you want from me, I've already apologized" gaslighting can be very enjoyable.

juliusstreicher • 8 points • 30 December, 2017 11:09 PM*

Wow! Basically, the same thing she said immediately after the incident was reported, except she did apologize for the language. Not even for cursing the driver, just for using the language! I'm surprised none of the news broadcasters picked it up, it was so glaring.

ChampOfTheFuture • 45 points • 30 December, 2017 04:51 PM

In the same vein as Kathy Griffin's "apology" after she was fired <https://youtu.be/KVTTEBPKq98>

Let's not forget that she sent an 11 years old boy into a panic because the child couldn't tell if the picture of the severed head of his father was real or fake.

This goes beyond the war of the sexes, feminism and what have you. The Pill is amoral, but when all is said and done, when you get laid enough, it's nice to get access to morality again and not see this kind of occurrences as a satisfying come back at feminists. The line of thought of these women is simply evil and anthropologically immoral.

Zchavago • 4 points • 31 December, 2017 02:10 AM ozaku7 • 1 point • 31 December, 2017 09:39 AM

So she apologizes for her language, then she says she feared for her safety because the dude is taking her a different route, while she climbed in the Uber and probably couldn't even tell her address. If she could, the Uber driver definitely would have driven to her house and kicked her out.

[deleted] • 0 points • 31 December, 2017 05:00 AM

I remember this.

And yeah. This is obvious to guys that know the deal, but it's good for newcomers to see the breakdown of facts.

record record record record.

No one e cares about men and women have all the power. Act like a fucker can ruin your life with a word cause they can.

You have car insurance right? You planing on speeding down a school zone drunk off your ass? You planning on getting into a wreck today? Why do you need insurance if you're gonna be a safe driver? Same reason you should record interactions with women.

You're not a rapist. But you record anyway. You do all the right things and have consent, bit you really order anyways. You keep your cool and tell her go calm down, but you really order anyways. Why? Cause when cops roll in, or the neighbors hear shouts, you're already guilty and whatever the woman says is fact.

Protect yourself. Even if you record shit and prove you're innocent, people will still refuse to hold her accountable. Cause insurance doesn't work that way.
