Contacting an Ex After Meeting Up With Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 tips for contacting an ex after meeting up with her:

1. Keep your text messages brief and use humor

No matter how comfortable it feels to interact with your ex via text again after meeting up with her, don't get sucked into having long conversations with her via text.

If you do, she can get bored, lose interest or become turned off by how available you seem and how much effort you're putting into writing lots of text back and forth with her.

So, if you're going to contact her after meeting up with her, just make sure that your texts are brief, to the point and include some humor.

For example: You might text her something along the lines of, "Hey, it was great catching up with you the other day. Let's do it again some time! I have something important I want to tell you if we do catch up."

Texting something like that will put all sorts of ideas in her head and she may start wondering, "What does that mean? Will he ask me to get back together again if we catch up again? Does he want to tell me that he's seeing another woman?"

She'll then most likely text back with something like, "Tell me now."

You can then tease her a little bit more by responding with, "I'm not sure if I can tell you over the phone."

At this point, her curiosity will probably be driving her crazy and she will likely text something like, "Come on! Don't do this to me. Just tell me."

You can then text, "Well, I wasn't going to tell you over the phone, but..." and then send the text like that.

Then, a few moments later, text, "You looked cute with that cappuccino moustache you had today at the cafe! haha."

She will then laugh and mostly send you an, "Lol" or a, "Haha."

She will also feel relieved that wasn't anything serious (e.g. you putting pressure on her to get back together again, you moving on with another woman).

Add all that up and what do you get?

Her having feelings for you.

That is what really counts.

When you actively make your ex have feelings for you, she naturally feels drawn to you and wants to see you again.

Another thing to remember when contacting an ex after meeting up with her is

2. Don't try to discuss the relationship with her via text

After a meet up with an ex, a guy will sometimes make the mistake of trying to discuss the relationship with her or attempt to convince her to give him another chance.

For example: He might text something like, “Hey, thanks for the catch up today. It was so great to see you again. I just want to say again that I’m really sorry for everything that happened between us in the past. I promise you that if you give me another chance, things really will be different this time around. I just want you to know that I’m serious about us getting back together again and I’m willing to do whatever it takes for that to happen. Of course, I don’t expect you to want me back right now, but please think about it.”

Essentially, he’s hoping that she will be impressed by his commitment to her and give him another chance.

Yet, here’s the thing!

When a guy tries to discuss the relationship with his ex via text, it usually only makes her pull away from him.

Why?

Unless the feelings are mutual (i.e. she felt very attracted to him at the meet up and is now missing him), she’s not going to feel motivated to try and fix the relationship and give him another chance.

Additionally, if he’s texting her way too much text and asking way too many questions, it becomes stressful and time-consuming for her to type up her replies to him.

In many cases, she types and deletes and then types and deletes her reply multiple times, before eventually deciding on what to write.

He then send her another big text with more questions or more open conversation topics regarding the relationship.

Eventually, she loses interest or just gets annoyed at how much of her time he is taking up and how little benefit she is going to get in return (i.e. because the feelings aren’t mutual yet, so she’s not even sure if she wants to give him another chance).

So, if you want to ensure that you and her get back together, avoid discussing the relationship via text in the hopes that it will lead to her saying something, “Okay, I’ve heard enough. Let’s get back together!”

It just doesn’t work that way.

If you want her back, your primary purpose needs to be reawakening her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction (e.g. by being very confident, using humor, being emotionally masculine, flirting), rather than trying to discuss your way back into a relationship.

Another thing to remember when contacting an ex after meeting up with her is to

3. Call her to say hi and have a laugh together

Texting is fine, but try to get to a phone call so you and her can have a fun chat and then agree to meet up again.

It’s much quicker and easier to do that on a call than via text, in most cases.

When should you call her?

Depending on your situation (e.g. you or her work odd hours, one of you is away on business), the call can happen the next day, a few days later or at the latest a week later.

Don't wait any longer than that because she may get the impression that you're not interested and are moving on.

She might then agree to go out with her single girlfriends to meet guys, hook up with a guy who has a crush on her or begin using online dating.

So, get back to her within a week by calling her.

For example: Call her and after the initial â€œHello, how are you?â€ you can then ask her, â€œSo, ex girlfriendâ€|what have you been up to since I saw you?â€

She will most likely laugh at the fact that you're referring to her as ex girlfriend and then say, â€œNothing much, how about you?â€

If your meet up was a few days, or even a week before she might say something like, â€œJust the usual stuff like studies/work. What about you? What have you been doing?â€

[image: Tease your ex about her freckles, or compliment her on her lack of freckles]

You can then say (in a joking way, of course), â€œNothing muchâ€|Iâ€ve been sitting for the last 20 minutes trying to count the freckles on your nose in my mind. I think you have about 3,487. What do you think? Did I get it right or am I way off? Maybe 4000?â€

If she doesn't have freckles she might say something like, â€œI donâ€t have freckles!â€ and you can laugh and say, â€œOh yeahâ€|that's rightâ€|you have perfectly clear skin. I forgotâ€ and have a laugh.

On the other hand, if she does have freckles, she might pretend to be shocked by saying, â€œI donâ€t have that many! How can you say that?â€

You can then reply with something like, â€œIâ€m sorry, but I just donâ€t believe you. Thereâ€s only one way for you to prove it to meâ€| I will need to count them in person!â€ and have a laugh.

By that point, she will probably be laughing, giggling and feeling attracted to you for having the confidence to joke around with her like that.

By the wayâ€|

If you don't think that a joke like that will go well with her, try this one instead:

Call her and say, â€œHey ex girlfriendâ€|what's going on?â€ in a playful voice.

Let her respond and then say something like, â€œAnyway, so I paid for the coffees the other day. Now it's your turn. Take me out for an expensive dinner. Wine and dine me, girlâ€ and have a laugh.

She will most likely laugh and you can then tell her that you were only kidding.

Alternatively, if your girl is the sort of girl who will go along with that, you can get her to pay for dinner when you and her meet up.

4. Get another meet up

[image: Get another meet up]

Whatever you do, make sure that you get her to want another meet up.

Don't beg for it or make it feel like she'd be doing you a favor by meeting up with you.

Make her want it, so she is either suggesting it or will happily agree when you suggest it.

The way to do that is to ensure that you are only focusing on making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you as you interact with her.

In other words, you're being very confident, funny, charismatic, charming and masculine in the way that you approach interactions.

If you do that, she will feel attracted and naturally want to see you again as soon as possible.

Then, when you see her again, be sure to get to a kiss and then sex to get the relationship back on track.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making After Meeting Up With Your Ex

For your ex to have met up with you the first time, it means that she's at least a little bit open to the idea of getting back together.

Whatever you say and do from now on will either make her want you back, or convince her that she should keep moving on without you.

So, here's what you should avoid if you don't want to turn her off and push her away!

1. Thinking that not contacting her will make her chase you like crazy

After meeting up with his ex girl, a guy might say to himself, "If I contact her, she'll think I'm desperate. If I play it cool and ignore her, it will make her want me even more. After all, don't all women want men who play hard to get? I need to be like that now."

He then ignores her and it backfires (i.e. she goes out with her single girlfriends to flirt with guys to make herself feel better because her ex isn't contacting her).

Sometimes not contacting an ex after a meet up can work, but only if she felt very attracted and the meet up and can't deal with the idea of potentially losing him now.

However, if she isn't feel very attracted, she will usually seek to make herself feel better by hooking up with a new guy, or will seek revenge on her ex by ignoring him if he tries to contact her again.

So, if you don't hear from your ex within 2-3 days after meeting up with her, you should make the first move and contact her.

Don't try to play too many mind games with her because it can backfire.

Instead, just be the man in the situation and get her back.

The next mistake is

2. Acting neutral via text

Rather than risking saying that might scare her off, a guy might decide to play it safe by being neutral with her via text (e.g. acting like just a friend, being very nice, not flirting with her).

He hopes that it makes her feel like he isn't pressuring her into a relationship, so she will then give him another chance.

It sounds like it would work, but it doesn't because a neutral approach feels boring to a woman and doesn't create a spark.

Rather than making a woman think, “Wow, my ex is being so sweet and considerate of my feelings. He’s not even pushing me to get back together again. That just makes me want him more!” she starts wondering things like, “Why is he being like this now? Is he interested in getting back together or not? If he’s not interested, what does he want? Why is he wasting my time? Why is he just texting me like a friend?”

Then, all of a sudden, she stops responding and he’s left thinking, “What happened?! Was it something I said? Why isn’t she replying anymore?!”

Don’t let that happen to you.

If you want to get your ex back after an initial meet up, make sure that you keep the momentum going by building on her feelings of respect, attraction and love.

The next mistake is

3. Trying too hard to impress her via text with jokes or confident statements

You need to use some humor and be confident via text, but don’t go overboard with it.

If you’re trying too hard to come up with clever lines and acting way too confident, it can turn her off.

So, add in some confident and humor to make her feel attracted, while also getting to the point.

Don’t try to hide behind the safety of texting back and forth with her because it feels easier for you.

Text back and forth a little bit, but get to a phone call or another meet up.

When you meet up with her again, make sure that you get to a kiss and hook up with her sexually.

If she is playing a little bit hard to get, don’t worry.

[image: Keep building on her feelings and you will get her back]

Just keep building on her feelings and she will naturally want you in a sexual way.

Best of all, she will want it just as much as you do and it will feel amazing for the both of you.

My Ex Doesn't Want Anyone Else to Have Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 common reasons why a woman will say that:

1. She wants to move on before you do

She's just saying that she doesn't want anyone else to have you, so you hang around hoping for another chance.

Meanwhile, she will be secretly flirting with new guys and finding herself a replacement guy, so she can move on before you.

A woman does this to prevent her ex from moving on before she does, so she doesn't feel like she is being left behind or rejected.

Here's what you need to understand...

Even if your ex seems very confident about herself and her attractiveness to you, deep down she might be feeling insecure about her ability to attract a new guy and move on without you.

So, even though she dumped you, it's possible that she's been thinking things like, "What if my ex finds a new woman before I move on? How will I feel then? I can't let him be the one who moves on easily. I don't want to feel like I'm being left behind. I've got to keep him interested for now and make him feel like he has a chance."

[image: She wants to move on before you do]

To prevent you moving on and hooking up with other women before she finds herself a new guy, she might say something like, "I know that I was the one who broke up with you, but I still care about you. I don't want anyone else to have you."

Naturally, that just makes you feel confused about where you stand.

Many guys in your situation begin to wonder, "Why is she saying that? Does she still have feelings for me? Is it a sign that she wants us to get back together again? Do I just need to be a bit more patient and give her more time?"

The answer really depends on the woman, the reason for the break up and whether or not she can quickly find a replacement guy.

In some cases, a woman won't be able to find a new guy and will temporarily get back with her ex to keep him around.

She will then break up with him again when she's ready (i.e. when she has a new guy lined up).

Another reason why your ex might have said that she doesn't want you to have anyone else is

2. She still loves you, but currently doesn't feel enough attraction for you to justify being in a relationship

[image: She doesn't feel enough attraction to justify being in a relationship]

Sometimes, a woman will continue to experience lingering feelings for her ex (i.e. still kind of feels attracted to him and loves him), even though she dumped him and thought that it was the right thing to do for her.

This often happens when the relationship started out well (e.g. they had great sex, had an amazing connection), but ended up feeling more like a friendship than a boyfriend/girlfriend or husband/wife, romantic, sexual relationship.

Some women will put up with that kind of relationship for years, before eventually getting bored of it and believing that another guy could make her feel more attracted and in love.

So, she will go ahead with the break up.

However, just because she breaks up with her guy, it doesn't mean that all of her feelings for him are completely gone.

In many cases like this, the woman still cares for her ex and thinks of him as a great guy.

It's just that she doesn't feel enough of a spark with him to justify getting back into a sexual relationship.

She loves him, but not completely in 'that' kind of way.

So, when she's talking to him on the phone or in person and is enjoying his company, she might say, "I'm sad about us breaking up. It's for the best, but it's not easy for me you know? It's kind of selfish of me to say this, but I don't want anyone else to have you."

Secretly, she may even be thinking, "If only he could make me feel more attracted in the ways I really want, I would be his girl again without a second thought."

What are the ways she really wants?

Well, it depends on the woman.

Some women lose attraction because the guy has lost confidence in himself over the months or years that they've been together.

Other women lose attraction because the guy ended up treating her badly and then suddenly changed and became really nice (in a desperate way) when she began threatening to break up with him.

Each woman is going to want a slightly different thing, but at the end of the day, it all comes down to whether or not you have the ability to make her feel enough attraction to motivate her to want to give you another chance.

When a guy is in a situation like the one you're in now (i.e. your woman has broken up with you, but is saying that she doesn't want anyone else to have you), he can get her back quite easily.

It's all about how he approaches attraction from now on.

However, if he ignores the importance of making her feel attracted and instead just tries to be nice to her, he will ruin his chances and make her feel compelled to get out there and meet new guys who can make her feel attracted.

Here's the thing:

If your ex is saying, "I don't want anyone else to have you," it's often her way of trying to tell you, "Look, I really do care for you, but right now you're not making me feel the way I want to feel when around a guy. If you can start being more masculine than me, rather than making me feel like the more dominant one, then it will make me feel like a real woman around you. When I start to feel like a feminine, attractive woman with you, rather than like your buddy or pal, then getting back together again is something I will definitely want to do."

She's hoping that you take the initiative to level up your ability to make her feel attracted (e.g. go from being neutral and friendly with her, to masculine and sexual), so she has a reason to give you another chance.

For example: When you talk to her on the phone, rather than being neutral or being on your best behavior, add in some naughty flirting to create sexual tension between and make her feel like a feminine woman.

When you change the way you interact with her in a way that turns her back on, her feelings will naturally change.

Her guard will come down and she will open herself to being your woman again.

However, if you continue to make her feel like a neutral friend, she'll probably just keep playing tug of war with your emotions by saying that she doesn't want anyone else to have you and then pushing you away by saying that she doesn't want to be with you in a relationship.

Another reason why your ex might have said that she doesn't want anyone else to have you is that

3. She is inexperienced with break ups

If this is your ex's first or second serious relationship, she might not know how else to handle the situation, other than to hang on to you for a little while and let you drift away slowly.

Women who are experienced with break ups will be very direct and to the point.

The woman will usually then go ahead and unfriend her ex from social media, delete or block his phone number and make any of his emails to her go to her spam folder.

She might also delete all of her photos and videos of him to reduce the chances of her missing him and wanting him back.

However, a woman with less experience may remain open to her ex and try to be nice to him as he moves on.

Little does she know that by remaining open to him, he has the perfect opportunity to re-attract her and get her back.

So, if your ex is currently open to you, it is a good thing.

Use the open communication between you and her to re-attract her and make her want you back.

Another reason why your ex might have said that to you is that

4. She wants the best of both worlds

[image: She wants the best of both worlds]

Sometimes, a woman wants to break up with her boyfriend (or husband), but keep him in her life to make herself feel better.

I refer to this as being her 'comfort friend' and discuss it in this video that

Using her ex as a comfort friend boosts her confidence and helps her avoid the pain of seeing him move on before her.

In that way, not only does she have an ex who is available to her if she ever needs him for something (e.g. to help run an errand for her, as an emergency date for a business function or wedding), but she can always reach out to him and get a reply via text, a phone conversation or even in person interaction if she is feeling a bit lonely.

However, if her ex is using the same old approach to attraction that caused her to lose interest in the first place (e.g. he's too insecure, gives her too much power), then she's not going to want him back. She will just keep him around for her comfort and in some cases, for her amusement.

Cruel, I know, but some men do that to ex woman as well.

So, here's what you need to do:

First, start by asking yourself, “Do I really want her back, or do I want to let her go and try to move on?”

If you feel as though she's not the right woman for you, then move on by finding a new woman who makes you happy.

On the other hand, if you feel as though your ex is the one for you, then don't allow her to mess you around by treating you as her comfort friend while she secretly tries to move on.

How?

Talk to her in a way that creates feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside of her.

Make her really want you in that way.

Don't make the mistake of saying, “Hey, the way you're treating me isn't fair! You're just using me to make yourself feel better.”

That doesn't work.

Women don't feel sexually and romantically attracted to guys who seek pity or try to make them feel guilty for feeling the way they do.

To get her back, you have to change how she feels by changing your approach to her.

For example: The next time your ex says that she doesn't want anyone else to have you, use it as an opportunity to re-attract her.

Laugh at her and say something along the lines of, “Ohhhh, I get it! You still want me! You miss my kisses! You miss my you know what. It's okay! You can admit it. No need to be shy. It's understandable that you still can't get over me” and then have a laugh with her about that.

To test your newfound confidence, she might act a little annoyed and say something like, “You wish! That's not how I feel about you at all!” and you can then laugh at her (in a loving, friendly) and let her see that you're not fooled by her act.

Regardless of how she initially reacts, deep down she will be feeling surges of respect and attraction for you not allowing her to string you along and make you feel like you're just a friend to her now.

She will then want to keep interacting with you and seeing you, which will result in you and her kissing, hooking up sexually and getting back together.

4 Mistakes to Avoid When Your Ex Says That She Doesn't Want Anyone Else to Have You

The bottom line is this:

It doesn't matter what your ex SAYS.

What matters most is what she DOES when you make her feel attracted to you again.

What she will DO is open back up to you, smile more, laugh, touch you and be open to hugging, kissing and hooking up.

What she might SAY are things like, "I'm not sure we should get back together," or "I don't see you in that way anymore" and so on.

Don't pay attention to what she SAYS.

[image: Focus on what she does, not on what she says]

Focus on what she DOES (e.g. cuddle into you when you're on the couch, kiss you, stare into your eyes, keep talking to you, not leave your house or ask you to leave her house and so on).

So, if you want her back, be confident in yourself and just do what works to get her back (i.e. make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you).

While doing that, be sure to avoid the following, common mistakesâ€¦

1. Promising to wait until she's ready to be with you again

When a woman says that she doesn't want anyone else to have her ex guy, he might take it as a sign that she will take him back if he is patient enough.

He might then say to her, "It's okay. I understand that you're feeling a bit hurt and confused from our break up. Why don't you take some time to figure things out and when you're ready, we can work on our relationship. Take your time. I promise that I will wait for you and not hook up with anyone else in the meantime."

He then gives her a lot of space (i.e. he doesn't interact with her in any way for weeks or even months, or stays in contact with her, but only treats her as a nice, neutral friend) and waits for her to change her mind and tell him that she wants him back.

Yet, in most cases, cutting off contact or just being friendly helps her to get over him even faster.

Why?

To begin with, when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she's disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for him.

In other words, she doesn't feel enough respect, attraction and love to justify remaining in a relationship.

So, if he then gives her a lot of space and doesn't do anything to actively spark her feelings for him again, she'll move on or gradually come to realize that she isn't missing her ex and doesn't want him back.

Additionally, when a guy promises his ex that he will wait for her, she starts to perceive him as being desperate, which turns her off even more.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't waste weeks or months waiting for her to give you a clear sign that she's ready to take you back.

Instead, be emotionally courageous enough to take the lead in the ex back process by interacting with her (e.g. via text, e-mail, social media, on the phone and in person) and reawakening her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Another mistake to avoid making is toâ€¦

2. Trying to get her to change her mind by explaining how much she means to you

If a woman has disconnected from her feelings for her ex, him saying, “I just want you to know that I still care about you and only want to be with you. No other woman can take your place in my heart. You mean the world to me and going forward in my life without you life feels wrong,” isn’t going to make that much of a difference to her.

Essentially, if a woman has lost respect and attraction for a guy, it won’t matter to her that he still loves her or really cares about her and wants her back, because the feelings aren’t mutual.

If she’s a caring person, she might feel a little bit sentimental about what they once had together and feel a bit sorry for him, but it’s usually not going to be compelling enough for her to ignore her lack of attraction for him and get back into a relationship.

If she’s not a caring person, she will be happy that he really wants her back and she is able to stop him from moving on by saying things like, “I don’t want anyone else to have you.”

Whatever the case is though, a guy pouring his heart out to a woman who has dumped him usually isn’t going to make her want him back.

Why?

A woman doesn’t want to be with a guy because she feels sorry for him.

She wants to be with him because he makes her feel a lot of respect, sexual attraction and love simply based on how he talks to her and interacts with her.

She doesn’t want to be in a relationship that feels forced or one-sided.

She wants to feel like she’s in love.

So, if you want your ex to change her mind about being broken up, don’t bother telling her how much she means to you because it won’t work.

If she doesn’t feel much respect or attraction for you, she won’t really care about how she means so much to you.

A better way to make her care is to focus on using every interaction you have with her to re-spark her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel feminine and girly, flirting with her to create sexual tension).

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Giving her all the power

Sometimes, a guy mistakenly thinks that if he lets his ex woman control everything and be in charge, she will be happy and want him back.

So, when she says, “I don’t want anyone else to have you,” rather than laugh at her attempts to control him, he tries to please her by promising to stay single and wait until she’s ready to give him another chance.

Alternatively, he starts being extra nice, generous and helpful towards her, in the hopes that it will cause her to take pity on him and give him another chance.

Yet, rather than make a woman think, “Aww, he must really love me to take what I said so seriously. I’d be a fool to let a guy like that go,” she loses respect for him because he didn’t have enough balls to laugh at her for trying to control him.

Hereâs the thingâ

If you allow a woman to control you, she wonât be able to respect you.

Without respect, she canât feel proper, sexual attraction and without sexual attraction, sheâs not going to feel like sheâs in love with you in a boyfriend/girlfriend or husband/wife kind of way.

So, donât let your ex call the shots when it comes to your personal life and donât wait for her to give you the go ahead to begin seducing her back into a relationship.

Instead, just take the lead and get her back now, or find yourself another woman if you donât want her back.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

4. Not using interactions as opportunities to make her have strong, irresistible feelings for you

Itâs understandable that guy will be confused when his ex woman says something like, “I know that weâre broken up, but I donât want anyone else to have you. I know itâs selfish for me to say that, but I canât help it.”

He may begin to wonder, âHuh? What does she mean? Does she want me back? Is she just stringing me along?â

Not knowing what else to do, a guy will often decide to hang around and act like a nice, sweet, neutral friend in the hopes that she will eventually take him back for being so patient and understanding.

Yet, hereâs the thingâ

Being on your best behavior around a woman who doesnât feel attracted to you, isnât going to make her want you.

Additionally, if youâre trying to play her game, she will confuse the heck out of you by constantly changing her mind and giving you mixed signals.

If she notices that youâre confused and are desperately latching onto any good sign she gives you, she will actually lose respect for you and as a result, wonât be able to feel proper attraction for you.

So, donât let that happen to you.

Whatâs should you do instead?

Use your friendship with her as a stepping stone towards making her feel sexually attracted to you again, so she can then fall back in love with you.

The more that you focus on making her experience strong, irresistible feelings for you, the more she wonât want anyone else to have you for real.

Now, her reasons for saying, “I donât want anyone else to have you” wonât be because sheâs stringing you along, or because sheâs on a power trip and enjoying all the attention from you post break up.

Instead, it will be because suddenly, the idea of letting you go feels like it would be the worst decision of her life.

She doesnât want to let you go, miss you for life and regret you as the one that got away.

She wants you backânow.

My Ex Unblocked Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 things you should do now that your ex has unblocked you:

1. Don't try to discuss the relationship too much

[image: Don't try to discuss the relationship too much]

Congrats! She has unblocked you.

Now what?

Rush to get her on a phone call, start talking about your relationship and how you can get back together again?

No.

Chill.

Just because your ex has unblocked your number on her phone, it doesn't mean that she's ready to get into deep discussions about getting back together again.

As tempted as you might feel to work things out with her right now (e.g. by texting her to apologize to her for your past mistakes, telling her that you've missed her and still care for her, asking her to tell you what she wants you to do to make her happy), it's best to avoid the heavy stuff and only focus on light, easy-going and funny texts before getting her on a call and meeting up with her in person.

If you get into deep, serious conversations about the relationship with your ex before making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again, she will likely feel overwhelmed and may even block you again.

So, if you don't want to scare her away, leave the serious discussions for after you've reactivated her feelings for you and made her want you back.

When you approach things in that order, she will keep her guard down and be open to taking things to the next level with you, rather than being turned off again and blocking you.

For now, just focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you again.

That doesn't mean you need to be constantly making jokes or being silly around her.

Instead, it's simply about not being so serious about everything and not going over past mistakes or issues again and again.

When she's smiling, laughing and enjoying being in your presence, it becomes difficult for her to continue seeing you in a negative light.

[image: Re-attract her in person after getting unblocked]

She opens back up to you and you can then hook up with her sexually and get the relationship back together.

Another thing to remember now that she has unblocked you is

2. Don't try to suck up to her

Sometimes, a guy feels so grateful to his ex for unblocking him that when he interacts with her again, he tries to stay on her good side by saying and doing whatever he thinks will please her (i.e. he sucks up to her, acts really nice, is on his best behavior at all times).

For example: He might agree with whatever his ex is saying about him (e.g. she calls him a jerk, blames him for everything that happened between them) and not stand up for himself because he's afraid that she will get angry and block him again.

He might also become very nice, polite and considerate and make himself available to her whenever she needs something (e.g. money, a favor, an answer to a question, anything), in the hope that she will be impressed by his devotion to her and reward him with another chance.

Unfortunately, that's not how women respond to men who suck up to them.

Instead, when a woman has lost respect for her ex as a man, him sucking up to her just makes her feel even more turned off by him for not having a backbone.

She begins to think, "Does he really think that by sucking up to me and being a good little boy I'm just going to forget about everything he did in the past and give him another chance? His behavior only confirms to me that he still doesn't get what I really want from a man and is merely hoping that if he's extra nice to me, I will feel sorry for him and give him another chance. No way. He doesn't get it. I'm actually starting to regret unblocking him now. Maybe I need to block him and get on with my life, because he clearly hasn't changed."

So, don't waste time and energy trying to suck up to her.

Be good to her, but don't be a pushover.

Why?

If you let her bully you or treat you badly because you're secretly hoping that she'll feel guilty and then give you another chance, you're just going to be turning her off even more.

Women are not attracted to wimpy, fearful behavior like that from men.

If you want to impress her, then be good to her, but be more ballsy and confident.

Another thing to remember now that she has unblocked you is that

3. Keep your replies brief and add in humor

Naturally, the first thing you might want to do when you realize that your ex has unblocked you, is send her a text message to open the lines of communication between you once again.

That's fine.

However, something you need to bear in mind is that you can't get your ex back via text alone.

You need to talk to her on the phone, or meet up with her in person to re-attract her for real.

Texts are okay, but don't rely on them as your number one and only way to get her back.

When texting her, keep things brief and add in some humor at times, so she enjoys chatting with you and doesn't feel overwhelmed with how much text you are sending her.

On that note, make sure you don't send her walls of text telling her how happy you are that she's unblocked you, how much you've missed her, how your life has been going, or how much you want to work things out with her.

Women hate it when guys get too emotional via text or attempt to have long conversations via text because they don't have the balls to call her on the phone, or talk to her in person.

A woman loves it when a guy respects her time by sending her a text that is not only short and to the point, but also makes her smile and feel good to be hearing from him.

For example:

You: Hey, you finally unblocked me. I promise to only send you 100 texts a day. Lolâ€¦|just kidding. Hope you're well.

Her: Lolâ€¦|

Then, leave it for 48 hours and text her something likeâ€¦|

You: Hey ex girlfriend. How was your day?

Her: Not bad. Mostly work stuff. How about you?

You: Ummmâ€¦|I probably shouldn't tell you.

Her: Why not? What?

You: It's way too much to text. Lolâ€¦|I'll give you a call in 5.

Then, call her in 5 minutes and have a fun, easy-going chat with her.

If she asks why you couldn't text her, just say, "Imagine trying to text everything that we're talking about now. What a pain in the ass that would be" and have a laugh with her.

By approaching your communication with her in that way, youâ€¦â€¦re not only making her smile, but you are also making her feel attracted to the new and improved you.

She's curious about the new you, who isn't needy, annoying or pressuring her to get back into a relationship.

As a result, she begins looking forward to hearing from you, or opens up and hints that she would be okay to meet up and say in person.

By the way, if you approach it a little differently and don't get her on a phone call right away, you can do that after a little more texting.

Whatever you do though, make sure that youâ€¦|

4. Get to a phone call

Don't keep texting to the point where she eventually loses interest and either stops replying or blocks you again.

Thereâ€¦â€¦s no point in breaking down her walls of resistance and making her look forward to talking to you, if you donâ€¦â€¦t then have the courage to call her and talk on the phone.

Note: I know that some modern women don't seem to like chatting on the phone.

I get it.

Yet, here's the thingâ€¦|

Any woman likes talking on the phone to a guy who makes her smile, laugh and feel attracted to him because he's being confident and interesting.

Likewise, pretty much any woman hates talking on the phone to guy who makes her feel awkward, stressed or annoyed by his unattractive communication style (e.g. giving her too much power in the conversation, being too nice, being insecure).

In other words, if you call her and make her feel attracted, she's going to enjoy talking to you.

So, once you've sparked her curiosity via text, just call her and build on her feelings of respect and attraction for you even more.

For example: When you initially call her after saying that you probably shouldn't tell her something via text, she might ask, "Okay, no more excuses. It's time to spill the beans. What have you been up to that you couldn't tell me via text?"

You can then say (in a joking way, of course), "Well, I've been cast in an action movie. It's top secret, so you have to promise not to tell anyone about it. I've been shooting in exotic locations like the local coffee shop down the road from my house, in my back yard and best of all, at the local swimming pool. I get to wear really bright, yellow swimming trunks and rescue people from drowning. It's so cool. I'm called, Yellow Pants Super Man. I'll invite you to the premier if you like."

At that point, she'll probably be smiling, laughing and thinking about you in a positive way because you're being playful and having fun with her, rather than being serious or emotional and trying to get her back.

As a result, she will feel curious about your newfound relaxed and confident attitude towards her, which will naturally make her feel respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, her guard comes down and she opens herself up to the idea of talking to you again or seeing you in person.

So, make sure that you

5. Get to a meet up

[image: Get to a meet up]

After a bit more light-hearted conversation where you continue to spark her feelings of respect and attraction, go ahead and ask your ex to meet up with you in person.

For example: Say, in a light-hearted, joking way, "Anyway, it's been great talking to you again. However, I have to get back on the set or else my director will fire me. How about we meet up for some coffee sometime this week? I'll give you the inside scoop on what it's like to be such a great up and coming actor," and then laugh with her about that.

Then add, "Seriously though, I'd love to catch up with you and say hello in person. Of course, it wouldn't be about us getting back together again. It's just a meet up between two old friends over a cup of coffee. So, how about it? What day would suit you best?"

If you've successfully sparked her feelings for you, she will almost certainly agree to catch up.

If she says that she isn't sure or doesn't agree that you and her should meet up, don't let it make you feel uncertain or insecure.

Relax and confidently say, "Hey, it's just coffee. Nothing more. After that, if you decide you never want to see me again, I promise to never contact you again. So, how about it? This Thursday at 7pm [or whatever suits you and her]"

At that point, she will most likely say "Yes," and you can then go ahead and arrange a suitable day and time.

When you meet up, show her that you truly have changed, improved and are now the kind of man she always wanted you to be (e.g. confident, self-approving, emotionally masculine).

If you do that part right, she will drop her guard, open back up to you and give you another chance.

Where Guys Go Wrong When an Ex Unblocks Their Number, or Unblocks Them From Social Media

[image: Where guys go wrong when their ex unblocks them]

The fact that your ex has unblocked you is a good thing because you now have a perfect opening to re-attract her and get her back.

However, her unblocking you can also be a bad thing, if you make rookie mistakes that turn her off and make her regret her decision.

So, be sure to avoid the following mistakes:

1. Communicating in ways that turn her off

For example: A guy mightâ€¦

- Send her numerous texts telling her about his feelings, apologizing for his mistakes and trying to convince her why she should give him another chance.
- Bombard her with texts all day and night, so he can stay on her mind and hopefully prevent her from focusing on another guy.
- Always respond instantly to any communication from her (e.g. a text, social media message, or a phone call), regardless of what time it is, or if heâ€™s really busy.
- Try to make her feel sorry for him by telling her how much heâ€™s suffered since they broke up.
- Ask her pointless questions just to be able to text her, which ends up annoying her and making her want to block him again.

When a woman experiences that from an ex that she has unblocked, it's only a matter of time before she blocks him again.

So, be sure to remain calm and focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, so she wants to talk to you on the phone or meet up with you in person.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦

2. Putting way too much effort into a reply text

For example: A guy might overanalyze everything that his ex girls texts to him and then respond to her by explaining things in detail.

Heâ€™s hoping that if she can see that heâ€™s taking everything she says to him very seriously, she will then be more willing to talk to him over the phone or meet up with him in person.

Yet, putting in way too much effort just makes a woman want to stop texting because itâ€™s just not fun for her.

She looks at all that effort as meaning that he's either very desperate to get her back, too afraid to talk to her on the phone, or too messed up in the head to get straight to the point like a man.

As a result, she feels turned off and wants to stop texting back and forth with him.

So, if you want your ex to keep your number unblocked, don't put in loads of effort into crafting huge, detailed replies.

Instead, just keep your texts light and to the point and then get her on a phone call with you where you can properly spark her feelings by being very confident and using humor.

When you do that, she is then free to think things like, "This is interesting. He's so much funnier now. I wonder what's gotten into him? Maybe he really has changed. Maybe I should meet up with him and see what happens."

He can then get her back, rather than getting stuck in texting land and eventually getting blocked again.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Appearing desperate when replying via text

Sometimes a guy is so happy that his ex is interacting with him again that he can't stop himself from acting a little too keen.

For example: He uses way too many emojis, emoticons or exclamation marks (e.g. "Hey!!!! It's sooooo nice to hear from you again!!!! ââââââ"), or he types LOL after pretty much after everything he says to her, or in every reply (e.g. "Hey, it's you! LOL. So glad you unblocked me. LOL. Been thinking about you. LOLââ").

Women hate guys who are like that, because it makes a woman feel like she's interacting with a boy, rather than a man.

So, be sure to maintain your confidence when you text your ex.

Respond to her in a mature, masculine way, so she can feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

The next mistake to avoid is!

4. Sticking to text

Texting your ex to open the lines of communication with her after she unblocks you is fine, but it's not the main thing that will get her back.

If you just stick to texting back and forth, she will either get bored and stop replying, or she will keep you around as her texting buddy, while she continues to go out, meet new guys, have sex and fall in love.

If you want her back for real, you've got to be man enough to guide both you and her back into a relationship by attracting her on a phone call or in person.

As a general rule, only use text as a way of getting her on a phone call, or getting her to meet up with you in person.

Then, focus on fully reawakening her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

When you do that, she will be yours again and she will love it.

Dumped By My Girlfriend Because I Took Too Long to Finalize the Divorce With My Wife

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible reasons why a woman will do that:

1. To see if you become desperate

Sometimes a woman just wants to see how much power she has over a guy.

[image: She is testing to see if you become desperate]

As a way of testing him, she will say something like, “I’ve waited too long for you to commit to me for real. You promised to divorce your wife and still haven’t done it, so it’s over between us.”

The wrong reaction for a guy to have at that moment is to panic and quickly start making crazy promises to her like, “Please don’t give up on me. I promise that I’ll get the divorce done right away. I’ll call my lawyer today and ask him to rush the process.”

She then says, “No, it’s not good enough. You had plenty of time to do it and you didn’t, so it’s over.”

He might then ask, “What else do you want me to do to prove that I’m serious about us? Just name it and I’ll do it. Please don’t do this. I don’t want her. I only want to be with you.”

Yet, by doing that, rather than make her think, “Awww! that’s just so sweet. He obviously really cares for me after all. I guess I’ve been too hard on him. He definitely deserves another chance,” she will actually begin to lose respect and attraction for him.

Why?

[image: I promise that the divorce is going to happen. Believe me!]

If you become desperate with your girlfriend (e.g. beg and plead with her to give you another chance, offer to do anything she wants), you are failing her confidence test.

She was initially attracted to the challenge of stealing you away from your wife, which made you seem more desirable.

Now, by being desperate and essentially pleading with her not to break up with you, she has gained way too much power in the dynamic, so the challenge isn’t there anymore.

Here’s the thing:

Although a woman might give the impression that she wants to be the one in control of a relationship, in reality, she won’t respect a guy who gives her too much power over him, no matter how unreasonable or ridiculous she is being.

So, what should you do instead?

Rather than get sucked into the fake drama that she is creating to test your confidence and sense of self-worth, just turn the situation into an opportunity to attract her even more.

For example: Imagine that you’re talking to your girlfriend on the phone and she says something like, â€œI donâ€™t have anything more to say to you. You had your chance and blew it by taking too long to finalize your divorce with your wife. Itâ€™s over between us, so please leave me alone.â€

Yet, in the back of her mind, she will be wondering, â€œWill he lose control of his emotions and resort to begging and pleading in the hope that he can convince me to give him another chance? Will he become desperate and put up with my bad behavior just to get me back? Will he ask me to marry him to get me back? What does he really think of himself? Is he really as confident as he has seemed all this time?â€

If you panic and plead with her, she knows that your confidence isn't real and has only been there because of how much she has been pursuing you all this time.

On the other hand, if you laugh and jokingly say something like, â€œYouâ€™re such a terrible actress! You know you love me,â€ and then laugh at her and with her about it.

She might then act like sheâ€™s shocked and say something like, â€œNo, I don't! That's where you are wrong!â€ or even hang up the phone.

Yet, even if she doesn't show it, deep down she will be feeling respect and sexual attraction for you because you didn't become desperate and suddenly hand over all of your power to her.

She will then realize that regardless of her behavior (i.e. her attempting to dump you for taking too long to finalize the divorce with your wife), you have still managed to remain perfectly confident and know that you are more than good enough for her.

Women love men with that type of confidence, especially when the man is also a good man (i.e. not an asshole or jerk who would continue to treat her badly).

When you're a good man with that level of confidence, women simply can't get enough of it.

As for your ex, she won't be able to stop herself from reconnecting with the original feelings of respect, attraction and love that she felt for you.

When that happens, getting her back becomes easy.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend dumped you for taking too long to finalize the divorce with your wife isâ€

2. To regain some self-pride

Although most people are more open-minded in today's world when it comes to relationships, there is still a bit of a stigma attached to women who date married men.

A woman might not care about that initially, but eventually, she can get tired of being seen as the other woman.

Her friends, family and coworkers can begin to push her to ask for more than just a relationship on the down low, or on the side.

They might say things like, â€œYou deserve better than a jerk who won't commit to you. Can't you see he's just stringing you along? He's not really going to divorce his wife for youâ€ you know that, right? He's just going to keep you around for a good time. Where's your self-pride, girl? Why are you letting him do this to you? You deserve so much better than to be his side girl.â€

To regain some pride and feel better about herself, she may then decide to dump him and try to move on to finding herself a guy who doesn't have all the baggage of going through a complicated divorce.

Her ex guy might then make the mistake of thinking, â€œSheâ€™s just being an emotional woman. She probably feels like Iâ€™m not giving her enough attention right now and is likely also feeling a bit jealous of my wife, too. To soften her up, maybe I need to send her some flowers or buy her a pretty gift to show her that sheâ€™s special to me. That will calm her down.â€

Buying gifts for a woman who feels like sheâ€™s lost her sense of pride is actually one of the worst things a guy can do.

Rather than make her think, â€œWow, he must really love me if heâ€™s spoiling me in this way. I was so silly to break up with him,â€ she will think, â€œSo, now not only am I the other woman in his life, heâ€™s also trying to buy me. If he wants that arrangement, why doesn't he get a prostitute? What kind of person would it make me if I changed my mind over a bunch of flowers or some trinkets? I would never be able to respect myself again if I did that. No, my mind is made up. Itâ€™s over between us. I need to find a guy who actually wants to be with me and only me.â€

So, what should a man do instead?

Remain calm and interact with her in ways that cause her to feel like she would be missing out if she let him go.

For example: Being very confident, charismatic, emotionally masculine and funny.

When a guy is being like that during interactions with a woman, she cannot stop herself from feeling attracted to him.

If you do that and then pull away for a few days, she will miss you and want to see you.

Then, you can contact her, make her feel attracted on a call, get her to meet up with you and hook up with her again.

At that point, she will be feeling confused and will ask you if you're making any progress with the divorce.

Hopefully, by that point, you will have some additional news to tell her that will satisfy her.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend dumped you for taking too long to finalize the divorce with your wife isâ€¦|

3. She is tired of being your 2nd woman

If youâ€™ve ever competed in a sport that you really want to win at (e.g. a race, a football game, a tennis match), you may have experienced the dissatisfying feeling of coming in second place.

There's nothing wrong with coming in second every now and again, but all the time?

That sucks.

Get where I'm going with this?

Put yourself in your girlfriendâ€™s shoes for moment.

Coming second place to your almost ex wife from so long will have made her feel that way for quite some time.

Most women are happy to put up with it initially, because they are excited to be stealing a high quality man away from his wife.

It's just how some women are.

However, there's only so long that a woman can continue to feel happy about being the woman on the side.

At the end of the day, a woman wants to know that she's the most important person in her man's life.

Although she's happy for him to have goals and a purpose that are the most important things in his life, she needs to get the sense that she's the most important person in life.

So, if a guy is taking too long to finalize the divorce with his wife and is making excuses like, â€œShe is refusing to sign the papers. You need to be patient. I'm working on it. I spoke to my lawyer again todayâ€ or *â€œI'm pushing as hard as I can to get this done. It's not up to me. You just need to wait. It will happen when it happens,*â€ a woman will eventually start to feel like the second most important person in his life.

She may then start losing respect for him for not being the kind of man who can get things done.

When a woman starts thinking that way, it won't be long she starts seeing other reasons why he's not the kind of man she wants in her life.

For example:

One of the reasons he isn't finalizing the divorce with his wife, could be that he's actually too wimpy to stand up to his domineering wife.

Another reason could be that he's not a man of his word and actually has a habit of lying and breaking his promises.

Alternatively, he might simply be delaying the divorce as an excuse not to commit to her because he can't be bothered going through with it and just wants to keep having sex with her for a little while longer.

If one or more of those reasons apply, she then begins to wonder, *â€œIs this really the man I want to commit to? Is he really the best I can do for myself?*â€ and breaking up suddenly seems like the best option for her.

When she dumps him, the guy might then start promising the world to her if she will just wait a little longer.

He might say things like, *â€œIf you just wait until my divorce with my wife is finalized, I promise we can go out and buy your dream house and we can then move in together. You can pick whatever you like and I'll make sure you get it.*â€

Alternatively, he may even start promising that he will marry her and possibly even buy her an engagement ring as proof of his commitment.

However, while a woman might be tempted by his promises, the more he tries to suck up to her, the less attracted she feels (i.e. because he's not the confident, challenging guy that she fell for originally).

So, rather than promising your girlfriend that you'll do anything she wants to get another chance, just focus on making her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with you (i.e. like she's the most important person in your life and like youâ€”re the kind of man she can look up to, respect and feel proud of).

Do that in a calm, confident manner, rather than panicking or giving her the impression that you're trying really hard to get her approval now.

When she can see that you are calm, confident and in control while also being loving and attentive to her, she will begin to question whether or not she wants to continue on with the break up.

As a result, her defenses will come down and you can then get her back.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend dumped you for taking too long to finalize the divorce with your wife isâ€”|

4. She has met someone else who is available and also makes her feel attracted

When a woman finds herself in a relationship that isn't providing her with the kind of attraction experience she really wants, she will eventually become vulnerable to outside influences (i.e. other guys hitting on her).

Even though she might be a really good woman with strong values and is usually very loyal, if she then happens to interact with another man (e.g. at work, university, the gym) who makes her feel just as or more attracted than you do, then she will begin to open up to him instead.

If he also happens to be available for a monogamous relationship and she gets the impression that she will get what she wants (e.g. to be first in his life, to not have to wait for him to commit), she will dump her married boyfriend and start a relationship with the new guy.

Her ex can still get her back at that point, but he has to approach the situation calmly and confidently. For example: Not knowing what else to do, a guy will often begin to panic and behave in a desperate manner as he tries to get his ex girl back.

He might write her a letter, send her a card or write her an email and say something like, â€”Iâ€”m so sorry for hurting you. I know that you donâ€”t believe me anymore, but the divorce is happening now. She means nothing to me. You are the one I want. Please donâ€”t give up on me. This guy will never love you the way I do. I promise that I will finalize the divorce with my wife within the next week and we can be together. Just give me a chance to show you that you are the one I want. I love you more than Iâ€”ve loved any other woman in my life, especially my wife and I promise that Iâ€”ll prove it to you if you give me one more chance.â€”

He hopes that he's saying what she really wants to hear, but in most cases, it's not.

Why?

Firstly, women are not attracted to emotional weakness (e.g. desperation, insecurity, self-doubt) or emotional dependence in men, so she will actually feel turned off by his approach.

Secondly, because she no longer feels enough respect and attraction for him to justify sticking with the relationship, she isn't very interested or impressed by his declarations of love for her, or his promises to change.

For his love to be welcomed and appreciated, the feelings have to be made mutual first.

It cannot be a one sided effort to get the relationship back together.

He has to make her want him again first (i.e. by interacting with her and properly reawakening her feelings for him), rather than trying to convince her to give him another chance because he wants it so much.

[image: Reawaken her feelings and get her back after being dumped]

Making her reconnect to her feelings first gives her a reason to want to give you another chance (i.e. she wants you again now), rather than feeling like you need her to give you another chance because you want her.

So, if you want your girlfriend to choose you over her new guy (if she has one), don't worry about telling her how much you love her.

She's not going to care about that until you make her feel strong rushes of sexual and romantic attraction for you again.

When she feels that, she will stop worrying about the divorce proceedings and surrender to the joy of feeling so attracted and in love with you.

If she has a new guy, his flaws will suddenly become clear to her and she won't want to be with him anymore.

By the way!

If your ex currently doesn't have a new guy, then don't waste anymore time.

Get her back before you have to also get the new guy out of the way.

Ex Drunk Texted Me. Does She Miss Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It's a good sign.

Here are 5 possible reasons why she texted you while drunk:

1. She was feeling sad about the break up and was attempting to confirm that you still want her, so she could then feel good about herself

Even when a woman is the one to initiate the break up, she still can end up feeling sad, lonely and regretting it.

[image: She was feeling sad about the break up and texted you to see if you were missing her]

Of course, if she's like most women, she won't admit that to the guy she has dumped and will just keep it all bottled up inside.

Sometimes, she won't even tell her friends or family that she is missing him and will just try to put on a brave face and act like everything is fine.

Then, after a few drinks, she starts to think differently and stops worrying so much about what others might say if she got back with her ex.

A couple of drinks later, she drunk texts her ex to see how he reacts to her.

If he doesn't respond, she may assume that he has moved on or doesn't want her anymore, so she will open herself up to new guys (and possibly have sex that night) to make herself feel better.

The same applies if he replies with something like, "Please don't contact me anymore. I wish you all the best."

When faced with a situation like that, a woman will usually take immediate action to hook up with a new guy and hopefully make herself feel better in the process.

This is especially true if she has been drinking.

On the other hand, if he responds in a positive way by saying something along the lines of, "Hey, good to hear from you! How have you been?" or, "Hey cutie, miss you" she will feel confident that he still has some feelings for her.

If she wants him back, she will usually then keep texting and potentially push for a meet up that night, so they can hook up.

Alternatively, depending on what her motives are, she might feel satisfied enough that her ex is still missing her and then get on with having a fun night without him.

Whatever the case though, if your ex drunk texts you, it's usually a very clear sign that she is missing you, even if she isn't sure if she wants to get back with you or not.

So, what should you do about?

I recommend that you take control of the situation by actively making her feel attracted to you via text, on a call or in person, rather than playing games with her (e.g. not contacting her or replying, but acting like you don't care about her anymore).

So, rather than wasting anymore time wondering things like, "My ex drunk texted me. Does she miss me or is she just messing with my head? What if I text her back and she tells me she doesn't want me? I will make a fool of myself. Maybe I should just ignore her just take action and get her back.

Remember: Even though your ex might be feeling sad about the break up, she's won't wait forever for you to make a move and get her back.

So, don't hesitate to begin the ex back process.

Interact with her, re-attract her and get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex drunk texted you is

2. While drunk, it seemed like it would be fun to text back and forth with you

Everyone knows that alcohol temporarily changes a person's thinking and behavior.

However, to put some science behind it, researchers at the University of Illinois at Chicago College of Medicine conducted a study to confirm that alcohol definitely does reduce a person's inhibition.

Inhibition (noun): A feeling that makes one self-conscious and unable to act in a relaxed and natural way.

According to the researchers, even one glass of wine is enough to limit the communication between the amygdala (i.e. the part of the brain responsible for processing emotions and memory) and the prefrontal cortex (i.e. the part of the brain responsible for decision making, and moderating social behavior).

So, if your ex got drunk, the part of her brain that would normally tell her not to text you would have been dulled.

Rather than worrying about the potential negative consequences, she just went ahead and texted you because it felt like a fun thing to do.

Of course, she may have regretted it in the morning and might now be ignoring you because she feels embarrassed by her behavior.

Whether she texted you because she misses you, or because she was too drunk to know what she was doing doesn't matter.

What matters is that you now use the opening she has created, to guide you and her back into a relationship.

Another possible reason why your ex drunk texted you is because

3. She is worried that you might be moving on without her

After breaking up with a guy, a woman will often be worried that he will find a replacement woman and move on before she had a chance to hook up with another guy first.

Of course, she won't want him to know that, so she will try to find out what he's up to by checking to see his posts on Facebook and other social media, or by talking to mutual friends.

That way, her ex doesn't know how she is feeling and she can try to keep moving on without him, rather than signaling to him that she is hurting, missing him or wishing she didn't go through with the break up.

Yet, while drunk, everything can change in a blurry moment.

In the case of your case, she probably got to the point where she didn't care what you might think if she texted you.

She just wanted to find out if you were missing her or had moved on.

Another possible reason why your ex drunk texted you is becauseâ€¦|

4. Her friends dared her to do it for a laugh

When women get drunk together in a group, they sometimes talk about ex's and guys they currently have a crush on.

This can lead them to daring each other to text an ex, or a guy that they have a crush on to see what happens.

Depending on how the ex replies, it will either cause the woman to laugh at him and make fun of him, or to be surprised at how attractive he is being and then say things like, "Maybe you and him should see each other again."

Another possible reason why your ex drunk texted you is becauseâ€¦|

5. Her friends urged her to do it because she wouldn't shut up about you

Your ex might actually be secretly struggling to get over you and move on, which can cause her to regularly be talking about you, the relationship and how she is feeling with her friends.

So, if your exâ€™s friends know that she misses you, they might have encouraged her to text you while she was drunk.

They might be hoping that if gives you another chance, they will then be spared from having to hear her talk about you all the time.

4 Common Mistakes Guys Make When They Get a Drunk Text By Their Ex

[image: Mistakes guys make after getting a drunk text from their ex]

Getting a text from your ex is a perfect opening to get her back because you can then get her on a phone call and get her to meet up with you.

At the meet up, you can then re-attract her, hook up with her and get her back.

Unfortunately, not all guys approach it in that way and end up losing their chance to get the woman back.

For example: Some guys make one or more of the following mistakes after getting a drunk text from their ex girlâ€¦|

1. Waiting for more obvious signs of interest before trying to get her back

Sometimes, a guy will weeks, months and even years waiting for a more obvious sign of interest from his ex, other than just a drunken text.

He doesnâ€™t want to make a move until heâ€™s 100% sure that she misses him and wants him back for real because he's worried about getting rejected.

He might also worry that she didn't actually mean to text him, so it would make him look desperate if he contacted her.

Yet, here's the thing!

It's impossible to know what a woman's feelings really are.

Even if your ex does miss you and that is why she drunk texted you, it's unlikely that she will make the first move to call and arrange a meet up while she's sober.

Why?

Firstly, she won't want to help you feel confident (i.e. because she wants to see that you're able to feel that way without her encouragement).

Secondly, she won't want to make herself seem too desperate and easy because she is the one who left you.

So, rather than make it obvious that she still has feelings for you by calling and suggesting a catch up, a woman will usually wait for you to take the lead in the ex back process.

If you have the confidence and courage to make the first move, your ex will automatically feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

However, if you don't do anything, she will eventually get tired of waiting and just move on.

The next mistake to avoid making is!

2. Showing way too much interest in her and a relationship when he replies

As you would most likely know, a drunk text is not a declaration of undying love!

It can mean all sorts of different things, as I've detailed in this post.

So, even if your ex does miss you and the drunk text was a sign that she's open to getting back together again, getting too excited in your reply isn't going to help the situation along.

For example: Sometimes a guy will be over the moon that his ex girl texted him and reply with something like, â€œHey! How are you? I'm so glad you texted me! I miss you. Have you changed your mind about us, or?â€

Although he is just being honest, showing too much excitement or expressing interest in a relationship via text, just isn't the way to go about it.

If you try to make your ex commit to getting back together before you've fully reactivated her feelings (i.e. after you've kissed and had sex again), she's usually just going to say, â€œNoâ€ or play hard to get and say things like, “I'm not sure” or, “I need more time to think about.”

So, the best approach to take is to focus on making her feel attracted to you and then get to a hook up. After that, you and her will naturally discuss giving the relationship another chance and at that point, she will want it too.

The next mistake to avoid making is!

3. Not using it as an opportunity to attract her with humor

A drunk text from your ex is a perfect opportunity to reawaken her feelings for you and make her rethink her decision to break up with you.

So, don't make the mistake of being too serious about what you're texting her, or what you say to her on the phone.

For example: Imagine that you called your ex the morning (or afternoon) after she drunk texted you and you said something like, â€œHey, I hope you found your phone.â€

She'll likely respond with something along the lines of, â€œWhat do you mean? I never lost it.â€

You can then reply by saying, â€œOh, I thought you must have misplaced it, because there was this crazy woman flirting with me last night and she was using your phone!â€

She will likely be feeling a bit self-conscious for getting caught out and she may say something like, â€œOh,â€ or â€œOops, that was me. Sorry, but I was drunk. I hope I didn't say anything stupid?â€

You can then say, â€œNot at all. You just promised to wash my car every weekend for the rest of the year! You're such a nice ex girlfriend â€œ thanks!â€

She'll likely be smiling and laughing and she might say, â€œNo way! I can't believe I said that. You're kidding me, right?â€

You can then say, â€œYeah, I'm only jokingâ€ you just sent some random jibberish, which is pretty standard for a drunk textâ€ and have a laugh with her about that.

At that point, she will be feeling rushes of respect and attraction for you for handling the situation in a fun, easy-going way.

Her guard then comes down and she becomes open to meeting up with you and seeing where it goes. The next mistake to avoid making isâ€

4. Not following through and actually getting her back for real

Regardless of how open your ex sounds via text or over the phone, nothing will happen until you meet up with her face-to-face and reawaken her feelings for real.

A lot of guys will remain stuck texting and talking with their ex for weeks or even months, without getting to a meet up.

He's hoping that if he just keeps texting or talking to her on the phone, she will eventually say that she wants him back and he can then follow through and get her back.

Yet, in most cases, the woman gets bored of waiting for him to man up and starts flirting with other guys.

When her ex finally builds up the courage to ask her to meet up, she texts him something like, â€œSorry, but I've met someone else. Besides, I'm sure you'd agree that we're better off as friends. I wish you all the best.â€

If you don't want that to happen to you, then make sure that you take control of the ex back process. Get her to meet up with you, hook up with her and get her back for real.

5 Tips on How to Get Your Wife Back When She Wants a Divorce

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 things you should do to get your wife back when she wants a divorce:

1. Change your communication style with her

[image: Change your communication style with her]

When a wife is saying things like, "I want a divorce. This marriage is over!" it's only natural that it will create some negative tension between her and her husband.

They might find themselves getting into arguments and fights and treating each other in a cold, distant, or even hostile manner.

Gone are the days when they were in love and everything was happy, free flowing and enjoyable. Now, it's just stressful and annoying.

If that sounds a bit like what is happening between you and your wife at the moment, it's time for you to change the way you communicate with her.

For example: Start turning awkward, stressful, uncomfortable or neutral conversations into something to laugh about together.

Get her smiling and feeling good when she talks to you.

She asks, "So, how was your day?" and rather than replying in a neutral way and remaining distant, use some humor to get her smiling and laughing.

You might reply with something like, "Bad" and she then asks, "Why?" and you then laugh and say, "Just kidding! I had a great day. How about you?" and smile as she answers.

[image: Get your wife smiling and laughing, rather than feeling stressed by the situation]

Alternatively, if she asks, "How was your day?" you might reply with, "Great, but it's even better now that I am looking at your pretty. Hello beautiful" and smile and have a laugh with her.

Essentially, bring some feel good emotions back into the mix, rather than continuing on with the negative tension between you and her, or being neutral so as not to annoy her or step on her toes.

Take the reins back and control the dynamic of the relationship.

Turn back into a relationship that is full of feel good emotions, egged on by laughter and playfulness at times.

Of course, this doesn't mean that you should act like a clown 24/7 and never take anything she's saying seriously because that will create even more anger and hostility.

Instead, it simply means you should focus on finding something to laugh about together, rather than taking everything so seriously and allowing negative feelings and arguments to tear you even further apart.

Here's the thing!

When you change the way you communicate and interact with your wife (e.g. you remain calm when sheâs shouting or throwing a tantrum, you use humor to bring her out of a bad mood, you maintain your composure around her even when sheâs insulting you and trying to make you angry), it will automatically change the dynamic between you and her.

Suddenly, sheâll find herself being the only one who is angry, shouting and looking for an argument and it will begin to feel a bit silly.

Don't accuse her of being the angry or argumentative one though.

Just let her realize it on her own, at her own pace.

When she sees that you're not biting back and are able to remain confident and composed, while also steering you and her towards smiling and laughter very often (not all the time), it will take the fight out of her.

She will realize that she's over-reacting to the situation and ignoring what is really happening between you and her (i.e. you are starting to reconnect and really enjoy being around each other).

As a result her guard comes down and she finds it difficult to remain stuck on the idea of getting a divorce.

She begins thinking things like, âI canât believe that weâre actually talking to each other again like normal human beings. Weâre even smiling and laughing again, instead of fighting and arguing. Maybe getting a divorce isnât the right thing to do after all. Maybe we can work things out between us.â

The next thing you can do to get your wife back when she wants a divorce isâ!

2. Start attracting her in new ways

[image: Start attracting your wife in new and interesting ways]

If you want your wife to change her mind about getting a divorce, you have to start attracting her in ways that truly matter to her.

To do it correctly, you first need to understand the real reasons why she wants to leave you and then begin to change those things about yourself.

For example:

If youâre too emotionally dependent on your wife and rely on her to help you with too many things in life, show her that youâve changed by being more emotionally independent from now on (e.g. make your own hobby decisions, start or continue to pursue your own goals and dreams without her input, pick up on a hobby youâve neglected, take control of things that you should have been managing, but had left on her plate because it was easier for you).

If youâve been too relaxed about your future (e.g. youâre stuck in a dead-end job and havenât made a move to change that, you havenât been saving any money for a rainy day), take positive steps to change that.

Show your wife that youâre now more driven and goal oriented by planning for your future together.

If all the fighting and arguing has caused the sexual spark to die between you and your wife and you now feel like two strangers rather than lovers, change that by flirting with her and creating some sparks of attraction between you and her again.

By changing and improving in the ways that really matter to your wife, you will be showing her that youâre now the kind of man she can look up to, respect and feel attracted to.

As a result, her walls will automatically start to come down and then the thought of getting a divorce will begin to seem like a bad idea, rather than being the solution to all her problems.

From there, you just need to continue building on her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you to let her see that things really are different now.

The next thing you can do to get your wife back when she wants a divorce isâ

3. Imagine that the divorce isn't happening and she still loves you the way she used to

If you keep worrying about her wanting a divorce and you potentially losing her forever, your body language and behavior will reflect that and it will turn her off even more.

Why?

Women are attracted to confidence in a man and turned off by insecurity, self-doubt and other emotional weaknesses.

So, you need to be emotionally strong, rather than losing confidence and becoming depressed or dejected about what might happen.

Rather than saying to yourself, *âItâs over. Iâm losing her and thereâs nothing I can do about it. Divorce is final and thereâs not coming back from that. My life is over. Iâll never be able to get over this,*â start by thinking things like, *âThis is just a bump in the road. Yes, weâre having some problems now, but weâre going to fix them and as a result our marriage is going to be even better than before. The divorce is never going to happen because my wife still loves me and I still love her. Everything is going to work out fine.*â

When you are comfortable thinking like that, take it up a level.

Start looking at her as though she is still in love with you and everything is fine.

When you do, she will naturally feel attracted to your confidence and self-belief.

She will also feel attracted to your fearlessness when it comes to loving her and being confident and in control of your emotions during a very challenging time.

Feeling attracted to you in that way will melt some of her iciness and she will begin realize that you aren't so bad after all.

She will then become more open to working things out, rather than being stuck on her decision to get a divorce.

Another thing you can do to get your wife back when she wants a divorce isâ

4. Don't try to get her to commit to stopping the divorce yet

It might be tempting to try and convince your wife to stop the divorce, but it's not an effective approach to use.

For example: A man who is facing a potential divorce with his wife might think, *âIf I donât put a stop to it right away, it will be too late. Thereâs no turning back from a divorce once the process has begun. I have to sit her down and try to talk her out of this.*â

Yet, approaching it in the way isn't effective.

What should you do instead?

Spend most of your time and energy (in a relaxed, confident manner) focused on making her feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for you.

That is what really counts.

If you are trying to get her to discuss it all with you and change her mind, she isn't going to feeling respect, attraction and love for you.

Instead, she will be feeling tense and stressed out by constantly having to justify her feelings to you (i.e. that she's not happy and wants a divorce).

At the same time, by trying to persuade her to change her mind, you may cause her to think things like, He's not listening to me! All he's focusing on is what he wants, but he's not thinking about what I want and how I feel at all. He's just highlighting to me that divorce is the only solution here, because he's not open to changing or even listening to me. I'm sick and tired of being in this position and always having to give him what he wants.

Making her feel that way will cause her to be more determined to go through with a divorce.

So, rather than turning every interaction you have with her into something stressful and negative, try to focus on making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you instead.

Let her see that she really does feel good when she interacts with you now.

Don't tell her that though, because she will likely put her guard up.

Just let her feel good around you and she will realize it herself.

The more she enjoys being around you, the less motivated she will feel to go through with the divorce because she will begin to feel as though would regret it.

Another thing you can do to get your wife back when she wants a divorce is

5. Use any opportunities you have to interact with her as a chance to re-attract her even more

Even if your wife has already moved out and is currently saying things like, Leave me alone. We have nothing more to discuss. It's over between us and I'm not interested in fixing our marriage. I want a divorce, you need to remain confident in yourself and focus on changing how she feels.

Changing how she feels isn't about changing her mind with logical arguments (e.g. think about the children, we have a lot of good memories together, it will be hard to survive on your own).

That doesn't work.

What works is focusing on making her feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for the new you.

No matter what she is saying or doing to push you away, stay in touch with her by calling her on the phone from time to time, or by seeing her in person.

The purpose of that is so you can properly re-attract her and make her want you and the relationship again.

The more she can see that you're not reacting in the ways she's expecting you to (e.g. not getting angry or annoyed with her, not panicking or seeming dejected when she talks about divorce, always maintaining your confidence around her regardless of how cold she is being), the more attracted she will feel.

From there, you can quickly build on her feelings and she will naturally begin to change her mind about the divorce.

4 Mistakes That Can Make Your Wife Feel Even More Determined to Go Through With the Divorce

[image: Mistakes to avoid when trying to get your wife to drop the divorce]

To get a wife back when she wants a divorce, you need to first change how she feels about you, rather than trying to change her mind with logical arguments or worse, pleading and begging.

When you change how she feels, she will then change her mind.

Unfortunately, a lot of men don't realize that until it's too late and end up making some or all of the following mistakes:

1. Sucking up to her

When a wife is talking about divorce, a man might decide that the only way to make her change her mind is by being on his best behavior around her.

He will start being extra nice to her (even when she's being cold, mean or treating him badly), doing whatever she wants, listening, caring, being generous and basically sucking up to her, in the hope that it will prove to her that he still loves her and wants to fix the marriage.

Yet, in most cases, rather than make a woman think, "Oh, how amazing! My husband is being so sweet now. He's really trying. I need to go easy on him and give our marriage a chance," she will instead feel turned off by what she perceives as his wimpy, needy behavior.

Here's the thing:

Even though a woman might give the impression that she wants to be the one in control in the relationship (i.e. make all the decisions, while her man heeds her every beck and call), the truth is women don't respect guys who believe the fake demands that women make.

For example: In the dating scene, women go around saying that they want a sweet, nice guy who listens, cares and is very patient with them.

Yet, when a guy does that, a woman doesn't feel attracted to him and he ends up in the friend zone.

She then hooks up with a guy who doesn't even live up to all of those fake demands she was making (e.g. he kisses her on the first date, he doesn't suck up to her and instead behaves in a more natural way, expressing his real personality and not worrying if she likes it or not).

As you may know, women have to go around saying one thing and doing another because if they didn't, people would look down on them.

It's just how it works.

The same applies to relationships.

Women have to go around saying that they want a husband who does all the housework, treats them like a princess and is does whatever she wants.

Yet, in reality, a woman wants a good man who treats her well, but creates a dynamic in the relationship that causes her to treat him even better.

Women can't admit that in public, but if you look at the relationships where the woman is the happiest and most in love with her man, that is exactly what you will find.

So, if you suddenly start sucking up to your wife to stop her from going through with the divorce and in the process, allow her to get away with treating you badly, rather than changing her mind, she will lose even more respect and attraction for you.

Remember: A woman wants to be with a man she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, not a guy who is sucking up to her because he doesn't know what else to do to make her want him.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

2. Seeking pity

Sometimes a guy might try to change his wife's mind about getting divorced by making her feel sorry for the pain she is causing him.

For example: He might say to her, â€œCanâ€¢t you see Iâ€¢m hurting here? I havenâ€¢t been able to sleep or eat properly since you asked me for a divorce. Iâ€¢m a mess. Please just give me a chance to change and be the man you want me to be. I promise this time Iâ€¢ll do whatever it takes to make our marriage work. For the sake of our wedding vows and the love we felt for each other, please donâ€¢t walk away.â€¢

He's hoping that if she sees how much he's suffering, she will feel sorry for him and agree not to go through with the divorce.

Yet, making a woman feel pity for the emotional pain you're experiencing only turns her off even more.

Why?

Emotional weakness isn't attractive to women.

Women are attracted to emotional strength, especially when the man is in a challenging situation.

Additionally, when a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, love and attraction for her husband and wants a divorce, she usually stops caring about how he feels or what he wants.

All that really matters to her at this point is how she feels, so focus on making her have feelings for you again.

When you do that, she naturally begins to change her mind about the divorce.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

3. Being neutral

A common mistake that some guys make is being neutral and boring around their wife and expecting her to somehow feel a spark and want to stick with him.

In other words, he's not putting in the effort to create a spark by being very confident, using ballsy humor (not nice, polite humor or dad jokes) or using flirting to create a sexual vibe.

Here's the thing!

If you're not actively making your wife feel sexually and romantically attracted to you, it's just going to make her feel even more determined to go through with the divorce.

She will say to herself, "The spark just isn't there anymore. I don't feel it. I'm right about wanting this divorce."

On the other hand, when you are actively re-attracting her, she then starts to think things like, "Things are good between us now. I don't actually want to leave him. If I did, I would miss him. Maybe we just need to give it another shot for a while and see how things go."

She then stops wanting a divorce and starts wanting you.

The next mistake to avoid making is!

4. Feeling unworthy of her

When a woman is saying that she wants a divorce, it's easy for a husband to blame himself for everything that went wrong in their marriage.

For example: He might start thinking, "She was pretty much the perfect woman and I ruined everything with my [insecurity, controlling behavior, apathy, anger, etc]. I destroyed our marriage and made her hate me in the process. I'm such a jerk! I can't believe I did this to her. I was lucky to get a woman like her to marry me in the first place. Now, I guess my luck has run out. It's over."

Thinking that way about himself only makes him seem less attractive to her because she can sense it in his vibe, attitude, behavior and body language.

As I've mentioned a few times so far, women aren't attracted to emotional weakness and self-doubt in a man.

So, when a husband doesn't believe in himself and his worth to his wife, it actually turns her off even more.

She starts to think things like, "I've made the right decision to leave him. I made a mistake when I married him. He's just too wimpy and weak-minded for me. I need a man that I can look up to and respect, rather than hanging sticking with this marriage because I feel sorry for him."

As a result, she begins to close herself off to him even more and push for the divorce.

If her husband reacts by being more emotionally sensitive and weak, she will feel even more turned off and compelled to finalize the divorce.

Don't let that happen to you.

How?

Start by believing that you are good enough for her.

Then, use that confidence to begin re-attracting her in new and interesting ways as you interact with her.

Before you know it, she'll be back in your arms and telling you how much she loves you and how sorry she is for wanting a divorce.

Will My Commitment Phobic Ex Come Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Not necessarily.

Women like that usually just go from one relationship to the next, until they find a guy who makes them want to commit.

For example: A woman who suffers from a fear of commitment usually finds herself in relationships with guys who are good guys, but are missing something that she really wants.

In many cases, the missing piece to the puzzle is that she will want a guy who doesn't put up with her crap and give her too much power in the relationship.

She will be confused about the fact that she is very attracted to bad boys, but also knows that a relationship won't work with a guy like that.

[image: Breaking up because he is too nice]

She wants a good guy, but not a guy who is too nice to her to the point where she can walk all over him and be the boss of the relationship, so to speak.

She wants a good guy with balls, not a extra nice guy who is willing to do whatever she wants just to get to spend time with her.

She wants a guy who creates a relationship dynamic that causes her to respect him and try to impress him, rather than him always trying to live up to her expectations and impress her.

If a guy doesn't understand that, he will often make the mistake of trying harder and harder to please her, not knowing that by doing that, he is turning her off at a fundamental level.

She wants a good guy and she wants to be treated well, but she doesn't want to be in the power position in the relationship.

She wants a relationship dynamic that causes her to want to be a good girl for her man, to please him and to continually impress him.

If a guy can't offer her that, she will say that she is afraid of commitment, needs time apart and a number of other common excuses that she will have given to other guys in the past.

She will then place him in the friend zone and say that she loves him or cares about him, but doesn't want to commit to a relationship.

The guy is then left feeling confused and wondering what would make her want to commit.

So, what will make her want to commit?

Here's how to do itâ□|

1. Understand what really caused her not to want to commit to you

[image: Why didn't she want to commit to you?]

For a woman to not want to commit to a guy, it usually means certain aspects of his thinking and behavior are causing her to doubt whether she wanted to stick with him for life (e.g. he was too nice, too insecure, gave her too much power in the relationship, was clingy).

So, rather than allow herself to become too emotionally involved with him and then have to break up with him at a later stage, she ends the relationship and opens herself back up to dating new guys for fun.

Naturally, this type of behavior makes her come across as being commitment phobic.

Yet, in most cases thatâs not the truth at all.

If a woman hooks up with a confident, emotionally strong man who knows how to make her feel the way she wants to feel in a relationship with him (i.e. very feminine, like his girl, in love, feeling the need to impress him and maintain his interest), then her commitment phobia will naturally disappear. The fact is, a woman doesn't go through life dumping guys who are perfect for her because she fears commitment.

That would be crazy and most women aren't crazy.

Women break up with guys who aren't able to make them feel attracted in the ways that really matter to them (i.e. the guy she dumped didn't make her feel like his girl and made her feel more dominant than him, or more like a friend).

So, if your ex broke up with you by saying something along the lines of, âIâm just too scared to make a serious commitment right now. Please give me some space to figure things out,â she was most likely just trying to let you down easily.

Most women are afraid that a man will react badly when broken up with, so they try to keep things light or blame themselves by saying things like, “It’s not you. It’s me. I’m messed up in the head. I had a bad childhood” or, “I have issues and need time to myself. I might go to a therapist. In the meantime, I can’t be in a relationship. I have to be on my own for a while.”

She doesn't want her boyfriend (or husband) to start desperately trying to convince her to give him another chance.

So, she lets him down easily and creates some space between them for a while, so she can move on without him.

Not all women do that though.

Some women break up with a guy and don't tell him the reasons because she just doesn't know how to explain it to him.

He's a good guy, has been treating her well and she wants to break up with him, so she doesn't really have many or any bad things to say about him.

She just knows that it doesn't feel right to her.

So, in your situation, your ex either didn't want to tell you her real reasons for breaking up with you because she feared you might get angry at her or become desperate and try to convince her to give you another chance, or she just didn't know what to tell you.

To get her back, you need to discover her real, hidden reasons for breaking up with you and then make those changes, without asking her to help you or explain anything to do.

For example: Some of the real, hidden reasons why a woman might fear committing to a guy, include:

- He is too much of a worrier and takes everything so seriously that she can't relax and feel happy around him.
- He fails her confidence tests by becoming insecure or clingy (e.g. when she throws a tantrum, acts uninterested in him, stops being affectionate or teases him about his appearance or behavior).

- He leads a boring lifestyle and expects her to just put up with it.
- He has emotional issues that remind her of an ex (e.g. insecure, emotionally sensitive, needy), or her abusive father, so she wants to get out before she gets too involved in the relationship.
- Her family and friends (who are an important part of her life) don't like him.
- She feels insecure about her attractiveness as a woman and fears he will dump her if he finds another woman. So, she dumps him first to lessen the pain of losing him.
- He is a good guy, but just isn't manly enough for her (i.e. he's too nice to her, too giving and unable to be the dominant one in the relationship).
- He doesn't seem like he really wants to commit to her for life and she doesn't want to end up as a single mother or divorcee.
- He doesn't learn from his mistakes and keeps failing at life.
- He gets nervous and unsure of himself around confident guys, so she doesn't feel safe with him.

As you can see, there are many subtle reasons why a woman will really break up with a guy.

Understanding your ex's real reasons for not wanting to commit gives you a clear idea of exactly what you need to change about yourself to reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction.

Then, when you interact with her again and she experiences the new and improved you, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for you in ways she can't explain.

She will feel drawn to you and want to be with you for her own reasons (i.e. she doesn't want to stop experiencing the love, sexual attraction and respect that she now feels for you).

She will want you back even though she may have previously said she didn't want to commit to you.

Another tip to make your commitment phobic ex come back is to

2. Prepare to attract her in the ways that she can't find in other guys

If you want your ex to commit for real, you need to offer her something that no other guy can.

For example: Imagine that a woman broke up with a guy because she secretly believed that she wasn't good enough for him.

She doubted her attractiveness as a woman and was worried that her guy would eventually dump her for a more attractive woman when he had the opportunity.

That insecurity may have been created in her when she was a child (e.g. if her father left her mother, remarried and had another child and loved that child more than her).

As she grew up, she may have convinced herself that her parents splitting up was her fault because she wasn't loveable enough as a child.

Alternatively, her first love might have cheated on her with another woman.

As a result, all her future relationships are tainted by the fear that her guy will find a new woman more attractive and leave her behind.

So, to compensate for her fear, she tends to only go for guys who are totally devoted to her and madly in love with her.

Yet, deep down, she doesn't want to be in a one-sided relationship where she is in the position of power.

She wants a guy that she is totally devoted to and madly in love with, who also loves her and is devoted to her.

If she can't find that guy, she will accept guys who are madly in love with her and devoted to her, but she won't ever feel the same way about them.

Then, when the guy tries to get her to commit (e.g. asks her to move in with him, asks her to marry him), she will say no and claim to be afraid of commitment.

Yet, the reality is that the feelings just aren't mutual.

She likes the guy, but isn't madly in love with him because he can't attract her in the ways she really wants (e.g. he gives her too much power, he's not confident enough).

In some cases though, a commitment phobic woman really does love the guy she is with, but she is worried about him leaving her one day.

So, if he slowly stops making her feel loved and appreciated like he did at the beginning of the relationship, her phobia will kick in and she will feel compelled to break up with him before he breaks up with her.

She will think something like, "I knew it! He's just like every other guy I've dated in the past. He pretends that I'm the one he wants, but after a while he loses interest in me. I'm not good enough for him and he's just too nice to tell me that. He doesn't want to hurt my feelings. Yet, if I stick around much longer, he will hurt my feelings by dumping me and breaking my heart in the process. I can't let that happen to me. I need to break up with him first."

She then breaks up with him because she can't handle the pain of losing him, or the pain of being the one who gets dumped.

To get her back, some guys will make the mistake of saying things like, "I promise you that I'm different. I'm not like other guys. I would never hurt you. You're the most beautiful woman in the world to me and nothing can change that. I want us to be together forever."

She might believe him the first time and give him another chance, but if she gets the sense that he's only putting on an act to keep her a little longer, she will then go through with the break up.

If that happens, how can he get her back the second time?

He needs to show her by the way he talks to her, interacts with her and responds to what she says and does that he really does see her as the most beautiful woman in the world.

To him, she is more than enough for him.

She is so beautiful and so attractive that he wouldn't ever want to leave her for another woman.

He can't tell her that though because she won't believe him.

He needs to show her.

At the same time, he needs to reawaken her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him and then maintain and grow those feelings over time.

When she can see he is continuing to be loving, attentive, affectionate and loyal to her no matter how many weeks, months or years they've been together, she won't want to leave him.

Suddenly, her commitment phobia will fade away and be replaced with total dedication and commitment to him and their future together.

The next tip to make your commitment phobic ex come back is to

3. Interact with her on a phone call or in person and re-attract her

[image: Interact with her in person and change how she feels]

One of the biggest mistakes that guys make when dumped by a commitment phobic girlfriend, is to give her too much space (e.g. 30 to 60 days after a break up).

As you will discover from the video above, you don't need to wait 1-2 months before you attempt to get her back.

If you do, she will most likely move on by beginning to date and have sex with new guys for fun.

Unfortunately, most guys don't realize that until it's too late.

For example: A guy might think something like, "I don't want to scare her away. She's already running from me, so the best approach is probably to leave her alone for a while. That way, she may start to miss me and realize that we are meant to be together."

Yet, that rarely (if ever) happens with commitment phobes.

In most cases, the woman is just going to use the time apart to run to the next relationship that feels safe, or to date and have sex with new guys for fun like she has in the past.

Then, if she meets a guy and things start to get serious, she will dump him and move to the next guy if he isn't able to attract her in the ways that she really wants deep down.

As a result, the cycle of getting into relationships and breaking up continues for her.

In her mind, she is doing the right thing and is simply following her heart, even though to her ex's, she seems a little bit crazy.

After all, she will have dumped good guy after good guy after good guy.

She will have then hooked up with a bad boy or two for sex and chased him for a while and eventually gotten rejected.

It's an ongoing cycle that won't end until she meets a good guy with balls.

So, unless that is you, don't think she is going to come running back to you simply because you cut off contact and ignore her for 1-2 months.

Commitment phobic women rarely go back to the same guy twice, unless of course, he does something to make the reconciliation happen.

In other words, he contacts her, re-attracts her, hooks up with her and makes her want to be in a relationship with the new and improved him.

She then wants to give him another chance for her own reasons, rather than being turned off by yet another ex who is begging and pleading with her for another chance.

Another tip to make your commitment phobic ex come back is to make sure that you

4. Don't try to get a relationship right away

When a woman is commitment phobic, she will continue being that way until you create a relationship dynamic that puts her in the one down position.

If she is in the one up position (i.e. the more valuable, prized person), then she will continue on playing her old games of being Miss Unavailable, Miss Unsure About Everything and Miss Nothing You Do is Good Enough.

So, don't play into her games because you really can't win that way.

What you need to do is re-attract her and make her really want to be with you again, but not push for a relationship or a commitment.

Let her be the one who is hoping that you and her get back together and then commit to each other.

This leads me onto the next pointâ.

5. Be the challenge that she is looking for in a man

Commitment phobic women want a guy who is a challenge.

It's not about treating her badly, being a jerk, a bad boy or anything like that.

Instead, it's about being the sort of man that she feels the need to impress and maintain the interest of.

That's what excites a commitment phobe and keeps her hooked for life.

So, with that said, one of the quickest ways to scare off a commitment phobic ex is to give her the impression that you are waiting by your phone for her to call and are willing to text, talk or see her at any time of day or night.

You are essentially hoping to get a bit of her time, because it makes you feel so good to be around her.

No, no, no.

She is bored by guys like that.

She wants to be the one who is hoping to get some of your time.

Making her feel that way isn't about being completely unavailable, not answering her calls or being rude.

Instead, it's about making her feel so attracted to the new and improved you, while also not giving her the impression that you're hoping it will make her want you back.

You need to give her the impression that you are happy with or without her.

Don't tell her that though!

Give her the impression based on how you think, feel, behave, act and respond to her.

Think about a time when you were interacting with a girl who really liked you, but you didn't feel the same way about in return.

How did you behave with her?

That's how you need to behave with your ex.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get a Commitment

Phobic Ex Back

By now you've probably realized that getting your ex back is not as difficult as you may originally have thought.

It's essentially all about re-attracting her and making her really want you again.

That's something that pretty much any guy can do with his ex girlfriend or ex wife.

You just need to approach it correctly.

With that in mind, here are two common mistakes that you should avoid making if you don't want to lose her:

1. Assuming that not contacting a woman will make her want to come back

If your ex is commitment phobic woman, it's understandable that you might be thinking, "If I try to get her back, she will pull away from me even more. So, maybe the best option is to wait until she starts missing me and then wants me back herself, right? In a way this will also prove to her that I'm a loyal, reliable guy and that she can depend on me to be there for her no matter what. She may then want to commit to me because of that, right?"

No.

Not contacting a woman to get her back only works on a very small percentage of women.

The cold, hard truth is that most women just move on if their ex guy doesn't contact them and re-attract them.

In most cases, all it takes is for the woman to meet a new guy that she finds more interesting and attractive and she stops looking back.

She moves on, enjoys herself and doesn't really care about her ex anymore.

Don't let that happen to you.

If you want to get your ex back, get in touch with her, re-attract her, hook up with her and make her really want to have a new relationship with you.

That's what works.

The next mistake to avoid making is

2. Not understanding that the real issue is the fact that she hasn't been getting the attraction experience she wants from you

A fear of commitment might be the excuse she's giving you, but it isn't the real issue.

I guarantee you that she will commit when a man understands what she really wants and gives her that experience (e.g. he is more manly in his behavior, makes her feel more girly, makes her respect him and look up to him, doesn't put up with her BS).

Don't let another guy give her that experience when you can do it.

Level up as a man, give her an upgraded attraction experience and enjoy the great times ahead with her.

Why You Shouldn't Ask a Woman to Commit to a Relationship or Nothing After a Break Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 reasons why you shouldn't ask a woman to commit to a relationship or nothing after a break up:

1. The feelings have to be mutual for a relationship to happen

Sometimes a guy might try to shock his ex woman into giving him another chance by saying something along the lines of, "I'm sorry, but I still love you and want to be together. I can't just friends with you because it would be too difficult for me. So, this has to be a relationship or nothing."

He's hoping that when she realizes she could lose him forever, she will say something like, "Okay, okay let's give our relationship another try. I can't bear the thought of you not being in my life. Let's make this work."

Yet, that almost never happens and the reason is because!

The love, respect and attraction between a man and a woman has to be mutual, otherwise the woman won't care about how much he cares for her, or what he wants from her.

In other words, he feels attracted and in love with her, but she doesn't feel that way about him, so why should she give him what he wants when she's not getting what she wants?

She just doesn't see it as fair.

It's not only women who that though, of course.

A man who wants to break up with a woman, will often find himself in the same situation where he's offering a friendship to the woman and she's demanding a relationship.

Unless the feelings are mutual, or at least close to mutual, it's not going to feel fair for the person trying to end the relationship.

So, back to a guy getting dumped by his woman!

[image: She walks away rather than committing to a relationship]

When a guy who is being dumped gives a woman a ultimatum of a relationship or nothing, she will usually just say something along the lines of, "Okay, if that's how you feel, then let's go with nothing. Let's agree that it's 100% over between us and that we'll never see or talk to each other ever again. I'm going now. Goodbye."

The guy is then left feeling shocked and confused about how to get her back, after literally pushing her out of his life with the old, "It's everything or nothing" ultimatum.

So, here's what you need to remember!

If your ex has disconnected from her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you, she's probably not going to care if you decide to walk away from her completely.

Instead, she will focus on fully getting over you, moving on and finding herself a replacement man who will make her feel the way she wants to feel (i.e. attracted and in love).

On the other hand, if you accept your ex's decision to be broken up and just remain friends, you can then use the so-called friendship to get her back.

Use the friendship to stay in touch and interact with her, so you can actively re-spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you.

By approaching it in that way, it won't take long before she starts feeling the same way you do (i.e. she wants to commit to a relationship with you and doesn't want to be just friends anymore).

Another reason why you shouldn't ask a woman to commit to a relationship or nothing after a break up is that

2. Asking her to change her mind is different to changing how she feels

In your mind, it probably makes total sense why your ex should commit to a relationship with you again.

You know that you're a good guy who simply made some mistakes in the relationship.

You know that you can do better this time.

Yet, if your ex girlfriend or ex wife doesn't believe you or care, it's because you're trying to convince her with your words and reasoning, rather than focusing on changing how she feels (i.e. using interactions that you have with her to turn her on and make her want you sexually and romantically).

For example: Sometimes a guy will try to convince his ex woman to give him another chance by saying things like, "Be honest, you can't deny we had some really good times together. It wasn't all bad, you have to admit that. If you can focus on the fact that we did share some good times, you will see that we can be happy again if you give me another chance to do better. I'm ready to change and be a better man for you, so all that is needed now is for you to give us another chance. We can go back to how it was before everything went wrong. We just have to replicate what we did in the beginning when we were happy together. It can work. Please see that, rather than turning your back on what we had and just walking away."

Yet, here's the thing that

If a woman has lost respect and attraction for her ex, she won't want to change her mind.

He has to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him, so she begins to feel romantically drawn to him again.

If he doesn't do that and just focuses on trying to convince her to change her mind, she will remain closed up.

She will then say something like, "Look, yes, it's true that we had some good times together in the beginning, but whether you like to admit it or not, there were more bad times than good times. Most of our relationship revolved around me trying to tell you to change and how unhappy you were making me feel. I'm sorry, but I can't change how I feel. What I feel is that you and I are wrong for each other. Please accept that it's over between us and stop asking me to commit to a relationship with you again."

While it might suck to hear your ex woman say something like that, the good news is that her feelings aren't permanent.

A woman will usually only say that if a guy tried to get her back before reawakening her feelings.

Essentially, he's trying to get her back for his own reasons, but she doesn't care what he wants.

To get a woman back after a break up, you have to focus on her feelings (i.e. make her feel a renewed sense of respect, sexual attraction and love for you).

So, rememberâ€¦!

You can change her mind, but only if you first change the way that she feels.

Rather than wasting loads of time and energy trying to convince her (by telling her all the reasons why you think she should give you another chance), just focus on using every interaction you have with her to actively re-spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you.

The next reason why you shouldn't ask a woman to commit to a relationship or nothing after a break up isâ€¦!

3. Women don't like to feel like they are being forced into having a relationship

Many guys don't know how to handle being broken up with by a woman they love and really want to be with.

For example: When a woman is breaking up with him, a guy might become annoyed and say, â€œWas your love for me even real, or were you lying to me all that time we were together? How can you go from loving me to being so closed off and cold towards me? It's not possible to love someone so much one minute and then not love them at all the next. How could you do that to me? What kind of person are you? I'm sorry, but I can't be like you. I can't switch my feelings off and pretend that I don't love you. I value what we had enough to want to try and make things right. Why don't you? If you really loved me, why won't you even give us another chance? How can you just walk away like this? It doesn't make sense. Please don't throw away what we had together like it meant nothing to you. All I ask is for you to give me one more chanceâ€¦ please.â€

Yet, even though the guy is being honest about his feelings, trying to make a woman feel guilty for how she feels (i.e. turned off, no longer in love) isn't what will make her reconnect with her feelings and want to commit to a relationship.

To her, his behavior actually comes across as being selfish because it's all about him and what he wants from her.

She may then think to herself, â€œMe, me, me, that's all he ever talks about. It's all about his feelings and how he was such a wonderful boyfriend/fianc /husband to me, while I was a terrible woman who never really loved him. Not once has it occurred to him that his actions, attitude and behavior are what caused me to fall out of love with him in the first place. If he could just admit his mistakes and show me that he's making an effort to change and improve, I would open up to giving him another chance. Instead, all he's doing is using emotional blackmail to try and make me change my mind, which makes me want to get away from him even more. I won't be made to feel guilty for leaving him. I know how I feel and I'm not going to ignore that.â€

How does she feel?

Turned off, not in love anymore and no longer able to look up to him and respect him.

If he wants her back, he has to focus on interacting with her in a way that instantly or very quickly regains her feelings of respect, attraction and love.

When he does that, her thoughts change and it suddenly feels like it makes sense to give him another chance.

In other words, when you change how she feels, she changes her mind.

Don't try to change her mind, to hopefully change how she feels.

That's backwards and it doesn't work.

You've got to make her feel like she wants you again, based on the changes you make to how you think, feel, talk, behave and act around her or when talking to her.

In other words, how you come across to her, how you react to her and how you respond to her.

That is what counts.

When you interact with her in a way that sparks respect, attraction and love, she naturally begins to change what she thinks about you and the potential of giving the relationship another chance.

What you always need to remember is that a woman doesn't want to feel like she's doing a guy a favor by being with him because he's too emotionally weak, insecure and lost to be on his own without her.

A woman wants to feel like her guy is the kind of man that she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love (i.e. because he always learns from his mistakes and becomes a better man as a result).

So, if you really want to convince your ex to commit to a relationship, you need to make her reconnect with her feelings of respect, love and attraction for you, rather than trying to pressure her into it by making her feel sorry for you.

The next reason why you shouldn't ask a woman to commit to a relationship or nothing after a break up is

4. It can sound desperate to ask for it

Sometimes, a guy assumes that it will seem tough and manly if he gives his woman an ultimatum (i.e. It's a relationship or nothing) and like he's putting his foot down.

Yet, in most cases, a woman will see right through it and know that he is simply trying to trick her into thinking that he would actually accept nothing, rather than a friendship.

She will realize that he can't deal with the rejection of being labeled a friend or giving her space for a week, to figure out what she wants.

So, he tries to stop her in her tracks by saying, "I love you too much to just be friends. I want a relationship with you. I don't want to just be your friend. If you can't give me that, then we will go our separate ways and never speak to each other again."

Yet, rather than make the woman think, Wow, he's being so emotionally strong and masculine all of a sudden! He's so attractive when he stands up to me like that! I definitely want to commit to a relationship with him now! she thinks something like, Does he honestly think that I'm going to crumble under that pressure and give him another chance? I'm breaking up with him, so I would be happy to accept nothing. I was only going to be his friend to be nice.

She then accepts nothing, cuts off communication with him (and possibly even blocks him) and it's then a lot more difficult for him to get her back.

Here's the thing

When a guy tries to force a woman into a relationship without reawakening her feelings first, sheâ€™s usually going to perceive whatever he does in a negative way.

Instead of giving him the benefit of the doubt (i.e. heâ€™s being emotionally strong and decisive), sheâ€™s going to assume the worst of him (i.e. heâ€™s being clingy, desperate or selfish).

So, donâ€™t risk turning your ex woman off even more by asking her to commit to a relationship or nothing.

Instead, naturally make her want to commit to you by actively sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love first.

When you do that, she will be open to giving the relationship another shot, because it will feel like the right step for her to take.

The next reason why you shouldnâ€™t ask a woman to commit to a relationship or nothing after a break up is becauseâ€¦

5. You should use a friendship after the break up to re-attract her

Rather than telling your ex, â€œItâ€™s all or nothing,â€ (and risk losing her completely), itâ€™s best to keep her in your life as a friend.

Why?

You can use the interactions you have with her to re-attract her and hook up with her sexually, to get the relationship back together.

The more you reawaken her feelings of respect, attraction and love, the faster she will want to be in a relationship with you again.

When youâ€™re her friend, you can get her back away, within days, with a week or within a couple of weeks (in cases where a woman hates the guy that she is dumping and needs a bit of space), but you really can do it.

You take control of the situation by making sure that she canâ€™t seem to get over you because she is suddenly feeling more attracted to you than she has in a long time.

That is what works and gets a woman back quickly.

On the other hand, if youâ€™re completely out of the picture, chances of her suddenly missing you and wanting you back are slim at best, because if sheâ€™s like most women, she will move on by finding a new guy or enjoying the single life (i.e. hooking up with new guys for fun).

Remember: If youâ€™re not making her feel respect and sexual attraction, some other guy will.

So, donâ€™t let your stubbornness or hurt feelings get in the way of you getting her back.

Take control of the situation by accepting a so-called 'friendship' with her and then use that as a perfect way to re-attract her and get her back.

3 Mistakes to Avoid When She Doesn't Seem to Want a Relationship

Quite often, a break up is a huge wake up call for a guy.

He suddenly realizes how much he loves his woman, how badly he has messed up and how horrible it will feel to lose her.

Unfortunately, he will often make a bunch of mistakes that will push her away even further.

Don't let that guy be you.

Here are some common mistakes that other guys make, which you should avoid if you want to get your ex woman back!

1. Sulking and appearing emotionally lost without her, unless she commits to a relationship

Watch this video for more info!

Sometimes a guy mistakenly thinks that his woman will feel flattered to see how lost and emotionally broken he is without her.

He hopes that she will think, "Wow, I must mean the world to him if he's falling apart in this way. I'm really lucky to have a guy who loves me as much as he does! Maybe I should give our relationship another chance. After all, I wouldn't want to risk losing a guy who adores me like that. What if I never found someone else to love me the way he does? I just have to give him another chance!"

It would be nice if it worked that way, but it doesn't.

When a woman notices that her ex is sulking and is emotionally lost without her, she begins to perceive him as being childish and immature, which turns her off even more.

Why?

Women hate to feel responsible for a man's emotional state in a relationship because it makes them feel as though they are taking care of a boy.

A woman doesn't want to feel like her guy needs her support and commitment to be able to feel confident about himself.

What a woman wants is for her man to be happy, confident and forward moving in his life, with or without her support, reassurance or commitment to him.

She can then look up to him, respect him, feel attracted to him and love him, because he's now behaving like a real man, not a boy.

Note: This applies even if a man is 20, 30, 40, 50 or 60.

Women refer to men who need them as being boyish and still not grown up.

Being boyish in a woman's eyes isn't about age.

It's about your character.

You either have a manly character when under pressure or going through a challenging situation, or you don't.

If you don't (i.e. you get emotionally sensitive, insecure, needy), then a woman will naturally see you as being boyish and judge you as being a guy who hasn't yet worked out how to be a man.

As mentioned, this applies no matter what age you are.

So, whatever you do, make sure that you don't appear lost, confused, hurt or needy of her attention and approval to feel better about yourself.

Let her see that you are happy, confident and forward moving in life regardless of what is going on between you and her at the moment.

If you do that, she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and begin to feel drawn to you and the idea of having a relationship with you again.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

2. Thinking that walking away will get any woman back

Although walking away from an ex completely to hopefully shock her into coming back might seem like a good idea, the fact is, when a woman has disconnected from her sexual and romantic feelings for a guy, sheâ€™s not really going to care about him anymore.

Rather than think, â€œOh no! What have I done?! Iâ€™ve lost him forever by being so stubborn and not committing to a relationship with him,â€ sheâ€™s more likely to shrug it off and think something along the lines of, â€œWell if thatâ€™s how he wants to end it, fine by me. See ya.â€

She then gets to action to move on without him (i.e. hooks up with a new guy, goes out with her single girlfriends to flirt and hook up with new guys, starts dating a guy who had a crush on her while you were in a relationship with her).

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

When it comes to getting an ex to commit to a relationship, donâ€™t cut off your nose to spite your face (i.e. try to punish her and end punishing yourself instead).

If you want the highest chance of getting her back, you actually need to be in her life to do it.

Talk to her on the phone or see her in person and show her (via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to what she says and does) that you really are a different man now.

More importantly, she really does feel differently around you now.

As a result, she opens to a relationship by first opening up to kissing and having sex with you again.

Another mistake that other guys make in your position isâ€¦!

3. Trying to get her to commit to a relationship before he has re-attracted her

Imagine what it would feel like if a woman you were no longer attracted to and in love with approached you and said, â€œIf you wonâ€™t commit to a relationship with me right now, Iâ€™m going to walk out if your life forever!â€

Would you get upset about it and quickly say, â€œOh no! Please donâ€™t go! I want us to be together,â€ or would you look at her as if sheâ€™s acting a little bit crazy?

Chances are, youâ€™d think sheâ€™s a little bit nutty.

Sheâ€™s demanding that you have a relationship with her, even though youâ€™re not attracted to her.

In most cases, of course youâ€™d say no to that.

Now put yourself in your ex womanâ€™s shoes in your current situation (i.e. she has dumped you and you want to be with her).

At the moment, she doesnâ€™t feel much (or any) respect, attraction and love for you.

So, if you ask her to commit to a relationship of nothing, sheâ€™s likely just going to think youâ€™re a little bit crazy and say no.

This is why, before asking for another chance, you must first reawaken her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

When you do, she then has a reason to get back with you now and in most cases, she will.

If she's the kind of woman who plays a bit hard to get, she might pretend to be unsure for a few seconds or minutes, but if you remain confident, she will drop her guard and open back up to you.

She will then be back in your arms where she belongs.

Best of all, she will really want to be in your arms.

You will be turning her on sexually and romantically in new and exciting ways.

So, it will be an amazing experience you and her, not just you.

4 Tips For Getting Your Ex Back Fast

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How can you get your ex back fast?

How can you not waste time and potentially lose her in the process?

How do you get the job done quickly?

Here are my 4 tips for you...

1. Don't waste weeks or months ignoring her if she won't actually fall for that trick

[image: Don't waste weeks or months ignoring her if she won't fall for that trick]

Some women will fall for the old cut off contact trick, but most won't.

One of the reasons why is that when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she's not attracted to him anymore and she's not in love with him.

So, if he cuts off contact with her, she doesn't really care.

Sometimes a woman will care that her ex guy isn't contacting her, but it won't necessarily be because she wants him back.

Sometimes a woman will care that her ex isn't contacting her because it will be affecting her self-esteem.

She broke up with him and thought that he really wanted to be with her, but ever since the breakup, he hasn't contacted her.

So, she contacts him, talks to him and finds out that he still is missing her and still wants her back.

She then feels good about herself, she boosts her self-esteem back up and she feels like, "Okay, cool. I am the more valuable one. I broke up with him. He still wants to be with me. I can continue moving on. I don't need to feel like I'm being rejected or that he doesn't care about me because he's not contacting me."

The kind of women who will come back if a guy cuts off contact and just waits usually fall into the following categories:

1. She's very young and inexperienced when it comes to relationships, so she can't handle the pain of a breakup. She can't handle the fact that her ex isn't contacting her, so she contacts him.
2. She can't find a suitable replacement guy to get over her ex and move on, or;
3. She's still actually attracted to her ex and in love with him. So, when they're not in contact, she'll be missing him like crazy and she'll want to get back with him.

The thing is, though, most guys who are trying to get an ex woman back are in a situation where their ex woman doesn't want anything to do with them anymore.

If your situation falls into that category (like 95% of guys trying to get an ex woman back), then your ex woman is almost certainly not going to come crawling back if you cut off contact with her.

So, if you want to get her back fast, don't waste weeks or months ignoring her in the hopes that she will come back.

In cases like that, a woman usually just moves on because she's not attracted to her ex, she's not in love with him and she's not really missing him.

2. Get ready to prove to her that you really can make her feel differently

One of the main reasons why a woman will break up with a guy is that she no longer feels enough respect, attraction and love to justify being in a relationship with him.

The relationship may have been great at the start and the couple got along well, they laughed together, they had lots of fun, they went on interesting dates, they had great sex and they fell in love with each other.

Unfortunately, that is the easy part of a relationship and it's something that most people are able to do because the feelings are fueled by lust and new love.

What happens is that if a woman notices things about a guy that she doesn't necessarily like, she will overlook those for a while so she can enjoy the feelings of lust and new love that she is experiencing with him.

She doesn't want to just get rid of him because he has a few flaws.

She hopes that over time he will change and he will turn into the type of man that she can really look up to and respect and remain in love with for life.

If a guy doesn't transform over time and level up as a man, then she will gradually start to lose respect, attraction and love for him.

So, if you want to get your ex back fast, you have to get ready to prove to her that you can make her feel differently.

Proving to her that you can make her feel differently is not about telling her that you can now make her feel differently.

What you need to do is interact with her and let her experience it for herself.

So, let's have a look at an example of how it works...

The example here is where a guy was in a relationship with a woman and he became too boring, neutral, or predictable in the relationship.

She eventually lost interest because there really wasn't much of a spark between them anymore.

However, he managed to get her to catch up with him for a coffee.

At one point when they were having coffee, she asked him, "So, have you missed me?" and answered, "Yes. Have you missed me?"

Now, there's nothing wrong with him answering like that, but if she broke up with him because he was too boring, neutral, or predictable, he needs to use the conversation as an opportunity to prove to her that he has changed.

He needs to let her experience the changes, so she can see for herself that he really isn't being boring, neutral and predictable anymore.

So, here are some alternative examples of how he could reply to create a spark.

She asks him, “So, have you missed me?” and he replies with, “Missed you? Hang on. What’s your name again? I forgot,” and has a laugh with her about it.

He is pretending that he has forgotten her name.

He’s pretending that he has forgotten all about her.

Obviously, he hasn’t.

Obviously, it’s just a joke.

It’s just an opportunity for him to not be so predictable, for him to create some feelings between him and her, for him and her to be able to laugh together and feel good.

Here’s another way that he could respond to her...

She asks him, “So, have you missed me?” and he replies with, “Not as much as you’ve missed me,” and gives her a smile and looks her in the eyes.

[image: I can tell that you've missed me]

She might then say, “I haven’t missed you.” and he can laugh and reply (in a joking manner), “Yeah, right. I can see it all over your face. You’d be hopeless at poker. You need to have a better poker face than that, girl. It’s all over your face. You’ve missed me like crazy, haven’t you?” and have a laugh with her about it.

She will almost certainly laugh at that.

If she’s a really cold, difficult woman, she might crack a smile and not laugh, but pretty much every woman is going to laugh at something like that.

In a case where a guy has been boring, neutral, or predictable with her, she’s almost certainly going to laugh because it’s going to be a shock and a surprise to see that he actually is making an effort to create a spark now.

He’s not just being like a boring robot where he is neutral, friendly, polite and predictable all the time.

He is making a conscious effort to create a spark, to create some laughter, some feelings of love and some enjoyment.

So, if you want to get your ex back fast, just understand that it’s much better to do that to her than to waste 30 or 60 days cutting off contact and hoping that she comes back.

Remember, if a woman doesn’t feel attracted to her ex anymore, she will almost certainly just move on without him.

She won’t come crawling back to a guy who she doesn’t feel attracted to and doesn’t regret breaking up with.

So, when a guy wants to get his ex back fast in a case where she is no longer attracted to him, what should he do?

He should actively make her feel attracted to him.

He should interact with her and create a spark. By doing that, he will make her feel rushes of respect and attraction for the new and improved him.

She will feel differently and she will know that.

He won’t have to tell her, “Hey, I can make you feel differently now. I can change, I promise. Please just give me another chance.”

He has already proven it to her.

She is feeling it for herself and she knows that things are now different between them.

When she begins to feel respect and attraction for him, she automatically begins to feel sparks of love for him as well.

She then has a reason to get back with him now because it seems like there is still something special between them, it's not over.

She feels like she wants to hug him, kiss him and have sex with him again.

Best of all, though, this type of thing feels amazing for both the man and the woman.

It's not a case of the man just getting what he wants and taking something from his ex woman.

They are literally sharing something special and amazing together.

The feelings that a couple experiences when they rekindle sexually and romantically are amazing, especially when the guy has leveled up and he's such a better man for her now.

That is the fast track to get her back because it's about her feelings.

If you're trying to get your ex back by explaining your reasons to her and telling her how much you love her and how much you want to be with her, it's not the same as making her feel that way about you.

When she feels like she wants to be with you, you get her back quickly.

3. Don't give up at the first sign of resistance

When getting an ex woman back, you need to be prepared to deal with some resistance from her.

Some women are very easy to get back, whereas others are a little bit more feisty, a little bit more stubborn, a little bit more difficult.

So, what you need to keep in mind is that some women will play hard to get because they want to test your confidence, don't want to seem too easy, or want to see if you can keep making her feel that way over a few more interactions.

If a woman wants to test her ex guy's confidence, it's usually going to be a case where he had become insecure in the relationship, he had become very clingy, very needy of her and over time he lost a lot of confidence in himself.

So, before opening up to her ex again and giving him another chance, she will test his confidence.

She will interact with him and she won't be giving obvious signs of interest.

She might even be a little bit bitchy towards him.

She wants to see how he is going to react.

Is he going to crumble under her pressure or is he going to remain confident?

Is he still the needy guy that she broke up with, or has he become more emotionally independent since the breakup?

The other example is where a woman doesn't want to seem too easy.

Sometimes when a woman has been taken for granted in a relationship and treated badly, she will eventually get to the point where she breaks up with her man and she still misses him and wants to be with him.

Yet, she doesn't want to get back into a relationship where he is going to be treating her badly again.

So, rather than accepting him back immediately, she will play a little bit hard to get.

She doesn't want to seem too easy.

She doesn't want to give him the impression that he can just get her back and then get things back to normal where he is taking her for granted and not really making her feel appreciated.

The other example is where a woman wants to see if her ex guy can continue making her feel attracted for a few more interactions.

This happens a lot where a guy has been stuck in the friend zone with his woman for quite a while and there really hasn't been much of a spark between them.

So, the sex died out, he wanted her more than she wanted him and she eventually got bored of that and broke up the relationship.

If a guy like that suddenly changes and begins making his ex woman feel attracted again, she won't always immediately accept a relationship.

Instead, she will be open to interacting with him again and she'll be waiting to see whether or not he goes back to not creating a spark with her.

She'll want to check to see whether or not the relationship goes back to feeling boring and like there is no sexual and romantic spark between them again.

If he continues interacting with her and she continues to feel respect, attraction and love for him, then she will naturally get back with him.

So, if you want to get your ex back fast, make sure that you don't give up at the first sign of resistance.

Where a lot of guys go wrong is that they interact with their ex woman and she doesn't seem overly excited about getting the relationship back together, so he begins to doubt himself.

He might then think, "Oh, well, I have to cut off contact for 30, 60, or 90 days. I have to wait and hope that she misses me and comes back."

No.

Keep in mind what I've just explained in this section here.

Women behave in different ways for different reasons.

Sometimes it's a test, sometimes they don't want to look too easy and sometimes they want to check to see if you can continue making them feel respect, attraction and love over another two or three interactions.

4. Understand that it's totally fine to get her back quickly (i.e. within a few days or a week or so) as long as you are calm and confident about it all

[image: Calmly and confidently get her back]

Some guys worry that if they get their ex woman back quickly, it might make them look desperate and needy.

The only real way that you're going to be seen as desperate and needy is if you are behaving in a desperate and needy way.

For example, a guy saying to his ex woman, "I really want you back. I can't deal with life without you! Please give me another chance! All I think about is you. I want you back so much. What we had is so special. I'm not doing well at work anymore because I'm stressing out about you and I," and so on.

That's desperate and needy.

However, if a guy is confident and calm, then everything is fine.

There is no problem.

If he interacts with his ex woman and he's making her laugh and smile, he's making her feel attracted to him again and feel like she's in love with him again without frantically pushing for a relationship, then he is not desperate and needy.

Instead, he is a man who is taking control of the situation.

He's making his woman feel attracted to him again.

He's creating that pathway for him and her to get back into a relationship.

He's creating the opportunity for them.

He is making it happen.

So, if you want to get your ex back quickly, take action now, but be confident and calm about it.

Be a man who takes control of the situation in a calm, confident manner.

You interact with her, you make her feel attracted, you make her feel like she's in love with you again and you get her back.

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn the quickest, easiest and most effective way to get a woman back.

When you use the techniques from the program, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She will begin to fall back in love with you. She will want to get back with you now.

Changing How She Feels to Get Her Back Quickly

[image: Changing how she feels to get her back quickly]

One final point that I want to make for you in this video, is to help you understand the power of attraction.

When you make a woman feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again, she immediately begins to change how she thinks, feels and behaves.

If you want to get your ex back quickly, you need to make sure that you are focused on making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

For example, if a guy got dumped because he stopped being confident in the relationship, he became insecure and he wasn't as manly as he was in the beginning, his woman isn't going to feel attracted to him anymore because of that.

She's going to feel turned off.

So, if he interacts with her and he's still doing that, then she's going to continue to feel turned off.

However, if he interacts with her and he's so much more confident now, he's so much more emotionally masculine, then she is naturally going to feel some attraction for him again.

When she feels attracted again, her thinking, behavior and actions immediately begin to change.

She goes from thinking that she wanted to remain broken up with him to feeling drawn to him and wanting to be in his arms again, wanting to kiss him, wanting to have sex with him and wanting to be in a relationship with him.

So, if you want to get your ex back fast, make sure that you are prepared to make her feel attracted to you again.

Make sure that you are prepared to change how she feels.

When you do that, she will change her mind and you can get her back fast.

My Ex Isn't Moving On

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

3 possible reasons why your ex isn't moving on, are:

1. She is waiting for you to pursue her

[image: She is waiting for you to pursue her]

Even though your ex may be the one who initiated the break up, it doesn't necessarily mean she has stopped having feelings for you.

It's possible that was trying to use the break up as a way of shocking you into making changes and improvements, so you and her could then get back together and have a more stable, long-term relationship.

Here's an example:

A woman feels as though her guy is too immature for her.

Although he is a good guy who treats her well, he just doesn't have much focus or direction in life.

He likes to hang out with her or his friends, enjoys partying or playing video games all the time and devotes little or no to advancing his career, or following through on his dreams and becoming more successful.

Although she loves him and enjoys hanging out with him, she doesn't feel safe in the relationship and starts thinking things like, "Is he ever going to grow up, or am I going to have to take care of him forever? I just don't see a future for us if things continue this way. I really love him, but I need to shake him out of his complacency. I don't want to waste time like this for another 5 or 10 years. He has to grow up and start taking control of his life and future like a real man."

She will then break up with him as a way of hopefully encouraging him to grow up and start acting like a mature adult.

Another example is if a guy is too emotionally dependent on his woman and only feels confident if he's with her, or if she is supporting him emotionally.

In the hopes of shocking him into becoming his own man, a woman will end the relationship and remove herself from his life completely.

Yet, that doesn't mean she wants to lose him completely though.

In many cases, he has a lot of qualities that she does like and want in a man (e.g. he is kind and treats her well, he spoils her sometimes, he gets on really well with her friends and family, she enjoys the sex).

Even though they're broken up, she won't fully move on without him because she'll secretly be hoping he will pursue her and get her back.

So, if your ex isn't moving on, it may be because she's waiting to see if you're man enough to take control of the situation and guide both you and her back into a relationship.

She might also want to see that you've used the time apart to become a better man than you were before (e.g. you're so much more confident now, you are more charismatic, funny or interesting during conversations).

You can show her that by getting in touch with her, interacting and letting her experience the new and improved you for herself.

On the other hand, if you just wait around thinking, â€œMy ex isnâ€™t moving on. What should I do? Should I actually call her, or should I just wait until she gives me a sign that sheâ€™s interested in me?â€ she may interpret your lack of action in a negative way (e.g. you havenâ€™t changed at all since the break up, you need her to encourage you to feel confident and worthy, youâ€™re not interested) and this time she will move on without you.

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

If you want your ex back, then have the courage to interact with her and show her that youâ€™re a confident man who believes in himself and his value.

Donâ€™t tell her that.

Just let her pick up on it based on how you talk, feel, behave and act as you interact with her.

You can interact with her (e.g. via text and on the phone and in person) and begin to re-attract her back into your life and into your arms where she belongs.

Another possible reason why your ex isnâ€™t moving on isâ€¦!

2. She is struggling to find a replacement guy who is worth committing to

[image: She is struggling to find a replacement guy]

Sometimes a woman simply wonâ€™t move on after a break up because she wants to make sure that the next guy she gets involved with is absolutely the right one for her.

This will result in her becoming overly picky and rejecting most, if not all, of the offers she gets from men.

She might think, â€œIâ€™m not going to make the same mistake again. My ex really disappointed me. I honestly thought he was the one, but he failed to live up to my expectations, so if Iâ€™m going to open my heart to a guy again, I want to be sure that it could last for life. I donâ€™t want get emotionally involved again, only to find out that the new guy also canâ€™t give me what I want in a relationship. I hate break ups. I donâ€™t want to end up getting hurt again. So, I will be patient. Maybe I will meet someone soonâ€¦or maybe my ex will contact me.â€

If she doesnâ€™t hear from her ex, she will focus on interacting with many different guys (e.g. at work, through friends, through a new hobby) and open herself to dates, kissing and sex to see how she feels.

You donâ€™t need to wait for her to go through all that, before you finally work up the courage to contact her and begin the ex back process.

Just get her back now.

Another possible reason why your ex isnâ€™t moving on isâ€¦!

3. She doesnâ€™t feel ready to get into another relationship right now

In a case where a guy really hurt his ex woman (e.g. he treated her badly, took her for granted, made her feel stupid and insignificant), or made her fall in love with him to the point where she wanted to settle down to start a family and he didnâ€™t, itâ€™s only naturally that she might be feeling a emotionally bruised now.

She went into the relationship hoping for the best and was let down.

Many guys experience that when a woman doesn't treat them well also.

It happens to both sexes.

However, regarding your ex, this might actually be one of the reasons why she isn't moving on.

She just can't deal with the idea of potentially getting hurt again, so she avoids dating and hopes that she will eventually heal from the pain.

Of course, not all women are like that.

Some women heal immediately and are completely fine about the break up.

In cases like that, the reason why she isn't moving on is that she's enjoying being single again, hanging out having fun with friends, meeting many different guys (i.e. playing the field) or having one night stands.

As she begins to enjoy the single life, she thinks, *â"¢Wowâ"¢|I never realized how much I was missing out on when I was stuck in a relationship with my ex! Being single is actually a lot of fun. I donâ"¢t think I want to get involved in another relationship again for a while. Besides, Iâ"¢m young enough to take my time and enjoy my freedom. A relationship will happen soon enough. I don't need to rush.*â"¢

If her ex is watching on from the sidelines (i.e. following her on social media, asking mutual friends about her), he might get the impression that she isn't moving on because she's missing him.

As you can see, there can be many different reasons why your ex is currently behaving the way she is.

So, what should you do about?

Don't focus on what she is doing.

Focus on what you are doing to get her back.

That is what really counts.

[image: Her feelings can change in an instant]

A woman's feelings can change in an instant if her ex interacts with her and makes her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for him.

She can literally go from not wanting to be in a relationship with him, to wanting to kiss him, have sex with him and get back into a relationship once again.

So, if you want her back, you need to show her that you are a better option to anything else that she may have been experiencing lately.

For example: If sheâ"¢s still sad and trying to heal from the pain of the break up, you can interact with her and replace negative feelings and memories with new, happy, positive ones (e.g. by making her feel laugh and happy in every interaction you have with her, by making her feel like an attractive, desirable woman, by showing her that you really have changed now).

As she experiences the new, more confident you, her perception of you will naturally start to change.

Her guard will come down and she will open herself up to the idea of getting back together to see what happens.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making When an Ex Isn't Moving On Your ex not moving on is a great opportunity for you to get her back.

There is no other guy in the picture who is having sex with her and making her fall madly in love with him.

She is open and ready to be seduced back into a relationship.

So, go ahead and interact with her, reawaken her feelings for you and get her back.

That's how it works.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't learn that and end up making one or more of the following mistakes!

1. Ignoring her for longer, in the hope that she eventually comes crawling back

Just because she hasn't moved on yet, it doesn't mean that she won't move on tomorrow.

Who knows what could happen tomorrow.

She could meet a new guy who makes her feel more attracted and in love than you ever did.

What then?

You don't want to have to compete with him to get her back.

So, get her back now while it's still very easy for you.

Unfortunately, many guys don't realize that truth until it's too late.

For example: A guy might think to himself, "So, she's not moving on, huh? Good. Maybe she's finally realized we're meant to be together and that she was a fool to break up with me. Well, I'm not going to make it easy for her to get me back. I'm going to wait until she admits her mistake and comes crawling back to me. Only then will I give her another chance."

He then continues to ignore her for longer.

Yet, in most cases, it backfires because she gets tired of waiting and moves on, or meets a new guy who turns her on and hooks up with him instead.

Here's the thing!

Even if a woman is still in love with her ex and wants him back, if he just ignores her, she has no way of knowing that he still wants her.

She waits for a text or a call from him, so they can reopen the lines of communication, but it never comes.

She eventually begins to wonder, "Am I just wasting my time waiting for him? Has he moved on with a new girl, while I'm still waiting for him to call me?"

Soon enough, she's out partying with her girlfriends or dating guys that she meets on Tinder and having sex and falling in love to get over her ex.

Eventually, her ex becomes a distant memory to her, while he is always missing her and regretting not taking action to get her back.

So, if you want your ex back now or very soon, don't waste too much time playing games with her, even if you feel like she deserves to be punished for breaking up with you.

Just get her back and enjoy a new, even better relationship with her.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ□|

2. Only sending her a feeler text and then giving up if she doesn't show a lot of interest

Sometimes, a guy will feel nervous about calling his ex in case she rejects him, or because he assumes it will look needy or too forward.

So, rather than giving her a call, he sends her a â□□ feeler textâ□□ and hopes that she responds with clear signs of interest.

For example: A guy might text her something like, â□□ Hey, I just wanted to say hi. How are you doing?â□□ in the hopes that she will respond with something like, “Hi! Great to hear from you” and then admit, â□□ I miss youâ□□ a text or two later.

He might also hope that she will be direct enough to say, “I’m miserable without you. Do you want to meet up and give us another try again? I want to get back together.”

It would be nice if a woman said that, but most women don’t.

Instead, a woman will usually just ‘play it cool’ by not showing much interest because she doesn’t want to seem too eager, or end up giving him a big head and causing him to start playing hard to get. Yet, since she isn’t being direct about wanting him back, a guy will often assume that she isn’t really interested.

He doesn’t want to risk calling her, or even asking her, “Do you want to meet up?” in case she rejects him.

So, he gives up or decides that he’ll wait for another week or two before trying again.

That can work, but it can also backfire.

For example: She might see his lack of follow up as meaning that he isn’t really interested and was just checking to see if she missed him, so he could then reject her.

I know, crazy right?

There are all sorts of mind games that can go on between men and women after a break up.

That’s why I always recommend that a guy be a man about it by taking control of the situation.

Get her to meet up with you, re-attract her in person and get her back.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ□|

3. Asking if she wants to give the relationship another try, rather than just re-attracting her and hooking up with her

Asking a woman for a relationship before youâ□□ve fully reactivated her feelings of respect and sexual attraction is an almost guaranteed way to get rejected.

Rather than jump at the idea, a woman (who hasn’t had her feelings reactivated yet) will usually say something like, â□□ No, Iâ□□m not sure if thatâ□□s a good idea,â□□ or â□□ I still need some time to think about it.â□□

So, donâ□□t make that mistake with your ex.

If you want her to give you another chance, focus on making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you first.

Then, get to a kiss and sex to reconnect physically and romantically.

After that, she will most likely bring up the idea of getting back together and if she doesn't, don't push it.

Just let her really want to be back with you by continuing to build on her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

Eventually, she won't be able to hold it in any longer and will suggest that you and her get back together.

At that point, you can give her another chance with you.

So, don't bother asking her if she wants to get back together before you and her have actually had sex again.

Get to a kiss and sex and then take it from there.

That's the easy way to do it and avoids the old, "I'm not sure" or, "I need some more time" excuses.

Is No Contact the Only Way to Heal Myself and Fix My Issues?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

No.

In fact, most guys don't heal during the NC period and end up developing insecurities about their value to their ex and other women.

The best way to heal after being dumped is to build up confidence in your ability to re-attract your ex. Doing so allows you to realize that you are a cool guy, you are valuable and you are worthy of her. Here are 3 things you should do right now to speed up the healing process and get her back faster:

1. Get clear on exactly what issues are most important to her

Wanting to fix your issues is great, but if you waste time fixing the wrong things it will only end up pushing your ex away even more (i.e. because she will feel that you don't understand her).

So, your first step to healing is to understand what really caused your ex to break up with you and why?

For example:

A woman might break up with a guy and say, "You're too clingy. I feel smothered by the relationship. I need time for myself."

She hasn't fully broken up the relationship and he feels like he still has a chance because she just seems to need time for herself, so he accepts it.

Then, to show her that he's fixed his issue of being clingy, the guy might then ignore her (e.g. for 30 to 60 days) and pretend to be more independent.

Yet, the deeper issues that caused his clinginess (i.e. insecurity, feeling unworthy of women in general, immature approach to love and relationships) are still there.

If she knows him well enough, she will know that he probably hasn't fixed that and is just trying to impress her by cutting off contact.

She will assume that if they did speak again and she gave him another chance, he would simply be covering up his clinginess with an act of confidence and emotional independence.

Then, when they settled back into a relationship, it would begin to creep out again via jealous, controlling or insecure behavior.

At that point, she would have to go through the break up again.

So, rather than going through all that again, she just decided to move on while he is giving her space (i.e. using the no contact rule).

Meanwhile, during the no contact period, her ex is thinking things like, "What if she meets someone else while we're apart and decides to completely dump me? What if she cheats on me? I know I shouldn't be clingy, but I hate not knowing who she's with and what she's doing. I can't lose her!"

Rather than actually being emotionally independent and enjoying life without her during the no contact period, he ends up becoming more and more insecure and clingy.

He looks through old photos, replays old memories of them together in his mind and tries hard to not worry about her potentially cheating on him.

Yet, no matter how hard he tries, he can't stop worrying and stressing about potentially losing her to another guy.

So, what should he do to heal quicker and avoid having to wait 30 or 60 days to then contact her (by which time she will have most likely already moved on with a new guy)?

He needs to understand is that his clinginess is not really the issue, but rather a symptom of his insecurity about his value to her and other women.

By building up confidence in his ability to make her (and other women) feel attracted, he will stop feeling so unworthy of her and will stop worrying about another guy potentially taking her.

He will know that he is a cool, confident, valuable man that she and pretty much any other woman would feel attracted to if given the chance.

When he builds up that skill (it can be done in days), he will have truly fixed the thing that matters most to her.

He will have finally become a truly confident guy who can make her feel attracted at will, rather than clinging onto her and hoping that she doesn't leave him or get bored of him.

Another example is if a woman breaks up with a guy because he spends too much time playing video games.

To show her that he's changed and is no longer addicted to gaming, the guy might get rid of his gaming console and say, "Okay, I'm not playing video games anymore. I'm done with it."

However, once again, he's only addressing the problem on a superficial level and is failing to understand that to his woman, his gaming is only a reflection of his lack of purpose and direction in life.

She doesn't really care about the games.

She wants him to offer her a feeling of security based on his determination to succeed in real life, rather than trying to succeed in a virtual world.

So, if he wants to fix that issue, rather than stop gaming (which will likely make him unhappy and may even cause him to start resenting her), he needs to find balance between playing games and striving towards achieving goals in the real world.

In the same way, once you fully understand where you really went wrong in the relationship with your ex, you will then be able to make the correct changes to your thinking and behavior.

She will then see that you truly understand her and as a result, she will be able to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you right away.

Not after 30 or 60 days.

Pretty much right away.

The next thing you can do, rather than just cutting off contact for 1-2 months, is to

2. Ensure that you are 100% ready to properly re-attract her on a phone call and in person

On a phone call and in person is where the ex back process really speeds up, because you can quickly make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

On the other hand, if you just use the NC rule and hope that she misses you, she will most likely move on and fall in love with a new guy instead.

This is especially true if your ex dumped you because she no longer felt enough respect, attraction and love to justify sticking with a relationship.

If that's the case, then she's almost certainly just going to move on if you cut off contact.

This is why it's so important that you are ready to re-attract her on a phone call or in person.

Do you know how to make her feel respect and attraction for you when you interact with her, or are you hoping that No Contact will make her miss you so much that it won't matter?

Sometimes a guy will ignore his ex for a few weeks, or even months as a way of hopefully re-attracting her.

He'll be thinking something like, "If I take some time apart to heal myself and fix my issues and then contact my ex, she will not only be impressed that I changed, but she will also have had plenty of time to miss me. So, she will then be glad to give me another chance."

Of course, that's if she doesn't sleep with a new guy (or guys) and move on by getting into a new relationship.

At the end of the day, cutting off contact isn't the solution for making a woman feel respect and attraction for you after a break up.

For example: If a guy cuts off contact and eventually texts or calls his ex after 30 or 60 days, she isn't going to feel motivated to get back with him if he's still making the same old mistakes (e.g. still giving her too much power during conversations, still doesn't know how to make her feel feminine, girly and turned on during a conversation, still hasn't become as confident as she wants him to be).

As a result, she rejects him and he is then left feeling heartbroken and lost about what to do next.

This is why it's essential that you use any time after the break up to rapidly improve your ability to attract her and make her feel good to be talking to you again.

That way, she has a reason to get back with you when you call, rather than having a reason to reject you and continue moving on.

Another question to ask yourself is

Have you actually changed and improved the things that matter to her, or have you only changed what you think she wanted you to change?

If you try to get your ex back by offering her the wrong things about yourself, she will feel as though you just don't understand her, which will then make her feel even less respect and attraction for you.

For example: A woman might break up with a guy because he's too emotionally sensitive and is unable to handle the pressures of life without falling apart, sulking or getting angry.

To get her back, he might then decide to not contact her as a way of showing her that he's fixed his issues and healed himself from the break up.

Yet, thatâs not what she wants.

She wants him to man up and handle the challenges in his life without running away from them.

Using no contact is just another example of him running away from issues, rather than being man enough to handle them head on.

So, rather than see his no contact in a positive way (i.e. that heâs using the time apart to change and improve), she will assume that itâs just another way for him to hide from his issues, or avoid facing up to what actually needs to be done (i.e. re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship).

She may then think, âHe clearly doesnât get it. Heâs still the same guy that he was before and if I give him another chance, heâs not going to change. I need to make it clear to him once and for all that itâs truly over between us. I then need to find myself a new man as soon as possible.â

She then cuts him out of her life (e.g. by blocking his phone number, unfriending him on social media, stops answering his text or calls) and focuses on moving on.

So, if you want your ex to give you another chance, donât just ignore her and hope that it works to make her miss you like crazy and come crawling back.

Instead, focus on changing and improving what she really wants and then let her experience the new you when you interact with her.

Thatâs how real men get their ex woman back quickly and painlessly.

3. Know that she might be a bit reluctant initially, but you can change how she feels

[image: She might be a bit reluctant initially, but you can change how she feels]

Initially, your ex might be a bit reluctant to give you another chance.

She might even say things like, âI donât know if this is such a good idea. What if we get back together and I end up being hurt all over again? Iâm not sure if I want to risk that happening. Iâm doing fine now on my own.â

Donât panic.

If you try to convince her that the relationship is worth saving, by saying things like, âWe have to give our relationship another try. I just know in my heart that weâre meant to be together. If you only give us a chance, Iâm sure we can make it work. Even if you donât feel a lot of love for me right now, I have enough love for the both of us to pull us through. Please take a chance. I promise you wonât regret it,â she probably wonât go for it.

Why?

The feelings have to be mutual for her to care about the relationship as much as you do.

It canât all be about how much you want a relationship with her because it feels right for you.

It needs to feel right for her too.

[image: Change how she feels and get her back]

The way to do that is to focus on making feel rushes of sexual and romantic attraction as you interact with her, rather than desperately trying to convince her to give you another chance.

For example: Use humor, be very confident, be emotionally manly, make her feel girly and feminine in comparison to how manly you are being and flirt to create sexual tension between you.

If you approach interactions in that way, she will naturally stop focusing on the negatives and open back up to you.

However, if your ex is a very stubborn woman and keeps saying, "I'm not sure. Maybe this isn't a good idea," just relax.

You can calmly and confidently say something like, "I know that you're not sure about how you feel right now and that's perfectly fine. We don't have to decide on anything yet. Instead, how about we just hang out as friends? No pressure. We can get to know each other, based on the people we have become since our break up, rather than who we used to be before. Then, if you decide you never want to see me again, I'll accept your decision and never contact you again. On the other hand, if you decide that you like the new me, we can see where things go from there. No pressure though. We don't have to rush or decide anything."

By saying something like that, you ease her concerns and she doesn't feel like you are forcing her to make a decision that she might not be ready to make.

She then relaxes around you and opens herself up to seeing you as the new man you have become.

From there, just make sure that in every interaction you have with her, you are actively making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

Important: Don't behave like a nice, neutral friend and hope she will eventually want you back because you're being so patient and nice.

It's totally fine to be her friend, but just don't be a nice, innocent friend who isn't interested in her sexually or romantically.

Make her feel sexually attracted to you and flirt with her, so she knows that you feel sexually attracted to her too.

Soon enough, her guard will come down and she will be the one giving you signs that she's ready to get back together again.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making While Healing and Fixing Your Issues After a Break Up

It's perfectly fine to take some time (3 to 7 days is usually enough for most guys who get help. Guys who try to fix their issues alone often need months) to heal from the pain of a break up and fix your issues.

Unfortunately, where a lot of guys go wrong is by making one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Waiting 30 days and not healing, so deciding to wait another 30 days

[image: Maybe I just need to wait another 30 days]

When a guy is confident in his ability to attract women, it doesn't take him long to heal after a break up because he knows that he could easily get a new, attractive woman if he wanted to.

Whether he wants his ex back, or he decides to move on and find another even more attractive woman than her, 3 to 7 days is enough time for him to heal and get ready to interact with his ex and get her back.

On the other hand, when a guy is insecure about himself and his value to women, no amount of time ever seems to be enough for him to heal and fix his issues.

For example: A guy like that might do 30 days of no contact, only to realize that, despite waiting all that time, heâs still not feeling better about the break up or himself.

So, he decides to ignore her for another 30 days in the hope that this time heâll be ready to get her back.

Yet, waiting longer doesn't fix his insecurity about his value to her or other women and, by the time he contacts his ex, she has already moved on.

He is then left feeling heartbroken, alone and lost.

If he's like most guys in that situation, he will lose even more confidence in his ability to attract new women.

So, months or even years of being single and alone (or hooking up with women that he isn't very attracted to) will follow.

All the while, he will be missing his ex and regretting having taken way too long to fix his issues, contact her, re-attract her and get her back.

The next mistake isâ!

2. Telling her that you are trying to heal or recover

A woman doesn't want to be part of your journey to self-discovery, confidence or manhood, especially when she has broken up with you.

She just wants you to figure it out and be the kind of man that she can naturally feel respect, attraction and love for.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that and think that it might help to tell her that he is working on fixing himself, healing and becoming a better man.

For example: If a guy's ex asks if she can contact him or remain friends, he won't give her that option.

Instead, he will say something like, âI can't deal with just being friends. I still care about you deeply. I need some time apart to heal from this break up. I will call you when I'm ready. In the meantime, if you change your mind and want to be with me again, just call me. I'll be there for you."

Secretly heâs hoping that she will feel sorry for him and then decide to give him another chance.

Yet, that is rarely the result he gets.

Why?

Women aren't impressed by emotional weakness.

They want to be with a man who is emotionally stronger than themselves, not a guy that they need to take care of and be gentle with.

Additionally, a woman doesnât want to be in a sexual relationship with a guy just because she feels sorry for him.

So, if you want to get your ex back, donât bother trying to make her feel sorry for you by telling her that you need to heal or that you couldn't handle being friends for now.

Instead, just use any interactions that you have with her to reawaken her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

Allow her to see you as the man she wants you to be (e.g. confident, emotionally strong, emotionally mature, brave, emotionally independent, manly).

The more you display those types of qualities, the more naturally attracted she will feel.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

3. Waiting so long to make a move that she moves on

Even if a woman still has some feelings for her ex, if she doesn't hear from him for a long time (i.e. 30 to 60 days), she will eventually get fed up and move on.

She may think something like, âWell, he's obviously moved on. I guess I didn't matter to him that much after all. I've been a fool waiting for him all this time. Well, I'm not going to wait anymore. I'm moving on with my life as of right now.â

She then closes her heart to him and looks to find a replacement guy as quickly as possible.

Then, by the time he calls her up (i.e. when he eventually feels healed enough or ready to talk) rather than hear her say, âI'm so glad you called me! I've missed you so much,â she says something like, âSorry, but I thought you'd moved on. I've met someone else now and I'm happy. Please don't call me again.â

Don't let that happen to you.

You don't need to heal for many weeks, months or years to get her back.

You just need to take 3 to 7 days to quickly heal, improve your ability to attract her and then contact her to get the ex back process started.

Most guys are able to get their ex back right away by using that approach.

In more difficult cases, some guys need to interact with their ex woman 2-3 times before she is feeling enough attraction to give him another chance.

Yet, it works.

That approach is so much better than waiting for weeks or months and missing her the whole time and then interacting with her and turning her off.

Get ready to attract her, contact her and attract her, hook up with her and get her back.

That's how a real man does it.

It's easy, fast and you get what you want.

You get her back.

So, decide now to take control of the situation and do what it takes to get her back as soon as possible.

The Cure For a Heavy Heart After Breaking Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 proven tips for curing a heavy heart after breaking up:

1. Know that it's possible to get her back

Your ex might have said, â€œIt's over. I don't have feelings for you anymore and nothing that you can say or do will make me change my mind,â€ but it doesn't mean she will feel like that forever.

In fact, you can change how she feels pretty quickly!

If you focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she will naturally begin to feel drawn to you again.

You can then get her back right away, within days or possibly a little longer (e.g. a week or two).

Interestingly though, even if you don't do anything to change her feelings for you, her negative emotions will eventually begin to fade away over time.

At that point (maybe years from now), she will either feel neutral emotions when she thinks about you, or she may even start to view you in a more friendly way (i.e. she will forgive what you did and be open to just being friends on social media, or in person if applicable).

So, her feelings will change at some point.

The good news is that you don't have to wait in the background for years or decades, hoping that she'll stop hating you and then possibly accept you as a friend.

Instead, when you take action now and begin to spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you during interactions, it speeds up the process of her changing how she feels about you.

She goes from saying that she doesn't want anything to do with you, to saying things like, â€œOkay, well, lets meet up for coffee to see what happens,â€ when you ask her to catch up.

She then goes from feeling attracted to you when you catch up, to kissing you and wanting to be your girl once again.

That's how 95% of men get their ex woman back.

The man takes action and actively re-attracts her and when she changes how she feels, she naturally opens back up to him and gives him another chance.

She doesn't want to lose the new, exciting and interesting feelings she now has for him because it feels so damn good.

She doesn't want to reject him and then miss him and regret breaking up with him for the rest of her life.

So, she goes with how she feels and gives him another chance.

Of course, not all men know this secret and as a result, they lose their ex girlfriend or wife because she just moves on.

For example: Some guys try to ignore their ex woman to make her come running back, other guys stick to text and others turn their ex woman off by continuing to make the same old mistakes that lead to the break up (e.g. he continues to talk to her in an insecure way, gives her too much power during conversations and so on).

This is why, if you are serious about getting your ex back, you should take action and re-attract her. It's the most effective approach to take to get a woman back.

For example: If you ignore your ex, the reality is that she may feel relieved, annoyed or determined to move on and find someone else.

If you only text her, she might feel irritated, frustrated or bored.

If you call her on the phone and sound insecure, anxious or intimidated by her now, she will feel turned off and become convinced that she made the right decision to break up with you.

The next tip for curing your heavy heart after breaking up is toâ€¦!

2. Start improving your ability to make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again

If you interact with your ex while youâ€™re feeling sad, dejected or unsure about your value to her, it will come across in the tonality of your voice, your body language and the way you respond to how she treats you.

Women aren't sexually attracted to emotional weakness like that, especially from an ex.

So, if you come across in that way, she will decide that you're just not man enough for her and will be happy that she went through with the break up.

On the other hand, if you maintain your confidence during interactions, despite her efforts to make you feel self-conscious or insecure, she won't be able to stop herself from reconnecting with some of her old feelings for you.

This is why it's important that you start improving on your ability to re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings, before you contact her again.

For example:

- Become more confident and self-assured.
- Believe in yourself and in your value to her.
- Add to your strengths and start fixing your weaknesses.
- Be more manly in how you think, behave, talk and act.
- Improve your ability to flirt and create a sexual vibe between you and a woman.

Preparing yourself in this way gives you confidence and hope.

It sets up for success by lifting your spirits and making you do what you actually need to do to get your woman back (i.e. re-attract her sexually and romantically).

The next tip for curing your heavy heart after breaking up isâ€¦!

3. Have fun with new people

I know, I know.

You probably don't want to be around other people and having fun with them right now, true?

You are hurting.

I understand.

You might even be thinking something like, “I don’t want to feel happy without her. She was the love of my life, so being happy without her just isn’t going to be possible.”

Yet, thinking that way not only stops you from curing your heavy heart, but it also makes you appear more unattractive to your ex.

Why?

Women are instinctively drawn to the kind of men who are emotionally strong enough to cope with whatever life throws at them (e.g. a difficult break up) and turned off by men who struggle to pick themselves up when something difficult happens.

So, if you interact with your ex (e.g. on a phone call or in person) and she senses that you’re feeling depressed and lost without her, she will interpret it as emotional weakness and feel turned off.

This is why it’s so important for you to start having fun again.

By the way!

It’s important that you do this with new people and not existing friends, because existing friends will most likely want to discuss the relationship with you, which will just keep you focused on her and how much you miss her.

So, now is a good time to make a fresh start and meet some new people.

I know, I know.

You probably don’t want to do that, but it’s so important for curing your heavy heart.

For example: You can!

- Attend a meet up group in your area (for ideas check out meetup.com).
- Join a group exercise class (exercising alone doesn’t help! You’ve got to be around other people who are having fun).
- Go on a weekend adventure with a travel group.
- Start a new hobby (e.g. dancing classes, martial arts, hiking).

When you take action to become genuinely happy without your ex, not only are you lightening the load on your heart, but you’re also making yourself more attractive to your ex (i.e. because you’re more confident, happy and emotionally independent now).

Then, when you interact with your ex, she will see that you haven’t been a sad, lonely, depressed guy who has been sitting at home pining for his ex woman.

You are a man who can stand on his own two feet and get things done, even though she hasn’t been in your life lately.

As a result, she will begin to feel some respect and attraction for you and getting her back will become easier and more natural.

So, once you’ve done all that!

4. Contact your ex and re-attract her

Once you’ve prepared yourself (i.e. by changing and improving some of the things that caused your ex to break up with you, having fun without her), you will be more than ready to contact her and begin the ex back process to get her back.

So, if youâ€™re still on speaking terms with your ex (e.g. youâ€™ve been texting each other from time to time), get her on a phone call with you or get her to meet up with you so you can catch up and say hi in person.

If you get on a phone call, add in some humor to ease the tension between you and make her feel happy and relaxed to be talking to you again.

Then, ask her to meet up with you and then allow her to experience the new and improved you in person.

Make her really want you back and then give her another chance.

By the wayâ€¦!

If youâ€™ve had no contact with your ex since the break up and are afraid that she wonâ€™t answer you call, then send her this text:

â€œHeyâ€¦! I know weâ€™re broken up and totally accept that, but I need to ask you something quick over the phone. Itâ€™s nothing serious though, so donâ€™t worry. Iâ€™ll call you in 10 minutes.â€

Then, go ahead and call her in 10 minutes time.

If she doesnâ€™t answer, leave it for a day or two and then try to call her again.

If she still doesnâ€™t answer, text her this:

â€œHeyâ€¦! I tried calling you yesterday/the other day to ask you something quick, but I assume that you must have been busy. No problem. I might try to get hold of you some other time so I can ask you this question.â€

She might then text you back asking, â€œWhat do you want to ask me?â€

Whatever you do, donâ€™t respond via text!

Instead, just pick up the phone and call her.

In most cases, a woman will be curious enough about what you want to ask, that she will answer her phone right away.

Of course, what you want to ask her is to meet up with you in person, but donâ€™t get straight into that.

Instead, start the call off by using some humor to make her relax, get her smiling and enjoying talking to you and also to get her to drop her guard a little.

From there, get her to meet up with you in person, so you can fully reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by showing her that you are now a new and improved man).

From thereâ€¦!

5. Get her back!

[image: Get her back and cure your heavy heart!]

At the meet up, continue saying and doing the types of things that will make your ex see you in a new light and convince her to give you another chance (e.g. be much more confident than you used to be, use humor even if she is trying to make things awkward and uncomfortable, flirt with her to create a sexual vibe).

No matter what she says or does to make you feel bad for what happened in the relationship, just stay calm and maintain your confidence with her.

Make her smile and laugh and turn her negativity into something that you can both laugh about together.

Flirt with her and make her feel attracted and turned on.

Show her that you really are a new and improved man now.

Then, when the moment is right, hug her or kiss her and then move towards hooking up sexually and getting the relationship back together.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want to Cure Your Heavy Heart

[image: Mistakes to avoid when trying to cure your heavy heart]

Contrary to what some people think, the cure for a heavy heart after breaking up isn't about ignoring your ex and pretending you don't want her back anymore.

It's also not about forcing yourself to move on when you still love her.

Instead, it's about quickly making some attractive changes to your thinking and behavior, so you feel confident and energized.

Then, it's about taking action, getting her back and enjoying an even better relationship with her than you had before.

That's how a man needs to approach the situation if he actually wants his ex woman back.

If he doesn't want her back, then he just needs to hook up with new women and move on.

How about you?

Do you want her back?

If so, be sure to avoid the following mistakes!

1. Regularly looking through photos and thinking about how much you miss her

Although there's nothing wrong with looking at a photo of you and your ex in happier times if you happen to accidentally come across one (e.g. while looking for something on your phone, searching through an old drawer), going out of your way to browse through photos of you and her isn't a good idea.

Doing that only holds you back from fully healing and feeling happy without her, especially if you're heart is hurting as you look at the photos and realize what you've lost.

Remember: If you want to get her back, you need to spark her feelings for you by showing her that you are a completely new man now.

You are now able to attract her in ways that you failed at in the past (e.g. you're no longer insecure, you're much more manly in your behavior now).

That's what really counts.

However, it will be difficult to accomplish if you spend all your time going down memory lane and thinking things like, "Oh, how I miss her! We look so happy in these photos! We were so in love with each other. I can't believe it's over. My life feels so empty without her. I don't know if I will ever be able to move on. She was the love of my life.

Don't do that to yourself.

Instead, focus on improving your ability to attract her and getting yourself ready (emotionally) to interact with her and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for the new and improved you.

That's what works on women.

The next mistake to avoid making is

2. Having long, sad conversations with friends, family or coworkers

Talking to friends, family or coworkers about how sad you are isn't going to help you heal.

Instead, you'll find that you are stuck in a rut and always seem to have the same old, sad conversations with your friends, family and coworkers who want to be there for you to support you.

It's not a good thing for you to keep doing.

So, do yourself a big favor and stop talking about what happened.

The fact is that talking about how sad you are isn't going to change anything.

What will change things is when you focus on quickly getting yourself to the point where you're happy and living a good life without your ex.

That doesn't mean moving on or finding a new woman.

Not at all.

It's just about being genuinely happy with or without her.

When you feel that way, you will automatically become more attractive to your ex and can use that to get her back.

The next mistake to avoid making is

3. Sitting around feeling sorry for yourself, rather than doing what is required to get her back and end the pain

Sometimes, a guy reacts to getting broken up with by sitting at home wallowing in self pity for weeks, months or even years.

Initially, a guy might be thinking, Losing her is the worst thing that's ever happened to me. I feel like my life is over. It's not worth living if she's not a part of it. I wish there was something I could do to get her back, but it all seems so hopeless to me. Maybe if she sees how broken I am without her, she will take pity on me and give me another chance. I just don't see any other way. She seems so sure that it's over. It's like I have no chance with her now.

Unfortunately, by thinking like that, he is simply preventing himself from moving forward and becoming the kind of man who can attract her back (e.g. confident, self-assured, determined, capable of handling pressure).

So, if he happens to interact with her (e.g. on a phone call or in person), she will sense it and feel turned off by his emotional weakness.

She will see his lack of improvement as a sign that she made the right decision to break up and she will then focus on moving on as quickly as possible.

Here's the thing!

It sucks that she broke up with you, but if you let those feelings paralyze you and stop you from changing and improving, not only will you continue feeling depressed, but you will also potentially ruin your chances of getting her back.

Why?

Your lack of belief in your value to her will come across as emotional weakness and she will feel turned off by it.

So, you need to avoid focusing on the pain of the situation and only focus on what is required to get her back.

My Ex Girlfriend Blames Me For All of Our Relationship Problems

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex blames you for all your relationship problems:

1. You take her drama seriously, so she does it for fun

[image: You take her drama seriously, so she does it for fun]

Some women really enjoy getting a guy worked up and annoyed by creating drama.

It's literally a lot of fun for them.

So, sometimes a woman will say things like, "I hate you!" or, "It's all your fault we're broken up! You're the one who stuffed everything up, not me," even though she doesn't really mean it.

Some women do it for fun, some women do it to test your confidence and manliness and some do it because they are a little bit crazy.

Whatever reason your ex girlfriend has been doing it for, you shouldn't be taking her unfair accusations of you so seriously.

You should literally be laughing at her, at times, for being such a little drama queen or pain in the butt.

Yes, laughing at her.

A lot of guys don't realize that though and they go through life taking women way too seriously.

For example: A guy takes her accusations 100% seriously and accepts all the blame, even though she made mistakes too.

[image: Taking her drama too seriously]

Alternatively, he loses control of his emotions and gets angry or resorts to begging and pleading with her to forgive him.

He might even try to be extra nice and sweet to her in the hope that she will stop being so mad at him).

Yet, she doesn't.

She keeps turning up the drama and sticks to her unfair accusations of him.

The more seriously he takes it all, the more respect she loses for him.

Why?

A woman wants to be with a guy who has the confidence and emotional strength to put a woman back in her place in a loving, but dominant way, rather than being bullied by her.

When it comes to getting an ex back, a woman wants a man to be calm, confident and in control as he gets her back, regardless of what she's saying and doing to throw him off (e.g. being a drama queen, blaming him for all the relationship problems, being hysterical and screaming at him).

She needs him to show that he deserves respect from her and that it makes sense for her to submit and be in the one down position (in terms of dominance) in the relationship.

If he can't do that, she can't respect him and as a result, she won't feel attracted to him or in love with him.

So, the next time your ex girlfriend starts saying things like, â€œIt's all your fault we broke up. You're the one to blame for everything that happened between us, so don't expect me to forget that,â€ just remember to see the funny side of how she is behaving, rather than getting sucked into the fake drama she is creating to test your confidence and ability to be the man.

Another possible reason why your ex blames you for all your relationship problems is â€œ|

2. You are actually responsible for the main relationship problems

That's not very nice to hear, I know.

Yet, in some cases, the guy's behavior, actions or attitude is actually the main cause for the failure of the relationship.

Sure, the woman could have treated him better and been more patient with him, but the reality is that pretty much all women simply react to their man.

In other words, if a man is confident, loving and masculine in his thinking and behavior, a woman will naturally respect him, feel attracted to him and love him.

On the other hand, if a man is insecure, selfish and emotionally sensitive, then a woman will naturally lose respect for him, stop feeling attraction and fall out of love.

[image: Woman reacting to man]

She is literally reacting to him.

That's how it really works, but some guys don't want to hear that because it feels easier to just blame the woman or accuse her of being crazy, bipolar or something like that.

Blaming women and expecting them to be stronger, more patient and more understanding isn't going to fix a guy's relationship problems because women literally react to men.

So, when a woman blames her ex guy for all of their relationship problems, she is trying to get him to understand that it could have been different between them.

She would have reacted differently if he had used a different approach in the relationship (e.g. if he didn't become insecure or take her for granted).

He can still get her back, but he has to change his approach to communication, attraction and the relationship.

For example: Some of the common reasons why a woman will react by feeling turned off by her boyfriend, are:

- He was too childish and immature and she grew up faster than him (e.g. he had no direction in his life and spent most of his time hanging out with friends, living at home with his parents, working at dead-end jobs, while she was goal oriented and making plans for her future).
- He didn't make an effort to get along with her family and friends. He broke his promises to her.
- He had a wandering eye, or even cheated on her.
- He was too jealous and controlling and she felt smothered by him.

- He would lose his cool if she threw a tantrum to test his confidence.

How about you?

Do you think that you were to blame for most (or all) of the relationship problems?

Ask yourself:

Does my ex girlfriend have a good reason for blaming me for our relationship problems?

Was I mostly responsible for our break up because of how I changed and how that then caused her to react to me?

Did some aspects of my thinking and behavior cause her to lose respect, attraction and love for me (e.g. insecurity, anger, negativity)?

If you can honestly answer those questions for yourself, youâ€”ll have a much clearer idea of what you need to change about yourself to reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Then, when you interact with her (e.g. via text, on social media, on a phone call and especially in person) you can show her via your body language, behavior, conversation style and the way you respond to her that you are now a very different man from the one she broke up with.

She will be able to see for herself that many (if not all) of the things that were turning her off about you are no longer an issue.

When that happens, she wonâ€”t be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for the new and improved you.

She can then stop blaming you for everything and begin to wonder what it would be like being in a relationship with the new and improved you.

Another possible reason why your ex blames you for all your relationship problems is â€”!

3. You are discussing the relationship, rather than re-attracting her

To get your ex back quickly, you need to focus on re-attracting her sexually and romantically, so she has a clear reason to give you another chance.

If you focus on discussing the relationship, it's highly likely that you will cause her to feel stressed out and overwhelmed by the pressure you seem to be putting on her to work things out with you.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize this until it's too late and end up pushing their girlfriend away.

For example: He may ask things like, â€”I accept that itâ€”s all my fault we broke up. Believe me. I get it and I want to make it up to you now. So, tell me what went wrong and what I could have done differently. I promise to then change and do whatever it takes to make this work.”

Yet, rather than make a woman think, â€”Oh, thatâ€”s so sweet. Heâ€”s really making an effort to make things right between us. I should explain how he can get me back nowâ€” she closes up and feels even more turned off by him.

Why?

Discussing the relationship over and over again simply highlights to a woman how clueless her guy is about what he did wrong and how he can be the man she really wants him to be.

He essentially needs her to give him instructions on how to be attractive to her, which she can do, but she won't want to.

Why?

If she tells him how to think, act and behave to re-attract her, it won't feel real to her.

It will feel as though he's putting on an act just to please her, but deep down he will still be the same guy as before.

So, she decides to end the relationship and hopes to find a new man who will be more mature and wise when it comes to what women actually want in a relationship.

It won't matter if her ex cuts off contact, sends her a letter expressing his feelings or even hooks up with a new woman to hopefully make her jealous.

If she knows that he won't be able to change in the ways that really matter to her (e.g. become more emotionally manly, take charge in the relationship, make her feel girly and feminine around him), then she won't look back and will focus on moving on without him.

So, if you want to get your ex girlfriend back, don't make the mistake of getting into serious discussions about the relationship and asking for her help on how to be kind of man that she would accept or want.

Another possible reason why your ex blames you for all your relationship problems is

4. She is waiting for you to put her back in her place in a playful way

Some guys take a woman's comments after a break up way too seriously and begin to fear saying or doing something that might turn her off even more.

So, rather than lovingly and playfully putting her back in her place when she blames him for all their relationship problems, a guy becomes extra nice and sweet to her instead.

He is essentially on his best behavior, trying hard to be nice and hoping that she thinks it's sweet and then gives him another chance.

Yet, that approach simply doesn't work on most women.

Why?

Almost all women want a guy to be man enough to not take everything she says or does so seriously.

A woman wants a man who is able to laugh, smile and guide the conversation back to feel good emotions, rather than panicking and sucking up to her in the hope that she softens up.

So, the next time your ex girlfriend blames you for everything and says something like, "It's all your fault we're broken up. You're the one who stuffed it all up, not me," just use it as a perfect opportunity to make her feel attracted to the new, stronger version of you.

For example: Laugh and say something along the lines of, "All my fault is it? Yeah, okay. What's that saying again? It takes two to tango. Well, in our case, it just takes one person to tango. It's all my fault. You didn't do anything wrong and were perfect. It was all my fault" and have a laugh with her about it.

Initially, she may be a bit shocked that you're not getting sucked into her fake drama anymore and might try to test your confidence by saying, "Don't be smart with me. If you keep talking like that, I'm hanging up."

If she does, just laugh at her and let her hang up.

She will feel respect for you for having the balls to not fall for her fake drama.

Then, just ignore her for a few days and if she hasn't contacted you, text or call her and attract her further.

Of course, not all women are that mean and nasty.

However, if your ex girlfriend is like that, you need to make sure that you aren't afraid of her potentially getting angry and hanging up, or walking away from a catch up.

You need to stand your ground and not be chasing after her in a desperate way.

Women like that don't respect guys who are afraid of them.

So, although it might seem scary or risky for you to put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way, you've got to do it.

You've got to man up, so she can feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and want you back.

When you do, she will realize that you're now a very different man from the one she broke up with (e.g. you're more confident and emotionally strong, you're more ballsy and no longer allow her to dominate you, you're emotionally masculine in a way that makes her feel girly and feminine around you).

As a result, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling attracted to you again, even if she pretends that she isn't to test your confidence and see if you will panic and try to suck up to her.

Another possible reason why your ex blames you for all your relationship problems is

5. She's trying to make you react in an unattractive way, so she has more reason to remain broken up with you

When a woman doesn't know how to break up with her boyfriend and get him to accept it and leave her alone, she may resort to blaming him for all their relationship problems as a way of making him angry.

She hopes that he will get so upset with her that he might start shouting and maybe even become a bit aggressive towards her.

She can then say something along the lines of, "See? This is what I'm talking about! If I had my doubts before, your behavior has just convinced me that you're not the guy for me. You're out of control and it's clear to me you won't ever change. You scare me now. There's no way I am ever going to see you again. I'm afraid of what you might do. So, it's over between us. You need to accept that and move on."

He then won't be able to defend himself, or make excuses because he will know that she's right.

So, remember

Don't let your ex girlfriend suck you into her fake drama.

No matter how much she tries to make you react in an unattractive way, just maintain your confidence and turn it into something you can both laugh about together.

When she sees that you are being a confident, emotionally strong and mature man and aren't getting sucked into her drama, she will automatically start to reconnect with her feelings for you. You can then build on that initial spark of feelings and get her back.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making When Your Ex Blames You For All Your Relationship Problems

You're not the first guy to be in this situation.

Every day, all over the world, good guys find themselves being blamed for all of the relationship problems with their girlfriend and being made out to be the villain.

I've helped so many guys in your situation to get their ex woman back and as a result, I've heard of all the mistakes they had been making before learning from me here at The Modern Man.

So, I recommend that you do the wise thing and learn from their mistakes and get your ex back quickly, rather than making the same mistakes yourself...

1. Apologizing over and over

Although there's nothing wrong with apologizing to a woman who has broken up with you, doing it over and over again doesn't make her want you back anymore than apologizing once.

In fact, apologizing over and over again usually just annoys the woman, because she assumes that you're using it as a way of distracting her from the fact that you still haven't changed.

You're just apologizing and apologizing, rather than re-attracting her and making her feel sexually and romantically turned on by you again.

The next mistake to avoid making is

2. Letting her rant on and on about your mistakes

No matter how guilty you might feel about what happened between you and your ex, don't fall into the trap of allowing her to rant about it every time you and her interact with each other.

Deep down you might think you deserve it, but letting her rant won't change anything.

Instead, she will simply feel emotionally more dominant than you, which then will stop her from being able to respect you as a man.

So, if she keeps going over how you stuffed up, simply say in a relaxed, but assertive voice, â€œWow, that must be the 5th time you've mentioned that to me. How many more times do you need to bring it up before you feel satisfied? 10? 50? 100? Okay, go ahead and say it, but once you're done, let's stop ranting on about how bad things used to be and focus on enjoying how much better things are now or could be in the future.â€

She might pretend to be annoyed at you for saying that, but deep down she will be feeling surges of respect and attraction for you again for being an emotionally strong, masculine man and standing up to her.

On the other hand, if you just let her get away with ranting, she will lose more and more respect for you until she eventually says, “Why am I even bothering? It's over. We are done. I am going now and I don't ever want to talk to you again. So, don't contact me. Don't add me on Facebook and don't email me. We're done. Goodbye!"

The next mistake to avoid making isâ□|

3. Not changing the vibe of the conversation to be more playful and light hearted

Laughter is definitely the best medicine for healing the angry, negative feelings of a broken relationship.

Regardless of how bad things are between you and your ex right now, just understand that a little bit of humor goes a long way.

When you make her smile, laugh and enjoy talking to you, it changes the vibe and takes away the power from the negative feelings she has been holding on to.

So, the next time your ex starts blaming you for all your relationship problems, rather than just take it, lighten the mood through laughter and smiling.

For example: If youâ□□re sitting at a table (at a cafÃ© or restaurant) and your ex says something along the lines of, â□□I donâ□□t even know why Iâ□□m here. Itâ□□s all your fault we broke up,â□□ rather than get upset and turn her off, just take the risk of making a joke to calm the tension between you and her.

[image: Use humor to break down her defenses]

You might say something like, â□□Well, thatâ□□s not entirely true, is it? Technically weâ□□re broken up because you said itâ□□s over between us. So, in actual fact, itâ□□s your fault that we broke up, not mine. You're the villain, not me. You'Â were such a bad girlfriend to me,â□□ and have a laugh with her about that.

Say that in a joking manner, not in a serious manner or in a way where you are seeking pity.

Essentially, just be strong enough to joke around and not take her comments so seriously all the time.

When you do that, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling attracted to the new, emotionally stronger version of you who has the balls to joke around and turn a stressful conversation into something playful and light hearted.

Her guard then naturally comes down and she becomes open to the idea of getting back together again.

Will My Ex Get Jealous if I Date Someone Else?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Not necessarily.

In most cases, it will only work if:

1. The woman you date is more physically attractive than your ex

[image: Making an ex jealous by dating other women]

If your ex sees you dating another woman who is more attractive than her, she will feel twinges of jealousy, even if she has been recently saying things like, “I don’t care what you do. Just leave me alone and find some other woman to be with. You and I are over!”

Of course, she probably won’t openly admit that she is jealous, but secretly, she will be thinking things like, “I wonder if that’s the reason why things didn’t work out between us! Maybe I wasn’t attractive enough for him and he got bored.”

That might come as a shock to you, especially if your ex always seemed to be so confident, self-assured and together.

However, what a lot of guys don’t understand is that in most cases, women are a lot more insecure than they let on.

For example: According to a global study conducted by Dove cosmetics, 96% of women don’t consider themselves to be beautiful and secretly feel very insecure about their physical appearance.

So, if you suddenly start dating a woman who is more attractive than her, it’s very likely that your ex will get jealous.

Even if your ex is hot, she will almost certainly focus on qualities about the other woman that are better than hers (in her mind anyway), such as the new woman having better legs, a pretty looking face, nice hair, great fashion sense or nice lips or eyes.

Of course, just because your ex feels jealous, it doesn’t mean that she’s going to suddenly call you up on the phone, express her undying love for you and ask you to take her back.

Why?

She might not want to face up to a potential rejection from you if she calls or texts you.

For example: Imagine how she’d feel if she called you and you said, “Why are you calling me? We’ve broken up. Besides, I’m with a new girl now and I’m much happier with her. I’d never get back with you.”

She’d be crushed.

So, rather than potentially getting her heart broken like that, she will try to move on herself.

For example: She may think something like, “I see that he’s already dating and has found himself a new girl. Well good for him! If I had any doubts about us breaking up, he’s proven to me that what we had is truly over. In fact, him moving on so quickly just proves to me that our relationship was a joke and that it meant nothing to him. I should actually thank him for helping me see the light. I can now move on with my life without any doubts holding me back.”

She will then focus on getting over him and finding herself a replacement guy as soon as possible

(e.g. going out to bars and nightclubs and hooking up with guys, using dating apps, hooking up with a guy she knows who has been waiting for her to become single again).

As you can see, although dating a woman who is more physically attractive than your ex can stir up feelings of jealousy in her, it can also backfire and help her get over you faster.

A better way to approach the ex back process is to interact with her (e.g. over the phone or in person) and instantly reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

The more attraction you make her feel, the more open she becomes to being your girl again now.

On the other hand, if you date someone else to make her jealous, there's no guarantee that she will feel jealous or want you back because of it.

Another example of when dating someone else will make an ex jealous, is when

2. She still has feelings for you and secretly wants you back

[image: She still has feelings for you and secretly wants you back]

Naturally, if a woman still loves a guy and wants him back, seeing him with someone else will almost certainly stir up feelings of jealousy inside of her.

She will then start worrying about losing him forever and it may force her to build up the courage to contact him by sending a text like, Hey, how have you been? I really miss you. Want to catch up sometime?

That's how it works in ideal situation, but it doesn't always play out like that.

For example: When a woman sees that her ex is moving on with someone else, she might then accept it as a sign that he's completely over her, or believe that it now means she has no chance of getting him back.

She might say to herself, So, that's it then huh? He's not coming back to me after all. Well, I've waste my time hoping we would get back together. While I've been sitting here, missing him and hoping that he would call me, he has been hooking up with a new girl. I was a fool to think that he still loved me. I really thought we had a chance of getting back together, but clearly that's not the case at all. It's over between us and I need to accept it and find a way to forget him, like he's forgotten me.

She then puts her energy into fully getting over her feelings for him and moving on.

Here's the thing

Making your ex jealous by dating someone else isn't a foolproof method and in some instances, it can cause more harm than good (i.e. because it forces her to move on by hooking up with a new guy, even if she doesn't want to).

Put yourself in her shoes.

If she did that to you when you still had feelings for her, how would you feel?

It would suck, wouldn't it?

So, why do it to her?

Remember: Jealousy is a negative emotion and most women don't like to be stuck feeling it, so they make an effort get over it as quickly as possible by hooking up with a new guy.

If your reasons for making your ex jealous are so that you can get her back without any fuss, why not use a different approach?

A better way to make a woman want you is to reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you, to the point where she feels she would be making a mistake if she let you go.

On the other hand, if you only focus on making her feel jealous by dating someone else, it may push her into the arms of another guy who makes her feel more attracted and in love than you have ever made her feel.

Another example of when dating someone else can make an ex jealous, is whenâ

3. You seem happier with the new woman

[image: You seem happier with the new woman]

If your ex girlfriend can see that youâre much happier with the new woman, then it will definitely make her feel jealous on some level.

You can show her how happy you are by posting photos on Facebook and setting them to 'public' so your ex can see them even if she has unfriended you.

By the wayâ

Itâs very important that you donât pretend to be happy with some else when youâre not.

For example: A guy might try to make his ex think that heâs got a new girlfriend by posing in photos with a platonic friend that his ex has never met before.

Alternatively, he might ask one of his sisterâs friends to pretend to be his girlfriend and post photos on Instagram or do some Snapchats with her.

Yet, hereâs the thingâ

If your ex finds out that youâve only lying about dating someone else to get her back, she will lose even more respect and attraction for you.

As a result, getting her back then becomes a lot more difficult than it would have been if you were honest with her.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Make an Ex Woman Jealous By Dating Someone Else

Dating a new woman to make your ex jealous can work, but it can also result in you losing her.

Here are some common mistakes that other guys make when in your positionâ

1. Dating new women, falling in love and then missing out on the opportunity to get his ex woman back

[image: Missing out on the opportunity to get her back]

A guy might sometimes get so caught up in a plan to make his ex jealous, that he forgets about his original goal, which was to get her back.

Instead of making her a little bit jealous and then getting her back, he finds a girl that he enjoys being with and months fly by before he realizes that he hasnât interacted with his ex at all in that time.

He might then say to himself, â€œWell, maybe this is a good thing. It gives her more time to see me happy with someone else, which will then make her even more jealous.â€

Yet, rather than waiting for months to hopefully get him back, his ex woman feels jealous initially and then proceeds to move on with new guys to make herself feel better.

Then, when her ex finally contacts her, rather than her say, â€œIâ€™m so glad you finally called! Iâ€™ve really missed you,â€ she might say something along the lines of, â€œSorry, but I didnâ€™t hear from you in so long that I just moved on now. Iâ€™ve met someone else and Iâ€™m really happy with him. Itâ€™s too late for us now. I wish you all the best. Goodbye.â€

Another negative outcome of dating someone else to hopefully get your ex back is that you can spend a lot of time getting emotionally involved with the new woman.

You can really fall in love with her, or at least really care about her and not want to hurt her.

So, rather than breaking her heart, you might stay with her for a few weeks or months longer, which will then result in your ex moving on.

Additionally, if you do break up with her to get back with your ex, you might be feeling guilty about leaving the new girl, which can cause you to struggle to fully reconnect with your ex and, as a consequence, you lose both women.

Another mistake that guys often make when in your position isâ€œ!

2. Thinking that it will look â€œtoo obviousâ€ if he posts photos online

It may look obvious to post up photos of you having fun with a new woman, but itâ€™s necessary if you want to get your ex back by making her jealous.

Just do what works to get her back (e.g. post photos of yourself having fun with other women) and then get her back.

Initially, she might pretend not to care that youâ€™re dating someone else, but deep down sheâ€™ll most likely be wondering, â€œHe moved on so quickly. Didnâ€™t he love me?â€ or â€œHeâ€™s dating a blonde now. I thought her preferred brunettes. I wonder if he didnâ€™t think I was attractive enough when we were together. Maybe I should dye my hair, or cut itâ€¦ maybe I need to lose some weight or get some sexier clothes. I want to see if I can attract him back. Iâ€™m better than her and I will prove that to him.â€

She might then send you a private message on social media, or text you to say hello.

She will be hoping to assess your state of mind and find out how serious you are about the woman in your photos.

If that happens, you need to use every interaction with her as a way of building up her feelings and making her want you more and more.

From there, getting her to agree to a meet up becomes easy.

Then, when she sees you in person and discovers that youâ€™re a new and improved man, the idea of getting back together again will seem like a no brainer to her.

She will clearly be feeling enough respect, attraction and love for you to give the relationship another chance, so itâ€™s then up to you to give her that chance.

Another mistake the guys often make in your situation isâ€œ!

3. Not being aware of how to get her back without having to date new women

Making a woman feel jealous by dating other women is definitely something that helps to get an ex back, but itâs not the only thing that works.

In fact, in most cases, dating other women to get an ex back can cause more complications than get results (e.g. your ex builds up a lot of resentment towards you and decides to get back at you by hooking up with a guy, she focuses on fully getting over you and moving on, or she allows herself to fall in love with a new guy).

So, if your goal is to get your ex back, itâs usually better to do it by making her feel positive emotions (e.g. respect, attraction, love), rather than negative emotions (e.g. resentment or bitterness).

Begin the ex back process by interacting with her any way you can (e.g. via text, social media, over the phone and wherever possible, in person) and re-spark her feelings for you.

The more she experiences the new you for herself, the more she begins think, âMy ex seems so different now. I really enjoy hearing from him. Maybe we can fix our relationship after all.

She then starts to feel that if youâre not in her life anymore, itâs just not going to feel right.

So, she opens herself up to the idea of getting back together again.

Why Do Women Cheat Instead of Breaking Up?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 common reasons why a woman will cheat on a man instead of breaking up with him are:

1. She wants to have a replacement guy ready to go, to avoid being seduced back into a relationship with him

[image: She wants to have a replacement guy ready]

If a woman finds herself in a relationship with a man that she is no longer attracted to, she won't always just come out and say, "It's over. Goodbye."

Sometimes, it's not easy for a woman to break up with a man (e.g. because they live together and he won't move out, he is controlling and manipulative).

In other cases, sometimes a woman just doesn't know how to break up with her current man because he always manages to convince her to stick with him by sweet-talking her.

For example: A guy might seduce a woman back by promising her the world and offering her what she wants if she gives him another chance (e.g. to get married, have children, go on a holiday, buy her a ring, do whatever she wants).

He might say to her, "There's nothing I want more than for us to be together. I want to marry you, so please give me another chance so we can get engaged. I love you and you love me, right? Let's not let a silly misunderstanding get between us and destroy what we have. I promise that things will be different from now on. You'll see. I am going to make you so happy from now on."

Then, weeks or months later after getting her back, he breaks his promises and reverts back to his old behavior.

At that point, she might have gone through with an engagement party and been congratulated by friends and family, gotten pregnant or committed to him in some other way (e.g. moving in together, getting a mortgage together).

Now, she feels stuck with him and doesn't know how else to get rid of him than to break his heart by cheating on him and getting serious with the new guy.

In other cases, if the sex between them was always amazing, a guy might use that as a way of getting her man.

He may show up at her house under the pretence of discussing their break up and then seduce her into sleeping with him to make her change her mind.

She has an orgasm, loves being physical with him again and falls back him love.

She then gives him another chance, only to eventually discover that it was a mistake because he's still stuck at the same level he was at before (e.g. he's still manipulative and controlling, selfish, unreliable).

So, to prevent that from happening to her, she will find herself a replacement guy before breaking up with him.

In this way, she will have some added protection in the event that he tries to seduce her back.

Another common reason why a woman might cheat instead of breaking up is

2. She hopes that it will make him hate her and not want to be with her anymore

[image: How could you do this to me?]

Sometimes, a woman will know that if she tries to break up with him normally, he won't accept it and would make it difficult for her to leave him.

For example: If a woman is really soft and finds it difficult to say â€œNo,â€ she may fear that if her guy starts begging, pleading or crying and saying things like, â€œPlease don't leave me! You know I won't be able to cope without you. I need you. I promise to do better. Just give me another chance,â€ she won't be able to leave him.

Alternatively, in a case where a man and a woman own a house together, share the bills and possibly even have a child or children together, she may be afraid that he will try to manipulate her into staying with him by saying things like, â€œIf you go, the kids stay with me,â€ or â€œIâ€™m not going to get stuck with all the bills, so you need to sort out your side of all the payments before moving out.â€

So, to prevent herself from being controlled by him, she cheats on him and hopes that he will feel so hurt by it that he will break up with her and demand that she exit his life completely.

Another common reason why a woman might cheat instead of breaking up isâ€

3. She's an untrustworthy woman

Some women are just bad people.

The same goes for men.

Most people are good people, but there are some bad eggs out there.

For example: Some women actually enjoy lying to, hurting and cheating on men as they get in and out of relationships.

For a woman like her, the drama and chaos of a relationship is more important and enjoyable to her than being in a committed, loving relationship for life.

So, no matter how great a guy might be, it just doesn't matter to her.

She is going to end the relationship by creating drama at some point or another.

It's inevitable.

She will eventually put herself in a situation (e.g. going out with her girlfriends, using dating apps, working somewhere where men will hit on her, spending time away from her man) where she can cheat and ruin the relationship.

It's just her way of going about life and there's not much you can do about it.

The same applies for women who try to tame men who always cheat and don't want to settle down.

The guy might be faithful to her for a while, but if he comes across an opportunity to sleep with another woman and get away with it, he usually will.

Likewise, if he is getting bored of being with her, he will intentionally put himself in situations where he can cheat and then end the relationship.

So, it's not that women are bad and can't be trusted.

Instead, it's that some people are untrustworthy and you just can't rely on them to stick by you in a lifetime relationship.

I know this from personal experience too.

I broke up a relationship with my girlfriend after a year because I noticed that she enjoyed lying and creating drama.

I'm glad I left her, because if I didn't, I wouldn't have met my amazing wife who I trust with my life. Plus, my wife is even hotter! lol.

Anyway, back to you and your ex!

If you truly believe that your ex is an untrustworthy woman who will happily stick a knife in your back when given the chance, don't waste your time thinking about her, or looking for ways to get her back.

A woman like her is unlikely to ever change her ways and she will probably always lie, cheat and deceive you no matter how amazing of a man you are.

So, just cut your losses and focus on finding yourself a good woman who deserves a great guy like you.

Another common reason why a woman will cheat instead of breaking up is!

4. She wasn't really ever committed to the relationship anyway

Sometimes, a woman gets into a rebound relationship (i.e. the relationship she has immediately after breaking up a long term relationship) to make herself feel better, but doesn't intend to actually stick with it for life.

Even though the guy might have serious intentions towards her, she will be thinking things like, "He makes me feel good after how badly my ex treated me, but he's not the kind of guy I plan to settle down with. He's not really my type, but he's sweet, so I'll stick with him for a while until someone better comes along."

Then, when another guy comes along who sparks her feelings of sexual attraction (e.g. because he's more emotionally manly, doesn't give her all the power in the relationship), she doesn't think twice about cheating on her sweet, nice guy, because she doesn't have deep feelings for him anyway.

Alternatively, a woman might simply not like the idea of being single and feeling lonely.

So, rather than going through life alone, she regularly hooks up with new guys who show her lots of love and attention.

In the back of her mind, she is thinking, "He's not my perfect match, but will do for now. At least I have someone to hang out with, go to parties and weddings with and even have sex with. I'll stick with him until something better comes along."

When another guy comes along who makes her feel more attracted, she simply cheats on boyfriend instead of breaking up with him and moves on without a care in the world.

Another common reason why a woman might cheat instead of breaking up is!

5. She wants him to react in an unattractive way, so she has another reason to leave him

Sometimes a woman hopes that by cheating on her guy, he will then completely lose control of his emotions (e.g. get angry with her, become aggressive or even violent towards her, cry and beg for her to stay, bombard her with desperate text messages).

She can then say to him, “Look at yourself. Are you proud of your behavior? Do you think that’s going to make me want you back? You’re out of control! You scare me now. You need to leave me alone and get some help. You’re crazy. It’s over between you and me. Never contact me again!”

She’s implying that the break up is all his fault (i.e. because he lost control of his emotions), which then allows her to move on and feel like she made the right decision to cheat on him and leave.

5 Mistakes to Avoid if Your Ex Cheated on You Instead of Breaking Up

If you really love her and want her back, it’s up to you whether you want to give her another chance. Some guys can handle it, whereas other can’t deal with the fact that she has slept with another man. It really depends on your relationship, how much you feel like the cheating was your fault and how confident you are in yourself (i.e. you don’t see other guys as being better than you because you are so accomplished in life or a very cool guy, the sex between you and her is always amazing and you know that another guy wouldn’t be as good as you).

So, if you want to get her back, go ahead and do it, but be sure to avoid the following mistakes.

1. Seeking pity from her for how much the cheating hurt you

[image: Look at me! Can't you see that I'm hurting?]

Trying to make a woman feel pity or guilt for the emotional pain that she has caused you only pushes her away even more.

Why?

A woman doesn’t like to feel like she’s being manipulated into giving her ex another chance, simply out of a sense of duty for having hurt him the way she did.

Even if a woman does feel bad for cheating on him, she usually won’t feel compelled to give him another chance purely based on guilt.

So, if you do still want to get your ex back who has cheated on you, don’t play the pity card on her.

To get the best outcome, focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you, so she feels drawn to you again.

That way, she will have a reason to give you another chance that feels good to her, rather than feeling like she is being forced into giving you another chance because you feel so sad, hurt and disappointed.

The next mistake to avoid making is

2. Getting very angry at her

It's perfectly normal for you to feel angry and betrayed after being cheated on by the woman you love.

It's even totally fine for you to express your feelings to her.

However, getting very angry and losing control of your emotions (e.g. shouting, calling her names, pushing her around or even hitting her) is not going to convince her to come back.

Instead, it will just give her an excuse to use your behavior against you and make you out to be the bad guy instead (e.g. she'll say that she's scared of you now, she'll get a restraining order with the police, she will say that she can't look at you the same way now that she has seen you lose control and get angry like that).

So, be calm and in control when you express any emotion to her.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

3. Insulting her by calling her names

You might feel justified in calling her a slut, whore or bitch and let's face it, maybe she even deserves being called that by you.

After all, you've most likely been a good guy to her and feel like you don't deserve to be cheated on or treated in that way.

Yet, as you would know, calling her names isn't going to get you and her back together.

Instead, it's simply going to make her see you as a guy who is unable to handle the challenges of life like a man (i.e. you lose control of your emotions, rather than maintaining control when under pressure or in challenging situations).

So, as tempted as you may feel to insult her, just maintain control of your emotions and don't say it.

Show her (via your actions and communication style), that you're not threatened by what she did.

You are disappointed, but you're not seeking pity and you're not losing control of your emotions by getting very angry.

She did what she did and it is her mistake, not yours.

You're not the bad person here.

She cheated on you.

So, what you need to do is focus on your good qualities and believe in yourself and your attractiveness to her.

At the same time, if you want her back, be willing to forgive her and make a fresh start with her.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

4. Demanding that she tell you all the details of how it happened

Why put yourself through the mental and emotional pain of knowing exactly when she kissed him, how good he was in bed or if she had an orgasm or gave him a blowjob?

Those are horrible things to be focusing on if she is the woman you really love.

So, if you want her back, I recommend that you don't focus on that.

Instead, just know that no other guy is better than you in the bedroom.

Believe in yourself and your attractiveness to her.

If you doubt it, you will be insecure, which will make you feel like crap and will turn her off.

So, be confident instead.

Believe that you are the man and that no other guy is as good as you in the bedroom.

Funnily enough, that's what a woman wants you to believe about yourself anyway.

She doesn't want you to say it though.

She just wants you to believe it, so you can then behave and act in a confident way in the bedroom.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ□|

5. Willingly accepting being cheated on just to spend more time with her

Sometimes a guy just doesn't want to let go of his woman, even though she betrayed him by cheating on him.

So, he instantly forgives her for the cheating and puts up with her continued bad treatment of him, just to get to spend more time with her.

Yet, giving her that kind of power over him actually makes the situation worse.

Why?

A woman wants a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy who is willing to crawl around after her, picking up any crumbs of interest she gives to him.

Additionally, if a man is willing to keep putting up with her bad behavior just to get to spend time with her, she will likely cheat on him again.

For example: She may think to herself, â□□ Well if heâ□□s letting me get away with it once, why not do it again? Clearly heâ□□s not man enough to do anything about it, so I will keep him around for now and cheat on him again soon.â□□)

Donâ□□t let that happen to you.

Make sure that you don't hand over all your power to her, just to hopefully spend a few more hours or days with her.

Be in the position of power.

Make her feel (don't say it) that she needs to prove to you that sheâ□□s worthy of your love and attention and not the other way around.

How?

When she can see that youâ□□re not going to be a push over with her anymore (i.e. let her get away with how she behaved), she will naturally start to feel respect for you again.

It's not about being angry, sulking, controlling or overly domineering or anything like that.

Instead, it's about respecting yourself and not being a doormat for her to walk all over.

Be good to her, but be even better to yourself.

If you do that, she will naturally feel some respect for you for not being a wimp about the whole thing and sucking up to her.

From there, you can build on her feelings for you again and get her back.

Just remember: If you decide to take her back, you will need to completely forgive her so you can move forward together with a clean slate.

If you don't think that you can do that, I recommend that you sleep with a new woman or two first, so you can even the playing field.

Whatever you do though, make sure that you completely forgive her and let the cheating go, so you and her can have a healthy, committed relationship from now on.

As long as you deepen her feelings of respect, attraction and love over time, she will most likely remain loyal and be even more loving and attentive because you were man enough to forgive her and give her another chance.

Does the No Contact Rule Work For Short-Term Relationships?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

No Contact doesn't always work.

Whether or not it works (especially for short term relationships), really depends on the reason why she broke up with you.

Times When the No Contact Rule Can Work

Here are 2 examples of when the No Contact Rule can work after breaking up a short-term relationship:

1. She broke up with you to see if you'd chase her and become desperate

[image: She broke up with you to see if you'd chase her or become desperate]

Sometimes a woman just isn't sure if she should continue to invest in her new boyfriend, or break up with him and find someone who she can be more certain about.

Although she does care for new boyfriend, certain aspects of his thinking and behavior are causing her to wonder if he's really the man for her.

For example: She decides to become a bit of a nag in the relationship with a guy (e.g. she's always complaining, creating unnecessary drama over irrelevant things) to see if he can stand up to her in a dominant, but loving way.

Yet, rather than standing up to her and putting her back in her place in a loving way, he makes the mistake of being even nicer and sweeter to her in the hope that it makes her treat him well.

She was hoping to see that he had the balls to stand up for himself and make her respect him, but he failed that test.

Now she feels like she is the more dominant one in the relationship, which causes her to feel turned off by him sexually.

She begins to think, He's just too nice all the time. No matter how badly I behave, he just lets me get away with it. Maybe it's because he fears that I will dump him. Why isn't he more confident in his value to me? Why does he have to be so self doubting? Maybe he's not the right guy for me after all. Maybe I'm too good for him. I wish it wasn't like this, but I have to follow my heart. My heart is telling me that he probably got lucky with me and he knows it.

She then breaks up with him and waits to see how he will react.

If he becomes desperate and starts chasing her in a needy way, she will then make up her mind to leave him for good because it will confirm to her that she's probably just too good for him.

On the other hand, if accepts the break up, says goodbye and doesn't contact her for a week, then it can impress her and make her want to hear from him.

So, in a case like that, the No Contact Rule can work.

BTW: You don't need to wait 30 or 60 days to contact her.

7 days is more than enough because it proves the point (i.e. that you're not desperately chasing her). In a case like this one, your ex is just testing to see whether you will lose your confidence and hand over all your power to her (i.e. suck up to her, promise to change whatever she wants).

So, when you ignore her and focus on living a fun, happy life without her for a week and then let her find out via social media and/or mutual friends, she will naturally begin to look up to you with respect again.

She will then start to feel sparks of attraction and love for you, drop her guard and open up to giving the relationship another chance.

Another example of when the No Contact Rule can work after ending a short-term relationship, is whenâ

2. She is still very much in love with you, but is afraid of getting hurt if she commits

[image: She is afraid of getting hurt]

Sometimes a woman finds herself falling in love with a guy very quickly (e.g. theyâve only been dating for a few weeks and she already sees herself moving in with him, getting married to him, or having a baby with him).

This may cause her to panic (especially if sheâs inexperienced with relationships, or sheâs been badly hurt by some other guy before) and she might start thinking to herself, âI can't risk getting hurt again. I need to break up with him before things get too serious and I end up with a broken heart. It's probably best that I just remain single. I hate getting my heart broken.â

She breaks up with him before he can breakup with her, as a way of protecting herself from potentially getting hurt by him in the future.

If this is the case between you and your ex, then the No Contact Rule can work on her.

Not hearing from you for a 1-3 weeks will give her enough time to realize just how much she loves and misses you.

She might then begin to think something like, âI want him back. I can't bear the pain of not having him in my life anymore. I messed up. I allowed my fear of getting hurt to ruin the best relationship Iâve ever had. I need to get him back before he finds a new girl.â

She may then try to contact you by sending you a text to say hello, or happily answer your text or call when you get in touch.

Times When The No Contact Rule Doesn't Work

Here are 7 examples of when the No Contact Rule doesn't work after the break up of a short-term relationship:

1. She's no longer attracted to you

[image: No contact doesn't work when she is no longer attracted to you]

If a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for a guy, then him ignoring her for 30 or 60 days (i.e. the typical amount of time that many people ignore their ex) isn't really going to bother her that much at all.

This is especially true if the relationship hasn't been properly established (i.e. it's still relatively new, possibly only a few weeks to a few months old) and she hasn't completely fallen in love with him.

Why?

The kind of love that you experience at the start is a lot different to completely falling in love in a way that lasts for life.

New love feels amazing, but properly established, deep love in a long term relationship is much more powerful and so much harder to let go of.

So, if your relationship wasn't properly established, she might not really care if you cut off contact and will simply focus on finding herself a new guy to move on with.

If you want her back, you stand a much better chance of getting her back by actively interacting with her (via text, on social media and especially over the phone and in person) and re-sparking her feelings for you.

The more respect and attraction you can make her feel during interactions with you, the more open she will become to getting back with you.

However, if you just ignore her when she doesn't have strong feelings for you anymore, she probably won't even give you a second thought after the first few days apart.

This is especially true if she is the one who broke up with you and she was clear (in her mind) about why she left you.

If she knows that she felt turned off by you (e.g. because you were insecure), she will remember that and just try to move on with a guy who is more confident and emotionally secure.

The next example of when the No Contact Rule doesn't work after the break up of a short-term relationship is when

2. She can easily move on without you

[image: She can easily move on without you]

If a woman knows that she can easily find a replacement guy (e.g. she is pretty, many guys like her, she knows how to flirt and get men interested), then not hearing from you won't be that much of a problem to her.

She knows that all she has to do is get on a dating app (e.g. Tinder) or site, go to a bar or nightclub, or take up a hobby that is mostly male-oriented and loads of guys will hit on her.

She can then have her pick of men for sex, dates or a relationship.

So, while you may be sitting at home counting the days of No Contact off your calendar (e.g. 30 to 60 days), she will probably have already moved on by the time you contact her.

Remember: It's much easier to change how a woman feels when you are actively interacting with her and making her feel attracted to you again, compared to just cutting off contact and hoping that she misses you.

If you disappear from her life when she isn't attracted to you, she's not really going to care.

The next example of when the No Contact Rule usually doesn't work after the break up of a short-term relationship is when

3. She is looking for real love

[image: She is looking for real love]

Initially, a woman might get into a relationship with a guy and enjoy it because the sex between them is great, they have loads of fun together and he's interesting to hang out with.

However, if all that really exists between them is the initial spark of new romance and the love doesn't develop over time, she will eventually begin to question whether or not she wants to stick with him in the long run.

Women know that truly being in love with each other is essential for a relationship to last for life. It's not enough if the man truly loves her though.

It has to be mutual.

So, if a guy wasn't able to make her fall truly in love with him (e.g. because he was too insecure), then a woman will eventually get to the point where she breaks up with him.

She will then try to find a new man who will be able to guide him and her into deeper feelings of love over time, until they are truly, inseparably in love and then stay together for life.

She won't feel the need to go back to her ex, simply because he isn't contacting her.

She wants to experience real love and find herself a relationship that can last for life.

Not all women are like that though, which is why the next example is also very important to understand

3. She enjoys being single and won't chase a guy back

Some women don't want to settle down.

They just want to enjoy themselves, fall in love, break up and be free for many years, until maybe, eventually, they decide to settle down.

For now though, she might enjoy the freedom of being able to

- Stay out late and party with her single friends.
- Have sex with a different guy whenever she wants to.
- Not have to compromise on what she wants to do.
- Not have any relationship responsibilities.
- Hang out with whomever she wants, whenever she wants.
- Be irresponsible about her life and just focus on having fun.

So, rather than miss her ex and want him back when he isn't contacting her, she will just get on with enjoying life without him.

If he then calls her after 30 to 60 days to try and get her back, it's highly likely that she will say something like, I'm sorry, but I'm not ready for a serious relationship. I prefer being single. I'm having so much fun. So, look maybe there's a chance that at some time in the future we will be able to get back together. For now though, I don't want to be in a relationship. I wish you all the best.â€œ

He then has just wasted 30 or 60 days sitting around, hoping that she would miss him and come running back to him.

Yet, she just got on with her life and possibly hook up with a new guy or a number of new guys, not even caring about the fact that her ex wasn't contacting her.

5. She has had a lot of experience with break ups and knows that the pain will go away

When a woman is experienced with break ups, she will know that no matter how sad, lonely and dejected she might be feeling because her ex isn't contacting her, those feelings will eventually fade away.

So, rather than let his silence get to her, she will usually focus on doing the types of things that will help her get over him even more quickly (e.g. put more effort into her work or studies, take up and interesting new hobby, spend more time going out with her single friends and flirting with guys).

If her ex then contacts her after a few weeks or months, she may have fully healed enough to say something like, â€œSorry, but it's too late for us now. I really thought I mattered to you, but not hearing from you all this time made me realize that we're not meant for each other. I'm over you now, so please don't call me again.â€œ

Another example of when cutting off contact for 30 or 60 days probably won't work is whenâ€œ

6. She doesn't believe that you will change

If a woman gets a sense that her ex won't be able to change, or doesn't even know how or what to change (e.g. she wanted him to be more manly because he was too emotionally sensitive, but he has no clue how to be like that), she won't waste time thinking about him if he stops contacting her after their break up.

Instead, she will focus on fully getting over him and opening herself up to meeting a new man.

After wasting 30 or 60 days waiting in the background (while she is most likely moving), he will then try to contact her.

If she answers and is open to talk to him, she will quickly realize that he really hasn't changed (i.e. he's still not manly enough emotionally. He's still too insecure) and then, getting her back becomes even more difficult than before.

So, if you want your ex back, you need to first make some attractive changes to your way of thinking and behavior.

Get ready to properly re-attract her, based on the new and improved man that you've become.

Then, interact with her and let her experience it.

By the wayâ€œ

You don't need to waste 30 or 60 days doing that.

If you keep learning from me here at The Modern Man, you will get it done within days and will be ready to contact her then, or after a week if you want to wait that long.

However, you don't need to wait for 1-2 months before you make a move.

If you do wait that long to contact her and begin the ex back process, she will most likely move on without you.

Another example of when the No Contact Rule doesn't work too well is whenâ

7. She knows that you don't understand what she really wants in a guy

Sometimes a woman will break up with a guy, without really telling him exactly what turned her off. She might just say, "I don't think we should see each other anymore" or, "I don't have feelings for you anymore. Let's just be friends" to end the relationship.

Yet, what she doesn't tell him is thatâ

- He was confident when she met him, but after a while he started doubting his attractiveness to her and as a result became more needy and clingy. This turned her off because she wants a guy who is confident and who believes in his attractiveness and value to her.
- She felt drawn to him because he was nice and sweet, but soon realized that he wasn't manly enough for her. She wants a guy who is good to her, but also makes her be good to him. She doesn't want a guy who sucks up to her all the time.
- The spark between them quickly faded and he went from making her feel like a sexy, desirable woman, to treating her like a neutral friend. She wants a guy who has the ability to keep the spark alive (e.g. by being very confident, making her feel girly in comparison to his masculine vibe and behavior).
- He put a lot of effort into chasing her and getting her to be his girl and it was fun at the start, but she quickly became bored of it. She wants a guy who is more of a challenge, so she feels the need to impress him too, rather than it being so one-sided.

So, when her ex uses the No Contact Rule to hopefully get her back, he doesn't.

She simply doesn't care enough about losing him, because she knows that he doesn't even understand how to attract her in the ways that really matter to her.

When the No Contact Rule Can Backfire on You

The goal of the No Contact Rule is to hopefully make your ex miss you like crazy and want you back. Yet, it usually doesn't work that way.

In fact, in most cases, a guy ends up causing himself more harm than good by doing it.

For example:

1. Using the No Contact approach for so long he develops insecurities

For example:

- He starts to feel unworthy of her and believes that the reason why she isn't contacting him is because she is too good for him.
- He loses confidence in his attractiveness to other women because he begins to see them as hard to get or hard to keep.
- He ends up thinking of his ex as, "the one that got away" and believes that his relationship life will never be happy with a new woman, or that he will never be able to get his ex back.

Donâ€™t let that guy be you.

Be a man of action and get her back now.

Donâ€™t use the No Contact Rule for longer than 3 to 7 days.

Get the job done quickly.

If you wait any longer than a week, it's usually a waste of time and can result in you losing confidence each and every day that she doesn't contact you or coming running back.

2. Not making a move before it's too late

[image: Not making a move before it's too late]

Even if a woman still has feelings for her ex, itâ€™s unlikely that sheâ€™s going to wait forever for him to contact her, right?

She's going to move on.

Initially, she might pine for him and even feel really sad that heâ€™s not calling her, but after a while sheâ€™s just going to start thinking things like, â€œWell, he obviously doesnâ€™t care about me the way I care about him. I guess itâ€™s truly over between us and I need to stop putting myself through this pain. Itâ€™s time for me to accept the truth that heâ€™s not going to call me. He has probably met someone else and forgotten all about me. So, I have to stop holding myself back and move on.â€

She will then make an effort to fully get over you by going out when invited by her single friends or colleagues, or by meeting and hooking up with new guys and getting herself a new boyfriend.

3. Not improving his ability to attract her when he does interact with her next

When a guy uses the No Contact Rule and eventually calls his ex, she usually won't be excited to meet up with him if he's still offering her the same old attraction experience as before (e.g. he's still not very confident, she can still dominate him during a conversation).

So, she doesn't feel motivated to get back with him and then rejects him.

He then thinks, “What happened? Why didnâ€™t No Contact work? Why doesnâ€™t she want me back? I thought that all I had to do was ignore her for 30 or 60 days and it would do the trick!?”

The reason why it didn't work is that he used the same old approach to attraction that caused him to be dumped in the first place.

So, to her, heâ€™s still the same guy he was 30 (or 60) days ago (e.g. insecure, emotionally immature, wimpy and weak-minded).

Heâ€™s just not able to make her have the types of feelings she wants to feel.

So, she rejects him.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

If you want to get your ex back, make sure that you use any time apart to rapidly change and improve yourself (e.g. become more confident in yourself and in your value to her, become more assertive and able to stand up for yourself to her and others, more emotionally masculine, understand exactly how to create a sexual vibe when you talk to her).

Then, when you interact with her again, she will have a reason to want to get back with you (i.e. she will feel attracted and drawn to you now).

By the way!

If you then ignore her for a few days after that interaction, rather than think, “Cool! I’m glad he’s leaving me alone. I can move on in peace, without having to be annoyed by him” she will be wondering, “Why do I miss him all of a sudden? Why am I so worried about losing him now?” and she will want to interact with you again.

As a result, you can get her back easily.

My Ex Seems Happy on Facebook

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 things you should do if you want her back:

1. Understand that happy moments online don't necessarily mean she is truly happy

[image: Happy moments online don't mean she is truly happy]

Anyone can fake being happy online.

All your ex has to do is post photos of herself smiling and hanging out with other people, or status updates saying things like, â€œLife is so great! I had so much fun this weekend,â€ to give the impression that she's happy and enjoying her life.

However, a few photos or even some great weekends spent with friends, doesn't mean that her life is perfect.

It also doesn't mean that she isn't experiencing days where she feels sad and lonely and is wondering where her life is going.

It doesn't mean she's not missing you and thinking about you, or that she wouldn't give you another chance if you suddenly started giving her the attraction experience she always wanted.

Don't allow her Facebook posts to make you doubt yourself and avoid her because you assume she is happy.

Maybe she is truly happy now, or maybe she isn't.

Here's the thing though!

Whether or not she is happy really has nothing to do with whether you can get her back or not.

What matters is whether or not you are prepared and ready to re-attract her when you interact with her again.

If you interact with her and spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love for the new and improved you, she will begin to miss you, or even open up to wanting to see you right away.

So, don't focus on how happy she seems.

It could be an act or it could be real, but that doesn't matter.

What matters is whether or not you take action to interact with her and re-attract her.

The next thing to do to get her back is to

2. Make her feel how you felt when you saw her posts and photos

[image: Make her feel the way she made you feel]

Although your ex might seem happy on Facebook and like she's gladly moving on with her life without you, chances are high that she still checks up on you from time to time to see what you're up to.

Use that to your advantage.

Let her see that you're not sitting around moping, feeling lonely and letting your life pass you by because you miss her and want her back.

For example: Post up photos on Facebook of you

- Having fun with other people.
- Doing something wild and crazy that you always wanted to do (e.g. sky diving, playing in a band, on a scary rollercoaster). Make sure you do it with other people though. Doing it alone looks lonely and doesn't have the same effect as doing it with other people.
- At a party with other, attractive women.
- Doing fun outdoor activities with other people.

[image: Have fun without her and post the photos on social media]

Be sure to smile, appear confident and enjoy yourself in many of those photos.

When she sees that you also seem happy without her, she might then begin thinking things like, â€œHmmm my ex seems happy without me. Why wasn't he like that when we were together? Seeing him like this makes me miss him. Maybe it would be fun to catch up and say hi I want to see how happy he really is without me.â€

She then texts you, or replies to your texts or answers your phone call when you call her up.

She is willing to meet up with you and see what happens.

Why?

One of the qualities that women find attractive in an ex man is his ability to want her, but still be able to have a happy, fulfilling and successful life without her.

Why?

It shows that you're not dependent on her for your self-esteem, confidence and happiness as a man.

You're a man who can stand on his own two feet and enjoy life, regardless of whether she is in it or not.

So, when she sees that you're beginning to enjoy a great life without her, she starts to feel attracted to you again.

Suddenly, she starts to worry about losing you to another girl who will be attracted to the new and improved you.

She then might text you, send you a private message via Facebook in an attempt to spark something up between you and her, or just give you a call.

By the way

If she doesn't text, message or call don't worry.

Be a man and make the first move.

You can do it.

3. Contact her and re-attract her on a phone call

Regardless of whether she contacts you or not after you post photos of yourself having fun on Facebook, you need to be a man about it and take the lead in the ex back process by giving her a call.

On a phone call, you can better assess her state of mind (i.e. is she really happy, or has she just been putting on an act?), while at the same time sparking her feelings for you by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be hearing from you.

An example of how to re-attract your ex over the phone is to call her up and say (in a joking way) something like, “Hey ex girlfriend. I was driving past that club we used to like going to together and I thought of you.”

She will then likely respond asking “Why?”

You can then reply by saying something like, “Well, I was just remembering how you would always step on my toes every time we danced together. I ended up with bruises so many times because of your crazy dancing style. So, do you still have two left feet, or has your dancing improved?”

At this point, she will probably be laughing and feeling a little self-conscious and she may say something like, “Heeeey! That’s not true, I’m a great dancer!” or if it is true, “Yeah, I still have two left feet,” and laugh with you about that.

You can then say, “Anyway, so I thought I’d give you a call to say hi as a friend. How’ve you been?”

Of course, that kind of “joke” isn’t going to suit all couples.

So, a more general approach to being funny is to call her and say, “Hey what’s happening ex girlfriend?”

She will most likely laugh at you referring to her as ex girlfriend.

You can then add in, “Just calling to say hi. I’ve been seeing all those photos of you on Facebook. Looks like you’ve been having a great time.”

She might then add in, “Yeah, it’s been fun, thanks.”

You can then jokingly (important) add in, “Of course, it would have been much more fun if I was there, right?” and have a laugh with her about it.

You can then add in, “No, just kidding! I’m glad to see you having fun. I’ve been having a good time too.”

If she has seen your photos, she will most likely say, “Yeah, I’ve noticed” and ask you some questions about that.

Be prepared to give her humorous answers, rather than being totally serious about everything she asks you.

For example: If she asks, “So, who’s birthday party was that the other night?” and you can jokingly say, “Oh, it was my girlfriend’s party” and let her respond.

You can then add in, “Just kidding. She’s not my girlfriend. We’re just friends! she was hitting on me when she was drunk, but I wasn’t having any of it” and then have a laugh with her about that.

You might want to also add in, “I ended up having a good night though and didn’t get much sleep that night” to leave her wondering if that means you hooked up with another girl instead and were up all night having sex with her.

If she asks if that means you hooked up with a girl and you didn’t, just say, “No...I mean we partied very late.”

If you did hook up with another girl and you know that making her jealous will help get her back, you can say, “Hey, don’t ask those things” and then change the topic.

Then, continue to chat with her and add in some more humor to make her feel really happy to be talking to you.

She will be impressed to see that you are confident enough to joke with her, even though you and her are broken up.

You’re not worried about potentially saying the ‘wrong’ thing and causing your ex to hang up.

You’re a cool guy who has the confidence to just say whatever he wants, while also being a good guy.

Women love that.

As a result, your ex’s guard will come down and she will start to feel surges of respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, she becomes open to seeing you in person, to see where things go from there.

4. Get her to meet up with you and make her feel attracted to who you are now

Once you’ve sparked some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you over the phone, the next step is to get her to meet up with you in person and make her feel even more attracted.

So, after a little bit more laughter and easy-going conversation, just say something along the lines of, “Anyway, good chatting to you again. We should catch up some time this week to say hi in person. Just as friends of course.”

She will most likely be curious about your new confident approach and be interested in experiencing in person, so she will say yes and agree to meet up.

At the meet up, make sure to focus on saying and doing the types of things that will convince her that no matter how happy she has been without you, getting back with you will make her even happier.

For example:

- Make sure that you maintain your confidence around her, regardless of what she does to make you feel nervous or insecure (e.g. she says things like, “I’m happy now, so we’re not going to get back together,” or she talks about her new, exciting life since you and her broke up).
- Continue using humor to break down her walls.
- Flirt with her to make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman in your presence.
- Be more emotionally masculine than you have ever been (i.e. don’t be emotionally sensitive, don’t be insecure, don’t doubt yourself).

When she starts feeling more attracted to you than she ever has before, because you are now making her feel new and exciting emotions, she will realize that she will be even happier if you and her hook up again.

5 Mistakes That a Guy Might Make When He Assumes That

His Ex is Happier Without Him

Just because your ex seems happier on Facebook, it doesn't mean that she really is happier without you, or that she wouldn't give you another chance.

Unfortunately, most guys don't find this out and end up making one or more of the following mistakes!

1. Overanalyzing her posts

A guy will analyze his ex's posts to hopefully try and work out whether or not she is truly over him.

For example: If a woman posts something like, "Dinner for one again tonight...lol" he might start wondering, "Does that mean that she feels lonely and is missing me? It must also mean she's not seeing anyone else. That's a good sign, right? It means she still has feelings for me and isn't ready to move on. Maybe she's trying to signal to me that she wants me back. I should probably wait a little longer for a more obvious clue."

On the other hand, if she posts something along the lines of, "Life is soooo good! Just came home from the greatest party ever!" he may start thinking, "Hmm...she seems so happy. She's clearly over me already. Maybe she even met someone at the party. Maybe she even kissed him or even had sex with him. It's over for me. I'll never get her back now. It's over. I have no chance."

Yet, here's the thing!

Analyzing your ex's social media posts is the fastest way to drive yourself crazy!

Don't base your confidence about getting her back on her Facebook posts because she will almost certainly post things that can take away your confidence.

Base your confidence on the fact that you have become such a better man since the break up and can now attract her in ways that will make her want you back.

You can re-attract her.

So, if you want her back, go ahead and get her back regardless of what she posts on social media.

Focus on using every interaction you have with her from now on (e.g. via text, on social media, over the phone and in person), to actively make her feel respect and attraction for you again.

That's what really matters.

So, stop wasting time overanalyzing her posts and just call her and make her happy to be talking to you instead.

Another mistake to avoid is!

2. Leading a lonely lifestyle without her

Sometimes, a guy will completely put his life on hold after a break up, because he hopes that his ex will see how lost and helpless he feels without her and then give him another chance.

Yet, rather than make her think, "Awww...he seems so sad and lonely without me. I should forget about why I broke up with him and give him another chance because he loves me and needs me" so much, and she will feel even more turned off by him.

Why?

Women are attracted to men who are emotionally strong enough to be happy, confident and forward moving in life, with or without her support.

Women don't want a guy who needs them to be around, so he can then feel happy, confident and worthy as a man.

Women want a man who can stand on his own two feet and enjoy life, be liked by others and make progress, without her input.

So, when a guy is living a lonely, sad life and can't move forward and be confident or happy without his ex woman, it turns her off at a deep, instinctive level.

This is why you shouldn't put your life on hold while trying to get her back.

If you want her to see you as worth coming back to, you need to show her that you are now very happy with, or without her.

You have a high self-esteem and belief in yourself (with or without her approval) and you're moving forward in your life.

You're not sitting around waiting for her to call.

You're moving forward with your life and enjoying it.

Of course, that doesn't mean you don't want her back.

You do want her back, but you don't need her back.

That's how women want you to be.

Women don't want a needy guy who can't function emotionally without her.

So, when you focus on becoming genuinely happy and fulfilled in your own life, not only does that stop you from worrying about the fact that your ex seems happy on Facebook, but you also instantly become more attractive to her at the same time.

Suddenly, she starts to see you as being more of a catch than you were before.

She then becomes open to talking to you on the phone and meeting up with you in person.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Hoping that she will eventually miss him if he just waits long enough

[image: Hoping that she will eventually miss him if he just waits long enough]

Most people have heard the expression, and absence makes the heart grow fonder.

Important: It only works if the woman is still attracted to you.

If she is over you and doesn't have feelings, then absence doesn't do a thing. She just moves on.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that until it's too late.

For example: A guy might convince himself that if he just waits long enough, his ex will eventually miss him and reach out to him.

If he notices that his ex seems happy on Facebook, he might think to himself, Well, if I try to contact her now, she will probably tell me that she's not interested in talking to me because she's so happy with her life. On the other hand, if I wait long enough and she experiences some disappointments (e.g. friends letting her down) or heartbreaks (e.g. she gets hurt by another guy), she will realize that what we had was special. She will then start to miss me and from there, it's only a matter of time before she contacts me. She will then see that I've been waiting for her the whole time and will be impressed by my loyalty. We can then get back together again.

Yet, that almost never happens.

Why?

If a woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for her ex and is already moving on and feeling happy without him, then she usually won't even care that her ex hasn't been contacting her.

Instead, she just focuses on finding a new guy, moving on and enjoying her life.

So, if you want your ex back, don't put your life on hold to hopefully show her how dedicated you are to her.

A woman doesn't want to be with a guy because she feels sorry for him.

She wants to be with him because he's the kind of guy who can easily attract other women, but chooses to be with her because he loves her and looks at her as being the right woman for him.

That's not going to happen if you sit around waiting for her to come back to you and be amazed that you've put your life on hold to show your commitment to her.

If you do that, she will simply feel turned off by your neediness of her and your inability to enjoy life without her.

Another mistake to avoid is

4. Pretending to be happy for her by commenting on her posts

If you pretend to be happy for your ex, it's highly likely that she will sense it (e.g. because you'll be too nice and sweet, or too neutral and unemotional about it).

She will assume that you're only pretending not to be jealous or angry to hopefully make her think that you are happy and doing fine without her.

She will then keep her guard up with you, which will then make it even more difficult for you to interact with her.

So, just understand that you don't have to fake your support and encouragement of her happiness.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should be whiny, emotional or rude either.

Instead, just be genuine about how you feel.

For example: If you see a post on Facebook by your ex doing something you and her planned to do together and looking happy, it's okay for you to say how you feel in a calm, easy-going manner.

You can comment something along the lines of, Wow, so you went on that vacation without me! Lol... Well, I must admit I'm a bit disappointed that we didn't get to it together, but I'm glad you had fun regardless.

Of course, not every guy can comment with something like that.

Sometimes a woman breaks up with a guy because he was too needy, clingy and ended up smothering her with attention in the relationship.

In a case like that, he should just click like on her post and not comment anything at all.

That way, she has to wonder what his like meant and may assume that it means he is happy for her, doing fine without her and doesn't really care.

So, be sure to use the right approach for your situation.

Another mistake that many guys make in your situation isâ□'

5. Forgetting that he once made her happy too

When you see photos and posts on Facebook of your ex seeming to be happy without you, itâ□□s easy to forget that you and her were once happy together as well.

Don't forget it.

Remind yourself that if you were able to make her happy once, you can definitely do it again.

In fact, this time around, you will make her even happier with you than she ever was because you are going to be a new and improved version of yourself.

You're not going to be making the same old mistakes that lead to the break up.

You are going to level up as a man and give her the kind of attraction experience that she always wanted in a relationship with you.

It might be hard to believe that you can make that happen because she seems so happy on Facebook at the moment, but you can.

Will She Ever Take Me Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

That's a good question to ask, but an even better question is, How can you get her to take you back?

If you are focused on the negative reality of her not wanting you back (i.e. thinking, "Will she ever take me back?"), then you're not doing what it takes to actually get a woman back.

To get a woman back, you have to take control of the situation by actively re-attracting her, rather than leaving it all up to her.

Watch this video to understand how it works!

As you will discover from the video above, a man can literally create feelings of respect, attraction and love inside of his ex woman.

When he does that, he can then get her back.

So, to dive deeper now and help you out even more, here are 5 tips on how to get her back!

1. Understand what will make her want to take you back

[image: Understand what will make her want to take you back]

Right now, you may not know all of the secret reasons why your ex decided to break up with you.

In many cases, a guy will know some of a woman's obvious reasons for leaving (e.g. she was tired of trying to make the relationship work), but a lot of the time, there are also deeper, more subtle reasons that she never even mentions.

For example: A man and a woman might always be arguing about him spending too much time playing video games, or watching TV, so he will recognize that as one of her reasons for breaking up with him.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that one of her more subtle, secret reasons is that she feels like he has no focus and direction in life, which makes her feel unsafe about a long term future with him.

His lack of direction makes her wonder, What kind of future do I have with him? Will he ever stop playing games and get serious about his life, or will I have to pick up the slack and take care of both of us? That's not what I want for the long run. I want to feel safe, protected and taken care of by a man who is rising through the levels of life and reaching for his true potential, rather than just rising through the levels of a pretend game. Why doesn't he see that I need him to focus on our real life and make me feel safe about our future? Maybe it's time for me to break it off and try to start again with a new guy.

She might not ever tell him that and may end up saying, "I just don't feel the same way anymore. I think we should break up."

[image: What do you want me to change?]

He is then left feeling confused about what he needs to change to get her back.

So, he promises to stop gaming, start going to gym more and start treating her better.

Yet, that's not what she wants.

She doesn't care if he goes to the gym or not and for the most part, he was already treating her quite well.

She wants him to rise up and start reaching for his true potential as a man, rather than hiding behind the safety and comfort of a computer game reality.

[image: I don't understand what you want me to change]

She doesn't want to tell him that though, because she doesn't want him to start faking interest in pursuing a dream or career, just to keep her for a little while longer and then eventually give up on that dream.

So, she just ends the relationship and hopes to find a man who is more mature and is approaching his life in a more balanced, productive manner.

In the same way, you might know about some of your ex's reasons for breaking up with you, but not all of them.

If you want her to take you back, you need to begin the process by truly understanding what it will take for her to do that.

You have to get absolutely clear about what you need to start saying and doing to properly re-attract her.

For example: Ask yourself

- What is it about me that initially attracted her to me (e.g. your confidence, drive and determination, sense of humor)?
- Did I continue to display those attractive qualities throughout the relationship, or did I slowly fall into the habit of behaving in less attractive ways (e.g. stopped focusing on your goals and became too emotionally dependent on her, began to doubt your attractiveness to her and became needy and clingy as a result, became too serious and uptight about things, rather than being easy-going, loving and fun to be around)?
- Did I try to get her to accept things about me that just aren't attractive to her (e.g. you wanted her to lead the relationship, you displayed annoying habits that she clearly didn't like)?

When you can honestly answer those questions for yourself, you will have a much better idea about what you need to say and do to get her back.

Essentially, what you need to do is more of the things that initially attracted her to you and less of the things that turned her off.

For example: You need to maintain your confidence around her regardless of what she says or does to make you feel insecure or doubt yourself.

You need to use humor to break down her defenses and stop her from creating unnecessary drama when she talks to you.

You need to change the things about yourself were turning her off, rather than expecting her to want you back without any upgrades.

When your ex can see that you've understood what she wants from you and have already changed, she won't be able to stop feeling some respect and attraction for you again for being a man of action.

When that happens, her defenses will come down and she will naturally begin to wonder about what it would feel like to be your girl again.

The next tip to help you get your ex back isâ€¦

2. Get ready to re-attract her on a phone call

If you really want to re-attract your ex and make her want to meet up with you in person (where you can get her back for real), you need to get her on a phone call with you as soon as possible.

When you do call her, don't let her dominate you with her strong personality (e.g. she tells you to leave her alone, she brings up all your past mistakes and blames you for the break up.)

Instead, make sure that you are ready to be confident, get her laughing and smiling and create an easy-going vibe on the call.

One way to get ready for the phone call is to imagine the call between you and her going really well.

Imagine that she is really enjoying talking to you again and loves how confident you are now.

To feel confident, remind yourself about all of your good qualities and the reasons she fell in love with you in the first place.

Believe in yourself and in your worth to her.

Know that she can be your girl once again.

Sure, you made some mistakes in the past, but you're not that guy anymore.

You're such a better man now.

You've made adjustments and improvements to yourself since the break up and she's now going to be interacting with an upgraded, much more attractive version of you.

So, in actual fact, she would be losing out if she didn't give you another chance.

Believe it.

Believe that you are that valuable and attractive as a man.

When you feel that way about yourself, you will naturally come across as confident (i.e. attractive) when you talk to her on the phone.

When she experiences your confidence and emotional strength (via the tonality of your voice and the way you talk and respond to her), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some attraction for you again.

The next tip to help you get your ex back is toâ€¦

3. Get ready to re-attract her in person

[image: Get ready to re-attract her in person]

Once you've started re-attracting your ex over the phone, the next step is to get ready to fully re-attract her in person.

Remember: No matter how well your phone call went with her, or how happy she sounded over the phone, you're not actually back together unless you and her meet up, hook up sexually and get back into a relationship.

So, don't hide behind phone calls or text messages in the hope that she one day says, "Let's meet up! I want you!"

You've got to push the action and make something happen.

Meet up with her in person, so she can feel attracted to you for real and see that you really have changed and really do make her feel differently now.

Not feeling confident about that?

Once again, imagine things going well when you and her meet up.

For example: See yourself walking into the selected meeting place with your head high, chest up and feeling confident about yourself.

You are well groomed, you look good and you feel great.

When she arrives, you confidently smile at her and say, â€œHey – How are you?â€

No matter how she responds (e.g. if she's being cold and distant), you remain calm and relaxed and use humor to lighten the mood.

Before you know it, she is laughing, smiling and having a good time talking to you.

She then says something like, â€œTo be honest, I really didn't want to see you today, but I'm glad we did this. You've changed a lot, you know? I wish you were like this before.â€

When it's time for her to leave, she gives you a warm hug goodbye, which then leads to a kiss and then sex.

All of that is possible.

You just have to believe in yourself and your ability to make her feel sparks of sexual attraction for you again.

Then, when you do meet up with her, you'll be amazed at how everything turns out, pretty much exactly as you imagined it.

The next tip to help you get your ex back is!

4. Build on her feelings once you've re-attracted her

Building on your ex's newfound feelings is the best way to ensure that you get her back and keep her back.

Make sure that during every interaction you have with her from now on (via text or e-mail, on social media, over the phone and especially in person), you are saying and doing things that make her feel even more respect and attraction for you than before.

For example: Make her laugh and smile and enjoy talking to you.

Then, when she's alone and missing you, she will begin to think things like, â€œI can't believe how much I'm thinking about him these days. I actually miss him when I don't hear from him. What is happening to me? Could I be falling back in love with him again? Should we get back together?â€

The more attracted you make her feel, the less she focuses on the negatives of the past and the more she feels drawn to the idea of being with you again.

From there, even if she previously said she would never take you back, the idea suddenly starts to appeal to her more and more.

As long as you know what you're doing and are able to handle the ex back process, you will get her back and you will enjoy a new, even better relationship with her.

The next tip to help you get your ex back isâ€¦!

5. Don't push her to commit to a relationship right away

As soon as your ex starts showing interest in getting back together, you may be tempted to say something along the lines of, â€œHey, weâ€™re clearly getting along well again, so why waste any more time? Letâ€™s get back together.â€

If she is totally ready for it, she might say yes, but if she's not, she will feel like you're moving too fast and will begin to feel unsure about what she wants.

So, donâ€™t put that kind of pressure on her too early.

Instead, just focus on making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you whenever you and her are interacting.

Let her really want you back, rather than trying to pressure her into making a decision.

That way, when sheâ€™s ready to take you back, it will happen naturally all by itself, without any prompting from you, because she will really want it too.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want Her to Take You Back

If you're at a point where you're wondering things like, “Will she ever take me back?” you might feel like there isn't much of a chance for you and her anymore.

There is.

You really can get her back.

To ensure that you do, I recommend that you avoid making one or more of the following mistakes that other guys make when in your situationâ€¦!

1. Waiting and hoping that she will eventually miss you, or get tired of being with other guys

[image: Waiting for her to eventually get tired of being with other guys]

That's definitely a possibility, but relying on it as your main way to hopefully get her back one day is a bad idea.

In most cases that I've seen, if an ex guy doesn't take action to actively re-attract her and get her back, a woman will just move on with another guy.

This is why I always recommend that a guy quickly improves his ability to attract his ex, interacts with her, attracts her, hooks up with her and gets her back.

That's the most effective, highest success rate approach to getting an ex woman back.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that until it's too late.

For example: Sometimes, a guy will wait around for months, or even years, hoping that his ex will forgive him, realize that she misses him and then come and get him back.

He might say to himself, â€œEven though sheâ€™s not interested in getting back together with me right now, maybe if I wait long enough and show her that I am not moving on, she will see how dedicated I am to her and will want me back,â€œ or â€œWhen she gets hurt by all the bad boys that sheâ€™s dating, she will start seeing that no other guy will ever love her the way I do. She will then contact me and we'll get back together.â€œ

Of course, that can happen in some cases, but after helping men with this area of life for many, many years now, I can tell you that it rarely, if ever, happens.

What works is actively re-attracting your ex and getting her back.

In other words, you need to take control of the process, rather than waiting around and hoping that she comes back on her own one day, or decades from now.

Why?

Well, have you heard the old expression, â€œOut of sight, out of mind?â€œ

In the case of an ex who has disconnected from her feelings for a guy (i.e. she no longer feels attracted and in love with him), the expression rings true.

Instead missing him and hoping to get him back, she simply moves on and falls in love with a guy who makes her feel attracted.

She doesn't go running back to a guy that she's no longer attracted to or in love with.

If he wants her back, he has to do something about it.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€œ

2. Not improving your ability to attract her

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she's no longer attracted to him (e.g. something about his behavior, attitude, actions or way of life turned her off).

So, if he wants to get her back, he has to level up and improve his ability to attract her in new and more interesting ways (e.g. using ballsy humor when talking to her, making her feel girly and feminine in comparison to his masculine approach the conversation or interaction).

Making her feel attracted in new and interesting ways is what creates a spark between you and her.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't prepare themselves correctly and mistakenly talk to their ex woman in a neutral, friendly way and just hope that something happens.

She senses that her ex hasn't changed, doesn't feel a spark and ends the call or catch up to get away from him.

She says something like, â€œLook, I know you mean well, but I need you to understand that itâ€™s over between us. Weâ€™re not going to get back together again and you need to accept that and move on. I wish you all the best.â€œ

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€œ

3. Focusing on her good qualities while focusing on your negative qualities

If you want her back, you have to believe in yourself and know that you are more than worthy of her. Don't doubt it for a second.

Don't waste time focusing on how badly you messed up in the relationship.

Focus on the fact that you are becoming a better man and are a better man now.

You're literally so much of a better catch than you were before.

You have leveled up.

You are worthy of her now.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that and end up focusing on their negative qualities and feeling unworthy of her.

For example: When a guy is sitting at home alone thinking about his ex and missing her, it's easy for him to start imagining her as being a lot more perfect than she really was, while putting all the blame on himself for the mistakes he made in the relationship.

He might think to himself, "I was so lucky to have such an amazing woman like her and then I ruined it all because I'm [all of things he hates about himself now]. It's all my fault that we're broken up. Will she ever be able to take me back? If I was in her position, I wouldn't. She deserves so much better and I wasn't giving her that. She probably knows it. Why would she even think of coming back to me?"

He then feels like his situation is hopeless and totally out of his control, because he doesn't realize that he can actively re-attract her.

Instead, he focuses on how great she was, how lucky he was to have her and how unworthy of her he now is.

As a result, he then hesitates to take action and get her back.

He doesn't feel like anything could work for him.

Yet, here's the thing!

He can take control of the situation by interacting with her and actively re-attracting her.

He can create a spark of attraction inside of her and begin the rapid ex back process that so many other guys go through each day to get their ex woman back.

I Missed a Call From My Ex. Should I Call Her Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes.

It's not needy to pursue your ex in a calm, confident manner.

A real man does what it takes to get her back and women know that.

Before you call her though, make sure that you are fully prepared to re-attract her.

Here are 3 tips to help you attract her on the call:

1. Start the call off with humor and a light hearted attitude

The more relaxed and at ease your ex feels when talking to you, the higher the chances are that she will then open up to the idea of seeing you in person.

This is why it's important to use humor to make her drop her guard when you call her back.

An example of how to do that is by saying (in a joking way), "Hey, I missed a call from you. What the heck do you want?" and then have a laugh with her about that.

I know that it might sound pretty harsh to say that, but you are saying it in a joking way, so it's totally fine and will be funny.

I give an example of how to say it in this video!

By the way!

After saying, "Hey, I missed a call from you. What the heck do you want?" and then having a laugh with her, you can then say, you can then say, "No, just kidding. How are you?" and get the conversation flowing from there.

Starting the call off that way ensures that you and her aren't feeling unnecessarily awkward for talking to each other on the phone.

Instead, you're talking and laughing like you used to when things were good between you and her.

When you have the confidence to be like that, a woman can't stop herself from feeling attracted to you.

Women are automatically attracted to guys who have the balls to be confident and joke around with them, while also being a good guy.

So, don't be afraid to joke around with her in a bit of a ballsy way.

She'll love it.

Then, rather than being on her guard and putting on an act of not wanting to talk to you, she relaxes, opens up and enjoys talking to you again.

Another tip is to

2. Build on her feelings for you while on the phone call

Where many guys go wrong is by getting on a phone call with an ex woman and being on their best behavior (e.g. being polite, nice, sensitive, hesitant, reserved) to hopefully impress her or make her feel pity for him.

For example: A guy might think, â€œThis phone call is my only chance to get her back, so I can't afford to blow it. I'll just be nice and friendly and hope that she doesn't get annoyed and hang up. From there, we can slowly progress to getting back together again.â€

He then calls her and talks to her in a neutral, friendly way, which doesn't make her feel motivated enough to want to see him in person.

He's feeling attracted to her and wants her back, but she's just not feeling it.

Of course, a woman usually won't tell a guy that directly, especially if she wants to keep him around as a friend until she finds a replacement guy.

Another mistake that a guy might make on a phone call with his ex (which doesn't help build her feelings for him), is to get into a serious discussion about the relationship.

For example: He might bring up many of his past mistakes and say things like, â€œI know that by being (e.g. too insecure and needy, controlling, not manly enough, not focused and driven) I turned you off. However, I'm willing to change those things about myself and be the man you really want me to be. You just need to tell me what I should change and I will focus on that. I'm willing to try anything you suggest to make things work between us again. You have my word on that.â€

Essentially, he's hoping she will think something along the lines of, â€œWow! He's being so generous, caring and mature about this. Not only is he admitting where he went wrong, but he's also asking for my help. This is great! I can now guide him and teach him how to be the man that I want. I can be like a mother figure to him.â€

Unfortunately, that's not what happens and it's not what women want.

In reality, the woman just feels even more turned off by him.

Why?

He is reminding her of why she broke up with him, rather than re-attracting her.

He's also expecting her to be his teacher in life and explain how he can re-attract her.

A woman doesn't want that.

So, what is a better way to go about building your ex's feelings on a call?

- Rather than sucking up to her by being extra nice, focus on creating sexual tension by flirting with her.
- Rather than talking a lot about the relationship and how you screwed up, keep things light and focus on making her laugh and smile.
- Rather than asking her what you need to do to get her back, show her (don't tell her) that you've already figured those things out by yourself and have taken steps to change and improve without her help. She will pick up on the changes herself, simply by interacting with you and listening to how you now think, speak, feel and behave.

When you interact with her in ways that make her feel attracted to you, she can relax and enjoy the moment, rather than keeping her guard up and trying to get away from you as quickly as possible.

When she feels attracted, she starts to focus on all the good things about you that she does like, rather than focusing on the negatives about you that lead to the break up.

As a result, the idea of meeting up with you to see where things go starts to feel like a really good idea to her.

Another tip is toâ€¦!

3. Get her to meet up with you

[image: Get your ex to meet up with you in person]

In some cases, talking to your ex over the phone for one or two calls is perfectly fine to begin with.

Having those conversations allows you to build up her feelings for you (i.e. because youâ€™re showing her that youâ€™re now at a different level as a man than when she broke up with you) and it also makes her drop her guard and start feeling comfortable around you again.

However, just talking on the phone for days and weeks definitely isn't the best way to get her back into a relationship with you for real.

To get back into a real relationship, you actually have to meet up with her in person and let her experience the new you.

When she is face-to-face with you and you are sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you (i.e. via your body language, the way youâ€™re talking to her and the way youâ€™re interacting with her and responding to what she says and does), she won't be able to resist feeling drawn to you again.

On the other hand, if all the interactions between you and her are over the phone, she won't be able to completely experience the new and improved you or get to kiss you and have sex with you again.

Additionally, if you just stick to phone calls or texts, it's possible that she may begin to wonder, â€œHow can I be sure that he really has changed? I know that he sounds different over the phone, but he could just be feeling confident because he's hiding behind the safety of a phone. Iâ€™m just not sure if he'd be this confident in person.â€

So, rather than waste weeks or months chatting on the phone, get to a meet up, re-attract her, hook up with her and get her back into a relationship.

Hereâ€™s an example of how you can do itâ€¦!

Imagine that youâ€™re on a call with your ex and youâ€™ve been making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you.

After a few more minutes of light-hearted conversation, you say, â€œHey, itâ€™s fun chatting again. Why don't we get together sometime this week for a quick cup of coffee to say hi in person? It would be nice to see you again.â€

In most cases, if youâ€™ve built up her feelings for you during your interactions on the phone, she will almost certainly say â€œYesâ€ and you can then go ahead and arrange a suitable place and time to meet.

However, if she doesn't agree right away, don't worry about.

Regardless of what she says, don't get upset or say things like, â€œWhy not? Why are you being so stubborn about this? I thought we were getting along with each other again. Please, just meet up with me!â€

Reacting like that will turn her off because women are turned off by emotional weakness in men (i.e. self doubt, insecurity, inability to handle challenging situations).

So, if sheâ€™s playing a little bit hard to get, simply say in a joking way, â€œHey itâ€™s just a coffee. It's not as if we'll be ordering a 3 course meal. It's just a coffee, so you don't have to stick around any longer than 10 or 15 minutes if you don't want to.

At this point she will most likely say Yes, and you can then arrange a meet up that is convenient for you both.

Just remember: When you meet up with her for coffee, you've got to continue saying and doing the types of things that will turn her feelings back on for you (e.g. being confident and self assured, make her laugh and smile, make her feel like a feminine, sexy woman in your presence), rather than coming across as unsure of yourself.

If you approach it correctly, she will automatically begin to feel attracted to you and the idea of giving the relationship another chance will seem like the right thing to do for her.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Missed a Call From Your Ex

Missing a call from your ex is not the end of the world.

In fact, in some instances it's actually a good thing, because it shows her that you're not desperately hanging on to your phone every second of the day and waiting for her to call you.

So, if you missed a call from your ex, don't worry everything is fine.

All you need to do now is call her back and trigger her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Of course, not all guys know that, so they end up making one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Hoping that not calling back will make her want him even more

Sometimes that can work, but many times it backfires.

Why?

The woman feels as though he is sending her a message by not calling back (i.e. he isn't interested).

She worries that if she keeps pursuing him, he might text her or call her to say, "I just want to tell you that I've moved on with a new girl and I'm happy now. She doesn't want you calling me anymore. Please respect that. Thank you."

The woman then feels like she has been rejected and left behind by her ex.

So, rather than running that risk, she calls once and if her ex doesn't call back, she tries to move on without him (i.e. dates and has sex with new guys).

Of course, not all guys realize that and instead, many guys hope that by not returning her call, she will begin to miss him like crazy and keep calling until he gives her another chance.

Yet, she doesn't call back.

When he eventually builds up the courage to call her, she then says, Sorry. I called you and you didn't call me back. I gave you a chance, but you obviously weren't interested. It's too late now. I'm with someone else and I'm happy, so please respect that now and leave me alone.

Don't let that happen to you.

You've got nothing to lose by calling your ex back and everything to gain.

So, just call her and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid making is to

2. Texting her back because it feels safer

Texting is a lot easier in some cases, but it's not as effective as getting on a call, attracting her and then getting her to meet up with you.

You've got to be a man about it and just call her.

Another mistake to avoid making is to

3. Calling once and then never calling back again if she doesn't answer the first time

Sometimes, a woman will ignore you when you call her back just to see how you will react if she doesn't answer.

For example:

- Will you get desperate and start calling her repeatedly?
- Will you start texting her in an insecure way and asking why she isn't answering?
- Will you give up at the first sign of difficulty?
- Will you start bombarding her with flowers, gifts and attention as a way of getting her back?
- Will you lose confidence in yourself and in your value to her?
- Will you be a man about it and just call her again another time (e.g. the next day or a few days later)?

Depending on your reaction, she will get some insight on whether or not you've changed and improved and become a better man since the break up.

Of course, in some cases, a woman might have just been in the shower, eating dinner or busy doing something and wasn't able to get to the call.

By not calling her back, you're blowing your chances of getting back together again.

So, if you want your ex back for real, don't give up at the first sign of difficulty.

If she doesn't answer her phone when you call her back the first time, just call again another time.

As long as you don't become desperate and start calling her every hour or texting her like crazy and trying to reach her, then chances are high that she will answer your call sooner rather than later.

After all, she's the one who called you first, so that usually means she does want to talk to you.

When you get her on the phone, just focus on sparking her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel feminine and girly) and get her to a meet up.

I Think My Ex Wants Me Back, But She Has a Boyfriend

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 tips to get your ex back, even though she now has a boyfriend:

1. Prepare ready to make the new guy appear less attractive compared to you

[image: Prepare to make the new guy seem less attractive compared to you]

If you can make her feel more attracted to you than the new guy, she will consider breaking up with him and getting back with you.

For example:

- He is too nice and allows her to get away with bad behavior (e.g. breaking her promises to him, throwing tantrums, being disrespectful towards him), whereas you are a more confident and ballsy man who she can naturally respect and look up to.
- He has become too emotionally dependent on her and doesn't focus on his own goals, dreams and interests in life anymore (i.e. he's become too clingy and needy), whereas you are a man who is following through on his biggest dreams, goals and ambitions in life.
- He displays unmanly behavior too often (e.g. he cries to her when things get tough or he's faced with a challenging situation), whereas you are an emotionally strong man.
- He has turned the relationship into a friendship and she has stopped feeling like an attractive, desirable woman around him, whereas with you, she feels the spark and wants to hook up with you again.
- He has become insecure in the relationship with her, because he lacks confidence in himself and his value to her, whereas you believe in yourself and your value to her.

If your ex notices that, she will begin to lose so much respect and attraction for him that it won't make sense to stay with him anymore.

Of course, many guys in your position are worried that they can't make their ex woman feel attracted anymore, because she seems happy with the new guy.

Here's the thing though:

When a woman hooks up with a new man, he will usually be very different to her ex, because she will be looking for someone who can fill in the gaps that were missing in her previous relationship.

So, she will seem excited, happy and relieved to have a man like him.

For example: If her ex was too nice, she will likely look for a bad boy who is more emotionally dominant than her and doesn't put up with her bad behavior.

If her ex treated her more like a friend, her new relationship will usually be based on animal attraction and lots of sex (i.e. so she can feel like a desirable, sexy woman again).

If her ex was too wimpy or weak-minded, her new man will probably be more assertive and strong-willed.

So, it will often seem like she is super happy with the new guy.

Yet, don't judge a book by its cover.

Understand that a woman can easily put on an act of seeming happy to impress her friends, family or coworkers, or to hopefully make her ex jealous.

What you need to understand is that even if she is fairly happy with him right now, it doesn't necessarily mean that he's perfect for her and doesn't actually turn her off in subtle or obvious ways.

For example: Her new boyfriend might be more assertive than you used to be, but he takes her for granted and doesn't treat her with the respect she feels she deserves.

He might make her feel like a sexy woman, but he doesn't value her ideas or opinions, so she begins to feel like it's a relationship with an expiry date that will be over when they get bored of each other sexually.

He may be more emotionally dominant than her, but he's too irresponsible and doesn't have direction and focus in his life, so she ends up feeling like more of a mother figure for him.

There are many ways that he could be turning her off.

So, don't lose hope.

Believe in yourself and get her back.

Before you do though!

Make sure that you improve on the things about yourself that turned her off before (e.g. become more emotionally independent, build up your confidence and start believing in your value to her, stand up to her in a lovingly dominant way when she is being disrespectful or childish), so she has a reason to leave him and get back with you.

When you interact with her and she discovers that not only have you changed and improved the things that caused her to lose respect and attraction for you, but you're also a better man in areas that her new boyfriend is lacking, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

She'll go from seeing him in a positive light, to thinking things like, "Hmmm! I'm no longer sure if my new boyfriend is the right guy for me. Maybe I did make a mistake by breaking up with my ex. I don't know why, but my new guy suddenly seems so much less attractive to me than my ex. I feel so confused. Why do I want to see my ex all of a sudden?"

She then becomes open to you and you can guide her back into a relationship.

Another tip is to!

2. Make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction on a phone call

One of the best ways to get the ball rolling with your ex is by calling her on the phone and making her feel sparks of sexual attraction for the new and improved you.

Texting is okay, but you shouldn't use it as your main approach to getting her back.

Watch this!

You've got to get to the point where you and her are talking on the phone or in person, so you can really make her feel a lot of attraction for you.

Don't worry about her new guy.

He is with your girl.

Take her back.

Don't waste anymore time sitting around thinking things like, â€œI think my ex wants me back but she has a boyfriend, so I can't make a move on her. If I do try to make a move, she might get angry with me and cut off all communication and then I'll never be able to get her back. So, it's probably better if I just remain in the background and hopefully she will eventually realize that I'm the guy she loves. She will then give me a clear sign that she wants me back and I'll make a move.â€

You can do that if you want, but after helping guys with this area of life for many years now, I can tell you that it's not the best idea to just sit back and wait.

What often happens to guys who sit back and wait is that the girl breaks up with her new guy and gets into a relationship with another guy.

She is never really available to get back with her ex, who is just waiting in the background.

Alternatively, rather than getting into another relationship after the first one ends, she goes out to party, hook up with new guys and enjoy the single life.

After a while, her ex becomes a distant memory and she doesn't really feel the need to go back to him.

Of course, he can still get her back at that point, but why wait that long if he wants her back right away?

If you want your ex back now or very soon, then get the job done.

How?

Interact with her and make her feel attracted to the new and improved you on a phone call, or in person.

Mess with her feelings for the new guy, so she is feeling more attracted to you and wanting to see you again.

When you approach it that way, you can get her back right away or very quickly and then decide if you want to keep her after enjoying a new relationship with her for a while.

On the other hand, if you wait, you stand the risk of losing her forever (e.g. she decides to get married to her new boyfriend, becomes pregnant to him, or meets another guy and gets really serious with him).

So, give her a call.

When talking to her on the phone (or in person by the way), don't waste time pretending you just want to be her innocent, non-sexual friend.

You've got to actively create a sexual vibe between you and her, not a friendly, neutral vibe.

How can you do that?

By flirting with her.

Flirt (verb): Behave as though attracted to or trying to attract someone, but for amusement rather than with serious intentions.

For example: She arrives at the catch up and is looking sex.

What do you say?

Do you tell her that she looks "nice"?

Heck no.

You flirt with her by telling her that she looks, “sexy.”

Say something like, “Wow, look at you. Someone is looking sexy today. How am I going to be able to concentrate on what we’re talking about when you’re looking this sexy?” and then have a laugh with her.

Another example is if she asks, “So, are you seeing anyone at the moment?” and you answer with something like, “Of course I am. She’s sitting at that table over there, keeping an eye on you.”

When she then looks at the table, you can say, “Just kidding. I wouldn’t allow her do that...but, anyway, yes, I am seeing someone.”

How is that flirting?

Flirting is where you are trying to attract someone, but not with serious intentions.

You’re just messing around.

You have just attracted your ex by displaying confidence and humor, both of which are highly attractive to women.

So, you are attracting her just for fun.

You’re being playful in how you approach the interaction, rather than taking it all so seriously.

By the way!

Not only is flirting fun for both men and women (it’s not fun for men who don’t know how to do it. They hate it and see it as unnecessary because they don’t know how powerful it is), but it’s also one of the quickest ways to break down the walls of anger and mistrust between you and your ex.

Flirting with her also allows her to feel attracted, without worrying that it means she’s doing anything wrong (e.g. cheating on her boyfriend).

Remember: Flirting can be played with for amusement, rather than serious intentions.

What’s interesting though is that when your ex is feeling attracted due to the flirting, she then starts to have doubts about her feelings for her new boyfriend.

She starts to wonder, “Why am I feeling this way about my ex? I thought I was over him, but now I’m not so sure anymore. What about my new boyfriend? I’m not sure how I feel about him right now. Maybe I should just go with how I feel. I want to hug my ex! I want to kiss him.”

That’s what you want her thinking and feeling.

So, don’t be afraid to flirt with her and make her feel romantically and sexually attracted to you again.

Don’t make the mistake of just acting like a nice, neutral, polite friend to her.

Attract her.

Another tip is to

3. Hook up with her sexually, or at least get to a kiss

[image: Hook up with your ex sexually, or at least get to a kiss]

Imagine that meet up with your ex to have a quick coffee and say hello in person.

You reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, flirting with her, making her feel like a feminine woman around you), so she naturally begins to view you in a more positive light.

She may even begin to think things like, “He’s so different now. I really like the new him. It’s so much fun to be around him now. If I wasn’t seeing another guy right now, I would definitely consider getting back together again for real. Maybe I should just kiss him to see how I feel.”

Even though she might be feeling that way, if she’s like most women, she won’t necessarily make the first move to make the kiss happen.

So, if you get a sense that she’s feeling very attracted to you (e.g. she keeps touching you on the hand or leg, she keeps licking her lips while looking at you, she touches you often), go ahead and try to hook up with her sexually.

Don’t say something like, “Let’s go to my place” if you think she will freak out and worry that it would mean she is cheating on the new guy.

Instead, build up the desire by first getting a hug.

Once you’ve done that, get to another hug and follow through with a kiss.

Then, depending on how she responds, go to your place or her place to hook up sexually.

By the way!

If she doesn’t want to hook up with you sexually, don’t worry or stress out about it.

Just make sure that you continue to use every interaction you have with her from now on (e.g. via text or e-mail, on social media, and especially over the phone and in person) to build on her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

The more you do that, the more doubts she will have about her new relationship and the more drawn to you she will become.

You can then hook up with her the next time you catch up with her.

However, don’t chicken out during the first catch up if she is giving you signals.

Be a man about it and reclaim your woman.

Where Guys Go Wrong. 4 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want Your Ex Back

If you think your ex wants you back (even though she has a boyfriend), then you should be able to get her back quite easily and quickly.

To ensure that happens, avoid making one or more of the following mistakes!

1. Waiting and hoping that she will eventually break up with him one day

A guy will sometimes wait for months and possibly even years for his ex’s relationship to end, so he can hopefully get another chance with her.

During that time, he won’t really be interested in other women because he doesn’t want to get caught up in a relationship and miss out on getting his ex back.

So, he will try to distract himself with hobbies, work and other interests to kill time and be available for his ex, should she become single again.

Yet, while he is doing that, he is slowly losing confidence in himself and his ability to attract other women.

After many months, he may start thinking things like, â€œWell, I guess she didnâ€™t want me back after all. She might have realized that her new boyfriend was a much better catch than me. Iâ€™m such a loser. Iâ€™m never going to find a quality woman like her again. I just want her back. I donâ€™t want any other woman. Maybe I should call her to see if sheâ€™s still open to me. Maybe itâ€™s not too late.â€

Then, when he interacts with her (i.e. calls her out of the blue after months and months of silence), he just doesnâ€™t have that edge or special something anymore (e.g. high level of confidence, the balls to joke around with her in a manly way and make her feel girly and feminine) to properly re-attract her.

As a result, she doesnâ€™t feel enough attraction and respect for him and she places him in the friend zone.

Alternatively, she says that itâ€™s been nice to hear from him, but she is happy now and doesnâ€™t see him and her ever getting back together.

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

Your best chance of getting your ex back is to take action now, rather than sitting around and waiting for something to hopefully happen.

What should you do if you take action now?

Actively reawaken her feelings of respect, attraction, and love for you when you interact with her via text, e-mail, on social media, on a phone call and in person.

The more present and active you are in her life in an attractive way (not just as a friend, or in an unattractive way), the more confused she will become about her new relationship and the faster you and her can get back together.

On the other hand, if you ignore her, thereâ€™s nothing to stop her from falling deeply in love with her new boyfriend and getting engaged, married or having a baby with him.

Is that what you want?

If you are cool with that, then you should focus on getting a new woman.

If you donâ€™t want that to happen to her and you want her back, then you should focus on getting her back asap.

Get the job done, get her back, enjoy a new relationship with her and then decide what you want to do from there.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

2. Being too neutral via text

Some guys mistakenly hope that by staying on a womanâ€™s mind as a friend, she will eventually come back to him.

For example: He might send her regular texts like, â€œHey, how was your day?â€ or â€œHope you had a nice weekend,â€ or â€œOn my way to work and I just wanted to say hello. Have a great day!â€

What he doesn't realize is that just because she hasn't blocked him and seems to be receiving his texts (or is sometimes replying to them), it doesn't mean that she's feeling anything more than friendly, neutral feelings.

In reality, she might actually be feeling sorry for him for not being able to move on, laughing at his texts and showing them to her boyfriend or girlfriends, or just rolling her eyes and ignoring him as much as possible.

She might reply with a, "Good thanks", or a, "You too!" but that doesn't mean she is actually feel attracted to him and missing him.

She might just be willing to be nice to him because she's a good woman, or because she fears that he might become angry and seek to hurt her or the new guy.

So, make sure that when you text your ex, you flirt with her and make her feel attracted, rather than sending her neutral texts and hoping things will somehow change.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Hesitating to push for a meet up

Sometimes a guy will get to the point where he's just too afraid to push for a meet up with his ex, in case she says No, or stops talking to him completely.

He might also be worried that the new guy will get angry, or demand that she stop talking to him.

Not knowing how else to approach the situation, he then spend weeks or even months texting back and forth with his ex, in the hopes that one day she will say, Hey, let's meet up! I want to see you in person.

Yet, rather than saying that, she either stops replying, blocks him or eventually asks him to stop.

Here's the thing

In most cases, if a woman is already in a new relationship, she is usually going to stick with it unless her ex can make her feel enough attraction to justify leaving the new guy and coming back to him.

To make her feel enough attraction, you have to get past just text or phone interactions.

You've got to meet up with her in person, so she can feel attracted to your body language, vibe, attitude and how you now react and respond to her.

In other words, feel attracted to the new and improved version of you.

So, don't be afraid to push for an in person meet up.

Make it happen.

Another mistake to avoid is

4. Over analyzing her signs of interest

Sometimes a guy might hang on to his ex's every word and gesture in an attempt to understand her feelings for him.

For example: If she says, We used to have fun. I miss those days, he may then wonder, Does that mean she wants me back? Does it mean she's unhappy with her new boyfriend?

He then drives himself crazy trying to determine where he stands with her.

Yet, here's the thing!

Maybe your ex wants you back and maybe she doesn't.

The truth is, it doesn't matter what she is currently thinking because her thinking can be changed when you interact with her and re-attract her.

So don't waste any more time over-analyzing what she has been saying and doing.

Instead, focus instead on actively making her feel respect and attraction for you again.

That's what really matters.

If you're not doing anything to actively get her back and are simply hoping that she gives you a clear sign, you may be waiting for a long time and possibly forever.

However, if you meet up with her and fully reawaken her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you again, you will almost certainly get what you want.

She will dump her boyfriend and be your girl once again.

Psychology of No Contact On Dumper

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible psychological reactions a woman might have to No Contact from you after a break up, are:

1. She doesn't care because she's not even attracted to you anyway

[image: She doesn't care because she's not attracted to her ex anymore]

It would really be nice if all a guy had to do to get his girl back after a break up is ignore her for 30 or 60 days.

She would then realize how much she misses him and she would come running back, desperately begging him to give her another chance.

However, although that scenario might work well in a Hollywood movie, in real life it almost never turns out that way.

Why?

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she has usually disconnected from her feelings of respect and attraction for him.

So, when she then doesn't hear from him for a month or more, rather than think, â€œOh no! Why isn't he calling me? Could this mean he's over me? Is it possible he's met another woman already? I can't bear the thought of losing him! This time apart has convinced me that he's truly the man I want to be with. I better call him right away before I lose him forever,â€ she'll usually feel relieved instead that the break up turned out to be so easy.

Using reverse psychology on a woman (i.e. No Contact) when she's not even attracted to you anymore, almost always backfires.

Why?

Sexual and romantic attraction is what makes a woman want to be together and stay together.

Hang on|what about love?

Romantic love only exists on top of sexual and romantic attraction.

If a woman isn't sexually and romantically attracted to a guy, she isn't going to be in love with him.

You have to understand that attraction comes first and everything else flows on after that.

So, rather than no contact make an ex (who isn't attracted to you) miss you like crazy, it simply gives her the time she needs to fully get over you and move on.

Of course, this doesn't mean you shouldn't give your ex any space whatsoever.

No.

Instead, just make sure that you re-spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you first and then give her a little bit of space (3 to 7 days) to miss you.

Then, arrange to meet up with her in person, fully re-attract her in person and get her back.

That's the best way to approach it.

On the other hand, if you ignore her before you reactivate her feelings for you, she's just not going to care that you're no longer contacting her.

Instead, you stand the risk of losing her to another guy who is actively making her feel attracted by flirting with her, hitting on her or hooking up with her sexually.

Another possible psychological reaction your ex might have to No Contact isâ□|

2. She feels sad and rejected that you're not contacting her and trying to get her back

[image: She feels sad and rejected that you're not trying to get her back]

Imagine that a woman is sitting at home alone after a break up, thinking about her ex and missing him.

She is feels like she made the right decision, but can't help but wonder whether or not she might change how she feels and give him another chance.

So, she remains open to the idea of getting back with him if he interacts with her, creates a spark and makes her want him again.

Yet, rather than doing that, he instead decides to use the No Contact Rule and ends up totally ignoring her for 30 to 60 days.

As a result, she feels sad and rejected.

She begins to wonder, *â□□ Why is he ignoring me like this? I canâ□□t believe he hasnâ□□t even sent me one text, or made one call to see how Iâ□□m coping? Did our love mean nothing to him? How can he be over me so quickly? Obviously I mean nothing to him after all! Iâ□□ve been such an idiot, sitting here hoping that he would actually do something to get me back. Clearly Iâ□□ve just been wasting my time pining for a guy who is just a cold, hurtful jerk! Well, thatâ□□s over now. Iâ□□ve seen his true character and Iâ□□m not going to waste another second thinking about him or waiting for him. From this moment onwards Iâ□□m going to focus on moving on with my life and finding myself a real man who will love me and treat me the way I deserve!*â□□

She then puts all her effort into completely switching off her feelings for him and moving on (i.e. she goes out with her single girlfriends and finds a guy to hook up with, gets on online dating or uses a dating app to line up a bunch of dates and have with one or two guys to get over her ex).

Meanwhile, her ex is sitting around missing her and hoping that by cutting off contact, she will do all the work by coming running back to him and asking for another chance.

This is one of the biggest 'ex back myths' out there and it causes so many guys to completely mess up their chances of getting their ex woman back.

Watch thisâ□|

So, if you want your ex back for real, forget the mind games (i.e. No Contact) and focus on re-attracting her now, so she has a reason to get back with you now.

Another possible psychological reaction a woman might have to No Contact from you isâ□|

3. She knows what you're trying to do and isn't impressed

With the internet available to almost everyone these days via smartphones, all a woman has to do is search online and she will see that pretty much everyone says not to contact your ex after a break up to get her back.

The old No Contact Rule, which used to be seen as the best idea on how to get an ex back.

BTW: It works great for women who want to get a man back, but it doesn't work the same way for men who want to get a woman back.

When a man uses the NC rule on a woman who isn't attracted to him anymore, she usually just moves on.

This is especially true if she has the brains to check out online posts or videos about how guys try to get an ex girl back.

If she notices that it's pretty much all about cutting off contact, then she might decide to make herself feel better by hooking up with a new guy and moving on, rather than sitting around and potentially missing her ex.

So, when you completely stop contacting her and don't even send her the occasional text to say "Hi," or to check how she's doing, she might assume that you're using the No Contact Rule on her to hopefully make her miss you and come running back.

She will then naturally feel as though she can no longer trust you, because you've been trying to manipulate her in that way.

She might then seek revenge on you by continually ignoring your attempts to contact her, or continually rejecting you whenever you try to request a meet up or even just a phone call.

By the way!

Even if a guy isn't using the No Contact Rule and is simply feeling too nervous and insecure about contacting her, the longer he waits to contact her (i.e. more than 7 days), the more likely she will assume he's playing mind games with her.

Then when he does finally pluck up the courage to text or call her, she might make it really difficult for him to get her back (e.g. by ignoring his texts or calls, being bitchy to him over the phone, refusing to meet up with him).

This is why it's usually better to focus on getting an ex back right away (i.e. within a week or so), rather than ignoring her for weeks or months and risk causing her to want to seek revenge by playing hard to get, or by hooking up with new guys to make you jealous or hurt.

Another possible psychological reaction a woman might have to the No Contact Rule is!

4. She seeks to get revenge on you for not contacting her by hooking up with a new guy

[image: She seeks revenge by hooking up with a new guy]

If a guy ignores his ex for too long (30 to 60 days) she may start thinking things like, "He's ignoring me now? Oh, really? After everything he put me through, he doesn't even have the decency to call and see how I'm doing. What a jerk! Well, if that's the way he wants to be, that's fine by me. I'm not going to waste another minute worrying about whether I was too hard on him or if I made a mistake by breaking up with him. Any chance he might have had with me is gone now. In fact, his silence has just made it that much easier for me to fully get over him and move on! starting right now!"

She then goes out of her way to find a replacement guy (e.g. by going out to bars, clubs or parties that she was previously avoiding, taking up a new hobby that attracts mostly guys, getting on Tinder or online dating, opening up to a guy who has a crush on her at work or at university, hooking up with one of her ex's male friends who she always secretly liked).

Then, when her ex finally contacts her after a few weeks or months to get her back, she simply says something along the lines of, â€œSorry, but youâ€™re too late. You had a window of opportunity to get me back, but you wasted that time ignoring me. Now itâ€™s too late. Iâ€™ve met someone else and Iâ€™m happy. Goodbye and good luck.â€

Read This First Before You Use the No Contact Rule

[image: No contact rule mistakes]

In life, smart people learn from their mistakes.

However, the smartest of all people learn from their mistakes and the mistakes of others, so they can improve and succeed twice as fast.

So, before you decide whether or not to use the No Contact Rule on your ex woman, take a moment to understand where other guys mess up when using it.

4 common mistakes that guys make when using the No Contact Rule, areâ€

1. Not understanding that most women don't desperately chase their ex guy back after dumping him just because he isn't contacting her

To begin with, when a woman breaks up with a guy, itâ€™s usually because she has lost respect and attraction for him over time.

Essentially, she's had enough, wants out of the relationship and has every intention on moving on and finding a new guy.

She doesn't care if her ex contacts her or not.

She is planning to move on without him.

So, here's what you need to understandâ€

Unless a woman is still secretly in love with her ex and is hoping that they will eventually get back together again, she's almost certainly not going to care if he doesn't contact her and try to get her back.

Additionally, if she is able to find a replacement guy (or guys) quite easily, then she isn't going to care if her ex (that she is no longer attracted to anyway) isn't contacting her.

She's just going to get on with enjoying sex, love and good times with new guys, rather than pining for her ex that she is no longer attracted to.

Of course, she may wonder something like, â€œHmmmâ€, *he's not contacting me. I really thought heâ€™d be calling me or at least texting me by now. I wonder why heâ€™s being so silent all of a sudden?*â€ but if she believes that he can't change and become the kind of man she needs him to be (e.g. more emotionally independent, confident, assertive, not easily swayed by others), sheâ€™s just going to continue moving on.

So, what should you do instead?

Focus on actively re-sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you during interactions (e.g. via text, social media and over the phone).

Then, meet up with her and actively guide her back into a relationship with you, before it's too late.

The next No Contact Rule mistake to avoid making is

2. Hoping that no contact will make her forget why she broke up with him

Time apart can help ease the pain of a break up and make a guy's mistakes seem less terrible than they were before.

However, in a lot of cases, the longer a guy ignores his ex, the more she starts to resent him.

She begins thinking things like, "Why is he ignoring me like this? Is he trying to make me chase him? Is he trying to act like he doesn't care, when I know he does? This is just another thing to add to my list of reasons for breaking up with him. Not only did he (runs through a list of mistakes that he made during and directly after the break up), but now he's also being childish and immature and trying to play mind games with me. Well, I'm glad I dumped him. He's clearly not the guy for me. I'm going to get myself a real man who can handle a woman like me."

She then closes herself off to her ex and opens herself up to new guys.

By the time her gets around to contacting her 30 or 60 days later her, she's built up so much negative emotion towards him (e.g. anger, annoyance, contempt), that she doesn't feel bad about hurting him emotionally by saying, "Why are you contacting me? I want nothing to do with you" or, "Why are you calling me? Haven't you moved on already? I have a new boyfriend now and I'm happy. Please respect that and leave me alone."

The next mistake to avoid making is

3. Ignoring any attempts she makes to reach out to him

Sometimes, after a few weeks of not hearing from her ex, a woman might contact him to see what's happened to him (e.g. because she's curious, she still cares about him and wants to make sure he's okay, she wants to be friends with him now, she wants to find out if he still misses her so she can feel good about herself).

Yet, when a guy is serious about 'going No Contact,' he will often make the mistake of ignoring any attempts from her to communicate with him.

For example: A guy might think, "Wow! She contacted me! The No Contact Rule worked! She missed me and now she's the one chasing me to get me back. This is fantastic! The best thing to do now is for me not to blow it by coming across as being too eager to get back together. So, I'll be unavailable to her and ignore her for a little while longer. That way, she will really, really want me and eventually, when I feel the time is right, I will contact her. By that stage she will be so desperate to get me back, that she will be the one begging me to take her back. Haha! Yayy! The No Contact Rule is the best!"

Yet, in almost all cases, this plan of attack backfires.

Why?

If a woman makes the move to reach out to her ex and he ignores her, she will usually worry that if she keeps contacting him, he will gain the position of power in the relationship.

So, she will decide to stop contacting him, hook up with other guys to make herself feel better and eventually get revenge on her ex by allowing him to find out about it (e.g. via social media, through friends).

When her ex finds out, all of his grand plans with the No Contact Rule come crashing down as he realizes that he pushed it way too far.

So, if you want your ex back and she reaches out to you, don't make the mistake of ignoring her attempts to communicate with you in the hope that it will make her miss you and want you more.

In some cases it will work that way, but in most cases, the woman doesn't feel enough attraction for her ex to continue pursuing, or she seeks to make herself feel better by hooking up with new guys.

The next mistake to avoid making is

4. Not improving his ability to re-attract her when he next interacts with her

Some guys assume that all they really need to do is cut off contact and wait.

That's it.

No, no, no.

That's not it.

You have to improve your ability to attract her, so when you interact with her, you are able to talk to her in a way that creates sparks of sexual and romantic attraction.

That is what counts.

Of course, a guy often doesn't realize that, so he just cuts off contact and hopes that it works to make his ex woman miss him like crazy and want him back.

Then, when he finally contacts his ex after 30 or 60 days and she sees that he's still stuck at the same level he was at when she broke up with him (e.g. he's still insecure and needy, he still can't make her feel attracted), she realizes that if she got back into a relationship with him, it would be the same as before.

So, she just isn't interested.

If he then attempts to get her back, she pushes him away and says something like, "I've had time to think about us these last few weeks/months apart and I'm now more convinced than ever that we're all wrong for each other. Sorry, but it's over between us. Please accept that and move on."

Remember: If you want your ex back, use the time that you're not contacting her to improve your ability to attract her (i.e. by changing and improving on the things that caused her to break up with you in the first place).

If you ignore her for 30 or so days and then attempt to get her back without first giving her what she wants from you (i.e. a new and improved attraction experience), she will simply push you away.

On the other hand, if you fix your weaknesses, add to your strengths (e.g. become more confident, self-assured, assertive, charismatic, interesting, funny, charming) and then contact her, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, her guard comes down and getting her back becomes easy, because she will want it too.

In conclusion:

Understand that each woman responds differently to No Contact.

If your ex currently doesn't feel much or any attraction for you, she is almost certainly not going to care if you don't contact her anymore.

The best way to get her back is to actively make her feel attracted to you during interactions, so she then has a reason to get back with you now.

If you don't use that approach, you run the risk of her moving on without you and being happy that she did.

How to Seduce Your Ex Girlfriend

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How can you seduce your ex girlfriend back into a relationship with you?

The first thing to understand is that seduction is about sexual attraction and arousal.

To seduce a woman, you must be displaying attractive traits and behaviors such as confidence, emotional masculinity, charisma and humor.

You must also be building up sexual tension to make her really want you in a sexual way.

So, in this video, I'm going to explain where guys go wrong when they're trying to seduce their ex woman into a relationship and I'm also going to explain what you should do instead.

I'll also be providing some examples on how you can make your woman feel sexually attracted to you. So, let's begin.

Where guys go wrong...

1. Trying to seduce only via text

[image: Trying to seduce only via text]

Texting is a very big and important part of modern life for many people.

However, when it comes to getting an ex woman back who doesn't feel attracted to you anymore, texting really isn't the best idea.

It's way too easy to come across as appearing desperate or insecure via text.

For example, if your ex doesn't feel sexually attracted to you and she has lost a lot of respect for you, how do you think she'll be reading your text messages?

Do you think she'll be reading your text messages and feeling like she felt when you were first dating, where she had a crush on you and she was falling in love with you?

Alternatively, do you think that she might be reading your texts in a bit of a negative light?

She might be thinking about how you behaved leading up to the breakup and potentially after the breakup and how that turned her off.

You can use text to make your ex feel some attraction for you, but don't rely on it as your number one way of trying to seduce your ex girlfriend back into a relationship with you.

When a guy focuses too much on using text to get his ex woman back, what often happens is that she begins to play hard to get.

She doesn't want to look too easy via text.

She feels like she's making it too easy for him, she's seeming too keen.

So, she stops replying in a friendly way, she stops being as open, she stops laughing at some of his jokes and she may even stop replying to some of these texts.

If a guy then reacts in an unattractive way, it will turn her off even more.

For example, if he starts texting her and asking, "What's wrong? Is it something I said? Why aren't you replying to me?" or something along those lines, she then feels turned off by him.

Why?

Women are not attracted to desperation in men.

Women are attracted to confidence in men.

Women are attracted to self-esteem and self-belief.

So, when a guy is doubting himself and worrying that he's losing her because she's not replying in a nice way or she's not replying much at all, then she actually feels turned off by him.

Of course, not all guys end up being insecure or needy via text.

Many guys make the mistake of simply texting their ex woman in a neutral or friendly way. It gets boring very quickly.

Here are some examples...

The first example is where a woman texts her ex guy and says, "Hey, I just wanted to let you know that I got the job I applied for. Yippee!"

A man might then reply in a neutral way, just like a friend and say, "Oh, wow. Congrats. I'm so happy for you."

Now, there's nothing wrong with him saying something like that.

The only problem is that it's not actively making her feel sexually attracted to him.

It's not making her feel aroused.

He's simply being nice to her and behaving more like a friend.

If you want to seduce your ex woman, you have to say something that will create a spark inside of her.

As you may know, women are attracted to guys who can make them laugh.

This is why adding in some humor to your texts will always help to create some sparks between you and your ex.

So, rather than just being neutral and saying, "Oh, wow. Congrats. I'm so happy for you," he can reply with something like, "Cool. With all the extra money you'll be earning, you can take me out to an expensive dinner and wine and dine me :P"

She's most likely going to reply with a "Haha" or an "LOL."

She will then start to feel differently about her ex.

He makes her laugh and he makes her feel good.

She feels like she wants to keep talking to him and she's starting to feel like she wants to be around him in person.

As a result, he is beginning to seduce her.

By the way, some guys might be worried about sending their ex woman a text like that.

Some guys might think it's rude to say something like that to her.

However, guys who understand how to attract women know that that kind of text will work.

Why?

Women feel naturally attracted to guys who are confident and not afraid of them.

The guy is still being a good guy to her because he's only joking.

He's not being an asshole and saying, "Hey, buy me things, girl. Take me out to dinner and wine and dine me. I deserve it. I'm a good man."

He's not saying things like that.

He's joking around with her.

He isn't worried that he's going to say or do the wrong thing.

He's a confident guy who has the courage to joke around with her, rather than being on his best behavior all the time.

Here's another example...

A woman texts her ex guy and asks, "How are you?"

He then replies, "Good. How are you?"

She then replies, "Yeah, good," and he replies with, "Cool. So, what's news?"

Now, there's nothing wrong with texting like that, but once again, it doesn't create a spark of sexual attraction.

It doesn't arouse the woman.

If you want to seduce your ex woman, you have to say something that is going to create a spark.

So, say, for example, an ex woman sent a text to her guy asking, "How are you?"

Now, the ex guy knew that her favorite food was fish and chips.

So, he decided to mess with her a little bit, get her laughing and make her feel attracted.

She texts him, "How are you?" He replies, "Ummm...can't tell you."

She then might reply with something like, "Why?" and then says, "I don't want to hurt your feelings."

At that point, his ex woman might be silently panicking and imagining him with a new woman and beginning to feel like he has moved on before her.

Alternatively, she might reply with something like, "What? Tell me."

He can then reply with, "I'm eating fish and chips. It's so damn delicious. Haha :P"

She is most likely going to reply with a "Haha" or an "LOL."

As a result of his confident and humorous approach to her, she is going to feel a spark with him.

She's going to start to feel attracted.

The attraction that she is feeling is going to start to make her think of him in a more positive light.

She's going to start to miss him and want to see him in person.

As a result, he's beginning the process of seducing her back into a relationship.

2. Not being assertive enough with their seduction attempts

So, let me give you some examples here of how you can re-attract your ex woman and where other guys go wrong.

Sometimes, when a guy meets up with his ex woman, they meet each other and then she gives him a side hug like that.

She doesn't actually give him a full hug.

He then accepts that and just gets on with the interaction.

He missed an opportunity there to make her feel attracted by pointing out that she gave him a side hug.

A guy who knows how to make a woman feel attracted in a situation like that will be assertive and he will make her feel attracted.

He won't just accept her lead.

He won't follow her lead in the dynamic.

She gave him a side hug, "Oh, I've got to accept that. Now, I've just got to sit down and be a good boy."

No.

Be a man about it, be more assertive.

You meet up with her, she gives you a side hug and you go, "Oh, I get the side hug now, do I? Come here. Give me a proper hug. Come here," and bring her in for a proper hug.

You take control of the situation.

What does that do to her?

It makes her feel attracted to you.

It makes her feel some respect for you.

You're being confident and manly, but you're also being a good guy.

You're not being a whiny, asshole-type of guy.

You're not sulking.

You're not saying, "Huh? Why did you do that? We went to hug and you just gave me a side hug. That's not fair. Give me a proper hug. Come on." in a sulky manner.

You're not being that sort of guy.

You're being a confident, masculine guy.

You're saying, "Come on, what's that? A side hug? Come here, give me a proper hug."

You are then in control of the situation.

She then feels feminine in comparison to your masculinity. You are the man. She is the woman.

The masculine and feminine dynamic is one of the most important parts of making a woman feel sexually attracted to you.

If you don't have the balls to be masculine around your ex woman, then you're not going to be making her feel sexually attracted to you.

So, make sure that you don't make the mistake that other guys make where they're not assertive enough with their attempts to seduce their ex woman back into a relationship.

Another example is where a guy is in the friend zone with his ex woman.

She contacts him often, she calls him up and he simply answers the phone like a friend.

He's always there to answer, he's always there to be nice and be available to her and it doesn't create a spark inside of her.

She just feels friendly feelings for him as a result.

He's not being assertive enough in his attempts to seduce her.

In most cases, a girl like that doesn't even know how to seduce her back into a relationship, so he's just doing whatever he thinks he can do.

He thinks, "Alright, I'm just going to keep being nice to her, keep being there and hopefully, eventually, she will come back to me. Hopefully, eventually, she will realize that I'm the one for her."

Yet, then he gets his heart broken into a million pieces when she suddenly tells him that she has met a new guy and they're together now and they're dating and she no longer wants to be with him.

He had a chance to re-attract her while he was in the friend zone, but he wasn't assertive enough about his attempts to seduce her back into a relationship.

He was just playing the friend.

So, what could he have done instead?

Well, rather than answering the phone like a typical friend every time, he should mess with her.

He should play with the situation and get her laughing and smiling.

For example, she calls him up and he answers and he says, "Who's this? What do you want?" rather than just answering with, "Oh, hi. How are you doing today? How have you been? How's things? Is everything okay?" and talking to her like a friend.

Alternatively, he might want to answer the phone the way that I used to do it when I was dating.

I'm married now, but when I had multiple women in my life and they would call me, sometimes I would answer the phone and speak a completely random language.

It wasn't a real language, just a random made-up language to confuse the woman.

So, the woman would call and I would answer and say something like, "Aji bang do wong dai naaa. Baj bah lor. Why you call me? Hello. Why you call me? Who are you?"

The girl will start laughing and think that she called the wrong number.

I would then say, "Hey. What's going on, girl? How are you doing?"

As a result, the girl feels attracted.

You have the confidence to joke around with her rather than being a good boy all the time and being on your best behavior or being boring and just being neutral all the time.

"Hey. How are you doing? How's things? How have you been? Oh, right. Yeah, this is what happened to me. What happened to you? Blah, blah, blah."

Just standard friend stuff.

So, if you want to seduce your ex girlfriend back into a relationship, make sure that you're willing to be a bit more assertive with your attempts to seduce her.

Don't hold back.

Be a bit more ballsy, be a bit more confident and let her really enjoy the interactions with you.

3. Trying to seduce her and then losing confidence when she tests him by acting like it's not working on her

Women behave this way whether you are picking them up, in a relationship or getting them back after a breakup.

When you're picking women up, they don't always make it obvious that they're attracted to you.

Some women require a lot more confidence in a guy than other women.

If a woman requires a guy that has a lot of confidence so you can handle a woman like her, then she's usually not going to make it obvious that she's enjoying the interaction.

She's going to be a little bit cold, a little bit aloof and not laugh at all the guys' jokes.

She wants to see whether or not the guy is going to crumble under that type of pressure.

If he can't handle that, then he can't handle a woman like her.

Now, when it comes to getting an ex back, sometimes a guy will try to seduce his ex girlfriend back into a relationship and she will act like it's not working as a way of testing his confidence.

He will then believe that it's not working, start doubting himself and begin to look insecure and unsure of himself around her.

As a result, she will feel turned off by him.

As you may know, women are attracted to confidence and turned off by emotional weakness in men.

[image: Don't give up at the first sign of resistance]

So, make sure that when you're seducing your ex girlfriend back into a relationship, you don't give up at the first sign of resistance.

You don't doubt yourself when she is playing a little bit hard to get.

4. Trying to be romantic before she's fully re-attracted

The way that it works is that women only appreciate romance from guys that they are sexually attracted to or aroused by.

If a woman doesn't feel sexually attracted to a guy and he's trying to be romantic and trying to be sweet and all that sort of stuff, she isn't going to be enjoying it.

It's going to be a one-sided romance.

It's not a mutual, romantic feeling.

So, if you want to seduce your ex girlfriend back into a relationship, make sure that you focus on making her feel sexually attracted to you first.

If she's not feeling turned on and aroused by the changes in you and how you are now making her feel, then she's not going to enjoy your attempts to be romantic.

Attempts to be romantic can include sending her a card, sending her flowers, telling her how you feel, writing a long letter or email explaining your feelings for her and generally being sweet and giving and nice to her.

She's not going to appreciate that.

So, a general rule to go by is to focus on sexual attraction first and then do everything else after that. You can make her feel sexually attracted to you by being a new and improved version of yourself. For example, if a guy got dumped because he was too insecure, he is now so much more confident. If a guy got dumped because he wasn't manly enough, he's more assertive and manly now. It makes her feel attracted and it makes her feel turned on. After she feels that way, her guard comes down and she begins to open up to sex and a relationship.

5. Trying to play too many mind games with her

For example, acting uninterested when talking to her, not answering her phone calls or cutting off contact for 30 or 60 days.

Each of those approaches can backfire because the woman can simply stop showing any interest, go cold or seek revenge by hooking up with a new guy and making her ex feel bad for attempting to mess with her head.

So, if you want to seduce your ex girlfriend back into having sex with you and having a relationship, don't waste time playing too many mind games with her.

It almost always backfires, especially when the woman is no longer attracted to her guy anymore.

On the other hand, seduction is something that happens very quickly.

It's an immediate feeling that a woman begins to have in response to how a guy is behaving.

So, if a guy is behaving in an insecure or a self-doubting way, then her immediate response to that is going to be to feel turned off by him.

However, if a guy is behaving in a way where he's being confident, emotionally masculine, he's making her laugh and he's being charismatic, her immediate response to that is going to be to feel attracted to him.

It's actually a natural reaction.

It happens automatically.

She doesn't have to think about it or decide whether or not she wants to feel attracted to a guy.

It's just something that begins to happen inside of her.

She begins to feel attracted to him, she begins to feel drawn to him and he can seduce her back into a relationship with him.

Some guys don't know how to attract a woman on purpose and have relied on getting lucky their entire life, whereas, other men don't actually think that it's the right thing to do to be actively seducing her.

Some guys think that the right thing to do is just to be nice, be patient, wait, be friendly and hope that she eventually opens up and wants him sexually.

Alternatively, some guys think that they need to play mind games like cutting off contact for 30 or 60 days or not answering any of her phone calls or replying to her in an uninterested way and so on.

[image: Seduction is something that happens very quickly]

What I want you to know is that seduction is something that happens very quickly.

It's something that you can control.

When you're interacting with your ex woman, you are either making her feel sexually attracted to you and aroused by you, or you're not.

It all comes down to the approach that you're using when you're interacting with her.

Learn more?

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn how to quickly and easily seduce your ex woman back into a relationship.

This applies whether she is your ex girlfriend or ex wife.

The same rules apply.

You make her feel sexually attracted to you, you build up sexual tension between you and her and she wants to get back with you.

You then give her another chance with you.

Using the Power of Attraction to Get Her Back

[image: Using the power of attraction to get her back]

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that what each guy needs to change in order to get his ex woman back is different, but it's still really about the same thing.

It's always still about attraction.

For example, sometimes a guy gets dumped for being insecure in a relationship.

He wasn't manly enough for his woman.

On the other hand, sometimes a guy is very confident and he's very manly, but he gets dumped by his woman because he took her for granted or he wasn't open enough emotionally.

Each guy has to change or improve something about himself and offer that to her in a way that is attractive and appealing to her.

So, while each guy has to change something different about himself in order to be attractive and appealing to his ex again, it's still all about attraction.

When you make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again, her guard comes down and she opens back up to you.

You can then get her back into a relationship with you.

If Your Ex Girlfriend Flakes, Should You Ignore Her?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Only ignore her if you think that it will make her contact you and be more interested in seeing you. If youâre 100% sure she will react in that way, here are 3 optional reactions other than ignoring her...

1. Send her a text to express your disappointment

[image: Send her a text to express your disappointment]

Thereâs nothing wrong with letting your ex know that youâre disappointed about her flaking on you.

For example: Send her a text saying something along the lines of, âHey Rebecca. We were supposed to meet today at 1pm. I'm disappointed that you didn't turn up. Anyway, all the best. Love, Peter.â

Just make sure that you donât sound whiny and insecure about it (e.g. ask her why she didnât show up, tell her how hurt you feel that she flaked out on you, put in a sad face emoticon or sad emoji) or it will turn her off.

Instead, be direct and maintain control of your emotions by texting her something like the example above, or, “Hey Rebecca. Disappointing to see that you didn't turn up today. Anyway, I hope you're fine. Love, Peter.”

As a result, she will likely feel a bit embarrassed for standing you up.

She will also feel a surge of respect for you for being so emotionally mature about it and not reacting in an angry or childish way (e.g. trying to get revenge by setting up another meet up and flaking on her).

Another way to respond to your ex girlfriend flaking on you is toâ

2. Call her and jokingly give her a hard time about flaking

Although women donât go around admitting this, they actually want a guy who will confidently, but lovingly put her back in her place when she gets out of line.

One of the best ways to put a woman back in her place is by using humor to point out her bad behavior.

For example: Call your ex girlfriend and say something like, âWell! That's the last time I ever invite you to catch up with me -you time waster! You're such a little pain the butt, aren't you?â and have a laugh with her about it.

Important: Don't text that to her.

It's best said on a phone call, so she can hear the confidence and playfulness in your tone of voice.

If you text it, she might assume that you really are pissed off at her, which will only make her close up even more.

So, don't text it!

By the way!|

Saying something like that to her is not about being rude or mean to her.

Instead, it's about showing her, in a confident, light-hearted and loving way that you're not going to let her mess you around.

Ironically, when you do that, she can't stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for you and can't stop herself from wanting to treat you better.

On the other hand, if you don't have the balls to stand up to her in a dominant, but loving way, then she won't feel the need to respect you or treat you better.

So, take the chance and be a bit more ballsy when you call her and playfully put her back in her place.

If you do it with enough confidence and relaxed assertiveness, she will absolutely feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She will realize that you're no longer going to be the flimsy guy that she has been able to push around in the past.

You've manned up! and that is sexy to her.

As a result, she will regret flaking on you and try to show you that she's open to meeting up.

By the way!|

If she flakes on you a second time, don't let her get away with it.

What should you do?

Start getting on with your life without her and let her find out about it.

This leads us into the next example!

3. Ignore her and post up photos on social media of you having fun with other people

[image: Post up photos on social media of you having fun with other people]

One of the best ways to attract an ex woman, is by letting her see that you're happy, fulfilled and enjoying a fun life without her.

You can do that by posting lots of interesting and fun photos on social media for her to see.

For example:

- Photos of you and friends having fun (e.g. at a party, on the beach, doing something fun outdoors).
- Photos of you doing something cool with other women (e.g. dancing, cooking, hanging out at a cafe or restaurant, or playing a sport together).
- Photos of you away for a weekend (e.g. in Vegas, at the Grand Canyon, diving the Great Barrier Reef, visiting a winery with some friends, relaxing at the beach with some friends, going to some cool attractions in another city with friends).

By the way!|

If she has unfriended you or isn't following your social media pages, just change your settings to ‘public’ so that she can see it.

Pretty much every woman on the planet is curious about how her ex is doing after a break up and will take a look at his profiles to see what he’s up to.

So, if you ignore your ex after she flakes on you and start posting photos on social media, it will show her that her flaking on you wasn’t a big deal for you.

You’re not losing any sleep over it and in fact, you’re actually looking pretty damn happy, confident and cool now.

That automatically makes her feel attracted to you and makes her want to see you.

Suddenly, she begins to think things like, “This isn’t at all the reaction I was expecting. I thought he’d be feeling sad and depressed, but instead he looks like it didn’t even bother him that I flaked. Rather than sitting around moping and feeling sorry for himself like I imagined he would be, he’s out having fun and even hanging out with other women. He’s so different from the way he used to be. I kind of like him this way...more confident and in control of his life. Suddenly, I regret standing him up. Maybe I should call him and apologize. I really want to see him again. Why am I feeling this way? Why do I feel like I want us to get back together again all of a sudden?”

She then becomes open to the idea of meeting up with you again, this time for real.

Note: I know that many guys don’t want to post up photos of themselves having fun with other people because they fear it will anger their ex woman.

However, if you know how a woman’s attraction for a man really works, you will know that her seeing you happy and confident without her will make her feel attracted to you again.

4 Mistakes to Avoid Making if your Ex Girlfriend Flakes

Like most things in life, there’s a right way and a wrong way of doing something.

The right way will give you the results you desire and make you happy (e.g. get your ex girlfriend back), while the wrong way will cause you unnecessary stress and unhappiness (e.g. cause your ex girlfriend to lose even more respect, attraction and love for you and move on with a new guy).

So, if your ex girlfriend flakes, the wrong way to handle it is by making some or all of the following mistakes:

1. Getting angry or irritated at her

[image: Getting angry and irritated with your ex]

It’s understandable that getting stood up by an ex girlfriend will make a guy feel annoyed and possibly even angry.

It’s pretty damn disrespectful and rude of her, right?

However, no matter how irritated he feels, he can’t let her see that she’s gotten to him.

Why?

Quite often, when a woman agrees to meet up with her ex and then flakes, it’s because she’s testing him to see how he reacts.

For example: Will he remain confident and shrug it off, or will he start doubting himself and his value to her?

Will he become desperate and call her on to phone to beg her to give him another chance, or will he put her back in her place (in a lovingly dominant way) for her bad behavior?

In some cases, a woman might know from previous experience that her ex has a tendency to get angry and react in a bad way when things don't go his way.

So, even though he might be saying to her, *â€œLook, Iâ€™ve changed. Iâ€™m not like that anymore,*â€œ her flaking on him is a way of checking if he's really telling the truth, or just putting on an act to get her back.

If he maintains his composure and handles the situation with confidence and an easy-going attitude, she will know he really has improved and will then open herself to giving him another chance.

On the other hand, if he gets angry or irritated with her, she'll know that he's still the same guy and will then close herself off even more.

Remember: In today's world, a woman is not a man's property.

She is a free individual who can get and out of relationships as she pleases.

A woman doesn't have to stay in a relationship with a man if she doesn't want to and she doesn't have to meet up with him or give him another chance either.

So, getting angry with your ex girlfriend for flaking and causing a scene over it isn't going to change her mind.

Instead, she is just going to close up even more and want to move on with a new guy even faster.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

2. Seeking pity via text

A guy might decide to make his ex feel bad for flaking, by sending her a sad, 'pity me' kind of text.

Something like, *â€œWhy didn't you show up today? I was waiting for hours. I looked like such a fool. Everyone knew I was being stood up. Why didn't you just let me know you weren't going to come? You didn't even reply to my texts asking where you were. Does it make you happy to torture me like that? Sure, I stuffed things up between us, but you don't have to keep punishing me for it over and over again. Iâ€™m a real person with feelings. Why would you do that to me? How can you be so coldhearted all of a sudden?*â€œ Secretly, he's hoping that if she sees how terrible he's feeling, she will feel guilty about flaking, take pity on him and agree to meet up.

Yet, trying to make a woman feel guilty for causing you pain just doesn't work.

Why?

If she's no longer attracted to you, she doesn't really care how much pain you are experiencing.

The only thing she cares about is whether or not she is feeling sexually and romantically attracted to you anymore.

If she is, then she will arrive at a meet up and be open to getting back with you.

If she isn't, she will flake.

Of course, sometimes a woman will flake to test how you will react.

If you react in an attractive way, she feels attracted and then opens up to meet you the next time.

If you react in an unattractive way, she confirms to herself that you're not man enough for her and forces herself to move on.

So, when a guy falls apart and starts looking for pity via text from an ex who flaked, it's unlikely to make her think, "Awww, the poor guy! He's really taking this so badly. I need to meet up with him right away and make it up to him."

Instead, she's more likely going to think, "Well I guess I have my proof now. Even if I wanted to before, I now know that getting back together with him would be a bad idea. He's just too emotionally weak and wimpy for me. I don't want to be with a guy who can't even handle being stood up once like that. If something as insignificant as that can cause him to lose control, what will happen when he has to deal with other serious problems in his life? Will he expect me to take care of him? No thanks! I want a real man who doesn't need pity and support from a woman to get over the bumps in his life. I want a man who is strong with or without the support of a woman."

This is why seeking pity just doesn't work with women.

It can sometimes work temporarily on women who have little or no experience with relationships.

However, most women know that if a guy is seeking her pity, he hasn't yet worked out what it means to be a man, which then makes her feel turned off.

She realizes that she needs to find more mature man, rather than getting back with a guy who is still trying to figure it all out.

So, if your ex girlfriend flaked on you, don't go looking to making her feel pity or guilt over it via text.

Instead, just focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

When you do that, she naturally wants to see you again for her own reasons (i.e. she is feeling drawn to you now, she wants to kiss you again, she wants to have sex with you and see how it feels to be with you now).

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Ignoring her even though she doesn't feel attracted to you, or if doesn't care whether or not she ever speaks to you again

If you're wondering, "My ex girlfriend flaked, should I ignore her?" ask yourself the following questions first:

Does your ex have strong feelings of respect, attraction and love for you right now, or are her feelings for you switched off?

Has she told you that she wants to get back together again, or is she saying things like, "I don't know how I feel," or "I need some time to think about what I want," or even, "I just don't see us being together anymore?"

Did she agree to meet up with you because you made her feel surges of sexual attraction and respect for you over a phone call (e.g. because you made her laugh and smile, you made her feel feminine and girly), or did she just agree to meet up simply because you kept pushing her?

Do you think she is missing you and hoping to get back together, or do you think that she is opening up to other guys to find a replacement and move on without you?

Are you more attracted to her than she is to you?

Depending on your answers, you may have already realized that unless you've re-sparked your ex girlfriend's feeling of respect and attraction for you via other interactions (e.g. text, on social media and over the phone), ignoring her for flaking on you probably isn't going to make her lose any sleep.

In fact, it might actually be the reaction she was hoping for (i.e. she now has the space to move on without you because you're ignoring her).

On the other hand, even if she is secretly hoping that you and her will get back together, it's unlikely that she'll wait around for you forever, right?

She's just going to move on if you don't do anything to get her back.

So many guys make the mistake of cutting off contact with a woman who doesn't really care that he's not texting or calling anymore.

A guy will stop contacting his ex woman and hope that she comes running back to him.

Yet, she just moves on because she doesn't even really care about losing him.

Why?

She's not attracted to him or in love with him anymore.

If he wants her to care, he has to interact with her and make her feel attracted and in love again.

Another mistake to avoid is

4. Not even addressing the fact that she flaked the next time he talks to her

Sometimes a guy won't even mention his ex girlfriend's bad behavior, in case he upsets her and she then decides not to talk to him anymore after that.

Yet, rather than make her more loving and respectful towards him and cause her to think, "Wow, he's so polite and nice. He didn't even say a word about me flaking on him. How can I resist such a nice guy?" she simply feels even more turned off by him.

Women don't respect guys who put up with their bad behavior just to hopefully get to spend time with them.

As weird as it may sound, a woman doesn't want to feel like she can behave like a brat and get away with it.

What she wants is a guy who doesn't pander to her silly drama and instead, puts her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way.

So, if you're tempted to ignore the fact that your ex girlfriend flaked, understand that you will be essentially letting her know that it's okay for her to treat you badly because you're not confident enough to stand up to her.

Is that what you want?

No.

It's not what she wants either.

You want her to respect you and feel attracted to you and she wants to be able to feel that way about you too.

The best way to do it is by showing her that you have the balls to call her out when she's being a brat.

In other words, you can't ignore the fact that she flaked on you.

The next time you talk to her, make sure that you mention her bad behavior in a dominant, but loving way (i.e. not in a whining, annoyed, sulking way).

For example: You can laugh and say something like, â€œDon't play all sweet and innocent with me little girl. You flaked on me last time. So, when I see you next time, I'm going to have to spank you for being a bad girl!â€ and then laugh at her and with her about it.

Initially, she might be a bit shocked that you're talking to her like that now, especially if you haven't in the past.

Even if she doesn't show it or admit it, she will be feeling surges of respect and sexual attraction for you for having the balls to not let her get away with disrespecting you.

She will then realize that you are now more of the confident, emotionally strong man she always wanted you to be and she won't be able to stop herself from wanting to meet up with you for real.

When that happens, you can get her back and enjoy an even better relationship than you had before because she will be so much more attracted to you now.

How to Make Up With Your Girlfriend After a Break Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 tips to make it happen:

1. Don't focus on having deep and meaningful conversations

[image: Don't focus on having deep and meaningful conversations]

When a guy is trying to make up with his girlfriend after a break up, he might be tempted to get her into a deep, detailed conversation about what went wrong.

Yet, in most cases, that's the worst approach to take because it stresses a woman out and makes her close up even more.

I said, "in most cases" because sometimes it is a good idea.

When it's a good idea is when the woman is still attracted and in love with her boyfriend, but has broken up with him after a fight they had.

At that point, it's fine to discuss things and go deep.

Yet, if your girlfriend has broken up with you because she no longer feels enough respect, attraction and love to justify being in a relationship, she's not going to want to discuss the relationship in detail with you.

She doesn't want to help you get her back.

She wants to close up, stay away from you and move on because she currently believes that you don't have what it takes to re-attract her and reverse the break up.

When a guy doesn't realize that he needs to get her respect back and start making her feel attracted again, he might hope that by discussing the relationship in detail, she will realize that he is serious and give him another chance.

Yet, as I mentioned, a woman will only do that if she still has an interest in making the relationship work.

If she's over you, then she's going to want to remain closed up, get away from you and move on.

Unfortunately, many guys don't realize that and end up pushing their girlfriend further away.

For example: A guy might panic, bring up all his past mistakes in the relationship, promise to change and ask her to help him work things out with her.

He might say something like, "I still care about you and I want to make things right between us. I know I stuffed up, but with your help, I know that I can improve. I can be the man you want me to be. So, just start by telling me what you want me to change."

He's hoping she will be impressed that he is taking the break up so seriously and is committed to improving, so she will then give him another chance.

Yet, rather than make her think, "This is a good start! At least he's open to becoming a better man and giving me what I want in a relationship," she will be thinking things like, "He's actually highlighting to me how badly things went wrong between us. The more he mentions his mistakes, the more I doubt if I can actually move past that and give him another chance. Right now, I think it's probably better if we don't see each other. Maybe in a few months when things *settle down I might be open to seeing him again as a friend, but right now, I feel it would be better if we moved on. I just don't feel the same way about him as I used to. He's clearly still in love with me and wants to be with me, but the feelings aren't mutual. I've got to go through with the break up, see other guys and assess how I feel.*â□□

Those aren't the kind of thoughts that you want your girlfriend to have, right?

If not, then get really clear on something right now.

Until you have fully re-sparked her feelings of respect and sexual attraction, you make sure that every interaction you have with her from now on is light-hearted and happy.

Don't put pressure on her.

Just focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good while talking to you.

Of course that doesnâ□□t mean you should act like a clown who doesnâ□□t take things seriously.

Instead it simply means that you focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good to be interacting with you again, so she naturally begins to think, *â□□Heâ□□s so confident and relaxed about all of this. Instead of feeling stressed out about talking to him again, I actually feel good. Iâ□□m looking forward to our interactions now, so things clearly are different. Maybe he really has changed and we should give it another time. Maybe I should meet up with him and see what happens.*â□□

When you use humor to make your ex feel good about talking to you, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to hold on to her negative feelings about you.

She starts feeling surges of respect and attraction for you again and her guard comes down, making her more open to the idea of talking to you on the phone and seeing you in person.

So, remember: Leave the deep and meaningful, serious conversations for later.

For now, just use every interaction you have with her (e.g. via text, social media, e-mail and especially on the phone and in person) to reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you by making her smile, laugh and feel good.

Another tip on how to make up with your girlfriend after a break up is toâ□|

2. Make her want you back sexually and romantically, rather than trying to get her to commit to a relationship

[image: Why won't you commit to giving us another chance?]

If you pressure your girlfriend to get back into a relationship with you before youâ□□ve reactivated her feelings of respect and attraction, you will almost certainly just scare her off.

Rather than getting her back, you will hear her say something along the lines of, *â□□Sorry, but I donâ□□t want to be in a relationship right now. I need some space to sort things out in my mind first. Please donâ□□t contact me anymore. Iâ□□ll let you know when Iâ□□m ready to discuss things with you again.*â□□

She will then use the time apart to fully get over you, move on and possibly even find a replacement guy.

Donâ□□t let that happen to you.

Rather than trying to convince her to commit to a relationship with you right away, use every interaction you have with her (e.g. via text or e-mail, on social media and especially over the phone and in person) to re-spark her feelings for you.

You can do that in many different ways.

For example: Some of those ways areâ€¦!

- Using humor to break down her defenses and make her laugh, smile and feel happy and comfortable to be interacting with you.
- Maintaining your confidence around her (especially when sheâ€™s being cold or aloof, or doing things to make you feel nervous around her) and showing her that you are now an emotionally strong man who believes in his value to her.
- Showing her via your actions, behavior, communication style and the way you respond to what she says and does now, that you really have changed (e.g. youâ€™re more emotionally independent, you no longer get flustered when sheâ€™s being highly emotional or uncooperative, you have become more emotionally mature, you have a definite purpose and direction in life now).

The more she sees for herself that youâ€™ve changed and improved as a man, the more respect and attraction she will begin to feel.

She won't be able to stop herself from feeling that way because attraction is a natural, automatic reaction that humans have to each other under the right conditions.

When you display traits that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, loving dominance, emotional maturity, humor), attraction happens automatically.

She may wonder why she is feeling attracted to you all of a sudden, but she won't be able to resist it.

She will start to look at you as being a sexually attractive man once again and as a result, her feelings about you will begin to change in a positive way.

Then, the idea of getting back together again will start to feel natural to her, rather than feeling like it is being forced on her.

Another tip on how to make up with your girlfriend after a break up is toâ€¦!

3. Be a better version of yourself

[image: Be a better version of yourself]

One of the quickest ways to make up with your girlfriend after a break up is by showing her that youâ€™re no longer stuck at the same level you were at when you and her broke up.

What this means is that youâ€™ve taken the time to understand where you went wrong in the relationship with her and have already started to make some attractive changes and improvements to yourself.

Essentially, you are now a much better version of yourself.

For example: If you were too submissive around her before (e.g. you allowed her to get away with being a drama queen and causing stress in the relationship, just to keep the peace), you are now more assertive and aren't afraid to put her in her place (in a dominant, but loving way) when sheâ€™s out of line.

If you were too emotionally dependent before (e.g. you needed her approval and encouragement to take action in your life), youâ€™ve now become emotionally independent and are happily moving forward and accomplishing your goals in life, even though sheâ€™s no longer there to give you her support.

If you were too jealous and insecure before, youâ€™re now more confident and believe in your value to her.

Your belief in your value to her comes across in the way you talk, think, behave and react to the things she does that would previously have set you off (e.g. she talks to other guys, sheâ€™s cold and aloof towards you and saying things like, â€œI donâ€™t love you anymore,â€ or â€œI donâ€™t want you in my life. You need to accept that itâ€™s over between usâ€).

You donâ€™t have to be perfect to make up with your girlfriend after a break up, just better.

You also don't have to tell her that you've changed.

Just let her experience it.

She will pick up on the changes and decide for herself that you have changed so much that she now feels completely differently about you and the relationship.

She now has hope for you and her and can open up and give the relationship another chance.

Another tip on how to make up with your girlfriend after a break up isâ€

4. Don't wait too long to start the ex back process

Sometimes, after a break up, a guy might waste a lot of time contemplating how he can get her back, that by the time he finally contacts his ex, sheâ€™s already moved on and possibly even found herself another guy.

For example: A guy might think to himself, â€œI canâ€™t just call her up right away and ask her if she wants to try again, because she will probably reject me. I donâ€™t want to be too pushy and end up scaring her away. Itâ€™s probably best if I wait for a sign from her. Iâ€™m sure sheâ€™ll eventually text me or call me. When that happens, Iâ€™ll know sheâ€™s missing me, or at least thinking about me and I can then make my move.â€

He might then sit around waiting for weeks and even months, hoping that his ex girlfriend will give him a call so that he can then start the ex back process.

Yet, that rarely, if ever happens.

Why?

Unless a woman is still deeply in love with her ex, or desperate because she canâ€™t find a replacement guy, she won't make all the moves to get him back.

Instead, she will assume that since he hasn't been contacting her, he has moved on.

So, she will then focus on doing the same.

Immediately, or within days, she will be able to find a guy who likes her and wants to date her and have sex with her.

Soon enough, she will forget about her ex and get caught up in a new relationship.

So, if you want to make up with your girlfriend after a break up, donâ€™t wait too long to do it.

Give her a few days of space (3 to 7 days is enough in most cases) if she asked for it, or if you feel it will help calm things down between you and her because the relationship ended badly.

After 3 to 7 days, get her on a phone call and break down her defenses by making her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again.

Once she's happy to be hearing from you, arrange a meet up, reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction and get her back.

Remember: If you snooze, you lose.

So, get her back before it's too late.

4 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want to Make Up With Your Girlfriend After a Break Up

When you know how it's done, getting an ex woman back is actually pretty easy.

However, if you don't know what you should or shouldn't be doing, you can easily make mistakes that will turn her off even more.

Here are some classic mistakes that other guys make in your situation!

1. Trying to fix things via text

Although it might sometimes feel easier to communicate with an ex via text (especially if she's refusing to talk on the phone or meet up in person), it's not the best way to make up with her and get her back.

Why?

Some of the main reasons include:

- She can ignore your texts. What do you do then?
- She can misinterpret your texts (e.g. a guy might say something simple like, "I just wanted to say hi." If one of the main reasons why she broke up with him was because he was too needy, she will likely misinterpret his text as meaning that he is constantly thinking about her and missing her, even though that may not be true).
- She can't see your body language or hear the tonality of your voice, so she will usually judge everything you text based on her feelings for you during the break up (e.g. anger, disappointment, resentment).
- She can pretend to be working things out with you, while at the same time, she can also be totally focused on finding a replacement guy.
- A bunch of words on a phone usually can't generate enough respect and attraction in a woman to make her want to get back together again.

Even though your ex girlfriend may be open to communicating with you via text, to get her back for real, you have to get to the point where you and her are talking in person.

Only then can she truly get a clear picture of who you are now and see that you really have changed and improved.

When she recognizes that you really have changed, she will naturally start to have feelings for you again.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

2. Not fixing the things that were really turning her off

[image: Not fixing the things that were really turning her off]

If you try to make up with your girlfriend by offering her things she doesnâ€™t really want, she will just keep saying, â€œNoâ€ to you and continue to move on without you.

For example: If one of the reasons why a woman broke up with a guy was his lack of support and encouragement of her as a person (e.g. he was too negative, critical or he squashed her dreams or ambitions), then him promising to work less hours and spend more time with her isn't going to change her mind.

It might seem like him doing that will make her think, “Wow! He cares so much that he wants to spend even more time with me,” but it won't.

Instead, she will think something like, “I am turned off by who he became in the relationship. Why on Earth would I agree to a change that means spending even more time with him?”

He might feel like she is being stubborn, selfish or unfair, but she's just reacting to how his approach to her is making her feel.

If he wants her back, he has to be offering her things that actually make her feel different, rather than just coming up with whatever he can think of and hoping that she gives him another chance for that.

Here's another exampleâ€¦!

If a guy got dumped for lacking direction and purpose in life, him rushing to buy her a diamond ring and propose isnâ€™t going to be what she is looking for.

So, rather than make her change her mind and give him another chance, it just turns her off even more.

It makes her look at him as a confused guy who thinks that focusing on her and making her the most important thing in his life will impress her.

She can see that he doesn't understand what women really want (i.e. a man who loves her and wants to be with her, but is also following through on his big goals, dreams and ambitions in life).

So, if you want to make up with your girlfriend after a break up, make sure that you first understand her real reasons for breaking up with you and also understand exactly what you are going to say and do to make her feel differently about you.

Then, when you next interact with her, give her the attraction experience she really wants (e.g. she wants you to be much more confident around her), rather than offering to fix things that arenâ€™t important to her.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

3. Apologizing over and over again

Thereâ€™s nothing wrong with briefly giving your girlfriend a warm, heart-felt apology.

However, saying that you are sorry over and over again will just push her away.

Why?

Excessive apologizing doesnâ€™t get to the core of the problems.

Until she can experience the new him for herself, she simply assumes that nothing has changed and she sees his constant apologizing as a way of avoiding the deeper issues at hand.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

4. Making the reconciliation process feel stressful to her

If you keep pushing her to get back together again before you fully re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you, sheâ€™s going to feel annoyed and stressed out.

As a result, she will look for excuses to avoid you (e.g. asking for a few weeks or months of space, pretending she has a lot of work or studies to get through and that sheâ€™ll consider getting back together with you in future).

Then, while youâ€™re waiting for her to come back to you, she will focus on moving on and finding another guy.

Don't put yourself in that situation by stressing her out with lots of pressure to get back with you.

Instead, understand that making up with your girlfriend can be fun.

The more laughter and smiling she experiences when she interacts with you, the more she will reconnect with her feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, getting back together again happens easily and naturally.

Getting back together becomes something enjoyable, fulfilling and unforgettable that you and her experience with each other.

Both of you get to enjoy it and as a result, the relationship suddenly starts feeling like it really can work and is something that both of you want to hold on to.

That's how to make up with your girlfriend after a break up.

Stop Chasing Her and She Will Come Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The idea that your ex will come back simply because you stop chasing her isn't true.

While you shouldn't desperately chase your ex, it doesn't mean that you can't pursue her in a calm, confident manner and get her back.

You can.

You can take control of the situation and get her back on your terms, rather than just giving up and hoping that she comes back.

From all of my years helping men to get women back, I've found that just walking away from a woman usually doesn't work.

Why?

4 reasons why it usually doesn't work are:

1. If a woman doesn't feel attracted to you, she won't feel much or any motivation to come back

[image: If a woman doesn't feel attracted to her ex, there's usually no motivation to go back to him]

Sometimes, when a guy has been unsuccessful in his attempts to get his ex woman back, he might begin to think, "Maybe if I just stop chasing her, she will come back to me by herself. The time apart will make her miss me and she will realize that breaking up was a mistake."

Basically he's hoping that by cutting off communication, her feelings will come rushing back when she realizes that she's losing him.

However, in most cases it just doesn't work.

Why?

To begin with, when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she has lost respect and attraction for him over time.

It's not because she wants to break up for no reason or because she is confused and needs time to figure things out.

She's literally turned off by him and wants out of the relationship.

In her mind, she may be thinking negative things about him like, "He really stuffed up, so he can forget about us ever getting back together," or, "I wasted so much time with him. I thought we had something special going and instead he messed everything up. Well I'm glad it's over between us now. My heart is closed to him and nothing will make me have feelings for him again. I'm going to move on."

So, if her ex guy ignores her and gives up, she's much more likely to think, "This is great! He's making it easier for me than I thought. I can now move on with my life and not worry about him making things difficult for me by trying to get me to change my mind" than to rush back to him and give him another chance.

Here's the thing!

If a woman doesn't feel attracted to a guy, she won't feel much or any motivation to come back to him just because he's no longer chasing her.

Yes, she might wonder why he is suddenly taking a back seat and no longer contacting her, but if he hasn't re-sparked her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for him prior to cutting off contact, she's not going to feel that bad about it at all.

Rather than call him on the phone and say something along the lines of, "I think I made a mistake. I now realize that I miss you too much to want to be apart. Do you think we can give our relationship another chance?" she will just use the time apart to completely switch off her feelings for him (e.g. by getting angry over his lack of communication, hooking up with another guy) and then move on.

The truth is, unless your ex is still in love with you and is secretly hoping that you and her will get back together again, not actively getting her back will simply give her the time she needs to get over you.

So, what should you do instead?

The best way to get a woman back is to actively re-attract her.

You need to focus on using every interaction you have with her to make her feel sparks of respect and sexual attraction for you again.

Whether you're interacting with her via text or e-mail, on social media, over the phone and especially in person, make sure that you are making her smile, laugh and feel happy to be in contact with you again.

The more attracted you make her feel when you interact with her, the more her defenses will come down.

Then, the idea of getting back together again will begin to feel like something she wants to do because it feels right.

On the other hand, if you don't do anything to re-spark her feelings for you and just give up, she probably won't ever be interested in getting back together with you again.

Another reason why not chasing a woman usually doesn't work to get her back is because!

2. Women can easily move on in today's world

[image: Women can easily move on in today's world]

Rather than sitting around thinking, "Why isn't he calling me?" or "Is he over me so quickly? Why isn't he doing anything to get me back? Could he have met someone else? I miss him!" a woman will use her ex's indifference towards her as an excuse to move on without him.

Here's the thing!

In today's world, a woman simply has to get on a dating app like Tinder, an online dating site, or go out to a bar or club and give out her number, kiss or even have sex with one of the many guys who will want her and she will start forgetting about her ex.

[image: Easy for women to get some action and move on]

It's pretty damn easy for her to get some action.

She knows that.

Additionally, most women have had some experience in relationships and break ups before.

So, even though a woman may be feeling sad about the break up with her ex, she will know that the pain will eventually fade away, or that she can get over the pain by hooking up with new guys.

All she needs to do is wait it out until she feels completely over him, or use another guy (or guys) to help her get over him even faster.

She knows that.

So, if you really want to get your ex back, hoping that if you stop chasing her will make it happen is not a good strategy to use if she's not attracted to you anymore.

In fact, by ignoring her, you're just giving her the help she needs to get over you, move on and find someone else.

Here's an older video of mine that discusses that very topic!

If you want to get her back, you have to put in the effort to re-attract her and make her want you back now.

If you wait too long, she may end up falling in love with a new guy, getting married or getting pregnant.

Then what?

Ignore her even more?

No, no, no.

That approach doesn't work in almost all ex back cases where a man is trying to get a woman back who no longer feels attracted to him.

If you want your ex back now, you have to actively re-attract her in a calm, confident manner.

Begin interacting with her in whatever way is possible for you (e.g. text or e-mail her, message her on social media, call her on the phone, or even better, meet up with her in person) and make her feel some respect and sexual attraction for you again.

When you do that, she will naturally begin to change how she thinks and feels about you.

She will open back up to you.

On the other hand, if she doesn't feel anything for you, it's not going to matter to her that you've stopped chasing her to make her come back.

Instead she will see that as yet another reason why she needs to move on without you (i.e. because you're either incapable of getting her back, still don't know what she really wants from you, are too afraid to step up to the plate and do what it takes to get her back).

The next reason why not chasing a woman doesn't work to get her back is because!

3. She is afraid of getting rejected by you if she tries to get you back

A woman will rarely make the first move with her ex (even if she still has feelings and wants him back), because she fears that he might try to hurt her for breaking up with him by rejecting her and saying things like, "What makes you think I would ever want you back? I'm over you and I have an even better girlfriend now. Leave me alone."

If that happens, then she will be the one who is more hurt by the break up.

She will feel as though he is dumping her, so it will be harder for her to get over him and move on.

To avoid that happening to her, she will just move on with a new guy, rather than having to deal with the potential pain of reaching out to an ex and getting rejected.

This is why it's very important that if you want your ex back, you actively focus on getting her back, rather than leaving it all up to her.

Don't sit around hoping that giving her space will convince her that your intentions are good and make her contact you, because chances are she won't.

You need to interact with her in a calm, confident manner as often as you can (without being a pain in the ass or coming across as being desperate) and focus on reawakening her feelings of attraction and respect for you.

Some guys are able to do that with one interaction, whereas other guys need to interact with their ex woman 2-3 times before she feels enough attraction to drop her guard and open up again.

When she drops her guard, she starts to think things like, â€œMaybe we can make things work between us after all. Maybe our relationship is worth saving.â€

Another reason why not chasing a woman usually doesn't work to get her back is because

4. Some women want to see how you handle yourself as you pursue her

How a guy handles the break up is one of the things that either makes a woman want to get back with him, or convince her even more that she made the right decision.

For example: When a woman breaks up with a guy, some of the things she looks out for are:

- Does he become desperate (e.g. he starts begging and pleading for another chance, makes promises to do anything she wants as long as she gives him another chance)?
- Does he get angry or irritated with her (e.g. he insults her, calls her names, becomes aggressive or even physically violent)?
- Does he maintain his cool (e.g. he doesn't get upset or nervous, he believes in his value to her, even though they're now broken up)?
- Does he remain confident no matter how much she tests him (e.g. he laughs at her when she tells him that she doesn't have feelings for him anymore)?
- Does he actively pursue her to get her back, or does he sit back and hope she will do all the work for him?

Depending on his reaction, she will either feel a resurgence of respect and attraction for him for handling the ex back process in a confident, emotionally strong and mature way, or she will feel turned off by his immature or insecure behavior.

So, if you want your ex back, don't just give up, walk away and leave it all up to her.

That approach rarely, if ever works for guys who have been dumped by a woman who is no longer attracted to them.

You have to do something about it.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should harass her by calling her all the time, sending multiple texts, e-mails or messages, or try to force her into getting back together again.

Instead, you need to interact with her in a calm, confident manner and build on her feelings for you. The more you make her feel good to be interacting with you again (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, being confident when she tests you, creating a sexual vibe between you and her), the more the idea of getting back together again will seem appealing to her.

Don't Lose Your Chance With Her By Making These Mistakes

By now you've probably realized that not pursuing an ex usually doesn't get her back. You've already probably realized that I don't recommend chasing your ex in a desperate, frantic manner.

This is about being calm, confident and in control and getting the job done (i.e. getting her back). That is what works for men who have been dumped by a woman who no longer feels attracted or in love.

You know that now, but so many guys don't, which is why they end up making mistakes such as

1. Ignoring her texts or signs of interest from her to hopefully make her chase even more

Playing a little bit hard to get is good, but if you go too far with it, she will play harder to get and it will become even more difficult for you to handle.

So, don't go overboard and try to be Mr. Cool or Mr. Aloof all of a sudden.

Be calm and confident while getting her back, but don't go crazy and be too cold, aloof or unavailable.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't know what else to do other than extreme behaviors to hopefully get a result, so they end up ruining their chances.

For example: Sometimes, a guy might think, "I don't want to come across as being too eager, so I'm going to play it cool. I'll pretend that I'm not available and ignore her texts to hopefully get her to chase harder. Then, when I finally do text her back a few days or a week later, she will be so happy to be hearing from me that she will be the one asking me for a second chance."

It sounds good in theory, but it rarely works when a woman is over her ex, knows exactly why she broke up with him (i.e. he turned her off and wasn't able to give her the kind of attraction experience she really wanted).

She just doesn't feel the need to rush back to a guy who she isn't attracted to anymore.

Here's the thing

Some women will show interest when their ex ignores them, but not to get him back.

Instead, she will do it to get him to show interest again and reveal his true feelings (i.e. he wants her back), so she can reconfirm that she is in the position of power (i.e. he wants her back, but she doesn't want him back).

As soon as she has confirmed that, she feels good about herself and moves on.

However, not all women approach it in that way.

In many cases, a woman will simply move on and not care about the fact that her ex isn't pursuing her.

She doesn't need to confirm that she is in the position of power because she already knows that she is.

So, if you are serious about getting your ex back, don't just ignore her and hope that she comes running back.

In most cases, a woman will simply move on.

So, just pick up the phone, call her and start creating some feelings inside of her right away.

Then, meet up with her and get her back.

That's how a real man handles the situation.

He does what it takes to get the result he wants, while being calm, confident and in control.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Acting like you are happy without her when you're not

Sometimes, a guy will say that he's really happy and enjoying a great life without his ex as a way of making her jealous and want him back.

Yet, saying things like that almost always backfires.

All it takes for your ex to catch you out in a lie is for her to say something like, â€œOh, really? That's kind of disappointing. I have been thinking a lot about us lately and realized that I made a mistake by breaking up with you. I want to get back together. Do you?â€

If you then agree, she can quickly pull her interest back to see how happy you really are without her, or to regain the position of power.

If you fall apart and start pleading with her to give you another chance, she will know that you were only faking being happy and will then feel even less respect and attraction for you for lying to her.

So, rather than pretending that you're happy without your ex when you're not, just focus on genuinely being happy without her.

For example: You can build on your happiness by

- Focusing on achieving your big goals and dreams in life and beginning to follow through on them.
- Spending more time with friends and doing outdoor activities together.
- Taking up a new hobby or activity that you've always wanted to do, but never got around to.
- Focusing on your positive qualities and realizing how much of a better man you've become since the break up and how lucky your ex would be to have you back.

Then, when you interact with your ex and she sees that you really are happy and have genuinely getting on with your life without her, she will naturally feel a surge of respect and attraction for you.

You can then build on those initial feelings to make her feel intensely attracted to you again and get her back.

On the other hand, if you only fake it and she finds out, getting her back becomes even more difficult. Another mistake to avoid making isâ□|

3. Not improving your ability to re-attract her before you interact with her

[image: Not improving your ability to attract her before interacting with her again]

One of the main reasons why a woman breaks up with a guy is because she loses so much respect and attraction for him (i.e. due to his behavior, attitude or actions), that she doesnâ□□t want to be with him anymore.

For example:

- He becomes too clingy and needy in the relationship with her (e.g. stops doing anything in his life independently of her, needs her to reassure him of her love and attraction for him, tells her that he canâ□□t live or be happy without her support).
- He allows her to get away with bad behavior (e.g., throwing tantrums, being disrespectful towards him) and emotionally dominate him in the relationship.
- He stops making her feel feminine and girly in his presence and treats her more like a neutral friend, or a roommate.
- He stops being romantic and charming and the relationship becomes boring.
- He takes her for granted and just starts treating her however he wants.
- He doesn't know why she is becoming increasingly frustrated or unhappy with him, so he begins to accuse her of being crazy, wanting to cheat, being selfish or not being as loving and warm as she used to be.

A woman doesn't want to have to spend her life fixing her guy and hopefully trying to get him to understand what women want.

She wants to relax into being his woman and just love and adore him, rather than having to endlessly work on him.

If he can't step up to the plate and be the kind of man she wants, she will eventually decide to leave him.

To get her back, a guy needs to make sure that he improves his ability to attract her (i.e. by improving on the things that caused her to break up with him in the first place) before he interacts with her again.

If he attempts to get her back without first giving her what she really wants (e.g. for him to be more confident and believe in himself, to make her feel like a real woman when sheâ□□s with him, not to put up with her nonsense and get her to respect him more) she will feel that he still doesnâ□□t understand her and she will remain closed off.

In the same way, if you try to get your ex back while youâ□□re still making the same old attraction mistakes you made before (e.g. you give her too much power over you, you feel unworthy of her, youâ□□re afraid to stand up to her when sheâ□□s out of line), she isnâ□□t going to feel motivated to want to get back with you.

It won't matter if you chase her or give up; either way she isn't going to want you back because she's not going to be feeling attracted to you anymore.

So, if you are serious about getting your ex back, you need to focus on improving your ability to attract her based on the man you have become since the break up.

When she can see for herself that she feels differently around you now, her guard will naturally come down and she'll be interested in seeing you more to see what happens.

So, don't waste any more time ignoring her or playing hard to hopefully to get her to come back on her own.

If you want her back, make it happen!

Focus on making her feel attracted and in love with you again.

Take control of the situation and get her back.

My Ex Said She Still Loves Me, But Doesn't See Us Being Together Again

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex said that she still loves you, but doesn't see you being together again are:

1. She is basing her decision on how she feels about you now

Right now, it's only natural that your ex isn't feeling too excited about the idea of you and her getting back together again.

She's most likely still thinking about the break up and the things that caused her to go through with it in the end.

For example: Leading up the break up, a guy might have turned his woman off by:

- Not being affectionate enough towards her.
- Keeping his emotions closed off from her.
- Being too childish and immature (e.g. she wants him to get serious about their future together while he still enjoys being carefree and irresponsible).
- Being too clingy and needy about their future together (e.g. she just wants to relax and let the relationship happen, but he is constantly worried about the possibility that they might break up, or that she might find another guy attractive and leave him).
- Not having any direction in his life (i.e. just copying what his friends like to do, not having a big purpose or ambition that he is actively working towards, not caring about having direction and just wanting to do whatever).
- Getting angry at her for little things rather than being a calm, confident, loving boyfriend or husband.
- Being too emotionally sensitive (i.e. she had to be nice to him, give him compliments and make him feel good, or else he would sulk, get irritable or throw an angry tantrum).
- Not putting in enough or any effort to create feelings of love and make her laugh and enjoy being with him anymore.

So, that's what might have turned her off leading up to the break up.

[image: Please give me another chance! I can change!]

Then, after the breakup, a guy might panic and react in an unattractive way by being needy and desperate, begging, pleading, apologizing over and over again and possibly even crying to her.

Unfortunately, none of those things will make a woman think, â"Wow, I want to get back with him!

Instead, she will likely be thinking, âI know he wants me back, but he's not really doing anything different from before. He's just hoping that if we get back together again things will change and improve, but it doesn't work that way. I just don't see him being able to change if I give him another chance. It's actually quite sad really. He's really a sweet guy and I do still love him, but he's not the right guy for me. I don't feel a spark with him anymore. I feel like I *need to move on and find a guy who can naturally make me feel more attracted, rather than a guy who needs me to help him fix the relationship and make me want him.*â□□

In other words, to get your ex back, you need to focus on making her feel attracted to you again so she wants you naturally, rather than trying to discuss your way back into a relationship with her.

[image: Focus on attraction to get another chance]

If you focus on attraction, she will naturally change her mind and want to give you another chance.

So, what's an example of something a guy can do to make her change her mind and want to give him another chance?

One example is where a guy has been keeping himself closed off from his woman in the relationship (e.g. he never discusses his problems with her, he keeps secrets from her about himself, he doesn't fully open up emotionally in fear of being hurt).

So, when he then interacts with her via text, on a phone call and in person from now on, he needs to be able to show her that heâ□□s no longer like that.

Itâ□□s not about telling her, *â□□Hey, Iâ□□ve changed. I used to be all closed off and secretive, but now Iâ□□m different,*â□□ because sheâ□□s probably just going to be thinking, *â□□Yeah right! Iâ□□m supposed to believe that nothing I said before made a difference, but now suddenly youâ□□re going to open up and let me in? How can I believe you?*â□□

[image: Focus on attraction to get another chance]

Instead, it's about calmly and confidently being a different version of yourself, so she can experience it.

So many guys make the mistake of being frantic and desperate as they try to show their ex woman a different side of themselves.

That doesn't work.

It's the biggest mistake you can makeâ□!

Remember: The only thing that matters to her is her feelings.

It no longer matters how much you love her or care about her.

She just cares about how she feels and right now, she doesn't feel enough attraction for you to justify being in a relationship with you.

So, the only way to get her to care, is to actively make her feel attracted to you when you interact with her.

When youâ□□re interacting with her, you need to show her by the way that youâ□□re talking, thinking, feeling, behaving, moving and responding to her, that real changes have been made.

Of course, just showing her that youâ□□ve changed and improved doesnâ□□t automatically get the relationship back together.

However, it does allow her to start experiencing a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you again.

When she feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she naturally starts to look at you differently (i.e. she now not only loves you, but also feels much more respectful of you and sexually attracted to you).

She then starts to feel differently about the relationship and the possibility of getting back together. She opens up and you can confidently guide her back into a relationship via hugging, kissing, having sex and falling back in love.

On the other hand, if you don't actively make her reconnect with her feelings of respect and attraction for you, then don't even worry about trying to get her back because she's just going to keep saying â€œIâ€™m sorry. I do still love you, but I donâ€™t see us being together again.â€

Remember: Attraction first and everything else after that.

Another reason why your ex may be saying that to you, is because

2. You didn't attract her in the ways that she really cares about

A woman will often break up with a guy without ever telling him her real reasons for doing so.

For example: She might want her guy to be more focused and driven in his life.

She always wished he would stop messing around (e.g. not being serious about his studies, being unemployed or being stuck in a dead-end job, partying too much with friends, not thinking about his, and their, future) and put effort into setting and achieving some really big goals in his life.

Instead, he just said things like, â€œI promise Iâ€™ll do it soon. Donâ€™t worry so much honey. Everything will work out fine,â€ when she talked to him about it.

He was essentially trying to tell her to go against her natural instincts (i.e. to find a man to breed with who will settle down with her, support her and the children and protect her).

He wanted her to abandon all that and just hang around and live life with him because he loved her and wanted to be with her.

Unfortunately, there's only so long that a woman can ignore her natural instincts and urges.

After a while, the alarm bells in her mind become too loud to ignore and she begins to hear, “Find a real man. He's not going to change. You need to get out of this relationship. Time is running out.”

Not understanding the natural urges and instincts of women, the guy may have just laughed and said something along the lines of, â€œStop being so serious all the time and relax. Weâ€™re only young once, so whatâ€™s the point of not enjoying ourselves? Iâ€™ll get on to the serious stuff in life soon enough. For now, I want to enjoy being young and carefree. Letâ€™s just focus on our love.

Thereâ€™s nothing to worry about. As long as we have each other, everything is fine.â€

She might have then gotten upset and said, â€œYou donâ€™t understand me. Canâ€™t you see that your behavior is stressing me out?â€

If he still doesn't realize that she needs him to be more ambitious and goal oriented, she will begin to feel unsatisfied.

She will then start asking herself, â€œWill I ever feel safe in my relationship with him, or will he continue being childish and immature and lacking ambition in his life? Do we really have a future together, or am I going to wake up one morning and discover that Iâ€™m living a sad, unsuccessful life because of him? His lack of interest in the future is actually holding me back. I canâ€™t just sit around and wait for him to change. What if the changes never happen? Iâ€™ll have wasted the best years of my life waiting for a guy who is never going to grow up and make me feel the way I want to feel in the relationship with him. As much as I love him, I realize now that I have to break up with him. I have to listen to my heart. I have to take care of myself.â€

When a woman gets to the point where she can see that her guy is not giving her the attraction experience she really wants and likely never will, she will break up with him and focus on getting over him and finding a guy who can fill that need for her.

So, if your ex is saying that she still loves you but doesn't see you as being together again, it's very important that you find out what she secretly wanted from you in the relationship that you weren't giving her, and start improving on that right away.

Note: In your case, it might not have been that you weren't goal oriented.

In your case, it might have been that you just stopped making her feel attracted and didn't know how to get the spark back.

As a result, you started being nicer, more giving and more patient with her and she eventually grew dissatisfied with that.

Why?

Sexual and romantic attraction is what makes a man and a woman want to be together and it's what keeps them together.

You might think that love keeps a man and a woman together, but romantic love only exists on top of sexual and romantic attraction.

Sexual and romantic attraction is the basis upon which a sexual relationship between a man and a woman exists and remains together.

So, make sure that you're not trying to get your ex back by saying things like, "But, I love you" or, "But, what we have is so special."

She's only going to care if you are actively making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

Another reason why your ex may be saying that she still loves you, but doesn't see you as being together again, is because

3. She doesn't believe that you will ever change

Most of the time, a break up between a man and a woman doesn't just happen without at least a few disagreements or fights first.

For example: The woman will get angry over a certain aspect of the guy's behavior (e.g. his insecurity, lack of empathy for her, neediness) that she feels he's not improving on and she may then throw a tantrum.

She might say something along the lines of, "I'm sick and tired of always fighting with you about the same things. If you don't change, I'm going to break up with you and that's final! Don't think I am joking about this. I am serious."

The guy may then respond by saying things like, "I'm sorry! I know that I stuffed up, but I promise I'll do better. Please don't break up with me. Believe me – this time I really will change. I promise."

She might then give him another chance and maybe even two or three additional chances after that.

However, over time, she will come to realize that he's only saying he will change to stop her from breaking up with him and that he has no intention of following through on his promise (e.g. because he doesn't know how to change, or he's unwilling to change).

She then breaks up with him.

When he tries to get her back, she says, â€œSorry. Even though I still love you, I don't see us being together again,â€ because she doesn't believe that he will ever change.

So, if you want your ex to want to get back together again, you need to show her via your actions, behavior and the way you talk and interact with her that you've already changed and improved on some of the things that matter to her.

When she can see for herself that if she gets back with you, you and her are not just going to start arguing and fighting all over again about the same things, she'll be able to start trusting you again.

When that happens, her defenses will come down and she will become more open to talking with you over the phone and meeting up with you in person to see where things go from there.

Another reason why your ex may be saying that she still loves you, but doesn't see you as being together again, is becauseâ€

4. She only loves you as a friend now

When the spark dies in a relationship (i.e. there's no longer any sexual attraction), a woman will lose interest in being with the man.

She may then say something along the lines of, â€œI still love you, but I don't see us as being together again. I think it's best if we stay friends for now,â€ as a way of easing his pain.

He might then think to himself, â€œFriends? Well, that's okay. I can be friends for now. At least this way I can stick around and still talk to her over the phone, or meet up with her in person. Then, if I'm really good to her and show her that she can count on me no matter what, she will eventually fall back in love with me and we can get back together again.â€

Yet, here's the thingâ€

A woman almost never changes her mind about feeling neutral, friendly feelings towards a guy based on how good and reliable he is.

She changes her mind because he actively makes her feel respect, sexual attraction and romantic love for him again when he interacts with her.

So, if your ex has put you in the friend zone, don't waste time hanging around her and being a sweet, friendly pushover to her.

If you really want her back, you need to use every interaction you have with her (e.g. on the phone, or in person) to make her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you and make her feel strong surges of respect and sexual attraction again.

Don't pretend that you're not interested in getting her back, or that you don't find her sexually attractive anymore.

That doesn't work.

You've got to be actively making her feel sexually attracted and aroused by your approach to conversations and interactions.

That's what works.

If you only focus on making her feel neutral, friendly feelings for you, there won't be a strong, compelling reason for her to want you back sexually and romantically.

So, make sure that you flirt with her and make her experience feelings of respect, sexual attraction, arousal and romantic love for you again, rather than making her think of you as just a friend now.

Another reason why your ex may be saying that she still loves you, but doesn't see you as being together again, is because

5. She is interested in another man

Sometimes a woman might have already met another guy that she's interested in and wants to see where things go with him.

However, she may not want to come out and tell her ex right away (e.g. because she's afraid of how her will react, she doesn't want to hurt him, she wants to make sure it works out with the new guy first).

So, rather than have to explain to him about her feelings for another guy, she simply says, I love you, but I don't see us being together again, in the hopes that her ex will say something along the lines of, How about I give you some space to think about things? Maybe, then we can talk again about getting back together.

She will then have the time to hook up with the new guy and see how it goes, before eventually either saying, "I'm with someone else now" or, "Okay, I'll give us another chance" if it didn't work out with the new guy.

This is why I always recommend that a man take control of the situation (i.e. by actively making his ex woman feel sexually and romantically attracted to him again), rather than just leaving it all up to her, or making the mistake of begging and pleading for another chance based on his love, need or desire for her.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want Your Ex to See You and Her Being Together Again

When you respark your ex's feelings of respect and attraction for you, the way she feels about you will naturally begin to change.

She will go from not seeing you and her being together again, to imagining what it would be like if she gave you another chance and allowed herself to fall in love with you again.

It's a natural reaction based on what you're saying and doing when you interact with her.

However, for that to happen, you need to be saying the types of things that are turning her feelings on for you, not turning them off.

Some common mistakes that turn a woman off even more, are:

1. Declaring your undying love for her and promising to wait

Sometimes, when a woman says, I love you, but I don't see us being together again, a guy might decide that if he shows her how loyal and committed he is to her, she will then change her mind.

He might then say to her, “Even though you don’t see us being together, I’m not going to give up. I love you and I’m willing to wait as long as it takes for you to realize that we are meant to be together. The truth is, a life without you is meaningless to me. There’s nothing I want more than for us to be together again. So, just take some time to think about it and I will be right here waiting for you.”

Yet, here’s the thing!

Although a woman appreciates a man who loves her and is devoted to her, she doesn’t want to be his purpose for living.

She wants him to be confident enough to move forward and enjoy his life whether she’s in it or not.

That doesn’t mean he has to hook up with new women though.

Instead, he just needs to be able to show her (not tell her!) that he doesn’t need her for his happiness or sense of purpose in life.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys are afraid to do that because they worry it will cause the woman to move on.

Yet, the fact is that women just aren’t excited about the idea of a guy (who they don’t feel attracted to) desperately needing them for his sense of happiness and purpose in life.

If a guy sits around waiting for his ex to hopefully one day give him a second chance, she knows that it means he’s too emotionally dependent on her and doesn’t have the courage to be his own man and live his own life.

Being like that is unattractive to her and convinces her even more to move on and find a guy who is less needy of her.

Another mistake to avoid is!

2. Giving her reasons why you and her can work, rather than making her feel it

[image: Giving her reasons why you and her can or should work things out]

Sometimes, a guy might try to convince his ex to get back together again by giving her reasons why he thinks they should be together.

For example: A man might say, “What we have is special. Sure we had some problems, but I know we’re meant to be together,” or “All of our friends and family say that we make such a great couple. We can’t let them down. We owe it to them to at least try,” or “You’ve got exams coming up. Do you really want the stress of a break up to get in the way of that? Besides, no one else can help you prepare the way I can. I’ll be there for you.”

Yet, regardless of whether his arguments are valid or not, a modern woman doesn’t have to stay with a guy out of a sense of duty, or because she feels guilty, or pity for him.

She knows that she has the freedom to be single, dating or in a relationship.

It’s completely up to her and she decides based on how she feels.

The fact is that a woman wants to be with a guy because she loves him and because it feels good to be in a relationship with him, not because he gives her a whole bunch of reasons why she should be feeling attracted and in love.

In other words, a woman reacts to how she feels, rather than just listening the logical, sensible arguments you raise to hopefully get her to stay with you.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Asking her to explain to you what will make her happy

This is probably one of the most common mistakes guys make that end up turning a woman off even more. Why?

When a guy asks a woman to tell him what he needs to do to make her happy, heâ€™s effectively telling her that heâ€™s clueless about how to think, act and behave like a real man.

Instead, he wants her to guide him and teach him.

Yet, a woman doesnâ€™t want to be responsible for teaching a man how to be a man.

In her mind, that is the job of a male role model (e.g. a father, uncle, guru, mentor), not hers.

She just wants him to figure out how to be the kind of man she wants and then start being that man, rather than relying on her to help him through it.

So, if your ex said that she still loves you, but doesnâ€™t see you and her being together again, make sure you show her that youâ€™re now a better, more attractive man than before, without her needing to tell you how to do it.

When she sees for herself that you really have changed, she wonâ€™t be able to stop feeling respect and attraction for you again.

Then, the idea of giving you another chance starts to feel like something she wants too.

As a result, you and her naturally get back together.

5 Tips on How to Get Out of the Friend Zone With Your Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How can you get out of the friend zone with your ex girlfriend or ex wife?

How can you make her stop looking at you as just a friend or her ex guy that she no longer has sexual or romantic feelings for?

Here are my 5 tips on how to do it...

1. Understand that you have placed yourself in the friend zone

[image: Understand that you have placed yourself in the friend zone]

In most ex back cases that I've worked on where a guy is in the friend zone with his ex woman, he has placed himself there.

She hasn't actually decided that he is in the friend zone.

It's based on his thinking and behavior.

To help you understand how that works, think about an example where a guy is trying to pick up a woman.

He has a crush on a girl that he likes and he doesn't really know how to get her to like him in the same way.

So, he hangs around with her, tries to build up a friendship and hopes that eventually she might like him in a sexual and romantic way.

[image: Friend zoned by a girl you like]

Then all of a sudden, another guy comes along who isn't necessarily any better looking than him or anything like that.

Instead, the new guy doesn't place himself in the friend zone.

He feels worthy of her.

His confidence in himself around her allows him to be a bit more bold in the way that he uses humor and the way that he interacts with her and as a result, she ends up hooking up with him sexually and getting into a relationship with him.

Meanwhile, the guy in the friend zone is thinking, "What just happened? I was talking to her for weeks or months. We really got along. I was always there for her. I was very understanding. I was helpful. I was essentially what women are asking for. They're asking for a nice guy who cares for them and listens and looks out for them and treats them really well. I was doing all of that and then she goes and hooks up with another guy who didn't do any of that for her."

So, what is the main thing that made her hook up with the guy?

It's very simple...

Sexual attraction.

A woman's feelings of sexual attraction for you can be created.

It's based on how you interact with her, how you talk to her.

For example, if you're talking to your ex and you're doubting yourself, giving her too much power and being way too nice to her in the hopes that she eventually caves in and gives you another chance, then she's not going to be feeling sexually attracted to you because of that.

Women don't feel sexually attracted and turned on by a guy's self-doubt and insecurity around her.

What a woman feels turned on by is a guy's confidence and belief in himself around her.

So, when it comes to getting your ex back, you need to absolutely believe in yourself and your value.

You have to absolutely believe that she could feel sexually attracted to you, that she could feel romantically attracted to you and that she would want to be in a relationship with you.

Don't doubt it for a second.

If you doubt it, you will naturally start to end up in the friend zone.

Why?

She will not feel attracted to you.

Women are not attracted to self-doubt and insecurity.

2. Don't give her an ultimatum of a relationship or nothing

[image: Don't give her an ultimatum of a relationship or nothing]

When a guy doesn't know what to do to make his ex woman feel attracted to him again, he'll often get to the point where he gives her an ultimatum.

He says something like, "Well, look. I can't just be friends with you. It has to be more than that. I have too much feelings for you. It will be too difficult for me to be friends with you because I love you so much. You either want to be with me or nothing."

In most ex back cases, the woman then chooses nothing and she walks away.

Why?

She's not attracted to him.

Therefore, she doesn't feel motivated to want to get back into a sexual relationship with him.

She doesn't have those feelings for him because he's not creating them.

He's essentially just hanging around her, texting her like a friend, being nice to her, giving her all the power and hoping that eventually she caves in and gives him another chance.

He's wasting so much time and energy using that approach.

All it will take for her to hook up with another guy is for another guy to come along, focus on making her feel sexually attracted and have the confidence to then hook up with her sexually.

Another problem with the ultimatum of it's a relationship or nothing is that when a guy says it to a woman, he's usually coming across in a bit of an emotionally weak way.

His body language appears a little bit desperate and he is showing her that he is in pain.

He can't deal with the fact that she doesn't want to have a sexual and romantic relationship with him. She just sees him as a friend.

The reason why it's a problem is that a woman does not want to feel responsible for your emotional state.

She doesn't want to feel responsible for your confidence, happiness and self-esteem.

A woman wants a man who is confident, happy and forward moving in life regardless of what she says or does, regardless of whether she is approving of him, giving him attention, affection and making him feel good about himself.

She wants a man who stands on his own two feet and is confident, happy and forward moving regardless of what she is thinking, feeling, saying or doing in any given moment.

When a guy has the confidence to be that type of guy, a woman naturally feels attracted and drawn to him.

So, rather than giving her an ultimatum of it's a relationship or nothing, what you need to do is interact with her and make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

While you're doing that, you also need to be subtly pulling away emotionally.

In other words, you're not chasing a relationship and you're not chasing her.

What you're doing is making her feel attracted to you, she's feeling it, but she can also feel that she's losing you.

She can also feel that if she doesn't make a move and accept a relationship with you, another woman is going to find you attractive.

What happens is that she realizes that she is feeling attracted to the new and improved you.

She knows that other women are going to find that attractive and if you go ahead and interact with another woman, she is most likely going to find you attractive.

If you then hook up with that woman and get into a relationship with her, it might end up causing your ex to feel like she has been rejected, she has been left behind.

So, rather than her feeling brokenhearted, she starts to open back up to you again and you can get her back.

Using that approach is so much more effective than giving a woman an ultimatum of it's a relationship or nothing.

One of the reasons why is that if your ex currently doesn't feel attracted to you and you give her an ultimatum of it's a relationship or nothing, then she's not really going to care about the fact that she's losing you.

She doesn't feel attracted to you.

You feel attracted to her, you want her back, you want to have a better relationship with her, but she's not even feeling the fundamental feeling of attraction.

The sexual and romantic attraction between you and her isn't mutual.

You're feeling it, but she's not.

So, if you give her the ultimatum of a relationship or nothing, she's almost certainly just going to walk away and then move on without you.

3. Don't be her comfort friend

A lot of guys who are in the friend zone with their ex girlfriend or wife make this mistake.

They are always there to listen with her, text her as much as she wants, whenever she wants and essentially help her out and be there for her.

That's being a comfort friend.

It's not what makes a woman feel sexually and romantically turned on by a man.

What you need to be aware of is that some women keep their ex guy around for their own comfort after the break up.

She might tell him things like, "I'm not interested in dating anyone else right now. I'm just spending a lot of time on my own. I don't want to be in a relationship at the moment. I need some more time to find myself and find out what I want."

Yet, behind his back, she is flirting with other guys.

She might be on Tinder or online dating.

She might be going out with her girlfriends and meeting guys.

She might be opening herself up to be set up on blind dates or she might actually be going on dates with guys who have an interest in her.

So many guys end up in a situation where they're being that comfort friend to their ex woman and being there whenever she wants to talk and reach out, but the guy isn't making her feel sexually and romantically attracted again.

She knows that she doesn't have those type of feelings for him because he hasn't really changed.

He's essentially using the same type of approach to attraction that got him dumped in the first place.

For example, giving her too much power, being too nice to her, not being able to put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way and not really knowing how to make her feel like a feminine sexy girl around him.

She feels more neutral around him, more like a friend or more like a big sister to him.

As a result, she doesn't feel that draw.

She doesn't feel like she has to be with him in a sexual and romantic way.

In many cases, the woman also doesn't feel like she has to be loyal to him in any way.

She might say to her ex that she's not interested in dating anyone else at the moment and just wants to be alone, but that doesn't mean she is being 100% truthful to him.

After all, she might not want to tell him about her plans to start dating again or the guys that she's interested in because she doesn't want to hurt her ex's feelings.

Alternatively, she doesn't want him to potentially get angry or start begging and pleading for her to not go and hook up with another guy and to give him another chance.

So, she just says to him that she's not interested in dating anyone else and just wants to be on her own at the moment.

That's a case where she isn't being truthful.

If she is actually being truthful and doesn't want to date anyone at the moment, all it usually takes is for her to meet a guy who makes her feel sexually and romantically attracted and her thoughts about dating suddenly change.

She suddenly goes from not wanting to date, not wanting to have sex, not wanting to be in a relationship to hooking up with a new guy and then her ex gets left behind.

So, don't fall into the trap of being her comfort friend who is essentially being there for her in a nice, supportive way and not making her feel sexually and romantically attracted.

You need to use the so-called friendship to be turning her on sexually.

You need to be making her feel attracted to you in new and interesting ways, so she feels drawn to you and doesn't want to lose what she's now feeling with you.

If you don't level up your ability to attract her and are using the same old approach, then she's most likely going to continue to just feel a friendly type of emotion towards you.

She's not going to have that sexual and romantic draw, that sexual and romantic pull towards you.

4. Understand why maintaining a friendship with your ex is a good idea

Don't worry about the term 'friendship.'

It's not actually going to be a friendship.

It's going to be a courtship because you are going to use the friendship to seduce her back into a sexual romantic relationship with you.

Being friends with your ex is also a good idea because it keeps communication open between you and her.

When the communication is open, you can use that to re-attract her.

Being friends with her is not about accepting whatever you can get with her.

It's not a desperate move.

Instead, it's about you being in control of the process rather than leaving it all up to her and hoping that she comes back to you one day, hoping that she eventually misses you and realizes that you're the one for her.

You don't want to put yourself in that position where you're constantly trying to impress her and be nice to her and jump through all of her hopes in order to hopefully get a chance with her.

What you need to do is fast track the process.

Make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, get the feelings of sexual and romantic attraction flowing again and make her fall back in love with you.

When you do that, she'll naturally want to be back with you now rather than just being friends with you.

5. Regain your position of power

[image: Regain your position of power]

So, how can you regain the position of power?

What you need to do is make her feel more attracted to you than you feel attracted to her.

At the same time, you need to make sure that you're not giving her the impression that you hope she will give you another chance or that you hope she will select you.

You have to give her the impression based on your vibe and behavior that you already know that you're good enough for her.

You already know that she feels attracted to you and she is thinking of giving you another chance.

Give her the impression that you know she is feeling a lot of attraction for the new and improved you.

[image: Exit the friend zone by making her feel sexually attracted to you again]

What you need to understand is that women love being in the position where they are feeling so attracted and in love with a guy that they can't stop thinking about him and wanting to be around him.

You can make a woman feel that way if you stop giving her the power of being the selector.

Stop looking to her for a decision of whether she wants to be with you in a sexual relationship or not.

Just make her feel turned on by the new and improved you and she will naturally want to be with you in a sexual and romantic way.

The thing is, women actually prefer it that way.

A woman wants to be in the position where she is subtly chasing the relationship, where she feels the need to constantly impress her man.

The man is being good to her.

He is respecting her and he's treating her well, but he is in the position of power.

She wants to be with him even more than he wants to be with her.

He loves her.

He feels attracted to her and wants to be with her, but she feels that need to chase him a little bit.

She feels the need to impress him a little bit.

That's the type of approach that will absolutely work when you are in the friend zone with your ex.

Learn More?

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you use the techniques from the program, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She will fall back in love with you and want to be with you in a sexual and romantic relationship.

The Man Leads the Dynamic

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is just to remind you that in most situations, it's the guy who places himself in the friend zone.

He hands over his power to the woman as being the selector.

He hopes to get chosen by her, rather than being in the power position and knowing that he is good enough for her and simply focusing on making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to him.

So, rather than hoping that your ex selects you one day and gives you a chance, take control of the situation.

Be in the position of power.

Focus on making her feel so attracted to you that she just has to be with you sexually and romantically.

She wants to be back in your arms again.

[image: Get out of the friend zone with your ex and get to a kiss]

She wants to kiss you.

She wants to be in a sexual relationship with you.

She doesn't want some other woman feeling attracted to the new and improved you and stealing you away from her.

She wants to claim you as her own.

You can make her feel that way.

So, stop placing yourself in the friend zone and regain your position of power.

Be the one who is making her feel so attracted to you that she wants to have another chance with you and doesn't want to lose you.

5 Tips on How to Get Your Ex Back When She Doesn't Love You Anymore

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How can you get your ex back if she doesn't love you anymore?

The feelings of love just aren't there anymore.

She used to look into your eyes and enjoy being in your arms and she would have told you that she loved you.

She would have been excited and happy to have been with you back then.

It would have felt good.

Yet, it just doesn't feel like that anymore.

She's not in love with you.

So, how can you get her back?

1. Understand that feelings of romantic love can be created

The way that it works is...

- If a woman is feeling respect and attraction for a man, love flows.
- If she is losing respect and attraction for him, her love begins to fade.
- If she has lost all respect and attraction for him, her love stops flowing.

When a woman has lost all respect and attraction for a man, she doesn't feel like she's in love with him anymore.

She disconnects from the feelings of love.

What a man needs to understand is that he is creating that effect.

So, when it comes to getting an ex back, if you make your ex feel respect and attraction for you again, she naturally begins to feel like she loves you or at least can love you if she opens back up to you again.

On the other hand, if you use the same old approach to attraction that got you dumped in the first place, then she's going to remain closed up.

She won't be feeling respect and attraction for you and therefore, she won't feel like she is in love with you or could love you again.

Essentially, the love that she feels for you is something that you create based on your approach to her. If your approach to your ex causes her to feel little or no respect and attraction for you, then she's not going to love you.

On the other hand, if your approach makes her feel strong rushes of respect and attraction for the new and improved you, then she's either going to fall back in love with you, or feel sparks of love and realize that she can fall back in love with you if she opens herself up to you again.

So, just to be clear here, the love that she feels for you is something that you create based on your approach to her.

For example, a guy had become too insecure and emotionally sensitive in the relationship.

As a result, she wasn't able to feel respect and attraction for him and she fell out of love with him.

Just like other women, she's not attracted to emotional sensitivity and insecurity in men.

So, if he wants to create feelings of romantic love inside of her, he needs to quickly become more confident, more emotionally masculine and more emotionally ballsy.

He needs to man up, essentially.

If he's able to do that right away when in a relationship, it's going to avoid a breakup.

If he's already been broken up with, he needs to quickly get that area of himself fixed and he needs to interact with her and let her experience it.

When he interacts with her and she can see that he is now a very confident, emotionally masculine and emotionally ballsy man, she is naturally going to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

When that happens, she will automatically start to experience feelings of love for him.

Another example is where a guy was too closed up emotionally in the relationship and didn't show his woman enough love.

In a case like that, he needs to quickly become a more emotionally mature and open man without pressuring her to get back into a relationship with him.

In cases like that, many guys make the mistake of not being very emotionally open during the relationship and not showing enough love, to then being way too emotionally open and showing way too much love.

The woman then gets turned off because the guy is acting desperate.

Women don't feel attracted to desperation in men.

So, if a guy is in a situation like that, he needs to quickly start being a more emotionally mature and emotionally open man, but he needs to chill.

He needs to relax.

He needs to take it easy and not be pouring his heart out to her and showing her way too much love and appreciation to the point where it appears desperate.

Women aren't attracted to desperation in a man, so using that type of approach won't work.

What you need to understand is that feelings of romantic love can be created.

For example, if a guy's in a situation where his ex woman really has her guard up, he needs to understand that he can create feelings of romantic love inside of her.

He needs to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him and when he does, she will begin to feel sparks of love.

Before he knows it, her guard will come down, she will open back up to him and she'll start feeling like she is in love with him again.

This happens because a man can create feelings of romantic love inside of a woman.

You don't have to leave it in her hands and hope that she comes back to you.

You can actually make her feel respect, attraction and love for you again.

When she does, getting back with her is a natural and easy process.

The second tip on how to get your ex back when she doesn't love you anymore is to...

2. Get clear on the subtle ways that you have been turning her off

[image: Get clear on the subtle ways that you have been turning her off]

As you may know, women are more attracted to how a man makes her feel when he's interacting with her rather than how he looks.

A woman can feel some attraction to a man's looks, but they are not merely as important as how he makes her feel based on his thinking, his words, his behavior and his actions.

A woman's attraction for you is largely based on who you are on the inside and how that comes out on the outside.

If you're insecure on the inside, that's going to come out as insecure words, feelings, behavior and actions and it's going to turn a woman off.

If you're confident on the inside, the same rule applies.

So, if you want to get your ex back when she doesn't love you anymore, it's very important to understand where you've been turning her off in subtle ways.

It really comes down to your behavior, your actions, your attitude and the way that you've approached interactions with her and other people.

That is what women really get turned on or turned off about when it comes to men.

So, here are some examples of subtle ways that a guy may have turned his woman off when in a relationship with her.

- He lacked confidence in how he talked to her or others.
- His body language was weak, unsure, nervous, stressed, needy, desperate, or feminine.
- He didn't have the emotional masculinity to be the leader of the relationship between him and her.
- He was unable to pass her simple confidence tests (e.g. when she would roll her eyes at him, when she would play hard-to-get during a conversation, when she would pretend to be annoyed about things that she wasn't really annoyed about and so on). Rather than remaining confident and being composed, he would get flustered, angry or irritated at her for behaving in that way. He didn't understand that she was simply testing his confidence and trying to see how much of a man he really was on the inside.
- He was unable to make her feel feminine because he was too neutral or he was a bit feminine in how he thought, felt, behaved and acted.
- He made her feel neutral because he treated her more like a friend or a buddy rather than treating her like his sexy, feminine girl.
- He was too emotionally needy.
- He was clingy, jealous and way too dependent on her for his sense of happiness and identity and value as a man in this world.

- He tended to get annoyed or angry about things that she thought he shouldn't get so worked up about (e.g. when he was watching the news or when someone cut him off in traffic).
- He expected her to respect him at all times, but didn't offer her the same respect in return.

It's important that you understand the subtle ways that you were turning her off during the relationship and may have been turning off since the breakup.

When you understand why she was really turned off by you and why she really fell out of love, you can then make the right changes and have the most impact on her.

If you change things that she doesn't really care about, then she's not going to feel motivated to get back with you.

For example, if you were already a good boyfriend or husband and you're trying to be even nicer and more generous and more giving, then it's most likely not going to hit the mark.

You have to understand the subtle things about your thinking, behavior and actions that have been turning her off and then adjust those things.

Now, for some guys, that might seem a little bit difficult.

However, it's actually very easy.

Most of the subtle behaviors that turn women off are connected to core issues in a man.

For example, when a man lacks confidence in himself and feels unworthy of his woman, it'll cause all sorts of problems and turn her off in many subtle ways.

For example, he'll become jealous, he may become controlling, he'll be emotionally sensitive, he'll be needy and so on.

He doesn't need to fix all of those things individually.

Instead, he simply needs to improve his confidence and belief in himself.

He needs to believe that he is worthy of her.

He needs to have that confidence in himself, and as a result, all of the connected problems will begin to wither away.

He will no longer be feeding his insecurity and jealousy and neediness with his lack of belief in himself.

Instead, he will be feeding his self-assurance, his self-esteem and his confidence.

In reaction to that, his woman will naturally start to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

She will feel differently about him.

She will look at him differently.

She will think about him differently and as a result, her guard will come down.

She will no longer feel like it's not worth it for her to get back into a relationship with him.

She will feel drawn to him.

She will feel attracted and he can then get her back.

3. Don't try to get a relationship before she is fully re-attracted

[image: Don't try to get a relationship before she is fully re-attracted]

A common mistake that guys make is that they start to make their ex woman feel some attraction and then go straight for the kill.

The guy's pushing for a relationship, telling her how much she means to him and trying to get her to commit to being together in a serious relationship again.

Don't do that if your woman broke up with you because she didn't love you anymore.

Let her really want it.

Let her feel drawn to you and be the one who is pushing for the relationship more than you.

She doesn't want to lose the feelings that she is experiencing now around you.

She's feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction.

The love is flowing back again.

She feels great and she doesn't want to lose that.

As a result, she's naturally going to be wanting to push for a relationship.

She's going to try to make it happen.

Just make sure that you maintain your composure and don't jump the gun when she starts showing a little bit of interest.

Why?

Well, if you suddenly start pushing for a relationship, she might realize that she's making it too easy for you to get her back.

She may then start to say things like, "I'm feeling confused. I'm not sure if we should be doing this. I think I need more time to think about it," or, "I should go."

She then makes up an excuse why she has to be somewhere with someone else or go do something else.

So, the best way to approach it is to continue to build on her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, but don't push for a committed relationship.

Don't try to get her to commit to being with you again.

Just let her really want it.

Allow her to feel the excitement of really wanting you and the relationship as she falls back in love with you.

If you do that, she will make it so much easier for you to get her back.

She won't want to play mind games and play hard to get because she will want the relationship just as much as you do.

4. Don't try to get her back just via text

If you just stick to text, you will almost always get stuck in conversations that go nowhere and your woman will eventually go cold and stop replying.

So, make sure that you're willing to go beyond the texts where you actually meet up in person.

The real magic happens when you re-attract her in person and you get her to hug you and kiss you and want to have sex with you again and then have sex with you.

That's when things really happen quickly.

However, if you just stick to text, it may go on for weeks, months and even longer than that.

During that time, she may move on and fall in love with a new guy and then completely go cold on you and stop replying altogether.

5. Avoid talking about your feelings for her before you and her are back together

[image: Avoid talking about your feelings for her before you are fully back together]

A lot of guys get this wrong and end up losing their chance with their woman.

As you would know, men and women are different.

Women feel attracted to things about men that are different to what men feel attracted to in women.

It really is different.

For example, if a man broke up with a woman and she contacted him telling him how much she loves him and how much he means to her, it might not necessarily result in her getting him back, but it's not going to turn him off like it would turn a woman off if a guy sent something like that to her.

Women don't like it when they break up with a man and he then sends a long letter or a long email expressing all these feelings for her.

One of the reasons why is that romantic gestures from a man are only appealing to a woman when she feels attracted to him.

When a woman breaks up with the guy, she usually doesn't feel attracted to him anymore.

In your case, she doesn't love you anymore, which means that she stopped feeling respect for you, she doesn't feel attracted to you and she doesn't love you.

So, if you're talking about your feelings for her and telling her how much she means to you prior to getting back with her, it's not going to go down well.

She's not going to enjoy hearing that.

A general rule to go by is to focus on getting her back first and then focus on the romantic side of the relationship.

There's nothing wrong with telling your ex woman that you love her and you miss her if she asks you as long as you say it in a masculine type of way.

For example, if she asks, "Do you still love me?" it's best to be honest, real and masculine about it.

So, if she were to ask you something like, "Do you still love me?" it's best to say something like, "Yeah, of course I still love you."

Alternatively, you can make her feel some attraction by using humor and being confident by saying something like, "Love you? No way. I hate you now."

You can say that with a smile and she will obviously know that you're joking and then have a bit of a laugh. Then you can say, “Just kidding. Of course I still love you.”

Now, compare that to saying it in a soppy, romantic type of way.

She asks, “Do you still love me?” and the guy says, “Oh, yes. I’ve never stopped loving you. I miss you all the time. I can’t think and sleep properly and all I want to be with is you. I’ve never loved a woman as much as I love you. You mean the world to me. What we had is special,” and so on.

There’s a big difference in that.

For some guys who don’t understand how a woman’s attraction works, they might feel like it’s the right thing to do to tell her how he feels in depth.

However, I’m telling you now that it’s not the right thing to do in terms of making her feel attracted and actually getting her back.

Women do not feel attracted to the same things about men that we feel attracted to about women.

You really have to use a different approach.

You’ve got to use a masculine approach if you want a woman to naturally feel respect, attraction and love for you.

Learn more?

Okay, I hope you’ve enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you’d like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn the quickest, easiest and most effective way to get a woman back.

At the moment, your ex doesn’t love you, so you might think that it’s impossible for you to get her back, but it’s not.

You can literally create feelings of romantic love inside of her.

You are in control of the process.

It comes down to what you say and do.

When you use the techniques from the program, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

As a result, the love will begin to flow once again.

She will fall back in love with you and she will enjoy it.

So, be confident in yourself and know that you can get her back.

Other guys in your situation have done it and you can do it too.

The Spark That Begins to Change Her Mind

[image: The spark that begins to change her mind]

One final point that I want to make for you is that when a woman breaks up with a guy because she doesn’t love him anymore, all it usually takes in most cases to change that is a spark of respect and attraction.

When a woman feels some respect and attraction for a guy, she naturally starts to feel love for him again.

However, if a woman doesn't feel respect and attraction and a guy is trying to tell her how much he loves her and trying to be romantic with her, she's not going to enjoy that.

She's not going to feel motivated to get back with him.

The love isn't going to be mutual.

You can make her love you again, but just make sure that you approach it in the correct order.

Make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you first and then the love will start to flow again.

What she may not understand right now is that the love you are going to make her feel is going to be stronger, more powerful and more enjoyable than the love she used to feel for you.

This is next level love.

The reason why is that you are going to level up as a man.

You are going to quickly improve as a man and attract her in new and interesting ways.

She's going to experience feelings that she's never felt for you before.

[image: Getting your ex to fall back in love with you by reawakening her feelings of attraction]

It's going to be enjoyable for both you and her.

So, if your ex doesn't love you at the moment, don't worry, you can change that.

Feelings of romantic love can be created.

When you interact with her and you're attracting her in new and more interesting ways, she is going to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

As a result, the love will start flowing again.

You and her will then get back together naturally and easily.

It won't be a struggle.

It won't be about you trying to convince her to give you another chance.

She will want to give you another chance because she will be in love with you again.

So, if your ex doesn't currently love you, don't give up.

You can make her love you again.

You can create feelings of romantic love inside of her again and you can get her back.

The Horrible Truth About the No Contact Rule

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The No Contact Rule is a technique that some people try to use to get their ex back after a breakup or a divorce.

It's essentially about cutting off contact for 30 or 60 days.

Unfortunately for men, it usually doesn't work to get their ex woman back.

You will understand that as I explain these five little-known facts about the No Contact Rule...

1. It works differently for men and women

[image: The No Contact Rule works differently for men and women]

One of the reasons why the No Contact Rule works differently for men and women is that men and women usually break up with each other for different reasons.

For example, one of the common reasons why a man will break up with a woman is that he will be in a situation where his woman isn't treating him well anymore.

She's not being affectionate, she's not interested in sex anymore and she's essentially being a pain in the butt.

She's not respecting him and appreciating him like she used to, so he decides to go ahead and dump her.

He hopes that it will teach her a lesson and make her want to change and be a better woman for him.

He hopes that it will get her to come crawling back to him and he will then be in a position of power and they'll have a better relationship as a result.

That can work if the woman actually comes back.

However, not every woman comes back after being dumped.

Additionally, sometimes a woman knows exactly what the guy is up to and doesn't want to have to come crawling back and give him the power in the relationship.

So, she decides to cut off contact and see if he'll come crawling back to her.

When a woman is in that situation where she has been dumped by a guy like that, if she cuts off contact with him and doesn't contact him for 30 or 60 days, the guy will usually regret breaking up with her.

He was hoping that by breaking up with her, she would change, she would be more submissive and attentive and loving, but she just went cold.

She didn't contact him.

He starts to worry that she's going to get out there and meet new guys, have sex and move on without him.

Meanwhile, he's sitting around thinking about her, missing her and regretting breaking up with her.

So, what does he do?

In most situations, a guy will then text his ex woman or give her a call and meet up with her and she'll be able to get him back.

So, the No Contact Rule works well for a woman in that situation.

She was able to make her man panic and worry that she was moving on simply by not contacting him.

However, the same rules do not apply when a man is trying to get a woman back that is no longer attracted to him.

In most cases, when a woman breaks up with a man, it's not because she wants to gain power over him.

It's because she is no longer attracted to him.

So, a common scenario that happens with the No Contact Rule when men try to use it is as follows.

A woman breaks up with a man because she is no longer attracted to him > He then cuts off contact with her and hopes that it will make her miss him and come crawling back > She doesn't really miss him because she's no longer attracted to him > She doesn't feel motivated to go back to a guy that she's not attracted to > She opens herself up to new guys and moves on without him.

Now, I will point out that no contact can work on some women to get them back.

Where it does work is when a woman is still attracted to her ex guy.

She doesn't really want to break up with him, but they broke up after a fight and she starts to miss him.

He's not contacting her, she can't handle it, so she contacts him and they'll then catch up and get back together.

However, in most ex back situations where guys actually need help, that isn't the case at all.

The most common scenario is where a woman broke up with a guy because she lost respect, attraction and love for him.

She doesn't have strong feelings for him anymore or she doesn't have any feelings for him anymore.

She just doesn't want anything to do with him.

So, when a guy uses the No Contact Rule and hopes that she might come crawling back to him, she doesn't.

She doesn't have any motivation to want to be back with him.

She's not attracted to him, she's not in love with him, she's not missing him and she's relieved that he's not contacting her and trying to get her back.

So, she just moves on and he gets left behind.

Okay, the next little-known fact about the No Contact Rule...

2. It was originally designed to help a couple get over each other and move on

For decades, relationship counselors, therapists and psychologists have been suggesting the No Contact approach as a way of helping couples get over each other or create space so they can figure out what they want.

It has never been designed as a strategy for men to get any woman back after a breakup.

In fact, the No Contact approach usually only works in the woman's favor.

For example, many times the therapist, psychologist or relationship counselor will notice that the woman doesn't want to be with the guy anymore.

The counselor wants to help the woman get away from her ex guy, so she suggests that the guy stop contacting her for 30, 60 or even 90 days.

The woman can then use the time apart to find a replacement guy and be able to tell her ex guy that she doesn't want anything to do with him anymore because she's in a new relationship.

Of course, sometimes it's necessary for a therapist or a counselor to protect a woman like that.

Most guys are good guys and will change and improve, but there are some guys out there who won't change and are just going to continue hurting the woman or turning her off or abusing her and so on.

So, it's understandable that a therapist, psychologist or relationship counselor might recommend the No Contact Rule as a way of helping the woman get away from the guy.

However, in most cases, the No Contact Rule is recommended as a way of a couple creating space so they can either get over each other or they can decide what they want after they've gone through that no contact period.

3. Most guys don't heal during the no contact period and end up developing insecurities

For men, one of the hopes about the No Contact Rule is that during the 30 or 60 days, they will heal from the breakup.

A guy will feel better about himself, he'll feel more confident and he'll be able to interact with his ex woman and get her back.

Unfortunately, that isn't the result that most guys get.

What happens for most guys is that while cutting off contact with their ex woman, they are essentially sitting around, thinking about her and missing her all the time.

A guy can't get her off his mind. He's worried that she might have sex with a new guy, fall in love with him and move on.

He's counting down the days until he can contact her again and it just doesn't feel good.

Time seems to be going so slow and his worries about her moving on just seem to be getting worse.

He can't get rid of the feeling of wanting her back.

He misses her, he thinks about her all the time and just wants her back, yet, he's using the No Contact approach.

He's cutting off contact and hoping that it works.

Unfortunately, for most guys, they get dumped because the woman isn't attracted to them anymore.

So, when a guy cuts off contact, she doesn't come running back.

In many cases, a guy will wait for 30 days and his woman still hasn't contacted him, so he will contact her and she won't reply.

Alternatively, she might reply initially and then go cold.

In other cases, she'll reply initially and then block him.

So, he's wasted 30 days sitting around, feeling stressed out and has simply helped her get over him and potentially move on without him.

Now, at this point, some guys might be wondering, what should they do instead of cutting off contact for 30 or 60 days?

[image: No Contact is an extreme approach to use and often backfires for men]

Should they be constantly contacting her and desperately chasing her?

No.

Completely cutting off contact for 30 or 60 days is just as extreme as desperately chasing her.

You don't actually need to use either of those approaches to get your ex woman back.

What I recommend is a more balanced approach to the situation.

That is where you give her 3 to 7 days of space and during that time, you rapidly improve yourself.

You improve your ability to attract her.

Then you contact her, re-attract her and get her back.

In many ex back cases, it works well for a woman to completely cut off contact with her ex man for 30 or 60 days.

However, in most situations where a man is trying to get his woman back, he doesn't need to go to that extreme.

In fact, if he goes to that extreme, he will almost certainly lose his woman because she will simply move on without him.

As you may have guessed, I'm not a fan of the No Contact Rule when it comes to men getting women back.

The reason why is that I see, day in and day out, the results of men trying that approach to get their ex woman back.

Pretty much every guy who tries it ends up disappointed.

The woman simply moves on.

What I see work day in and day out is when a guy quickly levels up, improves his ability to attract her and interacts with her.

He interacts with her, makes her feel attracted to him again and then she opens back up to him.

She has a reason to want to get back with him.

She's feeling attracted to him in new, more interesting ways.

There's something there between him and her now.

There's a spark, there's a reason for her to get back with him.

She's feeling drawn to him.

She wants to explore the feelings that she's now having around him.

That's what I see work day in and day out, the guys who level up by improving their ability to attract their ex woman, interacting with her and making her feel attracted again and then guiding her through the rest of the ex back process.

They get her back into a relationship by taking control of the situation rather than cutting off contact and hoping that she comes running back or that she mans up herself and takes the lead and guides him back into a relationship.

4. When a woman is ignored by the man that she wanted to break up with, she usually just moves on

When women use the No Contact Rule, they usually have pretty good results with it.

On the other hand, when a man uses the No Contact Rule on an ex woman, he rarely gets her back.

Some guys do get their ex woman back simply by not contacting her, but most guys don't.

The main reason why is that when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually not a power play.

Sometimes it is a power play and she wants to get her guy treating her better, but in most cases, when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's because she doesn't have feelings for him anymore.

She no longer feels enough respect, attraction and love for him to warrant being in a relationship.

She doesn't feel like it's justified for her to stay in a relationship with a guy who she no longer feels respect, attraction and love for.

So, when he doesn't contact her, she simply moves on.

5. Cutting off contact for 30 or 60 days won't make your ex forget about why she broke up with you

For men, one of the hopes with the No Contact Rule is that their ex woman will forget all about why she broke up with him, will be missing him and will then contact him and want him back.

Unfortunately, it doesn't work that way in most situations.

Most women don't suddenly forget that they were turned off by their ex guy.

She doesn't suddenly forget that he was too insecure, too emotionally sensitive and wasn't manly enough for her.

If she broke up with him for those reasons, she's going to remember those reasons.

Additionally, if he wasn't treating her well and he ended up being a bit of an asshole to her, she's going to remember that.

She might fondly remember some of the good times, but she's not going to be stupid.

Women are just as intelligent as men, in most cases, of course.

Women have memories just like we men do and they're not stupid, in most cases.

Women can remember why they broke up with a guy.

They can play that movie back in their mind and remember that they were turned off by a guy because he was too insecure, wasn't manly enough and didn't create a spark with her.

She can remember that.

Of course, some women do force themselves to forget about the bad things that turned them off about a guy because she can't move on without her ex.

She has tried to get out there and date and hasn't been able to find a suitable replacement guy.

So, she forces herself to not focus on the negative memories and focus on the positive memories and then she contacts her ex.

That does happen in a very small percentage of situations, but in most cases, the woman simply gets out there and meets new guys and moves on without her ex.

This is why I always recommend that men take control of the ex back process rather than leaving it all in the woman's hands by cutting off contact with her and hoping that she takes the lead and gets you back.

Taking control of the process is about interacting with her and making her feel attracted to you again. When you interact with her and reawaken her feelings for you, she then has a reason to get back with you now.

You don't have to sit around worrying for 30 or 60 days hoping that she doesn't have sex with a new guy and move on without you.

You can get her back pretty much right away.

You interact with her, you make her feel attracted to you again and get her feeling like she's in love with you again.

As a result, her guard comes down, you hook up with her sexually and you can get back into a relationship with her.

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn the quickest, easiest and most effective way to get a woman back now.

When you use the techniques from the program, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She will fall back in love with you and want to give the relationship another chance now.

Choosing the right approach for you now

One final point that I want to make during this video, is that it's up to you what approach you take to get your ex back from this point onwards.

If you feel as though cutting off contact with her will result in her missing you terribly and contacting you and wanting to get back with you, then go ahead and do that.

However, if you're in a situation like most guys are, where your woman doesn't have strong feelings for you anymore or doesn't have any feelings for you anymore, then just understand that the No Contact Rule is almost certainly not going to work for you.

What I see work for guys in your situation is where a guy interacts with his woman again and makes her feel attracted.

He reawakens her feelings.

He reactivates her feelings.

She starts feeling attracted to him in new and more interesting ways.

He has leveled up as a man.

He's so much more attractive and appealing to her now because he's no longer making the type of mistakes that caused her to feel turned off by him before.

For example, he's so much more confident now.

When he interacts with her, he creates a sexual vibe between him and her.

She can't stop herself from wanting to be in his arms, kiss him and hookup with him sexually.

She wants to get back in a relationship with him now.

So, use the approach that you think will work for you.

If you think that cutting off contact will cause her to come running back, go ahead and do it.

On the other hand, if you think that she's probably just going to move on and isn't going to be worried about you not contacting her, then I recommend that you do something about it.

I recommend that you take control of the ex back process by interacting with her and making her feel attracted to you again.

Give her a reason to want to get back with you now.

7 Ex Back Success Stories

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

In this video, I'm going to provide you with 7 success stories from men who got their woman back.

Before I do that, I want to ask you a couple of questions:

Are you personally worried that you are not going to be able to get your ex back?

Do you feel like your situation is too different and nothing will work to get her back?

Most guys think that way because everyone's situation is unique.

Your situation with her is unique, but the process to get her back into a relationship with you is the same.

If you've never got a woman back into a relationship after a serious breakup, you might think that it's not possible.

You might think that it's too difficult, can't be done, there's no way that a woman will go back to a guy after she breaks up with him out of a serious relationship.

Yet, I'm here to tell you that other guys are doing it and you can do it, too.

It's sort of like the 4-minute mile.

Before Roger Bannister broke the record and ran a mile in under 4 minutes, many doctors and scientists said it was physically impossible to run a mile in less than 4 minutes.

Yet, one man changed everyone's opinion when he did it.

Roger Bannister was running a race in 1954 and wondering why the other runners were going so slow.

At three quarters of a mile, he wasn't tired and it was feeling easy to him.

He looked at the clock and saw that the race time was at 3 minutes and 0.7 seconds.

He then realized that if he ran the last lap in 59 seconds or under, he could run a mile in under 4 minutes.

So, he sprinted away from everyone else and made history. He ran a mile in 3 minutes and 59.4 seconds.

Before Roger broke the record, many people, including scientists and doctors, thought that it was physically impossible for a man to run a mile in under 4 minutes.

Yet, to Roger, when he was running the race, he felt like the other runners were just accepting the fact that it couldn't be done.

They were pacing themselves.

They were thinking, "Well, you can't run that fast so why bother doing it?"

Yet, to him, he saw that it could be done and he did it.

The most interesting thing about this is that after he did it, everyone else started doing it.

For example, his record was broken 46 days later by John Landy with the time of 3 minutes, 57.9 seconds.

From then on, athletes started doing it all the time.

As of today, as I make this video, the current world record is 3 minutes, 43.13 seconds.

That's 16.27 seconds faster than Roger Bannister.

I've seen the same thing happen with men getting ex women back.

[image: Ex back success stories - example 1]

Most people in this world think that it's impossible for a man or a woman to get their ex back after a break up.

Yet, people are starting to learn how to do it and get it done and they're getting their ex back.

They're posting on my YouTube channel, they're sending me success stories to my site and people are starting to understand that it is actually possible.

[image: Ex back success stories - example 2]

I've got hundreds and hundreds of success stories from men who've used my method to get their woman back.

I'm not going to bore you with hundreds and hundreds of success stories.

I've randomly picked out seven success stories and if you listen to what the guys are saying, you'll start to understand how they are getting their ex woman back and how it will be possible for you too.

Ex Back Success Story #1

Okay, so here's the first one....

"I got my girlfriend back using your method. Nothing else worked for me except your approach. I got her back within a few days after watching your program because it pumped me up with confidence and I just knew I could re-attract her and get the job done and I did. I just wish I had found your site earlier because I wasted so much time trying other methods before I stumbled across your system. My girlfriend means the world to me. So, to have her back is priceless. Thank you for your help."

A couple of important things from that guy's success story, he was pumped up with confidence and he knew he could re-attract her, he had learned techniques on how to re-attract her and he went and got the job done.

What he was referring to with other things not working for him, I don't know what it is, but I'm assuming it's not contacting his ex woman.

Most guys try to do that because it's a very common thing that people talk about.

Yet, what I've found is that cutting off contact works better for women who want to get a man back.

For men who want to get a woman back, what usually happens is that if the guy doesn't re-attract his woman, she simply moves on.

She broke up with him because she wasn't attracted to him anymore, she wasn't in love with him, she didn't respect him and when he doesn't contact her, she doesn't really care about that and she just moves on.

Some guys do get their woman back by cutting off contact and not doing anything else, but it's only a very small percentage of guys who get that type of result.

The vast majority of guys don't get any result if they cut off contact and don't do anything else or cut off contact and then try to reach out 30 or 60 days later.

What usually happens, the woman doesn't reply or she blocks him or she is cold and rude and he gets nowhere.

So, just to quickly explain how my method is different, it's about attracting a woman.

It's about interacting with her and making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

That changes everything.

When you reactivate her feelings and the love starts flowing in her heart again and she starts looking at you with attraction in her eyes, then everything changes.

The whole game changes.

She drops her guard, she's easier to talk to, she's more open, she is open to hugging and kissing and hooking up sexually, she's open to meeting up with you, hanging out and getting back together.

It's just so much easier when you focus on her feelings rather than ignoring her and hoping that if you cut off contact, she might develop feelings.

What I'm talking about is actually making her have feelings, interacting with her and attracting her.

Next success story...

Ex Back Success Story #2

"Hi, Dan. Me and my wife are now back together and so happy. I'll be honest with you. I thought, after I went through your programs that they would be of no use to me. I couldn't have been more wrong. It got me in the right mindset and helped me through the toughest part of the breakup and showed me how to be a man that my wife would want. In all fairness, it just felt natural to be this way. So many, many thanks to you and the team at Modern Man because without you, it would have been impossible for me to get my wife back in my arms. So, if any of you guys are in Liverpool, England at any time, don't hesitate to contact me because I would like to take you guys out for a drink. You don't realize how much you have helped me and I'm eternally grateful. Thanks again from the happiest man in Liverpool, Matty."

Ex Back Success Story #3

"Hi, Dan. I got my ex back. Your system worked for me and it was easier than I thought it would be. I was led to believe by my friends that once a girl broke up with you that that was it, but now that I've done it, I can see what you see about attraction and relationships and love. Me and my girlfriend are now planning on moving in together and things are really good. So, my thanks to you for the brilliant program and advice. Gary from Portland, U.S.A."

So, one thing you might notice from the last two success stories there is that the guys are talking about how they approached attraction in a different way, how they were able to re-attract their woman and make their woman want them.

That is what it's all about.

You've got to be able to interact with her and make her feel attracted to you.

I get contacted all the time by guys who are saying these types of things.

"Hey, I used your approach, I re-attracted her and now we're back into a relationship."

That's how it should be.

You should be able to do it.

It should be simple...and it is.

Next one...

Ex Back Success Story #4

"I just wanted to say a quick thank you. After purchasing your Get Your Ex Back System, I successfully followed the steps and one might expect whilst making the necessary changes. I noticed a power shift after getting back together, which was natural after I'd been a bit too controlling on some issues, so, I needed to ease up. Gradually, I demonstrated to her that I was a capable man who she could look up to emotionally and she's now happy again with the relationship. I've also been able to reward her good girlfriend attributes with more attention for things I'm not so keen on without being too reactive."

Okay, so I'm not quite sure what he meant by the last sentence there.

As I said, these are randomly picked success stories from my success story page and couple from YouTube comments.

There are literally hundreds and hundreds of them.

[image: Ex back success stories - example 3]

Essentially, what the guy is saying, though, is that he was able to re-attract her.

He was able to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

As a result, she was able to start to love him again and give him another chance.

That is really how it works.

Okay, next one...

Ex Back Success Story #5

"Getting my ex back was a bit more complicated than other guys because of her abused past, but your system definitely worked for me. We were spending one day and an evening, a weekend together recently and having deep love making. She then rang tonight saying we were falling into our old pattern and maybe we should break up again, but I changed her mind based on my newfound confidence and understanding of how to really connect with the woman's mind. Anyway, she ended up saying she loved me multiple times and wants to be with me and address our niggles. That was the outcome. In conclusion, I wanted to thank you, Dan, as all your advice including the mistakes that guys make, etc., has really helped me a lot. Thank you, Dan. You're making a lot of couples very happy with your programs.

Kind regards, M Y."

So, that's an interesting success story there because sometimes a guy will get his woman back and she will start changing her mind about it.

A woman will sometimes do that to test her man's confidence and she wants to see whether he's going to start panicking and begging and pleading and getting insecure and clingy.

Alternatively, she might say it because she really isn't feeling that attracted to him.

So, he might not be doing a very good job of attracting her and in this guy's case, what he did is that he noticed she was changing.

he then stepped up his confidence, was able to re-attract her and make her tell him that she loved him multiple times and they stayed together.

Okay, next success story....

Ex Back Success Story #6

This guy writes a little bit differently than most people, but let's read it out.

"Sup, Dan. I worked through the system and managed to get my ex back without really completing the system. It worked a bit too well. I just want to say you're awesome and your products work like magic. Before I got your products, I was good with girls, but now, damn, I'm someone else. I got my ex back and I also got her to be as good of a girlfriend as she was before. Just want to say thank you and keep it up. MK."

And finally, the last success story for this post (more success stories here)...

Ex Back Success Story #7

"Hey, I just wanted to give you some feedback. My ex left me because she didn't love me. I watched your Get Your Ex Back Super System videos and it changed my life. I got her back in about 3 days because I became the man you spoke about. The sex is amazing now and she can't get enough of it. Thanks, Dan. I'm loving my new life. Dave."

Now, there are three interesting things about his success story.

One, he said that his ex left him because she didn't love him.

Two, he said he got her back in 3 days and three, he said the sex is now amazing and she can't get enough of it.

So, in terms of her leaving him because she didn't love him, this is where a lot of guys mess up.

They think that if a woman says, "I don't love you anymore, I don't have feelings for you anymore," then he can't do anything about that.

Yes, you can.

You can make her feel attracted to you again.

When you make a woman feel attracted to you again, she can then start to love you.

Feelings of love start to flow naturally when a woman feels respect and attraction for a guy.

This is something that you can make your ex feel for you again.

You can actually make her feel that way.

So, the second interesting thing about his success story is that he got his ex woman back in about 3 days.

Most guys think that it's impossible to get a woman back that quickly.

Most guys think that it's impossible to change that quickly and transform that quickly.

The reason why is that most guys don't get the help that I'm offering.

So, they don't have access to rapid transformation, rapid improvement.

What a lot of guys out there don't understand yet, is that you can quickly transform and level up as a man.

You don't have to cut off contact with your ex woman for 30 or 60 days and slowly, slowly get better and eventually be able to talk to her.

That is the old way of thinking where people used to assume that you had to cut off contact for 30 or 60 days and then start the ex back process.

It's sort of like prior to 1954 where people, doctors and scientists thought it was physically impossible for a man to run a mile in under 4 minutes.

People said, "No, no, it can't be done. It's physically impossible."

Likewise, some people out there think that, "No, no, you can't get an ex woman back quickly. You have to slowly recover for 30 or 60 days and take up hobbies, go to the gym and blah, blah, blah."

Here's the thing...

Some guys do need a bit more time to recover.

They might need 7 days or 2 weeks or maybe 3 weeks, but most of the guys who contact me say that they got their ex woman back very quickly.

Most guys get their woman back within days, within a week, within a couple of weeks and some guys within 3 weeks or so.

Some guys do take a little bit longer, but really that's in their hands.

They are taking their time with it and that's okay.

A guy can do that.

Yet, the most important thing is that a man can get his ex woman back, you really need to understand that.

So, if you're thinking that your situation is too different, it's impossible, she said she hates you, she doesn't have feelings for you, she doesn't want to be with you, she currently doesn't want to talk to you, get rid of all that.

What you've got to understand is that's what she was saying based on how she felt about you at the time.

Yet, you can change how she feels.

Okay, so the third interesting thing about the last success story there was that he said, "The sex is now amazing and she can't get enough of it."

Why is that?

It's most likely because he has leveled up his ability to attract her.

He is now able to be more confident, more emotionally masculine and make her feel more feminine and girly in his presence.

He's most likely more able to just give her the pure masculine-feminine experience that women are yearning for.

Some guys who are getting their ex woman back already know how to do that. They're very masculine guys, they're very confident and they don't need to improve that.

However, some guys really do need to improve that and when they do, it has a dramatic effect on the way that the woman feels attracted and how interested she is in sex and being affectionate.

How About You?

Do you think that it's possible for you to get your ex back, or do you feel like your situation is too different and there's just too much that is going on between you and her and you can't get her back?

What I want you to know is that guys contact me every day about this and just the other day on YouTube, for example, a man commented saying that he got his ex-wife back after separation.

[image: Ex back success stories - example 4]

Can you imagine what it's like going through a separation with a wife?

You've been together for a long time, she has seen all of your bad habits, she has been turned off in many ways and she gets to the point where she separates and leaves the house or kicks you out and doesn't want to be with you anymore.

This man got his ex-wife back after a separation.

Most people out there think that, okay, when a husband and wife separate, then it's impossible to get back together.

That's it, it's over.

Yet, it's not impossible if you focus on re-attracting her.

If you reactivate her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

When you do that, she looks at you in a completely different way.

Of course, this applies whether it's your ex girlfriend or ex wife.

It's the same thing.

I know that your woman is unique, your situation is unique and every guy likes to feel like his situation is just more difficult and can't be fixed.

Really, it can be fixed.

I understand that you might feel like your situation is just too different, though, but there's this that happened and that had happened and she said this and said that and she felt this way.

Just understand that when you interact with her again and you make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she will begin to change how she thinks and feels about you.

She literally will begin to change, it'll happen.

That's what happens when a woman is feeling respect and attraction for a man.

She starts to think differently about him, she starts to feel differently, she starts to become more open, she drops her guard and if the man knows what he's doing and he's able to guide her back into a relationship, he gets her back.

So, don't be like those people prior to 1954 that said it was impossible to run a mile in under 4 minutes.

Roger Bannister proved them all wrong and athletes since then have been doing it all the time all over the world.

The same thing applies with getting an ex back.

Most people out there think that it's impossible, but people are beginning to get their ex back, they're telling their friends, they're posting on my YouTube channel, for example, they're sending me success stories to the site and it's happening.

So, if you want to get your ex back, just understand that it is possible.

You really can do it.

Learn More?

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn the quickest, most effective and easiest way to get a woman back.

When you use the techniques from the system, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, her feelings will come back and you will make her feelings even stronger for you than they were before.

You really can do that.

Her guard will come down, she'll open back up to you and you will be able to get her back into a relationship.

Your Situation is Unique, But the Solution is the Same

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that I understand your situation is unique.

What happened between you and your woman didn't happen between any other couple out there.

You and her had a unique relationship, there were unique problems, there were subtle things that went on that eventually caused a break up.

However, the process to get her back is the same.

You make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and she starts to feel love for you again.

That might feel like it's completely, utterly impossible in your situation because of what she said to you.

“I don’t love you anymore. I don’t have feelings for you. I don’t want to be with you,” and so on. Yet, just think about what these other guys have been saying with their ex back success stories. Guys out there get dumped by a girlfriend or a wife and she doesn’t want anything to do with him anymore.

The guy then re-attracts her and makes her feel love again and gets her back into a relationship. That really can be done.

It happens every day all over the world and you can do it, too.

5 Tips on How to Get a Stubborn Ex Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How can you get a stubborn ex-girlfriend or ex-wife back?

No matter what you've tried so far, she just won't budge.

She won't give you another chance.

You've tried telling her how you felt, you've tried telling her that you would change, you've tried all sorts of things and it's just not working.

Don't worry.

You can change how she feels and you can make her want you back.

The first tip is...

1. Stop chasing a relationship

[image: Stop chasing a relationship]

Firstly, when I say stop chasing a relationship, I don't mean give up or cut off contact for 30 or 60 days.

That isn't going to help you.

What you need to do is stop chasing a relationship.

It's about the vibe that you're giving off.

It's about the way that you're coming across when you communicate with her.

What are the reasons why it comes down to a fundamental difference between men and women?

For example, imagine that you broke up with a girl and didn't want to be with her anymore.

She then started begging and pleading and promising to do whatever you wanted to hopefully give her another chance.

She was willing to change and do whatever you want and be really good to you and treat you really nicely if you can just give her another chance.

Would you give her another chance?

Many guys watching this video would say yes.

Some guys will say no and say, "When I break up with the girl, that's it. It's final. I'm not going to get back with her."

However, a lot of guys will say yes.

The reason why is that when a woman is begging and pleading and sucking up to a girl like that, it often empowers a man.

It makes him feel like, "Okay, cool. Now, I'm in charge. Now she's going to be really good to me. I practically own this girl now. I can do whatever I want and she's just going to put up with it."

So, in many cases, a guy might feel attracted and might feel a bit turned on by the fact that his woman is begging and pleading and chasing a relationship with him.

He might enjoy that.

However, the same doesn't apply for women when a guy is begging and pleading and chasing.

Some women will give a guy another chance if he's begging, pleading and chasing, but most women feel completely turned off by it.

That's a really big difference between men and women.

[image: Stop chasing a relationship]

Whereas a man can feel turned on by how submissive and compliant his woman is now being because she's begging and pleading and promising to do anything, a woman will feel repelled and turned off by how desperate and emotionally weak the guy is being.

What you need to understand is that the same fundamental rules apply whether you are picking up women in a relationship or trying to get your ex woman back.

For example, when picking up women, if a guy is trying too hard to impress a woman and be selected by her, she will reject him or play very hard to get.

On the other hand, when picking up women, if a guy believes in himself and makes the woman feel so attracted that she wants to be selected by him, then she will open up and make it much easier for him to hook up with her.

In a relationship, if a guy is trying too hard to impress his woman because he doesn't feel like he's good enough for her, she will lose respect for him, begin to treat him badly, stop being as affectionate and lose interest in the relationship.

On the other hand, in a relationship, if a man believes in himself and builds on the woman's feelings of respect, attraction and love, then she will try hard to impress him and maintain his interest while being a loving, affectionate and caring woman.

Now, when it comes to getting an ex back, the same fundamental rules apply.

If a guy is trying too hard to convince his ex woman to give him another chance and he's sucking up to her, she will reject him, be stubborn about her decision to remain broken up or play very hard to get.

On the other hand, when getting an ex back, if a guy believes in himself and makes her feel so attracted to him again that she feels like it would be her loss if she didn't get back with him, then she stops being so stubborn, opens back up and gives him another chance.

Women don't behave in that way because they're crazy or because they want to make your life difficult.

Women are simply reacting to their natural instincts.

It's a woman's natural instinct to want to reward confidence and self-belief in a man with sex, love and devotion.

A woman's natural instinct is to not reward insecurity, self-doubt and desperation with sex, love and devotion.

This is why guys get rejected when they're trying too hard to pick up women, it's why women lose respect and attraction in a relationship and it's why so many guys struggle to get their ex woman back.

Essentially, when a man puts the power in a woman's hands and he's hoping to be selected by her, he will almost always be rejected, dumped or left behind.

As I said, women don't behave in that way because they're crazy or they want to make your life difficult.

It's simply a woman's natural instinct to not reward insecurity, self-doubt and desperation in a man with her sex, love and devotion.

So, when it comes to getting an ex back, if a guy is chasing a relationship with a woman and begging and pleading and pouring his heart out to her and telling her how much she means to him and promising that he would change and do whatever she wants, then he's less likely to get her back.

She's going to be stubborn about her decision because she's going to feel turned off by him.

She won't be able to respect him because he's being so desperate and as a result, she won't be able to feel attracted to him.

So, what should the guy do instead?

Well, rather than chasing a relationship, a guy needs to believe in himself.

He needs to believe that he is worthy of her.

As a result, he will then start to behave in a more naturally attractive way to her.

He will be confident, he will have the balls to joke around with her, to mess with her, to flirt with her and to move in for a kiss if they're talking in person.

Essentially, rather than chasing and putting that pressure on her, you need to attract her so she feels drawn to you and she naturally comes back to you.

2. Rapidly change and improve while giving her space

A common mistake the guys make is that they cut off contact with their ex-girlfriend or ex-wife and hope that it works.

A guy hopes that if he just cuts off contact and doesn't do anything, she's going to miss him and she's going to want him back.

What happens in some cases is that when a guy cuts off contact, his woman eventually contacts him, but because he hasn't improved his ability to attract her, he turns her off again and then she goes cold and doesn't want to talk to him anymore.

So, what you need to get clear on is that while you give your woman a bit of space, you need to rapidly improve your ability to attract her.

Some guys can do that within 3 days, some guys can do it within a week, some guys can do it within 2 weeks or 3 weeks.

Whatever the case is for you, that's okay.

However, what I recommend is that you get it done quickly.

Don't waste too much time.

Don't cut off contact for a month or two and assume that you're just going to sit around waiting for you to contact her and she's not going to move on and fall in love with a new guy.

So many guys contact me and say, "I cut off contact with my ex woman for 30 days or 60 days and she moved on. What do I do now?"

When a guy is in a situation like that, he can still get her back by re-attracting her, but he's just made it a little bit more difficult for himself.

What I recommend is that if you give your woman space, you rapidly improve your ability to attract her.

So, say for example, a guy turned his woman off in a relationship because he was too emotionally sensitive.

In that case, he needs to quickly improve his confidence, his emotional masculinity, his emotional toughness.

Another example, if a guy took his woman for granted and basically expected her to be nice to him and respect him, but he wasn't giving the same back to her, then he needs to become a less emotionally selfish man.

So, rather than everything being about him and he's got to get, he's got to have, everyone has to give to him and he's not giving anything, he has to become a little bit more loving and giving and care and listen to people.

Just generally give a crap about people and things rather than being so selfish.

He doesn't have to go out there and save the world, feed the hungry or fly over to a poor country and save everyone.

He doesn't have to do that.

Instead, he just has to change from within and start being a more loving, caring, giving person in a genuine way.

It has to be sincere and genuine rather than an act.

The reason why is that if you have ever been interacting with someone and they were faking that they cared about you, you are most likely able to tell.

Likewise, if you were interacting with someone and they genuinely cared about you, you most likely were able to tell.

The same applies with your woman.

If you got dumped because you were taking her for granted and were treating her badly and then try to act like you're not going to be like that anymore or you're not like that, she's most likely going to be able to tell.

What you may have noticed in life is that how you think and feel on the inside comes out on the outside.

So, for example, if a person is very negative on the inside, you will notice that their words and their behavior and their actions are very negative.

If a person is very positive, the same rules apply.

So, if you got dumped because you were taking her for granted and you were treating her badly, then you really need to change on the inside.

When you change on the inside and you genuinely become a more loving and emotionally fair man, then it will come out and she will pick up on it.

You don't have to try to convince her on it, she will pick up on it.

So, just a reminder, if you're going to cut off contact and give her a little bit of space, make sure that you don't sit around doing nothing during that time.

You need to rapidly improve your ability to attract her in the ways that actually matter to her.

So, whatever really turned her off, you need to fix, improve, adjust those areas of yourself.

You need to get ready to interact with her and make her feel attracted to you again.

3. Make her want you back by attracting her in new, more interesting ways

[image: Make her want you by attracting her in new, more interesting ways]

For example, be emotionally independent, be more ballsy with your humor or be emotionally masculine rather than being emotionally neutral or emotionally feminine.

Being emotionally independent is the opposite of being needy.

When a guy is needy, he needs a woman to show him love, affection and interest in order for him to feel okay about himself.

When a guy isn't needy and he's emotionally independent, he feels confident, happy and is forward-moving in life regardless of whether the woman is supporting him, showing him interest and making him feel good.

He feels good on his own.

That is very attractive to women because women don't want to feel like they are responsible for your emotional state.

They don't want to be stuck with a boy, for example, that they have to look after like a mother would look after a son or a big sister would look out for when it comes to her little brother.

What a woman wants to have in a man is a man who is happy, confident and forward-moving regardless of what she says or does.

The next example is be more ballsy with your humor and I have a couple of examples planned for later in the video, so I'll leave that to them.

The final example is to be more emotionally masculine rather than being emotionally neutral or emotionally feminine.

A lot of guys end up being emotionally neutral in a relationship where there really isn't much of a spark between him and his woman.

He essentially treats her more like a friend and he isn't actively being the man in the relationship.

He's just sort of can't be bothered, everything is boring and plain and, "We're used to each other and it's just neutral now. I don't really know what to do. Let's just hang out. I love you, you know that."

That sort of approach doesn't create a spark between a man and a woman.

The other thing that I mentioned there was emotionally feminine.

Not every guy falls into this category, but some of the guys that I've helped over the years do fall into this category, where they're essentially being a bit of a big baby.

The guy is sulking about things, being emotionally sensitive or being a bit too soft and the woman is able to dominate him in the relationship and push him around.

Of course, there are some women out there who find that attractive like dominatrix type of women and things, but those women are the minority.

The majority of women want an emotionally masculine man who they can look up to and respect.

So, if your ex is being stubborn, a very important tip is to make her want you back by attracting her in new, more interesting ways.

Don't try to get her back by using the same old approach to attraction that got you dumped in the first place.

Maybe you were very interesting and attractive to her at the start of the relationship, but somewhere along the way, you lost your way and maybe you forgot really how to attract a woman.

Maybe you lost your ability to do that.

You used to be really good at it, but somewhere along the line, you lost your way.

Whatever the case is for you, what you need to understand is that she's not going to feel motivated and excited to get back with you if you're using the same old approach to attraction that got you dumped in the first place.

You really have to be willing to step up and approach attraction in new and more interesting ways so she feels excited and motivated to give you another chance.

4. Let her feel like she is in control

[image: Let her feel like she is in control]

So, this is where you attract her, but you don't push for a relationship.

She wants you again, but doesn't feel like you are forcing her into a relationship.

She wants it and is going to give you a chance for her own reasons.

For example, she wants to explore the new feelings that she's now experiencing around you.

She's feeling drawn to you now and doesn't want to regret it and have you be the one that got away before she had a chance to see what would happen.

This takes some composure on your part.

If your ex has been stubborn up to this point and hasn't been willing to give you another chance, you might feel tempted to seem really excited and push for a relationship when she begins to show interest again.

Don't do that.

Let her really want it.

Make her feel so attracted that she really wants the relationship again.

She feels as though if she doesn't get back with you, it's going to be her loss.

You can achieve that by focusing on attraction, but not pushing for a relationship.

If you suddenly switch gears and start pushing for a relationship and changing your vibe and how you're behaving and she sees that you're going back to how you were before, then her guard is most likely going to go up.

She's going to realize that, "Yeah, okay...I thought we had something going there, but no, I'm feeling turned off again. I don't want to be with him. This really isn't that exciting to me."

You've got to give her the gift of really feeling attracted to you and wanting you and wanting the relationship.

If you do that, she will then feel like she is in control.

She is the one deciding that you and her get back together.

Yet, in reality, you are in control of the process.

You are making her feel attracted, you're making her feel drawn to you again and she's coming right back to you.

5. Get her to treat you better

Many of the guys that I've helped to get a stubborn ex girlfriend or ex wife back, have been making the mistake of trying to treat her better and jump through all of her hoops.

Whatever she says, he's willing to do it.

If she says, "Don't text me at 7pm, only text me at 7:15pm," he essentially says, "Yes, ma'am," and does what he's told.

Yet, no matter how much he listens to what she says and does whatever she tells him to do, it never seems to be enough.

There's always something else.

She's never fully impressed and he keeps trying and trying and trying and she loses respect for him. She looks at him as that desperate guy who is trying hard to get a woman.

As you would know, the same fundamental principles apply in pickup, in relationships and ex back situations.

For example, generally speaking, women do not reward desperation and neediness and insecurity with sex, love and devotion.

What women want is a man who knows that he is good enough, a guy who believes in himself and as a result, is more naturally attractive to her.

He's able to be confident, joke around, allow his natural charisma to come through, be charming, flirt with her and so on.

He's able to do all those sort of things that naturally make a woman want a guy.

So, if your ex is being stubborn, an important it is to make her treat you better rather than trying to suck up to her and treat her as good as you can to hopefully get a chance with her.

Now, some guys watching this video might think, "Well, how does that apply to my situation because I got dumped for not treating her good enough? I've got to treat her better now, right?"

Yes, you can treat her well, but you've got to make her treat you better.

You can't allow yourself to be in the one-down position and be treated badly by a woman.

It doesn't get rewarded with sex, love and devotion.

You've got to get back into the one-up position.

So, if your ex is being unreasonable about things, you've got to be able to use some ballsy humor and put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way.

Say for example that a guy is talking to his ex-girlfriend or wife on the phone and he's trying to arrange a meet-up with her.

She says (in a snappy tone of voice), "Well, look. Fine, we'll meet up, but we're only meeting up for 10 minutes."

He can then laugh at her and say, "Okay, Little Miss Demanding. Alright, well look...we'll meet up for 10 minutes and then after that, we won't speak to each other again."

Then at the meet-up, he should focus on making her laugh and smile and enjoy herself.

When it gets to 10 minutes, he should say to her, "Alright. Well, your 10 minutes is up. Get out of here. We're not speaking to each other anymore."

She is most likely not going to want to get up and get out of there and leave.

However, some women are a bit more feisty than others and they will test your confidence.

If a guy says that to a woman, depending on the woman, she might say, "Fine," and get up and walk out.

What he needs to do at that point is not panic.

Why?

She's going to be feeling respect and attraction for him by having the balls to say that to her. Women who are that feisty only respect men who don't put up with their BS.

Women only respect, feel attracted to and stay in love with men who don't hand over their power to them, who don't come running after them and say, "No, no, no. I was only joking. I'm sorry, I'm sorry. Please, please, come back."

Women don't want a wimpy guy like that.

A woman who has the guts to walk out in a situation like that doesn't want a guy running after her in a wimpy way.

Of course, not all women are going to say, "Fine!" and walk out.

In most cases, the woman is just going to laugh it off, she's going to know that she doesn't want to leave and she's going to continue talking to him.

So, if your ex is being stubborn, don't make the mistake of thinking that you're going to get her back by being even nicer to her, by being more polite, more understanding, more patient and more giving. What you need to do is regain your position of power in the relationship.

One of the ways that you can do that is by using ballsy humor, having the balls, having the guts, having the courage to joke around with her and not hand it to her, not suck up to her all the time, to put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way.

When you do that, a woman naturally feels respect and attraction for you and her behavior starts to change.

She starts to look at you as a guy that deserves respect, that deserves to be treated well.

However, if you're sucking up to her and trying to jump through all of her hoops to hopefully get a chance with her, then she's not going to see you as a guy that deserves respect.

As a result, she's going to be stubborn, her guard is going to remain up and it's going to be very difficult, if not, impossible for you to get her back.

So, rather than trying harder to treat her even better than you already have been, turn the tables by making her feel attracted to you and putting her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way.

Reclaim your position of power.

Make her want you.

Make her want the relationship and then allow her to have another chance with you.

Learn More?

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn the quickest, easiest and most effective way to get a woman back.

When you use the techniques from the program, she will stop being stubborn and she will open back up to you and give you another chance.

Women Can Change How They Feel Quite Easily

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that to get her to go from being stubborn to open and flexible, you need to focus on triggering her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

That won't happen with begging and pleading, writing her a letter, explaining things via text, pouring your heart out to her and so on.

Those approaches don't work and you most likely know that already.

What works is when you change your approach to attraction and begin attracting her in new, more interesting ways.

She suddenly feels drawn to you and is thinking about you and missing you.

She feels like you are going to be the one who got away and she's going to regret it.

She then wants to get you back for her own reasons.

She wants to explore the feelings that she now has for you, it's interesting to her, it's appealing and it makes her want to be around you.

It makes her want to be in your arms, it makes her want to kiss you and be sexual with you.

She stops being so stubborn, opens back up to you and you then give her a chance to be with you.

She wants you.

She wants to be back with you.

The reason why is that she is feeling attracted to you in new and interesting ways.

You are making her feel like if she doesn't give you another chance, she is going to regret it.

She does not want to live with that feeling of regret.

It is essentially you giving her a chance to be with you.

It's no longer about you trying to hopefully convince her to give you another chance.

She feels attracted to you again.

The love is flowing again.

She wants to be with you and you simply allow her to be with you.

As you learned earlier on in the video, if you go against the fundamental principles of how attraction actually works, women will be difficult, they'll play hard to get and they'll reject you.

However, if you approach it correctly, a woman wants to be with you, she wants to be selected by you.

She wants to be around you and experience the exciting emotions that come with being with you.

She knows that she can only get that with you.

As a result, she naturally opens herself back up to you and you get her back.

4 Tips on How to Get an Ex Back Who Wants Nothing to Do With You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How can you get an ex back who wants nothing to do with you?

She's completely over it.

She's completely over you.

She doesn't want to talk to you.

She doesn't want to be around you.

She doesn't want to see you.

She doesn't want to think of you.

It's finished.

It's over.

She want's nothing to do with you.

So, how can you get her back?

Tip number one...

1. Understand why she wants nothing to do with you

When a woman doesn't want anything to do with her ex man anymore, it's usually because she can see that he hasn't yet changed.

He's still essentially the same guy.

He still doesn't understand how to attract her in the ways that are important to her.

He is still going to make the same sort of mistakes if she were to get back with him and nothing really has changed.

He's trying to get her back without really having changed much, if at all.

Another example is that she is turned off by his post-breakup approach to her.

For example, he texted her way too much. He was begging and pleading for another chance.

He was trying to explain himself via text and get her to understand his point of view.

He didn't really understand the real reasons why she had broken up with him and was trying to get her back for reasons that she didn't even care about and so on.

Another example is that she was turned off by his behavior, attitude or actions during the relationship.

For example:

- He may have been nervous in social situations.
- He may have made her feel more dominant than him in the relationship.
- He wasn't manly enough.

- She felt cooler than him.
- He made her feel stupid or worthless.
- He treated her disrespectfully, but expected her to be nice to him all the time.
- He was too giving and ended up making her feel like she was too good for him and so on.

Understanding why she doesn't want anything to do with you really comes down to you understanding what turned her off during the relationship, what turned her off after the relationship and what she may be feeling about you now.

For example, if she feels like you haven't even changed, but are trying to get her back, then she's not going to want anything to do with you.

It's going to feel unfair to her that you're asking for another chance even though you can't really offer her what she actually wants in a relationship.

For example, if a guy got broken up with because she felt more dominant than him and he wasn't manly enough for her, she isn't going to want to be with him if he's not willing or able to change that and become a more masculine man in his thinking, behavior and actions.

Another example is where a guy was too neutral in the relationship and as a result, there really wasn't much of a spark between him and his woman.

He treated her more like a friend or a buddy and the excitement died out of the relationship.

If she feels like he still hasn't changed his approach or is unwilling to change and be a more attractive, appealing person to her, then she's not going to feel motivated to want to get back with him.

So, if your ex wants nothing to do with you, the first thing that you really have to do is understand why. When you understand why, you can then make the correct changes.

If a guy doesn't understand his woman's real reasons why she dumped him, then he may offer her things that she doesn't really even care about.

For example, if the guy was too emotionally sensitive and insecure in the relationship, she will want him to change that about himself and interact with her and be a much more confident and emotionally masculine guy.

She will then see that he has changed in the ways that are important to her.

However, if he doesn't understand that and says things like, "I'll treat you better. I'll do whatever you want. Just tell me what you want me to do and I'll do it. Things will be different. What you and I have is special. We can't throw it away. We experienced so many good memories together. I love you. You mean so much to me," and so on, then she's not going to be impressed by that.

That isn't the reason why she has been turned off by him and why she doesn't feel motivated to get back with him.

So, it's really important that you understand why she doesn't want anything to do with you.

2. Accept that she broke up with the old you

The man that you were when she broke up with you isn't who you are now.

That's one of the really cool things about being a human and being alive in this universe.

Nothing ever stays the same.

It's always changing.

As a human, you're either changing in the right direction or in the wrong direction.

While watching this video now, you're changing in the right direction.

You're learning and you're becoming a better man.

So, who she broke up with back then isn't who you are now.

You've become a better man already and tomorrow you're going to be an even better man.

The next day, the next day and the day after that is going to be the same story.

You're going to get better and better and better.

You're going to have a clearer understanding of what you actually need to adjust, improve or change in order to properly re-attract her.

You are going to know that and are going to start developing into that type of man.

Just understand that her feelings about you are based on the old you, including who you have been prior to watching this video.

For example, if you've been texting her and trying to work things out via text, then you're doing it wrong and you need to stop doing that.

Trying to fix a relationship and get a woman to understand your point of view and make her give you another chance via text rarely, if ever, works.

It usually just annoys the woman, it stresses her out, it makes her feel overwhelmed and she ends up not wanting anything to do with her ex anymore.

It's just too stressful to have to interact with him.

Likewise, if you have been trying to get her back by using the same old approach to attraction that got you dumped in the first place, then she's not going to want anything to do with you.

For example, if you gave her too much power in the relationship and she really didn't like that and you're continuing to give her too much power as you try to get her back, then she's not going to like that.

You need to change your approach and reclaim your position of power.

The man needs to be in the one up position, not the one down position when it comes to women.

It's not about the woman being less important or less valuable or anything like that.

It's simply about the masculine/feminine dynamic between a man and a woman.

It's best when a man is in the one up position and the woman is in the one down position in terms of dominance.

Not in terms of importance, not in terms of intelligence, not in terms of value or anything like that.

Just that you are in the one up position in terms of dominance.

She looks up to you and respects you as a man.

So, just understand that she broke up with the old you, not who you are now and not who you will become tomorrow.

You're going to become a better man every day from now on. You're going to become more attractive and appealing to her. That is a fact.

3. Level up

It's one thing to know why your ex wants nothing to do with you and another thing altogether to level up as a man.

You're no longer the type of man that she dumped and left behind.

So, let's have a look at 4 different examples of leveling up or leveling down.

The first example is where a guy got dumped because he was insecure in the relationship.

[image: Getting dumped for being too insecure]

A level down is going to be where he becomes even more insecure. A level up is where he becomes confident.

To level up and give her a next level attraction experience, he's going to be confident when he interacts with her.

He's no longer going to be displaying the insecurity that got him dumped.

His confidence is going to come across in his body language, in his vibe, his attitude, his words and his behavior.

She is going to notice it, and it's going to make her feel a spark of attraction for him.

In that particular area, he's going to be offering her a next level attraction experience.

Let's have a look at another example.

A guy got dumped because he took her for granted.

[image: Getting dumped for taking her for granted]

A level down is where he becomes desperately nice.

Many guys make this mistake where they haven't been treating their woman well and when they get dumped for that, they become desperately nice, desperately generous and desperately loving.

As you most likely know, women are not attracted to desperation in men. Women are attracted to confidence and self-belief in a man.

So, a level up is where the guy is being confident, but he's also being sweet towards her.

In other words, he doesn't lose confidence in himself and feel unworthy of her because of how he treated her.

Yes, he treated her badly and took her for granted, but it's not something that he needs to now feel unworthy of her because of.

He needs to believe that he is worthy of her while also being a sweet guy to her.

Being sweet is about, essentially, being a bit more nice, charming and loving towards her.

For example, if he meets up with her and she's looking very pretty, he can look at her in a very confident way and say, "Oh, look at you today. Don't you look beautiful," rather than feeling unworthy of her and not saying anything at all.

The next example is where a guy got dumped because he was too neutral in the relationship.

[image: Getting dumped for being too neutral]

In other words, there wasn't really much of a spark between him and his woman because he treated her more like a friend or a roommate or a housemate.

A level down is where he continues to be neutral towards her and he's also self-doubting now, so, he doesn't feel worthy of her.

He has lost confidence in himself.

As you may know, women are not attracted to self-doubt and insecurity in men.

Women are attracted to confidence and self-belief in a man.

So, a level up is where he is being confident and charismatic.

Being charismatic is essentially about confidently allowing your true personality to come through without being on guard, without putting on an act.

So, when a guy interacts with his ex-woman and he's being more confident and charismatic, she is going to feel a spark with him.

She's going to find him much more appealing than the old, neutral version of himself.

Another example is where a guy got dumped for being too soft in the relationship.

[image: Getting dumped for being too soft]

So, he was a bit too much of a wimp.

He allowed her to push him around, he didn't really know how to dominate her or take the lead in the relationship. He was a bit too much of a softy.

A level down is where he continues to be soft and now he's also self-doubting. He doesn't believe that he's worthy of her.

A level up is where he becomes emotionally masculine and ballsy.

For example, he meets up with his ex woman for coffee.

After they order coffee and the waiter goes away, he might look at her and say, "Hey, you realize you're paying for the coffee today, right? It's all on you and I want you to buy me a cake as well."

He will say that with a smile on his face.

She will most likely be shocked that he has the balls to say something like that and won't know whether or not he's joking.

He can then laugh and say, "I'm just kidding. I'll take care of the bill," and then get on with talking about something else.

She will see that, wow, he really has changed. He has leveled up.

He's no longer the softy or the wimp that she dumped. He has already improved.

He has already leveled up.

She now has something to feel attracted to him about.

4. Make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction to the new and improved you

Where so many guys go wrong is that they reach out to their ex woman when they're not even ready to properly re-attract her.

So, he contacts her and she experiences the same types of things about him that turned her off before. For example, he gives her too much power when they communicate.

He's not manly enough.

He doesn't have the balls to put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way.

He doesn't really know how to flirt with her and create sexual tension, so she ends up feeling bored.

She ends up feeling turned off and she doesn't feel motivated to want to get back with him.

What you need to understand is that whether you cut off contact for 3 days, 7 days, 20 days, 30 days or whatever, you must use the time apart to rapidly improve your ability to attract her.

You have to get ready to create a spark when you interact with her.

You've got to be able to make her feel something for you.

That is the most important thing of all.

When you make a woman feel respect, attraction and love, she goes from not wanting anything to do with you to feeling drawn to you, to opening back up to you, to wanting to hug you, to wanting to be kissed by you and have sex with you.

Unfortunately, what some guys do is that they contact their ex-girlfriend or wife and they talk to her in a neutral way.

So, the guy's talking to her just like a friend, he's not really doing anything to make her feel attracted, he's not flirting with her to create sexual tension and there's just nothing there.

There's nothing to make her feel motivated to want to get back with him, so, she doesn't get back with him.

Other guys make the mistake of contacting their ex woman and seeming to display a lack of confidence in themselves now.

The guy's doubting that she would want anything to do with him, he feels like he's unworthy of her now because of what she said about him and he just doesn't convey confidence and belief in himself.

As you may know, when it comes to picking up women, being in a relationship or getting your ex back, you must be confident.

It is an absolutely essential ingredient for success with women.

Women do not want to reward insecurity and self-doubt with sex, love and devotion.

A woman's natural instinct is to reward confidence and self-belief with sex, love and devotion.

So, if you interact with your ex woman again, you have to convey that belief in yourself.

You have to be confident, regardless of what she has said to you and about you.

She may have said to you that she doesn't love you anymore, she doesn't want anything to do with you and that you're a horrible ex-boyfriend or ex-husband, she regrets spending time with you and so on.

You have to put all that stuff to the side and not focus on it.

If you focus on the way that she has been behaving, then you're most likely not going to feel very confident about yourself.

If you're not being confident when you're interacting with her, then she's not going to be able to respect you and feel attracted to you.

So, make sure that you are confident when you interact with her.

If you do that, she will go from not wanting anything to do with you to wanting something to do with you.

She will naturally feel attracted to you again.

She will feel drawn to you.

She will feel like she has to give you another chance.

Otherwise, she's going to be thinking about you and missing you and potentially regretting you as being the one that got away.

By the way...

The same rules apply if a guy is a very confident, masculine guy, or if he's a nerdy guy and got dumped because he was too soft or insecure with his woman.

When you display traits that are universally attractive to women, they feel attraction for you.

A woman can literally go from not wanting anything to do with you to feeling attracted to you and feeling drawn to you again.

This also applies regardless of what race or nationality a guy is.

Women all over the world feel attracted to certain personality traits and behaviors in men.

If your ex woman doesn't want anything to do with you, you can literally change how she feels.

You can interact with her and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

You can make her go from not wanting anything to do with you to feeling attracted to you, drawn to you and worried that if she doesn't give you another chance, she's going to regret you as being the one that got away.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn the quickest, easiest and most effective way to get a woman back.

This applies even if she currently doesn't want anything to do with you.

Additionally, if she has blocked you on social media and blocked your phone, there are proven techniques in my program that you can use to get her to unblock you and open back up to you again.

You can then get her to meet up with you, you can re-attract her, you can hook up with her sexually and get her back into a relationship.

Other guys have done it and you can do it, too.

Women Don't Always Stick to What They Say

One final point that I want to make in this video is that women don't always stick to what they say.

When a woman is feeling angry about something, she might say very harsh words.

She might say, "I hate you and I never want anything to do with you again."

However, when she's feeling attracted and she's laughing and feeling good around the guy that she said that about, she will then say things like, "I like you. You've changed. We should hang out again," and things like that.

Of course, a woman can stick to what she has said about something and what she has decided.

However, it's important to understand that when a decision is made based on emotion, that decision can be changed.

Her decision to break up with you was based on not feeling the emotions of respect, attraction and love for you anymore. Yet, you can make her feel respect, attraction and love for you again.

When you make her feel that, her thinking changes.

She starts looking at you in a different way.

She opens back up to you and you can then get her back.

So, be confident in yourself.

Know that you can take control of the situation.

It might feel like she has control because she says, "I don't want anything to do with you anymore," and so on.

However, that's based on the emotion she was feeling when she broke up with you.

It's not based on what she will be thinking and deciding when you make her feel respect, attraction and love for you again.

She will soften up and open back up to you.

She will want to give you another chance because of the respect, attraction and love that she's now feeling for you.

You're giving her a next level attraction experience. You really have changed and improved.

Now, when you interact with her, she feels completely different.

It's a new and exciting type of respect, attraction and love that she never felt for you before.

As a result, she goes from not wanting anything to do with you to wanting something to do with you.

Other guys all around the world have done it and you can do it, too.

So, be confident and go and get her back.

How to Reverse a Break Up in 3 Steps

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The way to reverse a breakup is to guide your woman through 3 emotional steps.

The 3 emotions are respect, attraction and love.

So first, you make her feel respect for you again.

Once you do that, it's easier to make her feel attracted to you again.

When she feels respect and attraction, you can then quickly get her to fall back in love with you.

For some guys watching this video, they might think, "Well, that sounds really difficult. She doesn't want anything to do with me right now. How am I going to get her to be in love with me?"

Well, think back to when you were in a relationship with her and things were going well.

Can you remember times where you and her were in love and everything was going along well, but all of a sudden she lost respect for you for some reason?

As a result, she didn't want you to hug her, kiss her, or be near her.

For example, you may have been hanging out at home, things were going along well and then you said or did something that caused her to lose respect for you.

You may have been insecure about something, emotionally sensitive, you might have gotten really angry about something or shown her a side of yourself that she didn't really like.

As a result, she lost respect for you.

If you can think about how she would have reacted, her body language would have changed, her mood would have changed.

Suddenly, she would have been looking at you like, "Get away from me," and if you tried to hug her or kiss her, she would have pushed you away.

If you think back to those moments, what you'll realize is that when she lost respect for you at that time, she also stopped feeling attracted to you.

So, if she was normally attracted to you because you're so confident and cool and funny, all of a sudden, you're not so confident, cool and funny to her.

If she was attracted to you for other reasons, then suddenly, you're not so appealing anymore.

She doesn't want you anywhere near her, she is annoyed by you and she's looking at you and thinking, "What am I doing with this guy? What have I seen in him in the past? What is going on here? Why am I feeling this way?"

Another thing to notice is that when she stopped feeling respect for you and then stopped feeling attracted to you, that didn't go on forever.

You were able to get her respect back and you were able to make her feel attracted to you again.

When she was respectful of you and feeling attracted to you, then she could be in love with you again and everything would have been back to normal.

Now, the same rule applies when getting your ex back.

Of course, it might seem a little bit more extreme right now because she has broken up with you and she says she doesn't want anything to do with you, but you need to understand that the same emotional process applies.

To get her back, you need to get her to respect you again.

When she respects you, she can feel attracted to you.

When she respects you and feels attracted to you, she can then start to love you again.

She will fall back in love with you.

Example of a Man Losing the Respect, Attraction and Love of His Woman

So, let's look at an example of how a man would have lost the respect, attraction and love of his woman and then let's look at how you can actually get her respect, attraction and love back.

Okay, so this is the example of where a man lost the respect, attraction and love of his woman.

For some reason, he started becoming insecure and feeling jealous in the relationship.

He then started being controlling, clingy and needy.

She then started to lose respect for him because he wasn't as emotionally strong as he used to be.

Women want to be with an emotionally strong man, not an emotionally weak man.

Women respect emotional strength and they feel attracted to it.

On the other hand, women don't respect emotional weakness and are not attracted to emotional weakness when in a relationship with a man.

So, she started to lose respect for the fact that he wasn't an emotionally strong man anymore.

As a result, she started changing how she treated him.

She wasn't as affectionate anymore.

She wasn't as loving and warm as she used to be.

The man then started getting irritated about that.

He was annoyed that she could change all of a sudden.

He was doing his best to treat her well and he was really serious about the relationship with her, but she didn't seem to be into it as much as she used to be.

So, the man started changing how he treated her.

He was nice to other people and seemed like he was a good man to her when they were around other people, but behind closed doors, he put her down, expected too much from her, made her feel stupid, got angry at her for little things and expected her to be nice, sweet and loving all the time even though he wasn't treating her that way in return.

As a result, she not only stopped respecting him, but she stopped feeling attracted to him.

She then began to fall out of love with him and let him know that she was unhappy.

In reaction to that, the man started becoming emotionally sensitive.

She had to treat him nicely and speak positively to him at all times or else he would start sulking, getting angry or moody.

Eventually, she had enough of it and she broke up with him.

Unfortunately, that happens in a lot of relationships even when the relationship starts out really well and the couple are in love.

All it really takes is something to begin going wrong where the man starts losing the respect of his woman and it can snowball out of control.

She suddenly stops feeling as attracted to him as she used to be and he notices it and then he starts getting emotionally sensitive or treating her badly to retaliate and so on.

The whole thing just starts to fall apart.

Here's the thing though...

When a guy is in a situation like that and his relationship is starting to fall apart, he can use the same process that you can use to get your ex back to stop his relationship from falling apart.

He can make some quick changes and improvements and adjustments to allow her to fully respect him again.

When that happens, she will start feeling attracted to him.

She will actually feel more attracted to him than she used to feel because he will have leveled up as a man.

For example, he would have become more confident, more emotionally strong, more emotionally masculine and so on.

As a result, they will enjoy a better relationship than they were having prior to the problems beginning to emerge.

So, in terms of you getting your ex back, the same emotional process applies.

Getting Her Respect, Attraction and Love Back

To get her back, you've got to interact with her and make her feel respect for you again.

When you do that, she will then automatically be able to feel attracted to certain things about you.

The more respect and attraction she feels, the easier it will be for her to fall back in love with you.

Just like with the example of the guy in the relationship, when you get an ex woman back and you have leveled up as a man and can now make her feel more respect and attraction for you, the love that she feels and the attraction that she feels will be stronger and more meaningful than it was before.

You can literally have a better relationship with her than you had before.

So, what are some examples of how you can get her to respect you again, feel attracted to you and be in love with you again?

In terms of respect, this is about leveling up as a man.

If a man was very boring and neutral in his relationship with his woman, he needs to level up and start being a little bit more interesting and alive.

He needs to make her feel like there is some excitement to the relationship, there is a spark there, there is something for her to be excited about.

If a man was emotionally sensitive and insecure, he needs to level up by being more confident and emotionally strong.

In terms of attraction, this can be about making her smile, laugh and feel good in your presence. It can also be about flirting with her and building up sexual tension by making her feel attracted, but not kissing her right away.

So, you're making her want you and feel attracted to you, but you're not releasing the buildup of sexual tension right away.

You're making her really want it.

In terms of love, this can be about physical contact such as hugs, kisses and sex.

Physical contact like that helps the romantic and sexual love to begin flowing again.

So, that's the fundamental emotional process that you need to guide your woman through.

You get her respect back, she starts to feel attracted to you and she begins to fall back in love with you.

The more respect and attraction you make her feel, the stronger her newfound love for you is.

Unfortunately, where a lot of men go wrong is that they try to get their woman back before taking her through that 3-step process.

She doesn't feel much or any respect for him, she doesn't feel much or any attraction for him and she doesn't feel like she's in love with him.

Yet, he's trying to get her back, he's trying to convince her to give him another chance because he loves her so much and he's so sincere about doing things better this time around.

Unfortunately, that just doesn't hit the mark for her.

What he needs to understand is that the main thing he needs to focus on is interacting with her in such a way that she naturally feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

He doesn't have to tell her that things are going to be different and promise the world to her.

He simply needs to interact with her and naturally make her respect him again, naturally make her feel attracted to him again.

So, say for example, a guy was a bit too emotionally wimpy in the relationship. She was able to push him around and essentially dominate him in the relationship.

She got sick and tired of that because she wanted a man with a bit more balls.

When he interacts with her again after the break up, he needs to show her that he's no longer like that.

She's going to be able to pick up on it based on the subtleties of his body language, attitude, tone of voice and what he's saying and doing and so on.

He doesn't need to tell her that he's not emotionally wimpy anymore.

She's going to pick up on it.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't understand that or they don't get told that, so, when they're interacting with their ex woman, they are asking for another chance before even getting her respect back.

Other guys are making the mistake of trying to sell themselves to their ex woman and say, "Hey, I've changed. Things will be different, I promise. I'll do better, I'll do anything you want," and so on.

Those approaches don't work.

What works is naturally making a woman feel respect and attraction for the new and improved you when you interact with her.

When you make your ex woman feel respect for you again, everything begins to change.

She starts feeling sparks of attraction for you.

She begins looking at you with different eyes.

She starts looking at you as a guy that she can respect and feel attracted to.

The more respect and attraction you make her feel for you, the more she starts to feel like she's falling back in love with you.

It's a natural organic process.

It just happens automatically.

You don't have to try to push it on a woman or convince her of it or talk her into it.

You simply need to interact with her in such a way that naturally triggers her respect, attraction and love for you.

Your Situation is Unique, But it Can Be Fixed

In your situation, it might seem difficult because she said, "I don't want anything to do with you anymore. I'm over it. I don't have any feelings for you. Get away. Leave me alone," and so on.

Yet, what you need to understand is that she was saying those things based on how she used to feel about you.

You can make her feel differently.

You can make her respect you again.

You can make her feel attracted to you and you can make her fall back in love with you.

Learn More?

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn exactly what to say and do to make her give you another chance.

She will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and the love will begin to flow back into her heart again.

She will feel like she's in love with you again.

She will want to be with you and you will get her back.

The Love Between You and Her Isn't Dead

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that the love between you and your ex isn't dead.

Instead, she has simply disconnected from the love.

She can reconnect to the love that you and her created together.

That is something that doesn't die.

It doesn't go away.

It's simply something that either the man or the woman, or both of them, disconnect from.

However, when the right conditions are in place (i.e. she respects you and she feels attracted to you), she will naturally and automatically begin to reconnect with the love.

The more respect and attraction you make her feel, the more she will feel like she's in love with you.

So, if you want to reverse the breakup that you went through recently or a long time ago, just understand that there is a simple 3-step process that you can use.

The 3 steps are get her to respect you again, make her feel attracted again and she will then reconnect with the love and begin to fall back in love with you.

The question is though: Are you going to do it?

Are you going to interact with your ex and make it happen?

Are you going to interact with her and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you?

It's up to you.

You are in control of the situation now.

If you want her back, then interact with her and make it happen.

You can do it.

Go and get her back.

How to Make My Ex Want Me Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

You want your ex back, but she doesn't want you back at the moment.

Don't worry, you can change that.

She may be reluctant at first and not 100% sure whether she wants to give you another chance because of how turned off she felt leading up to the break-up and during the break-up, but you can change that.

How can you do that?

Here are the 5 things you need to know to make her want you back ASAP.

1. You don't need to change everything about yourself to get her back

Getting a woman back is usually fairly straightforward for most guys.

For example: In a lot of cases, a woman has broken up with a guy because he just wasn't man enough for her.

He became insecure and emotionally sensitive in the relationship and it turned her off.

As a result, she began showing less interest in him and maybe stopped being as affectionate and he may have then become jealous and controlling and even more insecure.

Eventually, it led to a breakup.

So, what does a guy have to change to get her back?

Does he have to change all those things about himself?

No.

The core reason for all of that insecurity and jealousy and controlling behavior was a lack of confidence; a lack of belief in himself.

He didn't feel worthy of her and it started to eat away at him.

What he needs to fix is his confidence.

He needs to boost his confidence.

He needs to level it up, get it back and start believing in himself again.

When a man believes in himself and knows that he's good enough for a woman, he stops behaving in insecure ways.

He stops being so jealous and needy and controlling. It just goes away.

So, just understand that you don't need to change 100 things about yourself to be able to get your ex back.

You just need to change the core reason or the few core reasons.

In most cases, there's going to be a few core things that a guy needs to improve, fix, adjust and he can then interact with his ex-girlfriend or ex-wife and make her feel attracted again.

She can feel it.

She can sense the changes in him and feel attracted to him.

2. Regaining her respect for you is critical

To make your ex want you again, it's very important that you interact with her and you allow her to get the sense that you are now the sort of man that she can look up to and respect.

This is important for her in terms of being able to confidently tell her friends, family, or coworkers that she is seeing you again.

For example: Sometimes a guy starts treating his girlfriend or wife badly in the relationship.

He's reacting to the changes in her and he can't seem to get her to treat him as good as she used to.

She doesn't seem to be as in love with him anymore and he starts acting up.

He starts being a bit of an asshole, or he starts being controlling, accusing her of things or being irritated around her and things like that.

If her friends and family see that, they're obviously not going to like and they may start to talk to her and say, "What is she doing with him? Is he going to change?" and so on.

So, if you can relate to that in any way, you need to make sure that when you interact with your ex, she gets the sense that she can respect you as a man now.

She can sense that you are a more balanced man emotionally, that you understand where you went wrong and are so much more emotionally mature now.

Of course, don't try to sell yourself to her about that and say, "Oh, I've learned so much and I've changed so much. I know where I went wrong and please give me another chance."

That's now how it works.

You just need to be able to let her pick up that you've changed based on how you now talk to her, interact with her and react to her.

Women are very good at analyzing the subtle behavior of men.

So, you don't need to go into detail and explain everything to her and hope that she understands and gives you another chance based on that.

Let it be based on the feeling that she gets.

Most women make decisions and go with how they feel. So you need to make her feel respect for you rather than telling her that, "Hey, I'm the sort of guy that can be respected now."

3. Make sure that she doesn't feel pressured into having a relationship

If you want your ex to want you back, what you need to do is make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and not pressure her for a relationship.

If she's feeling attracted to you, she's naturally going to begin imagining being back in a relationship with you.

She's naturally going to start to feel drawn to you in that way.

However, if she's starting to feel attracted to you again, she's feeling sparks and you jump the gun and go straight for the conversation of, "Will you give me another chance? Can we start again? Can we be back together?" and so on, she's most likely going to put her guard up.

She's going to start to feel like you're pressuring her into something that she's not quite sure of yet. The reason why is that you need to make the feelings between you and her mutual, or close to mutual. She needs to be feeling it.

She needs to be feeling proper attraction for you where sparks are really flying, the love is flying back into her heart and she really wants to be with you.

At that point, you and her will naturally get back into a relationship without you having to pressure her into it.

4. She will be surprised at how good she feels about getting back together with you

This is one of the important things to know about how to make your ex want you back.

You want her back and it's going to feel amazing for you when you get her back, when she's in your arms again, she's kissing you, she's looking into your eyes and she's telling you that she loves you and she's so happy again.

You're going to feel amazing when that happens.

Yet, so is she.

It's going to be good for her, too.

So, what you need to focus on is giving her a taste of how good getting back together actually feels.

The way to do that is to focus on triggering her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

Don't focus on trying to be Mr. Neutral and Mr. Friendly and Mr. Nice.

Don't focus on trying to have long in-depth and potentially stressful conversations about the relationship.

Focus on triggering her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

Those are fun feelings.

Those are the feelings that bring a man and a woman together and keep them together.

If you give her a taste of that, she will start to realize that getting back together actually feels really good and she will go with how she feels.

She'll get back with you.

5. There is a process that you can follow

Every situation is different.

Yet, the process to get back into a relationship is the same.

You need to get her respect back, you need to make her feel attracted to you and you need to get the love flowing back into her heart again.

If you do that, she'll naturally want to get back with you regardless of all the unique things that apply to your breakup and your relationship.

Every relationship breaks up for its own subtle, unique reasons.

However, to get the relationship back together, the process is the same. It is...

Respect > Attraction > Love (in that order).

If you focus on that, she will naturally want you back and you will get back together.

Learn More?

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn the easiest, fastest and most effective way to get a woman back.

When you use the techniques from the program, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She will feel sexually and romantically attracted and the love will begin to flow back into her heart.

She will naturally want you back.

You Are in Control

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that the ex back process is largely under your control.

You have a lot of control over what happens from now on.

When you interact with your ex, you're either going to be turning her off or turning her back on to you.

When you're thinking about her and missing her, you're either going to take the risk to interact with her and take that first step and make it happen or you're going to sit around thinking, "Oh, maybe I shouldn't contact her. Maybe it's too soon. Maybe she won't respond well."

It's largely under your control.

If you want her back, you just need to take action.

Get it done.

Interact with her, attract her, make her feel respect and attraction for you, make the love flow into her heart again and she will naturally want to get back with you.

That's how you get a woman back.

Is it Too Late to Get My Ex Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Is it too late to get your ex back?

What I've found by helping new guys with this for many years, is that it's pretty much never too late.

There's always a chance to interact with her, create a spark of attraction and get her back.

I'm not saying that every guy can get any woman back and that no situation is impossible.

Sometimes, the situation is impossible or near impossible.

For example: A woman broke up with a man or divorced him because he was physically abusive.

He beat her up and really hurt her physically and emotionally.

In most cases, a woman isn't going to want to go back to that.

Yet, note how I said "most cases."

Some women, as we know, do end up going back to abusive men.

Of course, I'm not encouraging that and saying that it's a good thing.

I'm just pointing out a fact that, as you may have noticed, some women go back to abusive, controlling, manipulative, angry, hurtful men.

They are addicted to it.

Of course, women like that are the minority and most women don't want to experience that.

The key to a successful relationship is certainly not beating up your woman, of course, but what I want you to understand is that, even in situations where it seems impossible and like the woman wouldn't go back to a man, she often does.

I've been working with new guys on this for many years, as I said and I've seen all types of cases.

Most cases aren't as extreme as that.

The majority of cases that I see where guys get their woman back easily are when he has either been:

1. Too wimpy.
2. Too careless.
3. Too nice.
4. Too neutral.

So, if a guy has been too wimpy in a relationship, he has become too insecure, he's become emotionally sensitive, he's become jealous and he just doesn't have the type of confidence that makes a woman feel attracted.

He may have had that confidence at the start of their relationship, but he lost it and he really turned her off. She then broke up with him.

In terms of being too careless, that's when a guy ends up taking his woman for granted.

He may have actually started out treating her well and he may be a good guy, but over time he stopped treating her as well as he used to.

He may have started to talk down to her, not really care about her feelings and always put himself first before her.

He may have expected her to be respecting him all the time, but not actually doing that for her in return.

Eventually, she got to the point where she just had enough of it and she wanted to get out of the relationship.

The next example: Too nice.

This is where a guy is basically just sucking up to the woman all the time trying to be Mr. Good Guy, Mr. Nice and doing everything perfectly.

He is trying to be the perfect gentleman, always put her needs in front of his own, be generous and show her how much he cares.

Although women do want a good man, they don't want a man sucking up to them and feeling like he has to be extra nice and be on his best behavior to avoid her breaking up with him.

Ironically, she does end up breaking up with him because she gets bored of always feeling like she is better than him.

His approach to her gives her a false sense of superiority over him.

She feels like she could most likely do better than him and that he's sucking up to her like that because he fears that she will leave him.

Although most women don't go around admitting it, they prefer to be in a relationship with a guy that they feel lucky to have, a guy that could attract other women if he wanted to, but he's deciding to be with her.

He loves her and wants to be with her.

The next example: Too neutral.

This is where a guy ends up treating his woman more like a friend than a sexy, desirable, feminine woman.

There's just no spark between them anymore.

They feel like roommates or housemates rather than lovers.

She doesn't feel like she's in love with him in a romantic way.

She may love him as a person and love him in a friendly way, but the sexual spark just isn't there anymore.

The sexual spark most likely was there at the start, but he wasn't able to maintain it so she got bored and left the relationship.

With those 4 main categories, I always see guys getting their woman back very quickly and easily when they focus on making her feel sexually and romantically attracted again, which is actually a very easy thing to do.

In terms of the amount of time that it takes for a man to get his woman back, I always hear from men who have gotten their woman back:

- Right away.
- Within days.
- Within a week.

- Within a couple of weeks, and;
- Within a month or so.

I also hear from men who get back together with a woman that they've been apart from for years.

The man gets in contact with her and rekindles the love by focusing on making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to him again.

So, back to your situation....

4 Tips on How to Get Your Ex Back if You Feel Like it's Probably Too Late

Is it too late to get YOUR ex back?

Has it been weeks, months or years since you and her have broken up?

What I've found is that, in most cases, all that usually takes is a spark of attraction to open the doors again, to get her to bring down her guard and open herself up to potentially hooking up with you or getting into a relationship with you again.

So, on that note, here are 4 tips on how to get your ex back if you feel like it's probably too late for you.

1. Don't waste any more time waiting for something to happen without your input

In most cases, when a guy approaches me and asks, "Is it too late to get my ex woman back?" he's usually not doing anything about it.

He is thinking about her, he's missing her, he's replaying the breakup over and over again in his mind.

He's thinking about where he went wrong, he's thinking about how much he wishes he could be with her and so on.

Yet, he's not doing the most important thing of all.

What is that?

He's not interacting with her and creating sparks.

He's not making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to him.

He's just waiting on the sidelines hoping that something somehow may happen.

What you've got to understand with women is that they respond to the leadership of men when it comes to dating and romance.

For example: I also help men how to pick up women so they can get laid or get a girlfriend.

Sometimes a guy comes to me and says, "Hey, Dan. I've been working out, I dress well, I work in a good job, but women don't really notice me. Women sometimes look at me, but I still don't have a girlfriend."

What is he saying?

He's saying that he's trying to look good and hope that women come over to him and pick him up.

Yet, that is just not how women work.

For the most part, women don't go out there approaching men.

What women want is a man to have the balls to walk over and talk to them.

They also want the guy to be able to create a spark between him and her.

For example: He interacts with her and he's being confident, he's being emotionally masculine, he's using humor and he's flirting with her.

That creates sparks between a man and a woman.

It creates feelings of attraction inside of her.

That's one of the fundamental things you need to understand about women.

It applies to pick up, it applies to being in a relationship and it applies to getting your ex back.

As you may know about me, I enjoyed my choice of women for many years, living the bachelor lifestyle and just having loads of fun attracting and picking up women, enjoying my choice of women.

Then I met this girl who is now my wife. I met her when she was 20 and I was 35 and we've been together ever since.

The big secret of my success with women is having the ability to make a woman feel sexually attracted.

It's a skill.

It's being able to interact with a woman and create feelings of sexual attraction inside of her.

This applies when picking up women, when going on a date with a woman, when in a relationship with a woman and when getting your ex back.

You have to create feelings of sexual attraction inside of her.

That is something that you can do.

You are in control of it.

It is based on what you are saying and doing when you interact with her.

So, for a guy who's in a situation where he wants to get his ex woman back, he needs to understand that the same rules apply.

He needs to interact with her and create a spark.

He needs to create feelings inside of her, make her feel attracted.

If you're sitting around thinking, "Is it too late for me? Have I waited too long to get my ex back? Is it the wrong thing to do? Has the window of opportunity passed?" just put those thoughts aside for a minute.

If you want her back, you need to stop waiting for something to happen without your input.

You need to interact with her and create a spark.

You can do that. You can make her feel attracted to you again.

When you make her feel attracted to you again, she will naturally open up and she will naturally start to consider the idea of either hooking up with you sexually or getting back into a relationship with you.

2. Understand what really re-attracts an ex

This is where a lot of guys go wrong as well.

They contact their ex and they're essentially just being friendly and neutral.

A guy will meet up with his ex-girlfriend or ex-wife and he'll have a nice chat with her.

He'll have a friendly chat, he'll talk about good old times, he'll catch up on what they've been doing with their life and so on.

All that is great and it's part of talking and having a conversation, but you need to make sure that you are also creating sexual feelings.

It has to be based on sexual feelings.

If there is no sexual feelings inside of her, she's not going to want to be in a romantic relationship with you.

She might want to be friends and stay in touch just in a nice way because she likes you and has fond memories of you as her ex, but she's not going to feel compelled to get into a sexual romantic relationship with you unless the basis of her feelings are sexual.

3. Prepare to be tested

If you meet up with an ex-girlfriend or wife after a long time, she is almost certainly going to test your confidence.

She is almost certainly going to behave as though she isn't that interested and she just wants to be friends.

She might also start teasing you, picking on you and saying things to see if she can break your confidence to make you feel insecure and unsure of yourself.

So, when you interact with her, just prepare to be tested.

Know that the tests are going to come.

She's going to try to put pressure on you and make you feel uncomfortable and doubt yourself to see whether or not you really have manned up.

Have you leveled up since you and her broke up?

Have you become a more powerful man emotionally, or have you become the sort of man that can easily crumble under her pressure?

That's what she's going to be looking for.

4. Prepare to give her a next level attraction experience

What this is about, is you leveling up.

For example: When you were in a relationship with her, you had a certain level of confidence.

Confidence is very attractive to women.

The more confidence that a man has, the more attracted a woman feels.

I'm not talking about the exaggerated, arrogant type of confidence where a guy's being an asshole and things like that.

I'm talking about relaxed easygoing confidence where a man doesn't crumble under pressure, he doesn't get rattled by things and he doesn't get nervous or insecure.

That's what I'm talking about.

So, if you had a certain level of confidence when you were in a relationship with her, you're going to want to level that up.

You're going to want to make sure that when you interact with her, your confidence is so much stronger.

If you can do that, you'll be giving her a next level attraction experience in terms of confidence.

Of course, there are also many other traits that a man can display to make a woman feel attracted such as emotional masculinity, social intelligence, charisma, charm, humor and so on.

When you give her a next level attraction experience, it makes her feel compelled to give you another chance.

It feels like you and her are a new couple.

Things really are different.

She feels drawn to you in ways that you were never able to make her feel before.

It's exciting, interesting and appealing to her.

You've been going through life missing her and wanting her back.

You can continue along that path and then it can be too late to get her back.

For example: She's married with children and extremely happy and doesn't want anything to do with you anymore.

Alternatively, you can follow through, interact with her, attract her, get her back and enjoy a BETTER relationship than you had before.

That's one of the interesting things about getting an ex back.

I've heard back from so many guys who have gotten their woman back after following through on the steps in my program and it's always interesting to see the words that they used to describe their situation.

For example: A guy will say he and his woman are so much happier now. She respects him so much more now. The sex is so much better. They're so much more in love.

That is a great thing for him AND the woman.

It's not just him getting something.

The woman is getting something too.

It's a good thing for him and her.

So, don't feel as though you're going to be doing something where you're taking something from her. You're literally going to be giving something to her and sharing something with her that is enjoyable for the both of you.

So, enough wasting time, enough worrying that it's too late for you.

If you want to get her back, then make it happen.

Interact with her attract her, hook up with her and get the relationship back together.

You can do it.

6 Tips on How to Get Your Ex Back By Texting

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

In this video, I'm going to give you 6 tips on how to get your ex back by texting.

Texting is obviously a very convenient way to contact your ex girlfriend or ex wife and I recommend that you use it, but I don't recommend that you overuse it.

Overuse of texting can cause a guy to mess up his chances with his ex and lose her completely.

So, with that, here are the 6 tips on how to get your ex back by texting.

1. Use humor, but don't go overboard with it

Here are some examples of using humor via text.

A guy recently commented on my YouTube channel and he said that his ex girl contacted him and said, "I miss you a lot. It's only been a couple of days. I've been trying to distract myself a lot, but it's not working. I don't know."

In cases like that, it's best to use her text as an opportunity to make her laugh and feel attracted to you.

Don't feel as though you need to be all soppy and understanding.

Use it as an opportunity to create a spark between you and her, by using humor.

It works so much better because it triggers her attraction for you.

A couple of the ways I suggested he could reply are, "Haha. Of course. I'm not easy to forget," and then he might add in an emoji with the tongue sticking out 🤪 or a wink smile 😉

Alternatively, he might not have any emoji in there at all.

Another reply to her text is, "Who's this?" and then when she replies with something like, "It's me, Sarah," you can reply with, "Just kidding. I missed you at times, too."

Alternatively, another reply is, "I was missing you for the first hour or so, but then I forgot all about you. LOL. What's your name again?"

So, with her text, it's pretty obvious that she is having a difficult time dealing with the breakup.

In a case like that, the guy can get her back quite easily.

All he has to do is spark some attraction and get her on a phone call, meet up with her and he can pretty much get her back.

By the way, with the example of replying with, "Who's this?" it's obviously to suggest that you have deleted her number.

You could also reply with something like, "Who's this? I don't have your number in my phone," or if you know for sure that she would really get the joke, then you could say, "Who's this? I think you have the wrong number."

Of course, not all women are going to get the joke and that's one of my points.

With texting, it's so easy to misinterpret what the other person is saying.

When you're joking around in person or on the phone, the other person can quickly tell that you're joking based on the tonality that you use, or if you're in person, the body language that you're using and the way you are behaving.

While it's a good idea to use humor via text with your ex so she feels attracted and she feels good talking to you, just make sure that you don't go overboard with it.

If your ex is the sort of girl who is really chatty via text and enjoys texting back and forth, here's an example of what you can do.

She texts you with something like, "Hey. So how are you today?" and you reply, "Can't tell you."

She then might reply with something like, "Why?" and you can then reply with, "I don't want to hurt your feelings."

She may then reply with, "Tell me. What is it?"

You can then say, "I'm eating pizza, Hawaiian, your favorite."

You might want to add in an emoji there with the tongue sticking out 🐾 or an add on an "LOL" or a "Haha."

She will most likely then reply with an "LOL" or "Haha." She will get the joke.

However, once you've done that, it's very important that you don't get into an ongoing text conversation where you're trying really hard to say something funny.

If you do keep trying to make her laugh, you will most likely eventually come across as trying too hard.

Alternatively, you might be doing a great job of texting her, but she will then realize, "Hang on. I'm being too nice to him. I need to play a little bit harder to get."

She will then start replying in a cold or distant way, or she will stop replying altogether or she may take a couple of hours or a day to reply to you.

This may cause you to start doubting your humor and your ability to attract her via text.

You might start worrying that you've said the wrong thing.

Yet, in fact, what's really going on is that she was just playing a little bit hard to get, so she didn't look too easy.

So, while it's a good idea to make your ex laugh via text so she can feel as though things are good between you and her and it's not difficult or awkward to be talking to you, make sure that you don't go overboard.

Make sure that you don't end up trying too hard and putting in way too much effort to get her laugh.

If you do that, she will most likely start to feel turned off by it, or she will start to play hard to get.

The next tip on how to get your ex back by texting is...

2. Don't talk about your feelings for her via text

Unless the feelings are mutual, she's not going to want to hear about your feelings for her.

It's going to feel like you're coming on too strong, too soon.

You're asking for a relationship or reaching for a relationship when the feelings aren't even mutual.

She's not feeling sexually and romantically attracted, she's not feeling in love, but you are.

You're trying to get back with her because you feel like that, but she doesn't feel the same way. So, you need to make her feel the same way and you cannot do that by telling her how you feel via text.

It just doesn't work.

3. Don't ask for another chance via text

If you're texting back and forth with your ex-girlfriend or wife, you definitely shouldn't ask for another chance via text.

It's so easy for a woman to play hard to get via text.

It's also so easy for her not to be feeling attracted.

She can be reading some of your texts and misinterpreting them, she can be looking at your texts and thinking that you're being insecure, you're being desperate, you're being pushy, you're not understanding her and so on.

As a result, if you ask her for another chance via text, she's almost certainly going to say no.

So, when should you ask her for another chance?

You shouldn't.

To get an ex back, what you really need to do is get in front of her.

You need to be in person with her making her feel attracted, turning her back onto you and then hook up with her and get the relationship back together.

Sometimes, it is necessary to discuss giving the relationship another chance before you hook up sexually. That's fine.

If it seems appropriate and it seems right to bring it up, you need to trust your gut instinct on that.

If you're interacting with her and she's feeling attracted and it seems like it's the right time to talk about the relationship, then don't be afraid of it.

Bring it up.

Just make sure that you're not being really soppy and romantic or needy about it.

Be a man about it, be direct and to the point and don't be afraid to express some feelings.

By expressing feelings, I don't mean express them in a needy, desperate, soppy kind of way, just a matter-of-fact, manly type of way.

4. Vary your response times

Now, this one might seem pretty obvious, but the reason why I'm including it in the 6 tips is that so many guys get it wrong.

It's very obvious to think, "Alright...well, I'm going to vary my response time to my ex girlfriend or wife to show her that I'm not needy."

Yet, the mistake that a lot of guys make is that they go too far with it.

She texts him something and he's got an opportunity to capitalize on that by using humor and making her laugh, but he doesn't reply.

He leaves it for 4 or 5 hours and then replies in a neutral way.

She doesn't laugh, she doesn't feel attracted and then she stops replying altogether.

Alternatively, he pushed it too far by waiting for the next day or 2 days or not even replying at all.

Of course, you don't have to reply to every single text that your ex sends you, but you don't need to go crazy about it and go overboard and really try to show her that you're not needy by not replying to texts.

Just vary your response times.

Make sure that you're not instantly replying to everything.

Make sure that you take a calm, confident approach when texting her.

5. Avoid long texting conversations

Sometimes a guy feels like he can't call his ex-girlfriend or wife or get her to meet up with him because she doesn't seem to want that right now.

He's not assertive enough about it and he doesn't get her on a phone call, make her laugh and get her to meet up with him in person.

Instead he thinks, "Well, at least she's texting with me."

So, he just uses that as much as he can.

For example: He gets into long conversations with her about the relationship, he explains his feelings, he asks her loads of questions, he tries to explain where he went wrong and what he now understands and so on.

In almost all cases, that is going to turn the woman off.

For example: She feels like it's just too stressful to be interacting with him. It takes too much work.

She's having to read these long messages and reply and going to a lot of detail.

They are misunderstanding each other and it just keeps going on and on.

Alternatively, she might look at it as him being desperate.

He's putting so much effort into writing long text messages that he just looks a little bit needy.

He looks like he's lost without her and it's so important for him to get her to understand his point of view.

What he doesn't understand is that the most important thing is actually how she feels, how he is making her feel.

Everything that you say and do when you're interacting with your ex counts.

You're either turning her off or you're turning her back on to you.

You're either making her feel attracted or you're pushing her away.

That is the reality.

So, when you're interacting with your ex, you need to be focusing on attracting her and turning her back onto you.

You need to be making her feel like there is still something there between you and her.
You need to make her feel like she is missing you, she can't stop thinking about you and she thinks that it might be a good idea to give you and her another chance.

6. Get to a phone call and meet up ASAP

I've heard of so many cases where a woman was showing interest in her ex guy via text and he just kept texting, texting and texting and texting and texting.

Eventually, no more texts.

She stops replying and all of a sudden, he's out of ideas.

He doesn't know how he's going to get her back.

Well, what you need to understand is that texting an ex-girlfriend or wife isn't the final step to get her back, obviously.

You've got to get her to meet up with you.

If that involves getting her on a phone call first, then do that, but you've got to get her to meet up with you.

You've got to get in front of her and make her feel real attraction.

In person, you can get sparks flying between you again.

You can make the love start to flow into her heart again.

You can make her look at you with loving eyes.

She focuses on your positive qualities.

She feels attracted to you.

All of the mistakes that you made in the past just go out the window.

She doesn't really care about that anymore.

She's focused on how she's feeling and she's feeling attracted to you.

She's feeling drawn to you.

Something is telling her that she should just kiss you and give you another chance.

Learn More?

I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn the easiest, fastest and most effective way to get a woman back.

The techniques in the program make her want to get back with you right away.

Other guys have done it and you can do it too.

Text Her, But Don't Rely on it as Your Only Way to Get Her Back

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is to remind you that texting is a good way to contact your ex, but just make sure that you don't use it as your main approach and the only thing that you do to try to get her back.

If you keep texting, she's most likely going to lose interest, go cold and stop replying all together. So, I recommend that you do use texts if necessary, but just make sure that you actually get to the final step where you're in front of her.

You're making her feel attracted, she's turned back on to you, she's feeling drawn to you romantically and sexually and you get her back into a relationship for real.

Don't hide behind text.

Don't hold onto texting conversations and think that you've got her back just because she's texting with you.

Get her back for real.

How to Get an Ex Back That Dumped You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How can you get an ex back that dumped you out of a relationship?

You were in a relationship with her, you love her and you want to be with her, but she has dumped you.

She doesn't want anything to do with you anymore.

It's over and you're feeling pretty beat up about it.

You want her back, but she's not having any of it.

So, how do you get her back?

Here are my 4 tips for you!

1. Regain control of your emotions

If you're feeling hurt, rejected, lost or sad without her, it will turn her off further.

Emotional attraction is the most important type of attraction to a woman.

For example: A woman doesn't want to be with a guy who is insecure, emotionally sensitive and emotionally dependent on her for his sense of confidence, or happiness, or sense of self-worth, or identity in the world.

She wants a guy who is confident on his own, regardless of whether or not she is in his life.

When a woman is around a guy who has that type of confidence, she naturally looks at him with respect.

She naturally feels attraction for him.

It's something that he doesn't have to try hard to create.

It just happens automatically and she feels it automatically.

She doesn't have to force herself or decide if she's going to feel attracted to the confident guy.

It just happens naturally.

The same thing applies with insecurity; a woman's reaction to it is automatic.

For example: A guy may have gotten into a relationship with a woman and at the start of the relationship, he was confident.

She was showing him lots of interest.

He could see that she really liked him and wanted to be with him and therefore he was confident.

Yet, somewhere along the line in the relationship, she started to change her behavior.

She stopped showing him as much affection, as much interest and stopped being as supportive.

In reaction to that, he started to become insecure and emotionally sensitive.

He might've also started to become jealous, controlling and even angry and displayed unattractive behaviors such as those.

So, even though the relationship was good at the start, he used to be confident, he used to be nice to her and used to be a good boyfriend or husband, the same isn't the case anymore.

He has changed emotionally and he's behaving in a different way now.

As a result, she feels differently about him.

This is why, if you want to get an ex back who dumped you, the most important thing that you need to first is regain control of your emotions.

If you interact with her, you need to be able to display emotional strength and emotional stability.

You need to be able to trigger her feelings of attraction based on how you are coming across emotionally, the way that you're behaving, the way that you're talking, the vibe that you're giving off, your attitude, your actions and so on.

She needs to be able to look at that and naturally and automatically feel attracted to it.

So, what happens for a lot of guys is that they try to get their ex-girlfriend or ex-wife back before they've truly regained control of their emotions.

Regaining control of your emotions does not require you to not contact her for 30 or 60 days and really give yourself a lot of time to heal and improve and so on.

You don't need to waste all of that time.

In fact, in most situations where a guy is wanting to get a woman back, he needs to act sooner than later.

You need to get on to it.

You need to get the job done.

If a guy leaves it too long and he gives himself 30 or 60 days to improve and get ready to contact his ex, she will usually have moved on already.

She will either have gotten over the breakup and over her feelings for him, or she will have met a new guy or a number of new guys.

That is what happens.

So, what I recommend if you have been dumped, is that you get things done quickly.

You regain control of your emotions quickly.

Get it done.

Don't think that you need to have 30 days or 60 days to slowly heal.

You need to be a man about it.

You need to get this done now.

Once you've regained control of your emotions and you're feeling confident and you're feeling happy regardless of whether or not she is in your life, then you should interact with her, re-attract her and get her back.

If you try to get her back before you've regained control of your emotions, she will pick up on it.

She will be able to sense your hurt, your self-doubt, your pain, your neediness of her and it will turn her off.

Women are not attracted to emotional weakness in men.

The way that a woman feels turned off happens automatically.

She doesn't even have to think about it.

It's just a trigger.

If she interacts with you and she senses that you're not in control of your emotions, you need her and are in a lot of pain, it's going to turn her off.

2. Understand the few things that you need to change to make her feel differently about you

Now, I've said "few things" on purpose.

The reason why, is that I want you to understand that you don't need to change 100 or 150 things about yourself before you can get her back.

In most cases, a guy just needs to change, improve, or adjust a few things.

Then when he interacts with his ex woman, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

She will feel it.

She will sense the changes in him and it will automatically make her feel respect and attraction for him.

It's important that you understand that and that you believe it, too, because if you believe that you need to change 100 things before you can get her back then how are you going to be coming across?

You're going to be doubting yourself.

She's going to sense that you're trying hard to impress her.

She's going to sense that you don't feel worthy of her anymore.

That's not going to make a woman feel attracted and it's certainly not going to make an ex feel attracted.

Of course, sometimes a guy can get another chance with his ex woman without changing anything about himself or without doing anything special.

That often happens after the first breakup where the woman is still in love with the guy, still has feelings for him and can't deal with not having him in her life anymore.

So, she will get back with him.

However, if she continues to feel turned off by the way that he's behaving and thinking and acting and reacting and responding to her, then she's going to break up with him again.

If her attraction is naturally being turned off around him, then she's not going to want to be in a relationship with him.

So, it's important that you understand what few things you need to change or improve and adjust about yourself and then do that.

For example, sometimes a guy is a really good guy and just wants to treat a woman really nicely and be supportive and be generous and listen and blah, blah, blah, all that nice stuff.

He just wants to be the perfect good guy.

Initially, a woman may really like that, especially if she has gotten out of an abusive relationship or hasn't really ever been treated that nicely before.

Yet, if the guy is simply offering her that, just niceness and goodness, then it can become boring for some women.

Some women do need a guy to have a bit more of an edge about him, a bit more balls and to not be so nice and sweet and soft and gentle all the time.

So, if a guy got dumped for essentially being too nice and sweet and gentle and being too much of a good guy, he needs to understand that one of the few things that he needs to change or adjust or improve is to have a bit more balls around her.

he needs to be a bit more ballsy in the way that he uses humor, to be a bit more ballsy in the way that he looks at her and his body language and to talk in a bit more of a masculine way to let her feel that and realize that, "Hey, he does have it all."

He's not just a nice, sweet, neutral guy that is going to continue to bore her.

There is something there and he needs to be able to interact with her and create a spark based on that.

In examples like those, what I found is that a guy is usually unwilling to do anything other than be nice, neutral, sweet, formal and all that sort of stuff with his woman.

He doesn't want to be a bit more masculine.

He doesn't want to be more ballsy because he thinks that it's wrong.

He thinks that the way to be a man is to just be nice and sweet and gentle and give the woman all the power.

Yet, if he does that, she's not getting the attraction experience that she wants.

He's attracted to her.

He looks at her and he feels attracted.

He spends time with her and he feels attraction and love.

He just wants to be around her.

He loves her.

Yet for her, the feelings aren't mutual because something is missing.

He's just too plain, neutral and nice and gentle and all that sort of stuff.

She needs him to have a bit more edge.

3. Don't rush to get her to commit to a relationship

Some guys don't understand the power of sexual attraction and they also don't take into account, the fact that their ex girl doesn't have the same type of feelings as they do.

For example: He is sexually attracted to her and romantically attracted to her, but she's not feeling the same way.

Yet, he doesn't really care about that because what's most important to him is how he feels about her, how much he wants her, how much he needs her, how much he loves her.

That is what is important to him.

Yet, when getting an ex woman back, you have to focus on what is important to her.

What's important to her is how she feels.

How does she feel about you? Does she feel sexually and romantically attracted to you?

That is what really counts.

So, it's really important for you to understand that before trying to get a relationship with your ex, you first need to make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

If you are trying to rush her into committing to a relationship, or trying to discuss the relationship, get her to understand your point of view and hopefully see that things could be better, then she's going to remain closed up.

What you need to understand is that now that she has dumped you, she's most likely going to be selfish about it now.

She's only going to get back with you if it feels good to her.

She doesn't want to try hard to make a relationship work.

She only wants to get back into a relationship if she is feeling sexually and romantically attracted again.

She isn't going to care about how much you care, unless you make her have feelings for you again.

When you reawaken her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction, she will automatically begin to care about you again because she will want to get more of that feeling.

That's how to get her back.

4. Give her a new experience with you

This essentially comes down to you interacting with her and letting her feel differently around you.

When you first met and when you first started dating, she most likely felt exciting, desirable emotions.

When you got into a relationship with her and she fully fell in love with you, she most likely felt exciting, desirable emotions.

Yet, now that you and her are broken up, what type of emotions is she feeling?

She's most likely feeling stressed out, resentful, annoyed or turned off.

So, what you need to be able to do is give her a new experience with you.

Let her see that getting back together actually feels good.

It's an exciting, desirable process.

It feels really good.

Now, to be clear, I'm not saying that you should TELL her that getting back together feels good.

I'm not saying that you should try to get her to understand that she will feel good in future.

That's not it at all.

What you need to do is interact with her and display personality traits and behaviors that are naturally attractive to her in a situation like this.

The situation is that she has dumped you and she doesn't want to be with you.

As a result, she is most likely going to be cold and closed off when you try to talk to her and make her laugh.

So, what type of behavior or personality trait is going to be attractive to a woman in a situation like that?

She's going to want to see that you are CONFIDENT, regardless of how she is behaving and that you have the confidence to joke around with her, regardless of how she is reacting.

This is where a lot of guys go wrong.

They try to be confident around their ex girl and make her laugh and things and in some cases, a guy will notice that she's not responding very well.

So, he will assume, "Oh, it's not working. There's nothing that I can do to make her feel attracted. Anything that I try just doesn't work on her."

That's actually not true.

When getting an ex back, you've got to think about it in the same way as picking up a woman for the first time.

When a guy walks up and talks to a woman for the first time, she's usually not going to give him loads of signs of interest to make it easy for him.

She's going to act like it's not working on her, to see how confident he REALLY is.

Of course, that's not how your ex woman would have necessarily behaved in the relationship when things were going well.

When you and her were in a relationship and were in love and happy to be together, she was most likely responding well when you were confident around her and she would laugh at your jokes, right?

She would be sweet and nice and supportive.

Yet, now that she has dumped you, it's a completely different story altogether.

She's going to be acting like a woman who is testing your confidence, which is what happens when you meet a woman for the first time.

This is why the first tip that I gave you in this video is so important.

You've got to regain control of your emotions.

If you try to get her back when you haven't regained control of your emotions (i.e. you're not yet feeling confident and worthy of her), then she's going to pick up on that and it's going to turn her off.

Learn More?

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more and you would like to follow a step-by-step process to get your ex back, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn exactly what to say and do to make her give you another chance.

She will want to get back with you.

She will feel attracted to you again and it will happen naturally.

You've Got to Be Confident and Feel Worthy of Her

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that a lot of guys miss out on getting their ex woman back because they don't feel worthy of her anymore.

They don't feel good enough.

They lose confidence as a result of being dumped.

That's understandable, yet, you have to overcome it.

You must get yourself to a point (and quickly!) where you are feeling confident and self-assured.

You must be able to interact with her and trigger natural attraction inside of her.

Don't try to convince her to give you another chance when she's not feeling attracted to you.

That doesn't work.

Most guys feel like their situation is more difficult than another guy's situation.

It may feel difficult to you.

It may feel like everyone else can get their ex back, but you can't because she dumped you and some of the things that she said really hurt you and they seem really final.

For example, "I never want to be with you again. I've had enough of this. I hate you. I don't feel attracted to you," and so on.

That is based on how she was feeling when she broke up with you.

Yet, she used to feel attracted to you and she was most likely in love with you before.

You can get her back to that and you can actually make her feel MORE attracted to you than she felt before.

You can level up as a man.

You can improve your ability to make her feel natural attraction.

You can trigger those feelings inside of her and get her back.

10 Examples of When Not to Use the No Contact Rule

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

In most cases, when a man is trying to get a woman back after a breakup, the No Contact Rule is an ineffective strategy.

It doesn't work.

In some cases, it will work, but in most cases, it just ends up causing more problems for the guy and he loses his woman in the process.

Now, I want to point out a couple of things before we begin.

1. This video is for men only

The No Contact Rule works differently on men than it does for women.

So, this is about men getting women back.

It's not about women getting men back.

Women who use the No Contact Rule have a completely different result than men who use the No Contact Rule on a woman who they're trying to get back.

So, this is for men.

2. This is about the 30 day No Contact Rule

When I talk about examples of when it's not effective to use the No Contact Rule, I'm referring to the No Contact Rule that is 30 days.

So, that's 30 days after a breakup where you don't contact your ex and even if she contacts you, you just remain silent.

What I've found is that in most cases where a guy tries to use the 30-day No Contact Rule on a woman to get her back, it ends up backfiring.

10 Examples

Let's get into 10 examples of when it's not a good idea to use the 30-day No Contact Rule and then 6 examples of where it's okay to use it and where it can work.

The first example of when not to use the No Contact Rule is...

1. She's no longer attracted to you

When a guy gets broken up with by a woman, it's usually because she has lost respect for him and can't feel attracted to him anymore.

As a result, she's no longer in love with him.

So, she's pretty much over it.

She doesn't want to be with him anymore.

Then, she goes ahead and dumps him.

She leaves the relationship, she walks away and she feels fine about it.

She doesn't feel like she's missing out on anything because she doesn't feel attracted to him anymore and she just doesn't want to be with him.

So, when he doesn't contact her for 30 days or for 60 days, she doesn't really care about it.

Some women might be affected by that and think, "Well, hang on. Why isn't my ex contacting me?"

In cases like that, she may decide to contact him just to check that he is still actually missing her and when she finds that out, she can then continue to move on.

However, what happens in most cases is that the woman just moves on.

She doesn't try to contact her ex anymore because she doesn't actually want to be with him.

She goes out and has some fun with her girlfriends and meet some new guys, potentially hooks up with a guy very quickly or soon after the breakup.

Alternatively, she might get on online dating or use an app like Tinder and have loads of dates lined up so she can easily move on.

The next example of when not to use the No Contact Rule is...

2. You took her for granted

So, say, for example, a man was in a relationship with a woman and he wasn't treating her very well. She really loved him, she was trying to do her best to make the relationship work and he didn't really put in his fair share.

He might have just expected her to put up with his bad behavior and bad treatment of her because she loved him so much or because the sex was so good, or because he's such a confident guy and he knows that other women would want him so she's lucky to have him.

In a situation like that, a woman will eventually get to the point where she's sick and tired of being taken for granted and she'll dump her guy.

If the guy then doesn't contact her, she will usually see that as yet another sign that he doesn't care about her and that he's not the sort of guy that she should settle down with.

Not only didn't he care about her feelings in the relationship and just do whatever he wanted, but he's doing the same thing now.

Of course, in some cases, a woman will contact her ex who has taken her for granted and then doesn't contact her.

However, the majority of women who have been taken for granted, have been treated badly and have had enough of it, will see him not contacting her as yet another sign that he's just the same guy that she broke up with.

Why is she going to go back to him and give him all the power and be in the low position when she's sick of that?

She's sick of being in that position.

She wants a more even type of relationship.

Of course, there are exceptions.

Some women will go back to a guy who has taken her for granted and isn't contacting her.

She's addicted to him.

She's addicted to the sex, she's addicted to how confident he is and she will just keep going back to him for a while.

However, the majority of women will just move on because they'll see him not contacting her as yet another example of him just taking her for granted and not giving a crap about her, basically.

The third example of when you should not use the No Contact Rule is...

3. She can move on easily without you

Some women know that they can easily attract a new guy.

Some women have plenty of girlfriends that they can go out and party with.

Some women know that they can easily get on an online dating site or a Tinder app, something like that and instantly have loads of dates lined up.

Some women know that there are many guys at their work or university who are interested in them and all she has to do is open herself up to that and she can easily start dating and having sex with new guys.

So, if a woman is the type of woman who can easily move on after a breakup, the No Contact Rule often backfires.

She doesn't hear from her ex for 10 days, 20 days and then 30 days and somewhere along the line, she's most likely going to think, "Well, I'm going to make myself feel better by just moving on with one of the many guys who are interested in me or I'm going to go out with my girlfriends and hook up with a guy and make myself feel good. I don't have to be thinking about my ex. I don't have to worry about him. We're broken up now. I can do whatever I want."

The next example of when you shouldn't use the No Contact Rule is...

4. She's had plenty of experience with breakups

If a woman is very young and doesn't have much experience with breakups, the No Contact Rule can work well on her.

She most likely won't be able to deal with not having her ex in her life anymore.

She won't be able to deal with the fact that she dumped him, but he isn't chasing her.

He isn't trying to get her back.

He's just cut off contact and she will wonder, "What is going on? How could he accept the breakup so easily?"

She'll most likely contact him and open herself back up to the relationship to get him back and feel better about herself.

However, if a woman has had some experience with breakups, she will know what guys do and she will know how she feels after a breakup.

She will know that there's some initial pain, but it goes away.

She will know that she can move on after a breakup and that she can be happy with another guy.

So, if her ex doesn't contact her, she doesn't have to worry about that.

She knows that she can move on, she can make herself feel better and she doesn't have to go back to a relationship with a guy who potentially hasn't even changed and potentially won't even be able to change.

He hasn't interacted with her, so she doesn't know if he's changed.

She doesn't know if he has the potential to change and she doesn't know if she's actually going to feel differently around him when they interact.

All she is going on is how she felt leading up to the breakup and during the breakup which was she was turned off.

She wanted out of the relationship.

So, there's no real reason for her to go back to that if she's had some experience with breakups and knows that she's going to be able to get over it and move on.

The next example of when not to use the No Contact Rule is...

5. She has too much self-pride to chase you

Sometimes, a guy will get dumped by his woman and not contact her.

She will be sitting around thinking about him and missing him and regretting the breakup.

Yet, she doesn't want to come across as a woman who comes crawling back after a breakup.

She doesn't want to come across as a woman who needs him.

So, a woman like that is going to have too much self-pride to come chasing her ex and trying to get another chance with him.

She may be feeling hurt by the fact that he isn't contacting her, but she doesn't want to lower herself by contacting him.

In reality, contacting him isn't lowering herself, but according to the way that she thinks with all of her self-pride, it is going to be an act of lowering herself.

She worries that she's going to lose face, that she's not going to look as independent as she has been claiming to be all along.

So, in cases like that, what a woman will usually do is just try to move on by hooking up with new guys and going out and enjoying herself rather than coming back to her ex and losing that sense of power that she has over him.

The next example of when not to use the No Contact Rule is...

6. Her friends and family don't like you

If a woman's family and friends agree with her decision to break up with a guy, then they're most likely going to let her know that after the breakup.

If her ex guy isn't contacting her, they're most likely going to use that as a reason to say things like, "Well, see, he doesn't really care," or, "See, he's not man enough to contact you," or, "See, this just proves that he plays mind games or that he isn't mature enough to face the situation head on," or, "See, I told you. He never really loved you. He's probably out there hooking up with new women now. You deserve better."

They'll essentially say things to support her decision because they want to get him out of her life and out of their life.

So, in cases like that, using the No Contact Rule doesn't benefit a guy.

Of course, don't get me wrong.

There are exceptions.

Sometimes, if a woman's family and friends don't like a guy and he doesn't contact them, it might give them a little bit of time to calm down and start to think that he isn't so bad after all.

Yet, those are the exceptions.

What I'm talking about are the majority of situations that guys face out there when they're trying to get a woman back.

In this case, for example, a guy is trying to get a woman back, but her friends and family don't like him.

In most of those cases, what will happen is that her friends and family will use the no contact as a way of pointing out negatives about him.

The next example of when not to use the No Contact Rule is...

7. She never really loved you

Sometimes, a woman will get into a relationship with a guy because she felt some attraction for him. She had a bit of a crush on him, or he grew on her overtime and eventually got her into a relationship. Yet, she never truly, deeply loved him.

She may have felt some love for him at times, but it just wasn't enough to make her feel like she was totally in love with him.

So, she always knew in her heart that he was a good guy and she felt some love for him, but there was just something missing.

Something was telling her that he wasn't the right guy for her.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't know how to fix that problem when they're in it.

To point out quickly, the way to fix that problem is to give her the attraction experience that she really wants.

A classic example is where a guy is really nice and sweet and soft and gentle and he's basically trying to be like the perfect boyfriend or husband.

He's just being really nice to her and supportive and letting her get her way all the time.

Yet, that isn't exciting for a woman.

What a woman really wants in addition to having a good man is that the guy actually has some balls.

He puts her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way at times, so she can look up to him and respect him and feel like a feminine woman around him.

When a man uses that approach with a woman, she doesn't feel like just a friend in a mutual way. She also doesn't feel just bored and like everything is just so nice, plain, soft and gentle in the relationship.

Instead, he's clearly the man and she's clearly the woman.

As a result, both he and her always feel sexually attracted to each other, rather than feeling neutral around each other because of a lack of a clear difference in the gender role and energy.

This is a big problem in today's society because a lot of guys are afraid to be manly because they think it's wrong, or because they're worried about being told off by a woman.

Yet, to be successful with women, you have to embrace your masculinity and live it.

There's no way around it.

If you hide from being manly or think it's wrong, women will cheat on you, dump you and treat you with disrespect.

It's just how nature works.

So, in cases where a woman never really loved a guy who was too much of a softie and he then uses the 30-day No Contact Rule on her, it will usually backfire.

She never really loved him anyway, so she doesn't know.

She knows that he doesn't know how to give her the attraction experience that she really wants.

She's given him plenty of chances before, she's hinted at it, she's nagged him, she's tried to talk to him about things and complain about things, but he just didn't get it.

He might have been the sort of guy that thought that being the perfect gentleman was exactly what a woman wanted and that doing anything other than that is wrong.

As a result, she just felt bored.

There was no excitement.

There was no edge.

It was just too plain and neutral.

So, this is another example of when not to use the No Contact Rule.

Of course, there are exceptions.

Don't get me wrong.

Sometimes, a woman never really loved a guy, she breaks up with him, he doesn't contact her and then she realizes that she misses him and she wants him back.

Yet, in most cases, what really happens is that the woman knows why she broke up with him.

She knows that he's a good guy, but there just wasn't enough of a spark there.

There wasn't enough of a spark to cause her to feel like she was totally in love with him.

Therefore, she feels like she just has to move on.

When he doesn't contact her, she might feel disappointed about that and she might even feel a bit hurt, but in most cases, she's not going to come running back to guy that she was never really in love with.

The next example of when not to use the No Contact Rule is...

8. She's an independent woman

This is different to her having too much self-pride to chase you after a breakup.

Having too much self-pride is an act.

It's about a front that she's putting on.

On the other hand, being an independent woman means that she really is an independent woman.

She doesn't actually need a guy to feel happy.

She doesn't need a guy in her life.

She wants to have a boyfriend, but she can go without it or she wants to have a husband, but she can go without it.

A truly independent woman.

Women like that can break up with a guy and completely shut off their feelings for him.

They can easily just move on and get on with their life, without worrying about the relationship that they've just lost.

So, when a guy uses the No Contact Rule and doesn't contact her, it usually backfires.

She just gets on with her life without him.

The next example of when not to use the No Contact Rule is...

9. She has plenty of single girlfriends who want to party with her

If a woman breaks up with a guy and she has plenty of single girlfriends who want to go and party with her, she will usually go along with them and do that.

When a woman goes out and parties and maybe drinks some alcohol, all sorts of things can happen.

She can meet a guy that she finds attractive and he can be turning her on as he's talking to her.

All of a sudden, she doesn't feel like she has to be loyal to her ex anymore.

She's feeling attracted in the moment and she can just go with it.

Some women might not do that initially because they might not want to hook up with a guy very quickly, but most women will.

What I've found by helping guys over the years is that so many guys have heard their ex woman say that she's not going to hook up with any guys after the breakup.

She's not interested in dating, she's not interested in having a relationship, she's not interested in any other guys, she just wants to be alone.

Yet, days or weeks later, she's already in a relationship with a new guy or she's hooked up with a new guy.

So, in the case where a woman has a lot of single girlfriends who want to go out and party with her, the No Contact Rule will often backfire.

What may happen, for example, is a woman goes out and parties with her single girlfriends and she starts missing her ex.

She hasn't heard from him for a week, so she texts him.

Yet, he doesn't respond because he's using the No Contact Rule.

Then, she has a few more drinks.

She starts wanting to make herself feel better and there are guys hitting on her, so she opens herself up to it.

The next thing you know, she has sex with one of those guys, or she kisses him, she exchanges phone numbers, they go on a date, they get into a relationship and her ex suddenly starts becoming a distant memory.

She's enjoying the feelings of lust and attraction for the new guy and she goes along with it.

She doesn't have to feel so bad about the fact that her ex isn't contacting her.

Of course, those are the situations where a woman actually does care about her ex and is missing him.

A lot of times when a guy gets dumped, the woman doesn't really care afterwards.

She's over it.

From her perspective, she gave him more than enough chances and he wasn't able to change.

He wasn't able to give her the attraction experience that she really wanted and she fell out of love with him.

She doesn't want to be with him anymore.

So, when he doesn't contact her, she doesn't really care about it.

The final example of when not to use the No Contact Rule is...

10. You didn't attract her in the ways that were important to her

So, with this example, the woman was kind of attracted, but she knew that she wanted to feel more.

He was never really able to make her feel fully attracted to him.

He assumed that because the sex was good at the start and she used to be in love with him, she would stick with him for life.

Yet, she got to a point where she was tired of waiting for him to improve.

She was bored of the fact that there wasn't really much of a spark between him and her.

So, if a woman breaks up with a guy in a situation like that and he uses the No Contact Rule, she's usually not going to feel much motivation to go back to him.

She might feel a little bit disappointed that he's not contacting her, but she will remember why she broke up with him.

She will know that there really wasn't much of a spark between him and her and if she went back to him, it'll probably be more of the same.

In fact, she knows that it might even be worse because he may have lost a lot of confidence as a result of being dumped.

Therefore, he's going to be a bit more self-doubting and nervous and anxious around her which isn't attractive to women.

Women are naturally attracted to emotional strength in men and turned off by emotional weakness.

Of course, there are some exceptions.

Sometimes a woman hasn't felt much attraction in a relationship, she breaks up with the guy and he then doesn't contact her.

She then contacts him and wants to get back with him.

That does happen, but those are a small percentage of situations.

In the vast majority of cases, if a woman didn't really feel attracted to her ex, she's not going to come running back to him simply because he's not contacting her.

Instead, she'll remember why she broke up with him, she'll try to move on and if she meets a guy who she finds more attractive and interesting, she will almost always hook up with that guy to help herself move on.

Okay, so those were some examples of when not to use the No Contact Rule.

6 Examples of When it's Okay to Use the No Contact Rule

Here are some examples of when it's okay to use it and when it can work, at times.

1. You know for sure that she won't be able to handle the fact that you're not contacting her

She will miss you like crazy and then try to get you back.

If you know for sure that your ex just won't be able to handle the fact that you're not contacting her, then go ahead.

You can run that risk and I say "risk" because it is still a risk.

It's not guaranteed that if you don't contact her, she's going to come running back to you.

There's still a risk that she's going to think, "Well, no. The relationship's over. I don't want to go back," or she's going to have too much self-pride to contact you, or she's going to meet a new guy that she finds interesting and attractive.

Those risks are still there if you use the No Contact Rule.

However, if you know for sure that your ex girl will be absolutely missing you like crazy and won't be able to handle it, then go ahead.

Don't contact her.

Hopefully, she will contact you.

Hopefully, she will be missing you and will make the ex back process easy for you and you'll get her back.

The next example of when it's okay to use the No Contact Rule is...

2. You want to get over her

The No Contact Rule was originally prescribed by therapists and relationship counselors as a way for a couple to get over each other and move on.

In most cases, it was used to help the woman get away from a guy who was trying to get her back and a relationship counselor would suggest that they have 30 days of no contact to calm down and figure out what they want.

Another thing is that men and women tend to use the No Contact Rule for different purposes.

For example, with this video here, the woman who made it is a smart woman, is giving helpful advice and is sincerely helping women who want to move on from a relationship and not go back to it.

Yet, she is suggesting the No Contact Rule for women as a way to GET OVER their man and stop going back to the relationship.

That is what most people will use the No Contact Rule for.

So, if you want to get over your ex girlfriend or ex wife and you want to get to the point where you don't want her anymore, then the No Contact Rule can help.

It's not a guarantee though.

I've been helping new guys to get women back for many years now.

I've seen all the cases, heard all of the strategies that guys use and worked out where guys go wrong and what they should be doing instead.

One of the things I've found, is that most guys who really love their ex-girlfriend or ex-wife don't get over her for YEARS.

So, a guy might think that if he uses the 30-day No Contact Rule, he's going to be able to get over his ex and feel like he doesn't need her anymore and then he's going to be ready to contact her and get her back.

Yet, what most guys find is that during the no-contact period, all they're really doing is thinking about their ex girl.

He's constantly thinking about her and worrying what she might be up to.

He keeps looking at his phone to see if he's got any missed calls or text messages.

He's looking at her on social media.

He's looking through old photos.

He's imagining her moving on with a new guy and he's feeling horrible about it.

He's also not feeling as confident as he used to feel.

He's feeling a bit down as a result of the breakup.

He's feeling a bit sad and hurt and lonely about the fact that she's not running back to him.

She's not contacting him and wanting to give him another chance.

So, what happens in cases like this, is that a guy has intended to use the 30 or 60-day no contact period as a way to get over his ex and feel like he isn't needy of her anymore, but he ends up being even more needy and not being able to get over her.

Meanwhile, she's fine, in most cases.

She just moves on.

She starts feeling happy with her life again and potentially meets a new guy or new guys.

So, if you want to use the No Contact Rule to completely get over your ex because you're intending on not contacting her and just hooking up with new women and moving on, then great.

It can work because if your intention is just to move on without her and get over her, then not looking back and just focusing on new women can make that happen.

Of course, there's no guarantee.

A lot of guys who get dumped by the woman that they love don't ever forget about her.

They are often thinking about her and wishing that they could get her back.

Another example of when it's okay to use the No Contact Rule and when it can work is...

3. You want to give her the freedom to date other guys, so she can see that you are better

This often applies in cases where a guy is a really cool, confident guy and can easily attract other women.

He understands how to make women feel attracted.

He's a masculine guy and he knows that women want him.

He knows that he's got the goods.

Yet, he was treating his woman badly.

He wasn't giving her enough commitment.

He may have disregarded her feelings and made her feel stupid or unworthy of him and she had enough.

She then broke up with him and he accepted it.

Now, as a way to get her back, he might decide that he's totally fine about her going out there and hooking up with other guys, because he knows she's not going to be able to find another guy like him.

She's going to realize that other guys aren't as confident and cool and masculine as he is and she's going to come back.

Another example of when it's okay to use the No Contact Rule is...

4. You are long distance, have completely broken up and have no way to see each other for at least 6 months

A man can get his woman back if they're long distance.

What really matters is that he interacts with her and he makes her feel sexual and romantic attraction for him during their interactions.

He does that over the phone and he gets in front of her.

He either gets her to come and meet him or he goes and meets her, whatever it takes.

He gets an in-person interaction so he can trigger feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

He creates that magical feeling of attraction that brings a man and a woman together.

She feels it.

She feels so attracted to him, the love starts to flow again and she wants to hook up with him sexually and she wants to try to work out how to make the relationship work.

However, if a guy is in a situation where his ex has dumped him, she's long distance and there's absolutely no way he can go and see her, then the No Contact Rule can work.

It can be okay.

The reason why is that, if there's no possible way to see each other and she knows it, then she's most likely going to hook up with other guys and start to move on during that time.

If a guy is still trying to get his ex woman back and she's hooking up with new guys, then he's most likely going to feel hurt by that.

He's most likely not going to be able to hide the pain that he's feeling, when she tells him about it on a phone call or on a video call.

However, all that said, if a guy does want to get his ex woman back and they've completely broken up and are long distance, I highly recommend that he goes and sees her.

I've heard back from so many guys who have done that and met up with their ex girl, focused on attraction, hooked up with her sexually and made her want the relationship again.

That is how to get a woman back in a situation like that.

Some guys are worried about doing it because they feel like it might seem needy to go to where she is.

Here's the thing though...

It's only needy if you are needy.

Needy means that you need her to be good to you, show interest and be nice to you in order to feel good about yourself.

Not being needy is where you are happy and confident and enjoying life regardless of whether or not she's in it.

So, you can be happy and confident and enjoying life regardless of whether or not she's in it and go and meet up with her.

You can still be that confident, emotionally independent guy, but if you are needy of her and you are saying, "Please! Let's meet up!" and you go over there and you have a needy vibe, then it is going to look needy to her.

It is going to look desperate.

So, there is a distinction and that is that if you go and meet up with her and you're not needy, then it's not going to come across as needy and desperate.

However, if you go and meet up with her and you are needy, then she's going to sense that and it's going to turn her off and put her guard up.

Another example of when it's okay to use the No Contact Rule is...

5. You know that she's only pretending to break up with you to gain power over you in a relationship

An example is where a woman is falling in love with a guy after just a month.

She secretly feels that he's going to break her heart, because it seems like he could easily break up with her if he wanted to.

So, she pretends to break up with him to hopefully make him chase and plead with her.

She hopes that she can then get him treating her better and being more committed to her, or possibly even take control of the relationship and make him feel like he needs her.

By the way, this often happens when a guy wasn't really attracted to a woman initially, but she grew on him over time and he eventually accepted a relationship with her.

She knew that he wasn't really attracted to her in the beginning, so she's breaking up with him now to hopefully make him feel like he needs her.

So, if you think that your woman has broken up with you just to gain power over you because you seemed like you didn't really need her, then the No Contact Rule can work.

She'll be sitting around worrying and feeling upset that she's losing a great guy like you and will most likely contact you.

Of course, there's no guarantee of that because she may decide to make herself feel better by hooking up with a new guy.

If the new guy happens to make her feel more respect, attraction and love, she may decide then to get into a relationship with him.

Finally, another example of when it's okay to use the No Contact Rule is...

6. You immediately accept the breakup and walk away

Of course, most guys don't do that when they get broken up with.

Most guys try to reason with the woman and convince her to give him another chance and some guys make the mistake of then begging and pleading for another chance.

So, the small percentage of guys who didn't make that mistake and just accepted the breakup right away can use the No Contact Rule.

The reason why is that she broke up with him and he just said, "Okay, I accept that. I love you, I want to be with you, but I accept that. See you later," and he walked away.

She then feels empty.

She feels like she's being rejected.

Why isn't he chasing her?

Why isn't he trying to reason with her and convince her to give him another chance?

He seems like he's totally fine without her.

Suddenly, she doesn't feel like she has gained much by breaking up with him.

She's feeling worse!

As a result, the No Contact Rule can work on a woman like her.

Yet, what do you need to do if you're like 95% of guys who didn't immediately accept the breakup?

What you need to do is focus on re-attraction.

You need to interact with your ex and actively make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

This is a feeling that happens automatically when you interact with a woman if you are displaying traits that make women feel attracted.

For example:

- You're being confident and self-assured, even though she's being cold and distant and difficult.
- You're using humor to make her laugh, even though she's acting like it's not working.
- You're using flirting to create a sexual vibe, even though she's acting like that couldn't work on her and isn't working on her.

What you need to understand is that most women want to use the No Contact Rule after a breakup because they're afraid that their ex is going to make them have feelings again.

So, in most cases, the No Contact Rule just helps a woman to move on from her guy.

He's not interacting with her and actively seducing her.

He's not making her have sexual and romantic feelings.

She holds on to how she was feeling leading up to the breakup, during the breakup and after she broke up with him.

She felt like it was the right thing to do.

In most cases, the woman will try to just focus on that and stick with the breakup and move on.

So, while her guy is giving her 30 or 60 days of space and hoping that it works to get her back, she is quietly moving on or very loudly moving on.

She might quietly move on by getting into a relationship or hooking up with new guys and not telling her ex about it, or she might loudly move on by getting into a new relationship and announcing it on social media and texting her ex about it to make him feel bad.

In summary, what I recommend for most guys is that they don't use the No Contact Rule.

What I'm not talking about, though, is the opposite of the No Contact Rule where you bombard your ex with messages and phone calls and plead and beg.

I'm not talking about that.

I'm talking about getting her back in a confident, calm manner.

You interact with her and you create feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

Her guard comes down, she opens up to you and you can get her back into a relationship naturally.

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more and follow a step-by-step process to get your ex back, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you'll learn how to quickly get her back into a relationship with you without seeming needy or desperate.

You'll learn how to get her back in a way that makes her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She will experience sparks of respect, attraction and love for you.

Her feelings will come flooding back.

She will want to be in a relationship with you and you will get back with her naturally and easily.

You Are in Control

One final point that I want to make in this video, is that it's up to you what approach you take to get your ex back.

If you want to cut off contact with her and just run the risk that she won't move on without you and she won't be happy without you, then go ahead and do that.

However, if you want to take control of the situation, then what I recommend you focus on is attraction.

I recommend that you interact with your ex and actively make her feel attracted to you.

Interact with her and create those magical feelings that bring a man and a woman together, sexual and romantic attraction.

Once you create those feelings inside of her, she automatically begins to look at you differently.

She starts feeling attracted to you.

The love starts flowing back into her heart.

She looks at you with loving eyes.

She feels attracted in a sexual and romantic way.

As a result, getting her back becomes a natural, easy thing.

She wants to get back with you.

She wants to explore the new interesting feelings that she has for you.

She doesn't want to regret you being the one that got away.

She doesn't want to go on for the next couple of weeks or couple of months or couple of years of her life, thinking about you and wondering why she just didn't give you another chance.

You interacted with her and you made her feel attracted.

There were clearly sparks flying between you and her.

Most women do not want to walk away from that.

6 Common Misconceptions About The No Contact Rule

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

One of the most common techniques to try to get an ex back is to cut off contact.

Unfortunately, it doesn't always work, especially for men who are trying to get women back.

So, in this video, I'm going to cover 6 common misconceptions about the No Contact Rule to help you avoid making classic mistakes that will push your ex-girlfriend or ex-wife further away.

1. You have to do it for 30 or 60 days

The first common misconception about the No Contact Rule is you have to do it for 30 or 60 days.

Every breakup is different and every situation is different, so cutting off contact for 30 or 60 days in all situations just doesn't make any sense.

The fact is that some guys get their ex-girlfriend or ex-wife back immediately.

Some guys get their woman back within days and some within a week or two.

You don't have to cut off contact for 30 or 60 days after a breakup to get an ex back.

In some cases, it can be a good idea to cut off contact with your woman for 30 or 60 days, but in most cases what happens is that the woman ends up moving on.

Some of the reasons why she moves on are that:

- She just gets used to not having her ex in her life anymore.
- She wants to make herself feel better by hooking up with a new guy because her ex isn't contacting her.
- She wants to seek revenge on her ex for not contacting her by hooking up with a new guy and letting him know about that, or;
- She was completely turned off by him at the time when she broke up with him, so there's no motivation for her to want to come back at all. Instead, she simply moves on.

So, rather than making the classic mistake of cutting off contact for 30 or 60 days and it causing your woman to move on, what I recommend that you do is use an approach that fits your situation.

For example: In most cases, a guy doesn't need to give his woman more than 3 to 7 days of space.

During that time, he should focus on improving his ability to make her feel attracted.

He should prepare himself to be able to make her feel attracted when he interacts with her after the few days to a week.

After the few days to a week of rapidly improving his ability to attract her, he should meet up with her and actually make her feel attracted.

While interacting with her, he focuses on triggering her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

He doesn't try to get into long, deep and meaningful conversations or beg and plead for another chance.

He focuses on triggering those magical feelings that bring a man and a woman together and keep them together.

Those feelings are sexual and romantic attraction.

When those feelings are in place, the love starts to flow back into a woman's heart.

Of course, some guys don't feel like they can get ready within a few days to a week.

They feel like they might need a month or two to recover and get ready to be able to interact with her and attract her.

A guy can run that risk if he wants to.

However, what I've seen by helping guys to get women back for many years now is that guys who wait too long usually end up losing their woman.

She simply moves on.

So, just know that you do not have to cut off contact with your ex-girlfriend or ex-wife for 30 or 60 days.

Use an approach that suits your situation.

For example: Some guys are ready to get their woman back immediately, some within a few days, some within a week, some within a couple of weeks.

However, just understand that you do not have to wait 30 or 60 days to take action and re-attract her and get her back.

30 or 60 days is not a scientifically proven number that has been found after doing intensive studies or anything like that.

It's simply something that people like to say because it's a round number and easy to remember and easy to understand.

Yet, there is no scientific evidence to prove that waiting 30 or 60 days gets an ex woman back.

So, what you need to do is decide on which approach you're going to use.

If you feel like cutting off contact for 30 or 60 days is going to do the trick and she's going to come running back to you, then great.

Do that.

However, if you feel like she's going to move on because she's no longer attracted to you then you need to focus on improving your ability to attract her and then interact with her and attract her again.

That's how you will get her back.

2. It's the only way to get a woman back after a breakup

Some guys just don't know what to do after they've been dumped by the woman they love.

It's a horrible feeling and often results in a guy behaving in ways that are completely out of character.

For example: He might start begging and pleading, writing long letters and emails expressing his love for her and trying to work things out, sending her loads of text messages, showing up at her door with flowers, gifts and so on.

It's completely out of character.

None of those things work and women see them as a turn off because the guy is being desperate.

Additionally, with things like long letters and emails, most women see that as selfish because the guy is usually talking about his feelings, what he wants and trying to get her to understand his point of view.

Yet, what she wants him to understand is her point of view and that is, she's not attracted to him anymore.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't understand that or they don't understand how to re-attract their ex-girlfriend or wife so what else can they do?

Some guys think, "Well, all I can do now is cut off contact and hope that she comes back to me."

Unfortunately, that doesn't work in most cases.

If a woman doesn't feel attracted to her guy anymore, she almost always just moves on.

She doesn't feel much or any motivation to go back to him simply because he's not contacting her.

Instead, she meets new guys, she feels attracted and she moves on.

So, a common misconception about the No Contact Rule is that it's the only way to get an ex back after a breakup.

It's not.

In fact, it's one of the worst ways for men.

The best way to get an ex woman back after a breakup is to improve your ability to make her feel attracted to you.

You need to be able to interact with her and trigger those magical feelings of sexual and romantic attraction that bring a man and woman together and keep them together.

That is what counts.

Rather than trying to tell her about your feelings and explain things and work things out, you need to focus on what matters most to her, that is, her feelings.

When she feels sexually and romantically attracted to you as you interact with her, her guard comes down.

She stops focusing on the problems that existed between you and her.

She starts feeling that there is hope for you and her.

She's feeling sparks of attraction for you and the love is starting to flow back into her heart.

3. Every woman responds well to it

The third common misconception about the No Contact Rule is every woman responds well to it.

Every woman does not respond well to the No Contact Rule.

In fact, many women respond negatively to it.

For example: A woman breaks up with a guy because he was taking her for granted.

He wasn't treating her well enough and she just got sick and tired of it.

He then doesn't contact her and she looks at him not contacting her as yet another example of him not giving a crap about her.

He's just not willing to put in the effort to make the relationship work.

Another example is where a woman breaks up with a guy because he was too emotionally immature. She wanted him to man up because he just wasn't man enough for her (e.g. he was too emotionally sensitive).

She then breaks up with him and he doesn't contact her.

She may then look at him not contacting her as him not being man enough to interact with her, attract her and get her back.

Another example is where a woman breaks up with a guy and he doesn't contact her.

She then looks at him not contacting her as him trying to play mind games with her.

He's trying to mess with her head and make her miss him. So she thinks, "Alright, well I'll show you."

She then goes out, hooks up with a guy sexually and lets her ex know about it.

So, let it be known, the No Contact Rule is not something that every woman responds well to.

Some women will respond well to it, in that they will feel like they're losing their ex-boyfriend or husband and then contact him.

That does happen.

However, just understand that not every woman responds well to not being contacted after a break-up.

4. Every guy will heal and get over his ex during the no contact period

It doesn't matter if a guy waits 30 days or 60 days after a breakup.

Some guys don't get over their ex-girlfriend or ex-wife for YEARS.

They do not heal from it.

Some guys, during the 30-day or 60-day no contact period actually lose even more confidence in themselves.

For example: A guy realizes that his ex-girlfriend or ex-wife hasn't been contacting him.

While he's sitting around cutting off contact for 30 or 60 days and hoping that it gets her back, he's essentially just thinking about her and missing her.

He's not healing from the breakup. He's not getting over her.

He wants her back more than ever and that feeling of wanting her back doesn't go away.

Of course, some guys will get over their ex-girlfriend right away.

Some guys will get over her within 3 days, a week, a month, a year.

Every guy is different.

Just understand though that the no contact period is not a guarantee way to get over your ex.

By the way...

One of the things that helps a guy heal faster, is having confidence in himself that he is going to be able to attract his ex-girlfriend or wife.

Then, interacting with her and attracting her and seeing how differently she responds to him.

He can then see that he does have a chance with her and it is working.

As a result, his confidence increases and she naturally feels more attracted to him because he is now more confident.

Women are naturally attracted to confidence in men and turned off by self-doubt and insecurity, so you can't lose if you increase your confidence.

She will feel more attracted to you.

That's a fact.

On the other hand, when a guy cuts off contact with his ex-girlfriend or wife and doesn't improve his ability to attract her, he doesn't have that kind of confidence in himself and his ability to make her feel attracted.

In most cases, after cutting off contact for 30 or 60 days, a guy will interact with his ex-woman and his self-doubt and insecurity will come across and turn her off.

Remember: Women are attracted to confidence, not self-doubt and insecurity.

So, if you are going to cut off contact with your ex for a week or more, just make sure that you are focusing on improving your ability to attract her.

What you want to do is prepare to make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you when you interact with her.

That is what counts and that is what gets her back for real.

Of course, you don't need 30 or 60 days to do that!

Most guys can do it in a few days to a week.

They can prepare themselves and then interact with their ex girl and get her back.

5. Putting the ball in her court is the best way to get her back

Some guys assume that it will look cool and tough and masculine if they say, "Oh, well, look.

Whatever. I want to be with you, but if you don't want to be with me, fine. If you change your mind, then contact me."

It might sound cool and tough to say that.

It might sound independent and like you don't really care.

Yet, here's the thing...

Women do not want to be the leaders in the dating and relationship dynamic.

This principle applies when you're picking up women, when you're on dates, when you're in a relationship and when you're getting your ex back.

For example: When picking up women, men can't just stand around and say, "Oh, well, stuff all these women. If they want to talk to me, then I'm not going to talk to them. They're going to have to come and talk to me."

Obviously, it doesn't work that way.

Women go out, the dress themselves up to look pretty and they hope that a man has the balls to come over and talk to them and make them feel attracted.

Women don't want to go over and talk to a guy who potentially isn't confident and then they end up with an insecure guy.

They want to have confident guys walk up and talk to them.

On dates, women like men to take the lead too.

Women are fine with choosing some dates and making some decisions, but for the most part, they want men to take the lead and lead the way.

Same with a relationship. A woman wants the man to lead the dynamic. She wants him to be in a one-up position.

The same applies with the ex back process.

You need to have the balls to interact with your ex and make her feel attracted to you.

You need to make her feel something for you again.

In other words, you need to trigger her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

When you do that, she opens back up to you.

However, if you just put the ball in her court and expect her to take the lead then you're most likely going to be disappointed.

Most guys who put the ball in the woman's court and expect her to come crawling back even though she's not attracted, end up disappointed.

She just moves on.

Of course, sometimes it is good to walk away and put the ball in the woman's court.

An example of when that is a good idea is when the woman's just being a pain in the butt.

She's just being unreasonable, being annoying and she is breaking up with him just to be a pain in the butt.

So, he just pushes her out of his life, doesn't contact her and leaves it up to her to contact him.

In cases like that, the woman will most likely come back.

Of course, it's not guaranteed, but the guy probably doesn't care either.

However, for most guys who need help to get an ex woman back, it's when the woman isn't attracted to him anymore.

She's over it, she dumped him, she doesn't want to be with him anymore and if he leaves it up to her to come back to him, she ain't coming back!

Finally, number 6. A common misconception about the No Contact Rule is...

6. It's the best way to improve yourself

If a guy cuts off contact with his woman for a week after the breakup, that will usually be enough time for him to prepare to re-attract her.

He doesn't need to spend any more time than that if he's actually focusing on improving his ability to attract her.

The reason why is that if he does improve his ability to attract her, then he's going to interact with her and create sparks of attraction.

She is going to feel differently.

She is going to be surprised by the way that she's feeling about him.

He also needs to be able to follow through on that and guide her through the rest of the ex back process and get her back, but that's what he needs to do to start the process of getting her back.

Just cutting off contact isn't the solution to improving yourself and getting her back.

For example: If a guy got dumped because he was insecure, he didn't feel worthy of his woman anymore.

He started being jealous and needy and clingy because he saw her as being more valuable than him.

She felt turned off by his lack of confidence in himself.

If he wants to get her back, he needs to fix that about himself.

If he just cuts off contact and doesn't improve his confidence, then he's going to turn her off when he next interacts with her.

So, he needs to focus on improving his feelings of worthiness.

How can he do that?

Here are three examples of what he can do. First, I'll read them out and then I'll explain them.

1. Stop worrying about what she thinks of you.
2. Stop seeing yourself as being unworthy of her.
3. Know that she will feel respect and attraction for you if you are stronger than before.

1. Stop focusing on what she thinks of you

Start focusing on what you think of yourself.

Start focusing on your positive qualities and focus on the fact that you are becoming a better man.

You have already become a better man since the breakup.

You've been learning and improving.

That's what you should be focusing on.

You are a better man now than you were when she broke up with you.

2. Stop seeing yourself as being unworthy

Whether you feel worthy or unworthy, comes down to what you think.

You have to decide that you are worthy of her.

You can't be looking to her for approval of your decision that you're worthy of her.

You can't be looking to her for compliments and reassurance that you're worthy of her.

You have to take that for yourself.

You have to say that, "I am worthy. I am good enough for her."

You have to believe that.

If you do believe that, you will naturally come across as confident and she will naturally feel more attracted to you.

3. Know that she will feel respect and attraction for you if are stronger than before

When she experiences the strength of your newfound confidence, she will naturally feel attracted to you.

She will naturally respect who you have become.

She might not make that obvious because she wants to test your confidence, but she will naturally feel that in response to your improved confidence.

Okay, so that was an example there of how a guy can improve himself in a particular way while he is cutting off contact with his woman.

I don't recommend that a guy cuts off contact for more than 7 days though.

I recommend that you be a man about your situation, you improve your ability to attract her, you interact with her and you get her back.

You do not need 30 or 60 days to heal.

You're not soft like that.

You are a strong man.

You're much more powerful and capable.

You can get this done now or very quickly.

You don't have to wait 1 or 2 months before you take action.

In other words, you don't have to wait 30 or 60 days before you begin the ex back process.

The fact is that most guys can get their ex woman back very quickly if they focus on improving their ability to attract her and then interact with her, attract her, hook up with her and get her back.

You can do that, too.

Learn More?

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn exactly what to say and do to get her back.

She will feel naturally attracted to you again.

The love will flow back into her heart.

She will be looking at you with love and attraction in her eyes.

Her feelings about you will completely change and you will get her back.

Take Control of Your Situation

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that, rather than focusing on cutting off contact and hoping it will make her come back, I recommend that men take control of the situation.

If you want to take control of the situation, you simply need to focus on attraction.

You need to interact with her and trigger her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

When you do that, you can skip through all the nonsense.

You can skip past all the mind games and you can just get her back.

She's feeling attracted to you, she's feeling like she's in love with you again and you get back into a relationship with her.

3 Alternatives to The No Contact Rule

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The 30-day no contact rule essentially means that you don't contact your ex girlfriend or ex wife for 30 days after the breakup.

If she contacts you during that time, ignore her, don't reply and just keep the communication cut off. Obviously, that isn't a good approach to use in most situations and will result in the woman moving on or seeking revenge by hooking up with a new guy and trying to make her ex feel bad!

What you need to remember is that two can play at mind games.

It's not just a guy that can do things.

Sometimes, a guy will assume that no contact will mess with her head and she won't be able to do anything about it.

Yet, as you may know, it's very easy for women to hook up with new men.

If she happens to meet a man that she finds more interesting and attractive, she won't worry about the fact that her ex isn't contacting her.

She will just move on.

Non Stop Contact?

Now, the opposite of no contact is nonstop contact and that's not what I'm talking about at all.

I'm not suggesting that instead of using the 30-day no contact rule, you should contact your ex all the time, bombard her, beg and plead and desperately chase her to get another chance with her.

That's not what I'm recommending at all.

Instead, I'm going to give you three effective alternatives to the no contact rule.

3 Alternatives

1. Give her 3 to 7 days of space and then get her back

The first alternative of giving your ex 3 to 7 days of space applies to most ex-back situations.

In most ex-back situations where a guy is trying to get a woman back, it's a case where he has turned her off leading up to the breakup and he didn't handle the breakup very well.

For example: He may have become insecure or emotionally sensitive in the relationship or had taken her for granted.

Then, when she attempted to break up with him, he reacted by becoming emotional and didn't handle it very well.

In cases like that, which is the majority of cases, a guy simply needs to give his woman a few days to a week of space and then start the ex back process.

Important: Make sure that you don't contact her during that time unless she contacts you.

What you need to focus on while giving her a few days to a week of space after the breakup, is to prepare to re-attract her.

You have to make sure that you are ready to interact with her and make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

For example: If you lost a lot of confidence as a result of being dumped, you need to make sure that you get your confidence back before you interact with her.

If you interact with her and she can sense that you don't feel worthy of her anymore, it's going to turn her off.

Women are not attracted to emotional weaknesses such as self-doubt and insecurity in men.

Women are attracted to emotional strengths such as confidence, high self-esteem and self-assuredness.

So, once you've given her a few days to a week of space, get in contact with her, re-attract her and get her back into a relationship with you.

2. Limited contact

With limited contact, this is where you should be open to texts and phone calls from her right away after the breakup.

You should also initiate some texts and phone calls yourself, at times.

This is best used when the breakup wasn't really a bad one.

For example: The woman wasn't entirely sure whether she should break up with the guy.

She's still interested, she still has feelings for him and when she broke up with him, he handled it quite well.

She's most likely going to be regretting her decision after the breakup and is going to be missing her ex pretty much right away.

In that case, you don't need to play mind games with her and make her feel even worse and potentially lose her in the process by ignoring her for 30 or 60 days.

What you need to do is be open to communicating with her so you can actively make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you.

You can get her feeling like she's in love with you again.

You can make her want to forget about the breakup and just get back into a relationship with you.

Being open to communicating with your ex is important after a breakup in cases like this.

One of the reasons why is that if a woman contacts her ex man and he doesn't reply, she may then feel that he's gotten over her already.

She doesn't want to keep contacting him and potentially get rejected by him where he sends her a message saying to leave him alone and that he's over her and never wants to speak to her again.

I've heard of so many cases where a man was contacted by his woman after the breakup and he ignored her.

He thought that he would be giving away his power if he replied or if he caught up with her right away.

When he tried to reach out to her after a couple of weeks or a month or two, she didn't reply or she told him that she had already moved on.

By the way, limited contact also applies to relationships where a couple has children together or they have mutual interests.

For example: They have property together, they have something that they need to settle and get organized or they need to complete a project of some kind.

In cases like that, obviously, a guy wouldn't need to go no contact and completely ignore his woman. He needs to be open to communicating with her.

However, what he needs to make sure of is that his communication isn't businesslike and neutral, like a friend.

He needs to make sure that the communication sparks her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for him.

In other words, he needs to be flirting with her, being confident, joking around and so on.

He can also be serious at times, but he needs to make sure that he is creating sparks.

He's making her feel attracted.

He's making the love flow into her heart again.

He's making her miss him.

Finally, the third option is immediate recovery.

3. Immediate recovery

This is where a man understands his mistake and immediately changes, improves or adjusts.

He then interacts with her, re-attracts her, hooks up with her sexually and gets her back into a relationship.

What you need to realize is that many breakups do get back together quite quickly.

Not all women need 30 days or 2 weeks or anything like that to be able to interact with their ex again.

Sometimes a woman just needs 24 hours.

Sometimes she needs a couple of days, a few days or a week.

Which Option is Best For You?

Okay, so those were three alternatives to the no contact rule.

I recommend that you choose the one that fits your situation and go with that.

I hope you've enjoyed this video and if you need more help, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn exactly how to re-attract her and get her back into a relationship with you now rather than later.

If you think that your ex is going to move on when you don't contact her, I recommend that you take control of the situation by re-attracting her.

Use a Calm, Confident Approach and Get Her Back

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that you shouldn't do the opposite of no contact which is nonstop contact.

No contact can push a woman away because she can be afraid that her ex is going to reject her or she can seek revenge by hooking up with a new guy and moving on.

Nonstop contact also pushes a woman away.

She sees it as needy, desperate and it's a big turn off.

It's too stressful, it's not attractive and it doesn't make a woman feel compelled to get back with her ex.

What I recommend is that you use a calm, confident approach as you get your ex woman back.

Be in control of your emotions.

Focus on attraction.

Trigger her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

When you do that, she will look at you with different eyes.

She will have a completely different perspective of you.

She will be looking at your positive qualities.

She'll be focusing on the good feelings that she's feeling.

She might be a little bit unsure whether she should get back into a relationship with you, but that's where your confidence comes in.

You need to be confident and guide her back into a relationship.

You need to be the more emotionally courageous one, the more emotionally strong one.

Some women are easier to get back than others, but what it really comes down to is your confidence in the moments that you're interacting with her.

That's what makes the difference.

If you are confident about your ability to attract her and you don't let her mixed signals make you lose confidence, then you're going to be attracting her by default.

Women are naturally attracted to confidence in men and turned off by insecurity and self-doubt.

So, you've got to be confident.

You've got to focus on making her feel attracted to you and get her back into a relationship.

That's how it's done.

Of course, you can leave it to chance if you want.

You can just stop contacting her for 30 or 60 days and hope that she doesn't move on, but what I recommend is that you be a man about it.

You take control of the situation.

Make her feel attracted to you again.

Be confident and guide her back into a relationship.

Telling an Ex How Much She Means to You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 tips on how to tell your ex how much she means to you:

1. Make sure that you make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you first

According to a recent survey of men trying to get their ex woman back, 70% are still able to communicate with her.

It really depends on the woman and how you've handled the break up so far.

For example: Your ex might have been feeling a lot of negative emotions towards you and then cut off all communication (e.g. blocked your number on her phone, stopped answering your texts, unfriended you from social media).

Alternatively, your ex might have remained open and willing to reply via text, or answer her phone, but when she does, she's usually cold and distant.

She might say things like, "I don't have feelings for you anymore. Maybe we can be friends, but that's all I can offer you from now on," or "I'm just so confused about how I feel right now. I need some space to figure things out," or "Just accept that it's over and move on. I'm not the girl for you."

Whatever the case is for you, the most important thing that you need to do is use every interaction that you have with her as a way of actively making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

If you don't focus on re-attracting her first, then her guard will stay up and nothing you say to her will make much of a difference to her.

Think about it this way:

If you burn your left hand on a flame, it won't matter to you if someone says, "Wow, your right hand looks fine," because you'll be focused on the pain in your left hand.

On the other hand, if a person gives you a burn salve to take away the pain from your left hand and then compliments you on your right hand, you're more likely to feel happy about the compliment about your right hand.

In the same way, if you tell your ex how much she means to you before you take away some of the pain from the break up (i.e. by reawakening her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you), it won't make much of a difference to her.

She won't be on the same frequency as you in terms of feelings.

You will be feeling like you are in love with her and really want to be with her, but she will be holding onto the negative emotions that caused her to break up with you in the first place.

This is why it's so important to not pour your heart out and tell your ex how much she means to you, until you make her feel attracted to you again.

In other words, you have to make her feel like you mean a lot to her first and you cannot do that by telling her how much you mean to her!

Confused?

Don't worry if you don't; you will get it now.

Here is a simple equation to help you understand:

Ex isn't attracted to you + You tell her how you feel = She doesn't care

Ex is attracted to you + You tell her how you feel = She does care

In other words, what matters more to her is how she feels about you and not how you feel about her.

So, if you reawaken her feelings first (e.g. by making her laugh and smile when you interact with her, maintaining your confidence around her no matter what she says and does, making her feel feminine and girly in your presence), she then feel good when you tell her how you feel.

Here's an exampleâ"!

Imagine that youâ"re talking to your ex over the phone and she says something like, â"Look, I donâ"t want you to call me anymore. I need some space to sort out my feelings about you and our relationship.â"

If you rush and say something like, â"Please donâ"t say that! I canâ"t lose you. You mean so much to me. Iâ"ll give you some space if thatâ"s what you want, but please donâ"t give up on me. I love you so much,â" she wonâ"t be impressed about how you feel.

Why?

You haven't made her feel attracted yet.

You are feeling attracted to her and in love with her, but the feelings aren't mutual.

You have to make the feelings mutual, or at least close to mutual for her to actually care.

If you don't do that first, she will continue thinking of you as the guy she broke up with and remained turned off.

On the other hand, if you make her feel attracted, she will start to think about you in a more positive light.

For example: If she says, â"Look, I donâ"t want you to call me anymore. I need some space to sort out my feelings about you and our relationshipâ" then just use it as an opportunity to make her laugh and smile.

Maintain your confidence and say, in a joking way, â"Hey, no problem! How much space do you need? Will 10 minutes be enough? Okay, okayâ"maybe 10 minutes is too much. I donâ"t want to make you think that Iâ"m ignoring you or anything, so Iâ"ll give you a full five minutes of space and then Iâ"ll call you backâ" and then have a laugh.

She will most likely laugh and might then say something like, â"Hey, Iâ"m being serious here!â"

You can then say, â"Hey, I know Iâ"m making a joke, but I think weâ"re mature enough not to need to cut off communication with each other to sort things out. I accept your decision to break up and Iâ"m not going to push you into anything you donâ"t want. However, I think we both have a better chance of healing in a positive way, if we just stay in touch as friends rather than cutting each other off completely. So, how about it? Iâ"ll give you a call in a few days to say hi as a friend. If you donâ"t want to talk to me in a few days, then I will stop contacting you and never contact you again if that's what you want. No problem.

By saying something like that to her, you're showing her (without using the words) that you are a confident, emotionally mature man who is in control of his emotions and knows what he wants.

That is attractive to her.

The sparks of attraction she will feel will plant seeds of doubt in her mind about whether she actually wants to go through with the break up.

She starts to think things like, "What's going on here? That's not the response I was expecting from him. He's changed. He's so much more confident and mature now. In the past, he would just be telling me how much I mean to him and how he misses me, but now he's so relaxed and confident. I really like it."

When she starts thinking of you in that way, her defenses begin to come down a little bit and she automatically begins to feel drawn to you.

2. Understand that if the feelings aren't mutual, she won't be amazed by your feelings for her

[image: You mean so much to me. I love you!]

For example: A guy might say, "I know that you don't want to be with me right now, but before you make your final decision, I want you to know that you mean the world to me. You're the most wonderful woman I've ever known and imagining my life without you makes me feel empty. I've never loved a woman as much as I love you. I know I stuffed things up pretty badly between us, but if you just give me one more chance, I promise to make it up to you."

He hopes that by confessing his love for her, it will be enough to change her mind about the break up and get him another chance.

She will be amazed at how deep his feelings for her are and will say, "I never realized I was so special to you. That changes everything! Now that I know how much I mean to you, I'm willing to give our relationship another try."

Yet, that's not how it works.

Think back to the equations I shared with you earlier!

Ex isn't attracted to you + You tell her how you feel = She doesn't care

Ex is attracted to you + You tell her how you feel = She does care

For a woman to care, the feelings of attraction need to be mutual, or at least kind of mutual.

If a guy tries to get a woman back based on his feelings for her, she will feel annoyed that he is only thinking about himself and what he wants.

She might even tell him that he is being selfish and in most cases, the guy won't have any idea what she means.

It's pretty simple.

He's being selfish because he wants her to give him another chance, even though she's not attracted to him anymore.

In other words, getting her back is all about him getting what he wants.

So, she will be thinking things like, â€œWhat about how I feel? What about all the things he did that caused us to split up? Am I supposed to ignore all that and jump back into his arms just because heâ€™s telling me that he still cares about me? Well, itâ€™s going to take a lot more than him having feelings for me to forgive him and give him another chance.â€

Of course, not all women know that they can easily be re-attracted back into a relationship.

Heck, most guys donâ€™t know it as well.

Iâ€™ve heard back from countless men who have been amazed at how quickly and easily they re-attracted their woman by following through on my advice.

Watch this video for some bonus tipsâ€”

As you will discover from the video above, you need to be focusing on how you are making her feel, rather than telling her how you feel.

If sheâ€™s not feeling enough respect and attraction for you right now, then knowing that she means the world to you isnâ€™t going to matter much to her at all.

On the other hand, when you reawaken her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction first, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from letting her guard down and opening herself up to being seduced back into a relationship.

From there, you can build on her feelings for you until the feelings are mutual between you and her.

Then, when you say something like, â€œI love you. You mean so much to me,â€ not only will she be happy to hear you say it, but she will respond with something like, â€œMe too! I feel the same way about you!â€

Thatâ€™s what you want.

What you donâ€™t want to happen is for you to tell her how much she means to you and then she says something like, â€œI donâ€™t care. I donâ€™t feel the same way about you. Itâ€™s over.â€

That will most likely happen if you tell her how much she means to you before youâ€™ve reawakened her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

3. Donâ€™t get too deep and meaningful

[image: Don't get too deep and meaningful]

Blabbing on about how much a woman means to you doesnâ€™t impress her, unless she is in love with you.

Even if she is in love with you, she doesnâ€™t want you babbling on about it like youâ€™re in a romantic movie.

Instead, she wants to see that youâ€™re a confident, emotionally strong man who isnâ€™t afraid to say what he feels, but doesnâ€™t become emotional like a boy or a woman would when expressing his feelings.

So, how should you approach the topic?

First, make sure that youâ€™ve been making her smile, laugh and feel good in your presence first.

Second, make sure that she is feeling attracted to you again and is enjoying your company.

Then, go ahead and just tell her like a man, by saying something along the lines of, â€œHey, I just want to tell you that you really are special to me and I would love it if we got back together again. However, I don't expect you to take me back just because I'm saying that, I just wanted you to know that you are special to me.â€

Saying it in that way means that she isn't being pressured into expressing her feelings for you, or giving you another chance.

Instead, you're simply helping her to understand where she stands with you now, which is an important thing to do when an ex woman is feeling attracted to again.

Why?

If she starts feeling attracted to you again, but isn't sure if you are open to getting back with her, she will almost certainly play hard to get and act uninterested to avoid seeming too keen.

After all, she broken up with you and has been in the power position for some time, so she doesn't want to just hand that over to you.

This is why it's important for you to casually let her know that she is special to you AFTER you have attracted her again.

Don't do it beforehand and don't just attract her and remain silent.

Attract her and then put her mind at ease by letting her know that she is special to you and that you'd be open to getting back with her, but wouldn't ever want to push her into anything she didn't want.

By approaching it in that way, she will automatically feel more respect and attraction for you and her guard will come down further.

On the other hand, if you try to have a big, deep and meaningful conversation with her about your feelings, then she is most likely going to close up and lose interest.

Why?

Modern women don't like it when men get too soppy about things and go on and on about their feelings.

It's not what women will say in the media due to political correctness, but it's the reality of relationships.

When a man keeps going on and on about his feelings, a woman rapidly loses interest.

Why?

He's essentially taking on the woman's role of being consumed by his feelings.

She wants to be in that position.

She wants to be consumed by her feelings of love, respect and attraction for him and be thinking about him 24/7.

Allowing a woman to be in that position in a relationship pretty much guarantees that she will never cheat on you, never leave you and will always try to impress you for life.

Of course, a lot of guys don't know that, so they blab on and on about their feelings and end up looking like a woman to her.

For example: A guy might say things like, â€œFrom the first moment I laid eyes on you, I knew that you were the one. We have grown so close over the time we've spent together. It's a connection that I didn't even think was possible. I thought a relationship like ours only happened in movies, but it was real. I missed you every minute that we weren't together and would countdown the hours until we got to meet again. Just being next to you made me feel like a man. It made me feel complete. You mean the world to me and I just can't imagine a future without you. I am willing to do whatever it takes and wait as long as you need before you are ready to give me another chance. ♡ ☐ ☐

Yet, as you would know by now, if she isn't feeling attracted, she's not going to be impressed by romantic words and confessions of deep, unconditional love for her.

So, just get to the point and say it directly like a man.

Tell her that she is special to you and then get back to making her smile, laugh and feel attracted in your presence.

Remember: When getting an ex back, how she feels about you is more important than how you feel about her.

4. Don't tell her via text or email

When you tell your ex how much she means to you, make sure that you do it on a phone call or in person.

Why?

If you write it to her in a text or e-mail, she won't be able to see any evidence that you really have changed, so she won't know if you are now a man that she can feel sexually and romantically attracted to again.

As a result, she will most likely assume that you're still the same the guy and are hiding behind texts or emails because you're too afraid to face up to her.

So, don't try to win her over with a long, poetic email or a sweet text.

It just doesn't work.

If you want to text her, I recommend that you only use it to create an initial spark with her and then get to a phone call and in person meet up.

Watch the video above for some examples.

3 Mistakes to Avoid When Telling Your Ex How Much She Means to You

After helping new men to get women back for many years now, I've found that men often make one or more of the following mistakes when in your position!

1. Sending her a love letter

Why does this turn her off?

Remember: Words on a screen (or a piece of paper) are nothing compared to watching you tell her how much she means to you in person.

According to many studies, non-verbal communication (e.g. your body language, the tone of your voice, your vibe) makes up 93% of the communication between two people who are talking face-to-face.

This means that a mere 7% of the communication is actually based on the words.

Everything else is based on their behavior, body language, attitude, tone of voice and actions.

For example: Is a guy able to remain relaxed and confident around his ex, or does he become nervous, insecure and unsure of himself?

Does he maintain his cool around her when she's being cold and unfriendly, or does he get upset or start to doubt his chances with her?

Can he confidently laugh at her attempts to make him feel like he's not good enough for her, or does he start having doubts about himself and his value to her as soon as she says something negative?

A woman can't see any of that in a love letter.

In most cases, a woman has a negative perception of her ex, so she then reads his texts and emails in a negative way.

She doesn't think, "Wow! He is so confident via letter! He's so manly now!"

Instead, in most cases, a woman rolls her eyes and feels turned off by her ex's lame attempt to re-attract her into a relationship.

This is why, if you are serious about getting your ex back, you should seriously start to improve your ability to attract her during in person interactions.

In other words, prepare yourself to be able to be confident, charismatic, funny, emotionally masculine and charming the next time you talk to her.

If you do that, you will see how easy it is to re-attract a woman back into a relationship.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Buying her a gift or sending her flowers

Buying a gift or sending flowers rarely, if ever works.

Why?

A woman doesn't feel impressed by flowers or a gift from a guy that she doesn't fully respect or feel attracted to.

Instead, she thinks something like, "Does he really believe that my love is for sale? If he wants me back, he's going to have to give me what really matters to me (i.e. a man I can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love), not try to buy me back with gifts and flowers."

She knows very well that the flowers or gifts are not him.

They are objects that he's sending her, in the hope that it makes her forget about all the bad times and want him again.

Unfortunately, she's not going to be getting into a relationship with the flowers or gifts, so it doesn't work.

Of course, sending flowers can work in other situations.

For example: When in a relationship and you upset your girlfriend or wife.

You can then give her flowers or a gift as a gesture to show her how sorry you are.

Yet, that is when you are in a relationship.

What we're talking about here is getting an ex back.

In most ex back cases, the woman isn't attracted anymore, so getting flowers or a gift doesn't woo her or make her forget about all the bad times.

Instead, she rolls her eyes at her ex's lame, misplaced attempt to re-attract her.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ□!

3. Not understanding that feelings have to be mutual for a relationship to work

Unlike in the past where a woman had to stay with her man even if she didn't have feelings for him or if he treated her badly, in today's world, a woman can leave a man if she wants to.

In most cases, a modern woman can choose who she wants to be with, without worrying about what society or her family will think.

So, don't make the mistake of assuming that she will give you another chance if you tell her how much she means to you.

To get her back, you have to make the feelings mutual or at least close to mutual.

When you do that, getting back together happens naturally and quickly because she wants it just as much as you do.

Holding Onto a Woman Who Doesn't Want You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 tips to turn the situation around and make her want you again:

1. Understand why she doesn't want you today

How she feels today can be changed tomorrow.

It's completely within your control.

How she feels from now on is going to be based on what you say and do when you interact with her. You're either going to say and do things that make her want you, or you're going to push her away even further.

It's all within your control.

Here's the thing though!

If your ex has recently saying things along the lines of, "I don't want you," or "Leave me alone. Why can't you accept that it's over between us? You need to move on," it's understandable that you might feel like getting her back is hopeless.

You may even be well-meaning friends and family in your life who are telling you, "Hey, you need to let her go. There are plenty of fish in the sea, so why are you holding onto a woman who doesn't want you? Why don't you move on and find another woman who deserves a great guy like you? She's just not worth it. You will find a nice girl one day. Just be patient."

They might mean well, but meaning well doesn't mean that they are right.

If believe that your ex is the woman for you, then there's no reason why you can't get her back.

How?

The first step is to why she doesn't want you anymore.

When you get clear on that, you can stop saying and doing the types of things that have been turning her off (i.e. like the behaviors that led to the split and that have caused her to feel less respect, attraction, and love for you since) and switch her feelings back on for you.

For example: Leading up to the break up, a guy might turn his woman off by!

- Being too jealous and controlling.
- Being too childish or immature.
- Treating her badly, but expecting her to treat him nicely.
- Being way too nice to her and letting her treat him badly, just so he can spend time with her.
- Being insecure or self-doubting around her, rather than being the confident guy that she fell in love with.
- Being too emotionally sensitive, which causes her to feel more emotionally dominant and strong. As a result, she can't feel like a feminine woman in the relationship anymore.
- Taking her for granted (e.g. he expects her to do all the housework without pulling his weight, is disrespectful towards her, he fails to notice her efforts to look attractive for him) and expecting she will put up with it because of how much she used to love him.

- Having no clear purpose or direction in his life and just doing whatever he feels like, whenever he wants, rather than being responsible and living her a feeling of safety about their future together.
- Becoming too wimpy and weak-minded, to the point where she feels like she needs to protect him and take care of him.
- Being emotionally distant from her and expecting her to put up with it because they are in a relationship.
- Being emotionally clingy and needing her to always reassure him of how much she loves him.
- Getting angry about trivial things and causing her to feel stressed in the relationship.

So, those were some examples of how a guy might turn his woman off leading up to the break up.

Then, after the breakup, a guy might continue turning his woman off byâ€¦|

- Being needy and desperate (e.g. by texting or calling her to apologize over and over again).
- Begging and pleading with her for another chance.
- Crying and saying things like, â€œI canâ€™t live without you,â€ or â€œMy life is over. I canâ€™t go on without you in it.â€
- Asking her to tell him what he did wrong and what he needs to do to change.
- Stressing her out by sending her long text messages and expecting her to reply to him.
- Trying to work things out via text.
- Not changing the things that turned her off and simply trying to convince her to give him another chance because he loves her and cares about her so much.

A lot of guys find themselves in that situation and end up wondering if they should keep holding onto a woman who doesn't want them, or if they should just move on.

Yet, what is really happening is that the guy's approach is unattractive and isn't giving the woman a reason to want him back.

This is why it's so important that you understand what aspects of your thinking and behavior have been turning her off, so you can stop doing it.

When you begin behaving, talking, thinking and interacting with her in ways that are attractive to, she will automatically go from not wanting you, to wanting you again.

Why?

You are now making her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with you (i.e. respectful, attracted, excited, feeling sparks of love, intrigued).

As a result, she starts to feel differently about the relationship and the possibility of getting back together becomes something she is willing to consider.

On the other hand, if you continue saying and doing the same old things that you've been doing all along, then don't even worry about trying to get her back because she's most-likely going to continue rejecting you.

2. Prepare to re-attract her tomorrow

[image: Prepare yourself to attract her tomorrow]

To re-attract your ex, you need to change and improve some of the things that caused her to lose respect, attraction and love for you.

Here's an example.

Imagine that a guy became clingy in the relationship with his woman.

His whole life became about her.

He neglected his personal goals, stopped hanging out with his friends to spend more time with her and he gave up most of his interests and hobbies to ensure that he was with her at all times.

As a result, he started being needy, jealous and controlling.

One day, she wanted to go and meet up a girlfriend of hers at a café and he assumed that a guy would also be coming along, or that she might find a guy attractive at whatever café they were going to.

So, he urged her not to go and to just spend time with him at home.

She agreed the first time, but wasn't happy about it.

Then, it happened again and again.

Eventually, she got sick and tired of being controlled like she was his property and ended the relationship.

How can he get her back?

To begin with, whenever he interacts with her from now on (e.g. via text or e-mail, on social media, over the phone and in person), he needs to be able to show her that he's no longer like that.

Of course, it's not about him telling her, â€œHey, look at me! I've changed. Remember how insecure I used to be and how clingy, needy and jealous I behaved? Well all that is gone, I'm a new man. I'm confident and emotionally strong now. I won't ever be controlling againâ€ because she's probably not going to believe him.

Instead, she will likely say something along the lines of, â€œYeah? Well, good for you. I still don't want you back though.â€

Why?

There is a big difference between saying that he has changed and showing her that he has changed.

For a woman to drop her guard and open herself up to her feelings for her ex again, she first needs to experience the new him via the way he talks, thinks, acts, behaves and interacts with her now.

She needs to see that no matter how hard she tries to make him feel jealous or needy, he doesn't react in that way.

He remains confident, calm and totally in control of his emotions.

He's a new man now and she can feel it.

It's obvious in the way he now thinks, feels, behaves, talks and acts.

He's no longer the clingy, needy or controlling guy that he used to be.

â€¦and he didn't even have to tell her.

She experienced for herself and as a result, she believes it so much more than if he were to try and convince her of it by explaining it to her.

In the same way, when you let your experience the new and improved you whenever you interact with her, she won't be able to stop herself from looking at you in a more positive light.

Her resolve to move on without you will begin to waver.

All of a sudden, she will feel drawn to you and it won't be about you holding onto her when she doesn't want you.

She will want you again and you will be there, ready to take her into your arms again.

The next thing you need to do isâ€¦

3. Build on her newfound feelings for you

[image: Build on her newfound feelings for you]

To make her want you without a shadow of a doubt, you need to continue building on her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you every chance you get.

Use every interaction that you have with her to make her feel happy and excited to be interacting with you again.

If you do that, she will naturally start to really want you again.

However, something to remember is that you can't properly build on your ex's feelings until you meet up with her in person.

Where many guys go wrong is by trying to change her mind via text.

A guy might think, â€œWell, I don't want to scare her off, especially since she says she doesn't want me anymore. As long as she's responding to my texts, it must mean that she's softening up to me. So, I'll just keep texting and being nice to her. Then, when she's ready she will let me know and I can then call her or meet up with her. Until then, I'll just let her call the shots. I'll stick to text and see how things go.â€

Here's the thing though!

It's very difficult to get a positive reaction from an ex via text.

You can get her laughing some times and even cause her to feel some sparks of attraction, but you have to get past the texts and to an in person meet up if you want her back for real.

If you all you do is text, she doesn't have much to hold onto or get excited about.

She can't see your expression, hear the tone of your voice or observe your body language to see if you have really changed and become a more attractive man.

As far as she knows, you probably haven't changed a bit, so there's not much point continuing to hold on via text.

On the other hand, if you call her on the phone or meet up with her in person, it will be a lot easier for her to get a clear picture of who you are now and see that you really have changed.

More importantly, you now make her feel differently.

Her feelings for you have changed back to what they were when she used to love you.

It's back on, for real.

So, make sure that you call her on the phone where you can make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again and then get her to agree to a meet up.

When you see her in person, make sure that you continue to build on her feelings for you by saying and doing the types of things that will show her you're a new man (e.g. confident and emotionally strong, emotionally masculine, emotionally independent).

When you do that, she will naturally start to want you again.

However!

4. Don't push for a relationship. Keep making her feel attracted and let her really want it

[image: Keep making her feel attracted and really want to have a relationship with you again]

When your ex begins to show signs of interest in you again, it might be very tempting for you to push for a relationship.

Yet, if you do that before she's ready, she may close herself off from you and pull away once again.

She may begin thinking, "Why is he pressuring me? I don't know how I feel yet. I'm just not ready to make that kind of commitment."

She might then text you something like, "Look, I'm sorry if I gave you the wrong impression. It's over between us. Please respect that. I wish you all the best."

That's the last thing you want to hear, so make sure that you take things slowly if needed.

For example: To begin with, just agree to hang out as friends only.

You might say to her, "Look, I don't want to push you into something you don't want. So, let's just agree to be friends for now. We're mature and responsible enough to do that, right?"

She will most-likely agree.

Then, just use the friendship as an opportunity to deepen her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, until she gets to the point where she's saying things like, "I don't want to be friends anymore. I want more than that. Why don't we give our relationship another try?"

So, don't waste another day doubting yourself.

You can make her feel attracted to you again.

It's not about being desperate and chasing her for another chance.

Instead, it's about being a confident, emotionally masculine man who has the courage and skill to go after what he wants and get it.

That's you.

You are the man.

Today is a new day for you.

You ARE going to get her back.

Best of all, it's going to feel amazing for you AND her.

She is going to be overwhelmed with how much respect, attraction and love she feels for the new you.

She is going to look at you as the one who almost got away.

Almost.

How to Initiate a Kiss When You Meet Up With Your Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 tips to make the kiss between you and your ex happen:

1. Focus on creating intense sexual tension between you and her

Sexual tension happens when you and her feel sexually attracted to each other, but aren't immediately jumping into a kiss and sexual act.

In other words, you both want it, but it's not happening right away.

[image: Build up sexual tension between you and her]

Instead, you keep making her feel attracted to you and want you and she eventually gets to the point where she just has to have you.

Then, you release the sexual tension with kissing and sex and it feels amazing for both of you.

A lot of guys don't realize this, so they end up being too nice, polite and formal when interacting with their ex.

For example: A guy might assume that it would be wrong or rude to flirt with his ex woman and make her feel sexually attracted and turned on, now that they've broken up.

He might even say, "Won't she get angry at me if I show sexual interest? If that happens, I will never be able to get her back. So, I need her to trust me and feel safe around me first, which means I have to be on my best behavior and just act friendly and nice."

Here's the thing though!

If a guy isn't actively making his ex feel sexually attracted to him again, she's not going to feel very motivated to meet up him, kiss him, have sex with him or spend anymore of her time with him.

Instead, his nice guy approach will cause her to just see him as a friend, or worse, she might even be thinking, "I can't wait to get out of here. I wish I had never agreed to meet up with him. Why won't he accept that it's over between us and move on? I don't feel attracted to him anymore. It's over!"

So, if you want to initiate a kiss when you meet up with your ex, don't be afraid to flirt with her to create sexual tension.

If you don't build up the tension and just try to kiss her out of nowhere, she will most likely laugh and say something like, "Hey! What the hell are you doing? We're not together anymore," or she might get upset and tell you to leave her alone and not contact her anymore.

So, make sure you create and build up the sexual tension with her first.

One way you can do that is by combining some flirting into ordinary conversations that you're having with her.

For example: Imagine that you're at a coffee shop with your ex and are talking about what you've been up to since the break up.

You might be saying something like, "Things have really taken off for me. Remember how I always wanted to (mention a goal or activity that was important to you that she knows about)? Well

itâ€™s finally happening now.â€

She will likely smile and say something along the lines of, â€Wow, thatâ€™s great,â€ or â€Iâ€™m happy for you.â€

You can then say, â€How about you? What have you been up to?â€ then quickly add, â€Besides smelling so good that is! Come over here let me get a whiff of that great perfume youâ€™re wearing.â€

Then, pull her in a little closer, lean in close to her ear and say, â€Mmmmâ€| you smell sexy!â€
Then, pull away and continue on with the conversation as if nothing happened.

Add in some flirting several times throughout the conversation, (i.e. talk normally, say or do something sexually provocative and then go back to talking normally), to build up the sexual tension between you and her.

When you create sexual tension, she then naturally has the desire to want to release that tension with kissing and sex.

As a result, when you initiate a kiss, rather than pull away and say something like, â€Hey, what do you think youâ€™re doing? Weâ€™re not together anymore. I donâ€™t want you to do that,â€ she will be feeling so attracted that she will just naturally go with it and really enjoy it.

Another tip to help you initiate a kiss when you meet up with your ex is toâ€|

2. Make her feel relaxed and attracted in your presence

If you meet up with your ex and are being nervous, tense and uptight around her, she will pick up on it, feel turned off and be on her guard around you.

She may then begin to think things like, â€This was such a mistake. It feels so awkward and weird drinking coffee together. We clearly arenâ€™t good at this ‘exâ€™s as friends’ thing. He’s so insecure around me now and itâ€™s making me feel self-conscious. I should make some excuse and go before it gets too uncomfortable for the both of us. We’re just not a good match anymore. He’s not confident enough for a girl like me.â€

She might then make an excuse and leave, which will then make it a little harder to get a kiss.

This is why it’s very important that you make her feel relaxed and attracted in your presence.

How can you do that?

One way is by making her laugh, smile and feel happy to be seeing you again.

Another way is to remain relaxed and maintain your confidence around her no matter what she says or does to make you feel uncomfortable.

For example: Imagine that youâ€™re in a coffee shop with your ex right now.

She says something along the lines of, â€I donâ€™t know if we should be doing this. It feels weird seeing each other again like this.â€

Rather than worrying and thinking something like, â€Oh no! She’s not interested anymore. Iâ€™ve lost my chance with her! It’s over! I’ve blown it!â€ just use her comment as an opportunity to make her feel attracted instead.

You can respond by saying (in a joking way), â€Youâ€™re right! Seeing each other like this is weird. I think itâ€™s the sun from the window. Itâ€™s making your nose look all big and round. Oh and your ears are huge too! I never knew your ears were that big. Maybe we should change tables. Iâ€™ll call the waiterâ€¦ and have a laugh with her about that.

Note: Donâ€™t say anything like that if your ex is sensitive about her nose or ears for some particular reason.

If sheâ€™s not sensitive about her nose or ears, then making a joke like that will instantly put her at ease in your presence.

She will likely laugh (or only smile if sheâ€™s playing a bit hard to get) and feel attracted to you for having the balls to joke with her like that.

All of a sudden, being around you feels like a lot of fun for her, so her guard naturally comes down and she opens up to you a little more.

She then begins to wonder, â€œWhat has changed? Why am I feeling attracted to him all of sudden? Whatâ€™s going on?â€ and can't seem to stop the sexual desire running through her body and mind as she looks at you.

Then, when you initiate a kiss, she will more than likely be willing to go along with it to see what happens and how she feels afterwards.

On the other hand, if you make her feel tense, uncomfortable and apprehensive around you and then try to kiss her, she will almost certainly pull away and reject you.

So, focus on making her feel relaxed and attracted in your presence.

Another tip to help you initiate a kiss when you meet up with your ex is toâ€¦

3. Get a goodbye hug and then kiss her

[image: Get a goodbye hug and then kiss her]

As long as youâ€™ve been making your ex feel respect and sexual attraction for you throughout the course of your meet up, getting at least a goodbye hug from her shouldnâ€™t be an issue at all.

In fact, if youâ€™ve made her feel really good to be seeing you again, she may even be the one who initiates the hug first.

Of course, donâ€™t worry if she doesnâ€™t initiate.

Instead, when your ex is getting ready to leave the meet up, just take the lead and say something like, â€œAnyway, it was good to catch up as friends. Iâ€™m proud of us for being able to enjoy each otherâ€™s company in a mature way. Come here and give me a hug to say goodbye.â€

Then, move closer to her and open your arms.

If you have made her feel attracted to you, she will almost certainly be more than happy to give you a goodbye hug.

So, just go ahead and gently, but confidently take her in your arms and give her a nice, long, warm hug.

If she seems open (e.g. she remains in your arms longer than necessary, looks up at you and smiles, gives you a squeeze back), then just lean in and give her a kiss.

[image: Kiss and then hook up sexually]

From there, you can deepen the kiss and possibly even go back to your place or her place to hook up sexually.

Of course, if sex doesn't happen after the kiss, don't worry about it about all.

The important thing is that you've broken down her defenses by initiating a kiss and have also planted seeds of doubt in her mind about her decision to break up with you.

From there, getting her back becomes a matter of when rather than if.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Kiss an Ex Woman

If you don't want your ex to reject you when you initiate a kiss, be sure to avoid any of the following mistakes:

1. Appearing nervous around her

[image: Nervousness and self-doubt will ruin her desire to kiss you]

When a guy is nervous and tense, it comes across in his actions and behavior even if he tries hard to hide it.

For example: He might fidget a lot, find it difficult to maintain eye contact, stumble over his words, struggle to make conversation or be trying hard to impress her.

A woman can easily sense nervousness in a guy and when she does, it instinctively turns her off.

Rather than think, "Awww...he's really trying so hard to impress me. That's so sweet. I'd better take it easy on him so that he can stop feeling so nervous around me," she is more likely to think, "What did I ever see in him? He's so wimpy? He's scared of me now. I want a confident man, not a nervous guy who needs me to be gentle and nice with him so he can then feel confident."

Here's the thing:

Women just don't like having to reward emotional weakness with love, affection, sex and devotion.

Women are instinctively programmed to be attracted to confidence and self-belief in a man and repelled by emotional weakness and insecurity.

It's not something that she can ignore because it's an instinctive, primal thing that happens inside of a woman's body and mind as she interacts with a man.

So, if she notices that her ex is nervous and unsure of himself around her, it simply serves as another reason why she wants to remain broken up.

If he then tries to initiate a kiss, she will reject him because she won't be feeling attracted.

She might then make an excuse about why she needs to leave and he will be without a kiss.

So, when you meet up with your ex, focus on having confident thoughts about how she will respond to you when she sees you and when you kiss her.

Believe in yourself, rather than doubting yourself.

As a result, your confidence and self-belief will come through in the tonality of your voice, body language and in the way you interact with her.

She will naturally feel attracted to that and then, when you initiate a kiss, she will be happy that you did.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

2. Asking if it's okay to kiss her

If you ask for permission to kiss her, youâ€™re opening yourself up to the possibility of her saying â€œNo.â€œ

Additionally, it can cause her to lose respect and attraction for you because, in her eyes, youâ€™re not being man enough to take the lead and make the kiss happen.

You donâ€™t need to ask your ex for permission to kiss her.

You simply need to make her feel sexually attracted to you and then move in for a kiss.

If she doesn't want to kiss, she will pull away or say, "No" and you can then respect that.

However, if she does want to kiss and you ask her, she will almost certainly lose respect for you for not having the balls to kiss her and she will say, "No."

On the other hand, if you make her feel attracted, build up some sexual tension and release it with a kiss, she will be happy that you did and proud of you for being so confident and ballsy.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Waiting for extremely obvious signals that she wants a kiss

Sometimes a guy makes the mistake of thinking that a woman is going to give him a 100% clear sign when she is open to being kissed.

For example: She might lean in close, look deeply into his eyes and say something along the lines of, â€œIâ€™ve missed your kisses,â€œ or â€œI always loved the way you kissed meâ€œ or, "Kiss me."

He can then pull her into his arms, kiss her and get her back.

Yet, it almost never plays out like that in real life.

It happens in movies, but in real life, even if a woman still has feelings for her ex and is hoping that he will kiss her, she will rarely give him an obvious signal to let him know.

Why?

Firstly, most women donâ€™t want to come across as being too desperate.

Secondly, she doesnâ€™t want to help him to feel confident around her by making things easy for him.

Instead, she wants to see if he has the confidence to go for it, even if it seems as though sheâ€™s not interested.

If he has the type of confidence, she will feel a lot of respect and attraction for him for having the balls to go after what he wants in life (in this instance a kiss from her) regardless of how daunting it may have seemed to him.

However, if he waits for a clear signal from her before he makes a move, he may be waiting for a long, long time.

Worse still, she might decide to open herself to other guys who do have the confidence and self-belief to kiss her, rather than waiting for her ex to grow a pair of balls again and initiate a kiss.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

4. Acting more like a friend than a lover

Sometimes a guy will meet up with his ex and spend the entire time pretending that heâ€¦s only interested in being her neutral friend.

For example:

- He talks in a nice, polite way to her.
- He doesnâ€¦t flirt to build up sexual tension.
- He only uses polite humor, rather than using ballsy humor to make her feel attracted.
- He pretends that heâ€¦s not interested in her anymore.

Naturally, this causes a woman to remain closed off because thereâ€¦s no sexual attraction and respect to make her feel motivated to want to kiss him, have sex and open up again emotionally.

If he then tries to initiate a kiss, she will likely pull away and say something along the lines of, â€¦What do you think youâ€¦re doing?â€¦ or â€¦Eeew! Donâ€¦t do that! Weâ€¦re not like that anymore! I don't like you in that way now.â€¦

He may then feel dejected and possibly even give up on the idea of getting her back at all.

Yet, what he doesnâ€¦t realize is that his approach was wrong, but he still does have a chance.

He just needs to change his approach from being Mr. Friendly to Mr.Â Turn On, so she actually has a reason to want him in a sexual and romantic way.

Remember: Itâ€¦s totally fine to be her friend.

Just make sure youâ€¦re not pretending to be an innocent friend who isnâ€¦t interested in her in a sexual or romantic way.

If you act like a friend, you will end up in the friend zone.

So, make the feelings sexual, initiate a kiss and then enjoy the great times ahead with her.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me Because My Parents Didn't Like Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 tips on how to get your girlfriend back when your parents don't like her:

1. Focus on making her have such strong feelings for you that she stops caring so much about what your family might think of her

When you interact with your ex girlfriend from now on, make sure that what you say and do makes her feel so much respect, attraction and love for you that what your family thinks of her becomes irrelevant to her.

For example: Imagine that you're at a coffee shop with your ex girlfriend right now.

She's being cold and unfriendly towards you and saying things like, "I shouldn't have come here. We both know that your parents hate me, so this is just a waste of my time. It's not going to work and we need to accept that."

Rather than getting upset at her, just use her negativity against her to make her laugh so much that she stops focusing on the problem.

To begin with, you might laugh and say (in a joking manner), "We could kill my parents. Would that help?" and have a laugh with her about it.

You might then say, "No, just kidding. I could legally disown them. I could even change my last name to something funny like..." and make something up that would be funny for you and her.

You might then add in, "Look, all jokes aside...at the end of the day, what matters most is how we feel about each other. If you love me and I love you, then we can be together."

If she says something like, "But, we can't. Your parents are always going to be there. They hate me. This isn't going to work."

[image: Use humor to get her to stop focusing on the negatives]

You might then use some humor and add in, "Yeah, you're right. You really are a horrible girlfriend. I can see why they hate you" and then have a laugh with her about that.

By approaching a potentially serious conversation in a funny way, she's more likely to relax, smile, laugh and be more open to sticking around to see where things go from there.

Using humor to get her laughing creates some positive feelings inside of her, which makes her stop focusing only on the negatives of the situation.

Her guard then comes down and she becomes open to interacting with you some more (e.g. over the phone, seeing you in person again) to see what happens.

Note: If you really want to make your ex have strong feelings for you again, you need to accept that there might also be other, secret reasons why she broke up with you that she didn't tell you about.

Here's the thing!

It happens sometimes, but in most cases, a woman won't break up with a guy just because his parents don't like her.

She will only go through with the break up if there are other things about him that just don't feel right to her as well.

For example: If a guy is too emotionally weak to stand up for himself to his family, does whatever they tell him and doesn't have the confidence or emotional strength to be his own man in life, then his woman will lose respect for him and feel turned off.

Rather than putting in extra effort to get along with his parents, she will begin to think something like, He's always making excuses for his parents' bad treatment of me. He's so weak minded when it comes to his family. Even when something is important to him, he doesn't have the balls to stand up to them and go after what he wants in life. So, I just don't think this relationship is worth fighting for anymore. If he can't even stand up for himself to his own parents, what are the chances of him standing up to an unreasonable boss or authority figure that might be treating him badly? He lacks a backbone and I just don't want to be with a guy like that. I want a man who is emotionally strong and confident enough in himself to stand up for what he believes, no matter what.

If she really loves him, she will wait for a while see if he will eventually man up, but if he continues to lack a backbone and essentially do nothing to improve things between her and his family, she will likely lose so much respect and attraction for him that she will simply leave.

So, a couple of questions that you need to ask yourself at this point are:

- Is the real reason why she broke up with me because my parents didn't like her, or did she use it as an excuse because she didn't want to tell me her secret reasons (e.g. she wants a guy who is more manly, she hated how she could boss me around, she stopped feeling attracted to me because I was too much of a softie)?
- Did I make her feel the way she wanted to feel in a relationship, or were there other things about me that turned her off besides the issue with my family?

By asking yourself these questions, you might discover that there were reasons for your break up other than just the fact that your parents didn't like her.

When you uncover those reasons (you have to find them out yourself without asking her because she's almost certainly not going to want to teach you how to get her back), you can then quickly change and improve some of the things that really matter to her.

For example: You can start being more emotionally strong, standing up for yourself and for what you want in life to your parents and to other people, not letting other people make decisions for you and being a good guy, but not being too nice.

Then, when you interact with her and she sees that you're now the kind of man she can look up to and respect, she will start thinking something like, I know his parents don't like me, but I just don't care about what they think anymore. I love him and I want to be with him, so I will just have to find a way to handle them from now on. I'm not going to risk my future happiness with my perfect guy over them. They're just going to have to learn to live with me. I'm staying. He's my man.

Another tip on how to get your girlfriend back when your parents don't like her is

2. Don't try to push a relationship on her at this point

[image: Don't try to push her into a relationship at this point]

If you're interacting with your ex (e.g. via text, e-mail, on social media, on the phone and in person) and she says things like, I miss you, then just remain calm and in control.

It might be very tempting for you to want to push her into agreeing to give your relationship another chance, but you shouldn't at this point.

You've got to make her really want it so bad that she begins to push for it.

If you don't allow her to feel that, she may close up and start playing hard to get and making your family out to be worse than they actually are.

So, what should you do instead?

Just agree to catch up as friends and then see how you both feel.

If she can sense that you are being sincere with her, she will likely agree.

The important thing then is to use every meet up that you have with her to build upon her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

The more you make her feel good to be around you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel feminine in contrast to your masculine vibe), the more she will start thinking, Maybe this relationship is worth fighting for. Maybe I shouldn't be so concerned about his parents. Maybe they will eventually accept me again.

Another tip on how to get your girlfriend back when your parents don't like her is

3. Once you get her back, help her prepare to get along better with your family

[image: Prepare her to get along better with your family]

Just because your parents don't like your girlfriend right now, it doesn't mean that they never, ever will.

Maybe there are certain aspects of her thinking and behavior that have caused your parents to see her in a negative light.

That's fine.

She can change and so can they.

People change all the time.

If she got off to a bad start with them, or if they had certain prejudices against her, all of that can go away with time.

For example: Sometimes a guy comes from a different socio-economic background, cultural group or race than his girlfriend.

So, to prepare her to get along better with his parents who were judgmental of her for those reasons, he might need to explain certain etiquette and cultural and ethnic customs to her so she can make his parents be more welcoming and comfortable with the situation.

In this way, she won't be 'putting her foot in it' by saying or doing something that might come across as rude or disrespectful to his parents.

Essentially, it's up to you as the man to smooth the way between your girlfriend and your parents by making sure that she is fully prepared when she meets up with them again (i.e. she understands your family dynamics and customs).

Important: Make sure that preparing your girlfriend to get along better with your family is not about making her feel like it's all her fault and that everything she's been saying and doing is wrong!

Instead, ensure that she understands that your family operates differently to her and that there is no correct way to live life on this planet.

There are different cultures all over the world, different ways of doing things and different family dynamics.

None of them is the correct way.

It's simply the way that it's done in that particular area, or those kind of people.

It's not her fault and it's not their fault.

People simply think that "this is the way life is and should be" when they think of their culture and way of doing things.

They are wrong, but try telling them that!

Everyone thinks that their culture and way of doing things is superior to everyone else's.

It's not a debate that you can ever win, so you just have to let people be who they are.

This is something your girlfriend needs to understand, rather than trying to fight against the potentially close-minded approach of your parents.

Additionally, make sure that you tell your girlfriend that you love her, support her and won't leave her to fend for herself when around your parents.

Naturally, when she feels better prepared and knows that you have her back, interactions with your parents will become a lot easier.

At the same time, when your parents notice that she's putting in the effort to fit in more with the family dynamic rather than trying to be a rebel or trying to change how they think or what they believe, your parents will likely also make the effort to be nicer to her.

Another tip on how to get your girlfriend back when your parents don't like her is

4. For a little while, try to spend a minimal time around your family when with her

[image: For a little while, try to spend minimal time around your family with her]

After you and your girlfriend get back into a relationship, don't put pressure on her (or your parents) to spend time together right away.

Instead, focus on giving her as much attention as you can (without neglecting your family) and building on her feelings for you.

The more she falls back in love with you, the more willing she will be to make changes and improvements to her thinking and behavior to come across more favorably to your parents.

Also, the longer you stick with her, the more your parents will realize that you are serious about this woman and they'll most likely then put in the effort to be more accepting of her.

It might take some time, but it will happen.

It's up to you to lead with your emotional strength and maturity and guide everyone to a place of mutual understanding and respect.

You will then be a man that your woman can look up to and fall deeper and deeper in love with and your parents will be proud of.

3 Mistakes to Avoid in Your Situation

[image: I will disown my family if that makes you happy]

Although you might desperately want your girlfriend back right now, make sure that you remain calm and avoid making any of the following mistakes!

1. Promising to never see your family again, just so you can be with her

It might seem like a good thing to do, but the bottom line is that your family is still an important aspect of your life and sooner or later, you will need to see them again.

Also, if you promise to never spend time with your family just to be with her, eventually you will either break your promise (because family is family), or you might end up resenting her for coming between you and your parents.

In the long run, if you feel as though your girlfriend is the one for you, then it's in your best interests to find a way to reconcile the relationship between her and your parents so that everyone can get along.

So, remain calm and focus on making your girlfriend feel so attracted and in love with you that she feels compelled to make an effort to get along with your parents.

Another mistake to avoid is!

2. Trying to get her to want a relationship, before making her have strong feelings for you again

If you skip the part about making her feel attracted and in love with you, then she's most likely going to want to remain broken up.

Remember: There are almost certainly other reasons for the break up and it's not all just about your parents.

So, make sure that you fix the other things about your behavior or attitude that have been turning her off and make her fall more in love with you.

If you push for a relationship before then, she will almost certainly reject your offer and ask for time apart.

During that time, she might then decide to make herself feel better by getting herself a new boyfriend, meeting his parents, making them like her and enjoying the love.

She can then look back at her situation with you and blame you and your parents, rather than taking some or all of the blame for how she behaved.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Causing the relationship feel stressful, by allowing her to make the family issue out to be a bigger problem than it really is

A feminine woman sometimes likes to create drama in a situation because it allows her to express her emotions, get caught up in the heat of the moment and be irrational.

Men see it as crazy behavior, but it's just the way that women are.

Why?

One of the main reasons why is that it's a way for a woman to test whether her man is emotionally strong enough to remain confident, calm and in control amidst all the drama that she is creating.

If he is able to remain confident and laugh at her for being a little drama queen, she will respect him and feel attracted to him, even though she won't initially make that obvious.

She might pretend to get angry at him for not taking her irrational outburst seriously, but that's just a test of his confidence.

If he remains light hearted and tells her that he loves her and cares about her, but she is out of line, she will respect him.

Once again, she probably won't make that obvious right away (e.g. she will walk off in a huff, pretending to be over him and promising to never speak to him again), but she will be back.

I know, I know.

It sounds risky to do that.

However, the alternative is to put up with her nonsense and take it seriously, which will then cause her to lose respect for you.

She will enjoy creating the drama, won't be feeling respect for you and will then want to make herself feel better by hooking up with a new guy and moving on.

I see it all the time.

I've been helping new men get women back for many years now.

The guys who lack the balls to laugh at their woman when she is being unreasonable or irrational, are the ones who can't get her back.

On the other hand, the guys who man up and don't take her outbursts so seriously, suddenly end up having sex with her and getting back into a relationship.

So, in terms of your girlfriendâ€¦|

Currently, she might be making the situation between her and your parents out to be bigger than it really is (e.g. because she misunderstands their behavior, sheâ€¦s too emotionally sensitive and takes everything too personally, she wants to create drama to see how you handle yourself).

What you need to do is just laugh at her and the situation, rather than getting upset and allowing her to create a huge problem for you and her to overcome.

Initially, she might act shocked that youâ€¢re not reacting to her drama and taking her seriously. However, even if she doesnâ€¢t show it, she will be feeling a huge amount of respect and sexual attraction for you for having the emotional strength and maturity to see the situation in a more light-hearted way, rather than getting caught up in her fake drama.

Of course, there is a problem between her and your parents.

They don't like her very much and that is true.

However, if you let her make it out to be a bigger problem than it is, then you're not going to be getting her back.

So, you need to have the balls to make light of the situation and not let her take it all so seriously.

Focus on making her feel so attracted and in love with the new and improved you that she stops caring about what your parents may think and just wants to be with you.

Do you think you can do that?

Don't doubt yourself.

You can make her feel that way.

You can overcome this problem and get her back.

My Ex Left Me For a Guy Who Won't Treat Her as Good as I Did

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why a woman will do that:

1. She's not attracted to guys who are really nice to her

Although there's nothing wrong with being a nice guy, most women prefer a good man who can stand up to her when she's out of line, rather than a super nice guy who is a pushover and lets her dominate him with her confident, assertive personality.

This is based on a woman's instinctive need to find a guy who is capable of protecting her, rather than having to be his protector.

It's a basic, primal instinct that never goes away, regardless of how civil our modern society is.

So, if your ex left you for a guy who won't treat her as well as you did, it may be because you made the mistake of being Mr. Nice Guy to her all the time, even though she treated you badly (e.g. she was rude, disrespectful, broke her promises to you, was selfish, expected way too much of you and didn't give much or anything in return).

Even though most women won't admit it (e.g. on TV, when asked in a group setting), being with a guy who sucks up to them and lets them lead isn't attractive.

Rather than tell the truth, women will say things like, "I'm tired of dating jerks. I want a nice guy who will treat me like a princess."

It seems like the woman is being truthful, but she is only telling HALF of the truth.

She does want a guy who treats her well (i.e. a very confident good guy), but she doesn't want an extra nice guy who treats her like a princess and does whatever she wants.

It's subtle, but the difference is very obvious to a woman.

Of course, they won't tell you that though.

Watch this video for some examples of the lies women tell men!

Since women can't admit what they really want (because most people will take it the wrong way), they have to lie and say that they want a nice guy who treats them like a princess and does whatever she wants.

As a result, a lot of good guys fall into the trap of being a super nice in a relationship, only to get dumped for a guy who then doesn't treat her as well.

He may then feel confused and ask, "Why did this happen? How could my ex leave me for a guy who won't treat her as good as I did? Do I have to be a bad guy and treat her like crap to get her back?"

No, no, no.

You do not have to treat a woman badly to make her happy, or to get her back.

You just need to have more balls than you did before.

In other words, be a good guy, but stop being such a damn pushover with her.

Let her see that you are a manly man now and that she can look up to you and respect you now.

The secret to getting your ex back is not to become a bad boy or start being an asshole to her.

A woman doesn't want a guy who treats her badly.

What does she want?

A woman wants a very confident good guy who treats her with respect and love, but doesn't place her above himself in terms of importance and value.

In other words, he respects himself as sees himself as a valuable guy, but he is still good to her and still treats her well.

He looks at her as being important or valuable, but he holds himself in a higher regard.

He doesn't ever have to TELL her that though.

No, that would be rude.

Instead, he just thinks, feels, behaves and acts in that way, while also being good to her and treating her well.

What most guys don't realize is that's actually what women want.

They want a very confident good guy who believes in himself and doesn't lower himself to suck up to a moody woman.

So, all that said, how can you get your ex back from a guy who isn't treating her as well as you did?

Make her see that you are a better choice than the new guy.

I know, I know.

You might not feel very confident about that, but you have to.

Your belief in yourself is such an important part of making her feel more attracted to you than him.

You can't doubt yourself.

You have to know that you ARE better than him.

Of course, you can't achieve that by putting him down and saying things like, âWhat do you see in him? Why can't you see that he's a jerk? Don't you see that he will never treat you as well as I did? He doesn't care about you. I do. I may have made mistakes, but I always treated you like a princess. I always put your needs before my own. I did everything for you. Why would you choose to be with a guy who wouldn't ever treat you that well? It doesn't make any sense! Why are you doing this to yourself? You deserve better! He's only going to use you for sex and then dump you. Is that what you want? Don't do this to yourself.â

If you say something like that to your ex, rather than make her say, âYou know what? You're right! How could I have been so blind? My new guy is a jerk and definitely doesn't treat me as well as you did! I'm going to dump him right away so you and I can be together again,â she will assume that you're simply feeling jealous, hurt and don't know how to re-attract her.

So, don't even bother talking about the other guy.

It won't help.

Focus on how you are making her feel when you talk to her and interact with her.

That is what really counts.

If you are still using the same old approach that got you dumped (e.g. being too nice, sucking up to her, giving her all the power, doubting your attractiveness, secretly thinking of her as being more valuable than you), then make sure that you're willing to change your approach.

For example: From now on, you should always maintain your confidence around her, make her feel feminine and girly in your presence, show her that you're getting on with your life with or without her and not get nervous or worried if she starts getting moody or irritated when you talk to her.

If she is being overly dramatic about something, laugh at her (in a loving way), rather than taking her so seriously.

She might hang up on you or walk away if you're talking to her in person, but that will just be to test how big your balls really are now.

If she can see that you have truly manned up, then she is going to feel magnetically attracted to you and want to experience what it would be like to be with you again.

So, make sure that you're not just sitting around at home feeling sorry for yourself and waiting for a chance to suck up to her even more and hope that she takes pity on you.

Start making progress towards being a very confident, emotionally masculine, good guy, rather than sticking to your old Mr. Nice Guy or Mr. Soft and Innocent Guy who needs a woman to take pity on him.

That approach isn't going to work on her anymore.

You need to man up.

If you attempt to get her back by trying to convince her that he won't treat her as well as you did, she's just going to say something like, "I know you always treated me well and I appreciate it. However, that's got nothing to do with why I broke up with you. The fact is that I just don't have romantic feelings for you anymore. I'm sorry, but that's just the way it is. You're a nice guy and I'm sure you'll make some other woman very happy, but that woman isn't me. I wish you all the best."

So, make sure that you are willing to change your approach to her.

Don't use the same old approach that got you dumped in the first place.

Another possible reason why your ex left you for a guy who won't treat her as good as you did is that

2. She doesn't like it when a guy puts up with her bad behavior just to spend time with her

[image: She doesn't like it when a guy puts up with her bad behavior just to spend time with her]

Sometimes a guy makes the mistake of thinking that to keep a woman happy in a relationship, he needs to let her have her way no matter what.

Even when she treats him badly (e.g. is rude and disrespectful to him, throws tantrums and creates fake drama), he lets her get away with it because he thinks it will please her.

Yet, it just doesn't work that way.

Even though a woman might not admit it openly, she will hate it when a guy sucks up to her and puts up with her bad behavior, just so he can be with her.

Rather than think, “What a guy! So amazing! He’s always so sweet and accepting of me, even though I treat him like crap. He must really love me. I am so lucky to have him,” she feels turned off by his lack of balls to stand up to her and put her back in her place, in a loving, but dominant way.

When with a guy like that, a woman will think something like, “If I can push him around like this, how will he be treated in the workplace or around friends? He’s probably always going to be a pushover in other areas of his life, which means that if I stick with him, I am going to have to take on the responsibility of fighting any battles that come our way. I don’t want that. I want to be with a man who is more emotionally dominant than me, so I can relax and feel like a woman around him. I don’t want to have always be worrying that he will crumble at the first sign of trouble and I will then have to step into save the day. I want a man who is respected by other people, not a guy who gets walked all over because he’s too wimpy to be assertive.”

Important: This doesn’t mean that a woman wants a thug.

Don’t get it wrong.

When a guy is a bit of a softie and finds out that women want an emotionally tougher guy, he assumes that it’s about going to the extreme and being a bad boy or thug.

No, no, no.

It’s not about that at all.

Instead, it’s about being a very confident good guy who isn’t afraid to be assertive in situations when it is necessary.

Being assertive doesn’t mean getting into fights or heated arguments.

Once again, it’s not about going to the extreme.

Instead, it’s about being assertive in a socially intelligent way (i.e. making someone respect you, but still being respectful towards them, so you can achieve a win-win outcome).

That’s what a woman really wants.

So, if a woman is with a guy who isn’t able to stand up to her, then she fears that he will get walked all over in life and she will have to step in to fight his battles.

As a result, she just won’t feel safe with him.

The feeling of safety is extremely important to a woman and is a primal instinct that she cannot ignore.

If she doesn’t feel safe in the world with her guy, then her instincts tell her to leave him and find another man.

When she feels that way, it doesn’t matter how nice her guy is to her or how much he sucks up to her; she’s just not going to care, because deep down she knows that when the odds are stacked against him (i.e. things get tough), he’s not going to have the courage to stand up for himself, or for her.

Therefore, she can’t look up to him, respect him or feel attracted to him anymore.

When that happens, it’s only a matter of time before she cheats on him or leaves him and tries to find herself a man who is emotionally tough and capable of protecting a woman like her.

So, if you put up with your ex's bad treatment of you in the relationship just to be with her (i.e. because you needed her more than she needed you), it will have been a big turn off for her.

If her new guy doesn't allow her to disrespect him or treat him badly, then she's going to feel more attracted to him because of it.

I know, I know.

It probably makes you feel angry to read that.

After all, why on Earth would she want that?

If you still don't understand, go back and reread the start of this section again.

It's a primal instinct that she can't ignore.

Of course, you might wish to believe that being nice, sweet and doing whatever a woman wants is the key to making her happy, but it's not.

Likewise, being bad, cruel and not doing anything a woman wants also isn't the key to making her happy.

What is?

You should know by now.

It's about being a very confident good guy who respects her and treats her well, but respects himself even more (i.e. doesn't let her get away with treating him like crap).

In other words, a guy who is more of a challenge to impress and maintain the interest of, rather than a pushover who puts up with anything and everything just to spend time with her.

Another reason why your ex might have left you for a guy who won't treat her as good as you did is!

3. Her attraction for him is stronger because he is more emotionally masculine

For a woman to be able to relax into feeling like a feminine woman (i.e. what she really wants to be), she needs to know that her man is more emotionally masculine than her.

These days, women are very independent and can also take on leadership positions in the workplace, so some guys assume that a woman will be happy as the leader in her romantic relationship as well.

Here's the thing though!

Regardless of her professional achievements or role in the workplace, when a woman is in a romantic relationship with a man, she wants to know that he is the man so she can relax into being a feminine woman around him.

Of course, not all women want that (there are some women who have more of a masculine spirit and don't want a man to lead the way), but most women have a more feminine spirit and want to relax into the leadership of a man when in a romantic relationship.

One element of this is that the man is more emotionally masculine than her (e.g. she is more sensitive and sweet and he is more tough and ballsy).

This doesn't mean that a man can't be sweet or do romantic things, but that he has to ensure that sweetness and romance aren't his main approach to attracting her.

If he wants to be more like her, rather than being more like a masculine man, then she will naturally feel turned off by his inability to make her feel like a feminine woman around him.

What you need to understand and accept about life is that the majority of women want to be with an emotionally masculine man, not a man who likes to be more like a woman because he thinks being manly is wrong, rude, too much work or outdated.

Being a man never goes out of style.

Being a man triggers a woman primal instinct of attraction and maintains it, whereas being a feminine type of guy (e.g. emotionally sensitive, easily upset) instinctively turns a woman off and makes her want to find a more masculine man instead.

When you embrace your masculinity and live it, your woman can then be girly, get emotional, focus on being in love with you and put time and effort into making herself look attractive for you.

On the other hand, if you don't take on the manly role (e.g. you let her be the boss at home, make most of the decisions for both of you, lead the way), she will feel more emotionally masculine than you and feel turned off as a result.

So, if your ex left you for a guy who won't treat her as well as you did, it could be because he's currently more emotionally masculine than you, thereby making her feel more girly and feminine around him than she felt around you.

Another possible reason why your ex left you for a guy who won't treat her as good as you did is that

4. You thought that being nice and treating a woman right, was the secret to keeping her happy

Don't blame yourself.

The media tells men everyday that all women want in a nice guy who sucks up to them, treats them like a princess, buys them a big diamond ring and does the housework.

It's all total BS.

What women really want is a very confident good guy who doesn't allow himself to be pushed around by a moody woman.

He treats her well, but he has the balls to laugh at her when she is being unreasonable or moody and trying to be a brat about things.

He doesn't fall for it and she loves it.

She loves his balls.

She loves the fact that she can't push him around and that he has the masculinity to stand his ground and show her who is boss.

Of course, that's not what the media will tell you.

They have to be politically correct and avoid offending people, so they tell guys that the secret to success with women is to be a nice, patient, sweet, innocent, friendly guy who lets a woman lead the way.

Yeah, try that in real life and you end up in the friend zone with women you like, or dumped by women you love.

Put it this wayâ€¦

If niceness was all a woman really looked for in a guy, most of the guys in the world would have a beautiful girlfriend, fiancÃ© or wife, because most guys are nice.

Unfortunately, thatâ€™s just not how this world really works.

Although niceness is a great trait that women appreciate, there also needs to be a sexual spark between the man and woman for the woman to want to stick around and be in a sexual, romantic relationship with him.

So, if a nice guy fails to create feelings of sexual attraction inside of a woman in a relationship (e.g. because he's insecure, too nice, gives her too much power that she doesn't even want anyway), sheâ€™s not going to feel motivated to stay with him for life.

Even if she truly cares for him as a person, without the all-important spark of sexual attraction, sheâ€™s only going to see him as a friend at best.

Then, if she meets another man who makes her feel sexually attracted in ways that her current guy canâ€™t (e.g. the new man makes her feel feminine and girly in his presence, whereas her current guy only makes her feel friendly emotions), she will pick the new guy even if he doesnâ€™t treat her as well as her ex did.

So, if you want to win your ex back from her new guy, start by giving her more of what she wants and less of what she doesnâ€™t want (i.e. more confidence, emotional strength, manliness and less niceness, sopiness and emotional sensitivity).

When she can see for herself that you are now the kind of man who can make her feel attracted in ways that really matter to her, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from changing how she feels about you.

She will start to appreciate the fact that youâ€™re a nice guy who treats her well, but you also have a lot more balls now.

You seem to have transformed into the very confident good guy that all women want.

She then starts to doubt her decision to leave you for a guy who won't treat her as well as you did.

As a result, she opens herself back up to wanting to be with you again.

At that point, youâ€™ve just got to be confident enough to guide her back into a relationship with you.

Another possible reason why your ex left you for a guy who wonâ€™t treat her as well as you did is â€¦

5. He dumped her in the past and she just wants to get back with him to feel better about herself

Sometimes, a woman will hook up with a guy again because he dumped her in the past and she wants to get him back to feel better about herself.

Then, when he falls in love with her and feels secure in the relationship, she will dump him to get revenge for the pain he put her through.

She will then quickly try to find a guy who she can respect, feel attracted to and love for real.

Where do you fit into this picture?

Well, in two places, actually.

You can either 1) Get her to leave her current guy or, 2) Get her back after she dumps him.

Both of those options are possible.

Which do you choose?

How to Make My Ex Realize What She Lost

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 tips on how to make your ex realize what she lost:

1. Understand why she really left you

Right now, you may or may not know all of your ex's reasons for leaving you.

If you do know all of her secret, subtle reasons, then you're off to a great start.

You are one of those few, lucky guys who already knows what he needs to change and improve in himself to get his ex back.

[image: Why did she really leave you?]

However, if you're like the majority of guys out there, you might still be feeling confused about where things went wrong between you and your ex.

You may even be thinking things like, "I know we had some arguments and disagreements, but in general, I thought we were happy together. Why did she leave me? I don't really know what went wrong. Could I have prevented the break up? What happened?"

If that sounds a bit like you, don't worry about it.

You just need some help and you will be on the right path to getting her back.

Here are some questions that will help you better understand her real reasons for breaking up with you.

For example:

- Did you maintain your confidence and belief in your value to her, or did you become insecure, self-doubting and begin to worry that she was too good for you?
- Were you emotionally strong and independent in the relationship with her, or were you mostly insecure, needy and clingy?
- Were you the more emotionally masculine one in the relationship, or did you allow her to wear the pants and make most of the decisions for you and her?
- Did you make her feel feminine and girly in your presence, or did you turn the relationship into a friendship where you and her felt more like buddies?
- Was she able to look up to you and respect you as her man, or did she look down on you a bit after losing a lot of respect for you?
- Did you place her needs ahead of your own and suck up to her all the time, despite her bad behavior or unfair treatment of you?
- Did you have a big purpose outside of your relationship with her, or did you make her your sole reason for living?
- Did you maintain and build on the love, respect and attraction between you and her over time, or did you just assume that it would take care of itself because things used to be good between you and her?
- Did she feel proud of you in social situations because you were so confident and able to talk to and get along with people, or did she feel a bit embarrassed, ashamed or annoyed at you for being socially anxious?

- Did you make her feel happy to be with you by being a loving guy, or did you end up turning into a nagging, annoying, irritating boyfriend (or husband) because she stopped treating you the way she did in the beginning?
- Were you aware that all women change their behavior in a relationship at some point to test their man's confidence, or did it make you angry and annoyed at her?
- Were you able to pass her confidence tests and make her fall more in love with you as a result, or did you fail her confidence tests and ruin her feelings for you?

[image: Why was she able to leave and not feel like she was losing out?]

By fully understanding why your ex really left you, you will then be able to make the correct changes to your thinking and behavior to re-attract her.

Then, when you next interact with her again (via text, e-mail, on social media and especially over the phone and in person), she will be able to see for herself that you're not stuck repeating the same mistakes over and over again.

You have leveled up as a man.

You are 10x better than you were before and she didn't even have to help you.

You have quickly become the sort of man that other women would be lucky to have and she can sense it.

When she senses the changes, she automatically starts to feel some respect and attraction for you again.

Her defenses then come down and she begins to wonder things like, â€œHe's so different now. What if I've actually made a mistake by breaking up with him? Maybe I should give him another chance. After all, he really has changed and I really do feel differently about him. Why should I let another woman have him? I want him.â€œ

She then opens herself to the idea of getting back together again.

On the other hand, if you don't fully understand her real reasons for leaving you, chances are high that you will keep making the same old mistakes and offering her things she doesn't even care about.

For example: A guy might say, â€œI promise there will be no more fights and arguments between us. I won't do anything to upset you and cause you stress.â€œ

Yet, what his woman really wants is for him to be more manly and stop buying into her fake drama and tantrums (i.e. her tests of his confidence).

He doesn't understand what she really wants, so she will say, â€œSorry, but I'm just not interested. Please accept that it's over between us and move onâ€œ rather than explaining to him that he needs to man up and following her lead.

So, if you want to make your ex realize what she has lost, make sure that you understand what really turned her off and lead to the break up.

If you don't understand that and make changes, she's just not going to be interested.

On that noteâ€¦

2. Prepare yourself to re-attract her on a phone call or in person

It's all good and well to decide that you want your ex back, but the question you need to ask yourself is: Are you actually ready to re-attract her?

If you called her on the phone now, would you know what to say and do to make her feel attracted, or would you possibly get nervous, stumble over your words and make her feel like talking to you is a waste of time?

If you don't know how to attract her and she ends up getting annoyed, you might hear her say something like, "Look, I'm really busy and this conversation is a waste of my time. I know that you mean well, but it's over between us. The sooner you accept that, the better."

So, prepare yourself to attract her.

For example: Have you actually changed and improved for real since the break up in the ways that are important to her, or are you still the same guy she broke up with?

Unfortunately, sometimes a guy will get so caught up in trying to make his ex realize what she lost, that he forgets to actually change and improve the things that turned her off.

He convinces her to meet up with him, only for her to discover that he's still stuck at the same level he was at when she broke up with him (e.g. he's still emotionally sensitive, he still doesn't know how to make her be submissive and respect him, he still can't handle her confidence tests).

When that happens, she loses even more respect for him for trying to get her back without improving himself first.

As a result, it then becomes more difficult for him to get her back.

For example: Even if he does change and improve after that, she is unlikely to believe him because he has already tricked her once before since the break up.

So, she might refuse to meet up with him and he will then be left frustrated and wondering what else he can do to make her want him.

If you don't want that to happen to you, be sure to prepare to re-attract your ex before contacting her (i.e. change and improve the things that actually matter to her).

When you do it right, she will sense that you are different when you talk to her on the phone and in and will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

By the way!

You don't have to tell her that you've changed.

She will be able to pick it up automatically based on your tone of voice, your confident body language and the way you make her laugh and smile, even when she's being cold or bitchy to you.

Her walls will begin to crumble, she will look at you in a new, more positive light and begin to feel like breaking up with you was a mistake.

However, be warned!

If you call her on the phone or meet up with her in person without preparing to attract her properly, then you will likely say or do something unattractive, which will then confirm to her that she made the right decision to leave you.

So, once you've prepared yourself to re-attract her properly!

3. Make her feel attracted during an interaction (on the phone or in person) and then cut off contact for 3 to 7 days

When you feel ready, get your ex on a phone call or talk to her in person so that you can properly reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Texts are okay, but not all women feel enough attraction simply based on text messages, which is why I recommend a phone call or in person interaction.

To make her feel attracted on the phone or in person, you can use humor to lighten the mood and break down her defenses.

You can also add in some flirting to create sexual tension.

Whatever the case, just make sure that you focus on showing her that you're now a new and improved man.

For example: If you

- If you were shy and introverted throughout most of the relationship, you're now so more confident and assertive.
- If you allowed her to dominate you emotionally, you are now able to stand up for yourself (in a loving way) and take the lead in the interaction.
- If you used to feel like you couldn't live without her and needed her for a sense of purpose and direction in life, you are now emotionally independent and feel happy and fulfilled with, or without, her.

The more she experiences the new you and improved you, the more attracted she will feel.

Attraction happens automatically and isn't something that either men or women can stop feeling for each other.

It's an instinctive reaction.

When traits are displayed that cause attraction, it happens whether we want it to or not.

So, when she is attracted to you again and the sexual tension is building, you can say something like, Hey, so it was good to chat to you again, but I've got a meeting I have to get to now. I'll call you again sometime. Bye, and then hang up the phone or leave the in person interaction.

Then, don't contact her again for 3 to 7 days.

She will have to live with the fact that she felt attracted to you during the interaction.

She will feel drawn to you and won't be able to stop herself questioning whether she made the right decision to leave you.

Then, she will either call you or send you a text to say hi, in the hopes that you will call her and arrange a meet up so you and her can hook up sexually and get back together.

4. If she doesn't contact you after a week, call her and arrange a meet up

Sometimes a woman won't call her ex (even though she's feeling re-attracted) to avoid coming across as being too easy or desperate.

So, if your ex doesn't get into contact with you after your first interaction with her, just call her after a few days (no more than 7 days later) and ask her to meet up with you.

For example: After a bit of conversation where you spark her feelings for you, you can say something like, Anyway, as nice as it is chatting to you on the phone, I think it would be even better to catch up and say hello in person. So, how about we get together for some coffee in the next few days? I'm available on Wednesday night or Sunday morning. Which day suits you best?

By that point, she will most likely say Yes, and you can then go ahead and make plans.

Then, when you see her in person, just focus on building on her newfound feelings of respect and attraction for you and guide her back into a relationship with you.

3 Mistakes to Avoid

[image: 3 mistakes to avoid when attempting to make your ex realize what she lost]

If you want to make your ex realize what she lost, try not to make any of the following mistakes:

1. Sending her a goodbye letter, when you really want her back

[image: Thumbs down to a goodbye letter]

Sometimes a guy will hope that saying goodbye in a letter will make her suddenly realize what she's losing and come running back to him.

It would be nice if women were that naïve, but they're usually not!

Instead, in most cases, a woman sees right through his fake goodbye letter and knows that he still wants her back.

She will reason that if he didn't want her back, he wouldn't have gone to all that effort to send her a goodbye letter and would have just moved on.

If she has had some experience with relationships, she will know that if a guy really doesn't care and doesn't want her back, he just moves on and doesn't look back.

So, if her ex is looking back and putting in effort to communicate with her in a letter, it's pretty obvious that he still cares about her and is secretly hoping for another chance.

Additionally, when a woman breaks up with a guy against his will (i.e. he's still in love with her and doesn't want to let her go), he usually reacts in ways that make it clear to her how he feels about her.

For example: When she is breaking up with him, a guy might:

- Beg and plead with her not to leave him.
- Make promises to change.

- Cry and tell her that his life is over without her.
- Get angry and make a scene.
- Try hard to talk her out of it.
- Confess his undying love for her.
- Ask her to tell him what to change so he can still be with her.
- Promise to wait as long as it takes for her to change her mind.

So, if a guy acts in any of those ways during the break up, she will assume that the goodbye letter is just a cheap trick to hopefully make her realize what she is losing.

What I recommend is that you be a man about this.

Be mature, be honest and be real.

If you really do want your ex back, then don't pretend that you are over her and aren't interested in being with her anymore.

If she knows that you really do want her back, then she will look at your behavior as meaning that you're either too emotionally weak to go after what you want (i.e. her) or you are clueless about how to re-attract her and are just giving up.

As a result, she will lose even more respect and attraction for you and begin to feel very attracted to men who are confident, emotionally masculine and not afraid to speak their mind and be real.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Trying to seem happy with your life via text messages to her

Even if you truly are happy and having a great time without your ex, telling her about it via text is unlikely to make her think, "Oh my goodness, what have I done? He's such a wonderful man and I let him slip through my fingers. What can I do to get him back? He's so happy without me now! I am unworthy of him! He's soooo cool!"

Why?

When a woman can't hear the tonality of your voice, or see your body language, she has to guess at how you would come across to her if you said that in person or on a phone call.

Rather than give you the benefit of the doubt and assume that you are happy and moving on without her, she will remember how you behaved leading up to, during and after the break up.

If you behaved like many guys do during those times (e.g. insecure, clinging to her, being emotionally sensitive, pleading with her), she will assume that you're still the same guy and are just pretending to be happy now to hopefully impress her.

So, if you want to get your ex back for real, don't try to convince her that you are happy and enjoying life via text.

Firstly, if you lie to her about being happy and she finds out, it will only make her lose even more respect and attraction for you and then convincing her to give you another chance will become a lot more difficult.

Secondly, text messages won't re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you, because she won't be able to experience the new and improved you for real.

It's fine to text your ex (as I explain in the video below), but don't rely solely on text

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Pretending to be dating other women when you're not

Just like with the previous mistake, lying to your ex about dating other women (to make her realize what she lost) is a bad idea.

Not only will she feel disgusted with you if she finds out that you lied to her, but saying that youâ€¦re dating other women can backfire.

For example: She might test you by saying, â€œOh, really? Thatâ€™s great. Iâ€™m glad youâ€™re moving on. Iâ€™m moving on too. I met a great guy recently and I think he could be the one. We're thinking of moving into together soon.â€

If you then slip up and say something like, â€œWhat? How can you be moving in with another guy already? Didnâ€™t what we had together mean anything to you? How can you move on so fast like that? I don't understand youâ€ she will know that you were just lying about other women to make her feel jealous.

At that point, she will lose respect and attraction for you and close up even further.

So, donâ€™t put yourself in that situation.

If you truly want to make your ex realize what she lost, I donâ€™t recommend that play games with her.

Instead, interact with her (on the phone and in person) and show her that you really are a new and improved man now.

Attract her and make her want you for real, rather than trying to fake your way back into her life.

If she knows you well enough, she won't fall for cheap tricks.

What works is focusing on making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again, which is actually very easy to do.

Final Words to Say to a Woman When She Breaks Up With You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 options of final words to say to a woman when she breaks up with you:

1. Tell her that you accept the break up

For example: “Hey, I completely understand why you feel the way you do. Things have been rough between us lately and I can see why you might want to end things. So, I totally accept your decision to break up. I promise not to pressure you into doing anything that you don’t want. So, let’s break up, but at least be mature about it all and stay friends, okay?”

This means that your final words aren’t so ‘final’ after all.

You are creating an opportunity to keep the communication open between you and her, so you can get her back.

Watch this to understand why:

By handling the break up in an emotionally strong and mature way, you will cause her to feel respect and attraction for you.

This will make her feel drawn to you, even if just a little.

It will cause her to go away from the break up with feelings of regret in her heart and mind.

She will begin to miss you and wonder why she is missing you.

This is what you want.

On the other hand, if you don’t accept the break up right away, you will cause her to lose feelings of respect and attraction for you.

So, be mature about it.

If you are, she will then think something along the lines of, “Hmmm...that’s not at all how I thought this would go. I was expecting him to do all sorts of childish things to make me change my mind (e.g. cry, beg, plead, get angry), but he didn’t. In fact, he’s being so emotionally mature about the whole thing. I’m impressed. Other guys can’t handle a break up like a man. Maybe we can stay friends after all. He’s clearly mature enough to do so.”

Of course, she might still respond by saying something along the lines of, “No, I don’t think we can stay friends. It’s probably better if we make a clean break and not see or talk to each other for a while.”

This is just an attempt to maintain her position as the one in control of the break up, or to make sure that she doesn’t seem to be opening back up to you.

Regardless of what she says, don’t let it upset you or cause you to react in a way that will make her to think, “Oh, here it comes! Now he is going to start getting desperate for me. I guess he was just faking being okay with the break up after all. It was a trick. Okay, well two can play at mind games. I’m going to be very cold, rude and closed off from now on.”

So, make sure that you are READY for the tests, because they WILL come.

She will test your confidence by giving you mixed messages or by being very cold or distant all of a sudden.

For example: If she says, “No, I don’t think we can stay friends. It’s probably better if we make a clean break and not see or talk to each other for a while” you just need to maintain your confidence and not appear rejected by her statement.

You might laugh (important!) and add in, “What’s the big deal? Why can’t we be friends? Oh wait, you don’t still have a crush on me, do you? That’s why. I get it now” and have a laugh with her about that.

She will most likely be a bit defensive and say, “No, I don’t have a crush on you! I’m breaking up with you.”

You can then use it as an opportunity to get her to meet up with you by saying, “Prove it then. Let’s catch up for a friends only cup of coffee in a couple of days. I’ll call you to set up a time. If you don’t have a crush on me still, you will be fine to catch for a coffee just a friends.”

Say it in a light-hearted, easy-going, playful way, but also be serious about it and actually get her to catch up with you.

In most cases, a woman will agree because she will want to prove to her ex that she doesn’t have feelings for him and is mature enough to remain friends.

Of course, if she keeps saying “No, I just tell her that if she meets up with you this one time, you will then leave her alone and never contact her again if that’s what she wants.”

She’ll most likely agree, even if it’s just to get you to leave her alone after that.

Then, when you meet up with her, make sure that you say and do the types of things that will reactivate her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

For example: Maintain your confidence around her even when she’s being cold and distant, make her smile, laugh and feel happy that she said yes to the meet up, make her feel feminine in contrast to your masculine vibe and charm her with your new and improved approach to the relationship.

She will then begin to wonder, “What’s going on here? Why am I only feeling positive emotions towards him all of a sudden?” and won’t be able to stop herself from feeling surges of respect and attraction for you once again.

From there, you simply build on that spark of attraction to show her that things really are different now.

Alternatively, you might want to

2. Calmly tell her what you like about her and say goodbye

[image: Calmly tell her what you like about her and then leave]

Another example of the final words to say to a woman when she breaks up with you, is to calmly say some nice things about her and then leave.

For example: You might say, “Hey, you’re a great woman and I really appreciate the time we had together. You've always been loving, kind and attentive to me in the relationship, even when I was being a bit of a jerk. So, I will always respect that about you. I just want you to know that I wish you only the best. Of course, I'm sad that it didn't work out between us, but I hope you find happiness. You deserve it.

Then, after saying that to her, give her a few days of space (between 3 to 7 days) so she can calm down and start missing you.

Make sure you don't ignore her for longer than that though, because if she has disconnected from her feelings for you, she's just going to use that time to get over you and move on.

Watch this for more info!

After giving her 3 to 7 days of space, go ahead and contact her (preferably calling her on the phone rather than texting her) and actively re-spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Then, get her to agree to a meet up with you in person so you can fully re-attract her and start the process of getting her back.

Another option is to

3. Joke with her by switching roles and breaking up with her instead

It has been said that laughter is the best medicine.

By using humor, you can change a potentially difficult and tense situation (i.e. breaking up) into something that can spark some respect in her and make her see you in a more positive light.

For example: You might laugh (important) and say in a joking way, What? You're breaking up with me? No way am I going to allow that to happen! I'm breaking up with you first! It's over. I can't be with you anymore. You're dumped! and have a laugh with her about that.

When you make her laugh, she stops focusing on all the negatives about you and she may even start to think things like, I'm still going to break up with him, but I have to admit that he is the kind of guy who can always make me laugh, even when things were really serious and awkward. That's one of his finest qualities. I like that about him. I'm going to miss him.

You can then continue making her feel attracted during the conversation until she has a whole list of things about you that she likes.

For example: Not only do you have a great sense of humor, but you also have the confidence and emotional strength to use it in a difficult situation (i.e. when she's breaking up with you).

Additionally, not only are you funny, confident and emotionally strong, but you're also emotionally mature enough to handle the break up like a man, rather than crying, begging and pleading like other guys would.

The more she thinks about it, the more she realizes that you have many attractive qualities that she actually likes.

Suddenly, all the reasons she has for breaking up with you don't seem so important anymore.

She starts to open back up to you and as a result, you can re-attract her and get her back.

What You Shouldn't Be Doing When She Breaks Up With You

The final impression you make on a woman when she breaks up with you really matters.

It is the difference between earning some of her respect for you again, or turning her off even more.

So, to ensure that you stay on her good side, make sure to avoid any of the following mistakes that other guys make.

When a woman breaks up with a guy, he will often make mistakes, such as

1. Crying

Sometimes a guy might not know how else to react when his woman breaks up with him, so as a last resort, he might start crying.

He is hoping that she will think, Wow, he must really love me if he's falling apart like that. Maybe I'm making a mistake here. Do I really want to lose a man who is even willing to cry over me? and feel guilty enough about what she is doing to give him another chance.

Yet, that almost never happens.

Instead of being impressed by his display of desperation, a woman will add, Emotionally sensitive, needy and desperate, wussy to the list of things that have been turning her off about him.

As a result, her decision to leave the relationship feels like the right thing to do for her.

Here's the thing

Most women don't want to be in a relationship with the kind of man they can't look up to and respect.

So, when a guy is crying and coming across as emotionally weak, a woman will usually think something like, Maybe it's just his way of showing me that he loves me, but if he can't handle a simple break up without falling apart like this, what are the chances that he will be able to handle other, more challenging situations in life? He just doesn't realize that by crying he's only convincing me even more that I made the right decision to break up with him. I don't want to be with a guy who is emotionally sensitive and needs me to support him and prop him up when things get tough. I want a man who is confident and emotionally strong enough to take care of both himself and me, no matter what life throws at him.

Another example of what not to do when a woman breaks up with you is

2. Trying to have a long, drawn out, deep and meaningful conversation

A guy might assume that by getting into a deep, serious conversation about the relationship (e.g. asking her why she's breaking up with him and what he can do to convince her to give him another chance) will be the best way to get her to change her mind and give him another chance.

He's hoping that she will think something like, "This is good! At least we're finally getting to the bottom of our problems. Maybe now we can actually work things out! I have to give him another chance" and everything will get sorted out.

Unfortunately, having that kind of conversation with a woman before you've fully reactivated her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you, will simply make her focus on the fact that you don't even know what she wants.

Let me say that another way for you!

If she doesn't feel attracted to you and you try to have a deep and meaningful conversation about the relationship, she will realize that you don't even know what she wants.

You don't know how to make her feel attracted anymore and instead, you want to discuss the relationship and try to fix things.

She doesn't want to fix things.

She wants to feel differently.

The only way to make that happen is to change your approach to attraction (e.g. if you were too emotionally sensitive before, then you now are so much more emotionally strong and ballsy) so she can feel attracted to you in a new and exciting ways.

In other words, the most important thing is how she feels, not how you feel.

I know, it's not nice to hear that, but it's the reality of the situation when you're getting dumped.

Your feelings are only important to her if she has feelings for you.

If you don't make her feel attracted to you again, she's just not going to want to work on the relationship, fix things and get back with a guy who doesn't even know how to make her feel attracted anymore.

It's very annoying for a woman to have to explain what women feel attracted to and how her guy can make her feel that way.

So, make sure you avoid the deep and meaningful conversation and just focus on making her want you again.

Attract her and pick her up again like she is a completely new woman to you.

Don't talk to her as though you and her are deeply in love with each other, because you're not.

You are deeply in love with her, but she currently doesn't feel the same way.

Fix that and you will get her back right away.

Another mistake to avoid making is!

3. Getting angry

It's understandable that a guy might feel shocked when his woman wants to break up with him, but getting angry with her about it and doing something silly (e.g. become aggressive, violent, threatening, rude) is not going to help him get her back in the long run.

A woman is not a man's property and she doesn't have to stay in a relationship with him if she doesn't want to.

As a result, getting angry with a woman about her decision to break up, isn't going to change her mind and make her feel obligated to stay.

In fact, she will simply lose more respect and attraction for you as a man, and that will make getting her back a lot more difficult.

So, maintain your cool and be a confident, emotionally strong, loving man.

That approach always wins.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

4. Begging or pleading for another chance

When a man resorts to begging and pleading for another chance, a number of things happen in a woman's head:

- She loses even more respect and attraction for him because he is being emotionally weak and wimpy in front of her.
- She feels that he's not really facing up to the fact that she's breaking up with him because certain aspects of his thinking and behavior has turned her off over time and he is hoping that by begging and pleading, she'll stop wanting to leave and give him another chance.
- She feels like she has to console him because he can't cope and that only makes her lose more attraction for him.
- She begins to look at him as a weak, immature guy who doesn't yet know how to be a real man.

So, rather than changing her mind about the break up, she becomes even more convinced that he's not the right guy for her.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

5. Trying to work things out via text

When a guy tries to work things out with his ex via text, it almost never works.

Why?

Texts on a little screen don't have the same impact as words spoken over the phone, or in person where a woman can hear the tonality of your voice or see your confident, masculine body language.

Rather than give you the benefit of the doubt via text and imagine that you're being confident, emotionally strong and mature, she will remember how you behaved near the end of the relationship and when she broke up with you (e.g. needy, clingy, insecure, childish) instead.

As a result, she won't be interested in working things out with you.

What you need to remember is that texts aren't you.

Words can't fully portray to her the changes and improvements that you've made since she broke up with you, so if she is like most women, she will assume that you haven't even changed.

On the other hand, if you call her on the phone, or meet up with her in person, she will sense that things really are different now.

She'll be confronted by the new and improved you (e.g. more confident, emotionally independent, emotionally masculine, charismatic, appealing) and even though she may try to fight it, she will instinctively start to feel rushes of respect and attraction for you once again.

When her feelings get reawakened, she stops pushing you away and getting her back becomes easy.

So, while the final words that you say to a woman are important, how you behave after that is even more important if you want her back.

If you focus on re-attracting her and making her want you back, you will get her back.

If you ignore her and hope that she comes back, she will most likely move on.

If you beg and plead for another chance, she will lose respect for you and close up even more.

My Girlfriend Said We Will Never Get Back Together

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible reasons why your girlfriend said that you will never get back together, are:

1. She can see that you still don't understand what she really wants

Often, when a guy gets broken up with, his initial reaction is to do whatever it takes to quickly get his woman back.

So, rather than spending a bit of time understanding her real reasons for breaking up with him (so he can then give her what she wants), he dives in and starts promising to change things about himself she doesn't actually want.

For example: Imagine that a woman broke up with her guy because he was too timid and submissive around her and others.

He almost always let her have her way (even when she was being unreasonable) and he rarely stood up for himself in social situations.

He might have tried to convince himself that he was doing the right thing by being so submissive with her, by thinking something like, "A woman doesn't want to be bossed around by her man. She wants to feel like his equal. Besides, modern women are emotionally strong and capable of taking care of themselves, so they don't want a guy to tell them what to do. They want to make all the decisions themselves and be in control. Fortunately, I'm the kind of guy who respects women's power and I'm happy to take a back seat and let my girlfriend lead because that's what will make her happy."

Yes, it's true that a woman doesn't want to be bossed around, but she also doesn't want to have to boss her man around.

She wants a man that she can look up to, respect and follow the lead of, rather than feeling like she has to take care of a soft, wimpy guy.

So, in this example, the woman felt more emotionally dominant than her, which caused her to lose respect and attraction for him.

She then began to close herself off to him emotionally.

Eventually, she got tired of leading him and left.

To get her back, a guy like that might say things like, "Please don't give up on us. What we have is special. I promise that I will never give up on our love and I will do whatever it takes to make you happy again. Just tell me what you want and I'll do it!"

He's hoping that she will feel flattered and happy that he's willing to do anything for her.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that he's behaving in the exact same way that turned her off in the first place (i.e. needy, wimpy, submissive, emotionally weak and needing her to lead him).

So, rather than make her feel optimistic about her future with him, she feels like the situation is hopeless.

He still doesn't understand what she really wants and therefore, he keeps offering her the wrong things (i.e. to do whatever she wants vs. being an emotionally strong, dominant man she can now look up to and respect).

As a result, she pushes him away even more and says things like, "Forget about it. You and I are over and we will never get back together. Please stop calling me and move on. I'm just not interested. You need to move on."

So, if you want to get your ex back, make sure that you offer her what she wants, rather than what you think she wants.

For example: Some of the things that a woman usually wants her guy to change are:

- To stop being so insecure, needy and clingy in the relationship with her.
- To make her feel feminine and girly by being more emotionally masculine than her, rather than making her feel neutral like a friend.
- To be emotionally independent and to have a huge goal and purpose in life other than his relationship with her.
- To stand up for himself and not let her, or others push him around.
- To make her feel loved and appreciated.
- To take the lead in the relationship and guide both of them to a better future together.
- To want the same things as her long term (e.g. to go traveling, to buy a house, start a family together, focus on their studies or careers).

When you understand what your girlfriend really wants, you can then begin to change those things about yourself right away.

Then, when you interact with her over the phone and in person and she sees for herself that you're now the kind of man she can look up to, respect and feel attracted to, her walls will come down.

She will stop saying, "We will never get back together again," because all of a sudden, saying it just doesn't feel true to her anymore.

Suddenly, there is a spark of hope in her heart and mind that you and her could actually make things work.

It's not over between you and her now.

Something is still there between you.

Additionally, this time, it feels even more appealing and interesting to her because you've leveled up as a man.

You have become a better man and are now able to make her feel attracted in more interesting, appealing, exciting and fulfilling ways.

You are still you, just better.

She gets to be with a new version of you and experience newer, more interesting and deep feelings.

From there, you just need to turn her spark of hope into a raging fire of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

Don't worry, it's easy to do.

When you do, she will go from saying, "We will never get back together" to, "When can we see each other again? I miss you!”

Another possible reason why your girlfriend said that you will never get back together, isâ€¦|

2. She is just being dramatic

[image: She is just being dramatic]

Some women like to create drama after a break up to hopefully make an ex beg, plead and chase her for another chance.

For example: A woman might say, â€œYou broke my heart and nothing will ever make me forget that! Please stop asking me for another chance, because we will never get back together again.

Itâ€™s over!â€œ

Her ex may then start begging and pleading with her and saying things like, â€œPlease donâ€™t say that. I love you so much! Please forgive me! I promise I will be the best boyfriend in the world if you just give me one more chance to make it up to you.â€œ

She can then feel good about the fact that she has complete control over him.

Yet, having the upper hand like that doesnâ€™t actually make her change her mind and want him back.

In fact, it actually turns her off even more, because heâ€™s falling for her fake drama (something that her other ex’s have likely also done).

Here’s the thingâ€¦|

Even though she wonâ€™t admit it when asked, a woman doesnâ€™t actually want a guy to take her so seriously when she is creating drama.

Rather than beg, plead or panic, she wants a man who will stand up to her by laughing (important) and saying something along the lines of, â€œHey, stop being such a drama queen. Sure, I stuffed up, but you made mistakes too. Thatâ€™s what happens in a relationship. No one is perfect. Iâ€™m not perfect and neither are you. What matters is how you handle it. When two people are mature and love each other, they donâ€™t make a big deal about past mistakes. They learn from their mistakes and become better people as a result. Then, if they want to, they can get back together and have a relationship thatâ€™s even stronger and better than before. So, stop being so dramatic about things you little drama queen. If you need time to heal, then take that time, but don’t be so irrational about things. You’re more mature than that and you know it.”

Of course, your ex will most likelyÂ act (yes, act) shocked and maybe even pretend to be angry if you say something like that to her.

So, be prepared to laugh at her (in a loving way) if she does.

When you do, she will feel surges of respect and attraction for you for being man enough to stand up to her in that way.

Of course, you shouldnâ€™t be mean to your ex girlfriend, but just donâ€™t get sucked into her fake drama.

If you are too afraid to laugh at her for being a drama queen, then you don’t have enough balls to be with a woman like her.

A woman wants a man who isn't afraid of her.

This doesn't mean you should be aggressive or angry though.

No.

Instead, it means that you should have the balls to look at her as a girl, rather than looking at her as being more dominant than you.

So, the next time she gets overly emotional with you, just remember to see the funny side of how she is approaching it all (i.e. look at her as being a silly little girl who is being overly emotional).

When she realizes that you're no longer falling for her drama and that you can now maintain your confidence and sense of calm no matter what she says or does to throw you off, she won't be able to stop herself from reconnecting with her original feelings of love for you.

When that happens, getting her back becomes easy.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend said that you will never get back together, is

3. You have disappointed her one too many times

[image: You have disappointed her one too many times]

In a relationship, a woman needs to be able to trust her guy to be a man of his word at all times.

It's not enough for him to stick to his word most of the time.

He has to be a man of his word every time, so she can fully relax into her trust in him.

Why?

The man is the leader.

A woman needs to be able to fully surrender into the leadership of her man and trust that he will guide both him and her to better times in the future.

If she can't trust him as the leader, then she can't fully surrender into her devoted, sexual love for him.

She will always have her guard up and be ready to leave him.

So many couples are in that state in a relationship because the man is unable to be consistent and be a leader that she can trust.

If that applies to your relationship, it's essential that you get clear on what it really means to be a man in a relationship with a woman.

Understand that it is your responsibility to lead the way to an increasingly better relationship dynamic.

That doesn't mean you have to do a lot of work.

It's not like that at all.

It just means that you have to know how to guide a relationship into deeper feelings of love, respect and attraction.

When you do, you will see that it's 10x easier than guiding a relationship into lesser feelings and ending up getting dumped by your girl.

Watch this

A woman needs to be able to trust that her man can lead both him and her to better times and a better relationship in future.

He doesn't have to be superman and achieve everything or get everything right.

He just needs to be better at leading the way than her.

Part of doing that is being a man of his word.

When a guy doesn't stick to his word, a woman will start to lose trust in him as the leader.

The more that happens, the more she will disconnect from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

Eventually, she will wonder why she is following his direction in the relationship and will take over.

When she does, she will feel frustrated and annoyed that she is stuck with a guy who can't even lead a woman in a relationship.

She will then start to feel attracted to other men who are more confident and emotionally masculine than him.

Soon enough, she will either cheat on her guy or break up with him and then try to move on.

So, what is an example of a guy not being a man of his word?

A guy might promise his girlfriend that he's going to stop hanging out with his single friends all the time (e.g. playing video games, getting drunk, going out partying) and focus more on his studies or work.

Yet, rather than stick to his word, he might sneak around behind her back doing the things he promised not to do.

Naturally, when she eventually finds out about it, she feels disappointed in him and feels as though he's not a trustworthy leader for her to truly surrender to and follow for life.

She may try to help change by saying things like, "You really let me down again. I don't like it when you say that you will do something and then break your word behind my back. If you lie to me one more time, I'm going to break up with you. I refuse to be in a relationship with a man who can't keep a promise."

If he doesn't take her warnings seriously and continues disappointing her, she will eventually lose so much respect that she will break up with him.

He might then try to get her back by writing her a long love letter or email, saying things like, "I'm so sorry for letting you down the way I did. I promise that I'll never break my word to you again. I love you so much. You mean the world to me and the idea of causing you pain makes me feel sick to my stomach. Please give me another chance and I promise that I will prove my love to you."

Yet, it's unlikely she will believe him at that point, after all she has been through with him in the past.

By the way!

When a woman has stopped having feelings for her ex, him pouring his heart out to her isn't going to make her suddenly care about the relationship.

Instead, she will usually think something like, "Good for you that you still love me, but I don't feel the same way about you. You've disappointed me too many times and I'm not" going to fall for your excuses and soppy declarations of love ever again. Youâ€™re just sending me letters and e-mails and hoping that I'll forget about what happened between us. Well, it doesn't work like that. I still feel hurt and angry about what you did. So, telling me how much you love me and asking for another chance based on that just makes me feel even angrier. It shows that youâ€™re still only thinking about yourself and what you need and don't really care about me or how I feel. You haven't changed. Youâ€™re doing what you always do, telling me what I want to hear, so I will forgive you and give you another chance. Then, when I do, you break your word again and let me down once again. Well, not this time. It's over! We will never get back together again and that's final!

So, if you want to convince your ex to give you another chance, don't waste time sending her long love letters or e-mails, because she's not going to care about how you feel or what you want right now.

Instead, show her (i.e. by changing your behavior, attitude, actions) that you truly are a man of your word now and won't let her down again.

Note: I said that you should “show” her, not “tell” her that you are a man of your word now.

The more you can prove to her that you really have changed, the more she will start to feel some respect and attraction for you again.

She will relax her guard and open up to the possibility of getting back together again, because you've regained some of her trust.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend said that you'll never get back together, is that

4. She believes that you will never change

In most cases, a woman won't just break up with a guy without giving him at least one or two more chances to change and improve.

However, if she sees that he always reverts back to his old way of thinking and behaving, she will eventually get fed up and break up with him.

He might then try to change her mind by saying things like, â€œI don't want to lose you. I promise that this time I really am going to change. Just give me one more chance,â€ but by that stage, the woman probably won't believe that he can change.

Instead, she will roll her eyes and say something along the lines of, â€œI'd like to believe you, but you've already made promises to change before and it's never happened. I wouldn't be surprised if you don't even know what to change or how to change it, and you're actually hoping that I will tell you or help you. Well, that's not going to happen. I'm tired of having to help you understand how to be the man that I need. I've tried for so long to get through to you and now I'm just fed up. I don't care enough to put in the effort anymore. You aren't the right man for me and I'm not going to waste anymore time trying to fix you or change you. You'd be better off finding a woman who will put up with you the way you are. However, that woman isn't going to be me. As far as the two of us are concerned, we will never get back together! It's over and you need to accept that and move on.â€

He may then try to make her feel sorry for him by saying something like, â€œHow can you do this to me? Didn't what we had together mean anything to you? I know that I stuffed up, but doesn't the fact that Iâ€¢m truly sorry change anything? I still love you and I am willing to try to make this work. I will do all the work. You don't have to do anything. Just let me show you that I can change. At least give me one more chance. Iâ€¢ll really change this time. I would never walk away from you the way youâ€¢re walking away from me. I will always love you enough to give you another chance. How can you not care about me anymore? Doesn't it matter to you that I still love you and that I will never be able to move on and find another woman because of my feelings for you? I've never loved any other woman as much as I love you.

Heâ€¢s secretly hoping that by making her feel sorry for him and by flattering her by telling her how much she means to it, she will change her mind and get back with him.

Yet, it just doesnâ€¢t work like that.

A woman doesnâ€¢t want to be manipulated into giving her ex another chance simply because he canâ€¢t deal with the idea of being broken up with.

Additionally, by behaving in that way, she starts to suspect that he doesnâ€¢t even know how to change and improve to get her back.

Instead, heâ€¢s hoping sheâ€¢ll take pity on him and give him another chance with her without him having to change anything first.

Unfortunately, this makes it feel unfair to the woman and she closes up even further as a result.

Eventually, she gets annoyed and says something like, "We will never get back together. Get that through your head. It's over!"

Horrible, right?

Don't worry, you can fix it.

If you truly want to get your girlfriend back, donâ€¢t waste time trying to convince her in ways that donâ€¢t actually matter to her (e.g. making promises to change, trying to make her feel sorry for you, expressing your feelings for her).

Instead, focus on understanding the real, more subtle reasons why she broke up with you (e.g. you weren't being manly enough, you became too emotionally sensitive) and then quickly make some changes to your thinking and behavior (e.g. by becoming more confident, emotionally independent, ballsy).

Then, the next time you interact with her (e.g. on a phone call, or in person) she will notice the changes by the way you interact with her.

You won't have to tell her that you've changed.

She will sense it for herself.

She will see that you now truly understand where you went wrong and are no longer the same guy that she broke up with.

Initially she might try to test you (e.g. by saying that she will never get back together again) or by acting cold, distant or even rude.

However, when she sees that you maintain your confidence no matter what, it wonâ€¢t take long before her resolve to never give you another chance starts to dissolve.

When that happens, all you need to do is continue saying and doing the types of things that will prove to her that you really are a new and improved man now.

She will naturally start to feel sparks of respect and sexual attraction for you again and open herself up to loving you once again.

She Loves Me, But is Afraid to Try Again

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex is saying that she loves you, but is afraid to try again:

1. She only loves you like a friend

[image: She only loves you like a friend]

There is more than one kind of love.

For example: You most likely love your mother, but not in the same way that you love your best friend and definitely not in the same way that you love your woman.

So, when your ex says that she loves you, but is afraid to try again, it can be because her love for you isn't the same as your love for her.

You might be feel sexual and romantic love for her, but she only feels a friendly, gentle kind of love that a woman has for a friend.

If you happen to say to her, “Let’s give our relationship another try. I love you and you say you love me too, so we can make it work” it actually makes her feel afraid, because deep down she knows that the love she’s talking about isn’t what you thin it is.

There’s something missing (sexual and romantic attraction) and she can’t just ignore it.

If you want her to feel sexually and romantically attracted to you and then love you the same way as you love her, you have to change your approach to her.

Watch this!

You can change how she feels.

In fact, if you think back to your relationship with her, you will realize that her feelings for you have changed multiple times already.

For example: When you first met each other, she likely only felt curious about you.

However, as she got to know you better, her feelings began to develop and she felt strong surges of respect and sexual attraction for you.

By the time you and her became a couple, her feelings had evolved into a deep, sexual and romantic love.

Eventually, her feelings changed again when you stopped giving her the kind of attraction experience that results in romantic love.

So, currently she’s only feeling a friendly, platonic love for you.

As you can see, her feelings have changed many times and you can change her feelings another time. How?

When you reawaken the respect and sexual attraction that is lying dormant inside of her, she will naturally start to feel differently about you.

She will go from seeing you as a friend, to wanting to be your girl once more.

However, to do that, you have to actively make her feel respect, sexual attraction and romantic love for you again when you interact with her.

If you just hang around her being a nice, sweet friend who doesn't flirt with her or show any interest in getting her back (i.e. because you're afraid of scaring her off if you do), she will most likely continue to just see you as a friend or as an ex she used to want to be with sexually and romantically, but not anymore.

So, if you want your ex to want to try again, remember to actively make her feel respect and sexual attraction for you by using every interaction you have with her (e.g. on the phone, or in person) to make her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you.

Don't pretend that you don't find her sexually attractive anymore.

Don't nag her to change her mind.

Don't put on your best behavior around her by being Mr. Nice Guy all of a sudden and don't allow her to dominate the situation.

Instead, focus on making her experience feelings of respect, sexual attraction and romantic love for you (not just friendship and nice, innocent feelings) every time you interact with her.

The more you do that, the more she will want to be around you.

Her defenses will drop, she will stop saying that she's afraid to try again and she will open herself up to the possibility that things could work out between you and her after all.

However, if you don't reactivate her feelings first, she's going to just keep saying things like, I love you, but I'm afraid to try again. Please don't pressure me. I need more time.

Then, if you give her more time, she will likely meet a new guy and move on.

I know this because I've been helping guys get women back for many years again.

Your situation is very common and is very easily fixed, if you use the right approach.

So, make sure that you are willing to try something different.

If you use your same old approach, she is most likely going to continue rejecting you and trying to move on.

Another possible reason why your ex is saying that she loves you, but is afraid to try again is because

2. You're asking for a relationship too soon

[image: You are asking for a relationship too soon]

Sometimes a guy will start talking about getting back together again with his ex a day or two after they've broken up.

For example: He might plead with her and say something along the lines of, Look, I know I stuffed up, but we can work things out. Let's just get back together again and we can take it from there. I promise to put in 100% effort to make things right between us. I'll do whatever you want me to do to make you happy. Please give us another chance. I promise you won't regret it.

Yet, if he doesn't properly re-attract her first (i.e. re-spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him), she will usually just keep saying things like, Look, I really do love you, but I'm afraid to try again. I just don't think we're meant to be together. We gave it a shot and it didn't work out. Maybe it's time to admit that we're not right for each other and move on. Please accept that and stop pressuring me.

So, don't make the mistake of asking your ex for a relationship before you've made her want to be with you again.

Remember: If you want her to give you another chance, you have to focus on making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

For example: When you interact with your ex:

- Maintain your confidence around her, no matter what she says or does (e.g. she's saying that she's too afraid to try, she's being cold and distant, she's being emotional).
- Use humor to break down her walls and make her feel good to be around you again.
- Flirt with her to create sexual tension, but don't release that tension right away. When the moment is right, release the built up tension with kissing and sex.
- Don't talk about getting back together again, unless she brings it up.
- Focus on having fun together and enjoying each other's company.

By doing this, you take the pressure off her to give you another chance right away and allow her experience the new and improved you for herself, at her own pace.

She then naturally stops resisting you (i.e. by putting up walls every time you mention getting back together) and begins to open back up again.

She starts looking at you in a more positive light and begins to feel emotions such as respect, sexual attraction and romantic love for you again.

When that happens, she wants to try again because her fear and doubt has been replaced by strong, positive emotions (e.g. respect, attraction, love).

Another possible reason why your ex is saying that she loves you, but is afraid to try again is because:

3. She believes that you will go back to your old ways eventually

[image: She believes that you will go back to your old ways eventually]

In most relationships, a woman will usually give her guy more than one chance to change and improve before she makes the final decision to break up with him.

If he doesn't actually put in the effort to improve the things that matter to her (e.g. stop being so clingy and needy, make more of the decisions in the relationship, become more focused and driven about his future), she will eventually break up with him.

When that happens, a guy will often try to get her back right away because he's still in love with her.

He might say things like, I'm sorry! I know I stuffed up but I've learned my lesson. Please give me another chance and I promise this time I won't let you down again.

Unfortunately, by that stage, a woman will usually be too afraid to take the risk of getting hurt again.

Even though her heart may be saying, I love him. Maybe this time he really has changed, her mind will be telling her, Don't be stupid! How many times are you going to believe him? He has promised to change so many times before and even if he does improve a bit, he always goes back to being the same jerk in the end. Donâ€™t trust him! Youâ€™ll only get hurt again.â€

So, she just keeps pushing him away and saying things like, â€œIâ€™m sorry. I love you, but Iâ€™m afraid to try again. Maybe it's over for good and we need to accept that. Please give me some space.â€

When he sees that sheâ€™s not going to give in to him this time, a guy might then try to explain his deep feelings for her in a letter or e-mail.

For example: He may write things like, â€œI know I messed things up between us and for that I truly am sorry. I love you more than anyone else in my life and I canâ€™t imagine a future without you in it. Please give me a chance to make it up to you. I promise that this time things really will be different. Iâ€™ve learned my lesson and I wonâ€™t make the same mistakes again. I really, really mean it this time. If you love me the way you say you do, youâ€™ll give me a chance. Donâ€™t let out love die because youâ€™re too afraid to try again. I love you more than anything. What we had was so special and I know that you are aware of that. Please don't walk away from what we have. I love you.â€

Yet, that approach almost never works.

Why?

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy, she just doesn't care how he feels anymore.

So, donâ€™t waste time trying to convince your ex to give you another chance by pouring your heart out to her in letters and e-mails.

Instead, show her via your actions and behavior that you have already improved and become a better man than you were before.

Let her experience the changes in you for herself over a phone call and in person, otherwise she wonâ€™t be able to allow herself to believe that you really have changed.

Another possible reason why your ex is saying that she loves you, but is afraid to try again is becauseâ€

4. She doesn't believe she would be totally happy with you

[image: She doesn't believe that she would be totally happy with you]

In the past, a woman would stay in a relationship regardless of how miserable she felt, because that was what was expected of her by society and by family.

In some cases, a woman would even go as far as convincing herself that happiness was overrated and that she should just be grateful to have a roof over her head and a man who provided for her.

However, thatâ€™s not the case anymore.

Todayâ€™s woman wonâ€™t stay in a relationship with a guy if heâ€™s not able to give her the attraction experience she truly wants.

For example: Even though a guy might be a truly nice guy who takes care of her in many ways, if he is too wimpy and weak minded, lacks confidence in himself and doesnâ€™t know how to stand up for himself, a woman will quickly lose respect for him.

When that happens, she will also stop feeling sexually attracted to him and gradually stop wanting to be around him.

He might then attempt to get her back by trying to convince her to ignore her fear and just give the relationship a shot by saying things like, “I know you’re scared to try again, but are you going to let your fears get in the way of your happiness? What if we really are meant to be together and you walk away? What if you never find another guy and you end up regretting your decision? Don’t let fear break us apart. Just take the chance.”

Yet, most of the time, an approach like that only scares a woman off even more.

She feels as though he is not taking her concerns seriously and just wants to get what he wants (i.e. to get her back).

So, if you want to convince your ex to try again, rather than try to convince her to ignore how she feels (which is what is most important to her and what she believes in the most), focus instead on changing how she feels for the better.

You need to make her feel so much respect and attraction for you that she wants to try again because it feels like the right thing for her to do.

The more she discovers that you’re not the same guy she broke up with (e.g. you’re no longer insecure, needy, a push over), the more open she will become to being around you.

She will want to hang out with you to experience the new and improved you as much as possible, because it will feel good to her.

In other words, she goes with how she feels.

She cares about how she feels.

That is the secret to getting an ex woman back.

You have to make HER feel what you are feeling right now as you try to get her back.

You’ve got to make her really want it.

You CAN make her feel that way.

Another possible reason why your ex loves you, but is afraid to try again is

5. She’s tired of trying to make the relationship work

[image: She is tired of trying to make the relationship work]

In some cases, a woman will get to the point where she feels as though she’s the one who is putting in all the effort to make a relationship work.

For example: She might always be the one who

- Backs off when there’s an argument to avoid upsetting him.
- Forgives him when he stuffs up, even though he makes the same mistakes over and over again.
- Puts in effort to change and improve herself to be a better girlfriend, fiancée or wife, while he keeps making more and more demands of her to change and be different.
- Tries to guide him into thinking, acting and behaving more like the man she needs him to be.

So, if she gets the sense that she's the one doing all the work and he's just sitting back and hoping that by saying, "I love you," it will be enough to sustain the relationship for life, she will gradually lose so much respect and attraction for him that she will want to get out of the relationship.

If he then tries to get her back (e.g. by promising to change), she will likely say "No," because deep down she doesn't believe that he even knows what to change or how to do it.

She is tired of having to help him understand how to be the man she needs.

She has taken on that responsibility for so long and has gotten to the point where she has now given up.

If you want to convince your ex to try again, show her that you now have what it takes to make her feel happy.

Turn things around by making the changes she always wanted you to make (e.g. be much more confident, emotionally independent, stand up for yourself, be more emotionally masculine) without needing her to help you.

By doing that, she will naturally begin to respect you again and feel like she can trust you to be the kind of man she needs.

Will My Twin Flame Come Back to Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you don't create a path back to you, a twin flame will wander off into other relationships and fall in love again without you.

If you don't want that to happen to you, here's what you need to do to get her back:

1. Understand what truly pushed your twin flame away

The main reason why a woman will break up with a guy is because something about his behavior or attitude caused her to disconnect from her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him.

[image: Understand what really pushed your twin flame away]

For example: Some common reasons why a woman breaks up with a guy are because he

- Lost his confidence and became too needy, insecure and clingy in the relationship.
- Became too emotionally dependent (e.g. gave up his interests outside of the relationship with her, stopped seeing his friends so that he could spend all of his spare time with her), causing her to eventually feel smothered by the relationship.
- Made her feel as though she was way more valuable than him, so she started to question her reasons for staying with him.
- Let her get away with bad behavior (e.g. throwing tantrums over nothing, being rude and disrespectful towards him, taking advantage of him financially, expecting him to do everything for her and then not doing much or anything in return for him).
- Was too timid and emotionally weak around her.
- Treated her more like a neutral friend than like an attractive, desirable woman.
- Was too childish and immature (e.g. drifting through life without a clear purpose or direction).
- Stopped making her feel loved and appreciated.
- Didn't take the relationship seriously (e.g. he didn't want to commit to her, felt like he could treat her however he wanted and she would just stick around).

Did any of the above apply to the relationship with your twin flame?

By figuring out what caused your ex's feelings for you to change, you can then start to make some attractive improvements to yourself (e.g. by adjusting the way you behave and how you respond to what she says and does when you interact with her).

She will then be able to see for herself that you're not stuck repeating the same mistakes over and over again.

You've changed and improved and have become a better man.

When she can see that for herself, she won't be able to stop her defenses from coming down a little bit.

When that happens, she will feel some respect for you again and then the idea of seeing you in person and reconnecting with you becomes a real possibility in her mind.

On the other hand, if you don't truly understand what pushed her away, chances are high that you will keep making the same old mistakes in your communication style.

As a result, she will just keep saying things like, â€œSorry, but Iâ€™m just not interested. I know you canâ€™t accept it right now, but weâ€™re not right for each other.â€

Alternatively, you might keep offering to fix the wrong things about yourself that she doesnâ€™t even care about (e.g. a guy might say, â€œI promise to spend more time with you from now on,â€ but what she really wants is for him to be more manly and not be such a hopeless romantic).

Remember: If you donâ€™t understand what really pushed your twin flame away, you wonâ€™t be able to give her what she truly wants and she simply wonâ€™t come back to you.

2. Get clear on exactly how you will re-attract her when you interact with her

Once you understand the real reasons for your break up with your ex, you need to focus on how youâ€™re going to re-attract her.

For example: Imagine that a woman left a guy because he became too emotionally dependent on her. He stopped being his own man (e.g. neglected his friends, gave up his hobbies, stopped making goals for himself) and made everything in his life about her.

To re-attract her, he needs to be able to show her that heâ€™s now an emotionally independent man who is happy and forward moving in his life, with or without her.

How can he do that?

Not by telling her that heâ€™s changed, thatâ€™s for sure!

Instead, he needs to let his actions speak for him.

As the old saying goes, “Actions speak louder than words.”

He needs to show her that he’s no longer emotionally dependent on her like he used to be.

For example: If she sends him a text, he doesnâ€™t have to respond to her right away (unless itâ€™s an emergency, of course!).

This lets her know (without using words) that heâ€™s not sitting around feeling lonely and missing her.

Instead, heâ€™s getting on with other things and being an emotionally independent man again.

She can then start to think, â€œI wonder what heâ€™s doing today? In the past, he would have responded to me right away. Is it possible that heâ€™s actually getting on with his life now that weâ€™ve broken up? Is he with another woman? Have I lost him already? Damn.â€

Then, if he responds to her later on and is easy-going and casual about things, she will get the sense that he really is changing.

She will then become open to seeing him in person and going with how she feels.

As long as he is attracting her in person, the fire of passion between them will begin to burn and they will feel like twin flames once again.

Another example of how a guy might show his ex that heâ€™s changed is by posting photos of himself on social media having a good time with friends, or doing something new and exciting (e.g.

going bungee jumping, horse riding, water skiing, mixed martial arts).

The more proof she sees of him being emotionally independent and enjoying life without her, the more open she will become to seeing him in person to see where things go from there.

In the same way, when you let your twin flame experience the new you in the ways that matter to her (e.g. you're more confident around her, even when she tries to test you by being cold and bitchy towards you, you stand up to her in a lovingly dominant way, rather than allow her to dominate you like before) her guard will naturally come down.

3. Create a vision for your new relationship together

Decide how you want your relationship with your twin flame to go when you get her back.

Don't be vague and think things like, "The most important thing right now is for my twin flame to come back to me. When that happens we'll figure things out from there."

If you're unclear about what you want the new relationship to be, she will subconsciously pick up on your vagueness and will feel like something isn't right.

She may then think to herself, "He's saying all the right things and he's even changed a lot since we broke up. Yet, something is missing. I can't put my finger on it, but I don't feel 100% sure that giving our relationship another try is a good idea. I can't see how it would be better."

So, make a clear list of what you expect from the relationship when you and your ex get back.

For example: You might say to yourself, "Some of the things I envision happening in my future relationship with my twin flame are"

- I'm going to make her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with me (e.g. respectful, sexually attracted, happy, in love).
- I'm going to make her feel like the most important person in my life, but not the most important thing (i.e. I'm going to take a balanced approach to my life with her and neither smother her with too much attention, nor neglect her and make her feel unloved. I will be a real man by focusing on my goals and ambitions, while also giving her enough time and attention).
- I'm going to commit to our relationship by asking her to marry me/move in with me/buy a house together after we've been back together for a week.
- I'm going to maintain my confidence around her and believe in my value to her, no matter what she says or does to test me.
- I'm not going to take her tantrums so seriously anymore (i.e. rather than getting upset or emotional, I'm going to remain calm, confident and in control. When appropriate, I will also use humor to guide the interaction back to love and laughter).
- I'm going to focus on maintaining and building on her feelings of respect, attraction and love for me over time.
- I will ensure that there is a clear masculine/feminine dynamic between us, so she doesn't end up feeling more like a friend or buddy to me.

The clearer you are about your vision for your new relationship, the better prepared you will be when you get her back.

Note: Your vision for your future relationship is something you should do for yourself.

Don't tell your ex about the vision.

Just have your vision in mind, so you know where you are leading the relationship.

She will respond better to you if you have confidence in the direction you are leading the relationship.

She can then relax, knowing that you have things under control.

4. Meet up with her and re-attract her

When you feel ready to interact with your ex (usually after 3 to 7 days), give her a call and arrange a meet up.

Note: Don't try to get her to a meet up via text, because she's more likely to play hard to get or reject you.

Just pick up the phone, spark some of her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be hearing from you again) and get her to agree to see you in person.

When you meet up with her, continue saying and doing the types of things that have been turning her on.

For example:

- Flirt with her and show her that you still find her desirable, rather than being on your best behavior around her or trying to be nice.
- Maintain your confidence around her regardless of how cold or distant she's being towards you.
- Make her smile and laugh.
- Be very confident and masculine in how you think, feel, behave, talk and act.

The more she sees that you're being a confident, self-assured, emotionally masculine guy who believes in himself and his value to her, the more she will allow herself to imagine you and her being back together again.

5. Become as one again

[image: Become as one again]

When you make your twin flame feel more drawn to you than she ever has before (i.e. because you are now making her feel attracted in new and exciting ways), she will realize that her love for you is deeper than she ever knew.

Her walls will come crashing down and she will want to be back in your arms again because it will feel right to her.

You then simply need to take the lead and guide her through the final steps of the ex process, until you and your twin flame become as one again.

3 Classic Twin Flame Ex Back Mistakes to Avoid

Make sure you don't do all the great work mentioned above, only to kill your chances of getting her back by making some of the following mistakes:

1. Sending her long love letters, expressing your deep emotions

Even though sending your ex a love letter might feel like the only way you can get through to her (especially if she's currently ignoring you and won't answer her phone or agree to meet up with you in person), don't do it.

The truth is, she won't really care how you feel (or that you believe she's your twin flame) if she's not feeling attracted to you or in love with you at that time.

Instead, your poetic words will sound soppy, misplaced and desperate.

Rather than think, â€œOh, that's so sweet. He thinks we're twin flames. That's just so romantic! Maybe I should give him another chance. After all, there is only one twin flame union available for me in this world. Other men will never make me feel the same wayâ€ she will be thinking something like, â€œHe just doesn't get it! Here I am feeling angry and upset about the way our relationship turned out and all he's doing is focusing on how he feels and how I am the one for him. Well, I don't care about what he wants. Right now, I'm going to focus on what I want and so far, he hasn't made me believe that it's him.â€

So, if you want your twin flame to come back to you, don't waste time sending her long love letters talking about your feelings for her.

Instead, focus on using every interaction you have with her (e.g. via text, e-mail, social media, over the phone and in person) to build up her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

The more you make her feel good to be around you, the more willing she will be to give you another chance.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Regularly referring to her as your twin flame

When a man refers to his ex as his twin flame, it's usually a turn off to her.

Why?

Essentially, it's not something a woman expects a man to say, so it makes him come across as being too feminine and emotionally sensitive.

Additionally, being referred to as her ex's twin flame when she no longer feels a lot of (or any) respect and attraction for him, is not something she is thrilled to hear.

So, if you want your ex back for real, just focus more on sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by being a confident, emotionally strong man she can look up to and feel proud of) and less on trying to impress her by referring to her as your twin flame.

If you don't re-spark her feelings first, the suggestion of being twin flames isn't going to sound romantic to her.

Instead, she's going to perceive you as a wimpy, emotionally soppy guy and she will feel even more turned off than before.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ□|

2. Thinking that referring to her as your twin flame will remind her of how special your union is

She will only see your union as being special and irreplaceable if you make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

She won't feel that way simply by talking about how good things used to be, how you and her are meant for each other or how we only get one chance in a lifetime to find a twin flame.

Saying something like that will work for a fictional character in a movie, but not in real life.

In real life, love is based on how a man and a woman make each other feel in a relationship.

In other words, what matters is whether or not you make your ex feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction whenever you interact with her.

So, donâ□□t make the mistake of expecting your ex to give you another chance based on the fact that you believe sheâ□□s your twin flame.

If you want her to come back, you have to actively re-spark her feelings for you and get her to fall in love with the new you.

When you make her fall in love with you and are attracting her in new and exciting ways, it will be her who suggests that you and her are twin flames and meant for each other.

That's how a woman prefers it to be anyway.

A woman wants to be the one who is being romantic, soppy and sensitive, while her man is emotionally strong, loving and powerful.

So, make sure that you are offering her the right relationship dynamic.

If you offer her a relationship dynamic where you are the more sensitive one, she will almost certainly never come back.

I've been helping men with this for years and when a guy takes on the soppy, sensitive role with a woman, it just never works.

What works is being an emotionally strong, emotionally masculine, loving man that she can look up to and respect.

She can fall more deeply in love with you every day and be the one who is more sensitive, soppy and romantic.

That's what women love.

It's addictive, exciting and thrilling for a woman for her entire life.

How I Got My Girlfriend Back Into a Relationship With Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's how other men have successfully gotten their girlfriend back into a relationship.

First...

1. Understand what part of the attraction experience was missing

[image: Understand what part of the attraction experience was missing]

One of the most important questions to ask yourself after a break up is, What aspects of my thinking or behavior caused her to lose respect, attraction and love for me?

When you can identify her real reasons (not the excuses she might have given you like, I need some space or I just don't have feelings for you anymore), you can quickly make some adjustments to the way you behave and interact with her.

Then, when she sees that you're not the same guy she broke up with anymore, she will no longer have a valid reason to want to stay broken up with you.

Her original feelings will come flowing back and her guard will naturally start to come down.

At the same time, she will also feel respect and attraction for you for being man enough to figure out what she always wanted from you, without her having to spell it out for you.

Suddenly, the idea of getting back into a relationship will seem like the right thing to do for herself.

After all, she feels drawn to you now and is afraid that if she doesn't give you another chance, she will end up regretting it and missing you for life as the one who got away.

This is why knowing your girlfriend's real reasons for breaking up with you is key to getting her back.

So, a question for you at this point is:

Do you truly understand what part of the attraction experience was missing in your relationship with your girlfriend, or are you still feeling a bit unsure about it?

If you're still a bit confused about what might have gone wrong, here are some common reasons why a woman will stop feeling as attracted as she once did.

- He stopped being the confident, emotionally strong guy she first met and fell in love with and became an insecure, self-doubting, clingy and needy guy.
- He stopped being an emotionally masculine guy who made her feel like a feminine woman and ended up becoming too emotionally sensitive (e.g. he cried to her, fell apart when faced with a big challenge in life, leaned on her too much and expected her to take care of him emotionally).
- He put up with her bad behavior (e.g. she threw tantrums, was disrespectful towards him) and allowed her to treat him badly because he was too afraid to say or do anything in case she got upset and left him. As a result, she lost all respect for him for being such a wimp.
- He stopped making her feel feminine and girly in his presence and began to treat her more like his best friend or a buddy.

- The gap between her relationship intelligence and his became too big (e.g. she wanted to get serious, settle down and focus on the future, while he remained stuck doing childish things like getting drunk, playing video games, not getting a job and drifting through his life).
- He stopped making her feel loved and appreciated in the relationship.
- He took her presence in his life for granted (e.g. treated her badly, expected her to do all the work around the home, expected her to be romancing him all the time even though he was doing that for her, expected her to respect him all the time even though he didn't do that for her).

As you can see from the list above, there are many different reasons why a woman can lose respect, attraction and love for a guy when in a relationship.

[image: Understand what part of the attraction experience was missing]

Fortunately, when you know what those reasons are for you and your girlfriend, you can then change and give her the attraction experience she always wanted from you, but didn't get.

So, if you want to get her back for real, you've got to change the things that really matter to her.

When you actively make her feel attracted to you again (e.g. by being so much more confident and emotionally independent, by being so much more emotionally masculine than her and making her feel feminine and girly in your presence, by making her laugh and smile), getting back together again will be a natural outcome.

The next step you need to take is!

2. Regain control of your emotions to overcome the heartbreak

[image: Regain control of your emotions to overcome the heartbreak]

It's only natural that after a break up, a guy is usually going to feel a range of negative emotions (e.g. shock, disappointment, panic).

However, where a lot of guys go wrong is, rather than quickly regaining control of his emotions so he can re-attract her properly, he starts behaving in ways that turn her off even more.

For example:

- Begging and pleading with her to change her mind.
- Crying and telling her that he can't live without her.
- Promising to change whatever she wants to make her happy.
- Asking her to tell him what he needs to do to be the man that she wants.
- Apologizing to her repeatedly and taking the blame for everything that happened between them.
- Being extra nice to her and putting up with her bad treatment of him in the hopes that she will take pity on him and give him another chance.

Yet, rather than making a woman think, "He must really love me if he's willing to put himself at my mercy! This is what I always wanted. Clearly his feelings for me are strong, so I'm going to get back with him because of that," she just pulls away from him even more.

Why?

A woman's attraction to a guy is based mostly on his ability to make her feel like she can look up to him and respect him as her man.

So, when a guy is begging, pleading, crying, asking for her help to change and generally being emotionally weak and needy, he's actually making her feel the opposite of what he needs to make her feel to get her back.

In his mind, he might be thinking, "It's okay. She will understand that I'm just being emotional like this because I love her so much."

Yet, she doesn't see it that way.

Instead, she thinks something like, "I didn't realize it before, but he's so emotionally weak and insecure. I'm glad I broke up with him when I did and didn't end up being stuck in a dead-end relationship. He's not man enough for me."

So, even though you are 100% justified in feeling heartbroken after being broken up with, make sure that when you interact with your girlfriend again (e.g. via text, on social media and especially over the phone and in person), you display confidence, emotional maturity and emotional masculinity.

Rather than desperately trying to get her back by begging, pleading, crying and behaving in other unattractive ways, focus instead on re-sparking her feelings for you by behaving in some of the ways that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confident, charismatic, self-assured, emotionally independent, emotionally masculine).

The next thing you need to do is to

3. Fully prepare to re-attract her

Although understanding what part of the attraction experience was missing in your relationship with your ex is very important, it will mean nothing if you don't use that information to then give her a next level attraction experience.

A next level attraction experience is where you level up your ability to attract her and let her feel it.

For example: If you were kind of confident before, then you are very confident now.

If you were emotionally sensitive in the relationship, you are emotionally bulletproof now.

This doesn't mean that you have to become perfect before your girlfriend will want you back.

It simply means that you need to level up.

For example: Imagine a guy realizes that the main reason why his ex broke up with him was because he stopped making her feel like a real woman in his presence.

Instead, he started treating her more like his best friend (e.g. stopped touching, kissing and complimenting her, fell into the habit of treating her like 'one of the guys,' rather than making her feel like his feminine girl) and she slowly lost respect and attraction for him over time.

To get her back, he needs to make her feel like an attractive, feminine, sexy woman in his presence again.

In other words, instead of being a nice, neutral friend around her, he needs to spark her feelings of sexual attraction by flirting with her and building up some sexual tension between them.

Another example is if a woman broke up with a guy because he became too emotionally dependent on her (e.g. stopped pursuing his own purpose and interests in life and made everything about her, which resulted in him becoming needy and clingy).

To re-attract her, he shouldn't make the classic mistake of cutting off all contact with her in the hope that it will convince her that he's more emotionally independent now and make her come back on her own.

Using the no contact approach in situations like that almost always backfires.

Rather than making a woman think, "Wow, my ex must be over his neediness for me if he hasn't been in contact for so long. He's so cool! Maybe I should give him another chance," she just uses the time apart to fully get over him and move on with a new guy.

She doesn't believe that he has changed and has no evidence of it, so rather than risk contacting him and making him become needy again, she just remains quiet.

So, what should he do instead?

Show her that even though he still cares about her and wants her back, he doesn't actually need her back anymore.

He lets her see (via his actions and the way he behaves when he interacts with her) that he's happy, confident and moving forward in life now and no longer needs her to feel emotionally fulfilled.

Of course, he does want her back, but he doesn't actually need her back to feel okay again.

When she realizes that he's truly changed and become more emotionally independent, she won't be able to stop herself from thinking about him in a more positive light, because he is now behaving like the kind of man she can actually look up to and respect.

She feels drawn to him again and then the idea of getting back together again starts to make her feel good.

So, if you want to get your girlfriend back into a relationship with you, make sure that you prepare yourself to re-attract her by quickly changing the things that matter to her.

For example: Become a lot more confident, make her feel like a feminine woman by being more emotionally masculine, be more emotionally dominant than her during interactions and become more charismatic.

Remember: What matters most is how you make her feel when you interact with her on the phone and in person.

That is what really counts when getting an ex woman back, so focus on that.

From there you need to

4. Meet up with her and re-attract her

[image: Meet up with her and re-attract her]

Your girlfriend probably won't commit to getting back into a relationship with you, until she can see for herself that you're now at a different level as a man.

Note: I said, "see for herself" and didn't say, "read for herself."

In other words, trying to get her back via text is a big no, no.

The problem that a lot of guys are faced with after a break up, is that their ex often doesn't want to talk on the phone or meet up in person.

So, rather than push her (e.g. because he fears scaring her off), a guy will decide to interact with her via text instead.

He's hoping that she will eventually soften her attitude towards him and text something like, Hey, why don't you give me a call tonight so we can talk over the phone? or Hey, why don't we meet up sometime to catch up in person?

Yet, that rarely, if ever, happens.

Here's why!

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect and attraction for her ex, receiving endless messages from him that are going nowhere, will usually only make her feel bored.

Rather than keep up the charade of texting back and forth indefinitely, she will likely just stop responding to him altogether and focus on moving on.

Alternatively, she might continue responding to his texts while she is secretly meeting new guys, having sex and falling in love.

So, if you want to get your girlfriend back into a relationship with you for real, make sure that don't waste a lot of time texting back and forth.

Get her on a phone call as quickly as possible, so you can re-spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction (e.g. by making her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again) and then arrange to meet up with her in person.

If your girlfriend keeps resisting the idea of a meet up, you can say in a joking way, Hey, I promise we'll only have a quick cup of coffee together. No 7 course meals or anything like that, okay? then add in a more serious tone of voice, Look, all I'm asking for is a quick catch up over a cup of coffee. We can do that, right? After all, we're mature adults. We can be friends and have coffee for 10 minutes. It's no big deal. Besides, if we meet up and you decide you're having a terrible time, you can leave right away. So, how about it? How does tomorrow afternoon sound? Will that suit you?

Then, when you meet up with her, you need to keep saying and doing the types of things that will make her believe that you really are a new man and convince her to give you another chance (e.g. being very confident, making her feel feminine in your presence, making her laugh and smile).

The more you re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you, the less time she will want to spend apart from you.

If you don't get back right away, she'll find herself thinking about you and wanting to be around you again.

5. Make her really want the relationship, rather than asking for another chance

[image: Get her back into a relationship with you]

To get your girlfriend back for real, you need to make her want it as much as you do.

Thereâs no point in telling her, âI love you so much and I want us to get back together again. Will you give me another chance?â if she doesnât feel the same way too.

So, to get her to feel the same way, you need to focus less on discussing the relationship and more on making her feel attracted.

For example: If you say things like, âI really messed up, didnât I? Iâm so sorry for putting you through all that. Can you possibly forgive me? I know that I made things really difficult for you, but I can change. Just tell me what you want from me and I promise that Iâll do it. Iâm prepared to do whatever it takes to get you back,â itâs not going to make her feel attracted.

Instead, sheâs just going to think, âHeâs right! He did stuff things up! What am I doing here talking to him again? Heâs just highlighting to me all the reasons why him and I are wrong for each other. Itâs over and it should remain over.â

On the other hand, if you focus on having fun together and building up sexual tension as you talk to her, she will naturally begin to want to get back together without you having to convince her to.

Suddenly, sheâll find herself thinking things like, âHeâs so different now. I really enjoy his company more now. Iâm having so much fun. Being around him now is even better than it was when we first met. I like feeling like this. I want him back! Iâm not going to just walk away now. This is fun!â

Once she is thinking that way, getting her back and keeping her in a relationship will be very easy for you.

So, make sure that you stop thinking about how badly you want her back and focus instead on making her want you back.

Thatâs how itâs done.

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 stories of couples that were able to reunite after a break up and enjoy a better relationship from then on!

Couple 1: Broke up because she didn't feel attracted to him anymore

[image: Broke up because she didn't feel attracted to him anymore]

This couple began a relationship with a lot of attraction and the spark of new love.

At first, they really enjoyed being together, kissing, having sex and getting to know each other.

Everything felt exciting and new and the woman often found herself daydreaming about her man and thinking things like, "He's so wonderful! He makes me laugh and smile, even when I feel sad. When I feel a bit self-conscious and insecure about my attractiveness as a woman, all I have to do is be with him and I start to feel like the most beautiful, sexiest woman in the world. He makes me feel so special. I just love being in his arms, knowing I'm his girl and he's my guy. Nothing will ever change that. He is the one."

At the same time, the guy was thinking things like, "I'm such a lucky guy. She's so beautiful and smart and we really have a great relationship. She's like my best friend and my girlfriend all rolled into one perfect package. It's perfect."

Yet, over time, something began to change.

The woman began to notice that rather than building on her feelings of respect and attraction, her man started behaving in unattractive ways, which then caused her feelings to fade.

For example:

- He started treating her more like a buddy and began expecting her to be more manly and sensible like him.
- He spent more time hanging out with his friends (e.g. watching TV, playing video games) than he did doing romantic things with her.
- He refused to take on the more dominant role in the relationship and expected her to take the lead and make all the important decisions for the both of them.

Naturally, this caused the woman to lose respect for him.

She began thinking to herself, "Why am I putting up with this behavior? I don't want to feel like his friend. I want to feel like his girl. The spark is gone between us and I don't know if we can ever get it back. There are hundreds of guys out there who would love to be my boyfriend. Maybe it's time to move on. This just doesn't seem to be working anymore. It's probably a sign that we're not meant to be."

Rather than break up right away, she tried to wake him up by pointing out things to him in arguments or disagreements (e.g. by saying things like, "I'm your girlfriend, not one of your buddies, â€œor â€œIâ€™m fed up with making all the decisions. Why donâ€™t you be a man and do it yourself for a change?â€œ).

Yet, like a lot of guys, he just brushed it away, assuming that she will put up with anything because she loves him.

So, when she finally broke up with him, he was shocked.

Suddenly, he found himself alone and missing her and he began to wonder what he did wrong.

Yet, rather than begging and pleading with her for another chance, he approach the ex back process like a man and focused on getting to the root of the problem.

He asked himself questions likeâ€”

- Did I maintain and build on her feelings of love, respect and attraction for me, or did I take it for granted that the love would take care of itself?
- Did I treat her like a desirable, sexy woman, or did I make her feel more like a friend?
- Did I maintain my dominance in the relationship as the man, or did I sit back and expect her to take the lead?

He then understood how certain aspects of his behavior and attitude towards her turned her off and caused her to stop feeling attracted.

He also realized that she was the one for him and that he really did want her back.

He then quickly made some attractive changes to his thinking and behavior and called her on the phone.

On the call, he made her laugh and smile and got her thinking, â€œItâ€™s so nice to hear from him again. He sounds so different. I wonder if he really has changed or if itâ€™s just a front to try and get me back?â€œ

He then asked her to meet up with him, to say hello as friends.

Initially, she was a bit reluctant to say â€œYes,â€œ but he maintained his confidence with her until she agreed.

At the meet up, he let his actions speak for him (e.g. he remained confident and emotionally strong even when she tried to test him by being cold and unfriendly, he made her feel feminine and girly by being more emotionally masculine around her, he used flirting to create sexual tension).

Even though she tried to fight it at first, she couldnâ€™t stop herself from feeling attracted to him again.

She realized that he truly had changed and improved the things that mattered to her (e.g. he was treating her like his girl again) and she began to feel surges of respect and attraction for the new him.

He then asked her if she would like to give the relationship another try and she said â€œYes.â€œ

Hereâ€™s another story of a couple that reunited after breaking upâ€”

Couple 2: Broke up because he took her for granted

[image: Broke up because he took her for granted]

Our next story is about a couple that broke up because the guy took his woman for granted.

Like most men, he wasn't a bad guy who went out of his way to make his woman feel unloved and unappreciated.

In fact, in the beginning of the relationship he was very loving, attentive and caring.

He often noticed his woman's efforts to look good for him, all the things she did for him (e.g. bring him coffee in bed in the morning, wash the dishes, run errands for him) and how good she was to him.

Yet, over time, he became neglectful and stopped noticing and commenting on the nice things she did for him.

If she bought a new dress, or changed her hairstyle, rather than notice it and give her a compliment, he usually didn't even realize that anything was different or new about her.

He also fell into the habit of assuming that it was okay for her to run around and do everything for him because she loved him.

He essentially expected her to serve him and do whatever he wanted because they were in a relationship.

However, this only made her feel unloved and unappreciated and she began to feel unhappy in the relationship.

Her feelings of resentment built up and made her begin to look at him in a hateful, rather than loving way.

Eventually, she stopped feeling respect, attraction and love for him and then decided to break up with him.

The guy was shocked because he didn't realize what he had done to cause her to leave.

He thought that everything was okay, but it wasn't.

However, he was determined to get her back, so he set about going over his past behavior and actions in the relationship.

He thought about the things they argued over, the complaints she had made to him and the things she nagged about.

He realized that he hadn't been a very good man to his woman and understood that his actions had caused her to feel taken for granted, unloved and unsupported.

He quickly changed, called her on the phone to apologize (without groveling) and made it clear to her that he knew he messed up.

He then guided the conversation towards the mutual understanding that it's okay for a guy (and a woman) to make mistakes in a relationship and that it doesn't always mean the end.

He told her that when a guy learns from his mistakes and becomes a better man as a result, the relationship could flourish and become even more enjoyable than it was before.

He then used humor to break down her defenses and asked her to meet up with him.

At the meet up, she was able to see that he truly had changed (by the way he behaved and interacted with her) and was now at a different level as a man.

He was being a better man, but he wasn't trying to suck up to her and grovel, so she felt attracted to him again.

She forgave him and they agreed to continue seeing each other for a week to see how it went.

During that week, she saw that he'd truly changed and was now a better man than before, so they got back together.

Couple 3: Broke up because he became too clingy

[image: Broke up because he became too clingy]

This story is about a guy who did everything right to get his woman (i.e. he was confident, self-assured), but then somewhere along the line, he became clingy, insecure and needy in his relationship with her.

He started hanging out with her more and more and neglected his friends and hobbies.

He also stopped focusing on his dreams and goals and made everything in his life about her.

Of course, this caused her to feel smothered, so she tried to create some space by saying things like, â€œWouldn't you like to go out with your friends this weekend? I might be nice to have a boys' only night out,â€ and â€œI've got a lot of work to get through this week, so I won't be able to see you that much. Why don't you check if your hiking club is doing anything so you don't have to hang around here feeling bored while I work?â€

Unfortunately, he didn't listen to her, missed all the subtle cues and carried on being clingy and needy.

In his mind, he knew that he should be more manly, but he just couldn't push himself to do it.

He was addicted to the feelings he was getting by spending all of his time with her.

It felt comfortable to him and meant that he didn't have to get out there in the world and do things.

He could just be with her.

Eventually, she got tired of having a clingy boyfriend (or husband) and she broke up with him.

So, to get her back, the guy realized that it was very important for him to get to the point in his life where he wanted her back, but didn't need her back.

To do that, he started focusing on doing all the things in his life that he had neglected before.

For example:

- He made progress on his big goals, dreams and ambitions in life.
- He reconnected with his old friends and enjoyed some fun times with them.
- He got back into sports or activities that he used to love.
- He looked for new ways to enrich his life.

To show her that he changed, he posted photos of himself having fun on social media.

She had unfriended him after the break up, but that didn't matter.

He set the photos to 'public' to ensure that she could see them when she stopped by from time to time to check on him.

Sure enough, she did stop by to check on his social media profile and saw that he was confident, happy and getting on with life without her.

He waited a week and then contacted her to arrange a meet up and she agreed.

At the meet up, he re-attracted her by allowing her to experience the new and improved version of him and got her back.

Couple 4: Broke up because she matured, but he didn't

[image: Broke up because she matured and he didn't]

Our next story is about a couple that found themselves at different levels in their life and this caused them to break up.

At first, they both seemed to enjoy the same things (e.g. partying, hanging out with friends, not wanting to ever settle down), which was great fun for a while.

However, over time, the woman discovered that she was maturing a lot faster than her guy and was no longer interested in the same things as she was before.

Essentially, the guy was stuck behaving more like a teenager than a grown up man, while she was ready to settle down and take things more seriously.

For example: He spent most of his time hanging out with friends watching TV, playing and partying or he didn't have a stable job and relied heavily on his woman and his family to help out with his bills and expenses.

Alternatively, she began to see that her friends were having children and beginning to pay off a house, but her guy just wanted to drink and party and keep renting for the rest of his life.

He wasn't interested in starting a family or doing what everyone else seemed to do when they grew up, which is fine, but it wasn't fine for her.

She wanted to settle down and start a family.

As a result, she started to feel like they were no longer compatible.

Initially, she made excuses to herself for his lack of maturity and would say things like, â€œItâ€™s not that heâ€™s a bad guy, heâ€™s just not maturing as fast as me. He probably just needs a bit more time to be wild and party. Once heâ€™s gotten everything out of his system, he will surely start wanting the same things I do, like a steady job, a house and a family. We can then settle down and truly make this relationship work.â€

Over time though, she realized that he wasn't willing to change, so she broke up with him.

Fortunately, he didn't panic and do something silly like desperately propose marriage to her in the hopes that it would change her mind.

Instead, he focused on quickly becoming a more emotionally mature man (e.g. by getting a better job, setting goals for his future and working towards achieving them, cutting ties with his irresponsible friends and hanging out with more mature, friends who were also ready to settle down).

He then concentrated on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for him by using every interaction that he had with her (especially on the phone and face-to-face), to show her that he had changed and was now a more emotionally mature man.

Initially, she was a bit nervous about giving him another chance (because she didn't fully believe he had changed), but when she saw for herself that he was now at a different level than before, her defenses quickly dissolved.

She met up with him for coffee and they kissed, had sex and got back together again.

Couple 5: Broke up because of constant arguing and fighting

Our final story of a couple who reunited after breaking up, is about a man and a woman who broke up because they couldn't stop fighting and arguing all the time.

Although everything started off fine in the relationship, somewhere along the line, they stopped agreeing with each other and started arguing over everything.

The relationship became too stressful, too frustrating and too tiring for the woman, so she gave up on fixing it and left him.

Once she was gone, the guy realized that he had allowed trivial things to get in the way of the respect, attraction and love they felt for each other.

For example: He got angry when she threw a tantrum rather than just smile and use humor to get her out of her bad mood, he expected her to react to problems more like a man instead of allowing her to express herself like a woman or he picked on her and complained about things that really didn't matter.

So, to get her back, he interacted with her over the phone and in person and showed her that he learned from his mistakes.

When she tested him, by doing something that would have caused him to get angry or annoyed with her in the past, he remained confident and relaxed and turned the situation into something they could both laugh about together.

She then started to believe that things really were different, so she was able to forgive him and open back up.

They then got back together and discovered that their relationship was even better the second time around.

Reverse Psychology Text Message For an Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Reverse psychology is about making a person feel like you are telling them what to do, which then makes them want to do the opposite, to feel like they are in control or to spite you.

Yet, that usually results in you getting what you want anyway!

In the case of a guy texting an ex woman, he can use reverse psychology to get her back, or to at least make her open up to him again.

Here are 3 examples of how to use reverse psychology on your ex when you text her:

1. Immediately after she breaks up with you

[image: Reverse psychology text to an ex immediately after she breaks up with you]

Later that day or the morning after breaking up, you can send your ex a text like:

â€œRebecca, I just want you to know that I accept the break up. You're a great woman and deserve to be happy. So, I wish you all the best. Love, Peter.â€œ

This immediately takes away any power that she may have hoped to gain over you by dumping you.

She sees that you're not losing your mind and desperately chasing after her, which can make her want to show some interest in a relationship again to see if she can reel you back in.

For example: She might test you by saying something like, â€œGood. I'm glad you feel that way. We're better off broken up. Let's agree to never talk to each again, starting right now.â€œ

She may secretly be hoping that by saying that, you will panic and admit to her that you didn't mean you and her couldn't talk again.

If you do that, she will then have the upper hand, so your attempt to use reverse psychology on her will have failed before it even started.

A good way to continue using reverse psychology on her is to respond with something like, â€œLolâ€œ|I'm not going to act like we are enemies just because we've broken up. So, I might say hello from time to time as a friend. Of course, you can ignore me if you want to. All the best.â€œ

By saying that to her, you seem more emotionally mature than her and as though you are handling the break up better than she is.

She might then feel annoyed and want to prove to you that you're wrong about her, so she plays into your hands by keeping the lines of communication open (e.g. she sends random texts to say hi, she calls you on the phone to see what you're doing, or replies to your texts to not look childish or immature).

You can then use those interactions to your advantage and re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

A great way to make her feel attracted is to focus on making her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with you again.

No matter what she says or does to confuse you or upset you, just maintain your confidence and use humor to reverse the tables on her (i.e. make her feel confused and unsure of where she really stands with you).

That's what women want anyway.

A woman wants to be constantly thinking about her relationship, rather than feeling bored by it because it's so predictable.

The more your ex enjoys interacting with you, the more uncertain she'll become about her decision to remain broken up.

She will then drop her guard and open up to giving you another chance.

Another example of a reverse psychology text for an ex isâ€¦!

2. One week after the break up

If you've given your ex a week of space to calm down, it's important that you then contact her and start the ex back process.

Remember: If you're not interacting with her on the phone or in person, you can't properly reactivate her feelings for you again.

Also, if you wait too long to meet up with her, she will have more time to get over you, meet someone else and move on.

So, a reverse psychology text to send your ex after a week might be something along the lines of, â€œHey, how are you? I ran into (insert the name of an old girlfriend or someone your ex used to feel jealous about) yesterday and you'll be happy to know that when I told her we split up, she said it was the best news she's had in a while. So, don't give me another chance! Let's stay broken up. Enjoy your day.â€

What will this do?

She will pick up on the fact that another woman (especially one she feels jealous about) is happy that you are now single.

She might also assume that you're now interested in this other woman and will feel jealous and annoyed as a result.

She may then start thinking things like, â€œI bet she's been waiting in the wings for me to break up with him so she can get her claws on him,â€ or â€œIt drives me crazy to think that us splitting up is making her happy,â€ or â€œHow can he even think about replacing me with a tramp like her?â€

She then feels motivated to interact with you again (e.g. talk on the phone and especially see you in person), in the hopes of preventing you from hooking up with the other woman.

Of course, that's exactly what you want.

You can then use that as an opportunity to spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and get her back.

By the wayâ€¦!

Make sure you don't get caught out in a lie though!

If she finds out that you were only using reverse psychology on her (i.e. to get her to interact with you again), she will likely cut you off completely and then getting her back will become a lot more difficult.

So, if you don't have any other women in your life that you can use for this example, just text her a reverse psychology text like, "Don't give me another chance" or, "Please keep ignoring me. It's working! Lolâ€œ|"

A text like that will confuse her and cause her to continually think about you and what you might mean by it.

As a result, she will be experiencing the feeling that women love the most; to be completely consumed by their relationship with a man.

Another example isâ€œ|

3. One month after the break up

If you and your ex has been texting or calling each other, but she hasn't been interested in meeting up yet, you can text her something like:

â€œHey ex girlfriend. This break up is working out great. Life has been so much fun since. Letâ€œs get together for a cup of coffee so I can tell you all about it.â€œ

She will most likely respond with something like, â€œNo. I donâ€œt want to,â€œ or â€œLeave me alone,â€œ which is a great opening for you to then use even more reverse psychology on her.

In fact she may even ignore you altogether, but it doesnâ€œt matter.

You can just respond by texting something along the lines of, â€œI had a bet going here at work that youâ€œd ignore me or say something like that. I now know that you donâ€œt want to see me again because you havenâ€œt been having as much fun as me. You miss me donâ€œt you? Admit itâ€œ|lol. I don't miss you.â€œ

By this stage she will most likely be really annoyed with you and she may then text something along the lines of, â€œNo, I donâ€œt miss you. Just go away!â€œ

If she has been missing you, she will start to feel hurt that you are happily and confidently moving on without her, which will make her feel drawn to you.

The only way to stop the pain she is feeling is to reel you back in and make you think that you have another chance with her, so she can then break up with you again.

So, she agrees to meet up.

Yet, this time around, you are going to be so much better at making her feel attracted to you that she's not going to want to break up with you.

Watch thisâ€œ|

What she doesn't realize now is that she is going to feel so damn good around you from now on.

She is going to feel drawn to you and completely consumed by her feelings for you.

When you make her feel that way, you can then regain the position of power in the relationship and enjoy the great times ahead with her.

3 Tips on What Not to Do

Make sure to avoid the following mistakes when using reverse psychology on your exâ€¦

1. Sending her texts about good memories together when she doesn't have feelings for you

Some guys assume that by bringing up good times they shared, a woman will suddenly realize her mistake and change her mind about breaking up.

She will think, "Oh yeahhhhh! I forgot! Things used to be good! I have to get back with him!"

Unfortunately, women aren't that dumb.

Women can see right through BS and know that a guy is just trying to get her to focus on the good memories, so she forgets about all the reasons why she broke up with him.

She doesn't.

She remembers exactly why she broke up with him and unless he changes those things about himself (e.g. stops being insecure, starts being more manly), then she isn't going to feel attracted enough to want to be in a relationship with him.

Of course, most guys don't realize that, so they make the classic mistake of sending good memory texts and hoping that it will work.

A guy might text something along the lines of, "Remember that time we went to the beach and we built that huge sandcastle? It was one of the best days of my life. We were so happy then. I miss those days. Do you?"

Heâ€¦s secretly hoping sheâ€¦ll respond with something like, "Yes, I do miss those days and I miss you too! Maybe this break up isnâ€¦t such a good idea after all. Why donâ€¦t we try again? Let's get back together!"

Yet, even though thatâ€¦s exactly what would happen in a romantic movie or book, in real life it rarely, if ever, turns out that way.

In the real world, a woman usually won't look at a text message like that in a positive way, because she has dumped him and is turned off by him.

Instead, a woman will just roll her eyes and think something like, "He still doesnâ€¦t get it. I bet he thinks that by saying that to me, Iâ€¦m going to suddenly forget about everything that went wrong in our relationship and go running back to him, just because we had some good times in the past. What he doesnâ€¦t realize is that by reminding me of all the good times, heâ€¦s actually highlighting to me how bad things turned out in the end. It just makes me even angrier with him for screwing everything up. Nothing has changed. Things used to be good, but that was a long time ago. He doesn't even know how to make me want him again."

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

2. Accepting the break up, but then constantly texting her

If you say, "I accept the break up. I hope youâ€¦ll be happy. Bye," make sure that you then back off and give your ex a few days of space so that things can cool down and she can start missing you.

If you don't back off, she'll assume (correctly) that you were only saying it to act like you don't care.

She will see that you keep texting and trying to get her back, even though you said that you accepted the break up.

As a result, she will lose respect and attraction for you for trying to trick her into thinking that you are more confident and emotionally independent than you actually are.

So, be careful.

If you send her a text like, I accept the break up. I hope you'll be happy. Bye, then make sure that you give her 3 to 7 days of space so she can believe you.

Then, contact her (preferably by calling her on the phone) and actively re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you and get her to agree to meet up with you in person.

At the meet up, build on her feelings of respect and attraction for you and guide her back into a relationship.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Acting like a friend via text

Sometimes a guy is afraid that his ex woman will stop responding if he lets her know that he still has feelings for her and wants her back, so he makes the mistake of acting like a nice, sweet, platonic friend.

For example: He might text things like, I just want to say hi and make sure that you're okay.

If she then responds with something along the lines of, I'm great. I'm going on a date tonight, just to test him, he may continue the charade by responding with something like, Oh, that's nice. I hope you have a good time.

He's hoping that by pretending to be her friend she will think, Wow, he's being such a sweet, reliable friend. He's not even trying to get me back. How nice of him! I should give him another chance.

Yet, it just doesn't work that way.

Acting like a friend to your ex via text doesn't create a spark of sexual and romantic attraction.

Instead, a woman will usually just enjoy having her ex stick around as a friend, while she hooks up with another guy and actively moves on.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't make the mistake of pretending to be her good friend who isn't allowed to flirt with her and make her feel sexually attracted again.

Instead, use every interaction you have with her (via text and especially on the phone and in person) to actively make her feel respect and sexual attraction for you again.

Flirt with her, create sexual tension and make her feel like she will be losing out big time if she lets you go, rather than acting like you're just her neutral friend now.

Is My Ex Only Texting Me Because She is Bored?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, it's very possible that your ex is only texting you because she is bored.

However, it really doesn't matter.

What matters is how you are making her feel when she interacts with you and the approach you are using to get her back.

For example: Imagine that your ex sends you a text saying something along the lines of, Hey, how are you? How is your day so far?

When a text like that comes through, many guys will make the classic mistake of responding with something like, Oh, I'm fine. Nothing much is happening with me. What about you? and then carry on texting back and forth in a friendly, neutral kind of way.

Eventually, the woman will feel satisfied that he still misses her and is still there for her and will say something like, Okay, I've got to get back to work now. Bye.

He will then wait until the next time she sends another text and repeat the whole thing over again.

Yet, that type of interaction is not going to attract her back into a sexual, romantic relationship.

Instead, it will usually just help her pass the time if she's feeling bored, but in most cases, it's not going to make her think, Wow, I really miss my ex. It's so exciting chatting with him again! I wonder if we should get together again and see how things go?

So, what should you do instead?

Use your ex's texts as an opportunity to spark some of her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

If you do that, the idea of talking to you on the phone and meeting up with you in person becomes something she actually starts to long for.

Here's an example of how to respond to your ex when she sends you a text like the one mentioned above (e.g. Hey, how are you? How is your day so far?).

You can reply with something like, I'm great! I'm having an awesome day, but don't know if I should tell you why. Lol!

She might then reply with, What's going on? Tell me, and you can then say, I don't want to make you jealous, but I've skipped work/university today and am sitting in the park right now eating a pizza and working on my tan. Haha! How about you?

She might then reply with, Damn, I've been stuck in boring meetings all day! You bastard! How can you do that to me? Lol!

You can then reply with, I told you that I didn't want to say anything. This pizza is good. Anyway, I don't want to torture you while I sit here enjoying the afternoon, so I'm going to say bye to you now. Have a great day. Don't work too hard!

At this point, she is probably going to be smiling and feeling more open to meeting up with you in person because it feels good to be interacting with you again.

Here's the thing!

This type of interaction will at least spark her interest, get her smiling and she might even have a bit of a laugh.

[image: I miss him and I want him back]

As she focuses on your positive qualities (e.g. you're confident, funny, charming, interesting), she then starts to experience feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

Then, when you ask her to meet up with you, she'll be more than willing to say â€œYes,â€ because you've been making her feel attracted while texting her.

On the other hand, if all you do is respond to what she says without sparking her feelings for you, she will likely continue to say things like, â€œNo, I don't think that's a good idea. Let's leave things the way they are for nowâ€ if you suggest a meet up.

Where Guys Go Wrong

Here are some mistakes to avoid making when interacting with your ex via text:

1. Texting her like a friend instead of creating a spark

Sometimes a guy might feel unsure about how to respond to his ex via text that he decides to act like a neutral friend and hope for the best.

He remains on his best behavior (e.g. is nice, polite, friendly, sweet, generous, complimentary), pretends that he's not interested in getting back together again and avoids flirting with her.

Secretly, he's hoping that his behavior will make her feel comfortable and not pressured to get back with him, so she will begin to open up and want it.

It seems like a good plan, but if she isn't feeling attracted to him after dumping him (most women), then she's just going to be texting him because she is bored.

He might be getting the impression that she's interested, but she's not.

It's very easy for a woman to add in a smiley emoticon â€œ° or type “LOL!!!” when she's not actually smiling or laughing.

Instead, she rolls her eyes or feels completely indifferent towards him and is just texting him for something to do.

She knows very well that he still wants her and she also knows that he has no idea how to re-attract her back, before she moves on.

Of course, most guys don't know that.

So, they keep texting and texting in a friendly, neutral kind of way and add in some humor every now and then.

Yet, the woman can see through it.

She can see that he is trying hard to impress her and it's just not working.

He doesn't know that though.

He is secretly hoping that if he can just keep texting her, she will eventually open up.

Then, when she feels fully relaxed and at ease with him, she will realize what an honorable man he's been towards her and she will fall head over heels in love with him again.

Yet, thatâs just not how it works in almost all ex back cases.

In the majority of ex back cases and situations, a woman isn't going to think, âWOW! This is amazing! I canât believe how sweet and sensitive my ex is being about my feelings. Heâs just letting me dictate the pace without putting pressure on me to give him another chance. Thatâs so attractive to me. I just love being in control of the ex back process. Maybe we should get back together again. I will lead the way! Yes! That's it! I will be the strong one and tell him that it's time we met up and got back together.â

Instead, she won't be feeling attracted and will simply text him when she feels bored.

At the same time, she will likely be focusing the rest of her attention on moving on with her life and hooking up with a guy who actually sparks her feelings of desire for him.

So, donât do that to yourself.

If you want to be more than your exâs text buddy every time she feels bored, then donât act like her little text buddy.

In other words, donât act like a good friend who isnât interested in her.

By all means, be her friend, but just donât be an innocent, reliable, neutral friend.

Instead, make sure that when she sends you a text, your responses can cause her to her laugh, smile and hope for more (i.e. that you will call her and ask her out for a meet up).

For example: If she texts you and asks, “Hey, how are you today?” you can reply with, “I’ll get back to you on that! Busy at the moment.”

She will then be left thinking, “What is he doing? Why can't he tell me now?” and you can reply in a few hours with, “I’m good. Just got home. How are you?”

She will then be curious and ask you what you were up to.

If you were at the movies or a restaurant with some friends, you can say, “I was about to watch a movie. Wasn't quite sure about it, but I can now confirm that it's pretty cool” and recommend that she goes and sees it.

Alternatively, you can say, “I was in the middle of eating something at XYZ restaurant. Awesome food. How about you? How was your day?”

She is then left thinking, “Who was he eating with? Why couldn't he text me back?”

Women LOVE having those kinds of questions in their mind about a guy.

Why?

Women LOVE to be the one who is constantly thinking about the other in a relationship.

It allows a woman to become consumed by the relationship and live, breath and eat it on a daily basis.

If you can give her that gift, she will want to be around you and with you as much as possible.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

2. Sticking to just text rather than getting to a phone call and an in person meet up

Sometimes when a guy is unclear about his exâs intentions for texting him (e.g. is she texting him because sheâs interested, or is she simply bored?), he might decide to just stick to text and see where things go.

Heâs hoping that his ex will eventually make her intentions clear, either by texting something along the lines of, â€œHey, why donâ€™t you call me sometime?â€ or â€œWhy donâ€™t we meet up for coffee later this week?â€ or, if sheâ€™s not interested, she will stop texting him altogether.

So, rather than pick up the phone and make the first move, he sticks to texting back and forth and hope that it leads to something.

Deep down, he knows that he is afraid to call her and face rejection and knows that he should have more balls than that, but he just can't do it.

So, rather than take the risk, he plays the waiting game instead.

Hereâ€™s the thing though!

Even if a womanâ€™s is texting her ex because she wants him back, if she realizes that heâ€™s not taking the bait and calling her to arrange a meet up, she will eventually give up and move on without him.

Additionally, if a woman is only texting her ex because sheâ€™s bored, she will be secretly trying to move on by dating new guys.

Eventually, her texts will stop or she will let her ex know that she's no longer available.

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

If you want to get your ex back for real, make sure you donâ€™t get caught up in an endless cycle of texting back and forth with her.

Instead, youâ€™ve got to get her on a phone call with you as quickly as possible, so that you can re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

When on a phone call, itâ€™s a lot easier for you to show her that youâ€™ve changed and are now a new and improved version of the man she broke up with.

How can you do that?

By maintaining your confidence with her, especially when she is being cold and distant towards you and is trying to make you feel nervous while talking to her.

The more you break down her protective walls during a phone call, the more open she becomes to meeting up with you in person.

On the other hand, if all she ever gets are texts, sheâ€™s usually just going to continue thinking of you as the guy she broke up with (i.e. in a negative way) and her feelings of respect and attraction for you will remain dormant.

By the way!

Getting her on a phone call is only the next step in the ex back process.

The next step is to get her to meet up with you in person, where you can fully re-attract her (e.g. by displaying some of the qualities that are attractive to woman such as confidence, emotional strength, emotional masculinity) and get her back for real.

Important: Don't go to a meet up if you haven't improved your ability to attract her.

That doesn't work.

So many guys quickly read some of my articles and rush to meet up with their ex woman.

Don't do that.

If you are going to meet up with her, make sure that you have improved your ability to make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you during interactions.

If you use the same old approach to attraction that got you dumped, then she almost certainly not going to be interested in giving you another chance.

So, make sure that you level up before the meet up.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

3. Waiting for a clear signal from her that she wants a relationship before he tries to get her back for real

Sometimes, a guy will waste a lot of time (e.g. weeks, months and even years) waiting for his ex to give him an obvious sign that sheâ€™s open to giving him another chance with her.

He is hoping that she will eventually text something like, â€œI know you might be surprised to hear this, but I truly regret breaking up with you. I really miss you and I want us to get back together again? Do you think youâ€™d like that too?â€

He can then say, â€œAre you kidding? Thatâ€™s what Iâ€™ve been hoping for all along! Of course I want us to get back together again!â€

Then everything will be perfect and they will live happily ever after.

â€¦but hold on!

Real life usually isnâ€™t like a Hollywood movie or a romance novel.

In the real world, even if a woman is secretly still in love with her ex and wants him back, she will rarely spell things out for him in that way.

Why?

Firstly, the majority of women want to know that a guy has the confidence required to actively get her back, without her having to make it easy for him.

Secondly, a woman doesnâ€™t want to come across as desperate.

So, rather than give him a clear signal that she wants a relationship, she will wait and see what he does.

If he has the courage to call her up and make her feel attracted again, she will feel respect for him again.

When she respects and feels attracted to him, she will then open herself up to loving him again.

On the other hand, if he just waits for her to give him a sign, she might begin to doubt his interest in her.

She may then say to herself, â€œWell, maybe he isn't really interested after all. I should focus on fully getting over him and finding myself a replacement man. I don't want him to eventually text me and say that he's got a new girl, so I'd better get a new guy first.â€

Yet, all that could have been avoided if he only had the confidence to make a move right away, rather than waiting for a sign from her.

So, remember: It doesnâ€™t matter if your ex is only texting you because sheâ€™s bored, or because sheâ€™s interested in getting back together again.

What matters is the approach you are using to get her back (i.e. are you making her feel attracted to you again and following through to get her back, or are you being a typical modern guy who hides behind texts and is too afraid to make a move?).

What you need to do is meet up with her, fully re-attract her, hook up with her sexually and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

4. Feeling obligated to reply to everything she texts

Just because your ex is texting you, it doesn't mean that you have to respond every time.

If you respond to everything, rather than making her feel special, she will usually be thinking, â€œThis is so weird. It's like he has no life is waiting around for me to text him. That's actually kinda creepy. Doesn't he have anything else to do? Is he really that desperate?â€

So, don't give her that impression of you.

Instead, understand that it's not rude for you to have a life and respond to her at a suitable time, rather than responding right away or quickly every time she texts you.

In some cases, a text from her might even be so trivial or irrelevant that it doesn't even need a response (e.g. â€œSitting in traffic. So bored right now.â€)

If you're busy (e.g. at work, out with friends, involved in something important), it's perfectly okay not to respond right away.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should intentionally ignore her for days for no reason.

That would be rude and she will likely get annoyed with you for playing mind games with her.

Instead, reply when you feel like it's relevant to do so (e.g. she's asking you a question, she's telling you about something important that's happened to her).

However, don't entertain her if her only reason for texting is because she's bored and she has nothing better to do with her time.

You do have better things to do with your time than to reply to nonsense texts all day and night.

You are a man who is getting on with his life and being happy and productive, despite the fact that you and her have broken up.

The more you convey this message to her (i.e. by not being available to her whenever she wants), the more curious she will feel about you.

Then, when you call her on the phone and suggest a meet up, she will be open to the idea.

She will want to find out for herself what you're up to and how much you've changed since she broke up with you.

That's what you want.

You want her feeling curious, interested and open to exploring her new feelings for you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

5. Over analyzing what she is sending via text

For example: A woman might send her ex a text saying something along the lines of, â€œHey you, what are you up to tonight? I hate Sunday nights. They're my loneliest night of the week,â€ or â€œWent to a great party last night. I got so drunk.â€

He might then wonder, “Why is she saying that she’s lonely? Does that mean she misses me, or is she only texting me because she’s bored?” or “Why is she telling me about her party? Is she trying to make me jealous?” or “If she got drunk, is it also possible that she had sex with another guy and just isn’t telling me about it?”

He over analyzes her every text and drives himself crazy in the process.

Here’s what you need to know!

What your ex’s intentions are for texting you is completely irrelevant.

Do not follow the direction of a woman when it comes to dating and romance.

If you do, they will lead you around and around in circles and confuse the crap out of you.

As a man, all you need to focus on is what you are doing to make a woman feel sexually and romantically attracted to you (e.g. being confident, emotionally masculine, charismatic, funny, charming).

If you are making her feel that way, she is going to be feeling attracted to you, even if she tries to mess with your confidence by saying that she isn’t quite sure about you yet.

So, don’t focus on what she is doing or why.

All that matters is that you use the interactions as an opportunity to spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

- Do your text responses usually make her feel attracted, or does she feel bored or indifferent towards you?
- Are you sparking her curiosity about the new you (e.g. by being very confident and self-assured when you reply to her), or does she assume that you’re at the same level you were at when she broke up with you (e.g. insecure, self-doubting, unsure of yourself)?
- Is she feeling more respect and attraction for you (based on your interactions with her), or is she a bit turned off?

That’s what really counts when texting.

The more you build on her feelings, the more she will want to talk to you on the phone and meet up with you in person.

In person, you can then get her back for real.

My Ex is Afraid to Give Our Relationship Another Try

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

3 possible reasons why your ex is afraid to give your relationship another try are:

1. You are asking for a relationship before you've re-attracted her

[image: You are asking for a relationship before you've re-attracted her]

One of the most common reactions a guy has when he gets broken up with, is to quickly try and convince his woman to give him another chance.

For example: A guy might come up with elaborate arguments and explanations to try and convince her.

Alternatively, he might resort to sending her bunches of flowers or buying her gifts, in the hope that she will forgive him and give him another chance.

Yet, if he doesn't spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him first (this is not achieved by flowers or gifts!), she will usually just keep pushing him away.

She will say things like, "I'm sorry, but I can't take the risk of getting hurt again. We gave it a shot and it just didn't work out. It's time that we acknowledge that we're wrong for each other and move on."

So, don't make the mistake of trying to convince your ex to give your relationship another try, before you've fully re-sparked her feelings of respect and sexual and romantic attraction for you first.

Some of the ways you can re-spark her feelings are by:

- Making her smile, laugh and feel good when she's talking to you, especially when she's being cold towards you.
- Maintaining your confidence around her, even when she tries to make you feel nervous and insecure.
- Showing her by the way you communicate, behave and react to what she says and does that you've changed and improved some of the things that matter to her (e.g. you no longer allow her to push you around, you're more emotionally independent and have goals that you're working towards, you're more emotionally mature).
- Making her feel feminine and girly in your presence by being more emotionally masculine than her.
- Believing in your value and attractiveness to her, regardless of what she's saying to make you feel insecure.

The more that you allow your actions to speak for you, the more her feelings towards you will change.

Even if her lips keep saying things like, "No, I'm too afraid to give our relationship another try,â€œ her heart will be telling her, â€œCanâ€œt you see that heâ€œs changed? Heâ€œs not the same guy you broke up with. Heâ€œs so much better now. Heâ€œs confident and self-assured and heâ€œs clearly made an effort to improve and become a better man since the break up. Do you really want to risk losing him now? What if you push him away and end up regretting it for the rest of your life. Donâ€œt let that happen. Give him another chance.â€œ

She then stops putting up walls every time you interact with her (e.g. on the phone and in person) and allows the respect, attraction and love to come flowing back into her heart.

From there, just focus on making her feel good when talking to you (e.g. by using humor to get her out of a bad mood and break through her defenses) and she will naturally feel a desire to work on the relationship and give you another chance.

Another possible reason why your ex keeps saying that she is afraid to give your relationship another chance, isâ€œ|

2. She can see that you still don't understand what she really wants

[image: She can see that you still don't understand what she wants]

When a guy gets dumps, he might begin to make the craziest promises and offer overly generous deals to her, if she will just take him back.

For example: A guy might promise his ex that he will do whatever she tells him from now on, no questions asked.

Heâ€œs thinking, â€œIf I follow her rules and do what she says, then there will be no reason for her to get mad at me. We never have to get into another argument, or have any disagreements. Things will be perfect. I will be her slave if she wants me to. I just don't want her to dump me. I have to do whatever it takes.â€œ

Yet, thatâ€œs not what a woman wants.

She doesnâ€œt want a man who is a puppet on a string and does whatever she tells him like a good little boy.

Instead, she wants a man who understands what she really wants him to change and then has the emotional intelligence to fix those things and become a better man.

If he can do that (without her guidance or direction), she will be able to fully look up to him and respect him again.

When she can respect him, she will also feel attracted to him and then she will feel comfortable reconnecting with the love in her heart.

On the other hand, if a guy tries to get his ex back without first understanding her real reasons for breaking up with him, he will continue offering to change and improve in ways that donâ€œt matter to her and she will keep saying, â€œNo.â€œ

Hereâ€œs the thingâ€œ|

Most guys are good guys and they donâ€œt intentionally go out of their way to screw their relationship up.

Itâ€™s just that quite often, a guy simply doesnâ€™t realize that heâ€™s doing something wrong. So, when his woman starts nagging or getting into arguments with him, rather than understand the problem and then take steps to fix it, he usually brushes it off and assumes that sheâ€™s being a typical, emotional woman.

This is why he is so shocked when she finally breaks up with him out of the blue.

He can't believe it.

He thought things were okay, but she clearly wasn't happy.

She wasn't.

She was giving him hints, complaining and hoping that he would care enough to learn how to be the sort of man that can deepen a woman's love through the stages of a relationship.

Some guys know exactly how to be the kind of man that can keep a relationship together with a woman for life, but most guys don't.

So, when a guy gets dumped, he will usually do what most guys do and try to stop the break up by apologizing and promising to change, even though deep down he doesnâ€™t really have a clue what it is that he needs to change.

If she can sense that, she won't want to give him another chance.

She will be afraid to give the relationship another try, because deep down, she will know that he probably won't be able to change and become the man she needs him to be.

How about you?

How did you react when she dumped you?

Did you promise to change and do whatever she wanted?

Did you honestly have any idea of how to change, improve and become the kind of man that she would never want to leave?

Probably not, right?

Don't worry.

Right now, it doesnâ€™t matter how you reacted before.

What matters the most now is what you do from now on to get her back.

If your ex is afraid to give your relationship another try, sheâ€™s not getting the impression that you understand her real, deep reasons for breaking up with you.

So, if you want her back, the best way to convince her is by fully understanding what she really wants you to change about yourself (e.g. to be more emotionally dominant and not allow her or others to push you around, to have more focus and direction in life, to be more emotionally independent of her and do your own thing once in a while).

Then, the next time you interact with her on a phone call or in person, she will be able to see for herself that youâ€™ve figured out where you went wrong and have already taken steps to improve yourself.

She will then instinctively feel herself opening up to you once again.

The idea of working on the relationship and giving you another chance starts to make sense to her again.

However, if you are just trying to get her back without understanding what she really wants, you will just keep offering her things she doesn't want and she will most likely keep rejecting you.

Another possible reason why your ex keeps saying that she is afraid to give your relationship another chance, is that

3. She doesn't want to give you another chance and you then break up with her to get revenge

[image: She doesn't want to give you another chance and you then break up with her for revenge]

Some of the reasons why a woman might think like that are because

- She broke up with the guy and he got angry with her and even said things like, I'll get you back for doing this to me! or I'll never let you get away with dumping me!
- She cheated on him and then broke up with him and now she's afraid he wants to hurt her emotionally for what she did.
- She has had a guy do that to her in the past (i.e. reel her back in, make her love him again and then dump her, so he can walk away as the one in control).
- He's a vindictive guy and doesn't let people get one up on him.

No matter what your ex's reasons might be for thinking that you want to take revenge on her, it's up to you to show her that you are serious.

Let her see that you're not a petty, vengeful or emotionally immature guy.

Instead, you're a loving, emotionally mature man who is ready to start a new relationship with her with a clean slate.

You understand where you went wrong before and you've taken positive steps to change, improve and become a better man as a result.

When she experiences the new you for herself (every time she interacts with you) and realizes that you wanting her back has nothing to do with getting revenge, her defenses will start to melt.

Just remember: Don't try to convince her with WORDS though!

You need to show her with your ACTIONS and BEHAVIOR that you've truly changed.

She will then open herself up to the idea of giving your relationship another try.

If You Want Her to Give the Relationship Another Try, Don't Make These Mistakes

You now probably have a better understanding of your ex's possible reasons for not wanting to get back together again.

However, you may not be sure of what to do to change how she feels now.

So, here are 4 mistakes you should avoid making when you interact with her from now on:

1. Declaring your undying love to her and hoping it will make her realize what she is throwing away

If a woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for her ex, him saying, â€œI know weâ€™re broken up, but I want you to know that I am still in love with you and nothing can ever change that. I will always love you no matter what and Iâ€™m going to do whatever it takes to show you that what we had together was special and worth fighting for,â€ isnâ€™t going to make much difference to her.

Why?

When a woman no longer feels respect and attraction for her ex, it doesn't really matter to her that he still loves her.

Rather than think, â€œOh, heâ€™s right! I would be a fool to throw what we had together away because he loves me so much. After allâ€¦ what if I never find a guy who can love me that much again?â€ she wonâ€™t care because her feelings for him have been switched off (i.e. she no longer respects him, feels attracted or feels in love).

Sure, she might feel a bit sorry for him, or even a little guilty that heâ€™s not coping with the break up very well, but that isnâ€™t going to make her want to give the relationship another try.

The truth is, a woman doesnâ€™t want to be with a guy just because he wants it.

That feels unfair to her and like sheâ€™s only giving in to him as a favor.

Instead, she wants to feel so much respect, sexual attraction and love for him that SHE wants to be in a relationship with him.

So, if you want your ex to want to give your relationship another try, you need to make her experience the type of feelings she wants to experience when sheâ€™s with you (e.g. respect, attraction, love, joy, excitement), rather than declaring your undying love for her and hoping that will change her mind.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

2. Promising to do whatever it takes to make her happy

For example: A guy starts begging and pleading and saying things like, â€œIâ€™m so sorry. I know I stuffed up, but Iâ€™ll do anything to make it up to you. I promise. Whatever you want, Iâ€™ll do it. As long as youâ€™re happy. Thatâ€™s all that matters to me now. Just tell me what you want.â€

Unfortunately, rather than making his ex feel satisfied that heâ€™s now at her beck and call, it actually scares her off instead.

Saying something like that only highlights to her that he doesnâ€™t know how to be the kind of man she needs.

He is essentially asking for her guidance and help on how to be a man now.

A woman doesn't want to take on that role.

If a man tries to hand over that responsibility to her, he will end up looking like a lost, confused boy who hasn't yet grown up and become a man.

So, donâ€™t make that mistake with your ex.

Rather than promising her that you will do whatever it takes to make her happy, focus instead on figuring out what happened to cause her feelings for you to change.

Make the changes yourself, without her guidance.

Level up as a man and prepare to properly re-attract her in the ways that are important to her.

For example:

- Did you become too emotionally sensitive in the relationship?
- Did you stop making her feel attracted to you?
- Did you allow her to push you around and dominate you with her confident personality?
- Did you treat her more like a friend than an attractive, desirable woman?
- Did you lack purpose and direction in life?
- Were you closed up emotionally and didn't properly convey your love for her?

These are the kind of things that really matter to her.

When you make the necessary improvements to yourself without her having to tell you what to do, she naturally feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She then begins to believe that you've learned from your past mistakes and are now a better man.

When that happens, she feels comfortable trusting you again and then, giving the relationship another try starts to feel good to her.

On the other hand, if you just promise to do whatever she wants to make her happy, she will keep saying things like, "I don't know!" "I'm afraid of getting hurt again," and pushing you away.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Promising that you will never hurt her

As far as she is concerned, that has already happened.

You have already hurt her and that is why she's afraid to give your relationship another try.

So, saying to her, "Look, I know you're scared, but I promise I won't hurt you again. Just give me a chance to show you that things will be different now," is unlikely to be enough to convince her.

Instead, she's probably going to be thinking, "Yeah right! I'm just going to take his word that things will be different this time. Then, when I've fully fallen in love with him again, he's going to go back to behaving in all his old ways and I'm going to find myself with a broken heart once again. Like the saying goes 'Hurt me once, shame on you; hurt me twice, shame on me.' I'd be a fool to let that happen again and I'm no fool. So, he can just forget about getting back together again. I've got to stick to my decision to remain broken up from him."

Here's the thing

In many cases, a guy has made promises not to hurt her, only to break his word later on after she's forgiven him.

So, don't bother promising your ex that you won't hurt her, because it just won't matter to her if she isn't feeling much (or any) respect and attraction for you right now.

Youâve got to regain her respect and attraction for you first, if you truly want her to believe you and open back up.

Once youâve done that, her defenses will drop and she will begin to feel like itâs possible for her to give your relationship another try.

Another mistake to avoid isâ

4. Saying that you are willing to take it slow

When a guy tells his ex that heâs willing to take things slow, rather than think that heâs being considerate and that heâs taking her feelings into consideration, she may in fact feel like heâs trying to force her back into a relationship.

Rather than look at it from his point of view (i.e. that he doesnât want to rush her) she will likely be thinking something along the lines of, *âI havenât agreed to give our relationship another try and heâs assuming that more time will make me change my mind. He still doesnât realize that the only thing that will make me agree to take him back again, is if he changes the things that turned me off and shows me that he can be the man I need him to be. I donât think he gets that yet. Heâs just pushing for a relationship. He has no idea how to make me feel the way I really want.*â

So, donât focus on trying to convince her that you are willing to take things slowly.

That just stresses most women out and turns them off, because the guy looks a little desperate.

My Ex is Already On Tinder Even Though We Just Broke Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible reasons why your ex is already on Tinder, even though you just broke up are:

1. She is using it as a self esteem boost

After a break up, it's quite normal for a woman to feel lose confidence in her attractiveness to other men.

This can happen because the relationship with her man became boring or stale (e.g. her guy treated her more like a buddy than a desirable, sexy woman, they were always doing the same things, the sex became boring or dried up altogether, he always seemed to be looking at other women and checking them out).

[image: Relationship falling apart as man begins to treat his woman badly]

It can also happen if her guy took her for granted in the relationship (e.g. he stopped noticing and commenting on her efforts to look attractive for him, he was indifferent or even rude towards her, he talked down to her and made her feel stupid or unattractive).

As a result, after she breaks up with him, it's only natural that she might feel unloved, unappreciated and unattractive.

So, to make herself feel better, she might get on Tinder and instantly connect with hundreds of men who will make her feel like an attractive, desirable woman once again.

Here's the thing though!

Just because your ex is already on Tinder, it doesn't mean that she's over you or that you can't get her back.

In fact, you can easily change how she feels by making some adjustments to the way you interact with her from this point onwards.

You need to show her via the way you talk, think, behave and interact with her, that you now have the ability to make her feel the way she really wants to feel when she's with you (e.g. attractive, desirable, loveable, happy).

When you start giving your ex the attraction experience she always wanted (e.g. make her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculinity, take charge and lead the way rather than being too nice, neutral or complacent around her), her feelings will automatically change.

[image: Your ex will drop her guard and open back up to you, sexually and romantically]

She might openly admit it to you and say that she feels differently now and is interested in giving the relationship another chance.

Alternatively, she might keep her guard up a little, just to spend a bit more time with you before she can believe in the changes and fully open up to you again.

She will begin to think things like, "I don't know what's changed, but talking to my ex actually makes me feel excited again. It feels good to be around him. No one makes me feel the way he does. Why wasn't he like this before? I would have never broken up with him if this is who he was before. Maybe we really can have another chance after all.â€

She will either then quit Tinder, or just begin to ignore it and focus back on you.

Another possible reason why your ex is already on Tinder even though you just broke up is becauseâ€

2. She wants to move on before you do

[image: She wants to move on before you do]

Whether itâ€s because a guy broke up with her, or because she wants to teach him a lesson for treating her badly in the relationship, a woman will often try to move on as quickly as possible after a break up.

For example: She may think something like, â€I bet he thinks Iâ€™m just going to sit around crying over him for days or weeks. Well, Iâ€™ll show him that I donâ€™t need him. Iâ€™m going to quickly find myself another man and move on. Then, when he realizes that Iâ€™ve already moved on, he will regret treating me the way he did and letting me get away. Iâ€™ll show him how valuable I am.â€

She will then make herself available (i.e. by going on Tinder) to meet new guys.

Hereâ€s the thing thoughâ€

Rather than wasting a lot of time worrying about it and thinking things like, â€My ex is already on Tinder even though we just broke up. How could she do that?! Didnâ€™t she care about me at all? Did our relationship mean nothing to her?â€ simply focus on using every interaction you have with her from now on, as an opportunity to re-spark her feelings for you.

The more you make her feel respect, attraction and love for you, the less she will be able to settle for another guy she might meet on Tinder.

She will begin to feel uncomfortable with the idea of being with another guy and you can then guide her back into a relationship that is better than ever before.

Another possible reason why your ex is already on Tinder even though you just broke up is becauseâ€

3. She knew you would check, so she is trying to make you jealous

There are many reasons why a woman might want to make her ex jealous after a break up.

3 of the most common reasons areâ€

1. He was jealous and controlling in the relationship with her and she wants to test him to see if heâ€s changed, or if heâ€s still the same

If he has truly changed and is now more confident and self assured (i.e. he doesn't care if she's on Tinder, Match.com or any other online dating site or app), she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

She will then open herself up to getting back together with him.

On the other hand, if heâs still the same jealous guy (e.g. he gets upset with her for being on Tinder and says things like, *âHow can you do this to me? Did what we had together mean nothing to you? How can you be such a slut?*â) she will feel justified in her decision to remain broken up with him.

She will move on a lot more easily, without feeling guilty or like she may have made a mistake about dumping her ex.

2. She wants to see if heâs confident enough to get her back, even though it appears that sheâs moving on

If a guy gives up on getting his ex when he sees that sheâs already on Tinder, she will lose attraction for him for assuming that other guys are more attractive than him.

On the other hand, if a guy doesn't even care what she is doing and just focuses on re-attracting her, she will feel respect and attraction for him for not feeling inferior to other guys that she may be interested in.

Alternatively, he could also laugh at her (in a joking way) when they are talking in person and say something along the lines of, *âOh, noâ! what am I going to do? Youâre already on Tinder. Iâm sooooo jealous!*â if she brings it up as an attempt to make him feel jealous or uncomfortable.

When she sees that he isn't losing confidence in himself, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a surge of respect and attraction for him for being so confident and emotionally strong.

3. She still has feelings for him and she wants to shock him into taking action and getting her back

In some cases, a woman may still secretly be in love with her ex, but she might not want to come out and say it.

So, as a way of shocking him into taking action, she tries to make him feel jealous by going on Tinder and pretending to be hooking up with other guys.

Sheâs hoping that he will take the lead in the ex back process and guide her back into deep feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

Whatever the case might be between you and your ex, the important thing is that you don't sit back and allow your feelings of jealousy to cause you to give up on her, or to behave in ways that will turn her off (e.g. get angry, be rude, try to make her feel guilty for the way sheâs behaving).

Instead, regardless of what sheâs doing on Tinder, just focus on reawakening her feelings for you.

The more respect and attraction you make her feel for you, the less she will care about anyone else she might meet on Tinder or any other dating app.

Another possible reason why your ex is already on Tinder even though you just broke up is becauseâ!

4. She was never really committed to you

In some cases, a woman might hook up with a guy that she doesn't feel fully compatible with, simply because she doesn't want to be alone.

Alternatively, a man might be a woman's rebound guy (i.e. the guy she gets with after a serious break up to make herself feel better).

In her mind, she might be thinking, He's okay for now, but he's not the one for me. He's not manly enough for me. He's too emotionally sensitive. When I get tired of him, I will simply move on and find another guy that suits me better.

So, naturally when she breaks up with him, it's not too difficult for her to then move on (i.e. get on Tinder) because she was never really committed to him in the first place.

Of course, if this was the case with you and your ex, it doesn't mean you can't change how she feels.

In fact, when you make her feel surges of respect and attraction for the new you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good in your presence, making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your emotional masculinity), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again.

She will begin to wonder something like, What's going on here? Why am I feeling this way? Why do I suddenly want to be his girl again? Why does the idea of losing him for good suddenly make me feel like panicking? Could he actually be the one for me after all?

This is why you should focus on what YOU are doing to get her back, not on what SHE is doing in the meantime.

Don't Waste Time Worrying About What She's Doing. Focus on What You're Going to Do to Get Her Back

It doesn't matter what your ex is doing right now.

What matters are the actions you are taking to re-attract her and get her back.

That said, not all actions get a positive result.

There are many classic mistakes to avoid when in your situation.

For example: If you want to get her back quickly, make sure that you

1. Don't text her to ask why she is on Tinder

It might be very tempting to send your ex a text message and demand an explanation from her.

For example: A guy might text something along the lines of, How can you already be on Tinder when we've only just broken up? Did what we have together mean nothing to you? Were you just using me? Explain yourself. I deserve to know.

He's hoping that she will feel guilty and respond with something like, I'm so sorry! I never meant to hurt you. Of course our relationship meant something to me. You're the love of my life and I'm only on Tinder because I can't deal with the pain of losing you forever. Will *you ever be able to forgive me and give me another chance?*â€œ

Wouldn't that be nice?

He could then graciously forgive her and they can get back together again and live happily ever after.

Ahhh, how sweet.

That scenario might be played out in a Hollywood romantic movie, but in real life, a woman will usually just get annoyed at her ex for being needy, desperate and demanding.

She will then say something along the lines of, *â€œYou don't have any right to tell me what to do. We're broken up now and I can do whatever I want, date anyone I want and even have sex with whomever I want. You need to mind your own business and leave me alone. Goodbye.*â€œ

So, don't bother texting your ex to ask her why she's on Tinder!

Instead make sure that every time you interact with her, whether it's via text, e-mail, on social media, over the phone or in person, you're sparking her feelings for you.

The more you make her feel respect and attraction for the guy you have become since the break up, the less she will want to meet other men on Tinder, or anywhere else.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€œ

2. Don't lose confidence in your chances of re-attracting her

It's understandable that when a guy sees that his ex girl is already on Tinder, even though they just broke up, he might begin to think something like, *â€œI guess it's truly over between us then. If she's already moving on so quickly like that, then I don't stand a chance with her anymore. It's hopeless to even try. I've lost her forever.*â€œ

He might then lose confidence in himself, in his value to her and in his ability to re-attract her.

Yet, thinking like that only makes him more unattractive in her eyes and convinces her that she's doing the right thing by being on Tinder.

Why?

Women are instinctively attracted to the emotional strength in men and turned off by the emotional weakness.

In other words, when a man is emotionally strong in his relationships with women, he is going to be confident, have high self-esteem, be self-assured, be determined to succeed, be assertive and he's going to believe in himself and in his value to her.

That's attractive to women.

On the other hand, when a man is emotionally weak, he is going to be insecure, self-doubting, have low self-esteem and he's going to believe that his woman is better than him in terms of value.

That's not attractive to women.

Instead, it makes a woman think things like, *â€œIf he doesn't feel like he deserves me, then why should I bother with him? I'm sure I can do better than him. I need to find a man who is confident and self-assured, rather than settle for an emotionally weak, insecure guy who I can't respect and feel attracted to.*â€œ

So, remember: If you want to get your ex back (even though she might already be on Tinder) you need to believe that you can.

You need to show her (via your actions and the way you react and behave around her), that you know you are the man for her.

She is your girl and you are her man.

So, be confident.

Believe in yourself and in your value to her.

When you think, feel, behave and act like a self-approving, confident man, you automatically become more attractive to your ex.

All of a sudden, she can't stop herself from thinking about you in a more positive light because you are now behaving like the kind of man she can actually look up to and respect.

[image: Get your ex off Tinder and back into your bedroom]

She then feels drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

3. Don't use the 'No Contact' approach

After a break up, a lot of guys feel really insecure about how to approach getting their ex back (especially if she's already on Tinder pretty quickly after the break up).

A guy might then start thinking things like, 'What should I do to make my ex see me as better than the guys she's interacting with on Tinder? What strategy will work best? Should I use the No Contact Rule and ignore her for 30 to 60 days? Will that make her miss me and convince her that I'm better than the other guys she's meeting?'

No.

The NC rule (ignoring an ex for 30 to 60 days after a break up) is usually the worst thing that a man can do.

Why?

To begin with, when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she has lost respect and attraction for him over time.

So, unless a woman is still desperately in love with her ex and is hoping that he will get jealous when he sees that she's on Tinder and then get her back, ignoring her for weeks or months isn't really going to bother her much at all.

Sure, she might wonder why he's not contacting her, but if she believes that he can't change and become the kind of man she needs him to be (e.g. more confident, more emotionally independent, more emotionally masculine), then she's just going to focus on moving on quickly with the guys she's meeting on Tinder or online dating sites.

So, if your ex currently doesn't have feelings for you, using the no contact approach isn't a very good idea.

Instead, you will most likely just be making it easier for her to get over you and move on.

Don't make that mistake.

If you want her back, you need to actively re-spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you (i.e. by quickly getting her on a phone call with you, making her laugh and smile and convincing her to meet up with you in person).

When you meet up with her and she sees for herself that you're now a new man (e.g. more confident and emotionally strong, emotionally masculine, living a happy and fulfilling life without her) she will automatically feel attracted again.

Sheâ€¦ will stop feeling so drawn to Tinder and will want to explore her newfound feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

Ex Girlfriend is Asking Me Questions About My Life

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why your ex girlfriend is asking you questions about your life:

1. She wants to find out if you are moving on without her

[image: She wants to find out if you are moving on without her]

When a woman is struggling to find a new guy after a break up, she may begin to worry that her ex man will move on before she does.

So, as a way of keeping tabs on her ex, she will stay in contact with him (e.g. via text, social media, or even by calling him on the phone or seeing him in person) and asking him things like, “So, what are you doing these days? Are you going out?” or “Who are you hanging out with these days?” or, “What’s news?”

In some cases, a woman will be very direct with her questions and ask, “So, are you seeing anyone else yet?”

Essentially, she’s trying to find out if she still has time to move on with a new guy before he finds a new girl.

If you suspect that this is the reason why your ex is always asking you about your life, there’s you don’t need to answer all of her questions in a straightforward manner.

Of course, that doesn’t mean you should be rude and say something like, “Why do you keep asking me questions about my life? We’re broken up now and it’s none of your business what I’m doing!”

Instead, just have a little fun with her by using humor to avoid answering her questions at times.

For example: Imagine that your ex asks you something along the lines of, “So, what are you doing these days? Are you seeing anyone yet?”

Rather than giving her an account of your whereabouts and saying something like, “No, I’m not seeing anyone. I’m just focusing more on my studies/work at the moment,” or “Oh, I’m just hanging out with my friends for the time being. I’m not interested in dating anyone right now,” you can instead say, “Hey, you don’t have to hide behind questions like that. If you want me back just say so. You miss me. Haha! :P” or “Yes, I got married last weekend. Starting a family now.”

Just be confident enough to joke around with her and not fall into the trap of reporting to her like an employee would for a boss or manager.

When you have the balls to joke around and not take her questions so seriously, she won’t be able to stop herself from feeling attracted to you.

Remember: Women attracted to balls, not fear.

It’s not about being overly ballsy and trying hard to seem confident or cool.

Instead, it’s just about relaxing and not taking her questions so seriously.

It takes balls to do that and if you’re also being a good guy while doing it, it means that you have class as well.

You're not being an asshole.

You're simply not taking her questions so seriously.

Women love that.

Of course, this doesn't mean that you shouldn't take anything she says seriously.

No.

That's not it at all.

Just don't take everything that she says so seriously.

Mess around with her at times.

When you do, she will feel attracted and drawn to you and will realize that she doesn't want to lose you.

When that happens, getting her back becomes easy for you.

Remember: When your ex girlfriend is asking you questions about your life, you can use it as an opportunity to re-spark her feelings for you.

You don't have to be Mr. Serious or Mr. Formal or Mr. Super Polite all the time.

You are allowed to joke around, mess with her and not take everything so seriously.

So, just relax, be confident, lighthearted and easy-going about things as you talk to her.

Note: She might PRETEND to be angry at something you say or text to her.

If she does react in that way, just reply with, "Lol!" via text or laugh at her if you're talking to her on the phone or in person.

In other words, let her see that you have balls.

Don't display fear, insecurity or desperation. Those things aren't attractive to women.

Watch this!

Another possible reason why your ex is asking questions about your life!

2. She wants to see if she can reel you back in and mess with your head

[image: She wants to see if she can reel you back in and mess with your head]

After a nasty break up, a woman might feel angry or resentful towards her ex.

She may be thinking things like, "I want to get revenge on him for hurting me. I'm going to make him believe that I want him back and then, when he's fully convinced that we're going to get together, I'm going to laugh in his face for thinking he had a chance with me and then watch him crumble. That will serve him right for being such a jerk to me in the relationship. He's going to get a serious dose of karma. What goes around comes around!"

She will then lead him on by asking him questions about his life and showing interest in him.

He might then begin to wonder, "Why is my ex always asking about what I'm doing? Is it possible that she still has feelings for me? Maybe we can get back together again after all."

If he starts showing interest and excitement about getting back with her, she will then begin to ignore some of his texts or stop answering his calls.

She might even say, "I am confused. I don't know what I want. Please give me more time" and then text him in a loving, sweet way the next day only to then say that she is confused again.

Alternatively, rather than continuing to lead him on, she might say, "I hope you don't have any ideas about us getting back together. I would never make that mistake again. You stuffed up and I will never forget that," to enjoy watching the hope fade from his eyes and be replaced with feelings of rejection and sadness.

She can then feel good about herself and get the revenge she wanted all along.

He treated her badly in the relationship and made her feel as though she wasn't good enough and now she is giving him a taste of his own medicine.

Silly games, I know, but that's what many people do after a break up.

If you want to skip all the mind games and just get her back, then watch this!

What you need to understand is that you really can change the way your ex feels about you.

Even if a woman is trying to mess with an ex's head for hurting her, it doesn't mean that she can't change how she feels about him.

Feelings change all the time.

You can directly influence how she is feeling, thinking and behaving by focusing on attracting her every time you interact with her from now on.

It doesn't matter if she's trying to mess with your head right now.

You can make her plan to get revenge on you backfire by making her fall in love with you again and want you back more than anything.

Another possible reason why your ex is asking you questions about your life is!

3. She's bored, lonely or sad and is hoping that talking to you will make her feel better

[image: She wants to talk to you to make herself feel better]

When a couple has been in a relationship for a while, they usually end up doing most things together (e.g. hang out together on weekends, go out to eat together, go to the movies together, sleep in the same bed, watch TV together).

So, when a break up happens, their lifestyle also begins to change (i.e. having to find new things to do on the weekend, sleeping alone, watching TV alone).

In the same way, your ex girlfriend may suddenly have found herself with too much alone time on her hands and no-one to share it with.

She might have friends that she goes out with, but friends don't spend all their spare time together.

As a result, she might be feeling bored without you and be missing the comfortable familiarity that you and her once shared.

To make herself feel better, she will ask you questions about your life as a way of filling up her alone time with distractions.

If this applies to your case, make sure that you are using the communication to actively make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you, rather than just being friendly to her.

If you are only being friendly when texting her, she won't feel drawn to you in a sexual or romantic way.

Before you know it, the texts will slow down or stop and you will find out that she is dating a new guy.

So, while she is texting you, make sure that you use it to make her feel attracted and drawn to you.

That way, you can get her back into a real relationship, rather than just being her text friend for a while.

Where some guys go wrong, is by thinking, â€œHey, my ex girlfriend is asking me questions about my life. Maybe she still has some feelings for me. If I just hang around her and be her friend (or text her like a good friend), she might eventually change her mind about us being broken up and we can then get back together.â€

Yet, if a guy isn't actively creating a spark, a woman usually isn't feeling it—especially when she has dumped him and doesn't want to be with him anymore.

This is why you should act like just a friend when talking to her, or texting her.

You should literally talk to her as though she is a new girl that you're attracting and picking up.

That's what works.

By the way—

If your ex is asking questions about your life because she's bored and wants someone familiar to talk to for a while, it doesn't mean that she wants you back sexually and romantically.

To make her feel that way, you have to actively spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and romantic love for you again when you interact with her (e.g. via text, e-mail, social media and especially over the phone and in person).

If you just go with the flow and pretend to be a nice friend to her without actively making her feel respect and sexual attraction for you again, she will use you when she feels bored.

However, that won't stop her from dating, having sex and falling in love with another guy if he comes along and sparks her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

So, make sure that you're not making her feel neutral, friendly feelings for you when interacting with her.

If the communication between you is mostly friendly and neutral, there won't be a strong enough reason for her to want to get back into a romantic relationship with you.

Instead of being neutral and friendly, make sure that you flirt with her to create sexual tension between you and her.

Another possible reason why your ex is asking you questions about your life is—

4. She's trying to signal to you that she wants you back

Even if your ex still has feelings for you and wants you back, she won't necessarily make it obvious by saying something like, "Hey, I know that we've broken up, but I still care about you and I'd really like for us to work things out. What do you say? Are you interested in getting back together again?"

It would be great if she did say that, but she most likely won't.

Instead, she will drop subtle hints (i.e. asking you questions about your life) and wait to see if you have the confidence to get the relationship back together without her help.

She wants to know that you have the courage and confidence to make it happen without her help because she doesn't want to be in a relationship with a guy that she has to carry throughout life.

Women are instinctively attracted to men who remain emotionally strong and confident and go after what they want in life (including an ex that they're still in love with), regardless of what anyone else thinks, says or does.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend back, you just have to make it happen yourself, otherwise she will start thinking things like, "Oh well! I tried to give him an opening but he's just not taking the bait. Either he's not interested in me anymore, or he simply doesn't have the confidence to get me back. Whatever the case, I'm just wasting my time anymore," and she will then focus on moving on with a new guy.

Don't let that happen to you and your girlfriend.

Get her back.

How?

Show her (don't tell her!) that you are now confident and emotionally strong enough to go after what you want in life, including her, regardless of how challenging or difficult it may seem.

The more that she experiences your new and improved confidence and masculinity (via the way you now talk, behave and interact with her), the more her guard will come down.

Another possible reason why your ex is asking you questions about your life is

5. She wants to see if you've changed

Even when a woman breaks up with a guy, she will often hope that he can change the things about himself that turned her off, so they can then get back together again.

For example: A woman might break up with a guy because he's got no plan for his future (e.g. no big goals, no plans to marry her, no big ambitions for his career, no long term plan to succeed and be safe in later years).

He's too emotionally immature and behaves more like a teenager than like a grown man (e.g. he doesn't have a stable job, he still lives at home with his parents, he parties too much and gets drunk often, he doesn't want to be responsible about his life).

Yet, in many other ways he's the perfect guy for her (e.g. he's kind and generous, he treats her with respect, he has a great sense of humor, he satisfies her sexually).

After the break up, she will be thinking something like, "If he can only find a good job, set some goals in his life and then work towards achieving them, I could definitely see myself getting back with him. Unfortunately, I just don't see that happening any time soon and I can't afford to waste the best years of my life waiting for a guy to grow up and be a man. I need a man now. I need a guy who can be a man right away, not a boy who might grow up one day. I'm just so confused. I still care for him, but I also know that I can't stay stuck in a dead-end relationship either.

So, after the break up, she might stay in touch as a way of keeping tabs on him.

She will want to see if he's changed and if he has, she can then go ahead and get back with him.

In the same way, your ex girlfriend might be asking you questions about your life to see if you've changed and improved some of the things that turned her off before.

For example: Some of the questions a woman will have about her ex include:

- Is he more confident and emotionally independent now, or is he still needy and insecure?
- Is he moving through the levels of life like a real man, or is he stuck in a rut in life, or still behaving like a teenage boy who won't grow up?
- Does he stand up for himself now when others (including her) try to push him around, or is he still easily picked on?
- Can he make her feel feminine and girly in his presence by being more emotionally dominant than her, or does he still allow her to dominate him with her confident personality?
- Has he embraced the idea of being a masculine man, or does he still think that it's wrong to be masculine and right be soft and nice all the time?
- Has he improved his understanding of what women really feel attracted to, or is he trying to re-attract his ex with the same old approach that got him dumped in the first place?
- Can he make her feel sparks of sexual attraction for him by being emotionally masculine around her, or is he still too much of a neutral guy who makes her feel more like his friend or sister?

So, if your ex girlfriend is asking questions about your life, it may be because she wants to see if you've changed.

You need to show her (via the way you think, talk, behave, interact with her and respond to what she says and does) that what she's hoping for is already there.

You really have changed.

You are a new and improved man.

The more she experiences that for herself, the more respect and attraction she will feel for you and the more she will want to give the relationship another chance.

Dumped Because She Thought I Didn't Care Enough About Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why:

1. She's just saying that to see if she can control you

Sometimes a woman will say and do thing to see how much control she can have over a man.

In your case, she has dumped you and you really want her back, so she might just be saying that you didn't care enough, to see how much power and control she can gain.

She will try to make you to feel like you really need her, so she can feel safe getting back into a relationship with you and not have to worry that you will immediately or quickly dump her to regain the power position.

So, a woman will say things like, "You didn't care enough about me" or, "You treated me like crap" to see how her ex will react.

- Will he beg and plead for her forgiveness?
- Will he ask her what would make her happy and then do everything she asks?
- Will he try to make it up to her by buying her flowers, expensive gifts and making himself available to her every whim?
- Will he let her get away with disrespecting him because he's now too afraid to stand up to her?
- Will he become desperate as he tries to impress her and get her back?
- Will he stop being the cool, confident guy that she fell in love with?

If he gets caught up in feelings of desperation and allows her to control him, she will lose respect for him and close herself off even more.

On the other hand, if he stands up to her (in a loving, but dominant way), she will realize that she can't control him because he is emotionally stronger than her.

This will automatically spark her feelings of respect and attraction for him again.

Why?

Women feel respect and sexual attraction for men who are emotionally stronger than them and feel turned off by guy who are emotionally weaker.

So, the next time your ex says something along the lines of, "I don't know if I can ever give you another chance. You didn't care enough about me before. I just can't trust you," rather than do what most guys do (e.g. apologize over and over and promise to make it up to her), use it as an opportunity to re-attract her instead.

For example: You can laugh and say, "I never realized you were such a little drama queen. You poor little thing. I treated you so badly. What a horrible boyfriend/husband I was. Okay, how about this? From now on, I will tell you that I love you every minute. I'll just keep saying I love you, I love you, I love you. Iâ€¦I'll even text it to you when weâ€¦re not together. I'll also call you in the middle of the night to tell youâ€¦and if that isn't enough, Iâ€¦I'll shout it out the window for everyone to hear. Then you wonâ€¦t be able to say that I donâ€¦t care. So how about it? Iâ€¦I'll start right now. I love you, I love you, I love you!â€¦ and then laugh at her (for complaining about your behavior in the first place) and with her about it.

Initially, she might be a bit shocked that youâ€¦re not allowing her to control you and she may even say something like, â€¦How dare you make fun of my feelings like that.â€¦

Just remember thoughâ€¦!

Thatâ€¦s only another way of asserting her control over you.

Women always test the confidence of men and this happens even more when you are an ex.

If you lose confidence, start doubting yourself and then apologize to her for joking around, she will think, â€¦Aha! He was just putting on an act of being more manly. In reality though, I can easily control him because he's still a bit of a wuss. All I really need to do is push him a bit and he crumbles. He's not a man. He doesn't get itâ€¦ and she will then lose even more respect for you.

On the other hand, if you maintain your confidence and then say (in a loving, gentle way) something along the lines of, â€¦Iâ€¦m not making fun of your feelings. In fact, I acknowledge that certain aspects of my past behavior may have made you feel unloved and unappreciated. However, that wasnâ€¦t the case at all â€¦ I really did love you. No matter what has happened between us, my love for you has never changed or diminished. Of course, you probably wonâ€¦t take my word for that and I understand. So, how about we just hang out as friends for a while and get to know each other over again with a clean slate? Then, if you still feel as though I am a terrible guy who doesnâ€¦t care about you, I will walk away and leave you alone forever. I promise.â€¦

By saying something like that to her, youâ€¦re establishing your role as a loving, dominant man, which automatically changes the way she perceives you.

Even if she tries to stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for you, she won't be able to.

She will respect you and feel attracted to you for not allowing her to push you around, but while also still being a good, loving man.

You're being masculine and assertive, but you're not being an asshole.

As a result, she will feel differently and begin to drop her guard.

Based on her renewed feelings for you, she will almost certainly open herself up to the idea of being friends for a while to see where things go, rather than cutting you out of her life completely and losing you forever.

Note: Itâ€¦s totally fine to be her friend, but just donâ€¦t act like an innocent friend who pretends not to be interested in her in a sexual or romantic way.

Make sure that you flirt with her to create sexual tension and always focus on making her feel sexually attracted every time you interact with her.

Another possible reason why your ex might be saying that she dumped you because she thought you didnâ€¦t care enough about her, isâ€¦!

2. You spend too much time on work, study or hobbies

[image: You spend too much time on work, study or hobbies]

If a guy mainly focuses on himself (e.g. going to the gym, hanging out with his friends), his work, studies and interests, then his woman might eventually start to feel as though he is taking her presence in his life for granted.

Essentially, she fades into the background of his life and is expected to sit around and wait for him to notice her when he has the time.

When a woman feels unloved and unappreciated by her man, she will eventually become unhappy with what she perceives as his unfair treatment of her.

Initially, she might drop hints about her feelings by saying things like, “You’re always so busy with work. I never see you these days. Why don’t we spend more time together?” or “I know your studies are important to you, but even when you’re finished with exams, you always seem to be busy doing something else. I hardly get any time with you anymore,” or “I’m glad you enjoy your work, but you have to make time for our relationship as well y’know?”

He might brush her concerns away by saying something like, “Oh, you’re just being silly! You know that I love you. I just have other things on my mind right now, that’s all. We will spend more time together in future. For now, I have to”

Of course, saying something like that to a woman only makes her feel even more misunderstood and unappreciated.

[image: Starting to lose interest in her man because he doesn't care enough about her]

She knows that so many other men would love to be in a relationship with her, would treat her well and would make her feel loved and appreciated.

So, if she isn’t feeling loved and it keeps going on and on like that, she will eventually want to dump her guy and find a new man who will make her feel loved and appreciated.

Of course, that doesn’t mean a woman wants her man to make everything about her and base his whole life on pleasing her.

Not at all.

The fact is, when a man has focus, direction and a clear purpose in life outside of the relationship (e.g. he is striving to achieve a big goal or dream), it’s actually something that makes him more attractive to his woman and to other women.

His woman feels safe being with him because she can see that he’s not just drifting through life and hoping that things will someday work out for him by magic.

He is a go-getter and is making things happen like a real man does.

Women love that.

So, don’t think that you have to base your life on your woman and give her all your time and attention.

Not at all!

You just have to make her feel loved, appreciated and wanted when you do spend time with her.

You don't have to put a lot of effort into it and take it on as another chore you have to do in life. Instead, you just have to be genuine about your love for her, your commitment to her and your happiness about being with her.

So, make sure that you understand me clearly: You don't have to give her all of your time and attention.

As a man, the majority of your time and attention should be on achieving your biggest, goals and dreams in life.

However, when you do spend time with your woman, make it quality time (i.e. love her, be there, care, be good to her, have fun).

Another way of saying this is that it's perfectly fine for your work/studies/purpose to be the most important THING in your life, as long as she feels like the most important PERSON.

Remember: You don't want to neglect the other areas of your life to focus all your attention on her, because that will most likely cause you to become needy and clingy, which will turn her off.

Just take a balanced approach to how much time you give to her and your purpose in life.

Be serious, genuine and real about both your purpose (i.e. your biggest goals, dreams and ambitions in life) and your relationship with her.

That's the secret.

So, if your ex dumped you because she thought you didn't care enough about her, it could be because you didn't make her feel like the most important person in your life, which caused her to feel unvalued and unappreciated.

If you did that, don't worry.

Don't let your past mistakes cause you to lose the confidence that your ex originally felt attracted to and fell in love with.

Don't start putting yourself down, blame yourself for everything that happened and feeling unworthy of her now.

You are worthy of her.

Yes, you made some mistakes, but you can't go back into the past and change things.

What's done is done.

What's important now is how you proceed from this moment onwards.

Another possible reason why your ex might be saying that she dumped you because she thought you didn't care enough about her, is that

3. You didn't let her express her emotions like a woman and wanted her to be more like you

[image: You didn't let her express herself like a woman]

Men and women are different and that is a good thing.

It's the difference between the energy, physical appearance and behavior of men and women that attracts them together.

Some guys either aren't aware of that, or they forget it when in a relationship and end up trying to force their woman to think, feel, behave and act more like a man.

When a guy does that, she then stops feeling attracted to him and funnily enough, he stops feel as attracted to her too.

So, it's absolutely essential that when in a relationship, you always encourage and allow your woman to think, feel, behave and act like a woman.

Embrace and celebrate the differences between you and her, rather than fighting against it and trying to become more like each other.

For example: Generally speaking, men are more logical in the way that they think, compared to women.

Men say what they mean, get to the point and don't need to talk about their feelings in 2-hour phone calls with their buddies.

When a guy decides to discuss a problem with his woman, it's usually because he's trying to find a solution as quickly as possible, or he already has a solution in mind and just wants to talk about it.

On the other hand, most women are a lot more emotional in how they think, compared to men (generally speaking of course).

Women tend to make decisions with their heart rather than their head and almost never say exactly what they mean (e.g. she'll say things like, I'm fine, when she's annoyed about something, or It's okay with me, when it isn't).

If a woman shares a problem with her man, it's usually because she wants to talk it out, get it off her chest and just vent a little.

Essentially, she wants to express how she feels about the problem, talk about it and not rush for a solution.

Unfortunately, a guy sometimes doesn't understand this fact about women.

So, a guy will make the mistake of wanting his woman to think, act and behave more like him (e.g. be more logical, less emotional, more practical and swift in her decision making).

For example: If she's feeling emotional about something, rather than just letting her express herself in a feminine way (e.g. cry, throw a tantrum, get emotional) he says things like, Oh, don't worry. You'll be fine, or, Why are acting you like this? Grow up. Can't you see that there's no point complaining about something? You've just got to fix the problem. What are you going to do about it? There's no point going on and on about it. What are you going to do about it?

He's right, but that's not what she wants when she talks to a man that she's in a sexual, romantic relationship with.

Women are expected to be logical, practical and efficient in the workplace, but in a sexual, romantic relationship with a man, she wants to be free to be a real woman (i.e. be feminine, emotional, irrational).

When she brings up a problem, a woman usually just wants him to listen and let her vent her feelings about the situation for a while.

If he doesn't offer her that type of relationship experience, she will start to get frustrated and feel as though it just can't work between them.

She may then start thinking to herself, He's not letting me be myself. The longer I stay with him, the more he's going to try and change my personality and be like him. He just doesn't care enough about me to let me be who I want to be. I can't take it anymore. I need to get away from him before I lose myself. I want to feel like a real woman again. I just can't feel that way when I'm around him.

She will then break up with him and say that she thought he didn't care enough about her to listen to her complaints about his behavior.

At the time, it may not make a lot of sense to the guy being broken up with, but it will make full sense to her.

If you can relate to that, don't worry â many guys make the same mistake.

To get her back, you need to show her (via the way you respond to her emotional outbursts, how you now talk to her, how you approach interactions with her) that you now accept her the way she is.

It's not about letting her disrespect you, treat you badly or take advantage of you in any way.

Not at all.

Instead, it's about letting her be the emotional, irrational and complicated woman she really is, deep down.

Most women don't want to admit that because most guys will assume that it means she is stupid, bipolar or in need of psychological help.

She doesn't want to be looked down on like that, just for being a typical woman.

Instead, she wants her man to have the balls to face the storm of her random bursts or irrational femininity (i.e. tantrums, creating unnecessary drama, being overly sensitive about things), rather than getting angry at her, demanding that she be more like him or walking off in a huff.

So, in terms of your ex!

Regardless of whether she's crying, throwing a tantrum or being cold and bitchy when you interact with her, you just need to maintain your confidence and allow her to be a woman.

She will instantly begin to realize that you're not asking her to stop acting the way she is and are allowing her to be your opposite (i.e. feminine to your masculine) for once.

The longer you interact with her, the more keen she will become to give you and her another chance.

After all, she will know that it's pretty much next to impossible to find a man who can handle the feminine outbursts of a woman.

Another possible reason why your ex might be saying that she dumped you because she thought you didn't care enough about her is!

4. You didn't make her feel confident around your friends or family

Some guys have a close, loving relationship with their family and friends.

They're always calling each other on the phone, doing things together, or just hanging out with one another.

Naturally, there's nothing wrong with that at all and most women like to know that their guy has a close network of friends and family that he can turn to in case of an emergency.

Yet, a woman doesn't want to feel like she's not included or as though she's an unwelcome outsider.

This is where some guys go wrong.

Some guys get so caught up hanging with their friends and family, that they fail to notice their woman is feeling insecure or left out.

She might then say something like, "Your friends/family don't like me," or "I feel uncomfortable around your friends/family lately," in the hopes that her guy will understand her feelings and make her feel more confident and included the next time they're all hanging out together.

However, if he brushes her off by saying something along the lines of, "Don't be silly. Everyone thinks you're great. You just need to try harder to fit in. You're always just sitting in the background being so quiet. Why don't you just join in? Speak up next time and join in on the conversation" she may then start to wonder if he really cares about her at all.

Why?

She's not asking him to tell her to man up.

She's expressing her feelings and saying that she feels uncomfortable.

She's hoping that he makes the effort to help her feel more confident, included and respected the next time they're hanging out with his family and friends.

What a lot of guys don't understand is that in most cases, women are a lot more insecure than men.

For example: More women suffer from anxiety, depression and obsessive compulsive disorders (related to their looks) than men.

So, even though your ex might have seemed very confident in her general life (e.g. at work, around close friends) deep down she may have felt insecure, nervous and like she didn't fit in when it came to interacting with your friends and family.

As the man, it's your responsibility to make her feel included, taken care of and valued when she is with you.

You don't have to babysit her or work hard to make her feel included.

Instead, you just need to give a crap about her.

Make her feel included, confident, safe, happy and loved and she will do the same back for you.

On the other hand, if you don't make her feel that way, she will feel unloved and may then decide to break up with you to find a guy who will appreciate her.

Another possible reason why your ex might be saying that she dumped you because she thought you didn't care enough about her is that!

5. You expected her to do things for you as though she is your servant just because she's your girlfriend or wife

Many guys believe that the love between a man and a woman will last for life, because it was great at the start of a relationship.

Yet, it just doesn't work that way.

Watch this!

For a relationship to last a lifetime, the love, respect, attraction and appreciation that you feel for each other must be deepened over time.

If you fall into the trap of taking each other for granted, one or both of you will eventually want to leave the relationship.

Here's the thing though!

Even though some women will lead the way and ensure that a relationship works, it's actually a man's responsibility.

It's not a lot of hard work.

You just need to give a crap about her, your relationship and your future together.

If you do that, then everything will be fine.

Yet, if you feel as though she should be happy because things used to be good, then you're going to end up disappointed when she leaves.

Of course, you already know that feeling because it has happened to you.

You may have treated her really well initially, but you gradually stopped putting in the effort, right?

Don't worry so many guys make that mistake.

Most guys have no trouble at all showing a woman how much they care for her during the dating phase of the relationship, but after a while (i.e. when the initial thrill wears off), he will begin to take his woman's love and devotion to him granted.

For example: A guy might become lazy and selfish (e.g. because this was the behavior he learned at home by watching the interactions between his father and mother, or this is how all of his friends treat their women).

He might then develop an expectation that his woman serve him and do whatever he wants, just because they are in a relationship.

When she realizes what has happened, a woman will feel a bit shocked and disappointed at her man's change in behavior.

Initially, she may come up with excuses for him by thinking things like, He's probably just having a bad day, or It must be all the stress at work that is causing him to treat me this way. When things calm down, he will realize his mistake and will feel really bad about it. He will then make it up to me and show me that he truly does love and appreciate me.

Yet, when she realizes that he's not changing and improving, she will eventually get fed up with his bad treatment of her.

Her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him will begin to fade and she will eventually dump him for not caring enough about her.

So, if your ex dumped you because you were taking her for granted, to get her back, you need to show her that youâ€”ve fully understood where you messed up and have changed and improved as a result.

Important: Itâ€”s not about SAYING that youâ€”ve changed or promising you will never treat her badly again.

Instead, itâ€”s about interacting with her in a mature, loving way and SHOWING her via your actions that youâ€”re now a new man.

In fact, if you try to SAY that you've changed and really sell yourself to her, she will feel turned off by your desperation and keep her guard up.

She will wonder if it's all just an act from you now and when you get her back, you will gradually go back to not caring enough about her again.

So, make sure that you avoid trying to sell yourself by SAYING that you've changed.

Instead, SHOW her that you've changed and let her feel differently as a result.

Showing her that you have changed is about interacting with her and allowing her to experience the changes in you.

She will sense the changes based on how you now talk, think, feel, behave and act and will decide for herself whether or not it is genuine.

So, if you want to get her back for real, make sure that you really make changes or improvements before you speak to her again.

Other guys have gotten their woman back in the same or a similar situation to yours.

You can do it too.

You can get her back.

You can make her love you even more than she did before.

Day 7 of No Contact

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you've already cut off contact for 7 days, then make sure that you are ready to contact her tomorrow.

Don't wait any longer than that.

Remember: Women respond differently to No Contact compared to men.

For example: A man will usually feel rejected when his ex doesn't contact him after he dumps her.

He will feel as though he doesn't have the kind of power over her as he once thought he did.

He may then begin to think, "How could she move on so easily? Why doesn't she care? Does she already have a new guy?"

He wants to regain his power over her and make her want him again, so he then contacts her.

In a woman's case, the No Contact Rule usually works well on a man for that main reason.

Yet, the same rule doesn't apply when a man cuts off contact to hopefully get a woman back.

In most cases, she doesn't care because her aim isn't to gain power over him.

A woman's aim is to be in love and to have a successful relationship that lasts for life, rather than stick with a guy who doesn't even know how to make her feel attracted anymore.

So, if your ex fell out of love with you and no longer had much or any feelings for you when she dumped you, then she's almost certainly not going to care if you cut off contact for 30 days, 60 days or a lifetime.

She's just going to move on.

Watch thisâ€¦!

Of course, some women do care about the fact that their ex man isn't contacting them after a break up.

Yet, a woman will only care for so long, especially if she was pretty certain that she was making the right decision to break up with him (e.g. because he was too insecure, wasn't man enough for her, didn't make her feel attracted anymore).

So, when a typical woman doesn't hear from her ex man for weeks or months after the break up, she might:

- Realize that she feels totally fine without him in her life.
- Begin to enjoy the single life, wherein she can do whatever she wants, whenever she wants and with whomever she wants.
- Start believing that her ex doesn't care about her anymore and probably never did, so she doesn't need to remain faithful to him or try to make something work with him.
- Get over the pain of the break up by hooking up with a new guy sexually and then allowing herself to fall in love with him for fun.
- Focus on all the reasons why she broke up with her ex, so she can feel even more turned off by him.
- Feel even less respect and attraction for him for trying to play â€œmind gamesâ€œ with her by not contacting her for weeks or months, when she knows that he still wants her back and wishes he could get another chance with her (i.e. because he begged and pleading with her during the break up, he can't easily attract and pick up quality women, he was always more attracted to her than she was to him).

- Lose even more respect for him for not having the balls to contact her and get her back like a real man.

So, don't make the classic mistake of assuming that your ex needs 30 to 60 days of space before she will be ready to get back together.

In most cases, a woman has completely calmed down and is ready to interact with her ex by Day 7, which is why you shouldn't wait any longer than that.

If you are on Day 7 of No Contact today, then you need to call her and get things moving along, before it's too late.

If you don't contact her and decide to wait a few more weeks, your plan may backfire because she might just move on without you (e.g. by hooking up with a new guy and falling in love with him).

Cutting off contact for a long time seems like a good idea, but it usually doesn't work on women who wanted to dump their ex.

Rather than making her think, *â€œOh no! I miss him so much! Why isn't he calling me? What could he be up to? I hope he hasn't met someone else,*â€œ a woman simply makes herself feel better by hooking up with a new guy.

As you would know, it's very easy for women to get laid or start a new relationship and women use that as an easy way to move on and stop thinking about an ex.

In many cases, the woman meets a new guy who makes her feel more attraction than her ex did leading up to the break up (most likely the case), so it might give her a false sense of hope about a relationship with him.

The woman compares how good she feels with the new guy, to how her ex made her feel near the end of the relationship and realizes that she's so much happier now.

You don't want that happening to you, right?

If not, then get her on a phone call and get her to meet up with you, so you can re-attract her and get her back.

If you don't have the confidence to make that happen, she may believe your lack of contact means that you didn't love her or care enough about her to get her back.

If she feels that way, she will almost certainly aim to get quick revenge by hooking up with a new guy and making him love her.

Don't let things get to that point.

Pick up the phone right now and make the call.

Get her back.

5 Common Mistakes to Avoid

When a guy reinitiates contact after a week or more of no contact, he will usually make one or more of the following mistakesâ€¦|

1. Worrying that the call will go badly and she will never want to speak to him again

For example: He may think, â€œWhat if she doesnâ€™t answer my call?â€ or â€œWhat if she tells me to leave her alone?â€ or â€œWhat if she has decided that she doesnâ€™t want to get back together?â€

By thinking in that way, heâ€™s actually programming himself for failure.

By the time he gets her on a call, he will likely be feeling so nervous that he may even start stumbling over his words as soon as she says â€œHello.â€

However, thatâ€™s not the impression you want to make on your ex, right?

Remember: Nervousness, insecurity and self-doubt are qualities that turn women off.

So, if your ex hears obvious fear in your voice when you call her, rather than making her think, â€œOh, itâ€™s so nice to hear from him! Itâ€™s also so cute that heâ€™s feeling nervous to talk to me again! Maybe I should give him another chance! I love wimpy ass guys!â€ sheâ€™ll be thinking something like, â€œIt feels awkward to be talking to him now. Clearly he doesnâ€™t have what it takes to be the kind of man I want.â€

Donâ€™t do that to yourself.

Take control of your mind and get yourself into the habit of imagining things going well when you talk to your ex.

For example: Instead of allowing insecure thoughts to crowd your mind, such as, â€œWhat if she tells me to get lost?â€ or even, â€œWhat if I run out of things to say?â€ push yourself to feel confident by imagining things going well.

Imagine thisâ€¦|

You are talking to your ex on the phone for the first time since you and her broke up.

The conversation starts off great and you easily re-attract her in many different ways (e.g. by being very confident, making her smile and laugh, flirting, making her feel girly in comparison to your masculinity).

She feels really happy to be talking to you again and when you suggest a meet up, she quickly agrees.

At the meet, up you continue to re-spark her feelings for you by saying and doing the types of things that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. youâ€™re being confident and emotionally strong, you use humor to break down her defenses, you make her feel feminine and girly by being more emotionally masculine than her).

You and her then get back together again and are even happier than you were before.

Thatâ€™s how you need to be thinking if you want to get your ex back.

Why?

It gives you extra confidence to say and do the right things when the moment arrives.

However, if you doubt yourself, you will naturally say and do things that seem awkward and unattractive to her.

So, push yourself to be confident.

You can do it!

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

2. Being nervous when you talk to her

What a lot of guys don't realize is that a woman's attraction to a man is mostly based on how he thinks, talks, behaves, feels and acts around her.

For example: If a guy is confident, emotionally strong, charismatic and uses humor to make her feel happy when she interacts with him, she will automatically feel attracted to him.

On the other hand, if a guy is nervous, insecure, tense and too polite around his ex, her attraction for him will remain switched off.

In both instances, he created that.

He made it happen via his thinking and behavior.

So, when you contact your ex, make sure that the feelings you create inside of her are actually what you want (i.e. for her to feel attracted to you again, feel sparks of love, feel drawn to you).

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

3. Only texting her because you're too afraid to call her

Sometimes a guy convinces himself that the best way to break the ice after 7 days of no contact with his ex is by sending her a feeler text.

For example: He might text something like, â€œHey, how are you doing?â€ and wait for his ex to hopefully respond with something along the lines of, â€œOh, Iâ€™m okay. Iâ€™ve been missing you. What have you been up to? Can we get together sometime to catch up?â€

Wouldn't that be nice?

It would be so easy to get her back then.

All you had to do was send out an easy feeler text after 7 days of no contact.

Yet, that's just not how the majority of women react.

Rather than making the ex back process easy for him, a woman will usually either ignore his text or send a blunt reply like, â€œIâ€™m fine,â€ and then wait to see what he'll do from there.

The truth is, as a man, you need to take responsibility for guiding both you and your ex back into a relationship.

Watch my video about texting your ex hereâ€¦

Don't hide behind texts and hope that she will make it easy for you because most women won't.

Even if your ex does reply and seems happy to be hearing from you, she could still be thinking something like, â€œOkay, greatâ€¦he texted meâ€¦ now what? Does he think this is going to be the start of a new relationship between us based on a few text messages? I wish he would just get to the point, or leave me alone if he doesnâ€™t have the balls to do more than send messages back and forth. Heâ€™s just wasting my time.â€

When a woman can't hear the tonality of a man's voice, or experience any of the changes that he has undergone in the 7 days since the break up, she will usually continue to think about him based on how she felt when they broke up.

For example: If a guy was insecure, self-doubting and needy in his relationship with her and when she broke up with him, she will usually assume that he is still like that, even though he is sending her cool texts.

So, if you truly want to get your ex back, don't waste a lot of time texting back and forth.

A text or two can help to get her to smile and laugh a little, but don't get sucked into texting back and forth with her.

If you do, she will almost certainly begin playing hard to get and if you then make the mistake of trying harder to impress her via text, she will feel turned off by your desperation.

So, pick up the phone and focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Talking to her on the phone (even better if it's done in person) is infinitely more effective than hiding behind texts.

When she can hear the confidence and sincerity in your voice on the phone (especially if she's being cold and distant towards you), it's only natural that she will feel drawn to you again in a positive way.

She will then become open to meeting up with you in person again and from there, it becomes even easier for you to get her back for real.

Another mistake to avoid making is

4. Not following up with a text if she doesn't answer your call

A woman not answering an initial call from her ex is actually pretty common.

So, if she doesn't answer your first call, don't start doubting yourself and thinking things like, "I knew it! I knew she wouldn't want to talk to me again. Maybe I shouldn't have waited this long to call her? Maybe she's met another guy and is out having a good time with him? Maybe I need to wait 30 to 60 days and give her more time to miss me and then she will be more willing to answer when I call her. I'm just so confused. What do I do now? Maybe I need to cut off contact for 90 days? 120 days?"

Relax.

If she's not currently answering your calls, just text her this:

"Hey! I tried to give you a call earlier, but you must have been busy. I just want you to know I completely accept that we've broken up, but I just want to ask you something quick over the phone. Don't worry, it's not serious. I'll call you again in 5 minutes."

If she responds right away and asks something like, "What do you want to ask me?" just call her immediately (don't text back!).

Alternatively, if she doesn't get back to you at all, just call her 5 minutes later as per your text.

If she still doesn't answer, leave it for a day and then try to call her again.

If she doesn't answer again, text her this:

"Hey Samantha I tried calling you yesterday to ask you something quick, but I assume that you're really busy at the moment. No problem. I might try to get hold of you some other time so I can ask you this question."

She will most likely be really curious at that stage and she may either call you to find out what you want, or text you to say that she's available for you to call her now.

Then, just pick up the phone and call her.

Don't text her.

Call.

Once you get her on a call with you, start off by using some humor to get her laughing and smiling and feeling happy to be talking to you again.

Then, when she seems relaxed and open, you can say, “Actually, so what I wanted to ask you is for us to catch up for a quick cup of coffee sometime. I'm not asking you to get back together again of course. I just think it would be nice to catch up as friends to say hello. So, how about it? I'll be busy tomorrow and Tuesday, but I am free on Wednesday and Thursday. Which of those days are better for you?”

If you've successfully re-sparked some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you over the phone (e.g. by maintaining your confidence when she's being cold and indifferent, breaking her out of her bad mood with laughter and smiling, flirting with her and making her feel feminine and girly), she will most likely agree to catch up and you can make plans to meet up.

Just remember: Don't try to achieve all that via text!

Texts do not work to get an ex back unless she already has strong feelings of respect and attraction for you and wants you back.

If she isn't feeling attracted to you and you try to ask for a catch up via text, you will almost certainly get a, “No.”

So, make sure that you do this right.

If you want her back for real, don't hide behind texts because you're too afraid to call her.

When a woman is turned off by her ex, getting “give me another chance” or, “let's meet up” texts from him are annoying to her.

So, do this right!

Get her back for real!

You can do it.

Another mistake to avoid making is

5. Giving up too easily

In some cases, a woman won't be willing to catch up the first time you ask her, so don't panic.

For example: She might say something along the lines of, “I just don't know if it's a good idea. I don't feel like I'm ready to see you again in person. I'm still trying to deal with how I feel about everything that happened between us. I don't want to rush into anything yet. I need more time.”

Naturally, when a guy hears something like that, rather than just take it for what it is (i.e. that she's not fully re-attracted yet and he can change that by attracting her over the phone right then and there), he starts to doubt himself and his chances with her.

He may then mistakenly give up, walk away or give her so much space that she moves on with another guy.

He then loses out on being with what could potentially have been the love of his life.

Don't let that happen to you.

If your ex says â€œNo,â€ to meeting up with you the first time you ask her, or to getting back together right away, it doesn't mean her answer is set in stone.

The key is to just maintain your confidence with her and in a friendly, easy-going way say, â€œHey, I get it. I understand why you feel the way you do right now and the last thing I want to do is pressure you into doing anything that you don't feel comfortable with. However, all I'm asking for is that we catch up for a quick cup of coffee to chat as friends. We can do that, right? We're mature enough to do that. So, let's catch up and say a quick hi, with no strings attached. Just as friends.â€

By taking the pressure off her to make a decision about getting back together again, she will feel more comfortable about saying â€œYesâ€ to having a quick coffee with you.

When you meet up with her, you can then fully reactivate her feelings by showing her in person that you are now a new and improved man (e.g. you are so much more confident and emotionally strong, emotionally independent, mature and focused).

By the way!

Make sure that when you meet up with her, you don't treat her like a neutral friend.

Be friendly, but don't act like just a friend.

If you want to get her back, you have to make her feel SEXUAL and ROMANTIC feelings for you again.

Watch this!

When you make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again, her guard comes down and she opens back up to you quickly and easily.

Another mistake to avoid making is!

6. Sending her needy or emotional texts if she doesn't answer or isn't willing to meet up

Even if a woman still has feelings for her ex and wants to get back with him, she's won't necessarily make it easy to get her back.

For example: She might ignore his calls, reply to some texts in a cold way or reject his suggestions to meet up with her in person.

Essentially, she's testing to see if he's confident enough to persevere in a calm, rational manner, regardless of how negative she's being towards him.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys fail this test and instead of turning her rejection into something they can both laugh about, he becomes overly needy and emotional instead.

For example: A guy might text something along the lines of, â€œWhy are you ignoring me? Please don't do this. I really need to hear your voice. I'll do anything to make things up to you. Please just answer your phone,â€ or â€œPlease give me one more chance. That's all I'm asking for. I just want to see you. I know I stuffed up, but I promise never to behave in like that ever again. Please.â€

Yet, rather than convincing a woman to change her mind, she feels even more turned off by what she perceives as his emotional weakness (i.e. desperation, feeling lost, lonely and hurt without her).

So, if your ex isn't answering her phone or isn't willing to meet up, rather than getting upset and doing something that might make you look needy, wimpy or weak-minded in her eyes, just use humor to break down her defenses.

For example: If she won't answer her phone, you might text something like, Hey, remember that time we bought that lottery ticket together a long time ago? I just checked it and we won! Pity you're not answering your phone though. I'm just going to have to keep your share of the winnings. 5 star holiday here I come!

She may respond and ask, What lottery ticket? How much did we win? and you can then say, You'll have to answer your phone if you want to find out.

Then when you call her, you can say in a joking way, So, you only want me for my money then? and have a laugh with her about it.

You can then tell her that you were only joking about the lottery ticket and then add in some more humor by saying, Anyway, so I want to go on a 5 star holiday. Can you pay for it for me? and then have a laugh with her about it.

When you use humor (rather than being emotional and needy), you break down her defenses and open her back up to you.

She stops looking at you in a negative way and she starts seeing you in a more positive light.

She begins to believe that you really have changed this time and as a result, her feelings for you also begin to change.

Even if she tries to deny it, she can't stop herself from feeling surges of respect and attraction for you again for being man enough to change and improve so quickly.

You can then gently guide her back into a relationship that's 100% better than it ever was before.

As you can see, getting an ex back does NOT require you to wait 21, 30 or 60 days before you contact her.

You can get her back right away or very quickly, if you know how to re-attract her and confidently guide her back into a relationship.

So, if you are serious about getting her back, take action now and get her back before it's too late for you.

Day 6 of No Contact

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Sometimes, a guy needs to wait this long before he feels ready to contact his ex woman and start the ex back process.

If you are ready, then go ahead and call her, re-attract her and get her back right now.

Of course, if you feel like you need more time before you call her, then okay.

However, I don't recommend that you wait more than a total of 7 days after a break up before contacting an ex to get her back.

Why?

Most women either completely move on with another guy, or get so used to not having you around that they begin to move on emotionally (e.g. she begins enjoying single life and feeling good on her own again), or they move on physically with a new guy.

Remember: The sooner you get her on a phone call and allow her to experience the new you (e.g. by maintaining your confidence with her even when she's being cold and unfriendly towards you, by making her laugh and smile, by being emotionally masculine thereby allowing her to feel feminine and girly in contrast to you), the sooner you can get back together.

When talking to her on the phone, make sure to keep the conversation light, funny and easy-going and steer clear of talking about what went wrong in the relationship.

If you're not sure how to break the ice after 6 Days of No Contact, here's an example of how to make her laugh and open her up to the idea of meeting with you in person!

After the initial Hi, how are you? you can then ask her, So, what's news with you?

She might reply with something like, Oh, nothing much. I've just been busy with the usual things like work/studies. How about you? What's news with you?

You can then say in a joking way, Oh, just sitting around eating pizza and missing you like crazy" and then have a laugh.

Then, add in, "No, I'm only kidding. I haven't missed you at all" and have a laugh with her.

Then, add in, "No, seriously. All I've been doing is sitting around eating pizza and playing video games. I weigh 180 pounds now because of all the pizza. That's why I'm calling you! I need a new super-sized couch and I was wondering if you'd go shopping with me to get one" and then have a laugh.

She will most likely laugh as well and you can then say, Okay, okay! I'm only joking with you. I actually still weigh the same as before and I don't need a new couch either. In fact, I've been and then quickly tell her what you've been doing since the break up in a sentence or two.

She will feel attracted to the fact that you have the confidence to joke around with her like that, rather than being so serious or being on your best behavior (e.g. being really nice, polite, formal).

She will also realize that you haven't been sitting around eating pizza alone and have been happily enjoying your life without her.

Even though she probably won't admit it to you, this will make her feel some respect and attraction for you again.

When you reignite her feelings this way, she automatically starts focusing on your positive qualities, rather than holding onto her negative memories about how badly you messed up with her.

Her guard starts to slip and she becomes open to meeting up with you to see what happens.

At this point, you can say something like, *âAnywayâ| how about we get together for some coffee sometime this week. It wouldn't be about us getting back together of course. Just a coffee to say hello to each other as friends.*â

If she seems a bit resistant at first and says something like, *âI'm not sure if thatâs a good idea,*â don't let it put you off.

Instead, remain calm and relaxed and say something along the lines of, *âHey, itâs just a coffee. We are mature enough to do that, right? After all, weâre just exâsâ|we're not mortal enemies or anything like that. So, come onâ|it'll be fun. We can catch up for 10 minutes or so and if you donât ever want to see me again, I will go back to eating my pizza.*â

She will likely be laughing at that point and agree to catch up.

You can then go ahead and arrange a suitable day and time.

Then, when you meet up with her, just continue to say and do the things that will trigger her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. being confident, making her laugh, smile and feel good in your presence, being emotionally masculine) and guide her back into a relationship with you.

Where Guys Go Wrong: 7 Mistakes to Avoid

[image: Where guys go wrong when using the No Contact Rule]

Giving a woman a few days of space after a break up is not a bad thing.

It really can help.

When she doesn't hear from you from a few days, she can relax and stop worrying that you're going to try to pressure her back into a relationship like most guys do after a break.

She can stop focusing on all the negative emotions that she felt during and after the break up and actually start to miss you.

All that is good for your chances of getting her back.

However, she can instantly change how she feels if her ex guy interacts with her and turns her off again.

For example: Some of the classic mistakes that guys make when 'going no contact' includeâ|

1. Sitting around missing her and thinking of all of her good qualities

The worst thing you can do to yourself is to continue reminding yourself about how perfect your ex was for you and how much worse your life is without her in it.

Yes, your relationship with her was enjoyable and she really is a special, unique woman, but you can't be focusing on that and feeling bad about it if you truly want to re-attract her.

You have to focus on her bad qualities too, so you can have a more balanced perception of her, rather than making her out to be a perfect little princess in your mind.

Even though itâs perfectly normal to miss your ex and think about her good qualities, the reality is that she wasnât perfect and isnât perfect.

Nobody is perfect.

She is special, amazing, unique and beautiful to you, but she has her flaws just like anyone else.

If you spend some time honestly thinking about it, you will realize that your ex isnât more valuable or amazing than you are.

She is amazing, special and unique, but so are you.

You made some mistakes in the relationship, but so did she.

She isnât perfect, you arenât, Iâm not and nobody else is.

So, make sure that youâre not looking back at the relationship and at her and thinking, “Oh, she is so amazing. No other girl could make me feel the way she does. I need her back so badly.”

If you think like that, you will naturally begin to feel unworthy of her, which is turn her off.

Women are attracted to men who have high self-esteem, a high sense of self-worth and strong, unwavering confidence in themselves.

Thinking that she is Little Miss Perfect and that youâd be so lucky to get another chance with her, isnât the way to have that kind of confidence.

Youâve got to focus on your positive qualities and compare them to her negative qualities, to realize that she isnât better than you.

You are perfect for each other, even though neither of you (or anyone else) is perfect.

Everyone has their flaws.

Everyone makes mistakes.

The big difference between real men and no hoper men, is that real men learn from their mistakes and become an even better man as a result.

Women love it when a man rises up to the challenges that life throws at him (including getting dumped by the woman he loves) and comes through as being a better man than he ever was before.

So, make sure that you donât make the classic mistake of sitting around missing her and thinking of all of her good qualities.

Get a more balanced perspective in your mind and build up your feelings of self-worth and confidence.

Another common mistake that guys make when ‘going no contact’ after a break up isâ

2. Not getting help to fix his emotional issues

Sometimes, a guy truly doesnât know why his woman broke up with him.

He has a vague idea (e.g. there were too many fights and arguments, she kept nagging him about certain things), but heâs just not sure how she went from being in love with him, to turning her back on him and coldly walking away like she did.

It doesnât make sense to him.

Yet, rather than getting help from other men in his life (e.g. his father, grandfather, brother, uncle, friend, coworker) or seeking professional help (from someone like me), he just sits around waiting for the day that he can call his ex woman again.

He's essentially just counting down the days before it's okay to call her.

Yet, that's the worst thing he can do.

Why?

He has to make real changes during the no contact period.

He has to level up as a man and be able to offer her a new and improved attraction experience.

A woman doesn't want to take on the responsibility of shaping him into the man that he needs to be to get her back and make her happy again.

She wants him to figure it out by himself and if he can't do that, get help (without telling her about it).

She doesn't want to hear about his struggles and how he's trying to learn how to be a better man.

She just wants him to figure out how to be the kind of man that she wants him to be and then be that man.

If he can do that for her, she can then naturally reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him and give him another chance.

Another common mistake that many guys make during the no contact period is

3. Not improving his ability to re-attract her

If you attempt to get your ex back without first giving her what she wants from you (i.e. for her to be able to look up to you, respect you, feel attracted to you and love you as her man again), she will simply keep pushing you away.

She will say things like, "Look, it's just not going to work between us. Please accept that it's over and move on" or, "I care about you as a person, but I don't want to be in a relationship anymore. Please leave me alone."

Where many guys go wrong is by making the same attraction mistakes over and over again and expecting to get another chance.

For example: She always wanted him to be a more confident man, but he's still insecure and emotionally sensitive.

She always wanted him to make her feel more girly and feminine, but he thinks that it's wrong to be very manly, so he sticks to being soft, neutral or worse, feminine, in his approach to her and the relationship.

He then gets annoyed and feels like she is being stubborn, selfish or unloving because she won't accept him as he is.

Yet, from her perspective, he isn't accepting what she wants in a man, so she doesn't see any reason to give him another chance.

She wants to feel real attraction, rather than having to deal with feeling okay or experiencing dulled down feelings in a relationship.

She wants to feel the spark of being with a very confident, emotionally masculine man and if he can't give her that, she has to take care of herself by moving on.

So, if you want your ex to feel excited about getting back together with you, you need to improve your ability to re-attract her in the ways that really matter to her.

For example: If you got broken up with because you were too insecure, self-doubting and needy in the relationship, you need to show her the new confident, emotionally strong you when you interact with her.

Laugh at her attempts to make you feel nervous and insecure and show her that you no longer need her approval to feel good about yourself.

You are a self-approving, confident, emotionally masculine man now.

Another example is if you got broken up with because you were too timid in the relationship and allowed her to push you around and dominate you with her confident personality.

In this instance, you need to show her (via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to her), that you're now emotionally strong and can stand up for yourself in a loving, but dominant way.

The more you improve your ability to re-attract your ex in the ways that really matter to her, the more she will really want you back.

Instead of playing hard to get, she will help the reconciliation happen because she will begin to fear losing you to another woman now that you are so much more attractive and appealing.

Another common mistake that many guys make during the no contact period isâ€¦

4. Thinking that it might be easier to just give her a full 30 to 60 days of no contact and hope that she contacts him instead

[image: Maybe I should just wait for her to contact me]

Sometimes, a guy believes that cutting off communication with his ex for 30 to 60 days is the only way to make her miss him and then want him back.

In most cases, that strategy doesn't work.

Why?

To begin with, when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she has lost respect and attraction for him over time.

It didn't happen overnight.

She gave him plenty of chances to change and he never really did, so she eventually got to the point where she just had to break up with him.

At that point, the woman is usually completely over the relationship and just wants to move on with a new guy to make herself feel happy again.

This is why most women don't panic and desperate try to get an ex guy back who uses the No Contact Rule on them.

Watch this for more info!

This is why, in most cases, a guy needs to give his woman 3 to 7 days of space after a break up and then contact her and get her back.

If he waits any longer than that, a woman will usually move on without him.

The fact is that unless she is still secretly in love with him and hoping that they will get back together, or if she is struggling to find herself a replacement guy, him ignoring her for 30 or 60 days isn't going to concern her much at all.

In fact, she's more than likely to just use that time to fully get over him and move on.

Of course, a woman may be curious about why her ex isn't contacting her, but if she believes that he probably can't change the things that really matter to her (e.g. become more confident, emotionally independent, emotionally masculine), she will focus on moving on by finding a replacement man.

This is why, if your ex woman doesn't have strong feelings for you right now, ignoring her for 30 or 60 days isn't a very good idea.

So, make sure that if you use the No Contact Rule, you don't go overboard with it and ignore your ex for longer than 7 days.

If you are afraid to face up to her or hope that ignoring her for longer (e.g. 30 or 60 days) will get her back, then you're most likely going to be very disappointed.

You will soon find out that she is either completely over you and enjoying the single life, or she is in a new relationship with a man who is making her happy.

So, don't wait longer than a week to get started with the ex back process.

Get it done and get her back, before it's too late for you.

Another common mistake that many guys make isâ€¦

5. Losing confidence in himself and his value to her as days and then weeks pass by

Some guys just don't know what else to do but wait and hope that his ex calls him and wants him back.

It seems like a great idea on the surface.

All you've got to do is ignore her for 30 or 60 days and she will come crawling back, begging for another chance.

Unfortunately, that's not what happens at all.

Most women just move on when they don't hear back from an ex guy that they're no longer attracted to.

Watch thisâ€¦

If the guy had re-attracted her before 'going no contact,' then it would work a lot better.

Yet, even still, there's never any guarantee that a woman will come back if you simply keep ignoring her.

In most cases, if a guy wants his ex woman back, he has to interact with her again and actively make her feel attracted to him.

That's the easiest, fastest way to get her back.

On the other hand, sitting around and waiting and hoping that she calls one day is a horrible strategy for most guys.

Why?

As the weeks and months pass by without hearing from her, most guys will begin to lose all hope of her ever coming back.

He may even start to think things like, “It was all my fault. I stuffed things up and I didn’t deserve to get her back anyway. I mean, why would she want me back? I’m such a loser. She’s probably met loads of guys who are way better than me. I don’t stand a chance and never did. It’s hopeless.”

Did he ever stand a chance with her?

Yes, but he didn’t act on it.

He just waited and hoped that she would make the first move, or eventually contact him and say something like, “I miss you” and then suggest getting back together.

Unfortunately, that’s just not what a woman usually does when she breaks up with a man that she’s no longer attracted to.

If he doesn’t interact with her again and make her feel attracted to him, she doesn’t feel much or any motivation to give him another chance.

So, she just moves on.

Another common mistake that some guys make when they cut off contact with their ex woman, isâ

6. Giving her so much space that she loses interest or forces herself to move on to feel better

[image: Giving her so much space that she moves on]

Even if a woman still has some feelings for her ex, giving her too much space (i.e. longer than 7 days) usually just helps her get over him.

Here’s whyâ

Imagine that a woman is sitting at home after a break up thinking about her ex and missing him.

Although she might be feeling some frustration, anger and disappointment about the break up, deep down she may also secretly be hoping that he will call her so they can fix things and give the relationship another try.

Yet, rather than calling after a few days (7 days at the most) and actively re-sparking some of her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for him again, the guy completely ignores her for weeks and in some cases even a few months.

He is hoping that it makes her come crawling back, but she is thinking, “Why is he ignoring me like this? Doesn’t he care about me at all? I thought he’d at least give me a call to see if I’m okay. I guess that I am an idiot for thinking that he still cared about me. I really thought that we might be able to work things out between us. He’s obviously moved on and is probably out there hooking up with other women already while I’m sitting here like a fool waiting for his call. Well, that’s over as of right now! I am calling my girlfriends right away to organize a night out and if I happen to meet a guy that I like, I’m not going to think twice about having sex with him.”

She then focuses on completely switching off her feelings for her ex (e.g. by getting angry with him for ignoring her) and actively moves on by hooking up with a new guy.

Don’t let that happen to you.

Remember: Any longer than 7 days of No Contact is almost always a complete waste of time.

In almost all ex back cases, a guy has to quickly prepare to re-attract her and then do that after he has given her 3 to 7 days of space.

If he does that, he has the highest chance of getting her back.

I know this because I've personally worked on 100s of ex back cases and when a guy waits too long to get started, he usually loses his ex because she moves on to make herself feel better.

Another common mistake that many guys make when using the No Contact Rule isâ€¦!

7. Thinking that all women are the same and need to be ignored for 30 to 60 days after a break up

Some women will come running back to an ex after 30 to 60 days of no contact.

Yet, those women are in the minority.

With the vast majority of women, anything longer than 7 days of no communication usually results in herâ€¦!

- Getting over the initial pain of the break up.
- Realizing that sheâ€¦s actually doing just fine without him.
- Believing that he doesnâ€¦t have feelings for her anymore.
- Assuming that he doesn't care and never did, so she shouldn't either.
- Getting annoyed with him for not having the courage to get her back.
- Feeling attracted to other guys (and liking it).
- Kissing or having sex with a new guy.
- Falling in love with another guy.

So, rather than ignoring your ex for 30 or 60 days in the hopes that it make her come running back to you, just get her back after giving her a few days to a week of space.

Call her (or interact with her in person) and actively re-spark her feelings for you.

Don't hide behind texts.

Texts are way too easy to ignore and women usually play harder to get than they actually would compared to a phone call, or in person interaction.

Texts are okay, but don't rely on them as your number one approach to getting her back.

Here's a video I made on the topicâ€¦!

When you call her or interact with her in person, focus on letting her experience the new and improve you.

Get her to like you again now, rather than giving her too much space and allowing her to continue focusing on all the reasons why youâ€¦re all wrong for her.

So, if you have given her 6 days of space already, you are most likely ready to pick up the phone and break the silence.

If you need another day to recover and prepare, then fine â€¦ do that.

However, don't wait any longer than 7 days.

Get this done.

Get her back.

Day 5 of No Contact

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 6 things that you can do on Day 5 of No Contact after a break up:

1. If you don't feel ready to contact her yet, get out and be social with other people

[image: Get out and be social with other people]

In some cases, 5 days is not enough time for a guy to feel completely ready to talk to his ex woman again.

So, if you have some doubts about whether or not you are ready to re-attract her, don't worry about it.

Give yourself a little more time.

Watch this!

Whatever you do though, just don't make the mistake of sitting at home moping, thinking about your ex and hanging on to your phone in case she sends you a text or calls you and you miss it.

Instead, use the time apart to get out and be social with other people.

Do something with friends, get out and have fun and do some of the things you may have neglected while in a relationship with your ex (e.g. starting a new hobby or sport).

Not only is this a great way to take your mind off the fact that it's Day 5 of No Contact, but it also serves to remind you that, although you really do miss your ex and WANT her back, you don't actually NEED her back to be happy and live a fun life.

The more emotionally independent you become, the more attractive you will be to her when you interact with her again.

Why?

When you have friendships, fun interests and big goals that are separate from your relationship with her, it is less likely that you will become needy, clingy and insecure because you're not basing your whole identity on being in a relationship with her.

The relationship that you have with her is important to you and is a great part of your life, but it doesn't define you as a man.

You are a man with or without her.

You are enjoying life, making progress and feeling good about yourself, with or without her.

That is very attractive to women.

It's also something that automatically makes a woman look up to a man and respect him.

Why?

Women hate it when a guy needs a woman's emotional support to feel like he is okay, valuable, worthy and important in this world.

In other words, women don't like needy men (unless of course, the woman is very unattractive and wants an emotionally weak man that she can control).

Most women want a man that is emotionally strong and emotionally independent on her, so she can look up to him and respect him.

So, make sure that you push yourself to enjoy life without her and remind yourself that she doesn't define you.

As a result, you will automatically be more confident, have higher self-esteem and will be the kind of man she can look up to and feel proud to be associated with.

Then, when you interact with her again, rather than think things like, "Nothing's changed. He's still the same guy I broke up with. What a pity. I was really hoping that this time he'd be different," she will be thinking something like, "Wow! He really has changed. He's so much more emotionally strong and independent now. I like that about him. I can actually see myself being his girl again. It would be nice. It feels different. I want it more now."

By the way!

2. If your friends are busy, attend a meet up in your area

Friends are not always available to go out when you are.

However, that's not a good enough reason for you to say to yourself, "Oh well! I tried. If there's no one to go out with, why bother? I'll just stay at home."

No.

You've got to be stronger than that, rather than hiding behind easy excuses.

I understand that you might not be feeling the best after being dumped, but now isn't the time for you to be emotionally weak or lazy.

You need to use the time apart from your ex to quickly boost your confidence, feelings of self worth and happiness without her.

Going out and doing things with other people is not just about keeping busy for no reason at all.

It's a way for you to become more emotionally independent and as a result, appear more interesting, appealing and attractive to your ex when you interact with her again.

So, don't make excuse.

Look for a meet up in your area at a site like Meetup.com

Meetup.com is a website that brings like-minded people together to do, learn and explore the things that they feel passionate about.

Regardless of where you are in the world, there is most likely a meet up happening near you today, tomorrow or this weekend.

For example: Some of the things you might find on the website include!

- Outdoors and adventure groups.
- Health and fitness groups.
- Tech groups.
- Book clubs.

- Photography clubs.
- Sci-fi clubs.
- Gaming clubs.
- Dance groups.

Whatever you're into, chances are there are other people in your town or city who are into it too. If you're not into any of those things, then force yourself to attend the one that is the most appealing. You may just enjoy it and have a good time.

So, don't make excuses.

Get out there and try something new.

You might even end up running in a local mini marathon, writing a book, reading a book that changes your life, or even changing your career all because you found the right people to talk to and be supported, or mentored by.

By getting out there and having fun, you will regain your ex's respect and attraction for being the kind of man who didn't sit around feeling sorry for himself during the break up.

Of course, she might pretend to be angry that you're enjoying yourself without her.

Women often do that.

So, don't be surprised if she does react in that way.

Remember though: It's just a test.

She wants to test to see if you really are emotionally independent now, or are just putting on an act to impress her.

So, don't fall for her pretend anger or frustration.

Laugh and in a relaxed manner, say something like, "Do you expect me to sit around doing nothing, even though you and I are broken up and won't be getting back together? That's not fair on me and you know it."

Just laugh it off and don't let her bully you into thinking that you need to be lonely and wait around for her to hopefully come back.

Don't forget that women are attracted to men who are emotionally strong and emotionally independent of them.

Even though she might not openly admit it, she will feel respect and attraction for you for getting on with life, rather than sulking and being Mr. Lonely at home without her.

The next thing you can do on Day 5 of No Contact is!

3. Go over the list of reasons why she broke up with you (that you wrote on Day 1 of No Contact) and assess how much you've improved since then

If you haven't already contacted her and gotten her back, Day 5 of No Contact is a good time to check on your progress so far.

Note: I don't recommend that every guy waits 7 days before contacting his ex woman.

Watch this video for more infoâ€¦!

So, if you feel ready to contact her, go ahead.

Before you do though, answer these questions to yourself nowâ€¦!

Have you improved some of the things that really matter to your ex, or are you still stuck at the same level you were at before?

For example: Are you still insecure? Do you still have no idea how to get her to look up to you and respect you as her man?

Next questionâ€¦!

Are you confident with your progress so far and feel like you are ready to contact her and re-attract her, or do you feel as though there is still some room for improvement before you interact with her again?

Will you be able to pass your ex's tests, or are you more likely to fall back to behaving like the old you (e.g. emotionally sensitive, unsure of yourself, moody, insecure) if she puts the pressure on?

Remember: Women are attracted to emotional strength in men, not weakness.

For example: Imagine that one of the main reasons why she broke up with you was because you stopped being the confident, emotionally strong guy that she initially fell in love with.

You started doubting your value to her and became jealous and controlling as a result.

Since then, you've made some real improvements and you feel a lot more confident, self-assured and worthy.

Yet, you're still not fully over your feelings of jealousy.

You worry about her finding other guys more attractive than you, hooking up with them, enjoying it and never wanting to be with you again.

You also worry that if she tells you that she has been seeing a new guy, it will further destroy your confidence and you won't be able to hide that when interacting with her.

If that applies to you, then you know exactly what you need to improve on before you make that first phone call.

You've got to get rid of your feelings of unworthiness and truly start believing in your value as a man and your ability to make her feel real attraction for you.

If you skip that step, then you run the risk of completely turning her off if she puts some pressure on you by being cold or rude, or talking about other guys who are now interested in her.

So, make sure that you are fully prepared to win when you interact with her.

Make sure that you are emotionally ready to handle any challenges she throws your way and come out on top.

4. Focus on improving any remaining weaknesses you have in your ability to attract her

[image: Focus on improving your weaknesses]

When you assess how much you have improved since the break up, you will have a clearer picture on what is left for you to still improve, adjust or change.

For example:

A lot of guys make the mistake of treating their woman more like a neutral friend, housemate or buddy.

This usually causes a woman to feel manly, boyish or unattractive around her guy and the relationship then starts to feel weird.

They may get along well as people, but the sexual and romantic spark dies out because they are too similar in their energy.

What the guy needs to do is start thinking, talking, behaving, acting and being more masculine in every way he can, which then allows her to be feminine and to feel attracted to him again.

Another improvement that a guy can make is regarding his goals and ambitions in life.

Some guys have gotten to a point in life where they are comfortable and as a result, theyâre not really aiming for much more.

This may cause their woman to feel insecure about her future with him.

She may worry that if they start a family, or experience some financial problems in future, he won't have the motivation, skill or drive to help keep them safe and secure.

So, she will begin to nag him and try to push him to man up and reach for his true potential, rather than just aiming to be mediocre.

If he doesn't change, she will lose respect for him and begin to feel like a future with him isn't as appealing as she once thought.

Another improvement that a guy can make is to stop being emotionally dependent on his woman for his sense of identity and purpose in life.

A guy who makes his whole life about his woman usually becomes clingy, needy and insecure as a result.

This then makes a woman feel smothered and turned off.

She may enjoy it initially, but she will eventually realize that she's with a man who hasn't yet grown up.

He might think that she is being unreasonable, selfish or unloving for wanting him to spend time on other things, but it's just her natural instinct as a woman.

Women want to align themselves with a man who has what it takes to protect and provide, rather than getting stuck with a man who may need her confidence and savvy to protect him from challenging situations they encounter in life.

Naturally, the above examples may or may not be relevant to you and your ex.

One of the main keys to getting her back though, is to find out what is relevant to you and then quickly improve those things before you contact her again.

If you don't improve what matters to her, then she's just going to say something like, "Sorry, I don't have feelings for you anymore," or "Sorry, it won't work between us. It's over. I need you to accept that."

Another thing you can do on Day 5 of No Contact isâ

5. Do power poses with your body language to feel good

A lot of guys might think that using body language to affect one's mood is a bunch of hocus pocus. Yet, it's such an important aspect of feeling good about yourself that researchers at Harvard Business school have spent a lot of time gathering evidence of its effectiveness.

In one experiment, the researchers asked some participants to power pose before they walked into a room, while others did whatever they wanted to prepare themselves.

The results were that those who power posed were rated as being more confident, intelligent and skilled by the audience in the room than those who didn't.

As a bonus, the power-posing candidates also felt more confident and powerful.

So, don't skip this step by saying to yourself, I'm a serious guy. I don't need a bunch of poses to make me feel good about myself.

Instead maintain an open mind and just give it a try.

Here's an example of how to do it:

- Plant your feet firmly on the ground.
- Roll your shoulders back, open your chest and lift your chest up.
- Hold your head up high.
- Put your hands on your hips.
- Do the "Rocky" victory dance, or if you don't know what that is, just act like a winner who has just won the biggest competition of all time.

Own your space in this world and feel proud of who you are right now.

Make yourself feel like THE MAN.

You are the best.

The only and only.

No one compares to you.

Even if you feel a bit self-conscious in the beginning, just give it a shot.

You will be pleasantly surprised at how confident you feel as you do it and for a short while after.

Of course, you can't do that in front of your ex because she'll obviously think you've lost your mind since the break up!

Instead, just do a subtle version of it before calling her and as you are about to meet her in person.

Don't let her see what you're doing of course!

Just be subtle.

For example:

- Lift your chest up.
- Hold your head up a little.
- Walk with confidence.
- Feel like a winner.

The next thing you can do on Day 5 of No Contact is to

6. Contact her, re-attract her and attempt to get a meet up

Believe it or not, it doesn't actually get easier to contact your ex the longer you wait.

Some guys hope that if they wait for 30 or 60 days, all the fear will be gone and they can then confidently contact their ex.

Yet, it just doesn't work like that for most guys.

Rather than feeling confident, a guy will often end up worrying himself into feeling more insecure and unworthy of her than before.

For example: He might think things like, "What if she's not ready to hear from me yet? Maybe if I wait a bit longer she will really start missing me and then she will be happy to hear from me," or "What if I've waited too long already and she tells me that she's already met someone else?" or, "What if she's in the middle of having fun with friends when I call and they quietly make fun of me in the background?" or, "What if she has forgotten about me already?"

Don't do that to yourself.

Remember: As long as you have made some changes to the things that really matter to your ex (e.g. you are so much more emotionally independent now, you're more confident and emotionally strong, you know how to be more emotionally masculine around her to make her feel feminine and girly in your presence), then you are ready to contact her and start the ex back process.

So, just bite the bullet and get her on a phone call with you.

On a phone call, you can re-spark her feelings for you by being very confident and making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking from you again.

The more attracted you make her feel, the more she will be thinking, "What's going on here? He's so different from the way he used to be. I thought he'd be nervous and insecure on the phone with me, but he's so relaxed and confident now. He's making me smile and laugh and I really like talking to him again now. Maybe seeing him again in person might actually be nice."

Note: Make sure that you don't make the mistake of getting caught up in a serious conversation with her where you talk about everything that went wrong in the relationship.

If you allow that to happen, it will usually just bring up the bad memories and make her feel turned off.

Then, when you ask her to meet up with you she will be feeling so many negative emotions already (e.g. anger, disappointment, sadness, resentment) that she will most-likely say, "Sorry, but I don't want to see you again. It's over between us. You need to accept it and move on."

On the other hand, if you maintain your confidence no matter how cold and unfriendly she's being towards you, while at the same time using humor to break down her defenses and make her feel good to be talking you, then she won't be able to resist you for long.

Her feelings of respect and attraction for you will come rushing back, whether she wants them to or not.

Then, when you ask her to catch up in person, she will likely jump at the chance to see you again, or at least be open to it and go along with it to see how she will feel when talking to you in person.

Day 4 of No Contact

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

7 things you should do on Day 4 of No Contact after being dumped by your woman who you want to get back:

1. Prepare yourself to contact her by refreshing your understanding of what it will take to make her feel attracted again

After 4 days of no contact, most guys feel ready to break the silence between them and their ex.

It's okay to contact her at this point, but just make sure that you are fully ready to re-attract her and make her feel drawn to you as you talk to her and interact with her.

It's very important that you prepare yourself to properly re-attract her when you contact her.

You need to be able to attract her in the ways that she really wants.

For example: Sometimes a guy will contact his woman after 4 days of no contact and break the ice by sending her flowers, dropping her an e-mail or text to tell her how sorry he is and how much he missed her, or some other gesture that he hopes she will see as being romantic.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that romance is only enjoyable to a woman if she has feelings for a man (i.e. she respects him, feels attracted to him and is either falling in love with him or is in love with him).

So, rather than be impressed by his romantic gesture, she's more likely to think something like, "I haven't heard from him in 4 days and the first thing he does is to send me flowers/tell me that he misses me! I bet he's hoping that just forget about all the mistakes he made in the relationship, forgive him and give him another chance. Well unfortunately for him, it's going to take more than flowers or an apology to change how I feel about him right now."

She then acts cold towards him or plays very hard to get if he tries to talk to her.

Why?

Remember: Romance is only enjoyable to a woman if she has feelings for a man (i.e. she respects him, feels attracted to him and is either falling in love with him or is in love with him).

So, rather than trying to use an approach (romance) that works when a woman is in love, you've got to use an approach that works on new women.

Literally think of your ex as a new woman that you are going to attract and hook up with.

That's the secret.

Interact with her and make her feel truly attracted to who you are now.

Don't try to sell yourself by telling her how much you've changed.

Let her experience it for herself as she interacts with you.

For example:

- Maintain your confidence if she tries to make you feel insecure when you call her (e.g. by being cold and unfriendly and saying things like, What do you want? Why are you calling me? or by blaming you for everything that happened between you).
- Use humor to make her laugh and smile and change her mood from closed off and cold, to happy and open. Don't make the mistake of trying to impress her by being on your best behavior around her (e.g. being really nice, polite, considerate, patient). Be ballsy and confident and use humor to attract her, even if she pretends as though it's not working. It will work. You just need to back it up with fearless confidence.
- Flirt with her and treat her like a desirable, sexually attractive woman, rather than pretending you don't find her attractive anymore, only want to be nice friends or that you don't want her back at all.
- Feel secure in your masculinity and don't allow her to dominate you with her confident personality.

She will automatically sense the changes in you by listening to how you talk and observing your body language and actions.

Even if she tries to hide it or pretend that she's not feeling it, she will be feeling it.

She will be feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for who you are now.

That's how it is done.

It's easy, natural and quick.

You don't need to buy her flowers, grovel or put yourself at her mercy to re-attract her.

Instead, just let your behavior and actions show her that you've changed and have become a better man since the break up.

Another thing to do on Day 4 of No Contact is to

2. Read through the list of your good qualities and remind yourself that you are a cool guy

[image: Read through your list of good qualities]

Just because she left you, it doesn't mean that you're an unlovable guy.

Don't think of yourself in that way.

If you made a list of all your good qualities (refer to Day 2 of No Contact), you will already know that you're actually a pretty cool guy in many ways.

True?

You are.

Believe it.

BTW: If you haven't made that list yet, make sure you do it now.

Here are some examples of the things you might want to put on your list

- I'm loyal and trustworthy.
- I'm a good friend.

- I'm focused and determined.
- I'm intelligent.
- I have a great job and I'm going places.
- I'm fun and adventurous.
- I get along well with other people.
- I have a great sense of humor.
- I'm generous.
- I can tell a lot about a person as soon as I meet them.
- I'm smart in many ways.
- I'm a great guy.

Nothing is too egotistical or insignificant to put on your list.

Note it all down.

Use it to feel good about yourself.

Remember: You are a good guy and this list is just about reminding you of all those great qualities you might be overlooking about yourself (especially if you still feel bad about the mistakes you made with your ex, or feel hurt that she dumped you and left you behind).

Read through your list and realize that pretty much any woman would be lucky to have a guy like you.

Another thing to do on Day 4 of No Contact isâ

3. Read through the list of her good and bad qualities (that you wrote on Day 2 of No Contact) to remind yourself that she is not perfect

After reading through your list of good qualities, read the list of your ex's bad (and good) qualities that you made earlier. Refer to Day 2 of No Contact.

By doing this, not only will you remind yourself that you are a good guy (even though you stuffed up), but that she's not perfect either.

Again, if you haven't made this list about your ex yet (e.g. because you didn't want to admit to yourself that she made mistakes too, or because you couldn't be bothered), now is the time to do so.

You can make the list on your smartphone, tablet, computer or on a piece of paper.

Whatever works best for you.

For example: A list about your ex might look something like this:

Positives	Negatives
She is a nice person.	She has a bad temper.
She has a good sense of humor.	She parties too much.
She is a good cook.	She doesn't clean up after herself.

She gets along well with my friends.	She spends too much time on social media.
She's beautiful.	She is selfish.

The more that you can see for yourself that she's not perfect, the more you will be able to forgive yourself for the mistakes you made.

You will also feel worthy of being forgiven by her, because you won't feel as though you're the only one who made mistakes in the relationship.

Yes, she dumped you and she doesn't want to hear, "But, you made mistakes too" now and that's fine.

You shouldn't go to her and say something like that.

Instead, you should use the knowledge of her not being perfect as a way to forgive yourself and feel worthy of her again.

That's the reason behind doing this.

It's about you getting back to a point where you are emotionally attractive to her again (i.e. confident, self-assured, happy, emotionally strong), rather than approaching her and turning her off with insecurity, desperation, anger or frustration.

Remember: Successful couples who stay together for life, understand that no one is perfect and that mistakes, arguments and even mini break ups will sometimes happen.

As long as they can forgive each other and if the person who messed up puts in the effort to learn from his (or her) mistakes and become a better person, then the love, respect and attraction between them will grow and deepen over time.

The relationship can then last for a lifetime.

Watch this for more info!

The next step you need to take is to

4. Try to call her and if she doesn't answer, send her a text

If you are ready to contact her by Day 4, then go ahead and do it.

If not, then continue preparing yourself to re-attract her when you do contact her after Day 7 of No Contact.

By the way!

It's always best to talk to your ex on the phone, so you can make her laugh and smile and feel happy to be hearing from you again.

However, that's not always possible.

Sometimes a woman will refuse to answer the phone when she sees that it's her ex who is calling.

So, if your ex is refusing to take your calls, here's an example of what to do to make sure that she will answer her phone the next time you call her:

1. Try to call her at a time when you know she's most likely to be available to answer.
2. If she doesn't answer, send her this text: Hey Laura. I'm trying to get in touch with you to ask you something quick over the phone, but I haven't been able to reach you.

Itâ€™s not serious, but I do need to talk to you on the phone quickly. Iâ€™ll give you a call tonight after work at about 6PM so that we can talk.â€™

3. She might then reply with something along the lines of, â€™Sorry I missed your call â€™ I was busy. What do you want to ask me?â€™ or â€™Iâ€™ve got plans for tonight. Ask me now.â€™

Regardless of how she responds, donâ€™t make the mistake of thinking, â€™Oh good! Sheâ€™s â€™replying!â€™ and then start texting back and forth with her.

No, no, no.

Instead, make sure that youâ€™

5. Get to a phone call

If your ex doesnâ€™t respond to your text at all, just call her at the time you said you would (e.g. 6PM).

In most cases, a woman will be curious about what you want to ask her and will answer her phone.

If she doesnâ€™t answer, don't text her again.

Instead, simply try to call her again after a day or two.

If she still doesnâ€™t answer, then text her a message saying this: â€™Tried calling you the other day at 6PM like I said I would, but couldn't get through! ð I donâ€™t want to be a nag about this, but I really do need to ask you something over the phone. I will try again tonight at the same time. I promise, itâ€™s just a quick call to ask you a simple question. You can hang up the phone if you want to after that.â€™

By this stage, her curiosity will likely get the better of her and she will want to find out what you want to ask her.

She might then send you a message asking, â€™Why donâ€™t you just ask me what you want now?â€™

Whatever you do though, donâ€™t fall into the trap of giving her an explanation via text.

Instead, just text her back and say, â€™What I need to ask is better done over the phone. Iâ€™ll call you at 6.â€™

Then call her at the suggested time andâ€™

6. Re-attract her on the phone call

When you get her on the phone, focus on getting rid of any awkward tension by using some humor to get her smiling, laughing and feeling good to be talking to you again.

For example: Imagine she picks up the phone and says something along the lines of, â€™Okay, Iâ€™ve answered the phone. So what do you want to ask? Make it quick because I have other plans.â€™

Rather than be put off by her cold and unfriendly manner, use it as an opportunity to make her feel attracted instead.

You can do that by maintaining your confidence and saying in a joking way, “Then I guess babysitting my pet Iguana tonight is out of the question then?” and have a laugh with her about that.

Remember: WHAT you say is not as important as HOW you say it.

If you remain calm, confident and relaxed when saying whatever you say, she will naturally feel some respect for you.

Then, when you also make her laugh and feel relaxed to be talking to you again (i.e. because you're not being needy, insecure or nervous on the phone with her), her guard will naturally start to come down.

When that happens!

7. Attempt to get a meet up

[image: Attempt to get a meet up with your ex]

This is the “something quick” that you wanted to ask her.

You want to get her to meet up with you in person.

So, after a bit more lighthearted conversation where you continue re-attracting her (e.g. by using humor to melt her defenses and letting her experience the new, improved version of you), ask her to meet up with you in person.

For example: You can say, “Hey, it's been great talking again. It's good to see that we can still have a laugh together even though we're broken up. Anyway, so what I wanted to ask you this: Let's catch up for a 10 minute coffee to say hello as friends. Of course, it's not about us getting back together. It's just a catch up to say hello. We're mature enough to do that, don't you agree?”

If you've created enough feelings of respect and attraction inside of her during the phone call (i.e. by being confident, using humor), she will likely say “Yes,” and agree to catch up with you.

However, don't be disheartened if she's a bit resistant at first.

Most women usually are resistant to begin with, because they don't want to come across as being too easy, or are afraid of getting hurt again (e.g. you get her to meet up with you, get her back and then dump her after having sex with her again, or after making her fall in love with you again).

Whatever the case, just maintain your confidence and say something along the lines of, “Hey, it's just a quick cup of coffee between two friends. No strings attached. After the meet up, if you decide that you never want to see me again, I promise to respect your wishes and completely leave you alone and never contact you again. So, how about it?”

She will then likely say “Yes,” and you can go ahead and make plans to meet at a time that suits you both.

Note: At the meet up, you need to make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

Don't meet up with her and just have a nice, friendly chat.

No, no, no!

That doesn't work in almost all cases.

You've got to turn on the charm and make her feel very attracted to you.
If you do that, she will naturally begin to open up and you will get her back quite easily.

Day 3 of No Contact

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

In many cases, a guy will be ready to contact his ex woman on the 3rd day of no contact after a break up.

Giving her that amount of space proves the point to her that you're not being needy and desperate.

So, just go ahead and contact her if you feel ready to do so.

This is one of the alternatives to the 30 day No Contact Rule that I provide in this video!

Not every guy will be ready to contact his ex woman after 3 days and that is okay.

If you need a little more time, or if you think she will need it because of how badly you behaved when she broke up with you, then go ahead and wait the full 7 days before contacting her.

In the meantime!

1. Force yourself to be very confident as you talk to people (including women) to remind yourself that you are a cool guy and that people do like you

[image: Force yourself to be very confident when you talk to people]

After a break up, it's very easy for a man to start feeling insecure about himself and his value.

He may even start thinking things like, "I just can't do anything right. No wonder my ex broke up with me. I'm such a loser."

Obviously, that kind of thinking isn't going to help him at all.

Why?

The less belief a guy has in himself, the more unattractive he becomes as a man (to his ex and to people in general).

Remember: While confidence and self-belief is automatically attractive to women, insecurity and self-doubt has the opposite effect.

So, if you interact with your ex and in the back of your mind you're thinking things like, "I don't deserve her," or "What if she doesn't want to talk to me again?" or "What if she's already found another guy who is better than me?" she will pick up on your lack of confidence and it will turn her off.

For example: She will hear the nervousness in your voice, notice your uncomfortable body language, hear it in the questions you ask and sense it based on your vibe.

Rather than make her think, "Oh, my poor ex! He's taken our break up so hard. What can I do to convince him that he's actually not such a bad guy after all?" a woman will usually think, "Phew! I made the right decision to break up with him. He's just not the guy for me. He's too much of an emotional wimp."

Your confidence is so important right now.

This is why it's so important to actually force yourself to be confident when you talk to other people from now on.

You've got to use every opportunity to remind yourself that you actually are a cool guy that other people like.

People will automatically like you when they sense your high self-esteem and confidence, so just go ahead and interact with people to get that feedback.

Let them show you that you really are a cool, valuable guy.

Yes, you made some mistakes, but it doesn't mean you're a bad person or that you should put yourself down from now on.

Everyone makes mistakes, not just you.

The difference between a winner and a loser is that a winner doesn't allow a mistake to define him and take away his self-belief.

He just learns from the mistake and becomes an even greater man than before, which gives him even more self-belief.

So, make sure that you don't allow the mistakes you made in the relationship to erode your belief in your value as a man.

Of course, you might be thinking, "I don't know how to be confident. I just feel so bad after what happened with my ex. It's a feeling I can't seem to get rid of. When I interact with other people (and women in particular) I can't stop myself from thinking that they won't like me. What can I do? How can I change that?"

To begin with, understand that confidence is something that is self-built and self-maintained.

Very few guys are born confident and always feel comfortable around women, or even other people for their entire life.

In fact, most guys start off feeling just as nervous and insecure as everyone else.

The difference between a guy who is confident and one who struggles to feel comfortable around women comes down to one simple thing: practice.

A guy who is confident around women in particular and people in general and somehow always seems to know what to say and do, has spent a lot of time practicing to be confident.

What does that mean?

For your confidence to grow, you must work on it daily until it becomes a habit that happens naturally and automatically.

It needs to be so natural and automatic for you to feel confident, that you don't even have to think about it anymore.

That's when you have natural, easy and consistent confidence.

Here are some ways to make yourself feel more confident when talking to other people and other women:

- Stand tall, smile, hold your head up high and maintain eye contact (without staring).
- Think positively.

Rather than allow yourself to dwell on the mistakes you made with your ex, focus on some of the good things that people automatically like about you (e.g. youâ€¢re a man of your word, you treat everyone with respect, you have a great sense of humor, you're intelligent).

- Notice of your self-talk.

For example: â€¢I canâ€¢t do this,â€¢ â€¢What if these people donâ€¢t like me?â€¢ â€¢What if I say the wrong thing and everyone laughs at me?â€¢ and make sure that it's positive, rather than negative.

Remember: The thoughts you have about yourself and what youâ€¢re doing will either make you feel better or worse about yourself.

Your thoughts will either make you more emotionally attractive to your ex and others, or they will make you seem awkward, strange and uncomfortable around others.

If you have negative thoughts running through your mind, you will likely stumble over your words due to nervousness, say something embarrassing that you later regret, or worse, avoid talking to other people altogether.

- Set a small social goal and achieve it.

The next time you go out with friends, make the effort to meet and talk to two new people.

This is important if the break up has caused you to lose social confidence, or feel like you have to avoid social situations because it's too stressful or emotionally taxing on you.

If you want your ex back, you need to be stronger than that.

Don't expect her to want you back if she can sense that you've become emotionally weaker since the break up.

Emotional strength is what attracts women to men, not emotional weakness.

So, force yourself to interact with other people and exude the kind of social confidence that automatically makes people feel drawn to you.

Not only will your relationships with other people become a lot more fun and rewarding, but you will also be much more attractive to your ex when you interact with her again.

The next thing you can do on Day 3 of No Contact isâ€¢!

2. Have another read through the list of her good and bad qualities that you made on Day 2 of No Contact

[image: Positives and negatives about your ex]

If you havenâ€¢t already made a list of some of your exâ€¢s bad qualities (you probably havenâ€¢t stopped thinking about her good qualities, right?), then do it now.

Even if she was a truly wonderful person who loved and adored you, there must be something about her that annoyed you in some way.

For example: A list of an ex woman's bad qualities might look something like this:

- She didnâ€¢t know how to cook.

- She was untidy.
- She didn't like the same music as me.
- She lied fairly often and enjoyed it.
- She wasn't very loving or affectionate.
- She cared about her friends more than me.
- She always put her career first and didn't give much or any time to me.
- She was too clingy, needy or jealous.
- She didn't seem very loyal.
- She always forgot to put the cap back on the toothpaste, which I found disgusting.
- She didn't get along well with my friends.
- She never contributed to our household expenses and expected me to pay for everything all the time.
- She enjoyed causing drama and getting into an argument over nothing.
- She didn't take care of her physical appearance, but expected me to continue to find her as sexy as I once did.

Creating a list like that isn't about making your ex out to be a bad person.

It's simply a way of putting your relationship with her into a more balanced perspective, to avoid idolizing her and remembering her as being way better and more valuable than you.

You are good enough because she, like everyone else in this world, is not perfect.

3. Do an outdoor activity with friends

[image: Do an outdoor activity with friends]

I know, I know.

You probably don't want to do anything like that right now and just want her back in your arms.

I understand.

However, it's important for your emotional attractiveness that you push yourself to feel happy without her.

It's not about moving on and leaving her behind.

[image: Do an outdoor activity with friends]

Instead, it's about making yourself feel happy by doing things with other people.

Unfortunately, one of the most common reactions from a guy who gets dumped by his woman is to cut off all communication with his friends and isolate himself at home.

He may think something like, "If I'm out having fun and my ex tries to call me and I don't hear my phone ring, she might get upset that I'm having fun without her. She might even think that I'm looking for another girlfriend and that may cause her to get angry and decide to move on too. I can't take that risk! I need to be alone and just wait by the phone to show her that I'm serious about getting her back."

Yet, that's the worst thing that a guy can do because it looks needy and will cause him to become needy (i.e. he needs her to contact him to feel okay about himself again).

The more you put your life on hold during this period of No Contact, the more emotionally dependent you will appear to your ex when you finally interact with her again.

Rather than feeling impressed by the fact that all you've been doing is waiting around to get her back, she will question whether or not she wants to get back with a guy who has no other important purpose in life other than her.

If she is very young (i.e. in her teens), she might like that her ex guy is lost without her.

Yet, if she is a woman between 20-60, she's going to be completely turned off by the fact that her man is acting like a teenage boy.

Note: This site is for men 18-60. It's not for young teens.

So, if you want your ex woman to feel some respect and attraction for you, make sure that you're not sitting around at home alone hoping to impress her by showing her that you're lost and lonely without her.

Women aren't impressed with that boyish approach to life.

So, force yourself to get out and spend some time with friends.

For example: Play a sport of some kind, go for a walk, go to the beach, or go for a drive somewhere nice to chill out, swim in a lake, go bike riding, toss a Frisbee, punch and kick punching bags or go for a run together.

Doing outdoor activities can help you avoid constantly thinking about your ex and wondering who she's with and what she's doing.

It can also give you a chance to catch up with old friends and hobbies that you may have neglected during your relationship.

When you feel genuinely content in your life without your ex, you will also automatically become more attractive to her and other women.

Why?

Women are attracted to men who are emotionally independent (i.e. they don't need a woman to be nice to them or support them emotionally to feel good about themselves).

Men who are happy, confident and forward moving in life with or without the support and encouragement of women, always attract the highest quality women.

So, make sure that you don't give your ex the impression that you need her to be nice to you and show you interest, so you can then feel good about yourself.

Another thing you can do on Day 3 of No Contact is

4. Make a list of all of your good qualities and use that to feel worthy of your ex

[image: Make a list of your positive qualities to feel worthy of your ex]

For example:

- You are honest and trustworthy.
- You always keep your word.

- You have a great sense of humor.
- You are intelligent.
- You are driven and determined.
- You have big goals and dreams in life that youâ€™re actively working towards.
- You get on well with her friends and family.
- You have a good job, or are working towards having a better job.
- You know how to make a woman feel loved and appreciated.
- Youâ€™re a man who takes action and finds solutions to his problems (e.g. at the moment youâ€™re busy working on improving yourself to get her back, rather than sitting around feeling sorry for yourself).

By creating a list like that, it helps you realize that you really do have a lot to offer your ex.

Note: Don't try to sell yourself to her by listing off your good qualities!

No, no, no!

That's not how to re-attract her.

You just need to focus on a list of your good qualities, so you can then attract her with your confidence.

Another thing you can do on Day 3 of No Contact isâ€¦!

5. Do some power poses with your body language to feel good about yourself

Research conducted by various universities (including Harvard University, The University of Oregon, The University of Texas and many others) has concluded that the main thing that confident, charismatic people have in common is not only a similar mindset, but also similar hormone levels.

More specifically, these people tend to have higher levels of testosterone and lower levels of cortisol.

As a result, both men and women with higher levels of testosterone tend to feel more confident than people with lower levels.

At the same time, lower levels of cortisol lead to decreased feelings of anxiety, nervousness and insecurity and a better ability to cope with stress.

â€œSo, what has this got to do with doing power poses?â€ you may ask.

Quite a lot actually.

As it turns out, something that directly impacts these two hormone levels is body language.

In other words, the way you stand, hold your arms or fold your legs and move, makes a big difference to how you feel.

You can literally increase the amount of testosterone that is flowing through your veins by changing your body language.

If you're doing it right, your cortisol will also decrease and you will suddenly start feeling a lot more confident and self-assured.

Here are two power poses that workâ€¦!

1. Stand up, raise your arms and stretch them out like you've just won something. Feel the emotion of being a winner. You've won. You're the best.
2. Stand with your feet apart in a confident, alpha way and clench your fists with your hands on either side of your body. You are a powerful man. You rule the world. You are invincible.

Do you notice the change in how you feel?

It works.

Of course, just doing a power pose right now isn't what will make you feel confident around your ex when you and her next interact.

However, add the power poses to all of the other things you're doing and soon enough, you will begin to think, talk, walk and behave in a much more confident way.

You won't have to pretend to be 100% confident and self-approving anymore, because it will be real for you.

As a result, your ex will automatically feel respect and attraction for you when you interact with her. Her change in feelings towards you will be what convinces her to open up and give you another chance.

Day 2 of No Contact

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 things that you should aim to do on Day 2 of No Contact:

1. Come up with a list of her good and bad qualities

[image: Positives and negatives about your ex]

Only two days after breaking up, a guy will often be thinking of his ex as though she's the most wonderful, perfect woman in the world.

Rather than remember that she made some mistakes too (e.g. she lied sometimes, she liked to cause drama for no reason, she was easily influenced by her friends and family, she was a bit lazy, she was selfish), he focuses about her great qualities and feels sad about missing out on being with such a great girl.

He might then make the mistake of texting her to tell her how he feels, or seeming hurt and lost without her if he talks to her on the phone or in person.

It doesn't help your chances of getting her back, so I highly recommend that you don't fall into the trap of idolizing your ex and only focusing on the good things about her.

Yes, she definitely has some great qualities (e.g. she is beautiful, you and her had amazing sex, she is a kind person, she gets on well with your family and friends, she is unique and special).

However, she must also have some bad qualities, right?

I know, it's not easy to think about that only two days after being dumped by the love of your life, but you have to.

This is about you regaining control of your emotions and making sure that when you interact with her, you don't come across as needy, desperate or insecure in any way.

So, start by making a list of Pros and Cons (Positives and Negatives) about her.

Try to focus on her bad qualities as much as possible, to help you realize that she isn't way more valuable than you and isn't completely, 100% perfect.

Of course, no woman is 100% perfect, but that's not the point.

You need to focus on the negatives about her to help you avoid idolizing her in your mind.

For example: Here are some questions you can ask yourself to come up with the list of positive and negative qualities:

- Is she a fully trustworthy woman, or did she often break her word to you or give you reasons to doubt her?
- Did she have habits that seemed cute at first, but then started to get on your nerves (e.g. She likes to keep the house clean, but it became obsessive after a while. She loves to update her social media pages all the time, even when you and her are supposed to be hanging out and spending time together. She always misplaces the TV remote. She is clumsy or forgetful. She snores when she sleeps)?

- Did she always treat you with respect, or was she often disrespectful or rude towards you?
- Did she always make you feel like you were her man, or did she sometimes play mind games to make you doubt your place in her life and in her heart?
- Did you and her want the same things in the relationship, or were you very different (e.g. you wanted to settle down and be serious with each other, but she still wanted to go out and party with her single friends)?
- Did she pull her weight in the relationship (e.g. pay her share, do some or most of the housework, meet you half way with things), or did she lean on you too much and take you for granted?
- Did she make you feel like a priority in her life, or did she put friends, family or coworkers in front of you (in terms of importance) all the time?

While reading through the list above, you most likely found some positive and negative qualities that relate to your ex, right?

Good.

Just make sure that you focus on the negatives, rather than clinging onto the positives.

When you switch your focus away from all the positives about her, you will likely realize that she had her faults too.

You weren't perfect in the relationship, but neither was she.

By focusing on her bad qualities, you won't get stuck thinking about the good old days and reimagining everything as being perfect.

Don't get me wrong though!

I'm not suggesting that you focus on the negatives and then decide not to get back with her.

Not at all.

My aim here is for you to get her back.

You can get her back and you can enjoy an even better relationship with her this time around.

However, part of getting her back is getting rid of your neediness of her.

You need to ensure that you aren't idolizing her in your mind and making her out to be a perfect little snowflake who could never do anything wrong.

Look at her positive qualities, but focus on the negatives so you don't end up making yourself feel unworthy of her.

You are worthy of her.

You can get her back.

The next thing to do on Day 2 of No Contact is!

2. Continue learning about how to re-attract her

As discussed in Day 1 of No Contact, you need to get a clear idea on your ex's reasons for breaking up with you and then focus on improving those things about yourself, so you can properly re-attract her.

Unfortunately, when a guy focuses on his past mistakes, he might begin doubting himself and feeling unworthy of his ex.

For example: He might start thinking, â€œIâ€™ve really messed things up with her. I just donâ€™t know if Iâ€™m good enough for her anymore. I made so many mistakes. Maybe I have to accept that itâ€™s really over between us. Maybe she has higher standards now, which I just wonâ€™t be able to live up to.â€

Not knowing what else to do, he might decide to improve his physical appearance (e.g. go to the gym and build some muscle, get a new wardrobe of clothes, change his hairstyle) to hopefully impress her and trigger her feelings of attraction for him again.

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Most women are more attracted to a manâ€™s ability to attract them emotionally during a conversation and interaction, than they are to big muscles, looks or expensive clothes.

A womanâ€™s emotional attraction to a guy is mostly based on how he makes her feel when sheâ€™s interacting with him, not on the more superficial things such as his appearance or what heâ€™s wearing.

Of course, some women are very impressed by a manâ€™s appearance, money and social status.

However, when it comes to relationships, most women fall in love and stay in love with a guy based on how he makes her feel by the way he interacts with her, the way he behaves around her and the way he thinks and takes action in life.

So, donâ€™t make the mistake of focusing on superficial things (e.g. your appearance) as your main way of re-attracting her.

Here are some questions that will help you understand how to re-attract her in the ways that countâ€¦!

- Do I make my ex feel like a real woman when Iâ€™m around her (e.g. does she feel feminine, girly and sexually desirable), or do I make her feel emotionally more dominant than me because Iâ€™m too insecure, self-doubting and lack confidence in my value to her?
- Am I the kind of guy that she can look up to and respect, or does she feel like Iâ€™m not living up to my full potential as a man (e.g. because Iâ€™m not moving through the levels of life, Iâ€™m too irresponsible, Iâ€™m lost and donâ€™t know what my purpose is)?
- Do I have the confidence to make her smile, laugh and enjoy being around me (especially when she tests me by throwing a tantrum over nothing), or do I crumble and give in to her demands at the first sign of drama from her?
- Do I have a plan for my life (and by association hers) that Iâ€™m actively pursuing, or am I just drifting through life and hoping for the best.
- Do I believe in my value and attractiveness to her, or do I think sheâ€™s too good for me?
- Is my relationship intelligence at the same level as hers, or do I still need to learn a fair bit about what it takes to maintain a relationship and keep it together for life?

If you want her to feel the desire to get back into a relationship with you, itâ€™s essential that you are prepared to make her feel as though you are ready for it.

Itâ€™s not about explaining to her that you are ready.

No.

That doesnâ€™t work in almost all cases.

What you've got to do is make her feel as though you are ready.

She will feel that way if she can sense the changes in you as she interacts with you.

For example: She notices that you are much more confident around her now, you are more emotionally independent and can make her smile and laugh when she is trying to be cold and bitchy.

When that happens, she naturally opens back up to you and wants to give you another chance.

On the other hand, if you try to get her back by offering her the wrong things (e.g. changing your physical appearance, buying her expensive gifts, promising to do whatever she wants, being nicer, trying to suck up to her, trying to explain to her that you've changed), you will just turn her off even more.

Her guard will go up and she will think something like, â€œHe still doesn't get it. He just doesn't know what I, or other women, want in a man. He's not ready for a woman like me.â€

If she's like most women, she will then focus on getting over you and moving on as quickly as she can.

3. Get outside and clear your mind

[image: Get outside and clear your mind]

Right now, the idea of getting out and doing anything fun without your ex might seem impossible, or just like something you don't want to do.

You want to spend time with her and not be on your own anymore.

I understand.

However, it's very important that you don't sit around at home worrying and feeling down about what has happened between you and her.

If you stay home, you will most likely begin to focus on the possible reasons why you might not be able to get her back (e.g. she seems totally fine about the break up, she will enjoy being single, she's too beautiful for you, you're not financially stable enough to give her what she really wants, you live too far apart, you made too many mistakes in the relationship).

That kind of thinking will make you needy and insecure, which isn't going to be attractive to her.

For example: If she interacts with you and senses that you need her back to feel better about yourself again, or that you lack confidence in yourself and in your value to her, she will feel turned off by your neediness and insecurity.

So, if you want to get her back, you first have to get yourself to the point where you accept that you did make some mistakes, but that doesn't mean you can't be forgiven and be loved even more deeply the second time around with her.

You can.

You can make her love you, respect you and feel more attracted to you than she ever did before.

You can level up as a man (in terms of your ability to be attractive to her) and let her experience that.

You can improve your ability to keep a relationship together and deepen a woman's feelings over time.

When you do those things, she will naturally feel a deeper respect, attraction and love as you are getting back together and remain together from then on.

So, how can you do it?

If you haven't done so already, go ahead and push yourself to go outside and clear your mind.

Head to the beach, park or nature reserve alone or with a friend.

Just walk and breathe in the fresh air.

Focus on the fact that you are already becoming a better man by ensuring that you aren't needy of her.

You're not the sort of guy who is panicking and feeling lost and lonely without his ex woman.

You want her back, but you are starting to feel fine without her.

This is a good thing.

It's going to make you appear so much more attractive to her when you interact with her.

So, get outside and clear your mind.

Feel good about life, even though she isn't a part of it at the moment.

Another thing you need to do on Day 2 of No Contact is to

4. Focus on building a strong belief in your value and attractiveness to her

[image: Focus on building a strong belief in your value and attractiveness to her]

A break up can really put a dent in a guy's self-confidence and belief in himself.

Even though he might be a successful guy in many ways (e.g. he has a good job and make lots of money, lives in a nice apartment or house, is responsible, is kind and generous, has friends who love him), he can still fall into the trap of feeling unworthy of his ex woman.

Then, when she finally interacts with him again (e.g. over the phone or in person), his lack of confidence will come across in how he talks to her and behaves around her.

She will get the sense that he doesn't believe he is good enough for her anymore, which will turn her off even further.

Women aren't attracted to guys who don't feel worthy of them.

Women are attracted to guys with high self esteem, confidence and self-assuredness.

That's not about being obnoxious or arrogant.

Instead, it's about having a calm, confident and unwavering belief in yourself.

Women want that in a man.

So, make sure that you use Day 2 of No Contact to build up your confidence and belief in yourself and your worthiness of her.

How?

To begin with, decide that you are a valuable, amazing, unique man who so many women would be lucky to be with.

You're a good guy.

You really are.

Sure, you made some mistakes in the relationship, but that doesn't take away from all the other great qualities you possess as a man.

For example: You might have made the mistake of allowing her to dominate you emotionally, but you're also a loving and caring man, which is much better than you being a hateful, selfish man.

You might have been jealous and controlling, but you're also dependable and a go-getter in life, which is much better than you being unreliable and lazy.

So, focus on the good things about yourself to boost your feelings of self-belief and self-worth.

The more you believe in yourself and in your value as a man, the more your ex will believe it too.

Why?

Well, have you ever interacted with a person who had high self-esteem and belief in him or herself?

What happened?

You most likely believed that they deserved to have that level of self-esteem and believe in themselves.

You looked at that person as being someone special.

That's what happens when you exude confidence and high self-esteem in this world.

Most people look at you and just accept that you are one of the special ones who are a little better than everyone else.

It's a natural instinct of which also applies to your ex's feelings and perception of you.

When you interact with your ex, she will sense your calm, confident and unwavering belief in yourself.

She will instinctively begin to question why you have such belief in yourself and if she's like 99% of the women on this planet, her feelings will cause her to decide that it's because you ARE good enough for her.

It might sound too good to be true to you now, but just let her sense that type of confidence in you and see what happens.

Another thing to do on Day 2 of No Contact isâ

5. Try to relax your mind to regain control of your emotions

If you don't keep a cool head at this very crucial time, you give in to the urge to contact your ex before you are fully ready to re-attract her.

You might then make a silly mistake like drinking a little too much alcohol and text or call her at 2AM to beg for her forgiveness, or to say things like, âI still love you. Why are you doing this to me? Please take me back! I can't live without you.â

Alternatively, you might stick to your guns about not contacting her, only to constantly find yourself looking at your phone to see if she has texted you and wondering things like, âIs she missing me as much as I'm missing her, or has she already found another guy to replace me with? What if she doesn't want to get back with me? What if not contacting her doesn't work? â

Don't do that to yourself.

You have to be stronger than that.

Remember: Women are attracted to emotional strength in men, not weakness.

So, this isn't a time for you to be displaying emotional weakness of any kind.

If you want to regain your ex's respect, attraction and love, you must regain control over your emotions by relaxing your mind and preparing to re-attract her, before you interact with her again.

One example of how you can do that is by practicing a very simple breathing technique (used by the police and military to help calm the mind and counteract the effects of adrenaline during critical situations) called tactical breathing.

Here's how you do it:

- Inhale through your nose, deeply, expanding your stomach for a count of four.
- Hold that breath in for a count of four.
- Slowly exhale through your mouth, completely, for a count of four.
- Hold your breath, with your lungs empty, for a count of four.
- Repeat the cycle, by starting again with an in-breath to the count of four.

Do this for a minute or two and you will notice yourself feeling calm and relaxed.

You will be regaining control of your emotions and preparing to re-attract her by displaying emotional strength, rather than weakness.

Day 1 of No Contact

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

This is a guide on how to get your ex back within 7 days or less.

I don't recommend that you wait longer than 7 days to contact your ex because if you do, most women simply move on.

I hear from guys all day, every day and most of them have tried ignoring their ex for 30 to 60 days and lost her.

So, I recommend that you follow this 7 day guide and get her back quickly, before you lose your chance with her.

- Day 7 of No Contact

On Day 1 of No Contact, here are the 5 things you should do:

1. Come up with a clear list of reasons why she broke up with you

The first step you need to take is to understand the real reasons why your woman broke up with you.

Some guys may wonder, â€œDoesn't every guy know already why he really got dumped?â€

Interestingly enough, the answer is often, â€œNo.â€

[image: Get clear on her real reasons for breaking up with you]

Some guys know exactly why they got broken up with (e.g. he cheated on her, he was abusive towards her, he was a habitual liar).

Yet, in a lot of cases, a guy doesn't have a clear understanding of his woman's real reasons for wanting out of the relationship.

Why?

The woman doesn't want to tell him her actual reasons because he will then promise to change those things about himself if she just gives him another chance.

So, a woman might break up with a guy by saying something along the lines of, â€œYou're a really great guy and all, but I just don't want to be together right now. I'm really confused about my life at the moment and I need some space to figure things out,â€ or â€œI'm tired trying to make our relationship. It's just too stressful. I think it's better if we break up for now.â€

Neither of those reasons give a guy a clear understanding of what he's been doing wrong.

Women do that on purpose, so a guy can't convince her to give him another chance based on that, or quickly change and improve what she wants, show her the changes and ask for another chance.

In most cases, a woman wants a man to feel confused and not know how to get her back, so she can then move on and get on with her life without him.

After all, she's most likely given him plenty of chances to improve already and he hasn't ever been able to level up and become the kind of man she really wants.

So, now that she is breaking up with him, she doesn't want to explain how he can get her back.

This is why it's very important that you use the first day of No Contact to figure out your ex's real reasons for leaving, rather than wasting time feeling confused about the vague excuses she may have given you (e.g. "You're a great guy, but I just don't want to be in a relationship right now.")

If you're not sure where to start, here are some questions that will help you uncover the deeper reasons why your woman may have decided to end the relationship!

- Were you the more dominant one in the relationship, or did you let her get away with bad behavior and be disrespectful towards you?
- Were you loving, attentive and caring, or did you regularly hurt her feelings and not really care how she felt?
- Did you make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman in your presence, or did you treat her more like a neutral friend (e.g. you and her ended up hanging out like buddies)?
- Did you maintain your confidence when she tried to upset you by throwing a tantrum or creating drama, or did you lose your composure, get angry or sulk?
- Did you have a long term plan for your life and were you motivated, focused and active in pursuing that plan, or did you behave more like a young guy in the relationship (e.g. immature, didn't take responsibility for your life, spent more time watching TV or playing video games than focusing on your future)?
- Did you believe in yourself and your value to her, or did you end up feeling like you weren't good enough for her?
- Did you feel secure in your masculinity and feel confident that she only wanted to be with you, or were you always worried that she might dump you if another guy came along? As a result, did you end up becoming a jealous and controlling boyfriend, or husband?
- Were you only dominant at home with her in private, but then submissive or nervous when around other men or very confident people?
- Did you focus on building on her feelings of love, respect and attraction for you over time, or did you just assume that because you both loved each other at the start, the relationship would last for life?
- Was the attraction between you mutual, or did you always seem to feel more attracted to her than she felt for you?
- Were you not very attracted to her at the start, but she then grew on you over time and knew it? Did she then dump you to try and get you to feel like you really needed her?

Did any of those reasons apply to your relationship?

If so, then you are off to a great start on the path to getting her back within 7 days.

Why?

It's absolutely essential that you know WHAT to fix, so you can then focus on learning HOW to fix it.

I will help you fix, improve and change yourself to be attractive to your ex as you go through this 7 day guide.

You can do it.

Stay focused and you WILL get her back.

The next thing you should do on Day 1 of No Contact isâ€¦|

2. Start working on improving those things about yourself

[image: Start working on improving those things about yourself]

For example: If you realized that you were too neutral around her and treated her more like a buddy than a sexy, desirable woman, don't make that same mistake when you interact with her now.

You have to go from being Mr. Friendly and Neutral, to Mr. Sexually Confident and Charismatic.

If you do that, she will notice the difference, it will feel amazing to her and she will feel compelled to open up to you a little more to explore those new feelings.

That is how it works.

Yet, a lot of guys don't understand that.

Many guys assume that when interacting with an ex girl, they need to be on their best behavior to impress her (e.g. be extra sweet and nice to her, pretend he's not interested in her sexually anymore, be extra considerate and generous).

Yet, that's the worst thing that a guy can do if one of her main reasons for breaking up with him was that she didn't feel like a feminine, girly woman in his presence.

She wanted him to man up and be more masculine in his behavior and energy, but all he continues to offer her is nice, sweet, neutral feelings.

That's not going to cut it.

To show his ex that he has understood where he went wrong (i.e. he stopped making her feel like a real woman), he needs to actively make her feel attracted to the new and improved version of him.

One of the best ways to start doing that is by flirting with her in a confident, masculine way.

For example: He's talking to her on the phone and they are having a laugh and getting along. He then says the followingâ€¦|

Him: I'm hungry.

Her: Well, eat then.

Him: Get your butt over here and cook for me.

Her: [Most likely laughing that he now has the balls to say something like that to her].

Him: Make me your macaroni and cheese. You do a good job of that.

Her: You make it yourself.

Him: [Laughs] What's sort of woman are you? You can't even make macaroni and cheese. You're hopeless. [Laughs again].

Essentially, he's just joking around with her and letting her see that he has the balls to say risky things because he knows that it's only flirting.

If she is a typical woman, she will most likely try to test his confidence by pretending to get angry at what he said.

If she does, he simply needs to laugh and say, "Relax girl! you need to lighten up. You're too serious about things" and then laugh at her.

In other words, he doesn't buckle under pressure.

He doesn't fail her test of his confidence.

He shows her that he has bigger balls now, which is what she wanted from him all along.

Best of all, he's doing it by flirting with her, which is the preferred method of communication for women when they are talking to men that they have a romantic interest in.

Flirting allows an ex woman to feel attracted and to show subtle signs of interest, without worrying that it means she is agreeing to get back with you.

Yet, when she feels attracted in response to your confident, masculine flirting, she automatically begins to want you back.

She suddenly stops focusing on how she felt before (e.g. turned off, no longer in love with you) and begins to focus more on how she feels now (e.g. attracted, excited, happy, in love again).

She can then think something like, "Maybe it's not hopeless after all. Maybe we can make this work." and open herself up to getting back together with you for real.

The next step to take on Day 1 of No Contact is

3. Focus on calming down and regaining control of your emotions

[image: Focus on calming down and regaining control of your emotions]

Let's face it!

You're most likely feeling pretty hurt about the break up now, right?

It sucks.

Yet, when you're feeling that way, it's very easy to say and do the wrong things around her.

So, regaining control of your emotions is a very important step that you shouldn't brush over.

Watch this video for more info!

Regaining control of your emotions is important because your emotional state (i.e. confident or insecure) is either going to be attracting your ex back to you or turning her off even further.

So, don't brush over this part.

It's important.

Some guys do brush it over (e.g. because they will be able to hide their pain and won't say or do anything to mess things up), only to then say and do things that turn their ex girl off even more.

For example: When a guy has just been dumped, he might be feeling shocked, angry, desperate, or stunned by the news.

He might react in a way that's uncharacteristic of him (e.g. insult her or call her names, beg, plead and cry, demand that she give him another chance, get violent with her or other people, send her loads of desperate, frantic texts).

In most cases, the guy is a good guy and is simply acting out of character, but his ex usually won't see it that way.

Instead, his behavior can cause her to think something like, "If this is how he's reacting to being broken up with, I wonder how he would have behaved if I stayed with him and things got tough in our relationship? I'm glad that I am finding this out about him now and can see his real character. If I had any doubts about breaking up with him before, I don't have any now. I have to get away from him and not look back. He's not a real man and he's not capable of handling a woman like me. I have to move on. He isn't man enough for me."

That's not how you want to make your newly ex woman feel.

So, if you're feeling upset about the break up, it's best that you use Day 1 of No Contact to calm down and regain control of your emotions before you attempt to contact her again.

Once you're feeling more relaxed, the next step you need to take is to

4. Start learning how to re-attract her

[image: Start learning how to re-attract her]

When a guy breaks up with his woman, he will often be given advice from friends and family on how to handle it.

For example:

Some well-meaning friends might say things like, "Forget about her. You don't need her. There's plenty of fish in the sea. Just move on and find yourself another girl."

Others might say, "Ignore her for 21, 30 or 60 days and she will come running back to you."

A mother, sister or female friend might say, "Send flowers and apologize to her. I'm sure she will forgive you," or "Write her a letter and tell her how you feel about her. Apologize and tell her that you are willing to work things out."

Although everyone's intentions are likely good and they are only trying to help, following through on that kind of advice just doesn't work in most cases.

What does work?

Interacting with her and actively making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

I recommend that you make her feel that way AFTER you have given her 3 to 7 days of space.

In the meantime, you need to focus on learning what to say and do to re-attract her when you interact with her after giving her some space.

So, at this point, you either need to get help from other men in your life (e.g. a father, grandfather, brother, uncle, friend, co-worker), or if you want to avoid making mistakes that might turn her off even more, seek professional help (from me) on how to re-attract her.

Here's a free video to help you get started

Once youâve started learning the right ways to re-attract her, you need toâ

5. Get some rest, knowing that you are preparing to successfully get her back

[image: Get some rest]

A break up can definitely occupy a great deal of your time, thinking and emotional energy.

It can be stressful and cause you to stop eating and sleeping properly.

It's not a nice feeling at all, true?

I understand.

However, if you want to get her back, you must get past the initial shock, stress and panic of being dumped by her.

One way to do that is to understand that you ARE going to get her back.

You are currently learning what you need to do to get her back and you are learning about re-attracting her.

It is going to work.

I know that because I hear back from 100s of guys per day now (via this site, on social media, via e-mail) who tell me that it has worked for them.

So, don't worry.

Everything is going to be okay.

Relax and know that you are on the right path now.

You will get her back because you are going to preparing to properly re-attract her and make her feel like she is in love with you again.

That is what works.

So, after you spend some time learning about how to attract her again, try to use some of your remaining time to rest and do things that you enjoy.

For example:

- Take a long, relaxing walk in the park or around your neighborhood.
- Go to the gym and have a great workout.
- Go to a movie with some friends.
- Play some video games.
- Cook up one of your favorite meals while listening to your favorite music (don't listen to sad love songs!).

The more relaxed and in control you feel, the more it will come across when you finally contact your ex.

She will hear the confidence and self-assuredness in your voice and she will see it in your body language.

As a result, she will naturally and automatically feel a surge of respect for you for being man enough to handle the break up in such a mature and emotionally strong way.

Feeling respect and attraction causes her guard to come down a little bit, which then allows her to access deeper feelings of romantic and sexual attraction for you again.

When that happens, she naturally starts to feel like she loves you again and wants to be with you.

As a result, getting back together starts to feel like something she really wants to do.

2 Common Mistakes to Avoid Making on Day 1 of No Contact

There's no point in doing all the good work mentioned above, if you then sabotage your progress with her by making some or all of the following mistakes:

1. Worrying that it's over forever or that you have absolutely no chance of getting her back

Without a doubt, Day 1 of No Contact after a break up can be one of the most stressful, emotionally painful days in a man's life.

A guy can drive himself crazy thinking about what happened, how he stuffed up and what his chances of getting his ex to give him another chance really are.

Unfortunately, if you don't gain control over your mind and your emotions very quickly, it's possible that you may start thinking things like, What if she doesn't forgive me? What if she never wants to talk to me again? What if she decides that it really is over and I lose her forever?

Although these may seem like valid questions to you, it's only going to make you feel more stressed and worried.

It can also get you into a frame of mind that will turn your ex off if you happen to talk to her or interact with her.

For example: If you don't believe that you deserve to get a second chance with your ex, why should she?

Women don't want to be with a guy who feels unworthy.

A woman wants a man who knows that he is good enough for her and who also knows how to make her feel the kind of respect and attraction she really wants.

So, you have to believe in yourself and you have to focus on improving your ability to make her feel attracted.

That is what really counts.

The less you believe in yourself, the more it will come across in your body language and in the tone of your voice when you interact with her.

She will pick up on it and feel turned off by your lack of belief in yourself and your cluelessness about how to make her feel sexually and romantically attracted again.

So, don't rush to interact with her now if you aren't thinking straight and have somehow convinced yourself that you're not good enough for her.

You are good enough for her.

To make sure that she feels that when you interact with her, I recommend that you quickly level up your ability to make her feel sexual and romantic attraction during interactions.

For example: If you lost a lot of confidence near the end of the relationship and it really turned her off, you need to level that back up and beyond where it used to be.

Don't worry it's easy to do.

Confidence is under your control and is based on how you think.

Your thoughts create your feelings, so if you get your thoughts right, the feelings will naturally follow.

So, stop worrying and start believing in yourself!

You can get her back.

That's a fact.

Believe it!

Do you?

You'd better.

Believing that you can get her back and that you do deserve another chance is so important.

So, believe in yourself!

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Worrying that she might go and hook up with another guy immediately

There's no guarantee that she will remain faithful for even a minute after breaking up with you.

In many cases, it can happen very quickly if she has another guy lined up and waiting (e.g. a guy from work, a guy she met recently while out partying), or if she has a lot of single girlfriends who want to take her out and get her to meet new guys.

Some women do move on very quickly, whereas other women wait until they feel ready to get out there and start dating again, which is usually anywhere from a week to a month.

No guarantees though.

Her hooking up with a new guy could happen today, tomorrow or two months from now.

It's possible.

However, worrying about it isn't going to stop her from doing it.

Instead, it's probably just going to drive you crazy and make you react in ways that could push your ex into another guy's arms even faster than she intended (e.g. you text her in a needy, desperate way).

So, what should you do?

If your gut instinct is telling you that she will move on instantly or very quickly, don't give her more than 3 to 7 days of space before you start the ex back process.

Follow the steps outlined in this post and when you feel ready, call her on the phone, trigger her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel feminine in contrast to your emotional masculinity) and arrange to meet up with her in person.

At the meet up, continue to spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you and then confidently guide her back into a relationship with you.

You can do it!

How Can I Stop Myself From Feeling Nervous Around My Ex?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's what you need to do to stop yourself from feeling nervous around your ex:

1. Think confident thoughts, rather than nervous thoughts

If you continue to think nervous thoughts every time you interact with your ex, it's only natural that you will feel nervous around her.

Nervousness, like confidence, is self created.

It's based on how you think.

When you think nervous, self-doubting thoughts, you will feel nervous and doubt yourself.

When you think confident, self-assured thoughts, you will feel more confident than usual.

If you get used to thinking confident, self-assured thoughts, you will eventually be confident all the time and it will be a natural, automatic part of your personality.

For now though, you need to make sure that when you are going to interact with your ex or are around her, you replace insecure thoughts with positive ones.

For example: Imagine that a guy notices his ex at a coffee shop.

Suddenly, he starts thinking to himself, What if she doesn't want to talk to me? What if she doesn't want me back? What if she feels like I'm not good enough for her now? What if she can see that I haven't changed? What if I make a fool of myself and she tells me to never call her again? What if she is seeing a new guy already? What she tells me to leave her alone and never talk to her again?

Chances are high that by the time his ex notices him, he will be an emotional wreck and will clearly seem nervous and unsure of himself.

When she hears the nervousness in his voice and picks up the insecurity and self-doubt in his body language, she will automatically feel turned off by what she perceives as his emotional weakness.

Rather than think, Awww! He's really trying hard to impress me. How cute. He's nervous about how I will react to him. Awww! I'd better take it easy on him and be nice to him, she will clam up even more and respond by being cold and aloof.

Why?

Women don't like to reward emotional weakness with love, affection, sex and devotion.

Women are instinctively looking to align themselves with a confident man who can remain confident and self-assured under pressure.

So, if she notices that her ex is nervous and unsure of himself, it simply serves as another reason why she wants to remain broken up.

When the nervous guy notices, he might then think, I knew it! I knew that she wouldn't want anything to do with me. I shouldn't have even tried to talk to her. What do I do now?

Yet, here's the thing!

Itâ€™s not that his ex didnâ€™t want anything to do with him.

Instead, she picked up on his negative beliefs about himself and felt turned off by it.

Think about it like thisâ€¦!

Have you ever noticed that when you are worried about stuffing something up or experiencing a problem, you usually encounter problems or stuff things up?

For example: You might be in a big hurry to get to an important meeting at work.

You might then stress, worry and think, â€œWhat if Iâ€™m late? What if my boss fires me? What if I lose that big contract?â€

Then when you leave home, you are annoyed as the traffic starts to slow down or get in your way and how every traffic light seems to turn red just as you get to it.

Inevitably, you arrive late for your meeting and look stressed out and unprofessional.

A professional man would simply call ahead, apologize for the delay and let his boss know that he will be a little late, but will be there for the meeting.

He would then get to work as fast as he can, but not stress about extra seconds waiting at a red light, or a few seconds lost if a car cuts in front of him.

He would then quickly get to the meeting room and then walk inside in a calm, confident and collected manner.

He wouldâ€™ calmly apologize for being late and immediately get on with business in a calm, confident, professional manner.

In other words, sometimes things go bad in life and itâ€™s how you respond to them that really matters.

If people see that you canâ€™t handle pressure and become a ball of stress in reaction to it, they simply wonâ€™t feel comfortable relying on you and they wonâ€™t be able to look up to you and respect you.

The same thing happens when you stress and expect the worst from your interactions with your ex.

You end up coming across in a way that she just canâ€™t look up to and respect, so she naturally feels turned off.

So, what should you do instead?

Focus on only having confident thoughts about yourself and about how your ex will respond to you when she sees you.

For example: Some confident thoughts that you can calmly, but self-assuredly repeat to yourself are:

- Iâ€™ve got this.
- She will feel attracted to me when she sees how confident and calm I am now.
- The more relaxed, confident thoughts I have, the more confident I will feel on the inside and look on the outside.
- Iâ€™m a new and improved man now and she will be able to pick it up in the way I talk, think and behave around her.
- When she sees that Iâ€™ve changed and improved in the ways she always wanted me to, she will automatically feel some respect and attraction for me again.

- She will like the new me.
- Even if she tries to act like sheâ€™s not feeling attracted, so she can test my confidence, I wonâ€™t doubt myself.
- I feel confident now and I will continue to feel confident when I interact with her.
- She will love it.

Then, when you are around her, your confidence and self-belief will come through in the tonality of your voice, your body language and in the way you behave and respond to her.

When she sees for herself that you are a much more emotionally attractive man now (e.g. confident, self-believing, calm and relaxed under pressure), she will naturally start to feel of respect and attraction for you.

Another way to stop yourself from feeling nervous around your ex, is toâ€™

2. Become more emotionally independent

Essentially, what this means is that you need to reach the point where you canâ€™

- Be happy with or without her.
- Be confident with or without her reassurance.
- Be forward moving in life with or without her.
- Have a high self esteem and belief in yourself, with or without her approval.

Of course, feeling that way doesnâ€™t mean you donâ€™t want her back.

The big difference is that you get to the point where you feel like you donâ€™t need her back to have a good, productive and successful life.

You want her back, but donâ€™t need her back.

Some guys mistakenly think that to make a woman feel loved and appreciated, he has to make her the centre of his world.

For example: A guy like that might give up his interests and hobbies, put his dreams on hold and even stop hanging out with his friends to spend more or all of his time with her.

He assumes that by always putting her in first place in his life, she will be flattered at his dedication and will then stick with him for life.

Yet, thatâ€™s rarely the case.

In most relationships, when a man thinks of his woman as being what his life is about, he will eventually begin to behave in an insecure, clingy, needy way.

For example: He might constantly ask her if she still loves him, fear losing her, get jealous of other guys, or try to spend every spare minute with her.

Yet, if a woman notices that her guy needs her constant love and attention to feel happy and confident, it will cause her to lose respect and attraction for him.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€™

A woman wants to be with a man who is happy, confident and forward moving in his life, with or without her support, approval or attention.

She doesn't want to feel as though he will fall apart without her guidance and support.

In the same way, if you want to re-attract your ex, you need to show her that you haven't been sitting around feeling sad, lonely and lost without her.

Instead, you are now emotionally independent and feel good about yourself and your life without her. You don't tell her that, of course.

Saying that to her would be rude and would cause her to want to get revenge by saying that she is even happier without you.

Instead, you simply let her feel that, based on how you talk, feel, think, behave and act.

In other words, you don't act like a nervous, needy guy around her and instead, you let her see that you are confident in yourself with or without her approval or love.

A woman won't admit that she wants you to be like that, but be like that and she will want you. That's women for you.

They don't explain what is required to make them really want you.

It's up to you as a man to understand women, so you can naturally attract them and keep them.

One part of being able to be that kind of man is to be emotionally independent (i.e. not be needy).

So, how can you get to the point where you become more emotionally independent?

You can:

- Focus on achieving some of your big goals, dreams and ambitions in life.
- Do something new that involves meeting new people (e.g. a group sport or recreational activity such as football, mixed martial arts, basketball, tennis, join a dance club or a photography club).
- Reconnect with old friends, or make new ones.

When you focus on becoming genuinely happy and content in your own life, not only does that stop you from feeling nervous around your ex, but you also become more attractive to her as well.

Suddenly, she starts to see you as being more of a catch than you were before.

She stops look at you as her needy, emotionally dependent ex who she felt sorry for because he didn't believe in himself or in his value to her.

She notices that you are a new man now and she likes it.

Another way to stop yourself from feeling nervous around your ex is!

3. Arm yourself with new ways to attract her

In a relationship, a couple usually gets to know almost everything about the other person (e.g. their likes and dislikes, their behavior, what turns them on, makes them happy or causes them to get angry or annoyed).

So, after a break up, a woman might assume that her ex can't offer anything new that she doesn't already know.

For example: He was a good guy to her, was kind of confident, was kind of funny and was kind of interesting.

She doesn't really think he can do much more than that, so she assumes that the amount of attraction she felt for him reached its limit.

Yet, it didn't.

As a man, you can always become more attractive to a woman because a woman's attraction to a man is mostly based on how his personality and behavior makes her feel.

You can always become more confident, funny, interesting, charismatic and emotionally masculine and as a result, you can always become more attractive to a woman.

I know this from personal experience because my wife always feels more and more attracted to me over time.

It just gets better and better all the time, even though our relationship was amazing at the start.

That's how it can be for you too.

So, how can you do it?

Start by

Being emotionally stronger than her.

Unlike in the past, where a woman may have looked for the most physically strong man to hook up with (i.e. because she needed protection from wild animals and in later times from being abducted or raped), today's woman looks for a man who is emotionally strong.

Emotional strength is essential for handling the challenges, threats and obstacles that we all encounter in modern life.

Additionally, since modern women are no longer under threat of being eaten by wild beasts and can rely on the police for protection, she no longer needs a man with big muscles to protect her.

What she does need is a man who has the ability to cope with the challenges of modern life and succeed at whatever he chooses to do in life.

If he can remain confident and calm under pressure (e.g. when he's faced with tough decisions, something bad happens, or she teases him, throws a tantrum, or insults him) and doesn't become overwhelmed with emotion like a woman, she will naturally feel lasting respect and sexual attraction for him.

Her instincts urge her to stick with a guy like that, rather than leaving and potentially not being able to find a guy who is as emotionally strong and capable.

On the other hand, if a guy becomes overly emotional, insecure, nervous and loses his confidence when faced with a challenging situation, a woman will perceive him as being emotionally weak and her respect and attraction for him will begin to fade.

Her instincts will urge her to leave him and find a more capable man, who can better protect her and provide if they happen have any offspring in the future.

So, one of the ways that you can re-attract your ex is by showing her (not telling her) that you are now an emotionally strong man that she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love.

Showing her that you are emotionally strong doesn't mean that you go around acting like a tough guy or treating her badly, being rude or being a jerk to her.

Instead, you just need to maintain your confidence and remain calm and in control, no matter what she says or does to try and challenge you.

For example: If she says, “My feelings for you are dead,” or “I don’t want to see you again. Just leave me alone,” you need to show her that you aren’t hurt by that.

You still believe in yourself, are still confident and are still completely relaxed and at ease around her.

Likewise, if she is cold and unfriendly towards you, insults you, teases you or talks about other guys who want to go out with her, you need to remain confident and believe in yourself.

When she can see that nothing she throws at you makes you nervous anymore, she will feel naturally attracted to you, whether she likes it or not.

Initially, she may pretend that your newfound confidence doesn’t impress her, but that will simply be a test to see how real your confidence is.

If you maintain your confidence, she will naturally begin feeling surges of respect for the man that you have become.

Another way you can re-attract your ex is by Making her feel like a real woman by being more emotionally masculine than her.

A lot of guys make the mistake of thinking that being extra sweet and nice to a woman or allowing her to have her way all the time, is what she really wants.

Yet, even though most women won’t ever admit this, for her to be able to relax into feeling like a real woman around you (i.e. feminine, girly, free to be emotional), she needs you to be more masculine in terms of your thinking, behavior, communication style and the way you react and respond to her.

For example: If a woman is behaving like a brat and is throwing tantrums for no reason, a guy needs to remain emotionally strong, laugh about it and not take her so seriously.

If he does that (rather than getting annoyed with her, or being extra nice and sweet to her in the hopes that she will calm down), she will know that he is man enough for a girl like her.

As a result, she will naturally relax into thinking, talking and behaving like a real woman around him.

When a woman is able to do that around a man, her face lights up with glee and excitement.

She feels sexually attracted, aroused and happy.

However, when a guy is unable to be the man around a woman, her face droops and she becomes annoyed, stressed and even angry at him.

So, if you want to re-attract your ex, make sure that you take on the masculine role by thinking, feeling, talking, behaving and acting like a man at all times.

If you do that, your ex will automatically feel respect and attraction for you and want to get back with you.

Like other women, she knows how difficult it is to find a man who doesn’t become neutral or feminine around a woman.

It is so rare for a woman to come across a man who gets this.

When a woman does meet a man who has this ability, she feels attracted and doesn’t want to let him go.

So, when you show your ex that you now have the ability to make her feel like a real, feminine woman, she won’t be able to stop herself from feeling surges of respect and sexual attraction for you again.

Her walls will come crumbling down and getting back together again will become something that she really wants to do.

Another way to attract your ex is by Showing her that you really have changed and improved the things that matter to her.

Women love it when a guy figures out how to be the kind of man that she needs, without her having to help him.

It allows her to naturally be in love with him, rather than trying hard to make a relationship work with a guy who doesn't yet understand how to be the man she needs.

In the same way, when you fully understand what caused your ex to break up with you and then make some adjustments and improvements, reactivating her feelings for you again will be easy and natural.

If you're not 100% sure what may have caused her to lose respect and attraction for you, here are some questions to help you find out.

For example:

Did you stop making her feel safe in the relationship (e.g. because you became too insecure and needy, you became controlling and jealous)?

If the answer is yes, then show her that you've changed by maintaining your confidence around her, no matter how much she tries to make you feel nervous and insecure around her.

Did the relationship become too boring (e.g. the sex became routine or even faded away, you did the same things over and over again, you treated her more like a friend than a sexy, desirable woman)?

To show her that you've changed, spice things up by using every interaction to flirt with her, make her laugh and smile and create some sexual tension between you.

Did you give her so much power that she felt turned off by your inability to be masculine and dominant (e.g. you always treated her like a princess despite her treating you badly, you were too nice and accommodating)?

If so, you show her that you've changed by standing up to her in a loving, but dominant way when she is being cold, distant, rude or treats you badly in any way.

The more your ex can see that you're no longer the guy she broke up with, the more respect and attraction she will feel for the man you have now become.

Not only will she naturally be more open to getting back together, but you will realize that you don't feel nervous around her anymore either.

Another way to stop feeling nervous around your ex is

4. Don't take the interactions so seriously

Being too serious and being on your best behavior will cause you to overanalyze things when you interact with her.

While overanalyzing, you will inevitably think insecure, nervous thoughts, which will in turn, make you feel nervous and unsure of yourself.

So, you have to remind yourself not to take the interactions with your ex so seriously.

Instead, let it be about having a good time together (e.g. laughing, smiling, enjoying each other's company), rather than trying to get her back into a relationship with every sentence or gesture you offer.

The more that you can relax and enjoy yourself around her, the less nervous you will feel.

Then, the reconciliation process will begin to happen naturally and automatically, without you having to force it.

I Got Angry and Insulted My Ex When She Broke Up With Me. Can I Get Her to Forgive Me For That?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, you can get her to forgive you.

Here's what you need to do:

1. Apologize, but don't grovel

Obviously, if you haven't already done so, you should start the ex back process by apologizing to her for what you said.

A heartfelt apology won't fix everything instantly, but it will go a long way towards making things better between you and her.

If she can see that you are genuinely sorry for insulting her, she will at least begin to feel a bit better about what happened.

From there, you can begin clearing away the negative emotions that she has been feeling by making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you (e.g. being confident under pressure, using humor to get her laughing, being charismatic and charming, making her feel girly in comparison to your masculine vibe, letting her feel and experience the changes in you as she interacts with you).

That is even more important than the apology, because after you've said the apology, she's going to quickly lose interest in talking further if she's not feeling sparks of respect and attraction for you again.

So, when you apologize to her, make sure that you don't do it in an emotionally weak and wimpy way (i.e. don't grovel), otherwise she will feel turned off even more.

For example: A guy sometimes feels so bad for getting angry and insulting his ex when she broke up with him, that he might then beg and plead with her to give him another chance, which only turns her off even more.

He might become desperate and say, "I'm so sorry! I don't know what came over me! I'm such a jerk and I will never forgive myself for hurting you like that. I just can't eat or sleep properly thinking about the way I insulted you. I promise that nothing I said to you in anger was actually true. I didn't mean any of it. It's just that the thought of losing you made me go crazy and I lost my mind for a moment there. Please forgive me for saying those things to you. I regret it so much. I beg you to just give me another chance to prove to you how much I care. I don't know what I would do if you said you couldn't forgive me. Please, please, please say that you can forgive me!"

He's hoping that if she sees how devastated he is, she will then think, "Oh, okay. It's obvious that he really, really loves me and that the idea of losing me was too much for him to bear. That's why he was angry and that's why he insulted me. If it was just because he loved me so much, then it's fine. In fact, I'm actually quite flattered now that I think about it. Maybe he's not so bad after all. He just loves me so much."

Unfortunately, a woman has a brain and it usually works well for her, so she can see right through what he is saying.

To her, heâs just offering her a bunch of words and potentially empty promises.

Heâs also trying to excuse his anger and emotional immaturity by saying that it was all about love.

Yes, it might have been, but itâs not an excuse that a woman is going to swallow.

So, whatever you do, make sure that you donât grovel, try to suck up to her or try to explain your anger away as being based on love.

Instead, just give her an apology and accept what you did as being a silly thing that you have now learned from.

Youâre not immediately asking her for another chance and instead, you are just giving her the apology, accepting what you did and letting that be said.

To help make her accept the apology, you canâ!

2. Tell her that you were being silly (or immature) and can now see that

For example: You might say something like, âI just wanted to say that Iâm truly sorry for the way I insulted you when you broke up with me. I now realize how utterly silly it was of me to behave that way. I was being completely childish and immature, so I lashed out at you for the way I was feeling. It was wrong of me to say those things and I see that now. Iâm not asking you to give me another chance. I just want to say that Iâm sorry and I get it now. I reacted in a such a silly, immature way.â

By calmly apologizing to your ex in that way, while also being emotionally mature enough to admit your mistake, it shows her that youâve moved past the level you were at when she broke up with you.

You can then alsoâ!

3. Laugh at how you behaved and tell her that you donât blame her if she hates you for what you said

Laugh and add, âBy the wayâI wouldnât blame you if you hated me forever now. What an idiot I wasâ and have a laugh about it with her.

By laughing at yourself, it shows her that youâre no longer the angry, selfish guy who insulted her because she was dumping him.

Instead, youâve learned from the experience and have already taken steps to become a better, more emotionally strong and mature man.

As a result, she doesnât have to keep her guard up so high with you anymore.

She can relax, smile, laugh and start to feel good around you again.

When she does that, she then becomes open to forgiving your mistakes and giving the relationship another chance.

So, once you can see that her guard has come down a little bit, you need to â

4. Get her to forgive you for her benefit

Initially, your ex might be resistant to the idea of forgiving you.

She may feel as though youâre just asking her to forgive you so you can feel better about behaving like such a jerk, rather than having to live with the shame for the rest of your life.

So, letting you off the hook and taking away your guilt for insulting her, might not be something that she will want to do right away.

She might want to really make you suffer for a while, for putting her through the pain that she went through.

If she is thinking in that way, she will play hard to get and potentially even make it out to be worse than it really was.

For example: She might say, âYou really scared me that day, you know? I havenât been able to sleep properly since. Iâve been having nightmares.â

If you sense that she is exaggerating or being dramatic for extra pity and attention, just laugh at her for being such a wimpy or a scaredy cat.

Of course, laugh at her in a loving way, not in a demeaning way.

Laugh at her as though you feel sorry for her for being such a cute, little girl, while at the same time, being genuine about your apology for behaving like a jerk.

Anyway, all that asideâ

You need to make sure that you get her to forgive you.

If sheâs unwilling to forgive you because she is playing hard to get, then get her to forgive you for her own benefit.

How?

Simple.

By telling her that forgiving you is for her own benefit.

Explain to her that if she doesnât forgive you, she will always be going through life feeling angry and bitter about what happened with you and it will most-likely cause her problems with future relationships.

That way, she has a reason to want to genuinely forgive you.

When she does forgive you for her own benefit, it then automatically makes her stop looking at you in a negative way because she recognizes that who you are now and who you were when you got angry are two different people.

You have changed as a man by learning from the experience and genuinely apologizing to her for it. She can see that the old version of you got angry in the heat of the moment, but the new you is so much more mature and emotionally strong.

She may then even start to think to herself, âWell, I guess he only insulted me because I broke up with him and he couldnât handle the pain of losing me. He obviously still cares for me. So, I canât blame him entirely for everything. Maybe I can forgive him. Heâs different now. He seems to have learned his lesson.â€œ

When she goes through that emotional transition, she automatically starts to feel better about interacting with the new and improved you.

She finds it easier to clearly see that you have changed and are no longer the same man she broke up with.

So, to get her to forgive you for her own benefit, you can say something like, â€œBefore you say anything else and possibly even tell me that you can never forgive me for what I said to you, I want you to think about one thing. Forgiving me actually has less to do with taking away my guilt, as it does with letting you get on with your life without having to carry the baggage of what happened. Forgiving me is what you need to do for you. Forgiving me for what happened is what is needed for you to be able to move forward and make a fresh start, without taking all the anger and bad feelings with you. If you forgive me, you will feel better about your future without me. You won't have to go around feeling that knot in your stomach every time you think of how our relationship fell apart and how badly I acted in the end. You will feel lighter knowing that even though I made some mistakes in the relationship and made it even worse by getting angry and insulting you when we broke up, I learned from that and am no longer the same guy. I've grown from the experience and I'm a better man as a result. So, forgiving me is the part of the process of moving on. Yes, I stuffed up, but is that something you want to hold on to and carry around with you for the rest of your life? It's just not worth it. So, what do you say? Can you forgive the old version of me? Can you accept that I did make mistakes, but that it is in the past and forgive me for it?â€œ

Important: Saying something like the above to her is not about encouraging her to move on and have another relationship.

Instead, you're showing her that you're mature enough to give her the freedom to not have baggage in a future relationship with someone else.

When she realizes that she has freedom and isn't being forced back into a relationship with you, she automatically stops looking at you in a negative way and is more able to genuinely forgive you.

She stops thinking about how you got angry and insulted her when she broke up with you and begins to look at you with respect.

From there, get her to

5. Agree to meet up as friends to say hello

Once your ex has forgiven you for getting angry and insulting her, as well as for some of your past mistakes, her guard will really start to come down.

She will become more open to talking to you and seeing you in person and you can then get her to agree to meet up with you to say hello as friends.

It can be a goodbye catch up if she wants it to be labelled as that, but just make sure that she meets up with you in person and you don't get stuck in a text conversation, or stuck having occasional phone calls that go nowhere.

For example: You can say to her, â€œI'm glad that we've managed to get to this point where we can talk to each other like friends againâ€œ and let her say something.

Then, add in, “You and I are broken up now and I accept that” and let her say something.

Then, add in, “Now look, before we go our separate ways and never talk to each other again, I’d really like it if we could catch up for a quick coffee as friends to say goodbye in a friendly way.”

Then, go ahead and make plans to meet her as soon as you both have an opening in your schedules.

6. Get her back at the meet up

When you meet up with your ex, you need to keep saying and doing the types of things that will make her see you in a new light and convince her to give you another chance.

No matter how much she tries to make you feel bad for what happened in the relationship or for getting angry and insulting her, you must maintain your confidence and use humor to stop her from seeing you as the man you were before.

Turn her negative comments into something that you can both laugh about together.

Make her smile and laugh and show her that you really are a new and improved man now.

Yes, you got angry and insulted her when she broke up with you, but that was the old you.

You’re not that guy anymore.

No matter how much she tries to push your buttons and make you feel annoyed, you remain positive, easy-going and confident.

When she sees that you’re being a confident, emotionally mature guy around her when she is trying to annoy you, she won’t be able to stop herself from feeling respect for you again.

When she feels respect, she will also be able to feel sexual and romantic attraction and when that happens, her walls will begin to come down and she will imagine what it would be like if you and her got back together.

From there, it’s up to you to open her eyes to the fact that falling back in love with each other will be even better than it was the first time.

You can make her realize that by actively triggering her feelings of respect, attraction and love as you interact with her.

When she realizes that she will be getting back into a relationship with a completely different man than before (i.e. a guy who is now more confident, emotionally strong and mature), she will naturally feel curious and possibly even excited about getting back together again.

4 Mistakes That Guys Often Make When in Your Situation

It’s not only you who has made the mistake of getting angry and insulting your woman as she broke up with you.

A lot of guys mess up in that way.

So, don’t beat yourself up about it.

That said, make sure that from now on, you do what works to get her back.

For example: Guys who find themselves in a similar situation to you, often make mistakes, such

asâ□|

1. Repeatedly apologizing via text

When a woman is angry with her ex and is refusing to see him or talk to him, he might feel that the only way to get through to her is via text.

He might then send her walls of texts apologizing to her and saying things like, â□□Please forgive me for what I said. I was so hurt that you were breaking up with me that I lost my mind. I know itâ□□s no excuse for insulting you, but I truly regret it. I didnâ□□t mean any of it. Please give me a chance to make it up to you.â□□

Yet, rather than make her forgive him, it only annoys her even more. Why?

Since she canâ□□t see his body language or hear the tonality of his voice, rather than give him the benefit of the doubt, a woman will usually assume the worst of him.

She will assume that heâ□□s just being a coward who doesnâ□□t have the balls to talk to her over the phone or face-to-face and apologize for being a jerk.

Sure, she isnâ□□t making it easy for him to call her, but he needs to man up and figure out how to pass that test of his confidence and resolve.

If he canâ□□t do that and just sticks to text, she will lose respect for him.

Although he might be 100% sincere when he is texting her and apologizing, she will see it as an empty apology or a promise that he probably couldnâ□□t even fulfill.

Why?

She has no real life evidence of the new and improved him.

She is judging him on how he behaved before.

Another mistake guys often make isâ□|

2. Acting as if he committed the worst crime in the world when in reality, he was just being immature and now realizes his mistake

Okay, so you stuffed up.

Big deal.

So many guys react in that way.

Yes, it was wrong, but it is done.

Itâ□□s over now.

So, going on and on about it isnâ□□t going to help you and it certainly isnâ□□t going to be the thing that reawakens your exâ□□s feelings for you either.

Just let it go.

You made a mistake, but you have learned your lesson and are a better man because of it.

If you get sucked into thinking that youâ□□re the worst boyfriend/husband in the world now that youâ□□ve made that mistake, you will be making it a bigger problem than it actually is.

Everyone makes mistakes.

Her included.

What matters now though is that you really have changed, can get her to see the funny side of what happened and can get her to feel sparks of respect, attraction and love for you.

If you focus on that, you will get her back.

Yet, if you focus on how bad you are and let her go on and on about it, she will feel repulsed and want to get away from you.

Another mistake that some guys make in your situation isâ€¦!

3. Feeling unwelcome to flirt with her and build up sexual tension

Some guys make the mistake of thinking that flirting with an ex is wrong.

A guy like that believes that itâ€™s not his place anymore and if he steps out of line, she will get angry and he will then lose any chance he might have had of getting her back.

Yet, the opposite is actually true.

If a guy is not actively making his ex feel sexually attracted to him anymore, sheâ€™s not going to feel much or any motivation to want to give him another chance at a sexual, romantic relationship.

She might be feeling friendly or neutral emotions him at best, but at worst, she may be feeling repulsed or annoyed by him.

So, if you truly want your ex to forgive you for getting angry and insulting her and give you another chance, donâ€™t be afraid to flirt with her to create sexual tension between you and her.

When you create sexual tension, she then naturally has the desire to want to release that tension with hugging, kissing and sex.

As a result, it makes it so much easier for you to get her back.

Another mistake that other guys tend to make in your situation isâ€¦!

4. Feeling unwelcome to meet up with her

Even though your ex might currently be saying things like, â€œJust leave me alone. You insulted me and treated me like crap. I donâ€™t want you in my life anymore and I donâ€™t want to meet up,â€ you shouldnâ€™t give up on seeing her in person again.

Instead, you need to maintain your confidence and believe in yourself, which will automatically attract her even if she doesnâ€™t want it to.

For example: You can say something along the lines of, â€œHey, I know that youâ€™re mad at me right now, but all Iâ€™m asking for is 10 minutes to have coffee and say goodbye to each other in a friendly way now. If you never want to see me again after the coffee, I will respect your wishes and never contact you again. So, how about it? What day this week would suit you best?â€

Then, just go ahead and make plans to meet her at a time that suits you both.

When you trigger her feelings of respect and sexual attraction at the meet up, she will start to see you in a different light.

She will stop feeling so hurt about the fact that you got angry and insulted her and will start seeing you as the new and improved man that you have become.

Her defenses will then come down and you can then get her back.

She is Scared That She Will Be Unhappy Again if We Get Back Together

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Hereâs how to convince your ex that she will be happy if you and her get back together:

1. Tell her that you and her don't have to commit to getting back together forever

A good way of getting your ex to relax and not get so worked up about the idea of getting back together again, is by not pushing her into making a definite decision right away.

Instead, put her mind at ease by suggesting that you and her only need to give the relationship a shot for a week to see how you feel.

For example: The next time she says something like, âI just donât know. Iâm too scared that if we get back together, Iâm going to be unhappy again. I donât want to have to go through all that again,â you can respond by saying, âHey, I understand that making a big commitment to stay together for life sounds like way too much. I agree. So, letâs not talk about getting back together forever. Instead, letâs simply agree to give our relationship a shot for one more week. Then, if things go well and you feel happy about being together, we can decide then about making a longer commitment. On the other hand, if you hate being back together and feel miserable, I will accept that and we can part as friends and go our separate ways. So, letâs just commit to one more week and see we both feel.â

In most cases, giving a woman the option to break up after a week makes her feel safer, so she will be more inclined to agree and give it a try.

Then, once she agrees, you must use the week to reignite her feelings of respect and attraction for you, so she can reconnect with her love for you and feel happy again.

One of the ways to do that, is toâ!

2. Focus on making her smile, laugh and feel happy with you from now on

When interacting with your ex, it might be tempting to want to repeatedly reassure her that things will be different this time.

For example: A guy might regularly apologize to her for his past behavior and explain why he behaved the way he did.

He might tell her how much he regrets hurting her and say things like, âI know that things were bad between us, but I promise you this time it will be different. Iâll do whatever it takes to make you happy. I am completely committed to this. You mean everything to me. I just want to make you happy. I promise you. You have my word on that.â

Yet, hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

She doesnâ€¦t need to keep hearing about it.

To get her back and keep her in a relationship, you need to focus on making her have feelings for you, rather than constantly trying to reassure her how serious you are about fixing things and making her happy.

So, simply focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you again.

If you do that, she will naturally feel happy to be back with you and wonâ€¦t need you to try and convince her that things will be different.

Focusing on making her smile, laugh and feel good doesnâ€¦t mean you have to act like a clown, make jokes all the time or be silly and frivolous around her.

Instead, itâ€¦s simply about not being so serious about things and not harping on and on about the past.

When sheâ€¦s smiling, laughing and enjoying being in your presence, it becomes difficult for her to keep thinking, â€œIâ€™m scared that I will be unhappy again if we get back together again.â€

Instead, she thinks, â€œI never expected to be able to feel this good around my ex after how badly things ended between us. Iâ€™m actually feeling exited again. I love him again. I wonder if it is possible for us to have a happy, lasting relationship this time?â€

So, if you want to get your ex to relax and open herself up to the idea of getting back together, make sure that you try to make every interaction with her a happy one.

Itâ€¦s not about trying hard to suck up to her and do whatever she wants.

No.

That doesnâ€¦t work.

Instead, itâ€¦s about being a confident, emotionally masculine man who has the balls to joke around and make her laugh at times, rather than being on your best behavior and taking everything so seriously.

The more she enjoys talking to you, interacting with you and hanging out with you, the more open she will be to giving the relationship a real chance.

On the other hand, if you are mostly making her feel stressed out or turned off (e.g. because youâ€¦re still making the same old mistakes that causes her to break up with you before), then sheâ€¦s not going to want to spend time with you or give the relationship a real chance.

Instead, she will say something like, â€œSorry, but Iâ€™m just too scared that I will be unhappy again if we get back together. I think itâ€™s better if we let it go and move on.â€

3. Stop saying and doing the things that have been secretly turning her off

After the break up, some guys donâ€¦t know how to behave around their ex anymore.

For example: All he knows is that he wants his ex back more than anything, but she is saying things like, â€œNo, Iâ€™m not interested,â€ or â€œNo. Iâ€™m scared that I will be unhappy if we get back together again,â€ or â€œI just donâ€™t have feelings for you anymore.â€

As a result, he feels like he is losing her forever and that all hope is lost.

So, instead of saying and doing the types of things that will relight her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him and make her want to get back together, he says and does things that turn her off.

For example: He startsâ€¦

- Being insecure and self-doubting, instead of being confident and emotionally strong.
- Begging and pleading with her for another chance, rather than taking a few days to improve on the things that caused her to break up with him in the first place.
- Trying to make her happier by being nicer to her, instead of being a man that she can naturally feel respect for now.
- Complaining about how difficult things have been for him since the break up, as a way of making her feel pity for him, rather than showing her that he is confident, happy and emotionally strong.
- Giving her more power in the relationship (e.g. letting her call the shots), instead of being more emotionally dominant by taking the lead and guiding her back into feelings of love, respect, attraction and happiness.

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦

If you continue saying and doing things that turn your ex off, sheâ€¦s naturally going to keep giving you excuses (e.g. that sheâ€¦s scared that she will be unhappy again if your get back together) to avoid giving you another chance.

So, if you want to get her back, youâ€¦ve got to start saying and doing things that actively trigger her feelings of respect, attraction, and love for you.

For example: If you had become insecure in the relationship and stopped being manly, you need to quickly become very confident and start talking, feeling, behaving and acting in a more manly way.

Youâ€¦ve got to let her see that you get it now and have already changed.

Note that I said, â€¦Let her see.â€¦

I didnâ€¦t say, â€¦Tell her and try to explain to her that youâ€¦ve changed.â€¦

Thereâ€¦s a big difference.

Women donâ€¦t like it when a guy desperately tries to convince her that he has changed things about himself just to get her back.

On the other hand, women like it when they interact with an ex and feel a surprising, renewed sense of respect and attraction for him because he has already changed.

You interact with her and she feels sparks of respect, attraction and love and knows that you have changed, without you needing to tell her all about it and look a little bit desperate in the process.

When you let her feel and experience the changes, she automatically stops being so defensive and begins to feel attracted to you again.

This happens without her having to do anything because attraction is a natural, automatic reaction that humans have to each other.

When you display traits that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence under pressure, emotional masculinity, humor in moments where others are too afraid to use it, charisma), a woman doesnâ€¦t have to think about whether she feels attracted to you or not.

It happens automatically.

This natural rule of attraction applies to your ex, even though you might see her as being unique and different to other women.

Yes, she is different, but she is still a human woman.

If you behave in an attractive way, she will naturally feel some attraction for you, whether she wants to or not.

Her mind might be telling her, “Stop! Remember that he made you feel unhappy before and he might do it again,” but her heart will open up to you again, even if she tries to fight it.

Remember: Attraction is an automatic reaction.

Your ex's thought process will be influenced by the amount of attraction she feels for you based on the traits and behaviors you are displaying.

As a result of feeling attracted to you, she will find reasons why she is suddenly looking at you in a more positive light (e.g. “Maybe he is the one” or “Maybe this means that we're meant to be together” or “I thought I was over him, but my heart is telling me otherwise. It's a sign!”).

4. Make her feel attracted to you in new ways

Imagine that a guy was controlling in the relationship with his ex.

For example: He prevented her from seeing her single friends, checked her phone/e-mail/social media to see who she was interacting with, insisted that she wear only the types of clothes he approved of and tried to control her behavior around him and others.

To get her back, he might make the mistake of saying something like, “I've changed. I promise that you can do whatever you like and I won't try to stop you anymore.”

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that when he's nagging her about getting back together and saying things like, “Don't be scared. It will be okay this time. You have nothing to be worried about. Things will be better. Just believe me” she will look at it as him continuing to be the controlling guy that he was in the relationship.

So, what can he do instead?

He can turn his past controlling behavior into something they can laugh about together and as a result, attract her in a new way.

For example: If she says, “I'm scared that I will be unhappy if we get back together again,” he can say in a joking way, “What are you talking about? You mean you didn't enjoy being locked up in my dungeon and fulfilling my every need as a slave? Now you tell me! All this time I thought you loved being my little minion,” and have a laugh with her about that.

Obviously, he wouldn't have locked her up in a dungeon and he is simply exaggerating and getting her to imagine a much worse guy, so his behavior doesn't look so bad in comparison.

Additionally, by using humor to laugh at himself and his past behavior, he's showing her that he now understands where he went wrong.

He's also making her feel attracted by responding differently to the way she's expecting him to (e.g. she would have most likely been expecting him to get angry, try to control her or blame her for making him behave in a controlling way).

By joking around about the past, it takes the pressure off getting back together right away and allows her to enjoy talking to him again.

She then begins to think to herself, â€œWhatâ€™s changed? Heâ€™s not trying to control me anymore. He also understands what made me want to break up with him. I canâ€™t believe Iâ€™m thinking this, but I think I kind of like him again. Why am I feeling this way? Maybe we can make things work between us after all.â€

As long as he continues to make her feel attracted as he talks to her on the phone or in person in that moment, she will drop her guard and open up to potentially being with him again.

She might be a little resistant initially, or she might dive right back into a relationship with him by hugging, kissing and having sex with him.

Each woman is different, which is why you need to make sure that you maintain your confidence at all times throughout the ex back process.

Some women make it easy and some women play hard to get to test your confidence and see how you are going to react (e.g. are you going to get upset and angry like you used to, or do you know have the emotional maturity and confidence to guide a potentially difficult conversation back to love and laughter?).

Part of the reason why a woman does that is to see whether or not you have leveled up as a man, or are still stuck at the same level you were at when she dumped you.

If you can now attract her in new ways and youâ€™ve learned from your mistakes, she will have reasons to want to give the relationship another chance.

5. Help her to stop taking things so seriously and just enjoy spending time with you

Most women create drama in a relationship purely as a way to test a manâ€™s confidence and to see where his breaking point is.

A woman may not even realize that sheâ€™s doing it and might even feel offended if you point it out to her, but it (i.e. creating drama to test your confidence) is a natural and very common thing that women do.

This is why taking your exâ€™s comment about being ‘scared’ too seriously is a bad move.

If sheâ€™s just messing with you and seeing how much BS you will put up with from her, then sheâ€™s going to be disappointed that you are taking it all too seriously.

To avoid that from happening, a better way to respond is by using humor to help her see that the situation is not as bad as sheâ€™s making it out to be.

For example: The next time your ex says, â€œIâ€™m just too scared that I will be unhappy again if we get back together,â€ you can turn it into something to laugh about together by laughing and saying, â€œOoooh, how scary. Getting back together for a week to see how we feel. Wow, that’s so scary.â€

Initially, she might act shocked that youâ€™re not taking her that seriously anymore.

However, even if she doesn't openly admit it, she will actually be feeling a huge amount of respect and sexual attraction for you for having the balls to guide the interaction back to laughter and love, rather than getting sucked into her drama.

From there, you just need to continue making her laugh and smile and feel good, so you can build on her initial feelings for you.

The more respect and attraction she feels for you, the more she will enjoy interacting with you again. Slowly, but surely, her fears will be replaced with happy feelings.

As a result, she will naturally get back with you, feel happy about it and you and her can then enjoy the great times ahead together as a couple.

5 Ways to Convince Your Ex That the Relationship is Worth Saving

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's what you can do to convince your ex that the relationship is worth saving:

1. Let her know that the spark is still there in the background

Just because you and her have broken up and she currently isn't interested in getting back together, it doesn't mean that the spark between you and her is completely dead.

She might feel like the spark is dead and even be saying things like, "It's over. There's nothing left between us worth saving. I don't love you anymore," but the spark is still there and the relationship is worth saving.

She can't see that at the moment though because she is focusing on her negative feelings for you (e.g. anger, disappointment, regret).

To change how she feels, start by letting her know that the spark between you and her is still there, even if she hasn't wanted to connect to it since the break up.

Additionally, if you and her catch up and she experiences a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the man you've become, she will be happy and most likely even excited about the new feelings she has for you.

Of course, you need to reassure that you understand she probably doesn't believe that right now.

It's only natural that she would doubt it, because she is currently focused on her negative feelings for you, so it's not possible for her to feel happy and excited at the moment.

Yet, if you and her do catch up, she will be surprised at how much she feels for you now that you have changed.

For example: If you're talking to her on a phone call (not via text!) or in person, you can say something like, "Hey, I know that I stuffed up and based on my previous behavior, there's no reason for you to believe that our relationship is worth saving. However, I just want you to know that I'm not that guy anymore. I don't expect you to believe me just because I'm saying so. All I ask is for a chance to show you. We can be friends and you can then experience for yourself whether I'm telling the truth or not. Then, if you feel differently about me, you might then feel like giving our relationship another chance. That's all I ask. No pressure."

Of course, saying that to her isn't guaranteed to make any woman forgive you and restart a relationship immediately.

Instead, at the very least, it makes her drop her guard a little bit and begin to think things like, "Hmmm, maybe he has changed. He's actually handling our break up in a more mature and emotionally strong way than I expected. So, I guess I don't have anything to lose if I give him a chance to show me whether or not he has really changed."

Then

2. Let her know that a reunited relationship feels twice as good if it's done right

Once she seems more open to talking, you can explain to her that falling back in love after a break up is one of the most amazing feelings a couple can ever experience together.

You can say, “You and I have a lot of history together. I know you and you know me. If we can learn from our mistakes and become better people, it sets us up for an even better relationship. Likewise, if we can take all the good things about each other from before and add them to who we are now, we can build a relationship that is even stronger and better than it used to be. Being able to get through a rough patch and fix things means that, the next time around, our relationship will automatically be more mature and more connected than it used to be. Our love will be even stronger. We won't experience those problems again. We will be a better couple. There's no need to run from that and there's every reason to run towards it.”

If your ex loved you before and is still kind of open to getting back with you, then she will almost certainly get back with you at that point.

If she isn't sure about being with you anymore, then the idea of having a better relationship with you will instinctively appeal to her.

Why?

A woman's natural instinct is to try to stick with a relationship for life.

This has a lot to do with her primal breeding instincts.

Even if you and her don't have children or don't ever want children, she still has the natural instincts of a woman to find and keep a good man, who would stick around and protect, provide and support her if offspring were created.

This is big part of the reason why women usually take a long time to eventually break up with a guy.

Her instincts are telling her to make it work, so if you can honestly improve yourself, let her experience that and then tell her that a new relationship would be even better, it will connect with her instinctive need to keep a relationship together.

When talking to her, you can also mention that you've heard of so many couples getting back together and their relationship being better than it was before.

Let her know that it happens that way if a couple improves and changes and becomes an even better couple as a result of the mistakes that were made.

For example: Maybe it was you who made a lot of the mistakes in the relationship.

If that's the case, then she would have never gotten to experience the depths of the love and attraction that was possible between you and her.

She could be so much happier, so much more in love and so much more fulfilled this time around.

3. Tell her that she only lives once and if she misses out on experiencing this, she'll never know

Initially, your ex might be a bit resistant to the idea of giving your relationship another chance.

She might even say things like, "I don't know if it's such a good idea. What if we get back together and I end up being hurt all over again? I'm not sure if I want to risk it."

Of course, trying to convince her that the relationship is worth saving because you feel so much for her and saying things like, "You and I are meant to be together. I just know in my heart that our relationship is worth saving. If you only give us a chance, I'm sure we can make it work. Even if you don't feel a lot of love for me, I have enough love for the both of us. Please give us a chance," will rarely make her change her mind. Why?

If she's not feeling enough respect and attraction for you right now, knowing that you still have feelings for her just isn't going to matter to her.

The feelings have to be mutual for her to care about how much you care.

It can't all be about how much you care and how much you need her or want her.

If you make her feel that way, she will feel as though you're trying to pressure her into doing something she doesn't want.

So, a better way to react if she says something like that, is by saying something along the lines of, "Sure, you can walk away from our relationship and never look back if you want to. Yet, if you do, you will never know if we could have had the kind of relationship that people only dream of. Just for a minute, allow yourself to believe that what I'm telling you is for real. Imagine that I am now actually the guy that you've always wanted me to be. When we get back together again, we're going to have the kind of relationship that you and I have always wanted. We're going to be happy and in love and it's going to keep getting better and better over time. We will be one of those couples that other people look at and wonder how we are so happy and in love. On the other hand, imagine that you walk away right this minute and then spend the rest of your life going through relationship after relationship because nothing ever feels right. Do you really want to do that? Life is just too short not to take this chance with me. Put it this way. If we give it another shot and it doesn't work out, you'll never have any doubts that you made a mistake. On the other hand, if you give me another chance and it does work out, you will be grateful that you did because you and I will be happy together for life."

By saying something like that to her, you plant seeds of doubt in her mind about her desire to want to remain broken up.

She starts wondering, "What if he's right? What if I do walk away and regret it for the rest of my life? What if he ends up being the one that got away and I end up with a guy who I never really love? What if I get married to someone else and then get divorced because I can't ever seem to fully move on and be happy?" and she then becomes more open to giving you another chance.

You can then

4. Tell her that you and her don't have to commit to anything other than a week of being back together

If she still seems a bit nervous about trying again because she doesn't want to commit to a long term relationship right away, then put her mind at ease.

Tell her that all you and her need to really commit to is giving the relationship a try for another week. That's it.

Then, after a week, if she decides that she still doesn't feel like the relationship is worth saving, you will respect her wishes, stop trying to get her back and never contact her ever again, if that's what she wants.

Note: Saying that you will never contact her ever again will tug at her heartstrings if she is actually starting to feel respect, attraction and love for you again.

She won't want that to be the outcome and as a result, she will have an additional little reason to try and make the relationship work during the week that you are back together.

During the week, you must focus on reawakening and building on her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you.

Make her feel so much that, by the end of the 7 days, she will be saying, "I'm so glad you encouraged me take this chance with you. I can't believe I almost lost you forever. Thank you for not giving up on our love. I'm so happy now. I now that we can make this work."

How can you make her feel that way?

You need to

5. Show her that you really have changed the things that she broke up with you for

Nothing is more convincing to a woman that a relationship is worth saving than seeing that her guy is now at a completely different level to the one he was at when she dumped him.

Not only has he understood where he went wrong, but he has also taken steps to quickly change and improve and become a better man as a result.

So, before you do anything else to get her back, I recommend that you get clear on what caused her to break up with you in the first place.

For example: Ask yourself

- What was it about my thinking and behavior that turned her off? (e.g. Did I become too insecure and emotionally dependent on her? Did I take her for granted? Did her and I end up wanting different things in the relationship?)
- What do I think was missing from our relationship? (e.g. did she feel more like my friend or roommate, rather than my woman? Did the spark die out? Was the sex too boring or even non-existent?)
- Did she want me to behave in a way that I wasn't aware of? (e.g. more ballsy, more motivated and purpose oriented, more affectionate, less of a loner).
- Was I trying to get her to accept things about me that just aren't attractive? (e.g. my insecurity about my value to her, my jealous or controlling behavior)?

When you really think about where you went wrong with your ex, you can then change and improve the things that actually matter to her.

Then, when you interact with her and you let her know that a reunited relationship feels twice as good when done right, she will be able to believe you because she will be feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you already.

On the other hand, if she can see that you're just saying that a new relationship would be better, but nothing about you has improved, she won't be interested in starting again.

3 Mistakes That Other Guys Often Make When in Your Situation

Many guys find themselves in your situation (i.e. dumped by a woman they love and she isn't interested in saving the relationship, even though he is a good guy and is promising to do better this time around).

As a result, many guys make one or more of the following mistakes, which only pushes her away even further.

1. Explaining all of his deep feelings in a letter

As you may have noticed so far in this article, at no point have I told you to express your feelings via text, e-mail or letter.

There is a very good reason for that.

When you simply write things to her, she doesn't get any first hand, real life evidence that you have changed and as a result, she assumes that you're still the same.

For example: She can't hear the confident tonality of your voice, so she assumes that you are feeling insecure and unsure of yourself, which turns her off.

She can't see your confident body language, so she imagines that if you said that to her in person and she was being cold and distant, you would probably begin to look nervous and unsure of yourself.

This is why it's never a good idea to hide behind texts, letters or e-mails with an ex woman.

A woman's attraction for a man works differently to a man's attraction for a woman.

Women need to interact with a man either on the phone or in person, to get a feel for how he is coming across (i.e. Is he confident or nervous? Is he angry or easy-going? Is he desperate or calm?).

Some guys don't want to face up to a potential rejection if they call their ex woman or talk to her in person, so they hide behind text.

For example: If a guy finds it difficult to express himself in person (e.g. he tends to get angry or upset, becomes tongue-tied and says the wrong things), he might feel like his best option is to write everything down in a long letter.

He hopes to make his ex understand just how much she means to him and how desperately he wants her back.

Yet, this rarely works out in the way a guy hopes.

Unfortunately, even though heâs being 100% honest and sincere, to his ex itâs just a bunch of words on a screen (or a piece of paper).

Firstly, if all he is doing is writing her a letter without first sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for him even a little bit, sheâs not going to really care how he feels.

The feelings have to be mutual or at least kind of mutual, before a woman will care how you feel.

It canât all be about him getting her back because of how much he feels for her or needs her.

Secondly, because she canât see his body language, look into his eyes, or at least hear the tonality of his voice, an ex woman will usually judge a guy based on the last impression that she had of him (i.e. when she broke up with him).

If he didnât take the break up well (e.g. he begged and pleaded for another chance, sulked to her or possibly even cried), she will remember that and assume he is still the same emotionally weak guy.

So, although it seems like a guy is doing a nice, noble thing by writing out all of his feelings and explaining how much a woman means to him, it doesnât appear that way to her.

In fact, many women see the old 'letter to an ex' approach as a selfish act, because itâs usually all about the guy's feelings, wants and needs.

A guy will add in compliments about her and tell her how wonderful she is, but it doesnât mean much or anything to a woman if the feelings arenât mutual.

Another mistake that guys make in your situation isâ!

2. Not being assertive enough to get her to meet up with him in person

Even when a woman still has feelings for her ex, she wonât necessarily make it easy for him to get her back.

If he asks her to meet up with him, she might say things like, âIâm not sure thatâs such a good idea,â or âIâm not ready to see you yet.â

In most cases, she is simply testing him to see if heâs got the confidence and emotional strength to persevere and get a meet up with her, or if he will become nervous, self-doubting and give up.

Depending on his reaction, she will either feel a resurgence of respect and attraction for him for being man enough to go after what he wants in life (i.e. her), or she will lose respect and attraction for him for doubting himself giving up so easily.

So, if you want your ex back, donât give up until she agrees to see you in person.

Of course, that doesnât mean you should bully her or try to force her into meeting up.

Instead, just make her feel so good to be interacting with you again over the phone (e.g. by making her laugh and smile), that the idea of saying âNoâ doesnât even cross her mind.

If she does say, âNoâ to a meet up, be assertive in a loving manner.

For example: Laugh and say, âOkay, well letâs never, ever meet up again!â and have a laugh with her about it.

Then say, âNo, lookâthere's no need to be so dramatic about it. We are mature enough to catch up for 10 minutes and say hi as friends. Thereâs nothing wrong with us catching up for a coffee and saying goodbye in a friendly way. We can do that. So, letâs catch up tomorrow or the *next day. I can do 6pm tomorrow, or 3pm the next day. Which is best for you?*â□□

Essentially, donâ□□t give up at the first sign of resistance because, in many cases, a woman will simply be testing her exâ□□s confidence and resolve.

She wants to see what kind of man he really is.

Of course, if she says, *â□□Absolutely not! I will never meet up with you again,*â□□ then you will need to use another approach to get her to calm down and open up to catching up with you to say hi.

Remember: Human emotions arenâ□□t permanent.

Humans always change how they feel about things and you can make a woman go from hating you, to forgiving you, to accepting you, liking you, feeling attracted to you and loving you again.

Couples all over the world break up and get back together all the time.

Your relationship and your woman is unique, but at the end of the day, both of you are still human.

Humans can change how they feel and you will see evidence of that all around you as you watch couples break up and get back together.

Another mistake that guys often make in your situation, isâ□|

3. Trying to get her back before he's made her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him

Some guys focus more on what they want (i.e. to get their ex back), than on making her feel that way she needs to feel to open back up to having a relationship.

Approaching the ex back process in that way is doing thing backwards.

The correct way to approach the ex back process is to focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, as you interact with her.

Interact with her and make her feel sparks of respect, attraction and love.

Not via text.

On a phone call or in person.

Make her feel attracted to you again and then, the idea of getting back with you seems like the next, natural step.

On the other hand, if you donâ□□t spark her feelings for you first and just focus on telling her how much you love her, or on reminding her about how good things used to be in the past, sheâ□□s not going to change her mind.

What matters to her is how you make her feel right now.

So, focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good every time you interact with her.

Let her feel good when interacting with you.

Donâ□□t make it all about you and how much you want or need her back.

Make the feelings mutual (or at least kind of mutual) before you try to do anything else.

If you approach the ex back process in that way, she will want to save the relationship just as much as you do.

How Do You Get an Ex Back Without Seeming Like You're Pressuring Her Into it?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's what you need to do to get an ex back without seeming like you're pressuring her!

1. Don't make it about you getting her back for your reasons

A classic mistake that many guys make after being dumped, is approaching their ex woman in a way where it's about him wanting her back because he loves her so much and needs her in his life.

For example: A guy might say, "Please just give me one more chance. I can't bear the thought of losing you. You mean everything to me and without you my life feels meaningless. Please."

Yet, what about her?

What is she getting from that deal?

She's just getting the same guy, who hasn't even changed yet and probably doesn't even know how to.

As a result, it feels like she'd be doing him a favor by getting back with him, which isn't very inspiring or appealing to her.

Here's the thing!

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for him.

So, when he says that he still cares for her and wants her back, she will be thinking things like, "So what? I don't care how he feels or what he wants. I have to take care of myself now, not him. Does he honestly think that his needy feelings for me are going to convince me to give him another chance? If anything, him trying to manipulate me by telling me how lost he feels without me is reinforcing my decision to stay broken up. I don't want to be with a guy who is emotionally dependent on me and falls apart if I'm not with him."

This is why it's so important to focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you FIRST, before you even attempt to discuss the idea of having a relationship.

In other words, make her have feelings for you, so she actually does have an interest in getting back with you.

When she can see that you really are a different man now and aren't just trying to get her back to make yourself feel better, she will naturally begin to reconnect with her loving feelings for you.

On the other hand, if you interact with her and mainly talk about your feelings and your wants, she's not going to care and will keep saying things like, "Stop pressuring me. I'm not ready to be in a relationship with you again. Give me space. Leave me alone."

2. Stop trying to get her back before you truly change

Important: You need to do this quickly.

After a break up, I recommend that a guy quickly improves himself and then gets in contact with his ex woman to re-attract her on a call and in person.

He can then get her to forgive him, open back to him physically and get back together.

You can achieve all that by giving her a maximum of 3 to 7 days of space.

It does not need to be any longer than that.

If you give her too much space, she will almost certainly move on emotionally, or hook up with a new guy, get physical with him and move on physically and emotionally without you.

So, if you are serious about getting her back, I recommend that you give her 3 to 7 days of space and then get the job done.

Getting the job done is about interacting with her and re-attracting her, based on the changes you have made to yourself and your approach to attraction.

In other words, if a guy was insecure and emotionally sensitive in the relationship, his emotional weakness would have been turning her off and she would have hated that he didn't understand how a woman's attraction really works.

So, when he interacts with her, he will need to show her (not tell her) that he is now truly confident, so she can feel attracted to that and feel relieved that he now understands that confidence is essential for a woman's ongoing attraction to a man.

Here's another example: Imagine that a guy got dumped because he had no sense of purpose in life that he was actively following through on and making progress on, which caused her to feel uncertain about a future with him.

She didn't tell him that though.

She just said what most women say, "I don't feel the same way anymore" or, "I want to be on my own for a while" or, "I need time apart to find out what I want."

Not knowing the real reason why she has been turned off by him for so long, he then desperately tries to get her back by begging and pleading for another chance.

Additionally, he continues to have nothing else in life that he is truly focused on other than her and the idea of getting her back (e.g. he doesn't have any big goals that he's making progress on, he neglects his friends and he doesn't have any hobbies or interests, he is afraid to follow through on his dreams and reach his true potential as a man).

Essentially, all he does is sit around feeling sad and depressed and thinking of ways he can convince her to give him another chance.

He might then continue to beg and plead with her, promise to change if she forgives him or send her a bunch of flowers to say that he's sorry.

Yet, none of those things really matter to her because he's not getting to the root of the problem.

He's not changing what she really wants him change.

Instead, he's just pressuring her by overwhelming her with his need for a relationship.

He might ask his friends for advice, but they'll just tell him things like, "Be patient. She might come back or, Maybe the relationship has run its course. Maybe it's for the best or, You can't trust women. They are so selfish and just care about themselves.

Of course, none of that helps him.

What he needs is someone to say, Hey, do you actually know what makes a woman feel respect and attraction for a man over the long term? Sure, you and her were sweet in the past, but most couples feel that at the start. To maintain and build on her respect and attraction, you've got to man up. You've got to start making progress towards your biggest goals, dreams and ambitions in life. This gives her a feeling of security about a future with you. It also serves as a way for her to feel proud of you when talking about you to her friends and family. Yet, if you've just been stuck at pretty much the same level in life for years, you're not giving her those feelings. She then has to start worrying about the future. As a result, she starts becoming focused on what she wants to achieve and the next thing you know, she is telling you that she needs time apart to find herself.

How about you?

Why did your ex really break up with you?

What were the real, more subtle reasons that she was either too embarrassed to admit (e.g. you were too emotionally sensitive) or reluctant to admit in case you used those reason to convince her to give you another chance?

That's what you need to get clear on.

Then, you need to change those things about yourself ASAP and then get her back.

When you interact with her and she can see that you've become the kind of man she always wanted you to be (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more masculine, more emotionally independent, ambitious, loving) her excuses for not wanting you back will automatically fade away.

Her guard will come down and she will naturally begin to interact with you and open up to you more and more.

However, make sure that you'

3. Don't expect a committed, dedicated relationship immediately

Just because your ex is open to interacting with you again, it doesn't always mean that she is ready to agree to being in a committed relationship with you right away.

This is why, in many ex back cases, a guy then needs to take things slow by suggesting that he and her just be friends for now.

The great thing about being friends is that it removes the pressure and also gives you and her a reason to stay in contact and see each other, without it having to be all about getting back together right away.

As a so called friend, you can text her, message her on social media, call her and even hang out with her in person.

If she ever says, Why are we seeing so much of each other? We're supposed to be broken up, you can respond by saying, Hey, we're friends now. That's what friends do.

They talk and they hang out together and they stay involved in each other's lives. We can do that. It's fine.

Important: The aim of being friends with your ex is to allow her not to feel pressured into making a commitment right away.

However, it's not actually about being a nice friend to her.

Don't make the mistake of being nice and sweet and neutral around her.

That doesn't work.

You have to use the so called "friendship" as a way for you to interact with her and make her feel attracted to you in a sexual way, not a friendly way.

So, make sure that you flirt with her and build up sexual tension inside of her, so she wants to release that tension with kissing and sex.

Be a confident, emotionally masculine man who is doing what he needs to do to get back the woman he loves.

That is a good thing for you and her, so don't feel bad about it.

She is going to be getting an even better man this time and you are going to experience her in a completely new way as well (i.e. she's going to be more attracted to you than she ever has been before).

Another tip for getting your ex back, without seeming like you're pressuring her into it, is to

4. Stop talking about your future as a couple and just have fun together

For example: When talking to his ex, a guy might say things like, "When we get back together again, I promise you that things will be different. You'll see that I really have changed" or, "When you and I are back together again, we can go on that vacation I've always been promising you" or, "I'll be a better boyfriend/fiancé/husband the next time around" or, "I will make sure that we never get to the point where we have to break up. I will do better this time, I promise. You have my word."

He might feel as though he's doing the right thing by reassuring her like that, but if she's not sure about giving him another chance, his words will simply make her feel pressured into committing to a future with him.

Alternatively, a guy might come across like she'd be doing him a favor if she gives him another chance (e.g. by saying things like, "You won't regret it, if you give me another chance. I'll be the best boyfriend/fiancé/husband in the world and do whatever you want me to do to make you happy. It doesn't matter what you want me to do, I will do it. I will make it my mission to make you happy").

She then feels as though he has lost all sense of confidence and self-respect and is essentially offering to be in the lower position in the relationship, just so he can be with her.

That's not attractive to a woman.

A woman doesn't want to feel like she's doing her ex a favor by being with him again.

She wants to feel like heâs the kind of guy she can look up to, respect and feel proud to call her man (i.e. because he has made the necessary adjustments to his thinking and behavior and is now making her feel attracted in new and exciting ways).

So, if you really want to get your ex back without seeming like youâre pressuring her, itâs always best to avoid talking about a future together as a couple.

Instead, just focus on having fun and getting to know each other in a whole new way.

For example: If youâre talking to her on the phone, you can say, âHey, letâs stop talking about the relationship we used to have. Thatâs over now. Instead, letâs pretend for a moment that weâve just met for the first time and weâre getting to know each other. Thereâs no more negative memories from the past and the future is a mystery. All we have is here and now. We can then like, or dislike each other based on who we are right now, rather than constantly focusing on what happened before, or what might happen in the future. Letâs just talk and see how we feel about each other right now.â

Not only does saying something like that take the pressure off, but it also makes her see you in a very different (more positive) light.

She drops her guard a little, so she can allow herself to feel and experience the new you, without thinking about the past.

If you really have improved and changed (e.g. if you were insecure or emotionally sensitive before, you are now very confident and emotionally masculine), she will naturally feel attracted to the new you.

From there, every time you interact with her (via text message, on social media, on a phone call, and especially in person) just focus on making her smile, laugh and feel at ease.

The more you make her laugh, smile and enjoy herself, the more she will be able to relax and reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

Then, getting back together will happen naturally because itâs feels good for the both of you.

On the other hand, if you put too much pressure on her by talking about a future together as a couple, she will just pull away from you even more than she has been lately.

Finallyâ!

5. Laugh and tell her to relax if she is feeling pressured

Many guys take a woman's comments too seriously after a break up and begin to handle her like fragile glass.

For example: If she says, âIâm just too scared of getting hurt again. Iâm so confused. I donât know how I feel about you right now. Please stop pressuring me and give me some space to figure things out for myself,â a guy might get nervous about scaring her off.

As a result, he might then start being extra nice and sweet to her and saying things like, âWhatever you want is fine by me. You call the shots and Iâll do whatever makes you comfortable. Take your time. Iâm sorry for pressuring you. Iâll always be here for you. I am willing to wait as long as it takes.â

Alternatively, he might back off and give her a few weeks or even a couple of months of space, in the hope that she will relax and feel better about the idea of getting back together again.

Yet, in most cases, rather than want him more, she secretly feels turned off how he takes her drama too seriously.

She wants him to be man enough not to take everything so seriously and simply be able to laugh, smile and guide the conversation back to feel good emotions.

So, the next time your ex gets too emotional and says things like, *â€œIâ€™m just too scared of getting hurt again. Iâ€™m so confused. I donâ€™t know how I feel about you right now. Please stop pressuring me and give me some space to figure things out for myself,*â€œ rather than make a big deal about it, just use it as an opportunity to spark her feelings for you.

For example: You can laugh (important) and say something along the lines of, *â€œWhoooo! You sure are making a big fuss over nothing. All Iâ€™m asking for is that we meet up for a quick cup of coffee and a catch up. Itâ€™s 10 minutes of having coffee as friends only. Itâ€™s not a marriage proposal! Iâ€™m sure you can handle 10 minutes, right? Besides, if you donâ€™t want to talk to me after that, I will respect it and give you space,*â€œ and have laugh with her about it.

She will then most-likely laugh and maybe even feel a bit embarrassed about making such a big deal over meeting up with you.

She will also feel respect and attraction for you for not getting sucked into her fake drama.

She will realize that youâ€™re now a very different man from the one she broke up with (e.g. youâ€™re more confident and emotionally strong, youâ€™re emotionally masculine in a way that makes her feel totally feminine around you, youâ€™re ballsy and stand up to her) and wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from reconnecting with her original feelings of love for you.

When that happens, you will easily get her back without seeming like youâ€™re pressuring her into it because she will want it too.

My Girlfriend Asked Me to Not Contact Her Because She's Worried That I Will Change Her Mind

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your girlfriend asked you not to contact her because she's worried that you will change her mind, here's what you need to do:

1. Tell her that you accept the break up and only want to meet up as friends

Regardless of what your ex is saying right now, if you want her back, then it's very important that you don't do what she's asking you to (i.e. give her space).

If you listen to her, you're simply playing into her hands and giving her too much power over you.

Think about it!

She's not going to help you get her back.

That's not her plan.

Her plan at the moment is to continue on with the break up, move on and not get back with you.

If you're going to get her back, you will have to defy her orders or instructions and just do what actually works to get a woman back.

So, if she says that you shouldn't contact her because she's worried that you will change her mind, just laugh at her and her suggestion and don't take it so seriously.

After all, if she feels as though you can change her mind, she obviously still has feelings for you and knows it.

So, you're not going to achieve anything by listening to her and not contacting her or meeting up with her.

If you do follow her orders and she is missing you, she might try to get you off her mind by hooking up with a new guy, or hooking up with a few new guys until she stops thinking about you.

If she happens to meet a guy who is as cool as you, then she might decide to latch onto him and have a relationship, to help herself get over you and leave you behind.

So, just get her on a phone call and say something along the lines of, "Hey, I know that you don't want me to contact you right now because you're afraid I'm going to try and change your mind. However, I want you to know I accept that we're broken up and I promise not to pressure you into doing anything you don't want. We can just be friends now, okay?"

Of course, she might still respond by saying something like, "I'm not sure that's a good idea," or "I don't know. I don't think we can be just friends."

Regardless of what she says, don't get upset or start thinking, "Oh no! This isn't working! It's hopeless. I've lost her forever!"

Instead, just maintain your confidence around her and say in a joking way, "Hey, don't be so dramatic. We can be friends. Weâ€™re mature enough to do that, right?â€™

If she agrees, you can then say, â€™Well, letâ€™s prove that to ourselves by catching up for a quick coffee as friends.â€™

She might say something along the lines of, â€™Okay. Just this once.â€™

Then, just go ahead and make plans with her to meet up when itâ€™s suitable for both of you.

If she doesnâ€™t agree, just tell her that if she meets up with you this time, you promise to never contact her again after that.

Of course, when you meet up with her and reignite her feelings for you in person, sheâ€™s not going to want you to never contact her again.

Youâ€™re most likely going to end up hugging, kissing, having sex and getting back together.

So, just do what youâ€™ve got to do to get to a meet up with her.

However, before you meet up with her, make sure that youâ€™

2. Quickly change the things about you that have been turning her off

When you meet up with her, youâ€™ve got to let her experience the new and improved you.

For example:

- You are more confident and self-assured than ever before, rather than feeling insecure and uncertain around her like you were leading up to, during or after the break up.
- Youâ€™re more emotionally independent and are now busy pursuing all the things you neglected before because of your relationship with her (e.g. your goals and dreams, interest, hobbies, hanging out with your friends) and having been sitting around alone and waiting for her to give you another chance.
- You stand up to her in a dominant, but loving way, rather than being a pushover and putting up with her bad treatment of you.
- You believe in yourself and in your value to her, rather than believing you got lucky with her or that sheâ€™s now too good for you.
- You donâ€™t take everything so seriously and can laugh at her (in a loving way) when she throws a tantrum or tries to make you feel bad for your past mistakes.
- You use humor to break down her defenses and stimulate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, rather than being so serious, or on your best behavior around her because you think it will impress her or make her take pity on you.

The more she can see that youâ€™ve changed, the less she will be able to keep you at arms length.

So, if you feel like youâ€™re ready to properly re-attract herâ€™

3. Meet up with her and get back together

Regardless of how resistant your girlfriend might be to the idea of seeing you again, you just have to get her to agree to meet up with you in person.

For example: If she is saying things like, “Please stop pressuring me. I need you to leave me alone and not contact me anymore, because I’m worried that you will change my mind and I don’t want that to happen. I need some space and I want you to respect that” you can say to her, “We don’t have to get back together. I just think it would be good for both of us to meet up one last time to say goodbye in person. Then, if you don’t want me to contact you after that, I promise to respect your wishes.”

By saying something like that to her, you’re effectively taking off the pressure and she will then be more likely to agree to meet up.

When you meet up with her, you need to keep sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel happy to be seeing you again, being confident around her even when she’s being closed off and reserved, making her feel feminine in comparison to your masculine vibe, using flirting and humor to create sexual tension).

If you’ve successfully switched her feelings back on, she will be giving you signs that she’s open to you (e.g. licking her lips, touching your hand or leg during conversation, playing with her hair or her throat, talking in a sexual way, hinting that she has been missing you).

It’s then up to you to take the lead and get her back.

For example: You can start off by initiating a hug.

You can do that by saying something along the lines of, “I declare this meet up a great success. Not only did we have fun together, but we’ve also proven that we are cool exes who can hang out with each other and be mature about it. So, based on that, I think we should give each other a hug. Come here” bring it in for a hug.

She might be a little resistant at first, and may say, “No, you promised that you wouldn’t try to make me change my mind about being broken up.”

If so, just remain confident and relaxed and say, “Hey, it’s just a hug. We’re friends now and friends can give each other hug without it being a big deal. So, come here” and then lean in and hug her.

She will then most likely open up and hug you.

Then, give her a warm, firm squeeze and say something like, “Mmmm” you smell really good for an ex. I like it, and then lean in and give her a quick kiss on the lips.

Depending on how she responds, you can either deepen the kiss, or let her go and just focus on building on her feelings for you some more.

If she can see that you’re being a confident, emotionally mature man around her, she won’t be able to stop herself from imagining what it would be like if you and her got back together.

From there, it’s up to you to open her eyes to the fact that falling back in love with each other will be one of the most exhilarating feelings she will ever experience in life.

Don’t tell her that, of course.

Just let her experience it by continuing to build on her reawakened feelings for you.

However

4. If she doesn't want to get back together at the meet up, just agree to remain open to seeing each other as friends one more time

Sometimes, a woman might be resistant to the idea of getting back together again with a guy at the first meet up (e.g. she doesn't want to come across as being too easy, he hasn't fully reactivated her feelings for him, she was starting to get used to the idea of being single again).

So, if your girlfriend doesn't want to get back together again immediately, don't worry.

Just maintain your confidence and say in a friendly, easy-going way (not hurt, sulking, whiney), â€œHey, you don't need to feel pressured about deciding whether or not you want to get back together. Let's just remain broken up and remain open to the possibility of maybe catching up to say hi as friends.â€

She will most-likely relax a bit and say something like, â€œOkay. I guess we can do that.â€

You can then keep talking to her and eventually suggest catching up, or give her a few days of space, contact her and get her to meet up with you as friends.

At the second meet up (if you didn't get back together at the first meet up), you can now!

5. Get her back into a relationship with you

If she meets up with you a second time, then it's almost certain that she wants to get back with you.

She might just be playing hard to get to test your confidence, or to see if you'll stop being the cool guy that you are and begin handing over your balls to her.

So, make sure that you remain confident and know that she really does have feelings for you.

Women are naturally attracted to guys who know that they are attractive to a woman and don't need to hear her say it.

Having that type of confidence is very sexy to women.

So, believe in yourself.

The more attracted you can make her feel when she interacts with you, the more will believe that getting back with you is something that she wants to do, rather than something you're forcing her into.

It will be about her following her heart and surrendering to the exciting feelings of loving attraction, rather than you being a desperate ex who needs her back to feel good about yourself again.

Talking about feeling good!

If possible, try to get to sex when you meet up with her.

Sex speeds up the process of reconciling a relationship and stops a lot of the mind games or playing hard to get on a woman's part.

Of course, sex doesn't fix your relationship problems with her, but it definitely helps to get things back on track.

So, lead the way and make it happen.

Get her to feel properly attracted to you again and guide her to a hug, kiss, sex and then back into a relationship.

My Ex Doesn't Want to Meet Up Right Now Because it's Still Too Soon

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your ex doesn't want to meet up right now because it's still too soon, here's what you need to do!

1. Tell her that you and her should meet up in a week

The next time you talk to your ex, rather than do what you've been doing up to now (i.e. asking her to meet up with you right away), suggest that you and her take a week of space and then meet up.

If she says something along the lines of, "No. I don't think a week is enough time. It's still too soon," you can say to her, "Look, I don't want to drag this on longer than it needs to. There's really no point going on and on for weeks and months to find out how we really feel. If you and I want to break up for real, we will know within a week. To be mature and respectful towards each other, we should at least agree to meet up and say goodbye in a friendly way at a coffee shop or diner."

In most cases, a woman will then agree to meet up in a week.

In some cases where the woman is really angry with her ex for what happened, or she still has feelings for him, she may resist the idea of meeting up completely.

If that happens, you just need to stay relaxed and in a confident way say, "If nothing else, think of it as our goodbye cup of coffee. After that, if you don't ever want to see me again, we can go our separate ways and I will never contact you again. Let's set a definite day and time to do this. I promise it will be good for both of us to wipe the slate clean and say goodbye in a friendly way. We can then move forward without all the baggage from the past. So, how about it? I can do Tuesday and Thursday at the moment. Which of those days suit you best?"

You can then go ahead and make plans to meet up with her.

From there you need to

2. Quickly transform yourself emotionally

The key to getting your ex back is to make sure that when you meet up with her, you have already transformed yourself into the type of man she always wanted you to be.

Of course, this doesn't mean you have to become perfect, but at least begin to get rid of your insecurities and emotional weaknesses, so you can be emotionally attractive to her.

For example: If one of the reasons why she dumped you was due to you becoming too insecure or emotionally sensitive, it's absolutely essential that you use the week apart to focus on making yourself more confident, self-assured and emotionally stronger than ever before.

You should also pay close attention to the subtle or obvious problems that arose in your relationship with your ex and take steps to improve on those things.

For instance, if you always allowed your ex to get her own way because you didn't want to get into an argument or fight with her, focus on becoming more emotionally dominant and manly.

If you treated her more like a neutral friend than a sexy, girly, feminine woman, shock her (in a good way) by flirting with her and making her feel feminine and girly in your presence.

Remember: Women are naturally attracted to certain personality traits and behaviors in men (e.g. emotional strength, emotional masculinity, masculine vibe, confidence, drive and determination, emotional independence, emotional maturity).

At the same time, there are also personality traits and behaviors that turn women off (e.g. emotional weakness, insecurity, neediness, emotional immaturity, a lack of purpose in life, neutral or feminine vibe).

The key to getting your ex back is to make sure that when you interact with her from now on, you are displaying some of the behaviors and traits that will naturally attract her to you again.

The more emotionally attractive you become, the less she will be able to resist the idea of giving you another chance because interacting with you feels so good to her.

The next step is to

3. Prepare for the meet up

The meet up with your ex is where everything happens.

In other words, you're either going to reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction and make her want you back, or you're going to turn her off and cause her to want to remain broken up.

This is why it's so important that you are fully prepared to re-attract her when you meet up with her.

How can you do that?

Start by answering the following questions:

- Do you know how you are going to make her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you when you interact with her?

For example: One of the best ways to spark a woman's feelings of respect, attraction and love for you is by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be in your company again, especially if she is being cold, distant or rude.

The happier she feels in your presence, the less she can hold on to all the negative things about you she doesn't like.

Another way to make her feel some respect and attraction is to show her your confidence by remaining calm when she's being cold, aloof or even rude towards you.

Women are instinctively attracted to the emotional strength in men (i.e. balls), so when your ex can see that you're not feeling insecure or doubting your value to her no matter what she says or does, it automatically triggers her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Another way is by making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine vibe.

Where a lot of guys go wrong is by being too afraid to flirt and create sexual tension with an ex, so they end up being too nice or neutral around her, which doesn't turn her on at all.

So, don't suppress your masculinity to seem extra nice, polite or sensitive.

Women are attracted to balls, not fear.

Be the man and let her experience that as she interacts with you and she will definitely feel some attraction for you.

Another question is

- Do you know the subtle reasons why she broke up with you?

In most cases, a woman will break up with a guy without giving him a full explanation about her real, more subtle reasons for breaking up with him.

For example: She might say something vague like, "Look, I'm just tired of trying to make things work between us. We're always arguing and fighting. Maybe it's better if we take a break from each other to see how we both feel."

Unfortunately, that leaves a guy not knowing what her real reasons for breaking up with him are and as a result, he doesn't know what to change and improve about himself to get her back.

It seems to be about the arguing and fighting, but it's not.

She was creating arguments and being moody because she was turned off at how emotionally sensitive he was, or annoyed at how much power he gave her in the relationship, which ended up making her feel more like the "man" rather than the girl.

So, if he says to her, "Okay, I promise to stop arguing with you. I will be nicer" she knows that he just doesn't get it.

He doesn't understand her real reasons for breaking up with him and he probably won't ever realize it, so she decides to leave him and hopefully find a guy who knows how to be a real man in a relationship.

This is why you must discover your ex's real, subtle reasons for breaking up with you before you meet up with her.

She needs to see that you've understood what caused her to disconnect with her feelings for you and that you have already taken steps to improve on those things.

For example: Some of the most common reasons why a woman will break up with a guy but not tell him about are:

- He took her for granted (e.g. he didn't pull his weight in the relationship, he expected her to look good for him, but he didn't do the same for her, he always put her in second place to his work, family or friends).
- He became jealous and controlling.
- He broke his promises to her.
- He wasn't supportive of her ideas, dreams and goals.
- He became emotionally distant towards her.
- He became too emotionally dependent on her (e.g. stopped hanging out with his friends, gave up on his big goals and dreams in life to spend more time with her).
- He became too insecure about his value to her and as a result, he was clingy and needy.

Do any of those ring true for you?

If so, you now have a better idea of your ex's real, hidden reasons for breaking up with you and what you actually need to change to get her back.

Another question is

- Have you actually changed and improved?

A lot of guys will quickly try to get an ex back before they've actually made an effort to change and improve.

For example: A guy might say to himself, "I just need to get her to meet up with me as quickly as possible so I can convince her to give me another chance, before she gets over me and moves on. Then, when we're back together again, I will make the effort to change and be more of the man she wants me to be. I have to get her back first. I can change later. Getting her back now is the most important thing."

Yet, it's not the most important thing to her.

She wants to be able to feel proper respect, attraction and love for the guy that she is in a relationship with.

After breaking up, she doesn't want to have to give him another chance and wait and hope that he might be able to figure out her real reasons for leaving him, change and then be a better man.

She wants him to change first, interact with her and re-attract her and then, she will open back up to giving him another chance.

So, if you want your ex to give you another chance, make sure that you change and improve before you contact her.

When you change and improve on the things that caused your ex to lose respect and attraction for you, her feelings for you will also change.

It happens naturally and automatically.

On the other hand, if you try to convince her to get back together again without changing, she will remain turned off and continue to refuse your attempts to get back with her.

Another question is

- Do you know what type of relationship dynamic will make her the happiest, or are you hoping to make her happy by giving her all the power now?

Sometimes a guy makes the mistake of thinking that a woman will be happiest if she is in charge of the relationship.

He believes that if she gets to call the shots, make all the decisions and get her way all the time, she will have nothing to get annoyed with him about and they can then have a perfect relationship and live happily ever after.

Yet, it rarely works out that way.

For a woman to maintain her feelings of respect and attraction for her man, she needs to be able to look up to him and respect him as the leader of the relationship.

It's not about bossing her around and being controlling or demanding.

Instead, itâ€™s about being a confident, good man and leading the way, so she can relax into the feminine role of being your girl/woman, rather than having to be more masculine and help you lead the way.

6 Mistakes to Avoid When an Ex Doesnâ€™t Want to Meet Up Right Away

When a woman doesnâ€™t want to meet up with her ex because she feels that itâ€™s still too soon, a guy may begin to fear losing her completely.

He might think to himself, â€œIf I donâ€™t see her right away, she will get over me and then I wonâ€™t be able to get her back. She might meet another guy, have sex with him and then I will lose my chance with her. I need to do whatever I can to see her right now, so that I can explain to her what happened, apologize and try to make it up to her. Then, she will give me another chance. I canâ€™t afford to let her go and then lose her forever. I have to push for a meet up immediately.â€

As a result, he might make some of the following mistakes, which turn her off even more:

1. Begging and pleading with her

Why does this turn her off?

A womanâ€™s attraction to a man is based mostly on his ability to make her feel like she can look up to him, respect him, feel attracted to him and feel proud of him as her man.

So, when a guy is begging and pleading and being emotionally weak and needy, heâ€™s actually making her feel the opposite of the way he needs to make her feel to get her back.

2. Seeking pity for how hurt he is that sheâ€™s acting this way

Why does this turn her off?

A woman doesnâ€™t want to be manipulated into giving her ex another chance simply because he canâ€™t handle his emotions or deal with the reality of being broken up with.

When a woman breaks up with a guy, itâ€™s usually because she has lost too much respect, attraction and love for him as a man.

So, when he whines to her and tries to get her to feel sorry for him, rather than regretting her decision to not meet up with him, she feels like she is doing the right thing by steering clear of him.

3. Pouring his heart out via text, e-mail or letter to say that she is the one for him

Why does this turn her off?

When a woman canâ€™t see a guyâ€™s body language, or at least hear the tonality of his voice over the phone, she has to guess at how he was feeling when he wrote her the text, e-mail or letter.

Rather than feeling flattered that he considers her to be the one for him, she will interpret everything that he is writing based on her perception of him around the time of the break up, during the break up or after the break up (i.e. not in a favorable light).

So, if he was insecure and needy, she will interpret his text, e-mail or letter as a sign that heâs still same because he doesnât have the balls to call her on the phone.

4. Pleading with her to tell him if there is another guy

Why does this turn her off?

Women are attracted to alpha males.

Alpha males donât look at other guys as being on their level.

An alpha male knows that he is the man and no other guy compares.

Of course, he doesnât have to go around saying that.

Itâs just a vibe he gives off and is something that a woman picks up on based on his thinking, behavior and actions.

So, pleading with his ex girl to tell him if there is another guy in the picture, makes him look like an insecure, lower ranking male, which is an automatic turn off for her.

5. Pleading with her to remain faithful to him during the time apart

Why does this turn her off?

As far as a woman is concerned, once sheâs broken up with her ex, he has no rights to decide on if and who she dates, has sex with or even falls in love with.

So, if a guy is pleading with her to remain faithful to him, she will feel annoyed with him for telling her how to behave now that theyâre no longer together.

In some cases, a woman might even intentionally hook up with another guy just to show her ex that he doesnât have a say in her life anymore.

6. Not giving her 3-7 days of space to cool down and miss him

Why does this turn her off?

When a guy gives a woman a few days of space, she has the opportunity to calm down and stop focusing on things about him that she doesnât like.

She gets to experience being alone and may even begin to really miss him (e.g. she remembers the nice things they used to do together in the evenings, how he used to bring her coffee in bed on Sunday mornings, how they used to go shopping together on Saturdayâs, how good it felt to be a couple, rather than being on her own).

So, if her ex keeps calling her, texting her, sending her e-mails and messages on social media, rather than having a chance to miss him, she will feel smothered by his neediness and remain closed off.

This is why giving her 3 to 7 days of space is essential.

If your ex doesnât want to meet up with you right now because itâs still too soon for her.

Donât let that upset you or make you panic and fear losing her forever.

Instead, just focus on improving your ability to attract her based on the man you are now.

When she can see for herself that you really are different now, her feelings will naturally begin to flood back into her heart and mind.

When that happens, she will agree to meet up and will enjoy how she feels as she interact with the new and improved you.

As a result, you and her will naturally get back together and then enjoy an even better relationship than you had before.

How Can I Get My Ex to See Me as the Man She Originally Fell in Love With?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

To get your ex to see you as the man she originally fell in love with, you need to:

1. Add to your emotional attractiveness before you contact her

When you contact your ex, allow her to sense that you really are a different man than you were leading up to the break up.

For example: You are now much more confident, charismatic, charming, funny and emotionally masculine.

Why is this important?

Even though the man that your ex originally fell in love with was awesome, somewhere along the way he slipped up and stopped being as appealing.

Certain aspects of your thinking and behavior changed and caused her to lose respect for you (e.g. you became insecure about your attractiveness to her, you became clingy or needy, you gave her too much power over you, or you didn't allow to have any power because you were so controlling).

So, if you contact your ex without first improving your emotional attractiveness to her at all, rather than see you as the guy she fell in love with, she will just remember you as the guy she fell out of love with.

Instead of reminiscing and thinking, â€œMmmâ€ when I met him, he was such a wonderful, charismatic, confident man. I really liked that about him. He was so amazing and based on that, I think getting back together again is a great idea, â€œsheâ€™s going to be thinking something like, â€œHe made me fall in love with him and then changed. It was all an act. Now he wants me to forget about his mistakes and give him a chance because of how good things used to be. No way. Heâ€™s not like he was in the beginning. All I see is the guy I broke up with and I donâ€™t want that back. Itâ€™s over between me and him.

So, make sure that you work on your weaknesses before you contact her.

When you do, she will be able to see that youâ€™ve become an even better man than you originally were.

Youâ€™ve leveled up as a man and have used the experience to quickly, learn, grow and be who you should have been all along.

Of course, don't tell her that before you reactivate her feelings!

If your ex isn't feeling much respect, sexual attraction and love for you rush to her and tell her about all your changes and realizations, she's just not going to care.

You have to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you by interacting with her and letting her experience the changes.

Don't try to convince her that youâ€™ve changed by telling her about what youâ€™ve changed. Let her experience it, so she can decide that for herself.

Thatâs how a woman wants it to be.

If you try to convince her with words, she will keep her guard up and play hard to get and if you try even harder, she will feel turned off because you start to appear desperate.

So, make changes and get ready to let her experience that the next time you interact with her on a phone call or in person.

If you do that, her guard will come down and she will open up again and allow herself to go with the flow and hug, kiss and have sex with you again.

Thatâs how it works.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys who are trying to get an ex woman donât know that.

For example: Many guys think that the love they shared with their ex woman should be reason enough for her to give him another chance.

Itâs not.

That was before and this is now.

You have to make her feel respect, attraction and love now, rather than trying to convince her to be with you because of how good things were before.

The reality is that a man and a woman are in a relationship together because they choose to be with each other.

Itâs a decision that they both make based on how they feel.

So, if a woman doesnât feel like a guy is able to maintain her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him (i.e. because he becomes needy, insecure, immature, childish, wimpy or weak-minded), she will eventually decide to break up with him and move on.

He doesnât own her (and visa versa) and she doesnât have to stick with him simply because they used to be in love.

Staying together in a relationship happens when both the man and the woman decide to be in it.

If either the man or woman decides not to be in the relationship anymore, they can leave, even if the love was great in the beginning.

So, if you want to get your ex back, you must now add to your emotional attractiveness to reignite her feelings for you, rather than hoping because she loved you before, she should do so again.

For example:

- If you became needy because you lacked purpose in life outside of the relationship and essentially made her your reason for living, then you need to start making progress towards your biggest goals in life to give yourself purpose and direction.
- If you become too emotionally sensitive, you need to start being more of a man by making yourself be more emotionally masculine (i.e. ballsy, emotionally tough).
- If you took her for granted and treated her badly, you need to get back to being a more balanced, loving man.
- If you slipped into the habit of giving her too much power and sucking up to her all the time, you need to reclaim your balls and start being a more masculine man.

The list goes on.

There are so many ways that you can improve your emotional attractiveness.

You must improve in the ways that apply to your relationship, so she will be able to see that you really have leveled up as a man and become who she always wanted you to be.

Once you've improved your emotional attractiveness, you need to

2. Contact her to interact with her on a phone call and say hi as a friend or ex

One of the quickest ways to reignite a woman's feelings for you again is by making her smile and laugh when she's talking to you on the phone or in person.

Laughter stops her from focusing on the past and on the negative things about you she doesn't like, which then allows her to see you with new eyes.

When she's smiling and laughing while talking to you, instead of thinking, "What a jerk! He stuffed up and I'm never going to forget that," she's more likely to be thinking something like, "This is fun. I'm actually enjoying myself talking to him now. This new version of him reminds me a lot of the man I originally fell in love with. I like that we're talking again. Maybe we don't have to remain broken up. Maybe there is a chance for us."

She then becomes open to seeing you in person.

By the way

You can't achieve that via text messages.

So many guys try to hide behind texts and it just doesn't work.

You have to get her on a phone call where she can hear the tonality of your voice and get a sense of your new and improved confidence and emotional strength.

So, only use text to break the ice with your ex.

Then, get her on a phone call with you right away.

When talking to her over the phone, make sure to keep the conversation light and easy-going, while also being very confident.

Don't dull down your confidence to be nice or be extra polite.

It doesn't work.

Women respect balls, so be a good guy, but be very confident and easy-going as you talk to her.

Additionally, make sure that you're not being too serious about everything.

Just relax and be light-hearted, so she can relax as well.

Where a lot of guys go wrong is by trying to have a serious, emotional conversation with their ex girl, even though she doesn't fully respect him or feel re-attracted to him yet.

In other words, the feelings aren't mutual yet.

Women don't respond well to relationship conversations (especially after a break up) if the feelings aren't mutual.

For example: A guy might call his ex on the phone and after the initial "Hello," he might start saying things like, "Look, we really need to discuss what went wrong in the relationship so *that we can fix it. I know I stuffed up in many ways and Iâ€™m ready to do whatever it takes to get you back. So letâ€™s get everything out in the open now and fix this. What do you feel I could do better in the relationship to keep you happy? What do you need from me to be able to give me another chance?*â€”

Yet, when a woman has disconnected with her feelings of respect and attraction for a guy, hearing him say something like that to her doesnâ€™t make her think, *â€œWell, thatâ€™s very mature of him, isnâ€™t it? Wow. Clearly heâ€™s doing his best to improve himself. If we talk things through, Iâ€™m sure we will be able to get our relationship back again. Heâ€™s right! I just need to be open, help him fix things and he can get me back! Yayyy!*â€”

Instead, she will think something like, *â€œReally? He calls me on the phone and the first thing he wants to talk about is how I can help him to become a better man so he can get me back. What if I donâ€™t want to get back together right now? Has he even considered that? Maybe Iâ€™d prefer to find myself a guy who already knows how to be a real man, rather than have to spend a lifetime fixing a guy who doesnâ€™t even know what I need to feel attracted to him.*â€”

She then closes up, plays hard to get and potentially even says something like, *â€œLook, Iâ€™m sorry, but I donâ€™t have feelings for you anymore. Itâ€™s over. You need to accept that*â€” because heâ€™s trying to get a relationship before he has re-attracted her.

So, if you want to get your ex to see you as the man she originally fell in love with, I recommend that you steer clear of serious discussions about the relationship at the moment.

Instead, you need to reignite her feelings for you first and one of the best ways to do that is by getting her smiling, laughing and feeling good when talking to you.

When you make her laugh, she automatically feels attracted to the fact that you have the confidence to joke around with her, even though you and her are broken up.

Women hate it when a guy suddenly gets on his best behavior when under pressure (e.g. a guy is worried about joking around after being dumped, because he fears the woman will get angry at him and never talk to him again).

Remember: Women respect balls.

So, donâ€™t be afraid to be confident and get her smiling, laughing and feeling good when talking to you.

If you do that, she can then stop focusing on things about you that she didnâ€™t like and start focusing on what she does like about the new and improved you.

When sheâ€™s relaxed and having fun talking to you againâ€”

3. Arrange to meet up in person

After a bit more conversation where you make her laugh and smile, suggest a meet up so you and her can catch up in person.

For example: You can say something along the lines of, *â€œWell, itâ€™s been fun talking to you again. I guess you and I can still enjoy each otherâ€™s company, even though weâ€™re only friends now. So, friendâ€”how about we meet up sometime later this week to say hello in person? Letâ€™s grab a quick coffee to say hi.*â€”

If she seems a bit hesitant, don't worry about it.

Just maintain your confidence and say in a joking way, â€œHey, it's just a quick catch up as friends. If it makes you feel better, we'll pay for our own coffee so that it doesn't feel like a date or anything like that, okay?â€ and laugh with her about it.

When she sees that you're being so relaxed about the meet up, she will likely say â€œYes,â€ because she won't want to come across as being the one who is making a big deal over nothing.

When you meet up with her you can then

4. Educate her on the reality that the original spark between you and her still exists

After you have been reigniting her feelings for you (i.e. making her feel sparks of respect, attraction and love for you again), she will become much more open to you and to talking about relationships.

At that point, you can explain to her that successful couples who stay together for life understand that no-one is perfect at all times.

They also understand that in a relationship, mistakes will sometimes be made and it's simply a chance to learn and grow as people, rather than a mistake they have to keep making over and over again in the relationship.

Additionally, just because a guy (or a woman) makes a mistake, it doesn't mean that the love dies.

In fact, as long as they are willing to forgive each other and as long as the one who stuffed up puts in the effort to change and improve and become a better person, then the spark will not only still be there, but it will grow even stronger over time.

They become one of those couples who literally become closer and closer over time and fall more and more in love.

It's like when people say, â€œYou have to fall in love with each other over and over again.â€

That happens when mistakes are made, forgiveness is given and whoever made the mistake improves and becomes an even better person in the relationship.

As a result, the couple becomes an even better match for each other over time, until it gets to the point where they are completely in love and are so happy together for the rest of their lives.

That's how it really works.

So, even though you made some mistakes and it ended in a break up with her, it doesn't mean that the spark and the love between you and her is dead.

Instead, it has simply been pushed into the background, or has tried to be forgotten about, so both of you could move on.

Yet, it's still there.

All she needs to do is allow herself to feel it again.

By the way

When you say that kind of thing to her, make sure you don't talk as though you're in a romantic movie (e.g. getting all soppy and emotional, being overly dramatic and saying things like, â€œWeâ€™re meant to be together and if you just give me a chance, you will see that Iâ€™m still the guy you originally fell in love withâ€).

If you do, her guard will go up and she will wonder why something just doesnâ€™t feel right (i.e. you seem to be putting on an act, itâ€™s not natural, it seems like youâ€™re forcing her into it).

So, forget about whatâ€™s supposed to work in the movies and focus instead on what actually works in real life.

What works in real life?

Be confident, real and easy-going when you tell her this and she will smile and reconnect with the original spark of attraction she once felt for you.

Except this time around, she will feel even more attraction because you will be attracting her in new and interesting ways that she will want to explore (e.g. youâ€™re more emotionally mature now, youâ€™re more confident, youâ€™re more manly).

5. Show her that you are now a much better man than the one she fell in love with

She will sense this by the way that you now you talk, think, feel, behave, take action and respond and react to her.

For example: If she tries to squash the idea of getting back together, you can remain confident, laugh and say, â€œHeyyy, youâ€™re killing the idea before you even know how good it might feel.â€

By saying something like this to her, it instantly proves to her that you have changed in some of the following ways:

- Youâ€™re more confident now and arenâ€™t feeling nervous or unsure of yourself, even though she is playing hard to get.
- You believe in your attractiveness and value to her, even though she is trying to make you feel insecure.
- You have the confidence and emotional intelligence to use humor to break through her defenses, lighten the mood and make her feel attracted to you.
- You make her feel feminine and girly by being more emotionally masculine than her (i.e. you donâ€™t let her dominate you with her confident personality).

The more she interacts with you and sees that your thinking and behavior is at a completely different level from the one you were at when she broke up with you, the more respect and attraction she will feel for you.

When that happens, it becomes a lot easier for her to see you as the man she originally fell in love with.

On the other hand, if you try to get her approval (e.g. by being extra nice and sweet, never standing up to her when she disagrees with you or tries to make you feel insecure around her), she will simply continue to see you as the guy she fell out of love with.

Important: Women naturally respect a man who doesnâ€™t seek the approval of women, or anyone else, to feel good about himself.

You have to believe in yourself no matter what she says or does to try to make you feel insecure or unsure of yourself.

This doesn't mean that you should be disrespectful, arrogant or rude towards your ex.

Instead, just approve of yourself, regardless of what she says and does.

Be a good guy, but believe in yourself no matter what she says or does.

When your ex notices that even though you still care for her and want her back, you don't actually need her back to feel good about yourself, she will automatically respect you.

She will then feel drawn to you and begin reconnecting with her original feelings of love for you.

Finally!

6. If she doesn't want to get back together right away, agree to catch up as friends one more time to see how you feel

In some cases, a woman won't be open to getting back together after the first meet up.

So, if your ex says something like, "Look, you have changed and I can see that, but I'm just not ready to get back together again right now," don't let it upset you and make you think things like, "It's hopeless! She still hates me and I can't seem to convince her. I can't do it! I've lost her forever!"

If you think like that, she will pick up on your insecurity and will feel turned off.

Then you'll have to start all over again trying to convince her that you really are a new and improved man now.

So, don't let that happen to you.

If your ex doesn't want to get back together right away, just remain confident and say to her (in a friendly, easy-going way), "Hey, I get it. You're not ready yet and that's perfectly fine with me. We don't have to get back together right away. Let's just remain broken up, but keep the door open if we want to catch up as friends again in the next few days or a week, okay?"

She will most likely agree, because you're taking the pressure off her to make a decision about a committed relationship.

After that, you need to use every interaction you have with her via text, e-mail, social media and over the phone, to continue building on her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

By the time you and her meet up again, you should have successfully reawakened her feelings enough for her to start seeing you as the man she originally fell in love with.

As a result, she will want to get back together or at least give the relationship a try to see what happens and how she feels.

Should I Ignore Some of My Ex's Texts to Show Her That I'm Not Needy?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Ignoring your ex's texts isn't going to prove anything if you actually still are needy.

The only thing that is worth doing is varying your response times to her texts, so she doesn't feel like you're sitting around waiting for a text from her at any time of the day or night.

For example: When you get a text from her, sometimes reply immediately, sometimes after a minute or two, after 10 minutes, or even an hour or two.

The reason why is that it's completely normal and natural to do that.

However, completely ignoring your ex's texts as a way of showing her that you're not needy usually backfires, because a woman thinks, "Oh yeah? You want to play games? You'll see how it feels when I ignore you now," and she then plays really hard to get.

It then becomes difficult to reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you because she's ignoring your texts, refusing to answer your phone calls and may even unfriend you on social media.

So, don't bother playing games with your ex to the point where you completely ignore her attempts to reach out to you.

Instead, if you want to show her that you're no longer a needy guy, the best way to go about it is to:

1. Become emotionally independent

When you're busy living a full and productive life (e.g. hanging out with friends, pursuing your big goals and ambitions in life, enjoying a fun, outdoor hobby and interest), it becomes almost impossible to be needy at the same time.

Note that I said "outdoor" and didn't say "indoor" because I'm not talking about playing video games, reading novels or watching TV alone.

I'm talking about getting out and doing something, especially when it involves you being around other people.

So, rather than sitting around feeling sad and lonely without your ex and thinking things like, "My life is so dull and boring without her. She's the one who made everything feel fun and exciting," make sure that you're focusing on being happy, with or without her.

If you honestly do that, she will sense it when you next interact with her and it will make her feel some respect and attraction for you.

How will she sense it?

- By the confident way you talk about things when you chat to her on a phone call or in person.
- By looking at your social media pages and seeing photos of you doing fun things friends and acquaintances.

She will know (without you having to put on an act, or play games) that you're not needy anymore.

As a result, she will automatically feel some respect and attraction for you for making positive, attractive changes in such a short space of time.

2. Take action to fix your issues

A guy can try to hide his neediness from his ex, but it will come across eventually, no matter how good he is at acting or lying.

For example: All she has to do is pretend to show interest in getting back together again to make him excited and happy that he's getting another chance.

Then, she can change her mind by saying something like, "You know, I'm just not sure about this. I think it's better if we stay broken up. I'm sorry if I got your hopes up. I've changed my mind. Please accept that."

If the guy then starts pleading with her and saying things like, "No, don't say that. Please baby, just give me another chance. I can't handle the thought of losing you again when we've come so close to getting back together again," she will instantly know that he hasn't changed and is still needy for her.

Alternatively, a guy might try to hide his neediness by ignoring some of his ex's texts or phone calls, but she can tell that he's just doing that to try and show her that he's not desperately missing her and is potentially losing interest.

She knows how much he wants her back, so she feels turned off by his insincere, manipulative attempt to get her back.

Soon enough, he finds out that she has moved on and when he tries to contact her, she gives him the silent treatment to get revenge for the games he tried to play with her.

So, if you want your ex back ASAP, I don't recommend that you play games with her.

Instead, take quick action to fix your issues and become the emotionally attractive guy that will make her open back up to you.

For example: Although neediness might be the main issue that needs to be fixed, in most relationships there are also secondary issues that a guy has no idea about.

Some of these issues can include jealousy, controlling behavior, or the inability to make his woman feel girly and feminine in his presence.

So, not only do you need to focus on becoming more emotionally independent to get over your neediness, you also need to start improving on some of the other problems as well.

If you stopped being able to make her feel girly and feminine (i.e. because you became too emotionally sensitive and weak), you need to man up right now and get ready to let her experience that when you interact with her.

When you interact with your ex and she can see that you have been man enough to identify your issues and fix them immediately, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

3. Get her on a phone call with you so she can experience the new you for herself

You can spend weeks and even months texting back and forth with your ex, but thatâs not going to stop her from moving on with another guy if he comes along and triggers her sexual and romantic feelings.

So, donât waste time playing games with your ex (e.g. ignoring some of her texts to show her that youâre not needy) and just take real action like the confident, self-believing man you have become.

Get her on a phone call with you and reactivate some of her feelings for you by letting her experience the new and improved you.

How can you do that?

Not by saying, âHey, Iâve really changed. Believe me, Iâm different now,â because that doesnât work.

Telling a woman that youâve changed is completely different to interacting with her, letting her experience the changes and allowing her to decide for herself.

For example: If a guy got broken up with for being insecure, needy and clingy in the relationship with a woman, he has to talk to her and let her see that nothing makes him feel insecure or unsure of himself anymore.

Heâs so confident now, he believes in himself and he has the balls to joke around with her and not worry so much about how she is going to react or respond.

Itâs not about being rude or arrogant, but it is about being a confident, self-assured guy, which is what all women want anyway.

So, when getting an ex back, a guy will fail if he puts on an act and pretends that heâs not needy anymore (e.g. by acting like heâs really happy without her, acting doesnât have feelings for her anymore, saying that he doesnât want her back).

Why wonât that work?

No matter how much he tries to hide it, his neediness will inevitably come through in the subtle ways he communicates with her.

All she has to do is say something like, âYou seem so different now. I was recently wondering if we could actually get back together again, but clearly youâre not interested anymore. PityâI guess we should both move on and find someone else then.â

If he then sounds hurt and says things like, âHow can you suggest something like that? Didnât what we have mean anything to you? How can you move on so quickly? Of course I want us to get back together again. I still love you,â she will instantly know that his newfound confidence and emotional independence was completely fake.

On the other hand, if he just laughs at her attempts to make him feel insecure and responds to her by saying something along the lines of, âSure, that sounds like a great idea. Maybe sometime soon we can even double date!â she wonât be able to deny that he really has changed.

So remember: If you want to prove to your ex that youâre not needy and have truly changed, you need to show her via the way you talk and interact with her over the phone and in person.

For example: How do you react when she tests you by telling you how happy she is without you, or talking about all the fun she's been having with other guys or with her girlfriends?

Do you maintain your confidence and turn it into something you can both laugh about together, or do you feel hurt, get upset, or start doubting your chances with her?

That's what really matters to her.

She wants to see if your newfound confidence is real, or if you're just putting on a fake front to hopefully trick her into giving you another, brief chance at a relationship with her.

If you want her back for real, you've got to do this for real.

It can't be fake.

So, are you going to do this for real?

Are you going to do what it really takes to get a woman back in your situation?

If yes, then great – I am going to continue helping you until you get her back.

4. Focus on making her smile, laugh and feel so good that she wants to meet up with you

The more you make your ex smile, laugh and feel happy to be talking to you again on the phone, the more she will be thinking, What's going on here? He's so different all of a sudden. I was expecting him to be nervous and insecure on the phone, but instead he's so relaxed and confident now. I'm actually having such a good time talking to him. This is really fun. He's so much sexier now. This is what I wanted from him before.

Then, if you suggest a catch up, she is a lot more likely to say Yes because you've already been making her feel so good that the idea of seeing you in person actually sounds like something she wants to do.

On the other hand, if you're way too serious over the phone and are constantly trying to make a good impression on her (e.g. by being extra nice and polite, trying to show her that you're not needy), then she will be more likely to say No when you suggest a meet up.

So, make sure that when you call your ex on the phone, you focus on making her feel positive emotions for you (e.g. respect, attraction, love), rather than negative emotions (e.g. anger, annoyance, disgust, boredom).

Here's an example of how you can do that:

Imagine you're on a call with your ex right now.

You could say something boring like, Hi Mary. I just wanted to say hi. So how are you doing? but that's not going to do anything to spark her feelings for you.

Instead, she's likely just going to respond with something like, Fine, or Okay, which then leaves an uncomfortable gap in the conversation.

On the other hand, you can use humor to make her smile, laugh and start thinking to herself, This is nice. Talking to him again is better than I imagined. I'm actually having fun.

For example: You could start the call off by saying something like, Hey Mary, I just wanted to say hi and share some really awesome news with you.

She will likely feel curious and respond by asking, What news? What's happened?

You can then say, I'm getting married!

She might then say, What?! Oh, okay, well, congratulations then.

You can then say, No, I was only kidding. The real news is that I just won the lottery! Isn't it great?

She might then smile and respond by saying something like, Wow, that's awesome! or Get out of here! You're just pulling my leg! or, No way!?

You can then say in a joking way, No, seriously! I won $20! I'm a rich man now and let her have a laugh.

Then say, So, how about you help me spend all the money? Let's meet up at Starbucks. You can order anything you want, as long as it's not over $5. After all, I don't want to blow all my winnings in one go! and have a laugh with her about that.

At this point, she will most-likely be laughing and will be impressed to see that you're confident enough to joke around with her in that way.

When you make an ex smile and laugh again when talking to you, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling good about you.

Even if she tries to resist it, she won't be able to hold on to her negative feelings about you for long because you are actively replacing her negative memories of you (e.g. of being needy, insecure, self-doubting) with new, positive feelings.

When that happens, her guard comes down and she becomes open to meeting up with you and seeing where it goes.

So, after a bit more laughter and smiling, you can say, Seriously though, it would be nice to catch up in person to say hi and grab a coffee as friends. How about getting that coffee tomorrow? 1 or 2pm is good for me.

By that point, she should be feeling so relaxed and happy that she will agree right away.

If not, just maintain your confidence and arrange a time that suits you both.

At the meet up!

5. Show her that you're now emotionally stronger than before and then confidently guide her back into a relationship

For your ex to open herself up to the idea of getting back together with you, she first needs to be able to look up to, respect and feel attracted to you.

So, when you meet up with her, make sure that you don't undo all the great work you've done up to that point by being too serious, nice or polite.

Don't worry too much about what she's saying or doing, don't give her too much power over the interaction and don't try to suck up to her.

Instead, focus on maintaining your confidence around her (regardless of her behavior towards you) and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new, stronger man that you've become.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is byâ€¦!

- Showing her your confidence by not feeling nervous or unsure of yourself when she is being distant, or saying things like, â€œThereâ€™s no reason for us to get back together,â€ to be hurtful towards you.
- Using humor to lighten the mood and get her laughing, smiling and feeling good about her decision to meet up with you.
- Standing up to her (in a loving, but dominant way) if she tries to dominate you during conversation.
- Reacting differently to the way sheâ€™s expecting you to (e.g. she tries to make you jealous by telling you about other guys sheâ€™s been seeing since you and her broke up and rather than getting upset, or doubting your chances with her, you laugh and say, â€œThatâ€™s great! I always knew you had it in you to lighten up and have fun for a change. Iâ€™m glad to see youâ€™re finally doing it. You go girl!â€ or, â€œOhhh, no! Iâ€™m so jealous. Haha!not! Good for you. I hope you find Mr. Right, rather than ending up with a Mr. Wrong like me. I was the worst boyfriend everâ€).
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension, rather than being a good little boy around her who is on his best behavior.

When you interact with your ex in those ways, you are showing her that you are now the kind of man she can truly look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love.

You really have changed and are now a better man than you were before.

As a result, she will automatically feel attracted to your confidence and emotional strength and wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from looking at you with new eyes.

At that point, you wonâ€™t even have to ask her if she wants to get back together again.

The hug, kiss and potentially sex should then happen naturally, because it will now feel wrong to her to let you slip through her fingers and be the one who got away.

How Can I Get My Ex to Realize That I'm Truly Sorry For How I Treated Her?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

You've most-likely already apologized to your ex multiple times, right?

If so, apologizing to her again isn't going to change anything at this point.

What will?

Reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

Every interaction that you have with her from now on needs to be about reactivating her feelings, not about telling her how sorry you are.

How can you do that?

Start by answering the following questions for yourself:

1. Have you improved in the ways that really matter to her?

It's great that you want to get your ex to realize how truly sorry you are for how you treated her.

However, if all you're doing is begging, pleading and apologizing to her to achieve that, then you've probably already realized that you've been wasting your time and energy trying to get her to understand, right?

She's likely been saying things like, "Look, I don't care. It's over" or, "I'm not interested in what you have to say. Just leave me alone" because you're simply offering her apologies and promises about how things could be different.

If you keep using that approach, you will keep getting rejected.

So, what should you do instead?

Use every chance you get (e.g. via text, on social media, e-mail, on a phone call and especially in person), to let her see that you have truly changed in the ways that matter to her.

I'm not saying to tell her that you've changed.

No.

That's not how it works.

You've got to let her see and experience it for herself, so she can make that judgment call.

A woman doesn't want to hear her ex saying, "I've changed. Please believe me" because it appears desperate, which is a turn off for women.

So, make sure that you just focus on letting her experience the changes in you and if you do that, she will naturally begin to feel sparks of respect and attraction for you again.

For example: If a woman broke up with a guy for treating her badly (e.g. he became too jealous and controlling of her), she is going to need to sense and see that he really has changed the core issues that create that type of behavior in a man.

So, when he interacts with her (over the phone or in person) and she tests him by talking about all the fun she's had since she broke up with him, or by flirting with other guys in his presence (e.g. the waiter or barman), he needs to be confident, relaxed and easy-going to show her that he's not reacting like he used to.

A good way to show her how much he has changed is by using humor to laugh at how he used to behave in the past.

For instance, he might say something like, "I bet you're waiting for me to blow up and cause a scene, aren't you? Unfortunately, my inner jerk has been fired and replaced with a much more mature man. So, if you're looking for one of those silly, jealous reactions like I would have given you in the past, you're going to be disappointed" and have a laugh with her about it.

She can then see that he isn't reacting like his old self and as a result, her guard can come down a little and she can allow herself to feel some respect for him again.

In the same way, when you improve in the ways that really matter to your ex (i.e. you no longer react like you used to), she will wonder something like, "What's going on here? Why isn't he doing all those annoying things he used to do when we were together? Something is really different about him."

As a result, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again, even if just a little bit to begin with.

From there, you just need to keep making her feel sparks of respect and attraction and her guard will come down further because you are focussing on her feelings, rather than trying to convince her how sorry you are.

Another question to ask is

2. Do you know how to make her feel attracted in new ways now, or just the same old ways?

After a break up, a lot of guys don't really know how to re-attract their ex woman and get her back into a relationship.

So, he might:

- Send his ex bunches of flowers.
- Buy her sweet, thoughtful gifts (e.g. chocolates, a cute stuffed toy).
- Send her a card and pour his heart out to her.
- Write her a long letter or e-mail explaining how much she means to him, how sorry he is and how he promises that things will be different.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that none of those things will make his ex feel sexually and romantic attracted to him again.

She might appreciate his gestures and even say, "Thanks. You're being so sweet," and be nice to him, but it doesn't mean that she will give him another chance.

Rather than make her think, "He's being so sweet. He seems to be truly sorry for how he treated me. Maybe I should give him another chance," she's more likely to think, "Yes, he's being sweet, but that's because he doesn't know what else to do to make me want him again. I just don't have feelings for him anymore. My feelings can't be switched back on"

by a bunch of flowers or a cute teddy bear. He doesn't understand that. He's just being superficial.

Likewise, if he sent a long letter or e-mail, she may think, All he is doing is talking about himself and how he feels. He doesn't understand that I don't care about how he feels anymore. It's about me now. He doesn't get it. If he wants me back, he has to make me feel something for him. The feelings just aren't mutual right now, so I don't care how many good memories he brings up, how sorry he is or how much he promises to change. I'm either going to feel attracted to him now if he changes, or I'm going to move on if he doesn't.

This is why it's so important that when you interact with your ex from now on, you focus on attracting her in new and exciting ways.

For example:

- Flirt with her to create feelings of sexual tension.
- Make her feel very girly and feminine in comparison to how masculine you now think, talk, feel, behave and act.
- Use humor to break down her defenses and make her see the lighter side of a situation, rather than always being so serious with her and going on and on about how sorry you are for how you treated her.
- Maintain your confidence around her when she tries to test you (e.g. by blaming you for the pain she's feeling, by being cold and aloof towards you, by telling you that she can never forgive you).
- Respond differently to what she says and does (e.g. if she tries to make you feel bad by saying you hurt her, rather than get upset or start apologizing to her, laugh and say, Yeah, that was silly of me wasn't it? or, Well, now you're exaggerating. I wasn't that bad was I? Geez, if so, then I am probably the worst boyfriend/husband in the world. What prize do I get for that? I kick in the butt from you, or?).

The more you approach every interaction with her differently to what she's expecting, the more you will trigger her feelings for you again.

You will snap her out of her autopilot way of thinking, feeling and behaving and force her to live in the now and enjoy talking to you instead.

When she can see for herself that you're a brand new man, it then feels natural and normal for her to drop her guard and reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again.

Another question to ask yourself is

3. Have you truly changed, or are you only promising to change if she gives you another chance?

For example: A guy might say, I'm truly sorry for how I treated you. I was a first class jerk and I know it, but please don't give up on me. I promise if you just give me one more chance, I will change. I'll be the man you want me to be. I promise. Just let me prove it to you.

Sometimes a woman will accept a guys promises to change (e.g. if she doesn't have much experience with relationships, she's afraid that it will be difficult for her to find a replacement guy, she still has strong feelings for him).

However, in most cases where a woman knows she can easily find a new guy, or if she's had some experience with relationships and knows that she can handle the pain of a break up, she will reject his offer.

She might also know that when a guy promises to change, he rarely even knows how to do so.

As a result, she will choose to stick with the break up, rather than being dragged back into a relationship that is going to end up with a break up again anyway, because he's just not going to change.

This is why, for most women, promises aren't enough to get her back.

So, what works?

She needs you to be man enough to figure out what happened to cause her to break up with you in the first place (e.g. you stopped being manly, you became too emotionally sensitive) and then take action to fix those things, before you try to get her back.

She looks at this as you caring about how she feels, rather than just looking after your own emotional state.

In other words, you improve or change so you can better make her feel attracted to you, rather than just rushing to get her back to stop the pain you're experiencing now that you've been dumped.

So, make sure that you really do improve, change or adjust before you attempt to get her back.

Most guys are able to do that within a couple of days, but other guys need a week or so.

I don't recommend waiting longer than that though because if you do, it simply gives her more time to get over you and move on.

So, if you're going to change or improve, do it quickly and do it now.

Then, when you contact her, she will sense (by the way you talk, act, behave and interact with her) that you have already changed and improved.

For example: You're more confident and emotionally strong now, you're no longer jealous and controlling, or you are more capable of being emotionally mature and loving her the way she really wants you to.

As a result, the idea of giving you another chance will be good to her.

Another question to ask is

4. Are you currently giving her too much power over you when you talk to her?

A guy sometimes feels so guilty about treating his ex badly in the relationship, that he lowers himself when interacting with her (e.g. he is on his very best behavior, he is extra nice to her, does whatever she wants and allows her to get her way with everything), as a way of hopefully impressing her or getting her to take pity on him.

For example: A guy might say to himself, I'm the one who made the mistakes, not her. To get her to realize that I am truly sorry for how I treated her, I have to be so nice to her from now on.

She can call all the shots and no matter what, Iâ€¦ll do what she says. Then she will see that Iâ€¦m being sincere. She will then hopefully forgive me and give me another chance.â€¦

Yet, in most cases, the opposite is true.

A woman might give the impression that she enjoys being in charge and having her ex grovel at her feet for what he did.

However, the truth is that deep down, a woman simply cannot respect a guy who allows her to push him around, no matter how badly he stuffed up.

Of course, this doesnâ€¦t mean that a guy should be rude, domineering and not take her feelings and wishes into consideration.

It simply means he shouldnâ€¦t give all his power to her and allow her to bully him as punishment for making a mistake.

So, regardless of how badly you treated your ex before, make sure that you donâ€¦t let her turn the tables now and treat you badly.

Fixing relationship problems is not about getting an eye for an eye.

If you let her get revenge by treating you badly, she wonâ€¦t be able to respect you.

Without respect, there is no attraction and without attraction, thereâ€¦s nothing left to bring out the love in her heart.

Remember: A woman wants to be with a man she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love (i.e. a guy who is confident and emotionally strong enough to take the lead in the ex back process and get her back, rather than expecting her to tell him what to do to make her have feelings for him again).

So, donâ€¦t give your power away when talking to your ex.

Be a good guy, but donâ€¦t be a super nice guy who essentially bows down and lets her walk all over him.

Yes, you made some mistakes, but you have become a better man as a result and you should hold your head high about that.

Youâ€¦re no longer the guy who treated her badly.

3 Mistakes That Other Guys Often Make When in Your Situation

Your relationship with her is unique, but the problems you are facing are fairly common (i.e. you stuffed up, feel like you need to make her realize how sorry you are, have been trying to get her to realize it, she doesnâ€¦t care and isnâ€¦t opening back up).

So, if you want to make the ex back process easier for you and actually get her back, be sure to avoid the following common mistakes that guys often make when in your situationâ€¦!

1. Making it all about how sorry he is, so she can then accept his apology and he can feel better about himself

Sometimes a guy will get so caught up trying to show his ex how bad he feels for hurting her that he ends up babbling on and on about his feelings.

For example: He might call her on the phone and say things like, â€œI know I stuffed up so badly. You wonâ€™t believe how terrible I feel. I know you donâ€™t want to forgive me, but if you think you hate me right now for how I treated you, then is is nothing compared to how much I hate myself. I canâ€™t express how sorry I am for what I did. It just tears me apart when I think about the pain I caused you. Iâ€™m such a fool. I canâ€™t believe how I treated you. How could I do that? I was so stupid. What can I say or do to make this up to you? Iâ€™m willing to do anything to show you how bad I feel for what I did. Please.â€

Yet, rather than make a woman think, â€œPoor guy. Heâ€™s really hurting. Obviously heâ€™s learned his lesson, so maybe I should forgive him and help him feel better now,â€ she will actually see his behavior as selfish.

Why?

She hears what he is saying as being all about him and his feelings, rather than how she feels and what she wants.

What she feels is turned off and if heâ€™s going to get her back, what she wants is to be able to feel sparks of respect, attraction and love for him while they interact.

Heâ€™s not going to achieve that by going on and on about his feelings.

Even though heâ€™s being sincere and pouring his heart out because he truly is sorry for how he treated her, she just doesnâ€™t care because the feelings arenâ€™t mutual yet.

So, make the feelings mutual first and then she will begin to care.

Remember: Getting a woman back is about focussing on making her have romantic feelings, not on talking about your feelings, needs or wants.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

2. Hoping that by sucking up to her with a â€œpity meâ€ approach, she will feel sorry for him and give him another chance

For example: A guy might say to his ex, â€œPlease babyâ€¦ stop torturing me. I havenâ€™t been able to sleep or eat properly for the last week. Canâ€™t you see that Iâ€™m truly sorry for what I put you through? Iâ€™m a mess. Please forgive me and give me a chance to make it up to you. Please. I need you to tell me that you forgive me. I canâ€™t take this any longer. Please.â€

Heâ€™s hoping that if she sees how much heâ€™s suffering without her, she will feel sorry for him and then agree to give him another chance.

Yet, just like in the previous mistake, making a woman feel pity for the emotional pain youâ€™re experiencing only turns her off even more.

Women are attracted to men who maintain their composure and remain emotionally strong under pressure.

So, seeking pity and looking weak is just another thing that makes her feel right about her decision to end the relationship.

Additionally, a woman doesnâ€™t want to feel like she is being forced back into a relationship, simply because her ex canâ€™t cope without her.

She wants the ex back process to happen naturally, which it will if he focuses on her feelings, rather than his own.

Another mistake to avoid isâ

3. Thinking that giving her all the power in the relationship is what she wants

A common mistake guys make is thinking that a woman will be happier if she gets to wear the pants in a relationship.

Yet, even though modern women are more independent and often go around saying things like, *âA woman can do anything that a man can do,*â they are still instinctively attracted to a man who is more emotionally dominant than themselves.

This doesn't mean that she wants a guy to boss her around and make all the decisions without ever considering her wants or needs.

Instead, she wants a man who can confidently lead the way to a better future for both of them, while also being loving and caring enough to take her wants and needs into consideration.

If he can do that she will be able to look up to him and respect him, feel attracted to him and love him.

On the other hand, if he just sits back and allows her to dominate him with her confident personality, she will lose so much respect for him that she will question why she is with him at all.

So, don't make the mistake of thinking that you have to become a wimp and do whatever she says to show her how truly sorry you are.

She wants you to maintain your masculinity, while being a good man to her.

If you can show her that you're man enough to admit to your mistakes and have already taken steps to improve yourself, she will feel respectful of you and attracted to you.

As a result, the idea of forgiving you and giving you another chance will feel like something she is willing to do now.

Can You Get an Ex Back Who Seems Happier Without You?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes.

You need to make her feel happy and attracted whenever she interacts with you from now on.

If you can do that, she won't feel as happy when you're not around or interacting with her and as a result, she will start to feel drawn to you again.

Here's how to do it:

1. Become independently happy without her

It sucks that you and your ex are no longer together and it's even worse that she seems happier without you, right?

I understand.

However, sitting around, missing her and feeling miserable about life isn't the right approach to take to get her back.

Why?

When a woman senses her ex guy's lack of happiness without her, she feels turned off by his neediness and emotional dependence.

So, rather than wanting to interact with him some more, she will usually just make excuses to avoid him and keep getting on with her life.

Think about it this way!

Would you rather be around a person who is happy, smiling and feeling good, or would you rather be with someone who is sad, depressed and stuck in a rut?

When someone is depressed, they often like being around people who are depressed because it helps them relate.

Likewise, when someone is happy, they like interacting with or being around people who are happy.

This prevents depressed, sad people from bringing them down and ruining their happy vibe.

Your ex is no exception to that rule.

If she is feeling happy without you, it's absolutely essential that you allow her to see and feel that you are happy without her.

I'm not talking about saying, "Hey, I'm happy without you. I don't need you."

No.

That's just rude, insecure and unnecessary.

Instead, you just have to quickly get to the point where you genuinely feel happy without her in your life.

You want her back and would be happy if she called you up right now and said, "I think we should get back together again."

However, you don't actually need her back to feel happy.

That's the difference.

Of course, you might not want to feel happy without her, right?

You just want her back.

Yet, you have to do what works.

Women, especially ex women who are happy, just aren't attracted to guys who need them for their sense of happiness and identity in this world.

You've got to be independently happy, otherwise you just won't be emotionally attractive to her and as a result, she won't want to give you another chance.

If she sees that you are happy, confident and living a great life without her, she will instinctively feel more attracted to you and more open to interacting with you, which will give you more of an opportunity to re-attract her and get her back.

When she interacts with you and feels attracted, she then begins to think things like, What is happening to me? Why am I feeling this way? I actually feel drawn to him again. I don't want to lose him anymore. Maybe I want him back.

As long as you are being confident and actively making her feel attracted to you when you interact with her, she will automatically open up and begin to really want to give you another chance.

2. Have some fun with other people to reinforce your new happiness without her

Of course, saying that you're happy without your ex isn't enough to convince her, or yourself, that you really are.

You actually have to be doing it in real life and the best way is by interacting with other people.

You might not want to do a lot of that right now because you're still hurting from the break up, but that's the point.

You can't be hurting if you want to re-attract her.

You've got to genuinely be feeling happy and confident without her.

Even though you still see her as your woman, the fact is that you are currently single.

It sucks to think of yourself as being single when you want her back so bad, but you have to for a very brief period of time, to allow yourself to become truly emotionally independent.

For example: Some of the things you can do now that you're single is

- Hang out with all your single friends that you may have neglected because of your relationship with your ex.
- Take up a new sport or hobby (e.g. tennis, cooking, martial arts, salsa dancing).
- Join your colleagues when they go out together after work.
- Join a club that does group activities (e.g. hiking, traveling).
- Do a pub crawl (or a bar tour) in your own city. This is a great way to meet tourists who are there to have some quick fun.

You donât need to hook up with any new women if you donât want to.

Thatâs not the point.

You can if you want to, but the main point is for you to be having fun with other people, so you can genuinely feel like you are enjoying life without your ex.

Then, make sure that you post photoâs of yourself on social media having fun doing all these great things, where she is sure to see it.

Note: If sheâs unfriended you (e.g. on Facebook), just make sure that you change your settings to ‘public’ rather than ‘friends’ only, so she can see it.

Hereâs the thingâ!

Even if your ex pretends not to care about you anymore or seems to be happier without you, from time to time, she will be curious about what youâre up to.

Almost all women check on an exâs profile to see if heâs getting on with his life without her, or if heâs being sad and lonely.

So, when your ex sees for herself that you seem just as happy without her as she seems without you, she will automatically feel curious about the new you.

Then, if you contact her and suggest a meet up, she will be more open to the idea, because she will want to see for herself if you really have changed, or if your new-found independence was just an act.

If you genuinely have been confident and happy without her, she will feel some respect and attraction for you.

Just make sure that you donât try to rub it in her face by bragging or exaggerating things and trying to make yourself look cool.

Just be relaxed about it and see it as a completely normal thing to get on with life, be happy and enjoy yourself after a break up.

If you do that, she canât hold anything against you and will instead feel respect and attraction for you.

By the wayâ!

A lot of guys are afraid to show their ex woman that they are happy without her.

A guy hopes that by appearing to have no life since the break up (e.g. not updating his social media profile at all, posting sad, lonely pictures of himself) she will feel guilty for being happier without him and want him back, or she will feel as though he is so dedicated to her and she would be crazy to let go of such a great guy.

Heâs hoping she will then contact him to say something like, âHey, I saw your Facebook profile and you look so sad. I hate seeing you like that. Let’s meet up.â

That might happen in a movie, but rarely in real life.

In real life, when a woman sees that her ex isnât getting on with his life and is destroyed by the break up, she will lose even more respect and attraction for him for being so emotionally dependent on her.

So, just focus on having fun without her.

Yes, she might pretend to be angry at you for seeming like you have moved on, but thatâs just a test.

She wants to see if you will say something like, â€œNo! Itâ€™s not how it looks. I was in those photos, but I was feeling miserable the whole time. All I want is you. I wish you were there.â€

She then knows that you are needy and emotionally dependent on her, which turns her off even more. So, I recommend that you just do what works.

If she is happy, be happy.

If she is depressed, be happy, but be nice to her.

If she is unsure about whether or not you and her should get back together, be nice to her, keep making her feel attracted and guide her back into a relationship.

3. Interact with her and focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good when talking to you

When you reach the point where you want your ex back, but donâ€™t need her back to feel good about yourself, you are ready to contact her.

Most guys can achieve that in a day, but some guys need up to a week.

Waiting any longer than that is a bad move and simply results in her having enough time to move on.

If you have already waited longer than a week, donâ€™t worry.

You just need to start doing what works from now on.

So, if you think she will answer your call, then go ahead and call her.

If you think she wonâ€™t, just send her a quick text, or a message via social media to ask for a phone call.

Important: Only do this after youâ€™ve updated your profile to show her that youâ€™ve been having fun and only as a way of getting her on a call with you.

Donâ€™t make the mistake of getting caught up texting or messaging back and forth without ever transitioning to a phone call.

The point of getting her on a phone call is so that she can experience the new, confident version of you for herself (e.g. she can hear it in the tone of your voice and experience it in the way you make her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again) and so you can then get her to meet up with you in person.

If youâ€™re unsure of what to text her to get her on a call with you, hereâ€™s an example: â€œHey ex girlfriend (fiancÃ© or wife). I just wanted to ask you something quick over the phone. So, Iâ€™m going to call you in 10 minutes, okay?â€

Then, just go ahead and call her in 10 minutes time.

If she doesnâ€™t answer, give her a day or two and then try calling her again.

In most instances, a woman will be curious to find out what you want and she will answer her phone the second time around.

The important thing is that when you get her on a call with you, you donâ€™t blow it by coming across as sad, unhappy, dejected or lacking confidence.

Instead, remain calm, be happy and show her your confidence, by using humor to break down her defenses.

For example: If she says something like, â€œOkay, youâ€™ve got me on a phone call with you. Iâ€™m really busy so make it quick. What do you want to ask me?â€ you can use that as an opportunity to re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

In a joking way you can say, â€œOh well. There go my plans for this call,â€ and then if she asks, â€œWhat plans?â€ you can add, â€œWell, Iâ€™m busy cooking a dish with 20 different ingredients and I was hoping you would talk me through it. Oh well, Iâ€™ll just have to narrow it down to only 3 ingredients since youâ€™re in such a hurry. However, Iâ€™m going to blame you if it comes out tasting bad, because you know what a lousy cook I am,â€ and have a laugh with her about that.

The truth is, it doesnâ€™t matter what you say to her, as long as you donâ€™t take the conversation too seriously.

Instead, look for opportunities to make her laugh, make her smile and get her thinking, â€œItâ€™s like talking to a whole different man. Heâ€™s changed. I really like this new version of him. Heâ€™s fun.â€

For example: You could also reply with something like, â€œOh, well someone is Little Miss Pushy today, isnâ€™t she?â€ and have a laugh to show her that you and her donâ€™t need to take the conversation so seriously.

4. Get her to meet up with you to say hello as friends

After a bit more conversation where you make her laugh and smile again, say to her, â€œOkay, seriously now. What I wanted to ask you is whether or not youâ€™d be cool about meeting up to say hello as friend. I promise that itâ€™s not going to be serious and itâ€™s not about us getting back together at all. I just think it would be nice to catch up in person and say hello as friends and thatâ€™s it. So, how about it? Iâ€™m busy on Monday and Tuesday, but am free on Wednesday and Sunday. Which day this week suits you best?â€

Note: Donâ€™t be surprised if she initially plays a bit hard to get and says something along the lines of, â€œIâ€™m not sure if thatâ€™s a good idea. Iâ€™m happy with my life now and I donâ€™t want to complicate things again.â€

Just maintain your confidence and donâ€™t let her reaction cause you to start doubting yourself.

Women are naturally attracted to guys who remain confident no matter what life (or a woman) throws at them.

So, just laugh and say, in an easy-going way, â€œHey, all Iâ€™m suggesting is an innocent, 10 minute coffee. We can meet up as friends without it being a big deal, right? So what if we used to be together as a couple. We are not together in that way anymore and can be mature adults about this. Itâ€™s just a coffee as friends. So, what do you say?â€

In most cases, a woman will drop her guard and agree to meet up with you at that point.

However, she might still try to play a bit hard to get by saying something like, â€œOkay, but just this one time,â€ or â€œSure, but I can only stay for 10 minutes.â€

At the meet upâ€

5. Make her feel a strong, renewed sense of attraction to the new you

When you meet up with your ex, you have to say and do the types of things that will make her feelings of respect and attraction for you reignite (e.g. be confident, charismatic, emotionally mature, more masculine than her).

For example:

If she says something like, â€œI think this was a mistake. Iâ€™ve worked hard to get over you and Iâ€™m happy now, so I donâ€™t see the point in us meeting up like this. I probably shouldnâ€™t have come here,â€ rather than feeling hurt, getting flustered or doubting your chances of getting her back, just use her negativity as a way of making her feel even more respect and attraction for you.

For example: One of the ways you might respond is by laughing and saying in a joking way, â€œYouâ€™re going to walk out on the best cup of coffee in town? Thatâ€™s not the woman I used to know. You really have changed since we broke up! Iâ€™m so disappointed. I think itâ€™s better if we go our separate ways right here and now. After allâ€¦ if you canâ€™t sit and relax for 10 minutes to enjoy a cup of coffee, youâ€™re way too uptight for me girl,â€ and have a laugh with her about that.

Alternatively, you might say, â€œRelaaaaax girl. Itâ€™s just a cup of coffee. Weâ€™re not about to elope and get married. Weâ€™re just friends nowâ€ to calm her down and stop her from making it out to be a big problem when it isnâ€™t.

She will feel surprised that youâ€™re not falling for her drama and will also feel respect and attraction for having the balls to stand up to her in that way.

At the meet up, itâ€™s also very important that youâ€™

6. Get her to accept that the old you is different to the new you

To make your ex look at you in a more positive light and see herself being happy with you again, itâ€™s important that forgiveness takes place.

In a relaxed, easy-going manner, you need to get her to forgive the old you, so she can then naturally accept that the new you is a completely different guy.

For example: You might say something like, â€œI now understand why you broke up with me. I made some silly mistakes that caused you to feel unhappy and Iâ€™m truly sorry for putting you through that. However, Iâ€™m not that guy anymore. I donâ€™t expect you to believe me of course. You donâ€™t have to as well, because weâ€™re not getting back together. Yet, can you see it in yourself to forgive me and accept that the old me is different to the new me?â€

When you get her to the point where she really does accept that you are a different man now, she automatically stops seeing the old version of you and starts looking at you as a new man.

When that happens, she allows herself to start focusing on your positive qualities (e.g. your confidence, emotional strength, emotional maturity, how you make her laugh), which then causes her to feel sparks of respect, attraction and love for you.

She realizes that although she thought she was happier without you, she is now even happier with you.

How to Restart My Relationship With My Girlfriend Now That We've Broken Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 essential tips to help you restart your relationship with your girlfriend now that you've broken up.

1. Don't try to restart the relationship until you first regain her respect

A successful, long-lasting relationship between a man and a woman is always based on mutual respect, attraction and love.

So, when a woman starts losing respect for her guy (i.e. because he becomes insecure, treats her badly, stops being manly), she will inevitably start to lose attraction for him as well.

Why?

A woman's sexual attraction for a guy is strongly linked to how he makes her feel when they interact and spend time together.

So, when she can't fully respect him or feel attracted to him anymore, it's only a matter of time before she then disconnects from her feelings of love for him.

Soon after, she decides to break up with him because she just doesn't feel the same way about him anymore and it doesn't seem like he knows how to change that.

This is why, when a guy tries to restart a relationship with his girlfriend (fiancée or wife) before first reactivating her feelings, he is usually going to get the old, "I'm sorry, but I'm not interested. It's over. Please accept that" reply.

Why?

He hasn't regained her respect, so she doesn't feel attracted to him and therefore, she can't reconnect with the love she used to feel for him.

He might feel like she is being difficult or stubborn, but he doesn't realize that she's just following her feelings.

Her feelings and instincts warn her, "Don't waste anymore of your time on him. You don't respect him. He doesn't even know how to change. You've given him enough chances. Break up with him and move on as soon as you can. He's not going to change!"

She feels that way because he hasn't given her any evidence of him really, truly changing and is just trying to get her back for his own reasons (e.g. he is hurting from the break up, he's embarrassed about being dumped, he doesn't want to lose her and have to find another woman).

She knows that.

Unless he can start to put her feelings first, she's just not going to be interested.

Putting her feelings first is about focusing on reactivating her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you BEFORE you even try to restart the relationship with her.

For example: When interacting with your girlfriendâ

- Make her laugh and smile, rather than being too serious around her.
- Show her your confidence by being relaxed and emotionally strong around her regardless of how sheâs treating you (e.g. sheâs being cold and distant, is rude, throws a tantrum, teases you).
- Apologize once for your mistakes and then laugh at her (in a loving, confident way) if she tries to bring them up again and again.

The more you show her (via your actions) that youâre a new man now, the less she will be able to hold on to her negative opinion of you.

She will then open herself up to the idea of restarting a relationship with you and seeing what happens.

2. Get clear on what was really missing from the relationship experience

When you truly understand the real reasons why your ex broke up with you, you can then make the correct changes and adjustments to get her back.

For example: Maybe you and your girlfriend had a great connection as friends, but there wasnât much of a sexual spark between you anymore.

Although she really cared for you, she ended up feeling more like your roommate or buddy, which just isnât enough to keep a relationship together for life anymore.

So, to convince your girlfriend to restart the relationship, you need to change the way you interact with her from now on.

To create a sexual spark between you and her, you need to make her feel like a feminine, girly woman by being an emotionally strong, masculine man as you talk to her and interact with her.

When you trigger that side of her (i.e. the feminine, girly side) every time you interact with her, she will naturally begin to feel sparks with you again.

Additionally, if you continue to enhance other qualities that she loved about you (e.g. your confidence, charisma, emotional maturity, great sense of humor), she will almost certainly be more than happy to restart the relationship with you.

After all, you are now the man she always wanted you to be, so the idea of restarting a relationship will feel interesting and appealing to her.

On the other hand, if you continue to be on your best behavior (e.g. be extra nice, listen more, be extra sweet and caring) or treat her like your best friend, she will remain closed off.

Why?

Those kinds of things donât create a sexual spark if there is none there to begin with.

You first have to make a woman feel sexually attracted to you, before things like being nice or sweet will trigger sexual or romantic feelings.

If you lead with niceness and sweetness when she doesnât feel sexually attracted to you anymore, she will simply feel annoyed by it.

Your extra niceness and sweetness will make you look desperate and clueless to her.

Why?

Women know what they find attractive about men (e.g. emotional masculinity, confidence, the ability to make her feel girly in comparison to his masculinity), so when a guy doesn't get that, he is seen as clueless about what women really want.

Women will usually be nice to guys who don't get it, but they usually won't want them sexually or romantically.

So, now that you and your girlfriend have broken up, make sure that you are focused on being sexually attractive to her, rather than being a nice, neutral friend.

If you don't focus on sexual attraction, she just won't feel the urge to restart a relationship with you.

Even though you might be perfect for her in so many other ways, she will be thinking things like, â€œHe's a great guy, but something is missing. Maybe it's better if we just stay friends, because I don't feel attracted to him anymore. There's just no spark between us.â€

Another example is if you and your girlfriend weren't going in the same direction in life (e.g. she wanted you to commit to the relationship further, while you preferred to keep things fairly casual).

In a situation like that, a lot of guys often rush off and propose marriage to their girlfriend, in the hope that it will win her over.

Yet, a woman doesn't want a commitment made out of desperation.

She wants to see that her guy wants to commit to her naturally, not because he is being forced to due to a break up.

So, in a case like that, to convince your girlfriend to restart the relationship, you need to show her that you're now emotionally mature enough to fulfill her relationship expectations (e.g. move in together, get engaged, start a family).

You're doing it because you want the same things as her long term and not because you're desperate and are willing to do anything to get her back for now.

Of course, those were two examples of why a break up could happen.

Every relationship is different and there are many reasons (I explain 70+ reasons in my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System) as to why a woman will break up with a man.

You need to find out what really went wrong between you and your girlfriend, so you can then make the correct changes in the most effective manner.

That doesn't mean you have to fix everything and become perfect before she will be willing to restart the relationship with you.

You simply need to let her see that you've improved and are a better version of yourself now.

You've leveled up as a man.

When she experiences the new you for herself, she naturally begins to feel more respect and attraction for you as a man and opens herself up to the idea of restarting the relationship.

3. Reactivate her original feelings for you

Your girlfriend may have said things like, â€œI just donâ€™t feel the same way about you anymore,â€ or â€œI donâ€™t feel like you and I are right for each other. Maybe itâ€™s better if we just move on and find someone else.â€

She can say that because she has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for you, so the idea of getting back together again doesnâ€™t sound appealing to her like it does for you.

You feel respect, attraction and love for her, but she currently doesnâ€™t feel that for you.

So, if you want her to change her mind, get her to reconnect to her original feelings for you.

How can you do that?

By using every interaction you have with her (e.g. via text, e-mail, social media, on the phone and in person) to show her that youâ€™re a new man now.

As a result, she will stop looking at the mistakes you made leading up to the break up and begin to remember that you used to be a much more appealing guy that she loved and wanted to be with.

For example:

- Show her that youâ€™re emotionally independent now (e.g. by enjoying life with friends and making progress on your life goals), rather than trying to make her feel guilty for how sad, confused or betrayed you are feeling after being dumped.
- Make her laugh and smile, rather than getting into serious discussions with her about the relationship.
- Bring out her feminine side by being more masculine around her, rather than being too neutral or a pushover with her.
- Maintain your confidence around her when sheâ€™s being cold and aloof, rather than feeling nervous and doubting your attractiveness to her.
- Laugh when she creates drama (e.g. by bringing up all your past mistakes, telling you how you hurt her, crying and causing a scene), rather than getting upset or feeling insecure.

The more you show her (via your actions) that youâ€™re no longer the man she broke up with, the less she will be able to hold on to her negative opinion of you.

4. Focus on feeling good together initially, rather than committing to getting back together

For example: If your ex says something like, â€œI donâ€™t know if Iâ€™m ready to get back together again,â€ rather than trying to talk her into getting back together, just focus on being emotionally mature, so she can feel respect and attraction for you in that moment.

You can say to her, â€œThatâ€™s perfectly fine by me. We donâ€™t have to rush into anything now, or ever. You and I are broken up and I accept that. So, letâ€™s just leave the past in the past. Letâ€™s talk to each other as though weâ€™ve just met each other and are only friends now. That way, we can then get to know each other as the people we are now, rather than bringing the baggage from the past into the present. We can have some fun together and if it feels right, we can see where things go.â€œ

By saying something like that to her, not only are you taking the pressure off her to get back with you immediately, but youâ€™re also showing her that youâ€™re now a more confident, emotionally strong and mature man now.

You donâ€™t feel threatened and insecure because she doesnâ€™t want to get back together with you right away.

Instead, youâ€™re the one suggesting that you and her take things slow until both of you feel ready.

As a result, she drops her guard and begins to wonder what it would be like to commit to a relationship sooner, rather than later.

She begins to worry that you might now be able to easily attract other women because you are so confident and emotionally mature, so if she doesnâ€™t accept a relationship now, she might end up being the one who is hurt and left behind.

As a result, she gives you another chance and as long as you really have improved and can now attract her again, she wonâ€™t want to end the relationship.

5. If necessary, give her 3 to 7 days of space to miss you

If your ex is playing hard to get with you and keeps saying things like, â€œI donâ€™t know.

*Iâ€™m not sure if Iâ€™m ready to be with you again,*â€œ just cut off all contact with her for 3 to 7 days.

Important: I donâ€™t recommend that you cut off contact for any longer than that because it gives her too much time to get over you and potentially move on.

3 to 7 days has been tested thoroughly by me when helping my clients and itâ€™s the perfect time frame because it allows a woman to miss you, but doesnâ€™t push it to the point where she gets used to life without you and moves on.

Note: During the 3 to 7 days, make sure that you are improving your ability to make her feel respect and attraction for you when you next interact.

For example:

- If you were insecure, you become very confident.
- If you were too emotionally sensitive, you become emotionally masculine and strong.
- If you were too serious and uptight, you become easy-going and light-hearted.

You essentially get ready to give her a feeling of, *â€œWowâ€œ|now, this is different. Why am I feeling attracted to him all of a sudden?*â€œ

If you donâ€™t prepare during the 3 to 7 days, then youâ€™re almost certainly setting yourself up for failure because sheâ€™s not really going to feel anything different and therefore, wonâ€™t feel much or any motivation to give you another chance.

During the 3 to 7 days, your ex will get a chance to miss you and may begin to wonder, *â€œWhy isnâ€™t he calling me? Maybe I turned him off by being unsure of what I want. Maybe he has decided to forget about me and move on. What if heâ€™s found another woman? I donâ€™t want to lose him.*â€œ

She will then either text you or call you on the phone to say hello.

Then, just meet up with her and get her back.

How to Break Down My Ex's Defenses, So She Opens Up to Me Again

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

To break down your ex's defenses so she opens up to you again, you need to do the following:

1. Understand what is making her have her defenses up

Chances are high that something about your behavior or the way you've been interacting with your ex has been causing her to feel defensive.

For example:

- Have you been trying to get her back even though you don't understand what she really wants?

For example: A woman might want her ex to be more relaxed and not take things so seriously all the time, but he is constantly calling her up to have long, serious discussions about the relationship and what went wrong.

Alternatively, she might want him to be less wimpy and to stand up for himself, but he tries to get her back by being extra nice and sweet and making himself available to her every beck and call.

Naturally, when a woman sees that her guy just doesn't understand her real reasons for breaking up with him, she will remain closed up to avoid giving him the impression that she is willing to accept his mistaken approach.

If he wants her back, he has to understand why she really broken up with him (e.g. because he was too emotionally sensitive, didn't make her feel girly enough in comparison to his masculinity, gave her too much power).

- Have you honestly changed the things that were turning her off?

It's one thing to understand what your ex wants you to change, but it's quite another thing to actually do it.

Sometimes, a guy will hope that he can get an ex back by saying things like, "I promise to change if you give me another chance," or "I promise that this time things will be different."

That can work if the woman is still in love with the guy, is sharing bills with him and needs him, or isn't yet sure if she fully wants to break up with him.

However, if he's used that approach on her before and didn't change, or if she knows that she doesn't need him and can be happy without him, she will reject him and want to continue on with the break up.

So, remember: Actions speak louder than words.

If you want to break down your ex's defenses so she opens up to you again, make sure that you really have changed the things that were turning off (e.g. if you were insecure, you are so much more confident now).

Make sure that she can see that you're not just promising to change only if she comes back to you.

You've already begun to change and can now interact with her and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you because of it (e.g. if she was more emotionally mature than you, she can now see that you've improved and become a more emotionally strong, emotionally mature man).

Another possible reason why she has her defenses up, is to make you hate her for being so difficult and unloving.

- Is she trying to make you hate her so you get over her?

Sometimes, when a guy is being very persistent about getting his ex back (but isn't doing anything to re-spark her feelings for him), a woman will act cold and distant towards him as a way of turning him off her.

She hopes that if she's bitchy enough to him, he will begin to hate her and then leave her alone, to hook up with a woman who shows him more love and appreciation.

Do you think that applies to your ex?

If so, don't hate her.

Instead, just focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction every time you interact with her from now on.

When you do that, she will drop her defenses and start feeling drawn to you in a new and interesting way.

She will want to explore her new feelings for you, rather than pushing you away.

- Is her behavior making you angry or plead and beg for her to open up to you?

After getting dumped, everything you say and do is either going to make your ex feel attracted to you or turn her off further.

So, if you get angry with her and say things like, "Why are you being like this? Why are you being so closed up? I'm just trying to make things right between us. Why won't you open up and talk to me?" or if you beg and plead and become emotionally weak around her, it's just going to turn her off even more.

Here's the thing!

To make a woman drop her defenses and open up, you need to make her feel positive emotions such as respect, attraction, love, excitement, curiosity and giddy happiness.

So, if your current or recent attitude towards her has been angry, wimpy or emotionally weak, it's only natural that she will feel defensive and not want to open back up to you.

- Are you trying to get her back to make yourself feel better?

You might feel that your ex is the one for you, but if she doesn't feel the same way about you right now (i.e. because you haven't first reactivated her feelings for you, which is the first step of the ex back process), she's not going to really care that you want her back.

If you want her to open up again, you need to focus on making her feel the kind of emotions that she wants to feel when she's with you (e.g. respectful, happy, in love, hopeful, attracted).

Then when she sees that you've changed your approach to her and are now making her feel the way she wants to feel, she will naturally drop her guard and open up to you again.

The next step is to

2. Stop trying to get her to commit to a relationship right now

A common mistake that guys make after a break up is trying to get their ex to agree to get back together immediately and work on the relationship.

After helping guys to get women back for many years now, I know that in most cases, a guy must give his woman 3 to 7 days of space before trying to get her back.

Some guys can get their woman back immediately (i.e. by immediately changing, re-attracting her and remaining confident), but most guys need to give their woman 3 to 7 days of space.

Of course, most guys don't know that when they dumped, so they push for a relationship right away and end up making her feel defensive.

For example: A guy might say to his ex, "Look I know I stuffed up, but please don't give up on us. We can make this work if you just give us one chance. I promise to work on whatever you want to work on. I will change. You have my word on that. So, let's do this. There's no need to break up. Let's just work this out."

Yet, a woman doesn't want to hear that before a guy has reactivated her feelings of love, respect and attraction.

She has dumped him because she no longer has strong enough feelings, or is sick of the conditions of the relationship, so she doesn't want to commit to a relationship right away.

It's just too much pressure, too soon after the break up.

Even though he is still in love with her and wants her back more than anything, she just doesn't feel that way about him yet.

So, if he says something along the lines of, "Come on babe. All I'm asking is that you open up to me a little bit so that we can fix our relationship," rather than make her think, "Okay, well I guess working things out isn't such a bad thing. We can do that. Let's fix this!" she starts feeling anxious and puts her defenses up.

It's just too soon for her.

She has broken up with him for good reasons in her mind and he hasn't yet done anything to change, so for all she knows, she is most likely just going to get the same kind of relationship experience with him.

She might also fear that he just wants to get her back briefly, so he can then be the one to dump her and feel better about himself.

If she gets that sense, or feels as though he's trying to force her into a relationship without changing, she will keep her defenses up.

So, if you are serious about breaking down your ex's defenses so she opens up to you again, donâ€™t try to get her to commit to anything right now.

Instead, give her 3 to 7 days of space if you havenâ€™t done so already.

Then, interact with her over the phone (not via text. It doesnâ€™t work in most cases) or in person and make her feel respect and attraction for you again (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel good in your presence, showing her via your actions and the way you respond to her that you really have changed).

The more you re-spark her feelings for you on a phone call or in person, the more her defenses will come down without you having to force it.

From there, you just need toâ€¦!

3. Focus on reactivating her original feelings for you

Some of the ways you can do that is byâ€¦!

- Being confident and emotionally strong around her, rather than feeling insecure and unsure of yourself.
- Creating sexual tension between you and her by flirting and making her laugh and smile, rather than always being on your best behavior and making her feel bored, annoyed or stressed out.
- Getting on with living a happy, productive life without her, rather than letting her see that youâ€™re panicking and in a rush to get her back because you need her, are lost without her or because you are worried about other guys taking her.
- Being emotionally masculine, so she can relax into being a totally feminine woman around you, rather than being emotionally timid and allowing her to dominate you, which then makes her feel like a masculine woman around you.
- Not taking her reactions to you so seriously (i.e. joking around and being very confident when sheâ€™s being closed off and emotional), rather than getting sucked into her drama and losing confidence in yourself.

4. Don't try to get her back via texts, e-mails or social media messages

When a woman is being closed off to her ex and is possibly refusing to see him in person or talk to him over the phone, it may be tempting for a guy to try and get her back via text, e-mail or on social media.

For example: A guy might say things like, â€œWhy are you being so cold and distant towards me? Donâ€™t you realize how sorry I am for how I hurt you? Just tell me where I went wrong and I will do whatever it takes to make you trust me again. Please just give me another chance.â€

Yet, trying to get her back in that way only turns a woman off even more.

Hereâ€™s whyâ€¦!

Firstly, if your ex doesnâ€™t want to answer your calls or see you in person right now, what makes you think she will respond favorably to you asking her for another chance via text, e-mail or even worse, on social media?

Texts are the worst in cases like yours.

Really.

You have to get to a phone call or talk to her in person.

That is the best way.

In cases like yours, texts just annoy the woman and make her close up even more.

Instead of thinking, â€œAwwwâ€! *heâ€™s so sweet. Even though Iâ€™ve been so closed off towards him, he hasnâ€™t given up on our love. He clearly cares for me so much. How can I continue being so cold and uncooperative? I owe him a chance after everything heâ€™s put himself through for me,*â€ she will get annoyed by texts and see them as being selfish.

For example: If her ex is texting her about his feelings and trying to work things out, she may think something like, *â€œHe still doesnâ€™t get it. Heâ€™s so focused on getting me back because itâ€™s what he needs to feel better about himself. He hasnâ€™t once stopped to consider what I want. Heâ€™s making it all about him and his feelings. Well, I donâ€™t care about that. I donâ€™t care how he feels. We broke up because certain aspects of his thinking and behavior turned me off and as far as I can see by the way he is communicating now, nothing has changed. Heâ€™s still the same guy as before and based on that, Iâ€™m just not interested in getting back together again. Itâ€™s going to take a lot more than him asking me to give him another chance via text/e-mail/social media for me to change my mind.*â€

So, if you truly want to break down your exâ€™s defenses so she opens up to you again, donâ€™t hide behind a smartphone or computer.

Instead, get her on a phone call with you right away and spark her feelings for you (e.g. by using confident humor to break down her defenses).

Then, get her to meet up with you in person where she can experience the new you for herself (e.g. you confidently pass her tests when sheâ€™s cold and distant towards you, you make her laugh and smile even though she tries to pretend sheâ€™s angry, you make her feel feminine and girly by being more emotionally masculine than her).

Thatâ€™s what really works to get a woman back.

Finallyâ€!

5. Stop trying to get her to see your point of view

You are most likely a good guy.

True?

Youâ€™re a good guy.

In fact, since the break up, you have learned so much and are an even better guy than you ever have been.

You now know where you went wrong and if she will just give you another chance, you really will do better this time around.

Hereâ€™s the thing thoughâ€!

She doesnâ€™t care.

What will make her care?

If you stop trying to get her to see your point of view, understand you, believe you and listen to you and instead, just focus on reactivating her feelings for you.

Interact with her and don't think about yourself or getting your point of view across.

Just talk to her, make her smile, laugh and feel good.

Flirt with her and build up some sexual tension, even if she is acting a little cold or bitchy.

Be confident, be emotionally masculine and let her feel that coming through in the way you talk, behave and act now.

Be a more attractive version of you than you were before.

Most of all though, don't give up and lose confidence in yourself if she doesn't jump and down and give you compliments for how much you've changed.

Be a self-approving, self-loving man.

In other words, be confident and have high self esteem regardless of whether she gives you compliments or makes it obvious that she is impressed with her new and improved approach to being a man.

When you do that, she starts to feel good about interacting with you and begins to wonder what it would be like to give you another chance, now that you're so much more attractive and appealing compared to before.

As a result, she then stops being so defensive around you and opens up to you again.

She now has a reason to get back with you too.

She wants to explore her newfound feelings for you.

She wants to see what will happen if you and her hug, kiss and have sex again.

You seem like so much more of a man now.

So much better than before.

She can sense it and it makes her want to give the relationship another try to see how she feels and to see what will happen.

Using that approach works.

However, if you're trying to discuss everything with her and get her to see your point of view, you're just going to keep getting rejected by her because her defenses will remain up.

She will look at your approach to getting her back as being selfish (i.e. you want her back, but aren't changing to make her feel differently).

When you approach it in the right way, she wants to get back together just as much as you do.

So, do what works and she will be yours once again.

How Should I Respond When My Ex Brings Up Bad Memories From Our Relationship?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 6 possible ways to respond when your ex brings up bad memories from your relationship:

1. Jokingly make the memory even worse by making up bad things that you did

For example: If she says, “You never used to help me with the housework. You expected me to do everything like I was your slave,” you can make her stop looking at what you did in such a bad way.

You can laugh (important) and say, “It’s true! I was a real slave master, wasn’t I? Remember how I used to whip you and tell you to work harder? Remember how I used throw rubbish on the floor and tell you to pick it up? How about the time I got you to wash all the windows on a hot day while I sat on the couch and watched sports on TV...remember that?” and have a laugh with her about it.

By getting her to imagine you behaving much worse than you actually did, it takes away some of the power of what she is saying.

After all, you’re not as bad as the guy who are getting her to imagine.

By saying something like that to her, you are letting her know (in a loving way) that you’re not going to allow her to dominate you because of what happened in the past.

Yes, you are sorry for how you behaved and you definitely will be such a better man from now on, but you’re not going to let her use your past mistakes to rub your face in the mud.

You are a better man now that you’ve learned from your mistakes.

She needs to be able to see that.

One of the best ways to let her see that is to get her to imagine you being even worse, so she can realize that you aren’t so bad after all.

This will shock and surprise her (in a good way).

Naturally she might initially pretend to be angry with you and say something like, “How dare you make fun of me? I am being serious here and you’re making jokes.”

It’s essential that you maintain your confidence and let her see that you’re no longer going to allow her to dominate you emotionally, by bringing up bad memories from the past.

Sure you made some mistakes, but everyone makes mistakes—even her.

You have learned from your mistakes and have become a better man as a result.

When she sees for herself that you’re no longer the guy she broke up with (e.g. you’re more confident and emotionally strong now, you’re more mature, she doesn’t seem to be able to push you around anymore and she likes it), she won’t be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again.

From there, every time you interact with her (via text message, on social media, on a phone call, and especially in person) just focus on letting her experience the new and improved you.

The more she experiences your confidence and emotional dominance, the more her guard will come down.

You can then confidently guide her back into a relationship with you because she will be open and wanting it too.

Another way to respond when your ex brings up bad memories from your relationship isâ€¦

2. Apologize once or twice, but if she keeps bringing it up, playfully refuse to keep talking about it

Itâ€™s very likely that youâ€™ve already apologized to your ex for stuffing up, right?

If so, itâ€™s no longer necessary to keep apologizing.

Of course, if you havenâ€™t apologized to her yet, or you havenâ€™t done it properly (e.g. sometimes a guy will say sorry, but it wonâ€™t seem genuine because heâ€™s rushing it), go ahead and say youâ€™re sorry the next time your ex brings up the bad memories from your relationship.

Make sure that you are sincere, but also that you maintain your confidence and self-respect when you do it.

In other words, donâ€™t put yourself down and take all the blame for what happened because you hope it will make her respect you, take pity on you, or be thankful and then give you another chance.

It wonâ€™t and she'll simply gain even more power over you, which will turn her off.

So, if you have apologized, just know that itâ€™s enough.

You donâ€™t need to keep sucking up to her with additional apologies.

If she continues to bring up your mistakes again and again throughout the course of a conversation, donâ€™t feel forced to apologize to her again.

Instead, you can jokingly say, â€œOkay, that's the third time you're bringing this up. How many more times do you think you'd like to talk about it before you feel like it has been said? 10, 20, 30, 40 more times?â€

Make light of it, rather than taking it too seriously, feeling hurt and continually apologizing to her for the same things over and over again.

Let her see the funny side of things, rather than allowing her to make your mistakes seem like the worst thing in the world.

When you confidently make light of it all, she will see that she is being ridiculous by bringing up the bad memories from your relationship every time you and her interact.

Of course, she might not admit that to you.

If sheâ€™s like most women, she will pretend to be angry at you for making light of things.

Donâ€™t fall for it.

Her anger is simply a test to see if you have the balls to continue being confident and not buying into her BS act of being so upset about your mistakes.

She knows very well that women love, respect and feel attracted to a guy who is good guy, but who doesn't put up with a woman's BS.

So, apologize if you haven't already, but don't suck up to her with additional apologies.

Yes, you didn't treat her perfectly, but there's no need for her to keep going on and on about that.

If she refuses to stop talking about the bad memories from your relationship, just continue to turn it into something to laugh about.

Eventually your ex will realize that no matter what she says or does, you remain confident and emotionally strong and make light of the situation.

As a result, she won't be able to stop herself from seeing you in a more positive light and feeling silly for continuing to try to create ongoing drama about mistakes you made in the past.

Another way to respond when your ex brings up bad memories from your relationship is that

3. Laugh and tell her to stop being such a drama queen

Believe it or not, sometimes a woman doesn't even want you to take her complaints that seriously.

She is simply being a pain in the butt to see how much you will put up with.

For example:

- Will a guy take the blame for everything and put himself down in front of her because he's so desperate to get her back?
- Will he become emotionally weak and lose control of his emotions around her (e.g. start begging and pleading with her to forgive him and give him another chance, or possibly even start crying)?
- Will he lose confidence in himself and begin doubting himself and his value and attractiveness to her?
- Will he start being extra nice to her (e.g. shower her with gifts, be more patient with her, apologize even more), when what she really wants him to do is not buy into her fake drama?

If she sees that he can't handle her fake drama and is crumbling under the pressure, she will lose respect for him and feel like she has made the right decision to leave him.

After all, what a woman really wants is a man that she can look up to, respect and feel safe with because he can handle the challenges of life without losing confidence in himself.

So, if the guy doesn't play into her hands (i.e. he remains calm and confident no matter what she says and does to upset him, he laughs at her attempts to make him feel insecure), she will naturally begin to feel surges of respect for him again.

As a result, she will then also start to feel attraction and love for him and then the idea of getting back together again will start to feel good to her.

So, the next time your ex starts getting overly emotional with you and brings up bad memories from your relationship, just focus on seeing the funny side of the situation.

For example: You can laugh and say, â€œPoor little drama queen. Everything was so bad for you wasn't it? I mean, you never had one, single moment of joy in our relationship. It was all so bad, wasn't it!? How did you ever survive? You must be superwoman something, and then laugh at her and with her about it.

Of course, she may initially be a bit shocked when she realizes that you're no longer buying into her drama.

Even if she doesn't admit it, she will be feeling a lot of respect and attraction for you for having the courage to joke with her in that way.

She will then realize that you're now the kind of man she always wanted you to be (e.g. confident, emotionally strong, emotionally dominant, masculine) and she won't be able to stop herself from opening her heart to you again.

Be warned though!

If she's like most women, she will hold her card close to her chest.

In other words, she might be feeling sparks of respect, attraction and love for you and wanting you to hug her and kiss her, but she will be acting like she isn't interested.

Women do that as a way of testing how strong a guy's confidence in himself really is, so make sure that you're feeling very confident when you next interact with your ex.

Another way to respond when your ex brings up bad memories from your relationship is!

4. Take ownership of your mistakes, but don't let her think that she is perfect

There's nothing wrong with admitting that you made a mistake.

What your ex needs to understand though is that no-one is perfect.

Everyone makes mistakes in a relationship and it doesn't mean that they are a bad person, or a person who can't do any better.

Maybe you made twice as many mistakes as her in the relationship, but that doesn't mean she didn't mess up with you in some way too.

Of course, you shouldn't use that as a reason why she should take you back, but as a way to show her that you're not taking all the blame for how things turned out.

That said, working out who is to blame isn't going to get her back.

To get her back, you need to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for the new and improved you.

For example: The next time your ex brings up bad memories from your relationship, you can say something along the lines of, Yes, you're right. Some bad things did happen in our relationship. I don't blame you for feeling hurt and wanting to bring it up too. However, you have to agree that everyone makes mistakes. I made some and you made some too. I admit that I probably made a whole lot more mistakes than you, but it doesn't mean you have to keep punishing me for it over and over again. I stuffed up and accept responsibility for it. We are both mature adults though and the best way forward is to accept that what's done is done. We cannot change the past, but we can change how we interact with each other now and in the future. You and I should do the mature thing and look at each other as who we are now, rather than looking at each *other based on who we used to be. People always change, improve and learn. Iâve certainly learned a lot from our relationship and have changed so much.*â

This helps her understand and see that you really are a different person though.

However, even though she will understand and accept that, itâs not the only thing you need to do to get her back.

Women rarely get back with a guy based on a smart, logical argument.

To get her back, it has to be about her feelings (i.e. respect, attraction, love).

So, when you lovingly, but assertively stand up to her when she brings up bad memories from your relationship, she stops seeing you as the jerk who stuffed up and she starts seeing you as a new man.

Regardless of whether she wants to admit it or not, you now make her feel like a real woman around you (i.e. feminine, girly) because youâre being more masculine than her.

That is attractive to her, even if she wonât openly admit it to you now.

When you make her feel feminine, she naturally feels drawn to you and you can then build on those feelings and get her back.

Another way to respond is toâ

5. Change the conversation and focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good

One of the best ways to respond to your ex when she brings up bad memories from your relationship, is to use humor to take the seriousness away from the situation.

So, the next time your ex turns the conversation towards all the bad memories, rather than getting into long, stressful conversations, just turn it into something to laugh about together instead.

For example: Imagine that your ex broke up with you because you took her for granted and she regularly brings it up during conversation.

To change how she feels, you might say something along the lines of, âHey, youâre right! I was a real slave driver. Remember how I used to make you scrub the floors on your hands and knees? What about the times I used to lock you up in my dungeon with only stale bread and water to keep you going for a week? What an asshole I was. That said, you sure were a cute little slave. My floors havenât been very clean since you left. I think you need to get your butt around to my place and do some cleaning. Youâre good at itâ and have a laugh with her about it.

Itâs not about cracking jokes in a disrespectful way, but about being able to laugh at yourself and the way you behaved in the past, without taking it so seriously.

She will then most likely laugh at the way you turned her bad memories into something funny and begin to wonder what has brought about such a sudden change in you.

She will feel curious about your newfound relaxed and confident attitude towards her, which will naturally make her feel some respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to keep harping on the bad memories from the relationship because she starts to look like the childish, immature one who canât let go of the past.

She then drops her guard and from there, you just need to build on that spark of attraction and guide her back into a relationship with you.

Finally!|

6. Get her to forgive the old you

Forgiveness automatically makes a woman drop her guard and open back up to you.

This is why you need to get your ex to forgive the old you.

How can you get her to forgive you?

Start off by explaining to her that if she doesn't forgive the old you, she is only hurting herself.

She'll end up being one of those women who can't move on and have a healthy relationship with a guy, because she's always bringing up bad memories from her past relationships, or keeping her heart closed because she doesn't want to get hurt again.

Here's an example of what you can say!

I know that I stuffed up and I'm truly sorry for hurting you. However, I'm not that guy anymore. I really have changed and improved and I'm now a better man as a result. You may not want to believe me right now and that's okay. The important thing is that we stop blaming each other for what happened in the past and try to go forward from here as the people we are now. I'm not asking you to take me back at all. I just think that when you can stop holding onto the past, you will be able to move forward in your life with a new guy, without all the baggage from our relationship getting in the way. You can be happy again. What do you say? Can you stop bringing up bad memories from our relationship and just let us be friends from this point onwards?

When you give her the freedom to not have baggage in her future relationships and she then forgives you as a result, she stops looking at you in a negative way.

She stops focusing on all the bad memories and mistakes you made and she starts feeling respect for the emotionally mature man you have become.

She starts wondering why she doesn't actually want a new guy all of a sudden and is starting to worry about losing you and regretting it.

After all, you're so much more mature now and you're making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction.

When she feels that way, her defenses begin to come down and she begins to reconnect with the love that she used to feel for you.

Except, this time, the love is so much more meaningful, mature and right for her.

You understand her now and have become an even better man than you were before.

As a result, the love, respect and attraction that you and her feel for each other will go deeper and will become something that neither of you ever want to let go of.

How Should I Communicate With My Ex Now That She Has a New Boyfriend?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The best way to communicate with your ex now that she has a new boyfriend (and you want her back) is to:

1. Flirt and joke around with her as though she is still your girlfriend

When a guy has been dumped by his girl and she now has a new guy, he will often be unsure whether he should still be showing her that he feels sexually attracted to her and wants her back.

Yes, he should!

An alpha male (the kind of man that women are the most attracted to) does not look at other guys as being competition for a woman.

He is the man and no other guy is on his level.

He doesn't have to say that though.

It comes across in how he thinks, talks, feels, behaves and acts.

Women pick up on it and they naturally feel attracted to it.

Of course, a lot of guys don't know that, or fear that it isn't true.

As a result, a guy will worry that his ex girl might get upset if he shows interest (especially if she has a new guy) and will refuse to talk to him ever again.

Yet, here's the thing!

The only way to get the spark back between you and your ex is for you to CREATE some sexual tension between you and her.

You CREATE it by interacting with her and displaying personality traits and behaviors (e.g. confidence, emotional masculinity, humor, charisma) that women naturally feel attracted to.

As a result, she feels some attraction for you and begins to doubt her feelings for the new guy.

One of the best ways to display a combination of attractive traits is to confidently flirt and joke around with her every time you interact with her from now on.

For example: Imagine that you're talking to your ex (e.g. on a phone call or in person) right now.

After a having quick chat and a laugh together about something, you can say, Anyway, so when are you going to come around and cook me some dinner? I haven't eaten your awesome mac and cheese with bacon in a long time. You're not a very good ex girlfriend, are you? You have to take better care of me than this. I've gotta eat and have a laugh.

If she complains and says something like, Hey! You can't talk to me like that now.

We're broken up. I don't cook for you anymore. I have a new boyfriend, remember?

just laugh and say something along the lines of, Hey, there's no need to be so uptight and make up silly rules about ex's not being allowed to joke around with each other. We can joke around about things like that. We don't have to be on our best behavior now and act all formal now that we're broken up. That would just be weird. We can still have a laugh together. It's no big deal. Besides, even ex boyfriends deserve to eat a good meal once in a while, don't you agree?

If she then says something like, No, we can't do that. I'm with a new guy now and it would be disrespectful to him, just laugh, tell her to relax and assure her that you were only joking and she doesn't need to take everything so seriously.

Then, continue on with the conversation and make sure that you keep making her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you.

Be confident and flirt with her, without worrying about what she might think or if the new guy might get jealous or upset.

Here's the thing!

Flirting and laughter makes a woman feel attracted; especially when she is your ex.

Why?

Most guys don't have the balls to flirt with their ex after being dumped because their confidence has been ruined as a result of the break up.

So, if you let her see that you are still 100% confident in yourself regardless of the fact that she left you and now has a new man, she simply cannot stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you.

The more you make her feel attracted to you, the more doubts she will have about her new boyfriend.

She may begin to think to herself, I'm so confused. I thought I was truly over my ex, but now I'm not so sure. I actually enjoy talking to him a lot more now and if I'm honest with myself, my heart sometimes skips a beat when I first hear his voice on the phone. He just seems so different now. If he was like this before, we probably wouldn't have ever broken up in the first place. I do like my new boyfriend, but I'm clearly still attracted to my ex. I don't know what to do.

That's what you want her thinking and feeling.

It plants that seed of doubt in her mind where she starts looking at him and thinking of you and wondering, Why am I feeling this way? Why do I miss my ex?

Important: A huge mistake that a lot of guys make these days, is in thinking that they can attract their ex back via text only.

For example: A guy might think, I don't know how to talk to my ex now that she has a new boyfriend. It already feels like it's too late for me to get her back. I don't want to lose her though, so maybe if I stay in touch with her via text and be her friend, she will see that I'm being a good ex who isn't being pushy or disrespectful of her new guy. Then, if she has a fight with him, she'll come right back to me because I've been there the whole time.

It sounds like a good plan, but it almost never happens in cases where a woman dumped a guy because she no longer felt attracted to him (e.g. because he became too insecure in the relationship).

Texting her like a friend doesn't make her feel sexually attracted and turned on, especially if she is still turned off (e.g. because he became a bit of an asshole in the relationship, ruined her self esteem, made her feel unattractive).

So, rather than think, â€œOh my ex is being so sweet by texting me like this! Heâ€™s being so respectful of my new relationship too because heâ€™s just being nice and friendly. I feel so much respect and attraction for him for being such a cool ex boyfriend! I want him back so badly!â€ she rolls her eyes and either ignores the texts, or messes with her exâ€™s head by stringing him along for a while.

All the while though, she is kissing and having sex with her new guy and enjoying life without her ex.

This is why itâ€™s so important that you donâ€™t take a back seat to your exâ€™s new boyfriend. You need to be present in her life (on a phone call or in person, not just via text) and be the one who is joking with her, flirting with her and making her feel surges of respect and sexual attraction for you.

If you can make her have strong or building feelings for you again, she will naturally begin to question her dedication to the guy and possibly even agree to meet up with you, or suggest that you catch up and then open up to kissing and having sex with you again.

Remember thoughâ€¦!

Donâ€™t try to achieve that via text.

Text feels easier, but it is not as effective as a phone call or in person meet up.

Another thing to keep in mind when communicating with your ex now that she has a new boyfriend, isâ€¦!

2. Don't ask too many questions about the new guy

For example: The ex guy might askâ€¦!

- How serious is the relationship with your new boyfriend?
- Did you meet him after we broke up, or did you already know each other before?
- Where did you meet him?
- What does he do?
- What does he look like?
- How much money does he make?

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

As tempting as it might be to want to get as much information out of your ex about her new guy, asking too many questions about him only makes you look like the insecure, jealous ex boyfriend. She will then lose even more respect for you and she will instinctively feel drawn to her new man. Why?

Women are naturally attracted to alpha males.

Alpha males do not look at other guys as being competition.

An alpha male sees himself as the man and doesnâ€™t even consider other guys to be on his level.

So, this new boyfriend of hers should be looked at in the same way.

Heâ€™s not on your level.

You are the man and heâs just some random guy who thinks he can keep your woman happy. Yet, he is going to be in for a shock when he finds out that she is leaving him and going back to you. So, donât ever look at this guy as being better than you in any way.

Donât even worry about what he does for a living, how tall he is, what he looks like or whatever else.

He is nothing compared to you.

So, just relax and focus on re-attracting your ex by interacting with her and displaying personality traits and behaviors that are naturally attractive and appealing to women.

Show her that you believe in your value to her (even though youâre not together anymore) and use every interaction to regain her respect, attraction and love for you.

When you believe that you are a better man than her new boyfriend and act accordingly, she will realize it too.

Donât tell her that youâre better than him.

That would be insecure.

Just be confident, charismatic and flirt with her and make her laugh and feel good when talking to you.

Let her pick up on the fact that you arenât doubting yourself one bit.

That is what works.

On the other hand, if you interact with your ex in an insecure, self-doubting way, she will naturally feel even more attracted to her new guy and feel even more turned off by you than ever before because she now has a new guy to contrast you again.

3. Talk about the progress you're making with your life purpose

One of the things that makes a woman feel a tremendous amount of respect and attraction for a guy, is in knowing that he has a big purpose in life that heâs working towards and wonât give up on.

In other words, he has huge goals, ambitions and dreams and is actively making progress towards them.

This is essential when in a relationship and results in a woman feeling safe about the future with her guy, which then makes her want to stick with him for life.

If a guy doesnât offer a woman that feeling of safety, it will be one of the reasons why she breaks up with him.

After getting dumped, he needs to ensure that he immediately gets to work on making some progress on his big goals, dreams and ambitions.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys donât realize that and assume that showing her he is lost without her, is the way to get her back.

A guy like that might say to himself, âWhen she sees that I have no life without her, she will feel flattered that she means more to me than anything else in the world. Then, hopefully she will realize *that her new guy cannot possibly love her as much as I do. She will then change her mind and give me another chance.*â□□

Yet, in almost every case, the complete opposite happens.

Rather than be impressed by his lack of a life without her, she feels even less respect for him for not being able to stand on his own two feet without her.

This is why itâ□□s important that you become emotionally independent and start living a happy and fulfilled life without your ex.

A guy doesnâ□□t have to do that for long to make a great impression on her.

Even a weekâ□□s worth of effort in a case like that (i.e. when she has a new boyfriend and has dumped her ex because he lacked purpose and direction) is enough.

She just needs to see some evidence that he is for real now, so she can believe in the changes and begin to open up to the idea of potentially being with him again.

Of course, just doing that isnâ□□t enough to get a woman back on itâ□□s own.

What matters in addition to that is how he makes her feel when he talks to her on the phone or in person (i.e. does he make her smile, laugh and feel attracted, or does he make her feel annoyed, unhappy and turned off?).

How about you?

Was part of the reason why she left you because you lacked purpose and direction in life and essentially made your life about her and the relationship?

Did you end up becoming too emotionally dependent on her to the point where you became clingy, needy, controlling or jealous?

If so, you need to start making progress towards being a more balanced, emotionally independent man.

How?

Look at your purpose in life (i.e. your biggest goals, dreams and ambitions) as the most important thing in your life, rather than looking at her for your sense of identity or purpose in this world.

She can be the most important person in your life, but not the most important thing.

If you can let her get that sense about you, she wonâ□□t be able to stop herself from feeling surges of respect and sexual attraction for you again.

At the same time, if her new boyfriend happens to be stuck in a rut in his life and doesnâ□□t have much purpose or direction, you making progress on your life purpose will become very appealing to her.

She will then begin to have doubts about her new guy and start wondering something like,
*â□□Maybe my new boyfriend isnâ□□t the right guy for me after all. My ex seems to have gotten his act together and thatâ□□s what I really want in a man. Iâ□□m so confused all of a sudden. Maybe I do want my ex back. Maybe I did make a mistake. I hope itâ□□s not too late for us. Will he forgive me for getting a new boyfriend?*â□□

She then opens herself up to interacting with you more via text, on the phone and in person.

As long as you remain confident and make her feel attracted, getting her back should be very easy at that point.

By the way!

Although you should talk to your ex about the progress you've made in life since the break up, make sure that you don't talk in a way where you're essentially saying, Now do you like me? Am I better than your new boyfriend? Are you impressed? Do you approve? Can I get another chance now?

That's unattractive to a woman because it makes her feel like the more dominant one, or the leader that you are following, which isn't what a woman wants.

So, be a self-proving, masculine man instead.

This doesn't mean that you should be arrogant, be rude or put her new boyfriend down in anyway.

Instead, just decide that you approve of yourself.

Like who you are, with or without the approval, compliments or acknowledgement of her or anyone else.

Know that you are a good man who is worthy of respect and love.

You are so self-proving and self-loving that don't need the respect and love of your ex (or others) to feel good about yourself, but you certainly have earned it and are more than worthy of it.

As a result of thinking like that, not only do you automatically become more attractive to your ex, but you also realize that you are perfectly capable of having a great life without her.

This doesn't mean that you will then go and get another woman.

It's just about being emotionally independent, which is what a woman really wants to see in a man.

4. Bring up old, private jokes

Whether your ex cares to admit it or not, you and her have a past together that she will never share with her new boyfriend.

Even though there are definitely some bad things that she probably won't want to think about or remember regarding her relationship with you, there still are many positives that you can help her remember.

For example: Most couples have little private jokes that only they understand and that make them feel unique, positive emotions.

So, make sure that you aren't afraid to bring some of them up while talking to her.

By bringing up positive emotions that remind her of the good times, you're connecting with her in a happy, familiar place that can make her miss what you and her had.

If you are also making her feel attracted while talking to her (e.g. by being confident, charismatic, ballsy), the private jokes will cause her to forget about her reasons for breaking up with you and start missing you.

This then makes interacting with you something that she really enjoys doing again.

It might also highlight that the relationship with her boyfriend is still too new to have these types of special connections and possibly might not ever.

Of course, just saying an old, private joke isn't everything.

You've got to make sure that you're backing that up by making her feel attracted to you in other ways while you talk to her.

5. Be happy, confident, positive and forward moving

Most guys lose a lot of confidence after being dumped, especially if their ex woman hooks up with a new boyfriend pretty quickly.

So, it can be difficult for a guy to feel happy, confident, positive and moving forward without her.

Yet, if you want to get your ex back (even though she's with another guy right now) you must make yourself feel happy, confident, positive and forward moving.

How will that make your ex want you?

Women are naturally attracted to the type of men who have the emotional strength to cope with the problems that life throws at them in a positive way, rather than crumbling under pressure and losing confidence.

So, when a guy picks himself up, dusts himself off and gets on with living a happy, productive life after being dumped, a woman can't help but feel respect for him.

She almost certainly won't ever admit that because she doesn't want to hint at what is working or boost his ego, but she will feel it.

When she starts feeling respect for him again, she also starts to feel sexually attracted and then it's not long before she will start to feel sparks of love for him again.

On the other hand, women are turned off by men who fall apart when things get difficult and can't move forward because she is no longer by his side to support him and encourage him.

So, the next time that you interact with your ex (over the phone and in person), make sure that she senses your confidence and emotional independence.

Let her see, hear, feel and notice that you are happy and living a good life without her.

It's not about rubbing her face in it or trying to make her feel bad.

It's simply about being confident, happy, positive and forward moving, while also having the emotional maturity to actively make her feel good about herself when she's talking to you (e.g. giving her the occasional compliment, making her laugh and smile).

When you do that, she won't be able to stop thinking about you in a very different way than she has lately.

When your ex realizes that you haven't been sitting around moping, feeling sorry for yourself and being jealous of her because she's been moving on, she will naturally begin to develop feelings for you again.

As a result, she may begin to wonder, â€œHave I made the right decision by breaking up with my ex? What if he's the one for me and I've now gotten myself into a new relationship? What if I made a mistake? I've heard about other couples getting back together after a break up and it working. Maybe that's us. Maybe I should just follow my heart and give him another chance. If I don't, I'll probably regret if he moves on with another woman and commits to her instead.â€

All you have to do at that point is keep building on her feelings for you and before long, her new boyfriend will be history and you will be the one she wants.

My Girlfriend Said That She Wants to Discover Herself Without Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

6 possible reasons why a girlfriend will say that to her boyfriend:

1. He caused her to become purpose-oriented because he wasn't

If a guy doesn't have a clear purpose in life where he is actively following through on his biggest dreams, goals and ambitions, a woman will begin to feel lost and uncertain about the future.

As a result, she will start to feel like she needs to find some direction in life, which she may describe as needing to find herself, discover herself or explore life on her own.

A lot of guys simply don't know that a woman doesn't ever want him to make her his main purpose and focus in life.

Women don't go around admitting it, but they really want to be with a guy who can follow through on his biggest dreams, goals and ambitions in life, so she can be his woman.

She doesn't want to have the strong one in the relationship and always be striving to achieve something big or important in life.

Of course, some women are purpose-oriented, but the majority of women aren't and simply get involved in a career until they get to experience what they really want; to be a mother.

Again, most women don't go around admitting that, but it's at the core of what a woman really wants to be.

She might be going through life saying that she doesn't even like kids, but she will always feel lost and confused when she is trying to find happiness in her career, until one day, her biological clock kicks in and starts pushing her to get pregnant before it's too late.

This doesn't mean that to get your ex back, you have to make her pregnant.

Instead, it just means that you have to be the sort of man that she can look up to, respect and rely on to lead the way to a better future, rather than making her feel like she is responsible for all that.

Deep down, a woman wants to feel the safety of being with a man who will continue to make progress in life, rather than just wanting to hang out with her 24/7 and waste time.

She wants a man who is setting himself up to be a good provider in the future, should they decide to have children.

Again, women don't go around admitting that, but it's what they want.

Most guys don't really think about that side of things too much, so he ends up making the classic mistake of making a woman his purpose in life.

For example: He gives up his interests or hobbies (other than the ones he can do at home with her around, such as playing video games or watching TV), so he can spend more time with his girl.

He might also stop hanging out with his friends, unless he can bring her along too.

Eventually, everything he does revolves around her.

He thinks something like, â€œThis is what a woman wants. She wants to see that her man loves her and is 100% devoted to her and no one else. Iâ€™m just being a good boyfriend here by showing her that nothing else matters in my life more than her. Besides, I donâ€™t really care about anything else other than her. Who cares about achieving things or becoming a bigger and better man over time? We are in love! That is all that matters. I just want to spend time with her because thatâ€™s when Iâ€™m the happiest.â€

Yet, while heâ€™s thinking that, his woman is usually wondering, â€œWhen is he going to man up and go after his goals and dreams in life? When is he going to find his life purpose and go after it? Why does he always just want to hang out with me? What will happen if I get pregnant? Will he be able to support me and the child? Why isnâ€™t he thinking about that?â€

If he doesnâ€™t start following through on his biggest dreams and goals (and actually making real progress), she will eventually feel as though she needs to get focused about her future, with or without him.

Initially, she might start striving to make a better future for him and her, but that usually doesnâ€™t last for long in most relationships.

The woman ends up feeling like more of the â€œmanâ€ in the relationship and starts looking at her guy as not being man enough for a girl like her.

As a result, she starts feeling attracted to other guys who are more manly and purpose-oriented and begins to fall out of love with her boyfriend.

Eventually, she will decide that she doesnâ€™t want to be responsible for her boyfriendâ€™s emotional well-being anymore and she will then say something along the lines of, â€œSorry, but I canâ€™t be with you anymore. I want to discover myself without you.â€

Why?

His life is about her.

A manâ€™s life is supposed to be about his dreams, goals and ambitions first and foremost and everything else after that.

Essentially, a woman should be the most important person in your life, but not the most important thing.

You might want to read that last sentence again.

So, if you want to get your girlfriend back, you need to get to the point where you see her as being the most important person in your life, but not the most important thing.

You should be actively pursuing your life purpose and making real progress with it, so she doesnâ€™t feel like she needs to be the leader and guide the way to a better future.

When she can see that youâ€™re moving forward in life without needing her support and encouragement, she will naturally feel respect, attraction and love for you for life for being your own man now.

On the other hand, if you continue trying to get her back because you feel lost and directionless without her (e.g. telling her that your life wouldn't be worth living without her), itâ€™s not going to work.

Sheâ€™s will feel as though her newfound purpose or direction in life is more appealing than you and as a result, she will keep saying things, â€œNo. I want to discover myself without you. Itâ€™s over. You need to let me go.â€

Another possible reason why a woman might say that that she wants to discover herself without her boyfriend is

2. She doesn't feel like a feminine woman with him and is confused about why she has changed

In a relationship, it's primarily up to the guy to keep the spark alive between him and his woman. If a guy does that, his woman will naturally respond by being a better woman and helping to keep the spark alive too.

However, if he continually ruins the spark, the woman will begin to shut down and will know that it's not her responsibility to be the stronger one and lead them both out of that situation.

Some women will do it for a while (i.e. if they really love their guy), but when she realizes that he is supposed to be the emotionally stronger one as the man and lead the way, she will begin to shut down.

If the guy notices that, he might then become angry, clingy, needy or controlling, which will make her shut down even more.

So, what's a guy to do?

Essentially, a guy needs to ensure that he makes his woman feel feminine, by being much more masculine than her.

The types of masculinity that are the most important are your mental and emotional masculinity.

In other words, you think, feel, talk, move, behave and act like a masculine man.

Physical masculinity (e.g. muscles, a beard) is fine, but it doesn't mean anything to a woman if a guy is mentally and emotionally wimpy in a lot of ways (e.g. he's emotionally sensitive, soft, easily upset).

To a woman, what really matters is whether or not you have the balls and the desire to be a man at all times.

You can do that when you are skinny, overweight, athletic or an average body type.

What matters is how manly you are in the inside and how that comes through on the outside in your behavior, actions and vibe.

A lot of guys make the mistake of thinking that being the man isn't necessary because their girl is so in love with them.

Yeah, but for how long?

There's only so much a woman can take before she eventually says something like, "I need to discover myself" or, "I need to be on my own for a while" because her guy just isn't man enough for her.

A lot of guys don't realize that and end up thinking that they're doing the right thing by giving a girl pretty much all the power in a relationship.

She then takes on the more dominant, masculine role (i.e. because she's now making all the decisions, is in control) and he takes on the more passive, emotionally weak role (i.e. because heâ□□s letting her wear the pants, doesnâ□□t know how to be the man or thinks heâ□□s doing the right thing by taking a back seat approach to the relationship and just letting her drive).

When that happens, the woman slowly starts to lose touch with her feminine, girly side, because sheâ□□s too busy leading and essentially being the â□□manâ□□ in the relationship.

Over time, she starts to think to herself, â□□Whatâ□□s going on with me? I used to be gentle and womanly, but now all I ever seem to do is boss my guy around and act like a bitch. I miss being a feminine woman who can relax and let a man lead the way. I donâ□□t like this dominating, masculine side to myself. Iâ□□ve changed because of him. I have to leave him to rediscover my real self. I donâ□□t like who I am in a relationship with him. I want to be happy again. I want to be me again.â□□

Initially, to save the relationship, she might try to shift the balance back towards her man (e.g. suggest that he make decisions, hint by saying that her girlfriendâ□□s boyfriend is very manly and her girlfriend likes it, get annoyed when she is the one leading the way).

Yet, if he continues to miss the point and just say things like, â□□Whatever you want is fine by me,â□□ or â□□Iâ□□ll go along with whatever you want. Iâ□□m cool. Whatever you decide is fineâ□□ she will eventually lose too much respect and attraction for him that she will literally stop loving him.

A break up will then happen and her aim will be to rediscover her feminine side and be a girl again.

When the break up happens, a guy might try to change her mind by saying things like, â□□Iâ□□ll change. Just tell me what you want me to do. Iâ□□ll do whatever it takes if you will just give me another chance.â□□

What he doesnâ□□t realize is that heâ□□s simply turning her off in the exact same way that caused her to want to break up with him in the first place.

She doesnâ□□t want to have to teach him how to be the man she needs.

She wants a ready-made man who already understands what it takes to be a masculine, emotionally strong and dominant man in a relationship, rather than having to guide him and teach him.

Another possible reason why a woman might say that to a guy is becauseâ□□!

3. He has been clingy and needy for too long and she now needs to get away and be herself, on her own terms

For a woman to maintain sexual attraction for her man, she has to feel as though he is the kind of man she can look up to, respect, feel proud of and feel attracted to.

This is why women are naturally attracted to men who are confident, emotionally strong, emotionally independent and emotionally masculine and turned off by men who are insecure, needy, clingy, emotionally weak and self-doubting.

So, when a guy becomes clingy in his relationship with a woman, she instinctively starts to lose respect for him, because she is sensing his emotional weakness.

Initially, she may try to shake him up a bit by saying things like, â□□Hey, why donâ□□t you make some plans with your friends for the weekend? It might be nice for you to spend some time with the guys,â□□ or â□□You used to really love running/hiking/golfing before we met, but you havenâ□□t *been doing any of that lately. Why not start again? It would be good for you to get out and do something you enjoy.*â€œ

However, if he just brushes her off by saying something along the lines of, *â€œNo thanks! That was before I met you. Now that I have you in my life, nothing else is worth my attention. You are much more fun than my friends/hobbies,*â€œ she will eventually start to question her reasons for sticking with him.

Likewise, if she can see that he wants to go, but is afraid of leaving her side for too long (i.e. because heâ€™s worried that she will cheat or realize that she is happier when heâ€™s not around), then she will begin to lose respect for him and be turned off by his emotional clinginess.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

When a guy becomes too clingy and needy and cannot make a move without his woman by his side, she begins to feel smothered by him and the relationship.

Rather than relaxing into being a feminine girly woman around him, she starts to feel like she has to take care of him emotionally.

She might put up with that kind of neediness for a while, but she will gradually lose so much respect for him as a man that she will say something like, *â€œLook, I just canâ€™t be in a relationship with you anymore. I want to discover myself without you. I want to be on my own for a while. I need to figure things out and understand what I want.*â€œ

Mistakenly, the guy might then start pleading with her and saying, *â€œWhy do you want to break up with me to discover things? We can discover things together as a couple, if thatâ€™s what you want. I am open to doing whatever you want. I love you. Please donâ€™t do this.*â€œ

Yet, that only highlights his neediness to her and makes her want to be on her own even more.

Another possible reason why a woman might say that to a guy is becauseâ€¦!

4. She has grown up faster than him

Quite often, a couple will start off being at the same level emotionally.

For example: A guy and a woman might meet at work when they are in similar level positions, but she then might get promoted and start thinking and behaving a lot differently. â€œWhile he is happy to remain at his lower level position, she now sees the benefit of rising up the ladder of success and achieving.

She might be fine to carry him along with her for a while, but if he is turning her off in other ways (e.g. heâ€™s insecure about her success, jealous about guys at work who are making more money than him), then she will begin to feel very turned off and wonder what she is doing with him.

Likewise, a couple might meet way back in high school, start dating, go to the prom together and then continue seeing each other after graduation.

Yet, while she starts to become more serious and goal oriented about her future (e.g. goes to university, stops partying so much, starts investing some of her money for the future), he remains stuck thinking, talking and behaving like the carefree, irresponsible boy he was in school.

For example: He mightâ€¦!

- Spend most of his time watching TV, playing video games, or partying with his friends.
- Avoid making a commitment to study further or get a job and instead, he just keeps fooling around with unimportant things (e.g. hobbies that aren't going to secure a future for either of them, but which are fun for him because he doesn't have to grow up and take responsibility for bigger things).
- Be broke and depend on his family (or even his woman) to support him financially.
- Still live at home with his parents and not be trying to move out and get a place with her.
- Act irresponsibly (e.g. driving his car while drunk, taking too many recreational drugs to the point where he is high most of his free time outside of work).
- Refuse to think about the future and what he wants to do in his life.
- Refuse to make a commitment to her (e.g. move in together, get engaged)
- Flirt with other women and try to hook up with them behind her back.
- Act like a child when things don't go his way (e.g. sulking, throwing a tantrum and possibly even crying).

When his woman realizes that she's grown up and matured and her boyfriend is still stuck thinking, behaving, talking and acting like a boy, she's going to start questioning whether or not the relationship is for her.

Likewise, if she notices that other guys his age are acting like men and making real progress in life, she will gradually lose respect for boyfriend and start getting ready to break up with him (e.g. flirting with other guys behind his back to find a ready replacement, moving out if they live together, getting a higher paying job so she can afford to pay rent on her own).

If the guy notices her pulling away, he might then make the mistake of accusing her of being selfish and not caring for him anymore.

He might then become even more jealous, controlling, insecure or boyish (i.e. sulking) in his behavior.

Yet, rather than make her think, â€œOh, how sweet. He's like a lost little boy. He needs me. I should help him grow up,â€ she's going to be thinking, â€œWell, that's another sign he's not man enough for me. He doesn't even know how to be a man without my help. I'm tired of being like a mother to him and having to take care of him. While other women can sit back and relax, knowing that their man has grown up and knows how to manage a relationship properly, I'm stuck with a guy who thinks he's Peter Pan and doesn't want to grow up. It's not fair. I can't stick around and hope that he will change one day. I'd rather just break up with him and discover myself without him. Who knows? I might even find a man who makes me feel like a girl again. Wouldn't that be nice? I miss who I used to be. I want to be a girl around a guy again.â€

From then on, anything that her boyfriend says or does that isn't manly will make her feel more convinced that she has to leave him and move on.

Of course, if he were to change and become more manly all of a sudden, then she would feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him and not want to leave.

Another possible reason why a woman might say that she wants to discover herself without her boyfriend is becauseâ€

5. He has become too emotionally sensitive and has potentially cried to her on a number of occasions. So, her instincts are telling her that she's not with a real man and needs to get out of the relationship

It would be great if life was easy and there were never any problems or worries.

Wouldn't that be nice?

Well, that's not how life works here on Earth.

We humans encounter problems and challenges and we either use them to better ourselves and our relationships, or become insecure, give up and ruin relationships.

In other words, one of the most important things to do in life is to be strong and use challenges and problems to become a better man and experience an even better relationship with your woman.

If you take that approach to life, your life and your relationship literally gets better all the time.

That's how it works.

It doesn't matter if a guy is rich, good looking and successful, or poor, unattractive and ordinary, nothing can stop him from experiencing some problems in his life from time-to-time (e.g. a business deal goes wrong or he loses his job, he's faced with an illness, he has an accident, he and his woman have an argument).

It happens to everyone.

However, it's how you handle it that matters.

A woman wants to see that you remain emotionally strong and keep making progress and getting smarter, better and more effective, no matter what she or life throws at you.

She doesn't want to see you break down emotionally and need her help to support you because you can't handle the challenges of life.

There's nothing wrong with feeling a bit upset or annoyed about a problem or challenge in life and talking to your woman about it.

However, if a guy falls apart emotionally, cries or loses motivation and needs his woman to keep propping him up, she will naturally lose respect for him.

She won't look at him as being a man, but as being a boy in a man's body.

As a result, her feelings of sexual attraction will disappear and she will begin to fall out of love with him.

Here's the thing!

What a woman needs to see that her guy is emotionally strong enough to quickly pick himself up and get on with fixing a situation/problem or looking for a solution like a man.

She doesn't want him to remain stuck in being upset, crying and acting like a lost little boy who needs a pat on the back from her.

Women don't go around explaining this to men (because they don't want to teach guys how to be men), but it's what they secretly want in a guy.

When a woman can see that her man is emotionally strong enough to cope with the hurdles of life, she then feels as though can depend on him to be the man, so she can then be the woman (i.e. feminine, girly, emotional, vulnerable, sensitive).

If he is consistently being a man, her feelings of respect, attraction and love will grow and she will never want to leave him.

On the other hand, if he is too emotionally sensitive and cries or sulks at every bump in the road (e.g. he loses some money from an investment, he has a disagreement with a coworker), she will feel as though heâs not man enough for her and will then lose respect for him.

She will then start wondering things like, âWhy is he always crying to me? Why canât he face his problems like a man? Is this how life is going to be for me if I stick with him?â

If he doesnât change, she will break up with him.

If he then tries to get her back by sulking to her and pleading with her to give him another chance, he will simply make her feel glad about her decision to leave him because he will be displaying emotional weakness and neediness.

Rather give him another chance, she will think something like, âEven though I initially had my doubts about breaking up with him, I now realize that it was the right move. Heâs too emotionally weak for me and is just going to keep sulking to me no matter what life throws his way. Itâs better that I get out of the relationship now and find myself a real man who can actually cope with the problems in his life, rather than be stuck with a wimpy, weak-minded man.â

Essentially, if a man is emotionally weak, he is going to lean on his woman for emotional support, which is going to make her feel more like a mother than a lover.

So, rather than get stuck in a relationship like that, she will just break up with him and move on.

Another possible reason why a woman might say that to a guy is becauseâ|

6. She feels like he is stuck and isn't really going anywhere in life with him

Sometimes, a guy simply gets stuck in a comfortable place in his life (e.g. he has a good enough job, lives in a good enough house, drives a good enough car) that he stops trying to level up in life.

He is content because he feels that he has everything that he needs (i.e. a job, a beautiful woman, a car, a house that he is paying off or renting).

Yet, what he doesnât realize is that a woman isnât going to feel happy about that because she doesnât want to follow a guy who isnât going anywhere.

If heâs not aiming for something, then life starts to feel boring for her and she starts to think that she should be aiming for something.

Making progress, exploring, bettering ourselves and making breakthroughs is big part of what it means to be human, so if a guy just stops and isnât really trying to level up, a womanâs instincts kick in.

She might not know what else she wants to do, but her instincts will be telling her to do something other than just waste away, stuck at a certain level of life with him.

Hereâs the thingâ

In a relationship, itâs the manâs responsibility to maintain and build on the love, respect and attraction between him and his woman.

If he fails to do that (e.g. because he just assumes since heâs content with where he is in his life, his woman should be too), she will eventually begin to feel frustrated and want out.

Initially, she may just hint at her unhappiness by saying things like, *âWhy donât you apply for a promotion?*â or *âWhy donât we do something different for a change?*â or, *âAll my friendsâ boyfriends are going places in life. Why canât you be a bit more like them?*â

Essentially, sheâs hoping to shake him up a bit, so he will then do something to reignite her feelings of attraction for him.

If he just shrugs it off and says, *âWhat for? Weâre fine the way we are. Why do we need to change anything? I donât care about success or material things. We have enough. Why canât that be enough for you? Let me relax! I love you. Doesnât that mean enough?*â she will gradually start to feel as though he is taking her commitment for granted.

If he doesnât change and start making some real progress in life, she will break up with him, either to teach him a lesson and hopefully get him to change, or to hook up with a new guy she has recently met who seems to be more of a go-getter in life.

Getting Her Back

Regardless of your exâs reasons for saying that she wants to discover herself without you, the main key to getting her back is to show her (not tell her) that youâre a completely different man from the one she broke up with.

You can do that byâ

- Maintaining your confidence around her and using humor to make her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with you again.
- Having a clear purpose that youâre working towards achieving (i.e. your biggest goals, dreams and ambitions), other than getting back with her.
- Making her feel feminine and girly by being more emotionally masculine than her.
- Wanting her back, but not needing her back to be happy, fulfilled and forward moving in your life.

The more she can see that you really have changed, the less she will be able to resist interacting with you and feeling attracted.

She will naturally want to talk to you and see you more, so she can experience the new and improved you for herself.

From there, all you need to do is be courageous enough to lead her back into your arms and into your life as your girlfriend once again.

The best thing of all though is that she will want it too because you will be now attracting her in ways that she always wanted to experience with you.

I Want My Ex Back Because I Know That She is the One For Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If thatâs you how feel, then hereâs what you need to do:

1. Understand the difference between you knowing that she's the one for you and her knowing that you are the one for her

Big difference!

Itâs all good and well for you to say, âI want my ex back because I know that she is the one for me,â but if your ex doesnât feel the same way, youâre simply setting yourself up for disappointment.

Hereâs the thingâ

Even though you might be convinced that you and your ex are made for each other, if you and her are currently broken up, sheâs probably not feeling the same way.

Instead, sheâs likely thinking things like, âIâm tired of being with a guy who doesnât make me feel the way I want to feel when Iâm with him. Sure he has some great qualities, but there are things about him that Iâm not prepared to settle for. I'll just have to keep looking for the guy who can truly give me the attraction experience I want in a relationship.â

As you would understand, trying to get her back based on your feelings for her simply wonât be enough.

The feelings have to be mutual and the good news is that you can CREATE that.

You can literally MAKE HER have feelings for you again.

How?

Start by reactivating her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you by giving her the attraction experience she always wanted from you but never got (e.g. she wanted you to be more confident, but you were always so insecure or emotionally sensitive. Now, you are truly confident and she can see it and feel it).

When you do change and improve in the ways that really matter to her, she will start to wonder if itâs a sign and means that you are the one for her after all.

2. Understand the reasons why you believe that she is the only one for you

After a breakup, a guy will sometimes have an inflated idea of the feelings he has for his ex.

He literally goes from wanting to be with her normally on a day to day basis, to then desperately wanting to be with her when she dumps him.

Essentially, because heâs missing her and feeling the pain of being dumped, he puts her on a pedestal and begins to see her as being better than she really was.

He overlooks all of her flaws and the things about her that used to annoy him and instead, he makes her out to be perfect in his mind.

So, although you might feel 100% certain right now that your ex is the one for you, here are some questions you should ask yourself:

- If you could have any woman in the world right now, would you still believe that your ex is the one for you, or would you be okay with the idea of losing her and having another woman that youâ€™re very attracted to?
- Do you actually want her back because sheâ€™s the one, or do you need her back to feel better about yourself and stop the pain of being dumped?
- Can you be happy and live a successful, productive life without her, or do you need her to give you a sense of purpose and direction?
- Are you afraid to acknowledge that sheâ€™s actually not as perfect as you make her out to be (e.g. sheâ€™s disrespectful towards you, sheâ€™s untrustworthy, she takes you for granted) because you donâ€™t want to ruin your motivation to get her back?
- Do you want her back because you know sheâ€™s the one for you, or do you want her back because youâ€™re afraid you wonâ€™t be able to find another woman who will love you?

When you can honestly answer these questions, you will have a better understanding of why you really want your ex back.

If you really feel as though she is definitely the one for you, then donâ€™t waste anymore time thinking about it.

Get her back!

3. Prepare to properly re-attract her when you interact with her

Sometimes a woman will break up with a guy and give him an excuse like, â€œLook, youâ€™re a great guy but I need to be on my own right now,â€ or, â€œIâ€™m just not ready to settle down with a guy right now. Itâ€™s better if we just break up now, because I donâ€™t want to hurt you later on.â€

Yet, those arenâ€™t her real reasons for breaking up with him.

Sheâ€™s saying itâ€™s all her fault and that sheâ€™s not ready, but it isnâ€™t what she is really thinking.

So, if you want your ex back, you first need to understand her secret reasons for breaking up with you (i.e. the ones she didnâ€™t tell you about but expects you to know) and then make some attractive changes to yourself, so that you can properly re-attract her when you interact with her.

If youâ€™re not sure where to start, consider the followingâ€¦

What were the missing pieces to the attraction experience in your relationship with her (e.g. you were a good guy, but werenâ€™t ballsy enough for her, or you ended up treating her more like a friend and she then lost the spark she originally had for you)?

What subtle things about how you thought, talked, felt, behaved and took action were turning your ex off?

For example: Some of the hidden reasons why a woman might break up with a guy include:

- He assumes that because he loves her and thinks she's the one for him, she will stick with him regardless of how much he turns her off (e.g. he is clingy and needy, he is emotionally dependent on her, he lets her wear the pants in the relationship and dominate him emotionally, he lacks confidence and self-belief).
- He is too serious and tense about things all the time and she can't seem to relax and feel happy around him as a result.
- He puts her on a pedestal and treats her as though she's too good for him, which in turn makes her wonder if she can do better than him.
- He lives a boring lifestyle and doesn't do much, or anything fun.
- He wants different things in life to her (e.g. he wants to settle down and be in a serious, committed relationship with her, whereas she wants to have more fun and enjoy being a carefree couple).
- He treats her more like a neutral friend than an attractive, sexy, feminine, girly woman.
- He ends up acting a lot like her and letting go of his masculinity, so the natural, sexual spark dies out between them.
- He expects her to lead in the relationship because he is either too afraid to mess up, too lazy to do it or unaware of how to do it.
- He gets nervous in social situations (e.g. around her friends, family or co-workers) and she feels embarrassed about that.

If you can relate to any of these reasons for your ex breaking up with you, then you are one step closer to getting her back.

By understanding her real reasons for the break up, you can then prepare yourself to get her back for real.

You can quickly make some attractive changes to the way you think, act and behave, so that when you contact her (on the phone and then meet up in person), you will naturally make her feel respect and attraction for you again.

She will then be able to see that you have already improved in the days (or weeks) since you and her broke up.

Note: I don't recommend waiting for weeks or months to get a woman back if you can.

It's always better to quickly change, re-attract her and get her back, or else you run the risk of her moving on, falling in love with a new guy and then having to get him out of the way.

So, if you have recently been dumped, then get started and get her back now.

If it happened a while ago, don't waste any more time.

Get her back.

Start by interacting with her and re-attracting her based on the new and improved you.

When you do that, she won't be able to stop herself from thinking, "He really is a different guy now. I feel drawn to him in a new and exciting way. Maybe we can work things out between us after all. Maybe he truly is the one for me. If he is, I better make the most of this opportunity while I can. I should just give him another chance.

On the other hand, if you don't change and just continue to make the same old attraction mistakes (e.g. you're still insecure, still too emotionally sensitive, lack emotional masculinity), it's highly likely that she will keep saying things like, No. I'm sorry, but we're just not right for each other.

So, once you've prepared yourself to properly re-attract her, you need to

4. Contact her to regain her respect and attraction

One of the best ways to successfully get an ex back is by getting her on a phone call with you and making her laugh, smile and feel happy to be talking to you again.

The more 'feel good' emotions you can get her to experience when she's talking to you (e.g. laughter, happiness, excitement, curiosity), the more her guard will come down.

When that happens, she then naturally begins to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the man you have become since the break up.

You feel good to her now.

It's interesting and she likes it.

From there, you can get her to meet up with you, re-attract her in person and hook up with her if possible.

Just make sure that you get to a phone call though and don't hide behind texts for weeks or months.

So many guys make that mistake and end up losing their opportunity to get her back.

Call her, meet up with her and get her back.

Face up to a potentially bad reaction to her and then turn it around by being confident and using humor.

Imagine this:

A guy is talking to his ex on the phone and she says something like, Look, I just don't feel the same way about you anymore. You're not the right guy for me and I don't see the point of dragging things on any longer. Let's accept that it's over so we can both move on and find someone else more suitable for us in the long term.

A response that will cause her to lose even more respect and attraction and convince her that he's not the one for her, is if he says something like, No, no, no! Please don't say that! I still love you and I know you're the one for me. You mean everything to me. I've never loved a woman as much as I love you. I promise we can make things work. Please just give me one more chance to prove it to you!

That's not going to work.

This is better:

You know, I think you're right. I almost forgot how terrible your cooking was! You also almost killed me a few times before. You're the only person I know who can burn water! Thanks for the reminder! I've been eating so well since we broke up and then laugh with her about it.

By making a joke in response to her statement of, “You’re not the right guy for me and I don’t see the point of dragging things on any longer,” you instantly take the edge off the seriousness of the situation and bring it back to laughter and love.

She then begins to wonder, “Why is he reacting so differently? Why isn’t he getting upset and begging and pleading with me to change my mind? He’s suddenly so much more confident and emotionally mature than he used to be before. All of a sudden I feel drawn to him again. What’s going on? Could he really be the one for me?”

By using humor to make her smile and laugh on a phone call, she will naturally feel attracted to you, whether she wants to or not.

She will begin to reconnect with her positive feelings for you (e.g. respect, attraction and love) and then when you ask her for a meet up, she will be much more open to the idea.

At the meet up, you can then continue building on her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, by letting her experience the new and improved you face-to-face.

If you do that, she will naturally want to hook up with you and see what happens from there.

Just remember though!

5. Make her want to get back with you based on how she feels, not on your reason of knowing that she is the one for you

If she is going to give you another chance, it will be based on her feeling respect, attraction and love for you.

When you make her feel that way, it will then be her who will be wondering whether you are the one for her.

She will begin to fear that you are going to be the one that got away and will end up regretting it for the rest of her life.

That is how to approach the ex back process.

It has to be about making HER have feelings for you, rather than you telling her that you know she is the one for you and any other personal, romantic feelings for her.

So, whether you’re talking to your ex on the phone, or seeing her in person, make sure that you don’t make the interaction about you getting her back because you see her as the one.

Instead, make it about her having the emotional experience (i.e. feeling respectful of you attracted to you, feeling love for you and wanting to be close to you) that she wants in a relationship.

Ask yourself:

- Do you make her feel feminine and girly when you interact with her (this is what she wants), or do you make her feel more like a neutral friend around you or worse, like she is the more dominant one?
- Can she look up to you, respect you and feel proud of you because you are a man who is reaching for his true potential in life, or does she feel embarrassed by you because you have no goals and ambitions, or because you have goals, but are too afraid to follow through like a man and make them happen?

- Do you display characteristics and traits that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, charisma, sense of humor, emotional masculinity) when you're with her, or do you turn her off by being insecure, self-doubting and overly serious?
- Does she feel good in your presence, or does she feel tense, annoyed or stressed out?

When you make her feel the way that she (and pretty much every other woman on the planet) wants to feel around a man, she will naturally open to you and begin to see you as the one for her.

On the other hand, if you turn her off by saying and doing things that are emotionally unattractive to her (e.g. being romantic before you've reactivated her feelings, being insecure or self-doubting, trying to discuss the relationship to hopefully work things out), she will keep pushing you away.

3 Common Mistakes That Guys Make When They Believe She is the One

It's very clear to you that your ex is the one for you.

Great.

I believe you, but what about her?

To convince her to feel the same way and see you as the one, you need to focus on triggering positive emotions inside of her (e.g. respect, attraction, excitement, joy, delight, curiosity), rather than negative feelings such as indifference, disgust, annoyance or pity.

To ensure that you make her feel positive emotions and get her back, be sure to avoid the following mistakes that other guys make in your situation.

When a guy doesn't know what else to do, he might:

1. Tell her that she's the one for him via letter, e-mail, text or social media message

Firstly, declarations of love are always best done face-to-face where a woman can hear the confidence in your voice, observe your body language and see that you're being sincere.

Text or e-mail is not the place to declare your love for an ex.

Secondly, your ex will only care that you think she's the one after you have reactivated her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you first.

Remember: Her feelings first and everything else after that.

If you try to skip reactivating her feelings, you will be met with rejection after rejection from her because the feelings won't be mutual.

Rather than think, "Oh my goodness! What an amazing text (or e-mail)! He really loves me!!!! I was so silly to dump him. Oh my, I almost lost the perfect man. If he thinks that I'm the one for him, then he must be the one for me too. It's fate! It's our destiny! Oh my! We have to get back together again right away," an ex woman (who is still turned off by her ex because he hasn't interacted with her and reactivated her feelings) will usually think something like, "Hah! He thinks that I'm the one for him. Good for him. I don't feel the same way. As far as I'm concerned, he's not the one for me and I don't care what he has to say. It's over and if he thinks sending me a message is going to change how I feel, heâ€™s sadly mistaken.â€™

Obviously, thatâ€™s not how you want to make your ex feel about you.

You want her to feel sparks of respect, attraction and love, so she naturally begins to miss you and consider it as meaning that you probably are the one for her and she will regret it if she doesnâ€™t give you another chance.

So, if you want to get your ex back, donâ€™t waste your time telling her that sheâ€™s the one for you unless you FIRST make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Remember: Her feelings first and everything else after that.

If sheâ€™s not feeling much or any respect and attraction for you right now, then hearing that you still have feelings for her just isnâ€™t going to matter to her.

Itâ€™s going to make her think something like, â€™Whatever. Good for you. Bye!â€™

Another mistake that guys often make in your situation is toâ€™

2. Think that telling her she is the one will make her swoon and want him back

Initially, a woman might feel flattered by the idea that her ex thinks sheâ€™s the one for him and canâ€™t seem to move on from the break up.

Yet, what he doesnâ€™t realize is that those selfish feelings are only temporary for her.

If he doesnâ€™t do anything else to regain her respect and attraction for him as a man, sheâ€™s not going to remain flattered for very long.

Eventually, she will realize that heâ€™s just saying the words (i.e. â€™Youâ€™re the one for meâ€™), but his actions donâ€™t back it up.

She will notice that he is still the same guy she broke up with who is making the same unattractive mistakes (e.g. heâ€™s still insecure, still canâ€™t get her to feel like a feminine woman in comparison to his masculinity, still gives her too much power, still doesnâ€™t know how to make her feel attracted again).

In some cases, a woman will string her ex along for a while to make herself feel better about the break up, but knowing that he sees her as â€™the oneâ€™ isnâ€™t going to make her swoon, be swept off her feet and make her come running back to him.

Why?

The feelings arenâ€™t mutual!

He has to MAKE HER have feelings for him first, by interacting with her and actively making her feel sparks of respect, attraction and love for him again.

When he does that, she then starts to care and worry about the idea of losing the man that she is still so attracted to and curious about.

So, rather than waste a lot of time trying to convince your ex to change her mind about breaking up with you by telling her sheâ€™s the one for you, just focus on making her experience feel-good emotions (e.g. respect, attraction, love, happiness, sexual desire).

The better she feels when she interacts with you, the more she will start to wonder if you are the one for her too.

Another mistake that guys often make in your situation is toâ€™

3. Not regain her respect and attraction before attempting to get the relationship back together

When a guy gets dumped, it's often a huge blow to his self-esteem, confidence and happiness. He feels so shocked, hurt and sad about being dumped that he starts behaving out of character. For example: He rushes to tell her how much she means to him and how he only wants to be with her because she is the one for him.

It's like a scene from a typical Hollywood romantic movie, except in real life, women hate getting that reaction from a man.

It is seen as desperate and self-serving (i.e. he needs her back and wants that to happen, even though he hasn't changed anything about himself), so the woman feels turned off and puts her guard up. This is why it's absolutely essential that you focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new and improved you, before you attempt to get her to commit to the idea of giving you another chance.

In other words, make her want you back, before you try to get her to agree to give you another chance.

Even then, I don't recommend pushing her to give you another chance.

Many women don't like to feel like they are being pressured to make a decision to commit to a relationship again after a break up.

So, the best approach is to make her want it, hook up with her, enjoy hanging out together and let the relationship get back together naturally.

Why Do I Want My Ex Back? 5 Questions to Ask Yourself to Find the Real Reason Why

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you've been dumped by a woman that you really love, it's only natural that you might be wondering if you should get her back.

Before you begin the ex back process and get her back into a relationship, let's go through some questions to help you decide whether or not you should.

Ask yourself:

1. Do you need her back to feel better about yourself and stop the emotional pain you've been experiencing?

There's nothing wrong with missing your ex, but if you want her back because you can't function in your life without her, she will pick up on it and it will turn her off.

Most women hate it when a guy needs her to feel good about himself, or to give himself a sense of identity and purpose in the world.

On the other hand, women love it when a guy wants her, but doesn't actually need her to feel happy, make progress in life and feel worthy as a man.

If you want your ex back because you're secretly thinking, "Nothing in this life is worth it without her. She's my main reason for living and without her I'm nothing. I feel lost without her. I need her to give me a sense of purpose and meaning in life" then you're only setting yourself up for failure.

Sure, you might convince her to give you another chance initially, but if she realizes that you've become emotionally dependent on her for your sense of purpose and direction in life, she will quickly lose respect for you.

Without respect, she won't be able to feel sexual attraction and without those two emotional states, she will disconnect with her feelings of love and break up with you once again.

To prevent that from happening and to get her back for real, you need to show her that you're the kind of man she will feel proud to come back to.

A good way of doing that is by moving forward in your life without her.

No, that doesn't mean you have to go out there and date other women.

Of course not.

You just need to make progress in your life without her and feel happy about it.

So, rather than sitting around feeling sad and lost and letting your life pass you by, now is the time to go ahead and make progress towards fulfilling your biggest goals, dreams and desires in life.

For example:

- If you have a big purpose in life that you neglected because of your relationship with your ex, pick up where you left off and focus on making it happen now.

- If you never had a life purpose (e.g. because you felt your relationship with your ex was the most important thing in your life), now is the time to find one.
- If youâ€¢ve neglected your friends, reconnect with them again and start having fun by doing outdoor activities.
- If youâ€¢ve put things off in your life (e.g. going traveling, learning a new skill, taking up a hobby), now is the perfect time to do one or all of those things.

Not only will you feel better about yourself and your life without your ex, but you will be more attractive to her too.

When she sees that you have big goals, dreams, ambitions, interests and friendships separate from your relationship with her, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you.

Why?

Women love and feel attracted to a man who knows who he is and what he wants in life, outside of just needing her to feel good about himself.

A lot of guys worry that if they have fun after a break up, the woman will get angry and see that as meaning he doesnâ€¢t care and wants to move on without her.

She might SAY that, but what women SAY and what women DO are almost always two completely different things when it comes to men, dating and relationships.

The truth is that when she sees you having fun and enjoying life without her, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you for having the emotional strength to enjoy life after being dumped.

Then, when you interact with her and make her laugh, smile and also show her that youâ€¢ve changed and improved some of the things that were turning her off before, she starts to want to be your girl again.

Another question to ask yourself is isâ€¢t

2. Do you want her back just to make her fall in love you again, so you can then dump her to get revenge for her dumping you?

Sometimes a guy might feel so angry and bitter about his ex breaking up with him that he seeks revenge.

He starts thinking things like, â€¢How could she do this to me? Who does she think she is? Well, Iâ€¢m going to show her that she canâ€¢t break up with me like that and get away with it. Iâ€¢m going to get her back, make her fall desperately in love with me again and then, when sheâ€¢s really crazy about me, Iâ€¢m going to dump her and let her feel the pain. She will get a taste of her own medicine and I will get to walk away as the dumper, rather than the dumpee. I will be in the position of power and she will suffer!â€¢

He wants to make her feel as bad as she made him feel.

Yet, although a guy is free to make that choice and do it if he wants to, itâ€¢s not the best reason to get an ex back.

Sure, getting revenge might make him feel good for a little while.

However, the satisfaction he feels for teaching her a lesson will eventually wear off and he will discover that heâs the one who really lost out.

Why?

While he was wasting all his time re-attracting her and making her love him, he wasnât focusing on moving on.

Not only didnât he use the time to find a replacement woman who is more loving and loyal than his ex, but he remained stuck in feelings of negativity and anger.

So, when the relationship ends, he is left feeling angry and bitter about relationships with women, which will almost certainly make him withhold love in his next relationship, or potentially meet a woman who then does the same thing to him.

The best approach is to rise above pettiness and move on if you donât want her.

However, you are allowed to do whatever you want.

Be warned though: If your girl isnât using the pill, or you arenât using a condom, you could get her pregnant if you get back with her briefly.

Then what?

Youâre stuck with a girl in your life that you didnât actually wantâand you then have to pay for it for at least 18-20 years.

This is why itâs very important that you donât focus on getting your ex back for the wrong reasons.

Maybe she deserves to feel pain for hurting you.

Thatâs understandable.

However, if that is your aim, then the best revenge is for you to quickly move on and find yourself an even better woman than her.

Then, when she sees you being happy and living a great life without her while sheâs all alone, you will have gotten your revenge on her in the best possible way.

So, what are you thinking at this point?

Do you really want her back to keep her for life, or do you just want to get revenge?

If you want to quickly pick up some new women, make sure to look around my site because I offer loads of free advice on that in the dating section of my blog.

If you want to get your ex back, be sure to check out the ex back section of my blog.

In the meantime, another question to ask yourself isâ!

3. Are you able to easily attract and pick up other women that you really like?

When a guy is confident in himself and his ability to attract women, moving on from a break up isnât a big deal.

He knows that he can easily get another high quality woman and his ex will eventually realize that other guys donâ€™t make her feel as much attraction as he did, so she will come back.

On the other hand, some guys secretly know that they got lucky when they hooked up with their woman, so the idea of having to go out and find another quality woman like her all over again is very scary.

A guy like that will usually be going through life believing that itâ€™s very difficult to attract a new, beautiful woman for sex or a relationship and may be thinking things like, â€œShe is special. She is the only one for me. Other women as hot as her wouldnâ€™t want anything to do with me.

Thereâ€™s no chance of me getting lucky twice and finding another woman like her. In fact, it will probably be even more difficult than before, because Iâ€™m older now/Iâ€™ve put on some weight/Iâ€™ve been out of the dating scene for so long. So, my only chance of having a relationship is to get my ex back. I need to convince her in whatever way I can to give me another chance. If I donâ€™t, Iâ€™m going to end up being single and alone for the rest of my life. Alternatively, I might have to settle for an unattractive woman that I donâ€™t really like, just so that I wonâ€™t be alone. Iâ€™ve got to get her back. I canâ€™t get another woman like her. Itâ€™s just too hard.â€

So, which kind of guy are you?

Are you confident in yourself and in your attractiveness to your ex?

Do you believe you can easily get another, high quality, beautiful woman if you wanted to?

Alternatively, do you want her back because you donâ€™t believe that you can easily attract another beautiful woman?

The truth is, if you only want to get your ex back out of desperation, she will pick up on it when she interacts with you (e.g. she will hear it in the way you talk and see it in your body language) and will feel turned off by what she perceives as your emotional weakness and neediness.

If you do manage to convince her to give you another chance even though she is turned off, but you fail to learn how to properly deepen her feelings for you over time, her hopes will quickly fade away and she will break up with you again.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

When a couple gets back together after a serious break up, a woman might initially put up with a guyâ€™s insecurities (e.g. he doesnâ€™t feel like heâ€™s good enough for her, he is insecure about his attractiveness as a man in general, he doubts himself in certain areas of his life) for a little while to see how things go.

However if she realizes that he is simply holding on to her because he canâ€™t get himself another woman if he wanted to, she will lose respect for him and start to feel like she has been duped.

Her attraction will then begin to fade and she will start thinking something like, â€œWhat am I doing with him? I want to be with a guy who makes me feel like Iâ€™m lucky to have him, not like Iâ€™m doing him a big favor by being his girlfriend (fiancÃ© or wife), because he believes he canâ€™t get anyone else other than me. This isnâ€™t working out. Heâ€™s just not on my level. Iâ€™ve got to end this and move on. He doesnâ€™t deserve me.â€

She then breaks up with him and he is left heartbroken once again.

So, make sure that if you decide to get your ex back, you are prepared to maintain and build on her respect and attraction for you over time.

If you canâ€™t do that, she will always have one foot out the door, so to speak.

She might be there with you, but her heart will be elsewhere and it will only be a matter of time before she hooks up with another guy to use that as a way out of the relationship, or breaks up with you again and quickly tries to replace you, so she can move on.

Another question to ask isâ€¦!

4. Are you afraid that you won't find the same kind of love again with another woman?

The truth is, you won't find the same love again with another woman.

The love between you and every woman you date is always different.

Sometimes it's better, sometimes it's worse and sometimes it's just okay.

However, the fact is that amazing love is possible with all kinds of women, not just one.

I know that from personal experience because I lived the bachelor lifestyle for 10 years and enjoyed so many amazing relationships and love, before finding my even more amazing wife who I am still with today.

Even though my wife and I are madly in love, I know that I could have felt that way about another woman if I wanted to.

There's literally millions of women out there who would be an absolute perfect match for me like my wife is.

Yet, I met her, so she gets to be with me.

How about you?

Do you think that you could experience amazing love with another woman easily, or do you think it would be really hard to find someone as amazing as your ex?

If you really feel like she is the most amazing woman you could ever meet, then you should get her back.

Follow my ex back process and get her back.

It's pretty damn simple and easy to do.

Just make sure that you're doing it for the right reasons though.

I say that because I only want the best for you.

For example: Sometimes a guy might latch on to the idea that the love he experienced with his ex was one of a kind and irreplaceable, simply because it was comfortable for him and he can't be bothered meeting new women and trying another relationship.

It's understandable, but sometimes it isn't the right move.

It really depends on how sincere he feels about the love they shared and how genuine he is about getting her back and keeping her.

Some guys just want their ex woman back because it feels easier.

So, rather than have to go out and start all over again (i.e. meet a new woman, make her feel attracted, get to know each other, fall in love), he keeps telling himself, â€œShe was the one. No other woman will be able to make me feel the way she did. What we had was special. I don't know how, but Iâm going to do whatever it takes to get my ex back. I donât want to have to face the pain of going out there and falling in love again with another woman, only to discover that sheâs just not the one for me and that the love I shared with my ex was the real deal.

So, how can you know if you are for real when it comes to her?

You know that you are for real if you are:

- Willing to put in the effort to change the things about yourself that have been turning her off (e.g. become more confident, become more emotionally independent, stand up to her more in a lovingly, dominant way rather than let her dominate you).
- Willing to create a new relationship dynamic between you and her (e.g. by being more emotionally masculine, thereby allowing her to relax and be totally feminine and girly around you), based on mutual love and respect.

If you are serious about getting her back, then itâs very important that when you interact with her from now on (e.g. via text or e-mail, on social media, on a phone call, or in person) you focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for the new and improved you.

You need to show her (via your actions and the way you interact with her) that youâre no longer the same guy she broke up with.

You are a much better man now and you really do deserve another chance with her.

When she can see for herself that youâve changed the things that truly matter to her (e.g. youâre more confident, determined and focused, emotionally masculine), she will automatically begin to reconnect with her feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

A final question to ask yourself isâ

5. Do you have a secret reason why you want her back that you're too embarrassed to admit to anyone?

For example: A guy might know that his ex isnât the one for him, but he holds on to her because:

- He doesnât want to be the only one in his group of friends without a woman.
- Heâs a bit older now and feels embarrassed about being single and back in the dating game at his age.
- Heâs the kind of man who doesnât feel valuable unless he has a woman on his arm.
- He didnât get enough love as a child and grew up feeling like it was difficult to be loved by others, so when he finds a woman who loves him he clings onto her no matter how unsuitable they might be for each other.
- He painted a perfect picture of their relationshipÂ when they were together (i.e. to his friends/family/colleagues) and he doesnât want to have to admit to them that it wasnât as perfect as he made it out to be.

Any of those apply to you?

If so, itâs important to understand that getting back with a woman you don't really love and then spending the next 10 years trying to convince yourself to stay with her, is a big waste of your potential as a man.

The truth is, if you're not 100% sure that she is truly worthy of you, then you might be better off finding a new woman.

Additionally, if you can't honestly say that you believe you and her will be able to have a happy, loving and long-lasting relationship if you get back together again, then it's probably better to just let her go.

There are literally millions of beautiful, sexy, loving women out there looking to meet and hook up with a guy exactly like you.

You simply need to be confident enough to approach them and trigger their feelings of respect and attraction for you by displaying some of the qualities and traits that women are instinctively attracted to (e.g. confidence, self-approval, charisma, masculinity).

On the other hand, if you feel like your ex truly is the one for you, then don't waste another minute. Contact her right away and start triggering her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, showing her that you've moved past the level you were at when you broke up).

Whatever you decide, just make sure that you don't ever settle for second best when it comes to women (or anything else) in your life.

The choice is yours.

You can do whatever you want at this point.

The power is in your hands.

What is your choice?

Get her back, or get a new woman?

I Want My Ex to Tell Me How She Feels, But All I Get is Silence From Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex won't tell you how she feels are:

1. She thinks that you should know how she feels based on her behavior

When a woman is giving her ex the silent treatment and he keeps saying things like, "Please talk to me. Tell me how you feel," rather than make her think, "Oh okay. He's clearly not getting the message. Maybe I should help him out and explain why I am giving him the silent treatment," she usually just closes up even more.

Why?

In most cases, a woman assumes that her behavior (i.e. being silent, ignoring him) is a clear enough message to let him know that his current way of behaving and interacting with her is doing nothing to change her negative opinion of him.

Of course, that's not how we men typically communicate with each other.

When a man has something to say, he says it directly.

However, when a woman is upset about something or is turned off by her man, she doesn't want to explain everything directly.

She just wants you to understand how to be a man, without the instruction or guidance of a woman.

I know, I know.

Life would be so much easier if women weren't like that, but they have very good reasons for doing it.

It's essentially about ensuring that they are with a confident, emotionally intelligent man who understands the world around him, rather than getting stuck with a guy who still doesn't yet know what it means to be a man in a relationship with a woman.

So, here's what often happens!

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because certain aspects of his thinking and behavior (e.g. he became too insecure, he displayed unmanly behavior too often, he became too emotionally sensitive) have made her disconnect with her feelings of love, respect and attraction for him.

When he then asks her to tell him how she feels, rather than wanting to make things easy for him (i.e. by opening up and explaining her feelings), she remains silent to emphasize that she's not happy with him.

She's hoping that he will figure it out on his own (e.g. by understanding that his insecurity has been turning her off, so she wants him to man up and start being more emotionally ballsy and confident), rather than needing her to explain everything for him, guide him along and ensure that he levels up as a man.

If he can understand where he has been going wrong (without her guidance) and then quickly make some attractive changes to the way he thinks, acts, behaves and interacts with her, she will naturally begin to feel respect for him again.

If she can respect him, she will then become more open to feeling sexual attraction for him and with those two things, connecting to her original feelings of love is the natural next step.

However, if he just expects her to tell him how she feels and what he must do to change that, he will look like a confused guy who still hasn't fully grown up and become a man yet.

As a result, she will remain closed off and start to tell herself that she needs to find a real man.

Another possible reason why your ex won't tell you how she feels is that

2. She doesn't want to give you clues that would help you to talk her back into a relationship with you

Sometimes, if a woman still has some feelings for her ex, she might choose to keep her distance from him (e.g. by ignoring his texts, avoiding answering his calls, refusing to tell him how she feels).

She doesn't want to give him any clues about what he's been doing wrong because she fears he will then be able to use that information to talk her into getting back together again.

For example: If a woman explains to her ex how she feels by saying something along the lines of, "You hurt me. You took me for granted and just assumed that because I loved you, it was okay to keep breaking your promises to me. I just can't be with a guy who treats me like that anymore. It's over," he might then say to her, "I'm truly sorry for hurting you. I love you so much and I promise if you give me just one more chance I will never break a promise to you again. Please let me show you that I really can change."

She may then give him another chance because she still has some feelings for him.

Yet, she knows that he has made similar promises to her many times before and sooner or later, he will go back to his old ways and begin breaking promises again, or turning her off in other, related ways (e.g. not following through on his dreams and goals, being afraid to level up as a man, treating her with disrespect and then expecting her to respect him all the time).

This is why a lot of women will be silent after a break up with a guy.

Rather than building her hopes up and getting hurt by her ex him, she just remains quiet when he asks her to tell him how she feels, in the hopes that he will eventually give up and leave her alone.

So, if you want your ex to open up to you, rather than ask her how she feels, just start to show her (by the way you talk to her, the way you behave and the way you respond to what she says and does) that you have changed and improved on some of the things that were turning her off.

Remember: It's better to be a man of action, than a man who just promises to change.

For example:

- If you were insecure and self-doubting in the relationship, show her that you are so much more confident now..
- If you were too clingy and needy, start being more emotionally independent.
- If you were directionless or lazy about following through on your potential as a man, start making some progress on your biggest goals and dreams in life.

- If you made her feel like more of a friend than a sexy woman, start making her feel feminine and girly in your presence by being very masculine the way you talk, feel, move, behave and act.

When she can see for herself that you're not the same guy she broke up with, she will be more willing to open up and give you another chance.

On the other hand, if you keep asking her to tell you how she feels without really changing any of the things that turned her off, she's going to keep giving you the silent treatment to protect herself from getting hurt again.

Another possible reason why your ex won't tell you how she feels is

3. She's trying to ignore you in the hope that you move on

In some cases, a woman might feel that if she ignores her ex long enough, he will give up on her and move on.

She's hoping he will think something along the lines of, "Oh well. I tried my best, but if she doesn't want to tell me how she feels then there's nothing I can do. I guess it's really over between us."

In some instances, a guy might think to himself, "I want my ex to tell me how she feels, but all I get is silence from her. Maybe I'm pushing her too much, which is causing her to close up. Maybe all she needs is some time apart. Hopefully, when she doesn't hear from me for a few weeks, or even months, she will start to miss me. Then, when I contact her again, she will be much more willing to open up to me and tell me how she feels. Then, we can then work things out between us and get back together."

He might then cut off all communication with his ex for 30 to 60 days, in the hopes that time apart will change how she feels.

Yet, in almost all cases that I've seen (I've worked on 100s of cases), when the guy finally gets in touch with his ex again after a long time (especially if she was ignoring him in the hopes that he would move on), he gets a very unpleasant surprise.

Rather than sound happy to hear from him again and tell him that she missed him and wants him back, the woman usually says something along the lines of, "Oh, it's you. It's been so long since you and I talked. Why are you calling me now? I thought you'd moved on, so I did too. I'm sorry, but I'm with another guy now and I'm happy. What we had is over. You need to forget about me now and find someone else too."

He spent weeks or months just waiting and hoping that time apart would bring them back together, but it didn't.

Why?

He didn't re-attract her.

She broke up with him, felt turned off by him and he then ignored her.

So, she continued on with her feeling of being turned off by him.

Then, she interacted with other guys who made her feel attracted (which is what her ex should have been doing) and she hooked up with them instead.

This is why I always recommend that a guy gets his ex woman back sooner, rather than later.

Interact with your ex, make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you and guide her through the ex back process.

If she's not willing to make any progress with you initially, just re-attract her and give her some space for a few days, so she can miss you based on her reawakened feelings of attraction.

Then, reinitiate contact, re-attract her further and get her to meet up with you, so you can get her back before she moves on.

The more you actively make her feel respect and attraction for the man you have become now, the less she will want you to move on without her.

She will start feeling like she will be losing you, rather than you only worrying that you're losing her.

She will then naturally open up and tell you how she feels because the idea of getting back together will start feel good to her.

Another possible reason why your ex won't tell you how she feels is

4. She can see that you still don't know the real reasons why she broke up with you

A guy doesn't always know the real, deeper reasons why his woman is breaking up with him.

For example: A woman might say, "Look, it just isn't working out between us. You're a great guy, but we're just not right for each other," or "I'm tired of trying to make things work. All we ever do is argue and fight over everything and I'm sick of it. This relationship has become too stressful for me and I want out."

Unfortunately, because of that, a guy might not understand what he has really done wrong.

So, when he then tries to get her back, rather than give her what she really wants, he usually offers to change the wrong things about himself.

For instance, when a woman says she's tired of fighting and arguing, a guy might make the mistake of thinking that the fights and arguments are the real problem.

He might then say something like, "I get it. We have been arguing a lot lately and I can see why that might make you feel stressed out. I promise that if you give me another chance, I will keep things calm and relaxed between us from now on. Please just give me a chance."

Yet, what he doesn't understand is that the problem wasn't the actual arguments, but rather the reasons behind the arguments.

For example: He put his friends and family first and didn't give her the time and attention she wanted, which then caused her to get annoyed and pick random fights with him about irrelevant things (e.g. not taking out the garbage, not pulling his weight in the house, not seeing each other often enough).

Alternatively, she would ask him for his opinion about something (e.g. what color curtains/drapes to put in the lounge room, what outfit she should wear to a party, what movie he would prefer to watch) and he to please her, he might say something like, "Whatever you decide is fine by me."

He would be then be shocked when she got upset and started an argument with him about it.

In his mind, he was just being a good boyfriend (fiancé or husband), but from her point of view, he was being too emotionally weak and she felt like she couldn't rely on him to be the man and help lead the way.

As you can see, it's very important that you understand your ex's real reasons for breaking up with you and not the vague reasons she gave you (e.g. "I just don't feel the same way anymore").

Then, you can change (or at least improve) the things that really matter to her.

When she sees for herself that you've made a real effort to become a better man in the ways that actually matter to her (e.g. she was turned off by how insecure you'd become and you are suddenly so much more confident), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some respect for you again.

When she can respect you, she will be able to feel sexually attracted to you and from there, getting her back becomes a lot easier.

On the other hand, if you keep trying to make her tell you how she feels because you don't know why she broke up with you, she's going to clam up even more.

She's going to feel as though you just want her to make it easy for you by telling you exactly what to do, rather than putting in the effort to think about it, work it out and change what matters to her.

Another possible reason why your ex won't tell you how she feels is that

5. She has lost respect for you, so she doesn't feel the need to discuss her feelings with you

When a woman has disconnected with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, getting into long discussions with him about her feelings seems pointless to her.

Even though he wants her to tell him how she feels so he can then fix what she wants or needs, she doesn't really care because she doesn't have strong feelings (i.e. of respect, attraction and love) for him anymore.

In her mind, she's thinking things like, "I don't understand why he's constantly asking me to talk about how I feel. I don't feel anything anymore. Doesn't he get that? I'm turned off by him and that's why I've broken up with him. Why should I now help him get me back? My heart is closed off to him and all I want is for him to leave me alone so I can move on. He's caused me enough pain already. He just doesn't understand what I want."

So, I recommend that you stop talking to your ex about her feelings and instead make her feel respect and attraction for you again by interacting with her and making her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you.

Show her (via your confident and emotionally strong approach to getting her back) that you're now a new and improved man.

When she can experience the new you for herself, the feelings that she has pushed to the background will not be able to stay hidden for long.

In many cases, a guy will get his ex woman back immediately, but in more difficult cases, it will take days or up to a week or two in extreme cases.

As long as a guy focuses on reactivating his ex woman's feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love, it's almost an absolute guarantee that they will get back together because she will want it to.

She will be going to bed at night thinking of him and missing him and will want to explore her new, improved feelings for him.

6 Mistakes to Avoid Making When Trying to Make Your Ex Tell You How She Feels

If you don't want to waste anymore time and possibly turn your ex off even more, avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Constantly texting her about your feelings

When a woman doesn't have feelings for a guy anymore, she just doesn't care about how much he cares for her.

Rather than think, *â€œThat's so sweet. Maybe I'm being a bit hard on him. Maybe I should also open up and tell him how I feel,*â€œ she will usually just feel annoyed that he's constantly texting her about his feelings and think something like, *â€œWhatever! Why does he think that I even care how he feels now? Why doesn't he just leave me alone? He needs to get a life. I'm moving on and so should he.*â€œ

So, if you want your ex to tell you how she feels, make sure that you're not texting her about your feelings.

Just focus on making her feel respect and attraction for you by calling her on the phone and meeting up with her in person.

On the phone and in person, display personality traits that are naturally attractive to all women (e.g. confidence, emotional masculinity, humor, charisma, charm, social intelligence).

Another mistake that many guys make in your situation isâ€¦

2. Thinking that talking about his feelings is the way to get her back

Talk is just talk.

It doesn't make a woman feel respect and attraction for you.

So, don't worry about whether your ex tells you how she feels or not.

Instead, just focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you by being the kind of man she always wanted you to be when you interact with her (e.g. confident, emotionally strong and masculine, assertive, determined, self-approving).

If you do that, she will naturally have feelings for you.

However, if you want to talk about her feelings, she will naturally feel turned off by you.

Why?

Women are turned off by guys who doubt their attractiveness.

Women are naturally attracted to men who believe in their attractiveness and value to a woman, no matter what she says or does.

If a man has that type of confidence and is also being funny, emotionally masculine and charismatic, a woman simply cannot resist it.

She naturally feels attracted and stops being so closed off and cold.

Another mistake that guys make in your situation isâ€¦

3. Being so emotionally sensitive that she feels turned off

For a woman to be able to feel proper respect and sexual attraction for a man, itâ€™s essential that there is a clear masculine/feminine dynamic between them.

So, when a guy crosses the line and takes on a more feminine persona (e.g. he cries like a girl, becomes overly emotional, he sulks, he uses feminine body language), it makes it almost impossible for a woman to allow herself to relax into thinking, talking and behaving like a real woman (i.e. feminine, girly, emotional) around him.

Instead, she feels like she has to take care of him because he is emotionally fragile like a woman.

Women hate that.

When a guy canâ€™t be the emotionally strong man that she needs him to be and instead needs her to support him emotionally, she just canâ€™t respect him.

As a result, she also canâ€™t feel sexually attracted to him and then the idea of opening up to him emotionally or sexually just doesnâ€™t feel right.

So, make sure that you are clearly being very masculine in how you talk, feel, behave and act when you interact with your ex.

Donâ€™t suppress your masculinity because you think it will be nice.

No.

Wussy, wimpy behavior isnâ€™t attractive to women.

Be the man.

Itâ€™s not about being aggressive and telling her what to do.

No.

Itâ€™s just about taking on a more masculine energy and confidence as you interact with her.

You still remain being a good guy and treat her well, but you just have a lot more balls while doing it.

Another mistake that guys make in your situation isâ€¦

4. Taking her silence too seriously

So, your ex wonâ€™t tell you how she feels and instead gives you the silent treatment.

and?

Stop TALKING about feelings and instead MAKE HER have feelings for you by displaying personality traits and behaviors that are naturally attractive to women.

For example:

- Do you make her laugh and smile when you talk to her, or do you make her feel stressed, pissed off or annoyed?
- Does she feel relaxed and happy to be interacting with you, or does she feel pressured, uncomfortable and uneasy?
- Have you changed and improved some of the things that matter to her, or are you just trying to - get her back because you need her to stop the emotional pain youâ€™ve been experiencing?

- Does she feel like she can fully relax and be a feminine woman around you, or does she feel more dominant than you or only like a friend?

Thatâ€™s what really matters.

Another mistake that guys make in your situation isâ€¦

5. Trying to get her back via text, e-mail or social media messages

What most guys fail to understand is that a woman canâ€™t experience the new and improved him via a text/e-mail or social media message.

Itâ€™s just a bunch of words on a screen.

Itâ€™s not him.

So, when she gets a message from him and canâ€™t see his body language, or at least hear the tonality of his voice over the phone, she assumes that heâ€™s still the exact same guy that she broke up with.

No matter how nice, sweet and sincere he is being in his message, a woman will usually think something like, â€œAfter all those times he stuffed up, he thinks Iâ€™m going to simply forget about it and give him another chance because heâ€™s messaging me. Heâ€™s kidding himself.â€

She then gives him the silent treatment, because to her, him asking her for another chance via text/e-mail/social media is a sign that heâ€™s still stuck at the same level he was at when she broke up with him.

He doesnâ€™t understand how women experience attraction and heâ€™s not putting in the effort to make it happen.

So, rather than teach him or put up with an unsatisfying attraction experience, she just remains quiet and tries to move on without him.

Finally, another mistake that guys make in your situation isâ€¦

6. Panicking if she doesn't reply

If she doesnâ€™t answer, he will worry that he has lost her, she is with another guy or that she will never want to speak to him again.

He panics because he doesnâ€™t believe in his attractiveness and value to her anymore and likely also doesnâ€™t even know how to make her feel attracted and want him back.

Instead, he is just trying to get her back via messages and is hoping that something he texts her will make her change her mind.

So, when she doesnâ€™t reply, it feels like all hope is lost and thereâ€™s nothing else he can do.

He might then contact her and ask her to tell him how she feels and if itâ€™s possible for her to change her mind.

Yet, because he hasnâ€™t been re-attracting her and has instead been turning her off, she rejects him and tells him to leave her alone, or she just remains quiet and ignores him.

So, what should you do instead?

Interact with her, make her smile and laugh and feel good to be interacting with you again.

Regardless of what she's saying (or not saying), just maintain your confidence and focus on using every interaction as an opportunity to break down her walls by making her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you.

When you approach the ex back process in that way, she is going to feel good about getting back with you because she feels attracted and she likes the new you.

You don't even have to ask her how she feels.

She will show you by being open to hugging you, kissing you, having sex with you and giving the relationship another chance.

She might tell you how she feels, but if she doesn't, don't panic.

Just be confident and continue making her feel attracted to you as the days, weeks and months go on.

If you can do that, you will get her back and keep her.

Soon enough, you and her will look back at the break up as being a good thing that happened in the past.

It helped you and her become closer and become an ever better couple than before.

Now, you have what it takes to keep the relationship together and make it better over time.

How to Get the Spark Back With My Ex: 4 Essential Tips

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 things you can do to get the spark back with your ex:

1. Relight the spark on a phone call or in person, not via text

To relight your ex's feelings of respect, attraction and love, you must have the courage to get her on a phone call with you, or meet up with her in person (even if you're afraid that she might tell you to go away or leave her alone).

The more chances you give her to experience the new you over the phone and face-to-face (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, maintaining your confidence when talking to her), the more likely it is that her feelings of respect and attraction for you will be reawakened.

On the other hand, if you only stick to texting her, you might end up turning her off even more. Why? Texts can quickly become boring and can easily be misinterpreted.

For example: If a guy only sends text messages but never transitions to a phone call with his ex, she may start thinking, "Where is this going? Why doesn't he do something? I'm getting tired of texting back and forth for no reason. This is starting to get boring."

She might then slowly start responding to him less and less until eventually, she ignores him completely.

Alternatively, she may keep up the charade by replying to his texts, while in the background she focuses on moving on by kissing and having sex with new guys.

Then, when she secures a new guy into a relationship, she can say to her ex, "Look, it's been nice hearing from you, but I've met someone else and to be fair to him, I think it's better if we don't text anymore. I wish you all the best. Bye. Your friend, Tanya."

If you still really love her and want her back that isn't going to be a fun text message to get.

So, make sure that you have the balls to call and the courage to arrange a meet up in person, so you can properly re-attract her and her back.

Texts feel easy because you don't have to face up to a possible rejection on a phone call or in person, but they really are the worst approach to take when getting an ex woman back.

It's good for women who want to get a guy back because we men are lot more simple (i.e. we are either open to catching up with her again for some sex and see what happens afterwards or we're not).

Women on the other hand are much more complex.

A woman can be enjoying a text exchange one minute and then completely lose interest the next based on something her ex guy texts her.

Alternatively, she might be interested, but afraid to look too keen, so she then starts playing hard to get and the guy thinks that he's blown his chances with her.

He then starts texting in a desperate, apologetic manner and she feels turned off by his lack of confidence in himself.

Get where Iâm going with all this?

Yes, thatâs right – texting isnât the best option for men wanting to get a woman back.

In some cases, a woman will start to feel annoyed at the fact that sheâs only getting text messages from her ex and he seems to lack the balls to call her.

Rather than continue to enjoy the process, she will start to think about why she broke up with him in the first place and try to connect that to his current texting behavior.

For example: If the guy was insecure in the relationship, rather than assume he is texting because he doesnât want to come on too strong, she will usually assume itâs because he doesnât have the courage to call her.

She will begin to remember times in the relationship when he was too wimpy or insecure to make things happen in his life.

She might then start thinking things like, âWhy am I wasting my time with him? Heâs clearly still the same guy that I broke up with. Heâs still a wimp. Nothing has changed, so why should I even bother with him anymore? I felt turned off by him before and nothing about his actions and behavior has convinced me to feel differently now. So, itâs time for me to cut him out of my life completely. Iâve got to find a man who isnât afraid to face life and make things happen.â

Remember: Texts donât show her how you are truly feeling (e.g. confident rather than insecure, emotionally strong rather than wimpy) and have to be interpreted by your ex based on her current perception of you.

If she currently thinks of you in a negative way, sheâs going to look at your texts in a negative way too.

Although a small spark can be relit via text, you have to immediately transition to a phone call or an in-person meet up if you want to turn that spark into a raging fire of passion, lust and love.

Most guys donât understand that, or are simply too afraid to face up to calling their ex or meeting her in person.

Some guys make up excuses like:

- She probably doesnât want me to call her.
- She prefers text.
- She might not answer the call.
- She told me never to call her again.

Drop any excuses and just do what works.

Call her, re-attract her on the call, get her to meet up with you, re-attract her in person, hook up with her and get her back.

It's the same with picking up women.

Women will say, “I want a nice guy, who is sweet, kind, patient and listens,” but when a guy does that, he gets rejected or placed in the friend zone.

Then, another guy comes along and is a good guy, but he doesn't put on an act of being nicer than he actually is and she likes it.

She likes the fact that he isn't trying to suck up to her to get somewhere.

She also likes that he doesn't listen to everything she says and has the confidence to move in for a kiss when he notices that she is attracted.

The same rule applies to getting an ex woman back.

Don't listen to what she says!

Don't follow her orders!

In almost all cases, a woman isn't going to tell her ex how to get her back.

Instead, she will make it difficult for him by saying things like, "Don't ever call me. Just text" or, "Only text me once a week."

If a guy follows her orders, he's just like the typical nice guy who gets rejected or placed in a friend zone.

So, do what works.

Call her, re-attract her on the phone, get her to meet up with you, re-attract her in person, hook up with her and get her back.

When a guy doesn't understand that, he might try to get the spark back by texting her about good memories they shared together (e.g. â" Hey, I was just going through some old pictures on my phone and found some from that day on the beach last year. It made me think of all the fun you and I used to have together. We were a great teamâ").

He is hoping that she will respond with something like, â" Yeah, we were! Iâ"ve missed that! How about we get together to catch up? Maybe if we talk things through, we can work things out.â"

It would be nice if women were that simple, but they're not.

Women can see through BS just like you can.

If you dumped a woman, no longer felt attracted to her and she sent you a text like that, you'd be thinking, â" Yeah, nice try.â"

Yet, if she showed you that she was now more attractive and had stopped doing the things that turned you off about her in the past, you'd be more open to catching up with her.

Of course, a man getting a woman back and a woman getting a man back are two completely different things.

For example: Most men leave a woman because they aren't physically attracted to her and nothing that she says can change that.

However, most women leave a man because they aren't emotionally attracted to him anymore, but he CAN change that.

He can start being more confident, emotionally masculine and charismatic and she will naturally begin to feel attracted to him again.

So, I want to make it clear that you CAN get the spark back with your ex.

However, just don't make the mistake of thinking that you can achieve it via text.

If the spark has died and your ex woman is no longer emotionally attracted to you, then a text about good memories (or some other clearly sneaky approach) will only come across as a bunch of useless words on a screen to her.

Rather than bring the spark back to life, it just highlights to her how bad things have become (i.e. the guy has no idea how to attract her and is resorting to tacky tricks).

This is why I always recommend that guys get to a phone call with their ex woman ASAP, rather than wasting time (and potentially turning her off) via text.

When a woman can't see your body language or hear the tone of your voice because you are only texting her, she doesn't have any evidence to believe that you really have changed.

Instead, she may assume that you're feeling insecure about your value to her now and are afraid to call, or aren't really that interested in getting her back and are just trying to get some love and attention from her while you try to move on.

If she thinks like that, she might then say to herself, "Well, if he can't be bothered to make a real effort to get me back, I'm not going to bother wasting my time texting back and forth. If he wants me back, he's going to need to prove to me that he has changed."

So, if you want to get the spark back with your ex, make sure that you push to get her on a phone call (or just call her if she will answer) and then meet up with her in person and make her feel respect and attraction for the new and improved you.

Another way to get the spark back with your ex is to

2. Laugh with her about the mistakes you used to make

Don't take your mistakes so seriously.

The fact is, everyone makes mistakes from time to time (even your ex) in a relationship, so it's not just you.

Don't feel as though you're the worst man in the world for making the mistakes you did.

You're a great man and simply made a few mistakes because you didn't know any better.

You know better now though, right?

Awesome.

Believe in yourself then.

Look at yourself as being the man you are now, not the guy you used to be.

The most important thing is that you really have learned from your mistakes and become a better man as a result.

So, if you're interacting with your ex (on a phone call or face-to-face) you say something like, "Wow, I sure stuffed up before didn't I? I was pretty immature and can now see why it caused the spark between us to fade. Fortunately, I'm not that guy anymore. I've learned from my past mistakes. You might not want to believe me right away and that's okay. I'll let my actions speak for themselves. In the meantime, I just want to apologize for everything I put you through in the past. I can't help but laugh at myself now for being that way. No wonder you felt turned off by me! I would have broken up with myself too if I could!" and have a laugh with her about it.

If she refuses to see the light side of what happened and says something along the lines of, "No, I don't believe that you've changed. What about all the times you (and then mentions something you did wrong)?" just make sure that you remain relaxed and laugh off her attempts to continually complain about how you treated her before.

For example: You can say, in a joking way, â€œWow! it looks like you were keeping score of all the mistakes. Let's go over your big list of all my mistakes so you can get it off your chest!â€ and then laugh.

Add in, â€œYou can then throw that list away and we can actually have a nice chat here, without you bringing up an old mistake of mine every 3 seconds. How about it?â€ and laugh again, so she can see that you're not being too serious about it all.

Remember: If you've already apologized for your mistakes, you don't need to keep apologizing to her when she brings up your mistakes again and again.

You also don't need to keep putting yourself down and giving her power over you because of who you used to be.

You are a new man now and deserve respect for that.

Don't demand that she respects you, but just let her sense that you deserve it.

She will pick up on it and start showing you the respect you deserve.

For example: When she tries to turn the conversation towards your mistakes again, just make light of it (e.g. laugh and say, â€œOh, here we go again. Bring on the complaints!â€), rather than continually apologizing over and over again for the same things.

Let her see that even between exes who stuffed up a great relationship, there is still a funny side.

Laugh with her about it and get her to relax, so she can stop taking the past so seriously.

Yes, mistakes were made.

Yes, you weren't the perfect boyfriend (fianc  or husband).

However, there's no need to keep going on and on about that and making each other feel stressed or annoyed about it.

It's better to laugh about it and see that mistakes were made, but changes have also been made since, so you and her are talking about who you used to be, not who you are now or how the relationship would be now.

When she sees for herself that you've changed (e.g. you're more confident and emotionally strong now, she can't dominate you with her forceful personality anymore, you're able to stand up to her now), she will automatically start feeling respect and attraction for you again.

Her wall will come down and even if she tries to fight it, she won't be able to deny the spark of attraction and love for you in her heart.

To build on that initial spark you need to

3. Let her experience the new, upgraded and improved version of you

When a woman is saying things like, â€œThere's just no spark left between us and I don't know if it's possible to get it back,â€ it's usually because she has lost respect and attraction for her ex based on his behavior and actions.

In many cases, not only did the guy cause her feelings to fade when they were in a relationship, but he has also reinforced her negative feelings for him since the breakup.

For example: Imagine that a woman broke up with a guy because he was being too insecure and needy in the relationship with her.

To get her back, he then starts begging and pleading with her for another chance and saying things like, “I need you so much. Please give me one more chance. I just can’t live without you.”

What he doesn’t realize is that he’s making the same old communication mistakes that used to turn her off before (i.e. being needy, insecure, emotionally dependent).

So, rather than seeing him as being a new and improved version of the guy she broke up with, she looks him as being exactly the same and then feels even less respect and attraction for him.

Another example is if a woman broke up with a guy because she felt emotionally more dominant than him in the relationship.

He then tries to get her back by saying things like, “Please forgive me. I’ll do anything you want me to do to make you happy. Just tell me what you want me to do and I will do it, I promise.”

Rather than make her change her mind, he’s simply highlighting to her that he still hasn’t changed and is expecting her to lead the way in the relationship, which turns her off even more.

So, if you want to get the spark back with your ex, you need to show her that you’ve changed based on how you now communicate with her on phone calls and in person.

If you’re unsure about what those things might be, think back to your relationship with your ex and ask yourself:

- What aspect of my behavior or communication style always caused her to get annoyed or upset?
- Did I keep trying to change her in some way that she didn’t like?
- Did I really listen to what she wanted and give her that, or did I just assume that because she loves me she would put up with anything to be with me?
- What did we always seem to fight and argue about the most?

By answering those questions in your mind, you should have a clearer understanding about what caused your ex to break up with you.

Remember: What matters most to a woman is how you make her feel emotionally, not how you look physically.

So, make sure that you focus on what really matters.

When you make the right changes to how you talk, behave and act, she will naturally feel a spark with you again and become open to the idea of getting back together.

On the other hand, if you don’t understand what was really turning her off in your relationship and try to get her back while making the same old mistakes in your communication style, she will just keep saying, “Sorry, but I just don’t have feelings for you anymore. Please accept that and move on.”

Finally, to get the spark back with your ex woman, make sure that you’re

4. Pass her confidence tests

A woman wants to know that if she takes the risk of getting back together with her ex, he won't end up making the same mistakes that she broke up with him for.

So, one of the ways your ex will check to see if you really have changed and improved is by testing your confidence.

For example: When she is interacting with you, she will tease you, play hard to get, be hot and cold, throw tantrums or complain about random things about you to see how you react.

She wants to see whether you will crumble under the pressure, or remain confident and happy because you are now a self-approving masculine man who remains confident no matter what she says or does.

So, don't buy into her drama (e.g. when she's being cold, unfriendly, throwing a tantrum) and start losing confidence in yourself as a result.

Instead, just focus on using every interaction you have with her (e.g. via text, on social media, over the phone, in person) to renew her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you by being a confident, emotionally masculine man around her.

When she sees you reacting in that way, she can then relax and trust that you really are the man now.

When that happens, she starts to respect you again and naturally begins to reconnect with the attraction and love she originally felt for you.

It is then her who wants to get back with you.

How Can I Stop My Ex From Being So Indifferent Towards Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

To stop your ex from being so indifferent, you need to:

1. Trigger the specific emotions that will make her become interested in you again

Up until today, you may have been making her feel unattractive emotions, such as pity, resentment, stress, disappointment and apathy for you based on your approach to her.

As a result of making her feel that way, rather than giving you another chance, she closes herself off even more (i.e. she acts indifferent, or is cold and distant).

However, you can change that.

When you interact with her from now on, you just have to make sure that you cause her to feel emotions such as respect, attraction, love, happiness, joy, excitement, curiosity, wonder and delight.

How can you do that?

One way to do it is to focus on making her to smile, laugh and feel happy every time she interacts with you from now on.

When she is smiling and laughing with you, it makes it difficult for her to hold onto any negative feelings about you at the same time.

She relaxes her guard and naturally becomes more open to interacting with you again, rather than giving you the cold shoulder like she has been lately.

So, whether you're texting her, calling her on the phone or seeing her in person, you need to use every interaction that you have to make her feel happy to be hearing from you.

The more fun she has while interacting with you, the more that her indifference towards you will fade away and be replaced by openness and curiosity.

As a result, she will naturally want to hear from you and see you more often.

When that happens (often instantly and in more difficult cases, over a few days), you just need to maintain your confidence and her walls will crumble.

On the other hand, if you continue to trigger negative emotions every time you interact with her (e.g. you make her feel annoyed, stressed, upset) she will continue being indifferent and will say things like, "I don't care what you've got to say. Just leave me alone," or "Whatever...I'm not interested. You need to move on."

So, make sure that you focus on triggering her feelings of respect and attraction for you, rather than making her feel negative emotions and then expecting to get another chance from that.

Another way to stop your ex from being so indifferent towards you is

2. Don't seek pity for how she is hurting you with her indifference

Sometimes, when a guy's ex woman is being cold and indifferent towards him, he might say things like, "Why are you being like this? After everything we had together, is this how you act towards me? Is it fun for you to watch me hurt like this? I can't believe you're being so cold-hearted. How can you do this to me? Can't you see that I'm hurt by how you are behaving? How can you just stop caring like this? Where is your heart?

Essentially, he is hurt by her indifference towards him since the break up and can't think of any other way to get through to her and make her care.

He hopes that if he makes her feel sorry for him and feel guilty about how she is behaving, she might change her mind and give him another chance.

Yet, it just doesn't work like that.

A woman doesn't want to be manipulated into giving her ex another chance simply because he can't deal with the idea that the relationship is over.

Additionally, when a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her ex, she stops caring about how her behavior is affecting him.

It's all about her now and how she feels, not him and how he feels.

If he is unable to make her feel like she is attracted to him again and wants a relationship, she will just continue to move on and not worry about how badly it might affect him.

So, when the guy behaves in ways that turn her off (e.g. begging and pleading with her to listen to him, being needy and insecure around her, accusing her of never really loving him), she becomes even more disinterested in what he has to say.

Rather than think, He's right. We used to be so in love. Based on that alone, I owe it to him to give him another chance, a woman will usually think something like, Why won't he just leave me alone? Yes, we loved each other once, but it's over now. He's just prolonging his pain by not accepting that it's over between us. I do feel sorry for him, but the more he whines and pleads with me, the more he convinces me that he's just not the man for me. Doesn't he realize that women aren't attracted to emotionally weak, desperate men? Doesn't he realize that he needs to show me his confidence at this point and create a spark with me again? Well, I'm not going to tell him that. If he can't figure it out for himself, I will have to move on.

So, don't bother trying to make your ex feel pity for how she is hurting you with her indifference because it will just turn her off even more.

Instead, focus on reawakening her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by being confident and self-assured around her regardless of how she behaves, using humor to break down her defenses).

The more that you can make her respect you for handling the break up in such a confident, emotionally mature way, the more her indifference will begin to fade away and be replaced by curiosity and attraction.

Another way to stop your ex from being so indifferent towards you is

3. Don't try to convince her to give you another chance based on the changes you've made

Quite often, when a guy knows some of the reasons why his woman broke up with him, he will quickly make some changes and then tell her about those changes in the hopes of convincing her to give him another chance.

For example: If a woman broke up with a guy because he was too emotionally immature and lazy and had no clear direction in his life, he might then rush out and get a job.

Then, when he interacts with his ex he might say to her, “Hey, Iâ€™m working now. Iâ€™ve changed. Iâ€™ve improved. Iâ€™m no longer sitting around doing nothing with my life. Iâ€™m more mature now. Isnâ€™t that what you always wanted? Please give me another chance.”

Yet, a woman doesnâ€™t want to be told that youâ€™ve changed simply to get another chance with her.

She sees that as desperate and as you following her lead.

A woman doesn't want to be a man's leader in a sexual, romantic relationship because that makes her feel like his mother.

She wants her guy to change and improve because he wants to and then not rush and tell her all about it.

If the changes are more about a guy's emotional issues (e.g. he was insecure and is now confident), she wants to be able to experience the changes for herself based on the way he knows how to talk to her, behaves in her presence and the way he reacts and responds to what she says and does.

For example: Does he maintain his confidence even when she is being indifferent, or does he become upset, insecure and self-doubting?

So, donâ€™t bother trying to convince your ex to give you another chance based on the changes youâ€™ve made since the break up.

Just be the new, improved version of yourself when you talk to her and she will pick up on it herself.

She doesn't want you to tell her and essentially expect a pat on the head or on the back, along with, “Good on you. I'm proud of you.”

That's not the role that a girlfriend, fiancé or wife wants to play in her man's life.

She wants to see that you have changed because you wanted to and don't need to get her approval about it.

You are simply a new and improved man and are moving forward in life, regardless of whether she gives you the nod of approval for the changes or not.

Another way to make your ex stop being so indifferent towards you isâ€¦

4. Don't try to get her to show interest via text

Texts are so easily misinterpreted and if you haven't reactivated her feelings (of respect, sexual attraction and love) first in person or on a phone call, she can easily feel annoyed and pressured by what you are texting her.

For example: A guy might think it will be cute to text her, “Good morning,” but she will see it as annoying because she is still turned off by how he behaved leading up to the break up and during it.

Here's the thing...

When a couple uses texting to communicate in a happy relationship that is going along smoothly, pretty much every message sent and received will be perceived in a good way. Why?

The emotions between them are positive (i.e. respect, attraction, love, admiration) and therefore, everything sent and received will usually be interpreted in a positive way.

For example: If a guy in a relationship that has been together for years (and is happy) sends a text asking his woman, Hey, why are you ignoring me? I sent you a text hours ago because she didn't respond to him for many hours, she's usually going to smile and reply with something along the lines of, Why? Did you miss me?

She will feel flattered and be happy that he's thinking about her.

Now imagine a woman receiving a similar text message from her ex (e.g. Hey, why are you being so cold and detached towards me? Why are you ignoring me?).

Rather than make her smile and think, Awwww! I've been such a bitch to my ex. He sounds like he really misses me and wants to work things out between us and I'm just making it so difficult for him. I'm going to stop right away and give him a chance, she's just going to assume the worst of him instead.

If he was a bit insecure or needy in the relationship with her, she'll interpret his text as another sign that he hasn't changed.

She will start imagining things about him that might not even be real (e.g. he's too afraid to call her, he's not man enough to talk to her face-to-face, he's lost all his confidence and is a lonely, wimpy guy now) and she will feel even more turned off by him, even though he hasn't done anything wrong other than send a text.

This is why it's so important that you only use texting as a way of getting her laughing a little and getting her on a phone call with you, where you can re-spark her feelings and convince her to meet up in person.

When she can hear the tonality of your voice on a phone call and see your confident body language in person, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to feel indifferent.

Whether she wants to admit it or not, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for you again because you're no longer behaving like the guy she broke up with.

On the other hand, if all she's getting from you is a bunch of (whiny, lonely or boring) texts, the only thing you will be making her feel is turned off.

So, make sure that you call her on the phone right away, where you can then make her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again.

When you do that, her indifference will automatically begin to melt away and she will naturally begin to want to talk to you and interact with you again.

5 Mistakes That Many Guys Make When Trying to Get Their Ex Woman to Stop Being Indifferent

You're not alone.

It's not only you who is facing this particular problem, so don't worry.

So many other guys are dealing with an ex woman who is behaving indifferent towards them, even though she used to be in love with them.

It sucks.

However, you can fix the problem and get her to want you again if you approach her correctly from now on.

For example: Some common mistakes guys make that cause their ex to ignore them even more are

1. Thinking that she's being indifferent because she's a bad person now, rather than understanding that his unattractive approach is causing the indifference

Sometimes, a guy feels so frustrated with his ex for ignoring him that he starts to think that her behavior is all her fault.

He may begin to think something like, "She's such a bitch! I never realized it before because I was so blinded by my love for her, but it's all clear to me now that she is a selfish, self centered bitch who doesn't care about anyone, but herself. After everything we shared together, this is how she behaves! I bet she didn't even love me and it was all an act. I see her true colors now. She never cared about me and probably never will. She's a selfish bitch!"

Sometimes, a guy will think like that because he can't deal with the thought of her not being as devastated about their break up as he is.

He can't believe that he is still in so love with her, but she essentially feels nothing for him now. So, to make himself feel better, he looks at her indifference as meaning that she is a bad person now, or has always been a bad person in disguise.

Yet, that rarely is the case.

Sure, there are some cold, heartless women out there who enjoy breaking a guy's heart, but most women are good people and break up with a guy because he is no longer able to make her feel attracted or in love.

Here's the thing...

If a woman breaks up with a guy, he immediately changes and begins to re-attract her, he will immediately get her back in almost all cases.

Likewise, if it takes him a couple of weeks to prepare to re-attract her and then he does that, he will be able to get her back in most cases.

Getting an ex back is all about re-attraction.

If you are able to make her feel attracted to you again, she then has a very personal reason (i.e. she's feeling attracted to you again and can't stop thinking about you now) to stop being indifferent towards you.

A lot of guys either don't know that, or they don't know how to change and start making their ex woman feel attracted and in love again.

So, if a woman is being indifferent towards her ex guy, what you need to understand is that it's usually because his approach since the break up has been turning her off.

For example: He's been begging for another chance, pleading, crying, apologizing excessively, promising to change if she give him another chance or asking her to tell him what to change to make her happy.

It's not because she is a bad person.

She just wants to feel attracted to the guy that she's in a relationship with and if he can't offer her that, she doesn't have to stick with the relationship.

Hopefully you haven't made the mistake of assuming your ex is a bad person and potentially even accusing her of it.

If you have, don't worry about it.

It is a recoverable mistake as long as you change the way you interact with her from now on (i.e. start making her feel attracted).

So, rather than getting upset, feeling insecure, resorting to begging, pleading or asking her to tell you what to do to get her back, just focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you whenever you interact with her from now on.

How can you do that?

By behaving the opposite of the way you have been doing so far!

For example: Being very confident and emotionally strong around her, using humor to break her out of her indifference, being more masculine than her and being charismatic.

When your approach changes, her feelings change.

It's a natural process that happens automatically, without you or her having to do anything else to make it happen.

When she starts feeling attracted to you again, she will naturally become more open to talking to you and seeing you in person.

As a result, she will stop being so indifferent towards you and start being nicer, warmer and more open.

Another mistake that guys make is

2. Wanting her back even though he doesn't understand how to attract her in the ways that she secretly needs from a man

Quite often, a guy will try to get his ex back after they break up by texting her, sending her long e-mails, calling her up on the phone or even showing up at places where he knows he can find her.

He's not thinking about her reasons for breaking up with him and just wants to patch things up as quickly as possible before another guy gets her.

Yet, the guy's needs and wants aren't that important to a woman when she gets to the point where she breaks up with him.

Rather than think, “Oh wow! He must really still love me so much. Look at how quickly he's trying to get me back. He's texting me like crazy! It must mean that he is serious about changing! I believe him! I know that he can change!” she will think something like, “He just doesn't get it. He just assumes that if he chases me and is persistent enough, I'm going to forget about my real reasons for breaking up with him and give him another chance. He doesn't realize that I didn't just decide to end the relationship on a whim. I simply couldn't handle being with a man who doesn't know how to make me feel the way I want to feel in a relationship anymore. If he wants me back, he's going to have to do it by attracting me in the ways that I really want from a man, not by trying to force me into it with his overbearing persistence, sweet texts or empty promises.”

So, if you want your ex to stop being so cold and distant, you need to get clear about what she really wants from you.

Ask yourself, â€œWhat aspects of my thinking and behavior turned her off?â€

For example:

- Did I stop being the confident guy that she first met and gradually became insecure and too emotionally sensitive around her?
- Did I put up with her bad behavior and allow her to dominate me emotionally, rather than being a dominant, loving man that she could look up to, respect and feel safe with?
- Did I stop being a masculine guy with her and instead fell into the habit of sometimes imitating her way of being (e.g. being overly emotional and sensitive about things like a woman, gossiping like a girl, being too cute, being afraid of things that men typically aren't afraid of)?
- Did I stop reaching for my true potential in life and become needy, clingy and emotionally dependent on her?

Those are a few examples of what secretly turns a woman off.

Can you relate to any of them?

Don't worry, most guys make mistakes like that in a relationship because we don't ever get taught this stuff when growing up and are expected to either know it, or figure it out for ourselves.

I figured it all out a long time ago, so I am here to help you and explain how you can get her back and then enjoy an even better relationship with her than you had before.

Another common mistake that guys when in your situation isâ€

3. Asking her why she is being so indifferent and hoping that she will explain herself

When a woman is being indifferent towards her ex, it's only natural that he might want her to explain why.

For example: He might ask, â€œWhy are you doing this to me? Why are you ignoring me and being so indifferent? I don't understand. Why don't you just tell me what you want me to do to make you like me again and get this relationship back together? After all we've been through, how could you just change overnight and be so cold? I love you more than anything. I've never loved another woman as much as I love you. You mean everything to me. Doesn't that mean anything to you? Don't you care?â€

Saying things like that seems like the logical thing for a guy to do, right?

It seems logical, but it isn't.

Why?

The logical thing to do is to re-attract her, so she then naturally stops being indifferent and wants the relationship to get back together.

The illogical thing to do is to begin desperately asking her why, or seeking pity as he asks why she is behaving so indifferently now.

Why?

Itâ€™s unattractive.

Women are attracted to men who believe in themselves no matter what a woman says or does.

Women are also attracted to men who understand how a womanâ€™s attraction works and donâ€™t need her to explain it.

Why?

Women are embarrassed to admit what they are attracted to in a guy.

Itâ€™s embarrassing for a woman to say, â€œHey, I donâ€™t want you to care that Iâ€™m being indifferent. Donâ€™t follow my lead. Believe in yourself and show me that no matter what I say or do, you always remain confident and have high self-esteem. If you do, I will feel respect and attraction for you. Donâ€™t look at me as being the more dominant one. You are the man. Remember that!â€

Women donâ€™t want to have to say that because most guys will get the wrong idea and start being very arrogant.

So, they just hope to find a guy who understands women and has the ability to be the man.

If you can be the man and believe in yourself without needing the encouragement of a woman, women will naturally find you attractive, appealing and sexy.

In terms of getting an ex backâ€

A woman wants her ex guy to figure out what heâ€™s been doing wrong and then quickly make some adjustments and changes to his thinking, behavior and communication style to show her that heâ€™s changed.

She doesnâ€™t want to have to hold his hand and explain what heâ€™s been doing wrong.

She doesnâ€™t want to take on the role of his teacher or protector in life.

Instead, she just wants to relax into being his feminine, girly woman.

If she has to tell him how to be the man she needs, she will lose respect for him because he is simply following her instructions and may not really understand why it is important, or how to be the man in other ways or other areas of life.

So, donâ€™t bother asking your ex why sheâ€™s being so indifferent towards you because sheâ€™s probably not going to tell you.

If you do ask her, you will most likely get answers like, â€œI donâ€™t knowâ€ or â€œI just how I feel,â€ or, â€œDonâ€™t ask me that.â€

So, what should you do instead?

From now on, use every interaction you have with her as a chance to make her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you.

The happier she feels in your presence, the less she will be able to ignore you.

Think about it this wayâ€

Would you be indifferent to a person who is making you laugh, smile and feel happy?

Most likely not, right?

In the same way, when your ex experiences only positive feelings around you from now on, no matter how much she tries to be indifferent towards you, her resistance will crumble and she will automatically begin feel drawn to you again.

Then, getting her back becomes easy, because she wants it too.

Of course, itâ€™s not just about making her laugh, or making her laugh in a silly way.

What Iâ€™m talking about is being masculine and making her laugh like a feminine, girly woman.

Big difference.

If youâ€™ve ever watched a masculine man interact with a feminine woman, you will know what Iâ€™m talking about.

Maybe you used to be like that with your ex girl too.

You need to get that back and if you do, sparks will begin to fly between you and her again.

What do you do from there? How do you complete the ex back process and get her back into a relationship?

Keep learning from me right now and you will find out.

My Ex and I Have an Amazing Connection as Friends, But There is No Spark

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The main reason why there isn't a sexual spark between you and your ex anymore is mainly because you are too neutral towards her.

For a sexual spark to exist and remain alight, there must be a clear difference between the masculine and feminine energy of the man and woman.

If you are both like a couple of friends who spend time together, the spark will die out and you will feel like friends.

The problem that a lot of guys experience when maintaining a friendship with an ex, is behaving like a friend.

Behaving like a friend or like a sexy man to her is your choice.

You get to decide what type of energy you give off, how you talk to her and how you behave and act around her.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys who have an amazing connection with their ex girlfriend (or wife), but can't get any sexual action, are those who are afraid to behave like anything other than a friend to her.

For example: A guy will fear that if he shows sexual interest in her (e.g. flirts with her, creates sexual tension, tells her that she looks sexy that day or tells her to turn around in her jeans so he can check out her ass), she will get upset at him.

He fears that she will then cut him out of her life entirely and he will then not only lose his chance to get her back, but he will lose a great friend as well.

So, rather than risk losing her, he will accept an amazing connection as friends and just hope that something sexual sparks up between them over time.

Here's the thing though!

If you want to have more than a friendship with your ex, you have to create sexual feelings inside of her by displaying traits and behaviors that women are naturally attracted to and turned on by.

It's easy to do and the first step is to stop being on your best behavior around her like a good friend.

Stop pretending that you're not attracted to her anymore and just want to be friends.

Of course, this doesn't mean that you should throw yourself at her and start telling her about your feelings for her.

No.

Don't do that.

It will backfire!

It simply means that from this moment onwards, you don't act like a neutral friend around her.

You talk to her and interact with her in ways that naturally make her feel sexually attracted and aroused (e.g. You are very masculine in how you talk, feel and behave. You are very confident around her, no matter what she says or does to try and make you feel insecure).

Remember though!

It's totally fine to be her friend.

However, just don't make the mistake of being an innocent friend who thinks that he isn't allowed to flirt with her or make her feel sexually attracted.

A Good Friendship Isn't Enough

When people are people politically correct, they will say that a friendship is the basis for a lifetime relationship between a man and a woman and that sex isn't important.

It's BS.

Sexual attraction is more important than the friendship.

Attraction always comes first and everything else follows on after that.

I'm a happily married man and my wife and I are best friends.

However, first and foremost, we are sexually attracted to each other.

I do not treat her like one of my guy friends.

I treat her like my girl, my sexy woman, my sexy wife and then she is my friend.

As a result, the spark is always there between us.

If I treated her like one of my guy friends or like a neutral friend, the spark would die out and our perfect marriage would begin to fall apart.

That's how important sexual attraction is.

After nearly six years today, my wife and I still get intensely aroused by simply kissing each other.

It's like it was back when we first met.

That's how a relationship is supposed to work between a man and a woman and believe me, you will not achieve that by making the friendship between you and her the number one priority.

Sexual attraction is the number one priority.

Everything else comes second, third and so on after that.

So, if you have been treating your ex more like a friend for quite some time now, she will be finding it difficult, if not impossible, to muster up enough sexual desire to want to kiss you or have sex with you.

Even though you're a great guy and you and her are perfect for each other, the lack of sexual attraction causes you to feel more like friends than ongoing lovers.

When a woman feels that way about her guy, she will often begin to focus on the things about him that turn her off.

She will then start wondering things like, Is this really it? Is this how it's going to be between us? Where is the spark? Where is the romance? Am I settling for less? My girlfriends seem to happy with their boyfriends or husbands the spark is clearly there. I'm not feeling it with my guy. Maybe it's a sign that we're not meant to be together. Maybe the relationship has run its course and is now over. Maybe it's time for me to move on.

No, itâ€™s not time to move on from you.

Sheâ€™s simply not feeling the spark and you know what?

You can CREATE the spark.

A woman feelings of sexual attraction happen in response to how you talk to her, how you behave and how you act.

In other words, you are in control of it.

When you interact with your ex, youâ€™re either making her feel neutral towards you like a friend (e.g. because youâ€™re being a standard good guy, talking about things like a friend, being neutral) or you are making her feel sexually attracted and turned on (e.g. because youâ€™re being very masculine and making her feel girly in comparison to you).

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Even though your ex likes you as a friend and thinks highly of you, if you canâ€™t give her the attraction experience she really wants, she has to go and find that with another guy.

Rememberâ€¦

Attraction always comes first.

Everything else is secondary to attraction when it comes to sexual, romantic relationships between men and women.

So, if you and your ex have an amazing connection as friends, but there is no spark, then you need to create that spark.

You need to make some adjustments to the way you interact with her from this point onwards, so the way you talk, feel, behave and act automatically creates feelings of sexual attraction between you and her.

When you change the way you interact with her in a way that triggers her feelings of sexual attraction for you (e.g. flirt with her to create sexual tension, make her laugh and smile, make her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine vibe), her neutral feelings for you will change automatically.

She will start to think things like, â€œI donâ€™t know whatâ€™s happening to me. I suddenly feel so attracted to him. I canâ€™t stop thinking about him touching me, kissing me and making love to me again. I thought that we were only friends now, but my feelings have definitely changed. I want more. Maybe itâ€™s a good idea for us to get back together again and see how it goes.â€œ

However, if you continue to make her feel like a neutral friend in your presence, itâ€™s highly likely that she will eventually hook up with another guy who sparks her feelings of sexual attraction in the ways that she wanted all along.

You will then find yourself wondering things like, â€œWhy? What happened? How did I lose her? I thought we had an amazing connection! We are meant for each other. How could she just leave me behind?â€œ

Simple.

Attraction comes first and everything else follows on after that.

5 More Things That Keep a Relationship Together Between a Man and a Woman

Sexual attraction is the most important glue that keeps a relationship between a man and a woman together.

However, there are also other things that are very important.

To name a fewâ€¦!

1. Making progress in life together as a couple

Part of being the man in a relationship with a woman is taking on most of the responsibility for leading both you and her to a better life in the future.

This doesnâ€™t mean that she takes a back seat while you do all the work, make all the decisions and earn all the money.

No.

Instead, it means that as the man, you make sure that you and her are headed in the same direction and want the same things.

You have a clear plan for your future together and youâ€™re both working towards achieving it.

No matter what challenges you and her face along the way, you are always the one who remains emotionally strong and stable, so she can continue to feel like you are the man and she is the woman and can rely on you to protect her.

The following example might not apply to you, but where a lot of guys go wrong is by drifting through life without a clear purpose and direction, which causes his woman to feel insecure about her future with him.

She begins to think things like, â€œWhy isnâ€™t he aiming for bigger things? Why is he just happy to work his job and be mediocre? Why isnâ€™t he trying to get promoted at work? Will we always be stuck at this level of life? What if we decide to have a family together? How will we be able to take care of our children on a single salary/wage? If he canâ€™t plan for our future, then Iâ€™m going to have to do it. Iâ€™m going to have to be the more manly one and figure out a life plan and make sure that we follow through on it. Yet, thatâ€™s not what I want though. I want to be with a man who leads the way and has the emotional strength to make me feel protected and safe in the relationship because he always pushes forward and continue to make progress.â€

Of course, this doesnâ€™t mean that the man has to do everything and the woman can just relax and be silly.

Not at all.

Yet, for a woman to be truly happy with her man, she wants to see that he is the stronger one and he is the more emotionally consistent one.

For example: You may have noticed that a woman can be excited and interested about doing something one day, but will give up on it the next day or the following week.

Men do that too, but women do it all the time, which is a difference between men and women that is acceptable and needs to be there for sexual attraction to exist.

If women were like men and were always consistent, strong and manly, then we wouldn't feel attracted to them.

Part of a woman's appeal is her emotional vulnerability, her indecisiveness and her need for a strong man to lead the way.

So, if a woman finds herself in a relationship with a guy who doesn't lead and expects her to be Mr. Consistent and Mr. Followthrough about everything, she will naturally begin to lose her feelings of sexual attraction for him.

She might like him as a friend and they might have an amazing connection, but something just won't feel right to her anymore.

So, an important part of keeping a relationship together with a woman is your ability to be a man who is striving through the levels of life and reaching for your true potential.

If you do that, your woman can relax and feel safe with you and she can also feel sexually attracted to you.

Why?

You are being a traditional man, which allows her to be a more traditional type of woman, which leads me to the next point!

2. A clear difference in masculine and feminine energy

A relationship that ends up feeling more like a friendship is usually as a result of a man and a woman essentially being too much like each other.

In other words, she stops being the sexy, girly, emotional, feminine woman that she used to be at the start of the relationship and starts being a more plain, neutral, logical woman.

Why?

It all happens in response to the dynamic that the man offers her in the relationship.

If a man doesn't maintain his masculinity in the relationship, she will start to take on some of it herself, which will eat away at her femininity.

For example: Guys often make the mistake of thinking that to keep a woman happy in a relationship, she should take the lead and make all the decisions.

Yet, although a woman may initially enjoy bossing her guy around for a while, it will begin to annoy her that she is no longer feeling like a feminine, girly woman and is starting to feel more like his mother or big sister.

That's not what she wants.

If he makes her feel that way, she will eventually lose so much respect and attraction for him that she will begin to disconnect from her feelings of love for him.

When that happens, she will usually break up with him and look for a guy who will be the man in the relationship, so that she can then relax into thinking, feeling and behaving like a real woman again.

It doesn't matter that her ex is a good guy or that they shared an amazing connection.

Her feelings of sexual attraction are the most important element of a relationship before anything else.

If her feelings of sexual attraction have faded away because he stopped being a man for her, she will naturally begin to feel attracted to other guys who are more masculine than him.

The same applies for a guy.

If his woman stops being as feminine and starts being a more plain, neutral woman, he will naturally start feeling more attracted to very feminine women and may even spend a lot of his time and sexual energy jerking off to porn with those types of women in it.

We humans want the masculine/feminine energy balance to be right.

We can't cover it up with a friendship.

That doesn't work.

Sexual attraction always comes first and overrides everything else.

So, if you want to relight the spark between you and your ex, you need to show her that you now have the ability to be masculine in a way that makes her feel totally feminine and girly again.

Talk, behave, feel, act and move in a very masculine way, so she can naturally respond in a feminine way.

If you do that, she will naturally begin to feel attracted to you again, even if she tries to hide it.

She needs to be able to see that she can truly relax into being a woman around you, knowing that you really are the man now.

She will then automatically begin to feel respect for you again and when that happens, it will be difficult for her to stop feeling sexually attracted to you as well.

Another important thing needed to keep a relationship between a man and a woman together is a

3. Regular enough sex to keep both parties happy

According to research, at the beginning of a relationship, most couples have sex 2-4 times per week.

However as time goes by, a lot of guys make the mistake of turning their woman into more of a friend or worse, a roommate and the sexual spark fades away.

Yet, here's the thing!

Even though sex is not always equally important to every person (e.g. some couples place more importance on shared values, the pursuit of goals, raising a family together), to keep the romantic connection alive between them, it's important that the sex doesn't dry up or become boring or stale.

You don't have to be super adventurous or do crazy things during sex to keep it interesting.

Instead, you just need to make sure that you maintain the masculine and feminine difference between you and her, so the sex is automatically and naturally interesting and enjoyable for both you and her.

4. The woman can look up to her man and feel proud of him in every way

I'm not talking about being proud of him because he is a standard good guy.

No.

It's more than that.

You're most likely a good guy and I say that, because after helping men for many years, I know that guys in your situation are pretty much always really good guys and have good intentions with the girl.

Yet, thatâs not what a woman feels most proud of.

For a woman to be able to look up to her man, respect him and feel proud of him, he has to be an emotionally strong man who doesnât need her to keep propping him up and encouraging him to remain happy, confident and forward moving in life.

In other words, if she doesnât show him enough love, attention and support, he starts to sulk, get clingy or worse, get angry at her for making him feel insecure like that.

She essentially needs to be Mr. Consistent and Mr. Supportive, or else he wonât keep making progress or being a confident man.

That makes her feel like he is her child or little brother, which isnât attractive to her and kills the sexual spark as a result.

Additionally, where a lot of guys go wrong (and end up losing their woman as a result), is by thinking that making a woman the center of his world is what she really wants.

As a result, he might focusing on other areas of his life (e.g. give up on his goals and dreams, neglect his friends, quit his hobbies and interests) so he can orbit around her as though she is the center of his universe.

Thatâs not what a woman wants.

Although modern women are usually embarrassed to admit it (because of the backlash they will receive from feminists), they naturally want to orbit around a man and allow him (and any children they may have) to be the center of their universe.

Feminist women will say that men should follow a womanâs lead and be subservient to her, but thatâs not what really works in the majority of sexual relationships between men and women.

What a woman really wants is a man who is capable of continually being the man, so she can be his woman.

Most guys donât know that though, or they get sucked in by the confusing, politically correct talk they see on TV or overhear coworkers talking about.

As a result, many guys feel as though the right thing to do is to be in a position where he is looking up to the woman, feeling proud of her and feeling safe and happy that he is being protected by and lead by her.

He may then justify his actions by thinking something along the lines of, *âAs long as I have her in my life, I donât need anything else. In fact, goals and ambitions and even work are just a distraction from being with her and I donât want that. The love that we share is more important than the dreams I had before I met her. Instead, we will make new dreams together. Thatâs what couples do. I will do what she wants because she is all that I want.*â

Yet, thatâs not what a woman wants.

She doesnât want to be her manâs main focus in life and take him away from following through on his biggest dreams, goals and ambitions.

She also doesnât want to be responsible for his mental and emotional well being.

She wants him to take care of her, love her and appreciate her, but if he allows himself to become emotionally dependent on her, she will instinctively begin to lose respect for him as a man.

Rather than feel flattered that heâ€¢s giving up on everything else in his life for her, she will begin to feel unsafe in the relationship and may even start to feel smothered by his neediness.

She might then think something like, â€¢What kind of future do I have with a man who canâ€¢t take a step in life without me? Sure, it was sweet at first, but now I feel embarrassed to tell my friends and family that heâ€¢s so needy and clingy that he canâ€¢t stand on his own two feet and be the man in our relationship. Instead, he depends on me entirely for his emotional well being and is neglecting all the other areas in his life. Itâ€¢s just too much pressure for me. I donâ€¢t want to be taking care of him emotionally. I want a man who is emotionally strong enough to make things happen in his life, rather than hiding behind me for protection from what he sees as a scary world out there. He needs to grow a pair of balls and man up.â€¢

So, if you want to create a spark with your ex and make want you again, donâ€¢t make the mistake of letting your entire purpose and reason for living be about being in a relationship with her.

Instead, begin to focus on your goals, interests and friendships that are separate from your relationship with her, while also going through the quick and easy ex back process that I teach here at The Modern Man.

Another important part of keeping a relationship together between a man and a woman is thatâ€¢|

5. They have a mutually agreed future that they're aiming for

It may seem like an obvious thing to say, but a couple needs to want the same things in the relationship long term, if they are going to be able to remain together long term.

For example: It will be a lot more difficult for a relationship to last if a man likes to go clubbing all the time and enjoys hanging out and getting drunk with his friends, whereas his woman wants to get serious, settle down, start a family and be responsible.

So, if the man and woman arenâ€¢t aiming for the same things, itâ€¢s unlikely that the relationship will last for life.

Eventually, one person is going to get tired of waiting for the other to get onboard with their vision for the future and unfortunately for men, itâ€¢s usually the woman who feels that way.

Remember: For a relationship to work, a couple must have a shared, long term vision that they are both happy about working towards.

So, if a man and a woman find themselves at different levels of maturity and emotional development, a break up becomes an almost certain inevitability.

Women in the past used to put up with it, but modern women donâ€¢t have the same kind of patience.

Modern women want a relationship that is satisfying and emotionally secure, so they can feel safe about spending their time with a man and knowing that things will work out okay in the long run.

So, if you and your ex have an amazing connection as friends, but there is no spark, could it be because youâ€¢re at different levels emotionally?

For example: Ask yourselfâ€¢|

- Do her and I want the same things in life, or are we going in very different directions (e.g. I want to settle down and be stable, but she wants to travel and live a carefree life. She wants to start having children,Â but I donâ€¢t want to take on that kind of responsibility right now)?

- Is there too much of a gap between her relationship intelligence and mine?
- Does she understand how to be effective in a relationship and make things work much more than I do, or do I have a lot more experience and relationship intelligence than her and she feels like she just can't be responsible like I am?

You Can Relight the Spark Between You and Her

Okay, I hope you have been learning something from this article so far and getting a better idea of what you need to do to make a relationship work with your ex.

One thing that I really want you to be clear about is that you CAN relight the spark between you and her.

It's not dead.

The spark between a man and a woman is something that is CREATED by way of the man's actions, behavior and approach.

In other words, from now on, you are either going to be talking to her and interacting with her in a way that makes her feel neutral or sexually attracted and aroused.

It's completely up to you and how you approach her from now on.

How Can I Get My Ex to Desire Me Like She Used To?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are the 4 steps to take to get your ex to desire you the way she used to:

1. Make her feel attracted to the new and improved you, but don't try to get back with her right away unless she wants to

It's very important that when you interact with your ex from now on (e.g. via text or e-mail, on social media, over the phone and in person), you're not coming across as a neutral friend.

Instead, you must use the interactions as a way of making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to the new and improved you.

A great way to do that is by using humor to bring down her defenses and show her that, even when she tries to make you feel insecure by being cold and unfriendly towards you, or by pretending that she doesn't desire you anymore, you maintain your confidence around her.

It also allows her to see that you believe in your attractiveness and value to her, which is very important to women, but is something that they rarely, if ever, admit to men.

Why?

If women admitted that they like it when a guy believes in his attractiveness to her regardless of her behavior, most guys would take it the wrong way and begin acting arrogant.

That's not what a woman wants.

A woman wants a guy who is confident and believes in himself, without feeling like he needs to put on an act of thinking that she should feel lucky to be talking to such an awesome guy as him.

So, make sure that you believe in yourself no matter what she says or does, but also be a good guy at the same time.

In addition, make sure that you focus on flirting with her so she can enjoy the building sexual tension between you and her.

Then, stop and go back to talking normally for a few minutes and then repeat the process all over again (i.e. be very confident, flirt with her, make her laugh and smile).

Let the sexual and emotional tension build up until she feels like she wants to release it with hugging, kissing and sex.

In some ex back cases, this happens instantly.

However, in more difficult cases, it usually takes 3-7 days to get her to the point where she's thinking things like, "I don't know what's gotten in to me. I'm feeling so drawn to him all of a sudden. I wish that he will take me into his arms and kiss me. I want to have sex with him again. Why am I even thinking like this around him? We're supposed to be broken up! I'm so confused."

Then, getting back together becomes something that she wants to do to as well, rather than it just being about you wanting her back.

However, be warnedâ€¦!

Donâ€¦t push her to get back in a relationship again if she doesnâ€¦t seem ready.

Instead, just continue showing her the new and improved side to yourself (e.g. your new and improved confidence, masculinity, emotional independence) and keep building on her feelings of attraction for you.

From there, you need toâ€¦!

2. Get her to forgive the old version of you

Note: This step applies to more difficult ex back cases.

If your ex is easy to get back, you wonâ€¦t need to get her to forgive you.

However, if youâ€¦re like most guys who need help to get an ex woman back, your ex hasnâ€¦t been making it easy for you, right?

Sheâ€¦s been saying no and holding onto her reasons why she broke up with you.

So, you need to get her to let go of those reasons and see the new and improved you by first forgiving the old version of you.

The forgiveness has to be for real though.

She canâ€¦t just say something like, â€œYeah, sure I forgive youâ€œ and not actually mean it.

That doesnâ€¦t work.

You have to get her to forgive you for real.

If she doesnâ€¦t get to the point where she forgives you for real, she wonâ€¦t be able to feel complete desire for you.

Instead, she will just continue to focus on the reasons why you and her shouldnâ€¦t be together anymore.

Then, whenever you do something she doesnâ€¦t like or approve of, sheâ€¦ll say to herself, â€œI knew that nothing about him has really changed. Heâ€¦s just been putting on an act to try and get me back, but underneath it all heâ€¦s still the same jerk I broke up with. Well Iâ€¦m not going to fall for that this time. Weâ€¦re broken up and I donâ€¦t see any reason why I should give him another chance. Itâ€¦s over. I have to move on fully and get him out of my life.â€œ

On the other hand, when you get her to the point where she really does forgive the old version of you, it makes her drop her guard and allows her to start seeing you as the man you are now.

She stops judging you based on your past actions and behaviors and she starts to look at you as the new you; a guy she can actually feel respect, attraction and love for again.

From there, you need to make sure that youâ€¦!

3. Stop turning her off in the subtle ways that she probably hasn't told you about

Women have a hard time opening up and saying what they really want from a guy in terms of sexual attraction.

For example: A woman is with a good guy who treats her well, cares about her and even makes her laugh and smile.

That's all great, but if there are many subtle, but important things that turn her off sexually about him, it's just not going to feel right to her.

For example: He might

- Try to control how she thinks, feels or behaves so he can feel better about himself (e.g. She has to be nice to him all the time and never throw a tantrum, otherwise he gets angry or upset at her for being disrespectful and then begins to treat her badly. She has to not look at other guys when they are out and if she does, he gets angry and emotional and begins to sulk or give her the silent treatment).
- Act too much like her, rather than acting like a man (e.g. he giggles and acts girly like her too often, he cries when life gets tough, he gossips about people all the time, he uses cute body language like a woman would, he is afraid of things that usually only scare women, such as spiders or even harmless insects).

So, if you want your ex to feel true desire for you again, you must ensure that you're not turning her off in the same old subtle ways, or in new ways (e.g. now you're very hesitant around her because you don't believe in your attractiveness and value to her, which turns her off because women aren't attracted to a lack of confidence in men).

Next

4. Start to deepen her feelings for you by being a man that she can look up to and feel proud to be with

For a woman's feelings to grow and flourish in a relationship, she needs to feel that her man is a catch.

Being a catch doesn't mean that he has to be model good looking, super rich, famous or successful, but rather that he has the personality traits and behaviors that women naturally find attractive (e.g. confidence, charisma, charm, humor, determination to succeed, emotional strength).

If a guy has traits like that, a woman will feel good around him.

She will feel as though he is one of the rare guys who has it all together and is capable of being successful, protecting her and enjoying a great life with her.

This doesn't mean that a guy has to be successful to be desirable to women.

No.

Simply having the potential to be a successful man is enough to arouse the desire of almost all women.

Why?

It's simply about a woman's natural breeding instincts. She doesn't want to get stuck with a guy who is going to be more of a burden than a benefit, especially since she is the one who is going to have to raise the offspring.

Note: This applies even if she doesn't want children, hates children or is too old to have children. The same rule applies.

A woman's breeding instincts compel her to find a guy who is capable of protecting her, providing for her and the offspring and having a good life with her.

As mentioned, this doesn't mean that a guy has to be successful to be desirable.

It's simply about having the potential to be successful based on your confidence, charisma, social skills and determination to succeed at anything that you do in life (even the small, seemingly insignificant things).

If you have the personality traits that a woman naturally and instinctively finds attractive, she will automatically feel desire for you and feel good around you.

For example, when a man is interacting with his ex woman:

Does he make her feel turned on, or does she feel neutral, or even a turned off by him (e.g. because seems nervous and unsure of himself now)?

Does he make her feel good, or does she feel bored, tense or stressed out?

Is he the kind of man she can look up to, respect and feel proud of, or would she now feel a bit embarrassed to be associated with him?

That's what really matters to a woman.

If you don't know how to be the kind of man that your ex desires and wants to be associated with anymore, then be sure to keep reading along!

6 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want to Get Your Ex to Desire You Like She Used To Quite often, when a guy gets broken up with, his instincts tell him to do whatever it takes to get his woman back right away.

As a result, he may then begin to behave out of character and say and do things to her that he will later regret.

For example:

1. Begging and pleading with her for a second chance

Why does this turn her off?

An important part of a woman's attraction for a man is based on ability to make her feel like she can look up to him and respect him as a man.

So, when a guy is begging and pleading, she perceives him as being too emotionally weak and needy, which causes her to look down on him.

Additionally, a woman doesn't want to feel like she will be stuck with a man who resorts to begging and pleading when life isn't going right for him.

A woman's natural instincts are to align herself with a man who maintains his composure when under pressure.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

2. Apologizing to her over and over again

Why isnâ€¦t that appealing to her?

Although thereâ€¦s nothing wrong with giving a woman a heartfelt apology for your mistakes, apologizing to her repeatedly is a waste of time.

When a guy is apologizing excessively and essentially taking the blame for everything that went wrong in the relationship, it simply makes him look desperate in her eyes.

Even though he is being sincere, nothing about his behavior is making her feel like if she gives him another chance, things really will be different this time.

Heâ€¦s just apologizing, but heâ€¦s still the same guy she broke up with and now, heâ€¦s turning her off even more by being desperate.

3. Asking her to tell him what he needs to change to make her desire him like she used to

Why donâ€¦t women like it when a guy does that?

If a woman has to explain to a guy what he needs to do to attract her, he will start to look like a confused guy who still hasnâ€¦t grown up and become a man yet.

She will then feel that getting back into a relationship with him will be a mistake, because he doesnâ€¦t even know how to be a real man without her telling him what to do.

Instead, she will have to guide him along and help him to grow up and become more mentally and emotionally masculine over time.

She doesnâ€¦t want to run the risk of being with a guy like that because he might not maintain his motivation to improve.

He might just be saying that he is willing to change so he can get her back, but he will stop trying later on once they are comfortable again.

Her instincts will urge her to find a man who understands how to be a man, likes being a man and is always becoming an even stronger man (mentally and emotionally, not physically) over time.

So, if you want to get your ex to desire you like she used to, make sure that you use every interaction to spark her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your emotional masculinity).

The more she enjoys interacting with you, the more she will begin to respect you again.

When she can respect you, she will then also be able to reconnect with her feelings of desire for you.

On the other hand, if you keep turning her off by saying and doing the wrong things (e.g. begging, pleading, crying, making promises to change, pouring your heart out to her), she will just keep saying, â€¦Sorry, but itâ€¦s over between us. Please accept it and move on.â€¦

4. Trying to romance her before regaining her respect and attraction

Some guys hope that being very romantic to their ex woman (sending her flowers or a card, writing a poem, buying her gifts like chocolates, perfume, jewelry or a cute teddy bear), will result in her feeling so much desire that she wants to get back with him again.

Yet, it just doesn't work in almost all ex back cases.

Why?

Romance is only enjoyable to a woman if the feelings are mutual (i.e. if she respects him, feels attracted to him and feels love for him).

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she no longer has strong feelings for him.

In other words, the feelings are no longer mutual, so she isn't going to enjoy his attempts to be romantic.

She will see it as him trying to get her back by distracting her with things that have nothing to do with him (i.e. physical objects such as teddy bears or cards).

To get her back, he has to be able to attract her to him, not to objects and nice gestures of romantic affection (e.g. poems, sweet texts).

He has to interact with her on a phone call or in person and let her experience the new and improved him in person, otherwise she just won't be seduced by his attempts to be romantic.

For example: If an insecure guy sends his ex woman flowers, it's unlikely that she will think, Who cares that he's insecure?! He sent me flowers! I have to give him another chance now. Flowers are the most important thing to me! I don't care about feeling sexually attracted to him. I just need flowers!

Instead, she will assume that he's still insecure and is hiding behind a traditional romantic gesture.

Remember: Romance is only enjoyable to a woman when the feelings are mutual.

Traditional romantic gestures don't work on an ex woman who doesn't have feelings for you anymore.

You have to make her have feelings for you first, by allowing her to interact with the new and improved you on the phone or in person.

Of course, a woman isn't going to tell her ex that.

In many cases, a woman will secretly laugh and just enjoy the desperate, confused attempts by her ex to get her back.

She will usually also accept any gifts or financial help he offers her (e.g. many guys try to stay in their ex woman's life by helping to pay her rent, mortgage or bills), but it won't make her want him back in a sexual way.

So, make sure that you don't fall into the trap of being very generous and romantic towards her in the hope that it makes her want you in a sexual way again.

It simply doesn't work.

What does work?

Making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you based on how you interact with her on the phone or in person.

For example: When talking to your ex on the phone or interacting with her in person!

- Do you make her feel like a real woman by being more masculine than her, or do you make her feel like she's the more dominant one?
- Do create a spark of sexual attraction between you and her and build on the sexual tension to the point where she wants to kiss you and have sex with you again, or do you act in a neutral manner and make her feel like you and her are just friends now and nothing else?
- Do you turn her on by being a confident, emotionally strong, self-approving man, or do you turn her off because you're too insecure, nervous and self-doubting?
- Does she feel relaxed and happy in your presence, or does she feel tense, bored or stressed out?

Those are the kinds of things that truly matter to her.

Another mistake that a guy might make in your situation isâ€¦

5. Hoping that being extra nice to her will make her regret her decision

For example: A guy might treat his ex like a princess and let her get away with being rude to him, or take advantage of him (e.g. by asking him to run errands for her, or to borrow money from him, she has no intention of paying back).

Secretly, he's hoping she will say something like, â€œYou know? I've never realized just how much you still care for me, until now. I know that we're broken up and I really have tried to move on, but I now realize that no other guy compares to you. Can you ever forgive me for leaving you and give us another chance? I just can't bear the thought of losing you for real.â€

It would be nice if women reacted in that way to niceness, but they rarely do.

If a woman does react in that way, she is simply being manipulative and has every intention of using the guy for her benefit for a while, before cheating on him and telling him about it, or dumping him when he thinks that everything is fine.

Pretty much every other woman is going to see right through the Mr Nice Guy act, not be interested in and continue to move on.

So, does that mean a guy shouldn't be nice to his ex woman?

No.

Of course not.

Sometimes, being a good guy is always the best approach to life and relationships, but there's a big difference between being a good guy and being a desperate, ass kissing nice guy.

If a woman senses that her ex guy is being extra nice because he doesn't have any idea how to re-attract her, then she's going to feel turned off by his cluelessness and desperation.

Women know what attracts them to men (e.g. confidence, emotional masculinity, charisma, balls, humor), but most guys don't know that, or don't know how to display it, especially when they have been rejected or dumped by a woman.

If a guy has been dumped, he needs to show his woman that he still believes in himself, still has the balls to crack jokes and still has the emotional masculinity to remain strong and guide him and her back into a relationship, regardless of how difficult she is being.

If a woman is secretly open to getting back with her ex, she won't always show that to him.

In many cases, she will act as though she's over him or as though he is so annoying to talk to now.

She wants to see if he can retain his composure under pressure, or if he will crack and show his true colors.

Women don't want to be stuck with a guy who can't handle the pressures of life and after a break up, a woman has the perfect opportunity to test her guy's confidence and see what he is really made of.

It's easy for a guy to feel confident when a woman is showing him love, affection and attention, but it's another story altogether when he has been rejected or dumped.

So, in the case of a guy sucking up to a woman by being extra nice, she looks at that as meaning that he lacks confidence in his attractiveness to her.

He felt confident in his attractiveness to her when she was nice to him in the relationship (that the easy part), but now can't handle the pressure after being dumped (the more challenging part).

He needs to stop sucking up and start showing her that he believes in himself and his attractiveness to her.

Note that I said start showing her and didn't say, start telling her.

Show her, don't tell her.

If you tell her something like, I know that you're attracted to me all she has to do is say something like, No, I'm not. You're delusional and you're screwed.

However, if you remain confident around her and let her see that you are confident in yourself no matter what she says or does, she will then start to change her body language, vibe and approach to show you that she is attracted.

That's how it works.

Leave it unspoken.

Show her that you believe in yourself and let her feel the attraction that comes with it.

Another mistake that a guy might make in your situation is

6. Working hard to improve his physical appearance to hopefully make her desire him in that way

Since the majority of men feel the most amount of attraction for a woman based on her physical appearance, they assume that women operate in the same way.

This is why, when a guy is trying to get his ex to desire him like she used to, he might think to himself, Women are always talking about how they love guys with big muscles, six pack abs, a cool hairstyle and expensive clothes. So, if I'm ever going to re-spark my ex's feelings of attraction, I won't be able to do it looking like my old self. I'm going to have to give myself a major makeover (e.g. update my wardrobe, lose some weight, build some muscle, change my hairstyle) to impress her and make her desire me again.

Yet, here's the thing

Although those things can make a nice superficial impression on a woman and even make her say something like, Oh, you're really looking good. I love your new look, it's not going to change how she feels about her ex if he is still turning her off emotionally.

For example: If he has big biceps and a six pack, but lacks confidence around her, he will quickly lose his appeal because she will be emotionally turned off by his lack of confidence.

Instead of feeling desire for him, she will be thinking something like, â€œWhat a pity he didn't upgrade his confidence. He's still the same guy, even though he's done all these superficial things to his appearance. If he was as confident, self-approving and emotionally masculine, I would feel so attracted to him right now. Yet, his attractiveness is only superficial. He's still the same old, weak guy on the inside.â€

So, make sure that if you want to get your ex to desire you like she used to, you focus on displaying some of the deeper traits that are naturally attractive to women, such as confidence, masculinity and emotional maturity, rather than hoping to get her back by improving your superficial appearance.

Naturally, there's nothing wrong with looking good or improving your appearance if it's something you want to do for yourself, but don't make the mistake of thinking it will get your ex back.

Instead, focus on changing the things that are truly important to your ex (e.g. becoming more emotionally independent, being more assertive and dominant than her, making her smile and laugh in your presence, being emotionally masculine rather than being emotionally sensitive) and she will naturally begin to desire you like she used to, because you are now a truly desirable man.

You might be worried that whatever you try may not work on her.

Don't think like that.

Women thrive on a man's confidence.

You've got to believe in yourself and your attractiveness to her.

You've got to be confident and let her experience that in person.

Let her feel attracted to the new and improved version of you and you will see a change in her body language, vibe and openness.

When that happens, you've just got to guide her through the rest of the ex back process and she will be yours once again.

Can You Get an Ex Back After a Year or More?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, you can get an ex back after a year or more.

Hereâs what you need to do:

1. Understand that love doesn't actually die

Itâs only natural that if a man has been broken up with his ex woman for a year or more, the idea of getting her back will seem like wishful thinking.

He might say to himself, âSheâs not going to be interested in me now. Itâs just too late. The love is dead.

Yet, hereâs what you need to understandâ!

Love doesnât die.

If your ex loved you before, then it means that the love really is still there in the background and therefore, it can be reactivated.

Love is something that we connect to, but itâs not something that dies.

If you and her connected to love together before and she eventually disconnected with it (e.g. because you turned her off, caused her to lose respect for you), then it means that she can reconnect with that love again if you approach her in there right way.

What is the right way to approach her?

By making her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction based on how to you talk to her and interact with her.

That is what works.

When you interact with her and make her laugh, smile and feel good to be hearing from you again after all this time, she instantly begin to reconnect with some of her her old feelings for you.

She will also experience new and more interesting feelings for you, which are based on the idea of reconnecting with a former flame, being in your arms again, having make up sex and experiencing each other now that both of you have had some time to grow and develop even more.

By the wayâ!

A benefit to getting an ex back after a year or more, is that she will have had a lot of time to forget or stop hating some of the negative things about you that she didnât like.

For example: A woman might have hated the fact that her and her ex guy always got into arguments over trivial things, but after a while of being apart and missing the good things about him and the relationship, she will be much more willing to hope that, if they tried again, things might be different this time.

So, donât be afraid to contact her and start the ex back process.

When you interact with your ex (over the phone and in person) and re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you, she will almost certainly begin to focus on seeing you as the man you have become, rather than the man you used to be.

In other words, she will give you the benefit of the doubt.

Instead of thinking, *â€œNo, heâ€™s such a jerk. I donâ€™t want anything to do with him after all he did (goes through a list of things you did to turn her off) to me,*â€œ she can now think, *â€œHe seems so different now. Itâ€™s actually quite nice to talk to him again. Heâ€™s like a completely different man. Maybe it would be fun to catch up and talk to him in person. Maybe it would feel good to hug him again and be in his arms.*â€œ

Then, when you ask her to meet up with you, she will be more willing to say *â€œYes,*â€œ because she will want to experience the new you in person and she how she feels.

Another important step to getting an ex back after a year of more is toâ€¦

2. Understand that the original spark of sexual attraction for each other can be reignited

In the same way that love doesn't die, the original spark of attraction that is unique to you and your ex still exists as well.

The reason why she isn't feeling is is that she has disconnected from it and no longer wants to feel it, based on how you behaved leading up to the break up, during the break up and potentially even after the break up.

To get her to go back to feeling attracted again, you just have to relight that spark by giving her an upgraded attraction experience whenever you interact with her from now on.

For example: When you interact with your ex, ask yourselfâ€¦

- Am I turning her on right now by being confident, emotionally strong, funny or charismatic, or am I turning her off by being insecure, hesitant, wimpy or emotionally weak?
- Am I making her smile, laugh and have fun to be talking to me again, or does she feel tense, stressed out, or turned off by me because Iâ€™m being too serious, nice or formal?
- Am I making her feel feminine and girly in my presence (e.g. by being more emotionally masculine than her, flirting with her to create sexual tension), or does she feel more like a neutral friend, or even worse, a complete stranger to me now?
- Does she feel respect and sexual attraction for me based on the man that Iâ€™ve become since we broke up, or does she feel like sheâ€™s still not getting the attraction experience that she really wants (e.g. she always wanted her ex to be more confident and ballsy, but heâ€™s still being shy, timid, hesitant and neutral)?

You need to give her an upgraded attraction experience, so she can realize that getting back with you would be of benefit to her (i.e. she would feel exciting and interesting new emotions).

If you are doing it right, she won't be able to stop herself from reconnecting with the original spark that she felt for you because you will now be giving her the attraction experience she always wanted from you.

She can then start to think, â€œI know that my ex and I have been broken up for over a year now, but heâ€™s like a different man. Maybe we can make it work this time. Maybe it would be fun. I *should follow my heart and give it a try.*â□□

As a result, the idea of getting back together again with you begins to feel good to her.

By the wayâ□!

Her â□□ following her heartâ□□ is simply womanâ□□s talk for her following her feelings of attraction and love.

When you make a woman feel attraction and love for you, she will feel like you and her are meant to be together and will open up to it.

This doesnâ□□t mean that she will lead the way and guide you back into a relationship.

Instead, it means that she will open up to it and allow you to guide her back into a relationship.

Of course, some women will take the lead, but almost all women want to be lead.

A woman wants a man to have the balls to make a move, make things happen and let her come along for the ride.

She doesnâ□□t want to have to take on the â□□manlyâ□□ role of leading the way, being the more confident and courageous one and helping you get her back.

Of course, some women will do that, but almost all wonâ□□t.

So, make sure that you are ready and willing to be the more courageous one and make things happen.

Another important step to getting an ex back after a year or more is toâ□!

3. Reach out to say hello as an old friend or an ex that is now a friend

Naturally if youâ□□ve been out of your exâ□□s life for a year or more, it might feel a bit awkward to just pick up the phone and call her out of the blue.

Thatâ□□s understandable and totally normal.

So, if youâ□□re not comfortable calling her, a good way to break the ice is by reaching out to her via social media, e-mail or text to say hi.

In most cases, a woman will usually have one or more social media accounts that she keeps active.

So, you can send her a message to say hi as an old friend.

For example: If your ex has a Facebook page, you can send her a message like, â□□Hey ex girlfriend. Long time no speak. I just wanted to say hi as a friend and see how youâ□□re doing after all this time. Life is good for me and Iâ□□m sure it is for you too. How have you been?â□□

Since she hasnâ□□t heard from you in a long time, she may think something like, â□□Well, that was unexpected. I wonder what he wants with me after all this time. Does he want to get back together?â□□

She will then probably look at your social media profile to see what youâ□□ve been up to since you and her broke up.

Important: Make sure that you have updated your profile first before you contact her and posted lots of photos of yourself having fun with other people and doing interesting things.

You donâ□□t want her seeing an outdated profile of you where you look lonely or sad and have her thinking something like, “So, he hasn’t been doing anything with his life for the past year and now wants to get some action with me. No thanks. Not interested.”

On the other hand, if she sees that you haven’t been lonely without her and have been getting on with your life, she will feel comfortable replying to you.

Just make sure that when she responds to you, you ask her for her phone number (e.g. in case you’ve lost it, or in case she’s changed it since your break up) and tell her that you intend to call and say hello as a friend.

Then, make sure that you get her on a phone call with you as soon as possible.

On the call, make her laugh and smile and re-spark some of her old feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Remember: The most important thing to do when getting an ex back is to meet up with her in person, so you can re-attract her, hook up with her (if possible) and get her back for real.

So, make sure that you don’t waste weeks or months messaging (or e-mailing) back and forth and potentially turning her off and losing your chance.

If you just keep messaging or e-mailing, she may begin to think, “Why is he wasting my time like this? Is he just lonely and in need of a friend? I mean, he contacts me out of the blue, acts like he’s changed and then doesn’t even get me to meet up with him. I guess he hasn’t changed after all. He’s still the same old insecure, self doubting guy I dumped. I have better things to do with my time. I’m not going to reply anymore.”

Alternatively, if you waste weeks or months messaging or e-mailing, you might simply lose your opportunity with her if she meets another guy, hooks up with him and really enjoys it.

So, just get her on a phone call with you as quickly as possible and arrange a time to meet up in person.

However, before you go to the meet up, make sure that you are ready to

4. Give her an upgraded attraction experience

For example: If you were a little bit confident before, she’s going to feel a lot more attracted to you if you are very confident now.

How can you show her that?

No matter what she says and does to test you, or throw you off (e.g. she is cold or even mean and says something along the lines of, “Why are you calling me after all this time? What do you want? Do you think I haven’t moved on? Do you think I have just been waiting around for you to call me?”), you remain confident and emotionally strong.

Rather than get upset or start feeling nervous and insecure, you just laugh at her attempts to goad you.

You can then say in a joking way, “Relax! You’re getting yourself all worked up over nothing. By the way you’re reacting though, I’d say you really missed me. That’s so sweet,” and laugh (in a loving way) at her attempts to test you.

Another example is if you weren’t very masculine in how you talked, felt, behaved and acted.

In that case, she is going to feel very attracted to you if you are now very masculine (This is not about your physical appearance. It’s about your inner masculinity. In other words, your balls) and are able to take the lead in the ex back process.

So, rather than always being on your best behavior around her and letting her get away with being rude or disrespectful, you now stand up to her in a loving, yet emotionally dominant way.

This allows her to relax into feeling like a real woman around you (i.e. feminine, submissive, girly, emotional).

The more you make her feel girly and feminine in comparison to your masculinity, the more she will think things like, â€œI thought I was over him, but Iâ€™m not. Suddenly I feel so attracted to him again. Why am I feeling this way? Is it possible that Iâ€™m still in love with him after all? I want him backâ€ badly.â€œ

Another example is if you werenâ€™t very focused on pursuing your dreams and goals in life and were simply going through life being mediocre, or hiding from becoming more of a man because you feared failing.

In that case, sheâ€™s going to feel more attracted to you now if you are passionately pursuing your biggest dreams and goals and making them a reality.

Women are naturally attracted to a man who is emotionally independent, knows what he wants in his life and isnâ€™t afraid to go after it.

Knowing that her man is following through on the things that are important to him in life (i.e. his goals, dreams, a big purpose), with or without her reassurance, support or encouragement allows her to relax and feel safe in the relationship.

She knows that she can depend on him to steer them both in the right direction, rather than having to be the stronger one who is always leading the way and looking out for the both of them.

Whatever the reasons are why you and her broke up, to get her back after a year or more, you need to show her that you are truly a better man now than you were before.

You are still you, only better.

Remember: Giving her a better attraction experience now, gives her a reason to want to get back with you.

However, if you try to get her back while youâ€™re still stuck at pretty much the same level you were at when she broke up with you (e.g. youâ€™re still insecure, still too emotionally sensitive), she may just say, â€œSorry, but Iâ€™m dating someone else now. Itâ€™s too late for us,â€ even if it isnâ€™t true, just to get rid of you.

So, make sure that you are ready to give her an upgraded attraction experience.

Once youâ€™ve changed and improved on some of the things that really matter to her, you need to thenâ€œ

5. Meet up with her and reactivate her feelings in person

No matter how much fun it might be to text back and forth, send cute messages to each other on Facebook or other social media, or how wonderful it is to talk over the phone, it will all mean nothing if you donâ€™t meet up with her in person soon.

Face-to-face is where everything really happens.

When she can see you, experience your confidence first hand and interact with the man you have become, her feelings change and she opens back up to you.

She stops thinking of you as the ex who she hasn't seen for a year or more and she starts looking at you with fresh eyes.

This is why you must get her to meet up with you in person.

Don't make the classic mistake of feeling unwelcome to contact her and flirt with her.

So many guys sit around thinking what it would be like to get their ex woman back, but never make the call or push for an in person meet up.

As a result, they don't get their ex back.

It's the men who have the balls to make it happen who get their ex woman back and enjoy new, fun times with her.

So, don't be afraid to contact her, meet up with her and trigger her feelings of attraction for you again.

Initially, if she sounds a bit reluctant to meet up, you can say, "Hey, it's just a quick cup of coffee between exes. We can catch up on what's been happening after all this time and have a good laugh together. It's no big deal and doesn't mean that we get back together. It's just coffee. Come on, it'll be fun to say hi again in person. Let's do it."

In most cases, if you've been making her feel attracted over the phone, she will say "Yes" to the meet up.

At the meet up, you've got to make sure you continue saying and doing the types of things that will reactivate her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is by:

- Making her laugh and smile and feel glad that she agreed to see you again.
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension.
- Showing her your confidence by not feeling nervous or unsure of yourself when she is being closed off towards you or when she tests you.
- Making her feel feminine and girly by being more masculine in how you now talk, feel, behave, move and act.

Remember: The whole point of meeting up with her in person is so that she can experience the new and improved you for herself and have her feelings reactivated.

The more you trigger her feelings of respect and attraction for you by being the kind of man she always wanted you to be, the more she will start falling for you again even if she tries to fight it.

Then, it won't matter that you and her have been broken up for a year or more.

What matters to her is how she is feeling now and if you're doing it right, she will be feeling sexually and romantically attracted to you once again.

Should I Send My Ex Good Morning and Good Night Texts?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, it's okay to send texts like that as long as you follow these basic rules:

1. Don't send one every morning and night

Although it might be tempting to start and finish your day with a text message to your ex (e.g. because you still care for her and want to stay connected to her, you want to be the first and last person on her mind so that she knows for sure that you want her back), it's not a good idea to do it every day.

Once or twice a week is much better because it gives her a chance to miss you, rather than feeling annoyed or bored by your constant attention.

For example: You send her a text on a Monday morning saying something along the lines of, â€œHey sleepy head, this is your Monday morning wakeup call. Hope you have an awesome week.â€

Alternatively, you can send her a text on Monday night saying something like, â€œIf your day was half as busy as mine, Iâ€™m sure youâ€™ll be looking forward to a good night sleep. Sweet dreams!â€

That's fine if you send her something like that on a Monday and then wait until Thursday to text her again.

She has a few days to miss you and can wonder about you over the weekend.

In many cases, a woman will be missing her ex and will begin proactively texting him and hinting at the fact that she wants to meet up in person.

Then, a guy can get her on a phone call and arrange a meet up, re-attract her in person and get her back for real.

That's how it works.

However, if you text your ex every day and she is currently turned off by you, your texts aren't going to make her think, â€œAwww, how sweet. Even though weâ€™ve broken up, Iâ€™m still the first and last person on his mind every day. He obviously still cares for me to be thinking about me like that. Maybe I made a mistake by breaking up with him. He clearly deserves another chance!â€

Instead, she will most likely find it annoying and be thinking things like, â€œWhy is he being so needy? He texts me every morning and every night like weâ€™re still a couple. What is his problem? Doesn't he realize that we aren't together any more? Heâ€™s making me feel even more convinced that heâ€™s not the right guy for me. Doesn't he realize that a woman needs to be able to miss a man and want him? Is he too afraid to let me miss him? Is that how needy he is these days?â€

If she's thinking like that, she may continue to tolerate your texts, while in the background, she will be trying to move on with her life and possibly even hook up with other guys.

Alternatively, she may eventually block you on her phone in the hopes that you will get the message and leave her alone.

You don't want that to happen, right?

Of course.

So, make sure that you don't overdo your texts and end up turning her off.

What you do want is to stay in touch with her just enough to make her miss you.

Make her naturally begin to wonder what you're doing now that you're apart (e.g. Have you gotten over her? Are you seeing another woman? Are you enjoying life more now that you aren't in constant contact with her?).

Then, when you get her on a phone call and suggest a meet up, she will much more open to the idea, rather than looking for excuses to avoid you like she has up until now.

Another mistake to avoid making when texting your ex is

2. Don't hide behind texts

If your ex always replies to your texts, it might be tempting to think, "This is good! She's not telling me to leave her alone, so it must mean something. I'll just stick to texting and wait until she gives me a sign that she's open to talking to me on the phone and then I'll call her."

Unfortunately, that rarely, if ever happens in ex back situations where the guy still loves his ex woman, but she no longer has feelings for him.

Here's the thing

If a woman still at least has some feelings for her ex, she might keep the lines of communication open with him (i.e. by responding to his texts), but she won't make it easy for him to get her back.

Instead, she will wait for him to make the first move to see if he is man enough to take the lead in the ex back process.

If he doesn't do anything and just sticks to texting her every morning and night, she will assume that he's not the real man she needs him to be (i.e. he doesn't have the balls to call her, face up to a possible rejection when trying to get her to meet up with him and then re-attract her in person).

As a result, she will then close herself off from him.

Now, that is in a case where she still initially had some feelings for him.

In many ex back cases, a woman is over her ex guy and doesn't want to be with him at all anymore.

So, when a woman is turned off by ex (e.g. because he was very insecure, needy or desperate during the break up), him hiding behind texts reminds her that he just isn't man enough for her.

As a result, she stops wanting to text with him and possibly even blocks him.

So, what should you do instead of hiding behind texts?

If your ex is currently responding to your goodnight texts, try to transition to a phone call before she goes to sleep.

For example:

You: Goodnight ex girlfriend.

Her: Lol...goodnight.

You: Hey, are you still fully awake? I wanted to ask you something before you went to sleep.

Her: What do you want to ask?

You: I have to ask it over the phone, otherwise it will sound weird.

Then, just call her and start with some humor to get her smiling and laughing.

For example you might say, â☐☐Hey, why aren't you asleep yet? Get to sleep otherwise you will have bags under your eyes and look older than you are. You still look young and pretty, so get your beauty sleep girlâ☐☐ and have a laugh with her.

Then, the thing you wanted to ask her is, â☐☐So, I was thinking we should catch up to say hello as friends tomorrow or the next day. It's not about us getting back together of course. We can just catch up to say hi for 10 minutes at 5:30pm. So, which is better for you, tomorrow or the next day?â☐☐

Make sure that you say it all in a relaxed, easy-going, confident way.

If youâ☐☐ve made her feel relaxed and happy beforehand (i.e. by making her smile and laugh), she will most likely agree to catch up.

You can then go ahead and make plans to meet up at a convenient place and time.

Note: If she doesnâ☐☐t agree to catch up, donâ☐☐t worry and start thinking things like, â☐☐She said no! It must mean weâ☐☐ll never get back together again! Iâ☐☐ve messed it all up!â☐☐ because she will pick up on your insecurity and feel turned off by it.

Instead, just maintain your confidence, laugh and say, â☐☐Okay, thatâ☐☐s fine. You must be too tired right now to make decisions about coffee. Iâ☐☐ll give you a call tomorrow when youâ☐☐re feeling rested and we can chat about it then. Remember though – itâ☐☐s just a coffee as friends. Good night sleepy head.â☐☐

Then, give her a call the next night, make her smile and laugh some more and ask her to meet up with you.

By that stage, she will most likely be feeling a lot of renewed respect and attraction for you (i.e. for being confident, emotionally strong, charismatic, funny) and will agree to catch up.

Another mistake to avoid making when texting your ex isâ☐☐!

3. Don't add in lots of cute emoticons or emojis

Itâ☐☐s okay to add in the occasional smiley face ☺☐☐ wink ☺☐☐ or playful 'tongue out' ☺☐☐ emoticon, but donâ☐☐t go overboard with them.

Why?

If a woman broke up with her guy because he wasnâ☐☐t being enough of a man for her (e.g. he was too emotionally sensitive, insecure, clingy, didn't have much purpose in life), she will feel turned off if he then texts her in the style of a woman or girl who is trying to be cute.

Look at it this wayâ☐☐!

You would never text a client, your boss or even a male friend and attach a bunch of emojis after every sentence, would you?

Of course not.

So, make sure that donâ☐☐t text your ex in that way either.

If your goal is to show her that youâ☐☐re an emotionally masculine, mature man who has learned from his mistakes and become a better man as a result, then make sure that you don't text her in a feminine way.

Instead be masculine, funny, charismatic and confident when you text her.

Use texts as a way of getting her on a phone call with you where you can properly re-attract her (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your emotional masculinity or masculine tone of voice).

Finally, if you really want to get your ex back, something you need to know is!

Sending Your Ex Good Morning and Good Night Texts isn't the Main Thing That Will Get Her Back

To get your ex back, you need to show her by your actions and the way you talk, behave and interact with her that you are now a different man now than the one she broke up with.

So many guys try for weeks or months to get an ex woman back via text, while still!

1. Not understanding the real reasons why she broke up with him

A woman won't always explain her real reasons for breaking up with a guy because she's expecting him to already know based on all her hints or the things they've been fighting over, or because she doesn't know what to say other than something doesn't feel right.

So, in a lot of cases, because a guy doesn't know the real reasons why she broke up with him, he will try to get her back by offering her the wrong things.

For example: A guy might think that being more romantic is the way to get her back and therefore send her flowers, gifts and texts every morning and night as a way of changing how she feels.

Yet, what she really broke up with him for was the fact that he was too emotionally sensitive and wasn't enough of a manly man (in his behavior, thinking, actions, vibe).

Alternatively, a guy may pour his heart out in a long letter or e-mail in the hopes that she will change her mind.

Yet, what she really broke up with him for was his inability to make her feel sexually attracted anymore because he'd become too neutral around her (i.e. more like a friend).

This is why it's very important that you understand the real, unspoken reasons why your ex broke up with you.

When you understand those reasons (she won't tell you. You have to learn this stuff), you can then make some quick changes and adjustments to regain her respect and attraction.

When she feels respect and attraction for you again, getting her back becomes so much easier and more natural.

However, if you try to get her back before reawakening her respect and attraction, she will just keep telling you that she isn't interested.

By the way!

If you have no idea how to figure out her real reasons for breaking up with you, here are some helpful questions to ask yourself now:

- Did she feel loved and appreciated, or did she feel like you were taking her for granted?
- Were you confident and emotionally strong around her, or were you insecure, needy and clingy?
- Did she feel feminine and girly in your presence, or did she feel more like a neutral friend or roommate?
- Were you lovingly dominant in the relationship with her, or did she wear the pants?
- Were you able to make her respect you without having to get angry at her or suck up to her, or did you lose control of your emotions or treat her like a princess when she was treating you badly?
- Were you loving and supportive of her goals and dreams, or did she feel like you were dragging her down or trying to hold her back from being who she really wanted to be in life?
- Could she relax and be herself around you, or did she feel like she had to hide her true self from you because you were too emotionally sensitive or conservative about certain things?
- Was she able to continually look up to you and respect you as her man, or did she lose respect for you over time?

When you fully understand her real reasons for ending the relationship, you can then change the things that she really wants you to change.

Then, when you text her, talk to her on the phone and meet up with her in person, she will be able to see for herself that you truly are a different man now.

She will automatically begin to feel respect and attraction for you again, even if she tries to fight it or hide it from you.

Her defenses naturally come down and getting her back becomes so much easier.

Another mistake that a guy might make isâ□□

2. Not making any improvements to his emotional attractiveness prior to catching up with her in person

Your emotional attractiveness is essentially about how you make her feel when she interacts with you and when she thinks about you when youâ□□re not around.

For example: A guy may have been broken up with because he was too clingy and needy.

Being clingy and needy is emotionally unattractive to a woman because it makes her feel as though she needs to take care of you.

She has to constantly show love, attention and affection or else you become insecure, irritable or even angry.

Thatâ□□s not attractive to a woman at all.

A woman doesnâ□□t want to feel like she is responsible for how you feel.

She wants you to be confident and have high self esteem, regardless of whether she shows you love, attention or affection.

So, in the case of a guy being dumped for being clingy and needy, he needs to make sure that he makes improvements to become a more emotionally independent guy prior to catching up with her.

For example: He needs to quickly find a balance between being emotionally independent enough (i.e. he wants her, but doesnâ□□t need her to be happy and successful in his life) and giving her the love and support she really needs.

Itâ€™s not about cutting off contact for weeks or months (I never, ever recommend that for ex back cases) and is about quickly changing and improving and then getting her back.

In the case of a guy who got dumped for being clingy and needy, he has to quickly become more confident.

Then, when he interacts with her and she picks up on his confidence in the way he talks, thinks, acts and responds to what she says and does, she will automatically feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the man he has become.

On the other hand, if he does what most guys do and just focuses on getting her back without changing first (e.g. he sends her good morning and good night texts, he sends her flowers and gifts), she will lose even more respect for him for not understanding how to be the man she needs and changing.

Another mistake that a guy might make isâ€¦|

3. Thinking that sending a good morning or night text will keep him on her mind and prevent her from having feelings for any new guys she meets

He might then decide to send her a good morning and good night text as a way of essentially saying to her, â€œHey, Iâ€™m still here and I still have feelings for you. Donâ€™t forget about me!!!â€

Heâ€™s hoping that she will think, â€œAwww, my ex is so sweet. No matter what happened between us, he still thinks about me every day. He must really love me. Maybe I should give him another chance! After all, finding a loving, devoted, loyal guy in this world is not easy!â€

It would be nice if women were that dumb, but they arenâ€™t.

Women are just as smart as men and if you think about it, you wouldnâ€™t fall for the old, â€œGood nightâ€ and â€œGood morningâ€ text trick yourself.

You would see right through it if you dumped a girl and she kept sending you morning and nightly texts.

In fact, you might even get a bit annoyed by it and block her number.

So, hereâ€™s what you need to realizeâ€¦|

Even though a woman might continue texting back and forth with her ex and even agree to meet up with him for coffee to say hi, if he doesnâ€™t do anything else to re-spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him, itâ€™s not going to fully prevent her from moving on.

She will still feel as though she has to leave the relationship and find a new guy who makes her feel the kind of respect, attraction and love that makes a woman want to be in a relationship.

If her ex doesnâ€™t do that, heâ€™ll send her a text one day to say â€œGood morning,â€ or â€œGood night,â€ and she will reply by saying something along the lines of, â€œLook, thanks for being so sweet and all, but Iâ€™ve met someone else now and he doesnâ€™t like it when I get a text from you every morning and night. So, out of respect for him Iâ€™m going to have to stop responding. Iâ€™d appreciate it if you donâ€™t contact me again. Bye.â€

If you donâ€™t want that to happen to you, you need to remember: Only text your ex as a way of breaking the ice and getting her on a phone call with you.

Don't hide behind texts and hope that you will magically get her back that way.

Do what works: Phone call > Meet up in person > Re-attract her > Hook up > Get the relationship back together.

When she can hear the confidence in your voice over the phone, she will feel respect for you.

When you make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again on the phone, her feelings of attraction will automatically be reawakened.

Her guard will come down and she will be more willing to meet up with you in person, where you can truly show her that you're a new man now.

Another mistake that a guy might make is

4. Thinking that being sweet via text will get her back

Women only see niceness as charming and sexy when it's coming from a confident guy, who makes her feel respect and sexual attraction in other ways.

If a woman doesn't feel respect and sexual attraction for her ex and he's being really sweet (i.e. by sending her a good morning and good night text), she's going to see right through it.

She will know that he's just trying to suck up to her because he has no idea how to re-spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him in any other way.

So, rather than make her think, He's being so sweet and nice to me. Maybe we should get back together again, a woman will just enjoy the feeling of power in knowing that he still has feelings for her and desperately wants her back.

At the same time, she will keep herself open to hooking up with another guy who can trigger her feelings of respect and sexual attraction by being the kind of confident, masculine guy that all women want.

Of course, there's nothing wrong with being nice to your ex, or even sending her a good morning and good night text from time to time if you want to.

However, just make sure that you're not using that as your main strategy to get her back because it doesn't work.

To get her back for real, you need to get her to reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love based on how you now make her feel when she's interacting with you.

The more she experiences your confidence, emotional strength and emotional masculinity, the more she will naturally want you back.

On the other hand, if your main plan to get her back is to focus on being sweet and nice to her, she simply won't have sexual desire for you.

She might appreciate your niceness and sweetness, but it won't be enough to make her want you back sexually and romantically.

Additionally, if she meets another guy who is more confident and emotionally masculine, she will feel raw, sexual desire for him and open herself up to it.

So, make sure that you are the one she craves sexually.

Without sexual attraction, you're just not going to be appealing to her in a sexual way anymore.

Focus on making her feel sexually attracted to you and guide her through the ex back process.

You will see that focussing on sexual attraction is easy, fast and it works.

My Ex is Avoiding Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

6 possible reasons why your ex is avoiding you are:

1. She wants to see how you will react

Sometimes a woman will avoid her ex as a way of testing him to see what kind of a man he has become since the break up.

For example: Will he become angry, lose confidence, seek pity from her, or will he remain calm, confident and positive?

Depending on his reaction, she will know if he's changed and become the kind of man she can be proud of, respect, feel attracted to and love, or someone she doesn't want in her life.

The question you have to ask yourself is this: Have I been behaving in ways that are making her doubt her decision to break up with me, or have I been making her feel like she made the right choice to leave me?

If you have been saying and doing the type of things that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. being confident regardless of how cold or hostile she behaves towards you, using humor to make her laugh and smile even though she doesn't want to, getting on with having a happy, fulfilled life without her) you will already have sparked her feelings for you.

Once you have sparked her feelings of respect, attraction and love, it will then begin to grow inside of her and she will find it difficult to avoid you.

You will be on her mind and she will be curious to see how she would feel if she interacted with you again,

On the other hand, if you've been saying and doing the types of things that are naturally unattractive to women (e.g. complaining to her that she is making your life a misery, begging and pleading with her to stop avoiding you, telling her how lost you are without her), she won't want anything to do with you anymore.

Another reason why your ex might be avoiding you is

2. She is trying to find a replacement guy, so she can make a clean break from you

[image: She is trying to find a replacement guy to make a clean break from you]

In some instances, a woman might still have some residual feelings for her ex, so she is worried that she will easily give him another chance if he interacts with her and makes her feel attracted again.

So, rather than interact with him and get confused about what she wants, she decides to avoid him until she finds herself another man to replace him with.

Alternatively, she might not know how to handle the pain of breaking up with him, so she avoids him.

She doesn't want to be interacting with him and dealing with all of the emotions that go along with it (e.g. sadness because things didn't work out, anger for the way he treated her, missing him, feeling confused about her love for him, wanting to be hugged by him, constantly thinking about him and the relationship), so, she avoids him and looks for a replacement guy.

She hopes that if she falls in love with some other guy, it will be a lot easier to make a clean break, forget about her ex and move on with her life.

Yet, when her ex notices that she is avoiding him, he might start texting her to find out what is going on.

For example: A guy might text his ex and say something along the lines of, â€œHey, why are you avoiding me? I really need to get hold of you. Why are you being like this? Please just give me one more chance to make things right between us.â€

Yet, she doesn't reply and isn't interested in getting back together.

Why?

If a woman has been going out of her way to avoid an ex, she's not going to be impressed that he's asking for another chance via text.

Instead, she's going to be thinking something like, â€œHe hasn't done anything to change how I feel, but all of sudden he's texting me and asking me to give him another chance. He's going to have to do better than that, otherwise I am going to move on without him.â€

If you want your ex back for real, don't waste time trying to ask her for another chance (or even hint at it) via text.

Instead, get her on a phone call with you and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Another reason why your ex might be avoiding youâ€

3. She is hoping that time apart will make you calm down and stop chasing her

When a guy gets broken up with, he might waste a lot of energy trying to convince his ex change her mind.

For example: He might send her flowers with a love letter or poem, in the hope that she will be impressed, forget all about her reasons for breaking up with him and come running back to him.

Yet, even though something like that might work in Hollywood movies, in real life, if a woman has lost touch with her feelings of love, respect and attraction for the guy, she's not going to suddenly forget her reasons for breaking up with a guy and forgive him because he sent her pretty flowers.

Instead, she's likely going to see it for what it is (i.e. a desperate attempt to get her back) and continue avoiding him in the hope that he gives up and leaves her alone.

So, if you want your ex to stop avoiding you and open herself up to the idea of getting back together again, you need to forget about being romantic for the moment.

Why?

Romance is only appreciated by a woman when the feelings are mutual (i.e. you and her attracted to each other, in love, respectful of each other).

If the feelings aren't mutual, women feel annoyed, resentful and irritated by romantic gestures from a guy.

So, if you want her to appreciate your romantic, loving side, you need to make sure that the feelings are mutual first.

How can you do that?

Interact with her and show her that you've changed and become the man she always wanted you to be.

For example: You maintain your confidence around her, even when she tries to make you feel nervous or insecure by being distant or hostile towards you.

You use humor to break through her defenses and make her feel at ease when she interacts with you.

You take the dominant, leading role in the ex back process (i.e. you are the more emotionally courageous one, you make things happen, you remain confident no matter how cold or distant she is being), so she can relax and be a totally feminine woman around you.

You make her feel understood because you now understand the secret, subtle reasons why she broke up with you (e.g. you were too emotionally sensitive) and have already fixed that about yourself.

When she starts to feel attracted to you again, she will stop feeling the need to avoid you and will start feeling drawn to you in a way that feels interesting, exciting and new to her.

Another reason why your ex might be avoiding you is

4. She is already seeing a new guy

Sometimes a woman doesn't want to tell her ex that she has already seeing another guy.

[image: How can you already be seeing a new guy?!]

She doesn't want to face up to a potentially uncomfortable situation (e.g. her ex begs and pleads with her) or even physically dangerous situation (e.g. her ex gets physically aggressive or potentially even violent) when she tells him about it.

So, she keeps quiet, avoids him and hopes that he eventually gives up and leaves her alone.

Of course, you might not be the sort of guy that would react in that way to a woman, but many guys do.

For example: If a woman tells her ex that she's seeing a new guy, he might try and talk her out of her decision by saying things like, "How can you do this? How can you possibly be with another man already? Didn't our love mean anything to you? You never even gave us a chance to try and work things out. You just moved on and forgot about everything we had together. Please just give me a chance to show you that our love is stronger than anything else you will find with another guy."

Alternatively, he might react badly and cause a big scene (e.g. shouting at her, calling her names, threatening to hurt her new guy).

So, rather than risk that happening to her, she decides to not tell him about the new guy and just avoid him altogether.

Then, when he eventually gets hold of her weeks or months later (e.g. on a phone call, bumps into her at an unexpected place) and asks, “Hey, where have you been? I’ve been trying to get hold of you for ages. I want to talk to you about our relationship,” she can say, “Sorry. I’ve been so busy with work/studies. I never realized that you were trying to reach me. Look, it has been so long since we spoke last that I honestly thought you’d moved on and forgotten about me. I’m seeing someone else now. I hope you understand. Now, please leave me alone. I wish you all the best.”

Alternatively, if she doesn’t want to risk telling him about the new guy, she will just say that she has been busy, isn’t interested in a relationship with anyone right now and wants him to leave her alone and move on.

Another reason why your ex might be avoiding you!

5. She is immature and doesn’t know how to end a relationship in a loving, respectful manner

[image: She is immature and doesn't know how to end a relationship in a loving, respectful manner]

If a woman is young, doesn’t have much (or any) experience with relationships and break ups, or is emotionally immature, she might not know how to handle the break up like a mature adult.

So, rather than maintain a friendship or at least be open to talking to her ex in a neutral way, she simply cuts him out of her life completely.

It doesn’t matter how great their relationship was or how much of a good guy he was to her.

She doesn’t know how to handle the situation, so she ignores him and avoids him completely.

A final reason why your ex might be avoiding you is!

6. You have scared her off by desperately or frantically trying to get her back

[image: She is turned off by the approach you used to get her back]

Sometimes the shock of being broken up with causes a guy to overreact and behave in ways that would ordinarily make him cringe.

For example: He shows up at her house or workplace uninvited and begs or pleads for another chance, or he gets her friends or family involved by calling and asking them to convince her to contact him.

He’s hoping that if he can just see her or talk to her again, she’ll suddenly realize that she misses him, avoiding him was a mistake and they should now get back together.

Yet, rather than convincing her to give him another chance, that type of behavior just makes a guy look desperate, which turns her off even more.

Alternatively, she starts to feel as though he’s stalking her, which makes her feel creeped out and afraid.

So, if your ex is avoiding you right now, it may be because you scared her off with your over the top, frantic or desperate behavior after the break up.

Fortunately, you can recover from it and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

For example: When you get her on a phone call, you can say something like, “Hey Rhonda, this is your crazy, stalker ex boyfriend speaking...I just wanted to say that I’ve finally come to my senses” and have a laugh.

Then add in something like, “I don’t expect you to ever take me back, but I just wanted to say sorry for acting like such a creep/loser/asshole. It was silly of me to behave in that way.”

By saying something like that to her, she can see that you realize your mistake and have the emotional maturity to accept it and learn from it.

As a result, she naturally feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Then, she suddenly stops trying to avoid you and becomes open to texting you, talking to you on the phone and seeing you in person.

Of course, some women are easier to get back than others.

If your ex is a bit of a hard case, you simply need to attract her in additional ways when you interact with her.

It’s very easy to do.

The more ways you trigger her feelings of respect and attraction during a conversation or interaction, the more she feels for you.

She stops wanting to avoid you and starts wanting to get back with you.

To her, the relationship isn’t over now.

She feels something for you again and wants to explore that feeling.

All you need to do is be confident and guide her back into a relationship.

My Girlfriend Said That She Feels Guilty For Breaking Up With Me But is Sticking to Her Decision

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your girlfriend said that she feels guilty for breaking up with you but is sticking to her decision:

1. Your approach to getting her back has turned her off even more

[image: Your approach to getting her back has turned her off even more]

Sometimes, the shock of being broken up with can cause a guy to panic.

He might frantically say to himself, “I can’t believe this is happening! She is the love of my life and I’m going to lose her if I don’t do something right away to make her change her mind. I don’t care what it takes, I have to convince her not to go through with the break up!”

Unfortunately, that kind of thinking usually causes a guy to behave in unattractive ways, which then turns her off even more.

For example: A guy might

- Beg and plead for another chance (e.g. “Please baby, don’t do this to us! I beg you! please don’t go. I’ll do anything if you change your mind!”).
- Constantly tell her about his feelings and needs (e.g. “This can’t be happening. Don’t you realize how much you mean to me? Without you I’m lost. You mean the world to me!”).
- Ask her to tell him what she wants (e.g. “I don’t know what I did to bring this on. Just tell me what you want me to change and I’ll do it. Anything you want me to do, I will do it. Just say the word and it’s done!”).
- Try to use her feelings of guilt to make her feel even sorrier for him (e.g. “Does it make you happy to see me suffer this way? How can you be so cruel? You say that you feel guilty, but what does that give me? Nothing. We’re still broken up. I need you back!”).

Yet, rather than make a woman think, “Not only is he willing to beg and plead and do anything I ask of him for another chance, but he’s also so lost and unhappy without me. Wow! I feel so flattered that a guy will fall apart in this way over me. I mean, who doesn’t want an emotionally sensitive, emotionally weak guy for a boyfriend? That’s a dream guy! Every girl wants a wimpy guy! So, I can’t let him go. I’m changing my decision about being broken up and giving him another chance right now,” she’s just going to pull away from him even more.

Why?

A woman’s attraction to a guy is based mostly on his ability to make her feel like she can look up to him and respect him as her man.

[image: How can you not want to give me another chance after all we've been through?! I love you!]

Please!]

So, when a guy is coming across as being emotionally weak and needy (i.e. by begging, pleading, pouring his heart out and asking her to tell him what to do to be the man that she needs), heâ€™s actually turning her off and making her lose respect for him even more.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦|

If you want to get your girlfriend back, what you should be doing is actively making her feel respect and sexual attraction for you again, so she naturally becomes unsure about her decision to break up with you.

On the other hand, if you continue turning her off with your behavior, you canâ€™t expect her to feel motivated about changing her mind, right?

So, make sure that you are approaching the ex back process correctly from now on.

Remember: Attraction first and everything else after that.

Don't try to get another chance with her if you haven't even re-attracted her.

Make the feelings mutual first and then guide her back into a relationship.

Another reason why your girlfriend might be sticking to her decision to remain broken up isâ€¦|

2. She doesn't think you even know what you need to change to re-attract her

[image: She doesn't think you even know what to change to re-attract her]

Quite often, when a woman breaks up with a guy, the first words out of his mouth are something along the lines of, â€œNo, please don't do this. I promise that I will change. Just tell me what you want me to do. I'll do anything you say if you give me one more chance.â€

Yet, rather than make her change her mind, a woman will think something like, â€œAfter all this time together and all the arguments and fights, he still doesn't have a clue what I want him to change. I realize now that if I do give him another chance, he will be the same guy and I will need to help him, teach him and guide him for life. I don't want to take on that role. I want a man who understands how to be the man in a relationship and how to maintain my feelings of respect, attraction and love. I mean, I do feel guilty for breaking up with him because he really is a nice guy, but I'm sticking to my decision because he simply doesn't understand what I want from him. I don't want to take on the responsibility of shaping him into the man that he needs to become.â€

A woman doesn't want to have to take her guy by the hand and lead him through the steps of becoming and being the man that she needs him to be.

Even if she feels bad about her decision, she would rather just break up with him and find herself a man who knows how to give her what she wants, than stick around and try to make things work with a guy who needs her to train him and shape him into a real man.

So, if you want your girlfriend to change her decision about being broken up, let her experience the changes in you when you next interact with her.

When she experiences the changes in you, her feelings will change.

She will feel differently about you (i.e. more respectful, more attracted and more in love than she has been since the break up).

So, what changes can you make?

Some of the most common things that a woman wants to see a guy change are for him to:

- Be more confident and believe in himself and in his value to her.
- Have more focus and direction in his life.
- Stop being so wimpy and weak-minded.
- Be more emotionally supportive of her and her dreams and desires.
- Want the same things that she does (e.g. to settle down, have more fun together, get serious about the future).
- Stop being jealous and controlling.
- Make her feel feminine and girly in comparison to his improved, increased masculine energy (e.g. he now talks, behaves and acts in a more masculine way).
- Be a consistent man, rather than letting her down all the time by putting in a half-hearted effort into what he does.
- Be the more emotionally dominant one in the relationship.

When you truly understand where you went wrong with your girlfriend, you can then change the things that she really wants you to change.

This is important.

So many guys lose their opportunity to get an ex girlfriend back because they offer her changes that she doesn't even care about.

For example: She broke up with her boyfriend because he was too emotionally sensitive, but he's promising to treat her better, listen more and be more available to her.

If he offers that, she's not going to be interested.

You have to truly understand where you went wrong and start making some changes, improvements or adjustments in those areas.

Then, when you interact with her, she will be able to see the changes in you based on the way now talk, behave and interact with her.

When she sees that, she will be impressed because one of the most attractive things to a woman is a guy's ability to change and improve, without needing her help and support.

If a guy is a self-improving, self-made man, she can relax around him and respect him, because he doesn't need her help, support or encouragement to be who he is.

He knows how to be a real man and he is living life that way, whether she gives him a compliment about it or not.

Of course, when you are that kind of man, your woman will compliment you all the time.

It's just that she doesn't want to get the feeling that you need her compliments, support or encouragement.

She wants you to be a man who stands on his own two feet without needing her help.

When your ex can see that you are that kind of man, it will get rid of her doubts about you.

She will then feel surges of respect and attraction for you again.

As a result, she will begin to question her decision to remain broken up with you.

If you simply continue to make her feel attracted during the interaction, her guard will come down, her heart will open back up to you and you will be able to get her back.

Another reason why your girlfriend might be sticking to her decision is becauseâ€¦!

3. She has already met someone else and is using him to get over you and move on

Sometimes a woman will be ready to move on very quickly after a break up.

So, her ex is wasting time feeling sad, rejected and hoping that she will miss him and come back, sheâ€™s already meeting new guys and trying to move on.

If she gets herself a new guy, she will focus on all of his positive qualities and compare them to her ex's negative qualities to help herself move on.

For example: If her ex was too emotionally sensitive, sheâ€™ll use her new guyâ€™s emotional strength to feel happy about her decision to end the relationship.

If her ex treated her more like a neutral friend than an attractive woman, sheâ€™ll enjoy feeling sexy and desirable again with a guy who looks at her with lust.

If her ex allowed her to dominate him, sheâ€™ll relax and allow her new guy to take the lead in the relationship.

If her new guy is confident and able to take the lead, she will keep telling herself that her ex just wasn't man enough for her.

Then, when her ex contacts her and says something like, â€œPlease give me another chance. Letâ€™s try and work things out. Iâ€™ll do whatever it takes. Why donâ€™t we go to counseling? Maybe that will help us. I honestly think believe our love is worth fighting for. Will you at least try?â€ she will be ready to say something like, â€œI feel guilty for breaking up with you, but I'm sticking to my decision. Please accept that and leave me alone.â€

Another reason why your girlfriend might be sticking to her decision is becauseâ€¦!

4. She's given you plenty of chances before

In most relationships, a woman won't just break up with her guy before sheâ€™s given him at least a few chances to change and improve.

For example: If a guy is too much of a loner, a woman might try to encourage him to get out more. Why?

A woman has a natural instinct to have a support system around her, rather than feeling like her and her man are essentially on their own in this world.

So, if her instincts are urging her to build a social circle, she might say something like, â€œWhy donâ€™t you invite some of your coworkers over for dinner this weekend? Iâ€™ll cook up something nice and we can have a bit of fun. It would be great to hang out with some friends for a change, rather than just the two of us all the time.

If he listens to her and makes the effort to build some relationships outside of the one he has with her, her feelings of respect and attraction for him will deepen.

However, if she notices that no matter what she says to him, he keeps saying, No, or What for? You're more than enough for me. I don't want other people around. Besides, no one is as much fun as you are, she will begin to lose respect for him and her feelings of love and attraction will begin to fade.

If he notices the changes in her (e.g. she stops being as affectionate, seems upset at him all the time, complains about being bored), he might try to appease her by saying something like, I'm sorry. I know I haven't been trying to make friends, but I promise to make more of an effort. Please don't give up on me.

She might then say to herself, Okay, great. He sounds like he means it this time, but if he doesn't follow through, I am not giving him another chance.

If nothing changes, she will eventually feel like she just has to break up with him to teach him a lesson.

If he then comes crying to her and saying, I stuffed up! I didn't keep my promises to you, but if you just give me one last chance, I will do whatever it takes to change and make you happy, rather than believe him, she will likely be thinking, I've given him more chances than he deserves. Clearly he doesn't want to change and I can't force him. It's sad because he is a great guy in so many other ways and I do care for him, but I can't stick around with someone who keeps breaking his word to me.

So, if your girlfriend said that she feels guilty for breaking up with you, but is sticking to her decision, it may be because you've made important promises to her that you didn't keep.

The only way to change her mind now, is to interact with her and show her that you've already started to change and improve the things you and her used to fight about.

Be the new, improved you around her (e.g. when you're talking on the phone or seeing each other face-to-face) and let her feel a flood of respect and attraction for you again.

If you do that, changing her decision about breaking up becomes something that she wants to do, rather than feeling like you are forcing her into it.

Finally, another possible reason why your girlfriend might be sticking to her decision is because

5. She doesn't feel enough respect for you to change her mind

One of the main reasons why a woman will lose respect for a guy is when she feels more emotionally dominant than him.

In other words, he's just too soft for her.

He's too much of a wimp, nice guy or is too gentle or reserved for her.

She feels too powerful for him.

Then, when she breaks up with him, he doesn't know what else to do, but continue being the wimpy, insecure guy he has been.

For example: He says things like, I'm sorry! Just give me a chance and I promise I'll do anything you ask. You name it and I'll do it for you if it will make you happy. Please don't break up with me.

He hopes that giving her even more power over him will make her feel satisfied.

Yet, that's not actually what she wants.

She wants him to show her his emotional strength and emotional masculinity, so she can relax into feeling like a feminine woman around him.

If he shows her more emotional weakness, she feels like she is in a masculine or dominant position (e.g. like a mother, big sister, older friend).

She doesn't want that.

She wants to feel the sexual attraction that comes from feeling girly in comparison to her man's emotional masculinity (e.g. his balls, his courage, his confidence under pressure).

So, if you want your girlfriend back for real, you have to commit to the idea of being a much stronger man that you've ever been before.

I'm not talking about lifting weights and building physical strength.

I'm talking about the most attractive strength of all; emotional strength.

That is what women really care about.

A man's emotional strength makes a woman feel respect, attraction and love for him.

It also makes her feel safe around him, knowing that no matter what happens in life, he is one of the rare men who is strong enough to handle it while remaining calm, confident and in control.

That's what a woman really wants.

So, if you want her back, don't waste time ignoring her and hoping that she contacts you and says, Okay. I feel better now. I've decided to change my decision about being broken up.

That's not going to happen in 99% of cases.

What works is when you actively make your ex feel attracted to you during interactions.

You interact with her and display traits and behaviors that naturally attract women.

Then, rather than saying, I feel guilty about breaking up with you, but I'm sticking to my decision, she will be the one asking you, I think I made a mistake. Should we give our relationship another chance?

My Ex Pulls Me in By Showing Interest and Then Pushes Me Away By Saying She's Not Ready

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex pulls you in by showing interest and then pushes you back by saying that she's not ready, are:

1. She is trying to buy herself some extra time to find a replacement guy

[image: She is trying to buy herself some more time to find a replacement guy]

Sometimes a woman doesn't like the idea of being without a man, so when she breaks up with a guy, she will keep him around until she finds another man to replace him with.

For example: She might continue texting him and saying things like, â€œHey, what are you up to today? I was just making spaghetti bolognese and I remembered that it was your favorite,â€ or â€œHey, I just found some old photos we took on my birthday last year. We looked so happy back. I miss that,â€ or simply, â€œI miss your laugh sometimesâ€ just thought I'd say thatâ€ as a way of keeping him hanging around feeling hopeful that they will get back together.

Naturally, when a guy sees that, he starts thinking, â€œCool! She still seems interested. I'm close to getting her back now. I should arrange a catch up.â€

He might then text her or call her and suggest catching up, only for her to say something like, â€œUmmmâ€ I don't think that's such a good idea. I don't know if I'm ready yet. Give me some more time.â€

Alternatively, she may agree to meet up with him and then cancel at the last minute by saying, â€œI'm sorry. I thought I was ready to see you again, but I just feel too vulnerable at the moment. I'm not ready. I need more time.â€

The guy is then left thinking, â€œWTF? One minute she pulls me in by showing interest and then pushes me back by saying she's not ready yet. What gives? What is her problem?â€

In the meantime, she's using that time apart to find herself another guy, without having to worry about her ex getting in the way (i.e. because she's been making him believe that he still has a chance with her).

If your ex is messing you around like that, you need to clearly understand one thing.

Getting back together again is not something that she has to control.

You can take control of the ex back process by making her feel attracted to you again.

Don't let her control the ex back process.

If you do that, she will almost certainly play hard to get, or she will use the time apart to find a replacement guy and move on without you.

Don't worry about the fact that she is giving you mixed messages.

If you worry about that or focus on it, you're letting her lead the ex back process.

You have to be more confident than that.

You've got to be the more emotionally courageous one who makes the reconciliation happen, regardless of the mixed messages she is giving you.

When you focus on reactivating her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, she won't be able to resist you for very long.

Even if she tries to tell herself that she's over you, her heart will be pulling her back to you naturally.

Attraction is an automatic reaction that men and women have to each other.

Trigger it properly and she won't be pushing you away anymore.

Another possible reason why she is behaving that way is because

2. You keep making attraction mistakes that turn her off

[image: You keep making attraction mistakes that turn her off]

Sometimes a woman will interact with her ex (e.g. via text, over the phone, in person) and initially begin to feel drawn to him again.

Yet, as the interaction continues, the guy keeps making attraction mistakes and slowly turns her off.

Her texts then stop, or she gets off the call or leaves the in person interaction and says that she needs more time to think.

For example: Here are some common attraction mistakes that guys make when interacting with an ex woman:

- Rather than showing her his confidence by laughing at her attempts to make him feel insecure (e.g. she is being cold and distant, teasing him, saying that she's having fun being single, talking about other guys who like her now), he becomes upset, overly emotional, tense or even angry.
- Rather than make her feel feminine and girly in his presence, he stays on his best behavior and ends up turning her off because he lacks that all-important masculine edge that attraction women.
- Rather than take the lead in the interaction and gently guide her back into feelings of respect, attraction and love, he lets her dominate him emotionally (e.g. she keeps bringing up his past mistakes and he apologizes over and over again, she disagrees with any decisions he makes, such as where to sit if they're meeting up at a coffee shop).
- Rather than just texting a little bit and then getting on a call to arrange a meet up, he keeps texting and texting until she eventually loses interest. His constant texts end up making him look desperate, lost or lonely without her.

She then goes cold and starts pushing him away and he wonders something like, Why does my ex pull me in by showing interest and then push me away again?

The answer is simple.

He's not making her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with him (i.e. respectful of him, sexually attracted, in love).

Instead, he's turning her off with his insecure behavior and she just doesn't want to keep putting up with that.

How about you?

Have you been turning your ex off by the way you've been communicating with her and interacting with her?

Have you been making her feel like you want her way more than she wants you?

Is she feeling turned off by your need for her?

Have you been changing your approach to attract her in new, exciting ways, or have you been using the same old approach that got you dumped in the first place?

By making some attractive adjustments to your behavior and the way you talk and interact with her (e.g. being much more confident, standing up to her in a dominant, but loving way, using humor to break through her defenses), she will start to feel very drawn to you.

Rather than reeling you in and then pushing you away, she opens up to getting back together with you and follows through on it all the way.

Another possible reason why she is behaving that way is becauseâ€¦!

3. She doesn't believe that you can instantly change and give her the attraction experience she secretly wants

One of the main things that a woman looks out for when she interacts with her ex after a break up, is whether or not he has genuinely changed or improved.

If she notices that he has made some improvements to the things that caused her to break up with him in the first place, she will instantly feel a surge of respect and attraction for him.

Her guard will then come down and she will stop feeling the need to push him away when he's getting to close to her again.

On the other hand, if she realizes that he's still stuck at the same level he was at before, she will just pull away from him and try to move on because she doesn't want to encounter the same old relationship experience again.

She also doesn't want to give him another chance, only to go through another painful or annoying break up.

Now that they've broken up, she's going to remain broken up unless he can convince her otherwise. â€¦and by convince, I don't mean with words.

I mean by his actions.

As the old saying goes, "Actions speak louder than words."

You've really got to make changes to yourself (e.g. how you feel, talk, behave, act) to let her see that you really are different now.

If you can do that, you won't even need to waste time or energy trying to convince her that you've changed because she will see it for herself.

So, if your ex keeps pulling you in by showing interest and then pushes you back by saying she's not ready, it could be because you haven't yet fully shown her that you're a new and improved man yet.

As a result, she still has her doubts about you is and is keeping her guard up.

How can you fix that?

Firstly you need to understand her real, more subtle reasons for breaking up with you and then begin making some adjustments, improvements or changes.

Secondly, you need to interact with her and let her experience those changes in you, so she can decide for herself that things really are different now.

For example: Some of the changes a woman might want to see in her ex are that:

- He displays more manly behavior around her, rather than being so emotionally sensitive, insecure or self-doubting.
- He now has goals and dreams that he's working towards independent of his relationship with her. This is especially important for guys who got dumped for being needy, or for lacking direction in life.
- He is more emotionally dominant than her now, so she naturally begins to respect him and treat him better.
- He is affectionate and loving without being too soppy, wimpy or overly romantic about it.
- He is confident and has high self-esteem.
- He believes in his attractiveness and value to her.
- He makes her feel like a beautiful, desirable, feminine woman in his masculine presence, rather than making her feel like just a friend now.

Those are just a few examples of what makes a woman feel deep respect, attraction and love for a man.

Once you understand what your ex really wants you to change about yourself, you can then make the right changes, adjustments or improvements to yourself to win her back.

When she starts getting the attraction experience that she always wanted from you (e.g. you used to be insecure and emotionally sensitive, but are so confident and emotionally strong now, so she feels more girly and feminine around you), she naturally feels like it would be good for her to give the relationship another try.

She then stops pushing you back because there's nothing to fight against anymore.

You are the man that she always wanted you to be and she can now relax and enjoy falling in love with you all over again.

Another possible reason why she is behaving that way is because!

4. She's having a hard time dealing with the pain of the break up

If a woman is inexperienced with relationships or if this is her first big break up, she might not be able to handle all the painful emotions (e.g. loss, disappointment, heartache, yearning, regret) associated with losing the guy that she once really loved.

She may say to herself, I can't stand being alone and feeling sad like this. Maybe I should just give him another chance for a while and see how things go.”

Then, the next time he interacts with her (e.g. by giving her a call or seeing her in person), she starts to show strong interest in getting back together.

Yet, minutes, hours or days later, she realizes that although getting over a break up really sucks, settling for a guy who doesn’t fully spark her feelings of respect and attraction for him is probably going to be worse.

So, she says something like, “Sorry. I’ve changed my mind. I’m just not ready to get back with you yet,” and closes herself off once again.

When that happens, it’s only natural that a guy will feel confused and possibly even a bit annoyed, because he feels that she is now playing games with him.

Yet, in most cases, she isn’t.

In pretty much every ex back case that I’ve worked on where a woman was giving a guy mixed signals, he simply wasn’t making her feel enough respect and sexual attraction for him.

So, she just wasn’t feeling motivated and inspired enough to give him another chance.

Rather than focusing on re-attracting her, the guy was simply hoping that her past feelings for him would be enough to re-start the relationship.

It was only when he changed his approach and started actively making her have sexual and romantic feelings for him again that she stopped playing games and gave him a chance.

So, if your ex keeps pulling you in and then pushing you back, it might be because you haven’t actively been doing enough to spark her feelings for you again.

You can start doing that from now though.

When you do, her indecision will naturally melt away and before she knows it, she will be back in your arms again, happy, loving you and looking forward to a future with you.

Finally, another possible reason why she has been showing interest and then pushing you away is that

5. She’s just testing to see how you will react and respond

[image: She is just testing to see how you will react and respond]

If a woman broke up with a guy because he was too emotionally sensitive, she may show interest and then push him back to see how he will react.

She wants to see if he has woken up and learned from his mistakes, or if he is still the same.

So, if he starts begging and pleading with her and saying things like, “Please stop doing this to me. I love you more than anything. I can’t handle the thought of us possibly getting back together one minute, only to have you push me away the next. I really love you and you know that, but you’re just messing with my feelings. Why are you doing that? Does it make you happy to see me suffer like this? Please stop the games and give me a chance to show you that things will be better this time. I promise that I will do whatever you want me to do to make you happy,” she will see that nothing about him has changed.

He is still being the same old, emotionally sensitive guy that she broke up with.

On the other hand, if he remains confident, laughs and says (in a joking manner), “Hey, no problem if you aren’t ready to get back together right now. Take all the time you need. How about 10 years? Maybe 20? Will that be enough? What the heck, I’m feeling generous today, so let’s give you 50 years to work out if you will us one more chance. By then you’ll be old and wrinkly and wearing big floral, grandma dresses, but maybe I’ll be into that sort of thing by then and we can go get some coffee together. Who knows?” she will see that he’s not the needy, insecure, emotionally sensitive guy he was before.

He maintained his cool, remained confident and lovingly made fun of her for being so indecisive, rather than sulking and seeking pity from her like the guy did in the previous example.

So, if he remains confident and gets her laughing in that way, she won’t be able to stop herself from feeling surges of respect and attraction for him.

When that happens, she stops feeling the need to be push him away and starts wanting to experience the new and improved him in a relationship.

You can make your ex feel that way about you.

It’s actually very easy to do.

You’ve just got to use a different approach to attraction than you’ve been using up until this point.

Your approach hasn’t been working, so if you are ready to try something new and get her back, now is the time.

My Ex Always Cancels When We Arrange to Meet Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

7 possible reasons why your ex always cancels when you arrange a meet up with her, are:

1. She knows that you still haven't changed

When your ex talks to you on the phone and hears your voice, she may begin think, “I think seems okay between us. Maybe meeting up with him won't be so bad after all. I probably should just give him a chance.”

Yet, after she hangs up the phone and starts analyzing the conversation, she changes her mind because she realizes that you're most likely still going to be making the same kinds of mistakes the lead to the break up in the first place.

For example: One of the reasons why a woman might break up with a guy is because he has no purpose in life (i.e. he's going nowhere, has no prospects for the future, just wants to hang out with her and waste his spare time doing nothing or playing video games, drinking, watching TV, browsing social media and so on).

If he's going to get her back, he will need to change his approach and start being a more purpose driven guy (i.e. decide on his biggest goals, dreams and ambitions in life and start making progress towards them).

To find out if he has change, his ex might ask, “So, what have you been up to lately?” and if he then answers, “Oh, not much. Things are pretty much the same as they were before we broke up. I'm still at the same job. It's okay I guess. How about you, what have you been doing?” she will see that he hasn't really changed.

If she still has feelings for him, she might agree to a meet up when they're talking, but after the call, she will think about it and decide not to attend.

She may think something like, “He's not the go-getter guy that I want. He's just sitting around waiting for his life to begin, rather than making things happen. Even though I still miss him at times, it seems as though meeting up with him will be a waste of time. I need to accept that it's over. He's not the right guy for me.”

She then sends him a text to cancel, or says that she can't meet up with him the next time they talk.

He is then left feeling confused and wondering why she always seems to cancel when they arrange to meet up.

He doesn't realize that she needs to sense real changes in him first, otherwise it just feels like a waste of time for her to meet up with him.

So, if you want your ex to stop canceling on you every time you arrange a meet up, here's what you need to do!

- Understand her real reasons for breaking up with you

[image: She doesn't want to help him get her back]

When breaking up, most women give vague excuses like, “I just don’t have feelings for you anymore” or, “It just isn’t working out between us,” to avoid helping you get her back.

So, it’s very important that you figure out her real reasons why she broke up with you.

That way, you will be showing her changes in yourself that she actually cares about.

For example: A woman said that she was over the relationship, but didn’t tell her guy, “Look, you’re just too emotionally sensitive. I’ve had enough of having to be gentle with you and having to suppress my personality to stop you from being insecure. I want to be free to be my real self, rather than softening myself up to make an insecure guy feel okay about himself. I need a man with more balls than you. I’m over trying to help you feel good about yourself.”

If the guy then tries to get her back by promising to be nicer to her, treat her better and listen more, she’s going to be thinking, “He just doesn’t get it. He doesn’t even know what I want. He doesn’t understand me. He’s not the right guy for me.”

So, make sure that you get clear on her real reasons for breaking up with you and then

- Change or adjust those things about yourself

You don’t have to become perfect to get her back.

Instead, you just need to show her that you’ve become better than before.

Let her see that you understand her real reasons for breaking up with you and have already changed, adjusted or improved.

- Let her experience the new and improved you

Whether it’s via text, e-mail, on social media, over the phone, or in person, you have to let her get the sense that you really have changed.

When she sees for herself that you’re no longer the same guy she broke up with, she will naturally begin to feel some respect and attraction for you again.

Then, meeting up with you again actually starts to feel like something she really wants to do.

So, if you’ve been trying to get her back before actually changing, you need to stop that.

It doesn’t work.

It can work initially when a relationship is beginning to break up, but not when a woman has had enough and no longer wants to be with a guy.

If you want her back for real, you’ve got to start making some real changes, improvements or adjustments.

Another reason why your ex always cancels when you arrange to meet up could be because

2. She’s not feeling enough attraction when she talks to you

[image: She's not feeling enough attraction when she talks to you]

If a guy wants his woman to feel excited about seeing him in person, he has to spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for him first.

If he talks to her on the phone and behaves in ways that continue to turn her off (e.g. heâs being insecure, begging and pleading with her for another chance, asking her what she wants him to do to make her change her mind, seem desperate or lost without her), she isnât going to be in a hurry to see him again.

You have to be displaying traits that actually attract her, otherwise it just feels unfair for her to have to give you another chance because you want it.

In other words, the feelings have to start to be mutual for her to want you back.

It can't just be about you respecting her, feeling attracted to her, loving her and wanting her back because of that.

You've got to make her want it too.

When you make her feel sparks of attraction for you, her whole perspective on you and the relationship changes.

However, if you try to get her back without improving your ability to attract her, she's going to remain closed up.

In some cases, a woman won't really know how to say, "No" to her ex when he asks for a meet up, so she just says, "Yes" on the phone or via text and has every intention of canceling closer to the date or on the day.

She may think something like, âI know that I should tell him how I'm feeling, but itâs much easier to accept a meet up and then cancel, rather than have to explain why I donât want to see him.â

Naturally, when a woman does that, a guy might get angry or annoyed at her and possibly ask something like, âWhat is wrong with you? Do you actually get a kick out of messing me around? Why are you being like this? You've changed into a completely different person? You never used to cancel on me. Why are you doing this? Just be honest with me. Stick to your promises and stop messing me around like this.â

Alternatively, he might try to seek pity for how bad she is making him feel, by saying things like, âIâm trying to make things right between us, but I canât do that if you keep canceling on me? I know that I stuffed up in our relationship, but that doesn't mean you should be treating me like this. I feel happy that we're meeting up and then you kill me by canceling at the last minute.â

Heâs hoping that she will feel bad for treating him that way, stick to her word and meet up with him.

Yet, when a guy loses control of his emotions and becomes angry, or tries to make his ex feel pity for him, rather than make her change her mind, she simply uses his reaction as another reason to avoid seeing him again.

So, whatever you do, donât get angry or try to use the pity card on your ex as a way of pressuring her to meet up with you.

The only way she will really want to see you again is if you re-spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction.

When you do that, she begins to have romantic feelings for you again and it's only natural that she will want to meet up with you and get more of that in person.

To make her feel that way, you need to start by interacting with her over the phone and displaying traits that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. emotional masculinity, confidence, the ability to make her laugh when she is being cold or distant, charisma, charm).

In some cases, all a guy needs to do is simply be a lot more confident than he usually is and the woman will take notice, feel some respect and attraction and be willing to meet up with him.

It really depends on how bad your break up is.

Each situation is different and requires a different level of attraction to get the woman to want to give her ex another chance.

Another reason why your ex always cancels when you arrange to meet up is becauseâ€¦

3. You've been arranging the meets up via text, rather than via phone call

Sometimes a guy might be worried that his ex won't want to talk to him on the phone, so he will ask her to meet up with him via text instead.

Yet, here's the problemâ€¦

Via text, it's simply too easy for a woman to say, â€œYeah, sure. Let's meet up,â€ even though she already knows that she's going to cancel on him at the last minute.

Why would she do that?

When a woman receives a text from her ex, all she is looking at is a bunch of words on a screen.

Since she can't hear his voice and experience the changes he's made to himself, her only frame of reference is all the negative stuff about him that she remembers him doing near the end of the relationship and after the break up.

So, rather than think, â€œWhat a great text! He's clearly improved and changed, so seeing him in person will be a great experience. I can't wait!â€ she's usually thinking, â€œDoes he honestly think I want to see him again after everything he put me through? Not to mention the fact that he doesn't even have the balls to call me and talk to me now. It's just one more sign that he hasn't changed and isn't the man for me. He's just hiding behind texts and hoping that he can sneak his way back into my heart and life. No thanks.â€

Why will she think that way?

There's no real evidence that he has changed.

It's just a text message.

Anyone can seem cool, confident and happy via text, but it's a completely different story on the phone and in person.

A woman knows that, just like you know it.

So, don't waste time trying to get your ex to meet up with you via text and then feel annoyed when she cancels on you.

Instead, just call her and let her experience the new you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, flirting with her to make her feel feminine and girly, being confident when she tries to put you off by being cold and aloof, letting her sense your emotional strength and emotional masculinity by the way you talk about things and react to her).

The more attracted she feels to the new you over the phone, the more likely it is that she will actually show up when she agrees to see you again.

[image: Fully re-attract her and get her back]

Then, when you meet up with her in person, you can fully re-attract her and get her back into a relationship with you.

Another reason why your ex always cancels when you arrange to meet up is becauseâ€¦

4. She wants to test your confidence

Sometimes, a woman will agree to meet up with her and then cancel at the last minute, as a way testing his confidence.

This usually happens when a woman dumps a guy who had low self-esteem and didn't feel worthy of her.

She wants to see if he is going to put up with her bad behavior just to hopefully get to spend some more time with her.

If she keeps canceling and he keeps putting up with it, without really saying anything about her horrible behavior, she will think something like, â€œUrgh! Heâ€™s just so spineless! Doesn't he have a backbone? Where are his balls? He's a wimp. I can't believe that he let me push him around this way. I'm not going to meet up with him if he's being like this. What would be the point? Heâ€™s not man enough for a girl me thatâ€™s for sure.â€œ

On the other hand, if the guy is confident and believes in himself and in his value to her, he won't let her walk all over him by canceling all the time.

If she cancels on him once, rather than think, â€œDid I do something wrong? What if she doesn't ever want to see me again?!â€œ he just remains calm, assumes sheâ€™s busy and calls her a few days later to reschedule.

Then, if she cancels on him again, he might say to her in a confident, but playful manner, â€œWow, even the president doesn't cancel appointments as much as you do. I appreciate that youâ€™re busy, but Iâ€™m busy too girl. So, if you want to meet up, then great. Letâ€™s do it. No excuses this time. If youâ€™re too busy, take all the time you need before you agree to catch up with me, but no more of this canceling stuff.â€œ

He will then arrange another meet up with her, or if she is busy, he will say something like, “Okay, I'll give you a call next week and we can arrange something. Chat then.”

She will then be able to respect his confidence, while also appreciating the fact that he's still being a good guy.

He's not getting angry at her and insulting her, calling her names or trying to seek pity in a wimpy way.

He's just being a confident, cool guy and letting her know that she doesn't need to keep messing him around like that.

This is why it's so important to be confident at all times when you're getting your ex back.

When you can remain confident no matter what your ex says or does to make you feel insecure, you tap into her instinctive nature, which tells her, â€œHeâ€™s not falling apart and being insecure and needy. Heâ€¢s a real man. Heâ€¢s confident and emotionally strong. Heâ€¢s the kind of man that I can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love. It would be so hard to find another man like him. I have to give him another chance and see how it goes, otherwise I will regret it.

She then stops canceling meet ups and actually looks forward to seeing you again.

Another possible reason why your ex always cancels when you arrange to meet up is because

5. She's leading you on to let you down slowly

Most of the time, a woman doesn't know how to distance herself from her ex without getting caught up in an uncomfortable situation.

For example: A guy might

- Beg, plead and even cry as a way of trying to make her change her mind about being broken up.
- Tell her how much he still loves her and that he can't live without her, to make her feel sorry for him.
- Make big promises to change whatever she wants and then expect her to give him another chance based on that.
- Get angry and possibly even violent with her.
- Show up at her home or workplace and demand to speak to her.
- Pressure her into discussing the relationship in detail, so he can work out what he needs to change to make her happy and stop the break up.

So, rather than have to explain all the reasons why she is breaking up with him (e.g. he's too emotionally sensitive, she wants a man who more masculine in his energy, she wants a guy who is more focused on succeeding in life), she simply agrees to meet up with him and then cancels at the last minute.

She will think to herself, Maybe if I keep canceling our meet ups, he'll eventually get tired or bored and give up. That way, I won't have to get into a confrontation with him about the break up and he won't feel so bad because he will assume we just drifted apart, or that our relationship was too difficult to repair.

He could have got her back, but he simply didn't know how to.

He was trying to get her to meet up with him, without even really knowing her real reasons for leaving him, or putting in real effort to fix those things about himself.

So, rather than her having to help him through it, she tried to get away from him in the only way she knew how, which was to mess him around by constantly canceling meet ups and playing hard to get.

Here's the thing

A woman doesn't want to be put in the position where she feels stressed out by an ex who she doesn't want to be with anymore.

She also doesn't want to be in a position where she might have to physical defend herself against an overly emotional man.

So, rather than dealing with all the drama or danger, she tries to get out of the relationship as gently as possible, even if that means giving the guy false hope for a while.

If you are in a situation like that, you have to change your approach to her.

From now on, you have to start making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, so she can begin to have romantic feelings for you again.

If you do that, she will stop canceling and start going along with the ex back process.

Before you know it, you and her will be back in a relationship and she will tell you that she loves you again.

That's how it works when you approach it correctly.

Another reason why your ex always cancels when you arrange to meet up is becauseâ€¦

6. She is afraid that she might have strong feelings for you again if she meets up with you

When a woman really loves a guy, she will usually give him more than one chance to change and improve the things about him that are turning her off.

Yet, if he never changes, she will eventually be forced to make the decision to leave him.

In cases like that, she will try to avoid seeing him again because she will know that he could easily re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship.

So, even though initially she might agree to meet up with her ex, she will be secretly thinking something like, â€œYou have given him plenty of chances before and he never changed, so this time probably isn't going to be any different. You're just going to fall in love with him again, only to find yourself having to go through another painful break up. So, just get out of this while you can. Don't meet up with him. Stay strong.â€

Finally, another possible reason why your ex always cancels when you arrange to meet up is becauseâ€¦

7. The meet up sounds way too serious

If a guy gives his ex woman the impression that meeting up with him means that she is giving him another chance, she is much more likely to reject his offer to meet up, or accept it and then cancel via text.

So, if you've made your ex feel that way, make sure that the next time you arrange a meet up, you make it sound like it's just you and her catching up as friends and isn't about getting back together.

For example: You can say something like, â€œHey, I know that you've canceled on me a few times before, but I hope this time we can really meet up. I want to make it clear that just because you're agreeing to see me, it doesn't mean I'm expecting us to get back together at all. It's just a cup of coffee between friends and nothing more. In fact, if you don't want to talk to me or see me again after that, I promise to leave you alone completely and never contact you again. So, let's have this quick coffee. I'm going to be busy tomorrow and Tuesday, but I have anywhere from 3pm to 8pm on Wednesday and Thursday open at the moment. What day and time suits you the best?â€

When you make the meet up seem relaxed and friendly, she will feel more comfortable with the idea of seeing you again.

Then, when you meet up with her and she experiences the new and improved you for herself, she will likely be saying to herself, “Why did I waste so much time canceling when my ex and I arranged to meet up in the past? He’s so different now and I regret not seeing him a lot sooner. I want him back. I’m going to make this happen.”

She Said That She Will Always Have a Special Place For Me in Her Heart, But Doesn't Want to Be With Me Anymore

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible reasons why she said that she will always have a special place for you in her heart, but doesn't want to be with you anymore are:

1. You no longer make her feel sexually attracted

[image: You no longer make her feel sexually attracted]

In a relationship, it's the man's responsibility to make sure that the love, respect and attraction between him and his woman grows and becomes stronger over time.

Watch this video to understand how that works!

Unfortunately, some guys become so comfortable in their relationship with a woman that they end up treating her like more of a friend than anything else.

To convince himself that everything will be okay, a guy might think to himself, "Our love is so strong that nothing can ever come between her and I. This is going to last forever. She is mine. We're going to grow old together. Her and I have said that to each other, so it's going to happen. I have nothing to worry about."

As a result, he might then fall into the habit of taking his woman's love and attraction for him for granted.

For example: He might take her for granted by

- Forgetting to compliment her when she puts in the effort to look good for him (e.g. she might be wearing a new dress and he doesn't notice it at all, or if she asks, "How do I look?" he just says, "Fine" or, "You look nice," rather than making her feel sexually appreciated by saying something like, "You look sexy baby" or, "Wow, look at you. I know what I'm doing later tonight").
- No longer taking care of his physical appearance (e.g. he feels so comfortable around her that he stops putting effort into wearing clothes that make him look good, or he starts wearing clothes that make him look a little wimpy or even feminine at times).
- No longer doing the little romantic things that she liked at the beginning of the relationship (e.g. he doesn't take her to restaurants/picnics/fun places anymore and sticks to ordering takeout and watching TV at home).
- Treating her more like his friend or roommate than like a desirable, sexy woman (e.g. he stops hugging, touching and kissing her, the sex has become boring or even dried up).

Alternatively, he might take her for granted by doing one or more of the following:

- Becoming so emotionally sensitive that she has to be on her best behavior, say nice things to him and reassure him of her commitment to him, otherwise he starts getting moody or sulking.
- Getting angry at her often and expecting her to just put up with it.

- Disrespecting her in private or in public and then expecting her to respect him at all times.
- Becoming very clingy and needy of her and expecting her to put up with it.
- Trying to take away her individual freedoms (e.g. not allowing her to meet up with her girlfriends, checking her phone, preventing her from clicking like on social media posts of her male friends).
- Spending most of his spare time or weekends doing things without her (e.g. playing video games, working on hobbies, hanging out with friends) and expecting her to just wait in the background of his life.

Here's the thingâ"!

Even if a guy really loves his woman and doesn't want to lose her, she simply won't find that kind of treatment fair.

As an individual, she will naturally want to look after herself and her own well being rather than just putting up with being treated in that way for life.

So, she will break up with him and try to find someone who will love her and appreciate her properly.

What a lot of guys don't understand is that in most cases, women are a lot more insecure than men.

For example:

- Most women are insecure about their physical appearance. According to a global study conducted by Dove cosmetics, 96% of women don't consider themselves to be beautiful.
- Women are reported to experience depression at twice the rate of men in the USA.
- In the UK, 40% of women will require treatment for depression at some point in their life compared to only 10% of men. In other words, women are more depressed than men.
- Women are twice as likely to experience anxiety compared to men.
- 60% of the people who have OCD (Obsessive Compulsive Disorders) and phobias are women.

She might seem like she is confident and has it all together, but if she's like most women, she will be insecure, anxious and prone to feelings of depression.

So, to keep a woman happy in a relationship, you have to be consistent.

You've got to build on her feelings over time and not take her for granted.

If you fail at that, she will start to feel emotional, depressed, anxious, insecure and unsure of herself.

If you don't pick up on those changes, she will start to feel angry, annoyed and disappointed with you.

She will then start to give you obvious signs that she isn't happy, (e.g. "I don't know if this is going to work out" or, "I don't feel the same way as I used to") to hopefully make you pay attention.

If you do pay attention, change and get things back on track, she will be happy and stick with you for life (if you are consistent).

Yet, if you just ignore her complaints or hope that she stops being like that, she will eventually say something like, "I will always have a special place in my heart for you, but I don't want to be with you anymore. Please accept that."

A guy in that position will usually then start begging, pleading and sucking up to her for another chance, which will turn her off even more.

This is why you have to understand what a woman really wants and offer that to her when in a relationship, or when getting her back.

You've got to do it right.

She's not going to help you understand what you need to change, or help you grow as a man so you can get her back.

It's up to you to figure this out.

Of course, you're not on your own.

I'm here to help you.

Just don't expect her to explain everything for you and help you along the way to get her back.

In most cases, a woman will just give signs and hints that she is unhappy and if the guy can't rise up and become a better man, she will prepare herself to leave and then end the relationship.

For example: If a man gradually stops treating his woman like a feminine, sexy girl and starts acting like they're roomies, the dynamic of the relationship will change.

She will begin to doubt her attractiveness and become frustrated and unhappy in her relationship with him.

He will then see the changes in her and wonder what the heck has gotten into her.

Simple.

He's not making her feel like a sexy girl anymore.

She feels like his friend or roommate.

That's not what a woman wants from a relationship with a man.

It feels nice and easy and comfortable for a man to change the relationship into that, but it's not what a woman really wants.

As mentioned earlier, she's not going to tell him that either.

She's not going to explain that he's no longer making her feel sexy, attracted and wanted by him.

Instead, she will either start getting moody (that's women for you! They are not like us and that's okay. You have to understand and accept that about women. They are not designed to be like us) or she might try to make herself even more desirable to him (e.g. by dressing in revealing clothes, wearing sexy lingerie, kissing him in a sexual way, being submissive, acting girly).

If he continues on just treating her like a roommate, friend or one of his buddies, she will eventually start to think, "This just isn't working. I just don't feel the way I want to when I'm with him anymore. The spark has gone."

If nothing changes for months or years, she will eventually break up with him by saying something along the lines of, "It's not you, it's me. I love you and will always have a special place for you in my heart. I just don't want to be in a relationship anymore. I want to have time for myself. I want to explore and find out who I am."

If she's like most women, she won't come out and say something like, "Hey, you've become too much of a wimpy guy these days. It's almost like you're my girlfriend at times. I need a real man. I used to love you, but not anymore. It's over."

Most women don't want to be that direct because they don't want to hurt a guy's feelings, make him react with anger (or even violence) or have to deal with a messy break up.

Instead, she will just say nice things like having a place for him in her heart, him being a great guy, treasuring the time they spent together and so on.

So, if your ex said that she will always have a special place for you in her heart, but doesn't want to be with you anymore, it could be because you stopped making her feel like a feminine, girly, sexy woman around you.

Don't worry though.

You just have to start making her feel that way from now on and she will change her perception of you and open back up to being with you again.

Just make sure that every time you interact with her from this point onwards (e.g. over the phone and especially when you see her in person), you are actively triggering her feelings of attraction for you by making her feel girly, feminine and sexy, rather than just being a sweet, nice, neutral friend to her.

Even though you're not a couple anymore, it doesn't mean you can't still talk to her in a way that makes her feel sexy and wanted.

You can.

In fact, if she broke up with you because the spark died out, then you have to.

You have no choice.

If you want her back, you have to get the spark back.

Naturally, you may be asking, What if she gets angry with me for talking to her in a way that makes her feel feminine, girly and sexy?

If you're asking that, it suggests that you are approaching her in the wrong way and simply don't understand what really makes a woman feel attracted to a guy.

Women are attracted to guys who aren't intimidated by them.

It's not about being aggressive, rude, obnoxious or anything like that.

It's just about being a good man who has balls.

That's what women really want.

So, you will always make her feel much more attraction by being confident in your value to her, compared to tiptoeing around her like a good little boy in the hopes that she will change her mind and give you another chance based on your niceness.

With that in mind, don't be afraid to flirt with your ex when you next see her or talk to her on the phone.

Make it clear by how you are flirting with her that you still feel a deep sexual attraction and desire for her and aren't afraid to let her know about it.

It's not about saying, "Hey, I still find you sexy."

That's not flirting.

Instead, it's about saying something like, "Wow, you look sexy today" when you meet up with her in person, rather than saying, "Oh, nice dress. How are you today?" like a typical nice guy who is afraid to express sexual interest in a woman.

When you make her feel sexually attracted to you again (e.g. you make her smile and laugh, build up sexual tension by flirting with her and then pulling back your interest, make her feel feminine and girly by being emotionally masculine around her), her feelings will naturally begin to change.

She will go from just having a special place in her heart for you, to wanting to kiss you, have sex with you and be your woman again right now.

That's what you want, right?

If so, make sure that you focus on triggering her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

Don't hold back and be polite, nice or neutral.

Let the flirting flow and be confident enough to joke around with her and make her smile, laugh and feel great to be talking to you again.

Another reason why your ex may have said that she will always have a special place for you in her heart, but doesn't want to be with you anymore is because

2. She likes you as a person, but can't look up to you as her man

[image: She likes you as a person, but can't look up to you as her man]

For a woman to be able to look up to and respect her man, she needs to know that he is the more emotionally dominant one in the relationship.

Part of making her feel that way is not allowing her to walk all over you, intimidate you or boss you around in a relationship.

Where a lot of guys go wrong is by thinking, "I love my girl so much that I will do anything to make her happy. She can call the shots if she wants. Whatever she wants to do, I am willing to go along with, as long as I get to be with her."

He might then become super nice, sweet and attentive around her and always let her get her back, regardless of how badly she treats him.

For example: A woman might talk down to her guy, throw tantrums when she doesn't get her way and possibly even belittle him in front of other people (e.g. make jokes about him, say that he is useless or is a loser).

Yet, rather than confidently standing up to her and telling her that he's not going to put up with being treated disrespectfully by her, a guy like that might be even nicer to her in the hopes that she takes pity on him one day.

He might say something like, "I'm sorry if I upset you baby. Please let me make it up to you," or "Please don't be this way. You know that I will do anything to make you happy. Just tell me what you want and I will do it."

However, in most cases, rather than make a woman think, "What am I doing? He's so sweet and wonderful and I'm being a bitch to him! I feel so terrible for the way I've treated him. I promise that from this moment onwards, I'm going to be the most loving girlfriend/wife a guy can ever hope for," she will think something like, "I can't believe that he lets me disrespect him so much. Doesn't he have a backbone? Doesn't he respect himself? I really don't like behaving like this, but it's the only way I can think of to try and push him to be more of a man and stand up for himself. No matter how badly I treat him, he just keeps putting up with it. Well, I guess it's not working. He doesn't understand how to be the man in a relationship. Even though I think he's a really nice guy, I just can't look up to him and respect him as my man. So, I have to leave him and find a man who makes me respect him.

She then leaves and the guy is left thinking, “What the? I did everything that I could for her and is still wasn’t enough! What is wrong with women? They are so hard to please.”

Yet, that’s where he is wrong.

When you understand what women really want in a man, they are simple and so damn easy to please.

For example: One of the things that a woman wants is to be with a good man who is more emotionally dominant than her.

If a woman feels more emotionally dominant than her man (e.g. like she can push him around), it becomes very difficult for her to respect him.

If she can’t respect him, she also can’t feel real sexual attraction for him anymore and then staying in a relationship with him doesn’t feel right at all.

When she reaches that point, it doesn’t matter how well the guy treats her.

Without the fundamental feeling of respect, her attraction and love begins to fade away and not be strong enough to justify remaining in a relationship.

So, some questions to ask yourself are

- Did I allow my ex to be more emotionally dominant than me (e.g. she got her way most or all of the time and I just followed her direction)?
- Did she feel like she had to make most or all the decisions?
- Did I let her get away with treating me badly?
- Did I become too emotionally sensitive?

The thing is, you might be a nice guy, but when it comes to keeping a relationship together with a woman, nice just isn’t good enough.

You have to be a good man with balls (i.e. a good man that is emotionally tough).

Your woman needs to know that she can rely on you to be the man (i.e. emotionally strong) all the time.

She needs to know that you won’t allow her, or other people, to disrespect you and push you around.

She has to be able to relax in the knowing that you will protect her from the big, bad world out there and not come running and crying to her to take care of you if life gets tough.

So, if your ex lost respect for you, it’s essential that you get that back.

Then when you next see her, you have to be the more emotionally dominant one at all times.

Being emotionally dominant doesn’t mean being rude or treating her badly.

Instead, you just have to be assertive and be the man around her.

When she can see that you have the balls to stand up to her now, while also being a good guy, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you again.

Another reason why your ex may have said that she will always have a special place for you in her heart, but doesn’t want to be with you anymore is because

3. She grew up or matured a lot faster than you and no longer feels compatible

[image: She grew up a lot faster than you and no longer feels compatible]

One of the most important aspects of a relationship is that the man and the woman are both on pretty much the same level.

For example: A couple mightâ€¦!

- Have a big goal or dream in life that theyâ€¦re always working towards achieving.
- Want to settle down, buy a house, get married and start a family.
- Prefer to party, stay out late and live a carefree lifestyle.
- Enjoy traveling and trying new and exciting things.

So, if a woman discovers that she has matured a lot faster than her guy (e.g. sheâ€¦s ready to stop partying and wants to settle down, but he only wants to hang out with his friends and get drunk all the time), she may start feeling like they are no longer compatible.

Of course, she might not break up with her guy right away because of that, but it will start to eat away at her respect and attraction for him.

She may begin to think, â€œMaybe he just needs a bit more time than me. Heâ€¦s still a great guy and if he sees that I have changed, he will hopefully catch on and enjoy a different kind of lifestyle with me.â€œ

Yet, if he doesnâ€¦t change or isn't willing to change, it will eventually lead to a break up.

So, if your ex currently feels that you and her are at different stages in life (e.g. you want to settle down, but she wants to be free), itâ€¦s only natural that she will want to end the relationship.

If that applies to you though, don't worry.

You can still get her back.

Just get her back into a casual sex type relationship and make her feel respect, attraction and love for you on levels that she has never experienced before.

Make her love you and want you even more than you want her.

You will then be in the position of power in the relationship (the way a woman like her wants it to be anyway) and she will naturally begin to open up to settling down with you and committing long term.

A final reason why your ex may have said that she will always have a special place for you in her heart, but doesnâ€¦t want to be with you anymore is becauseâ€¦!

4. She had a crush on you, hooked up with you, realized that you weren't who she thought you'd be and then dumped you

[image: You weren't you she thought you would be]

Sometimes a woman might feel attracted to a guy because he initially appeared to have some of the qualities and personality traits she was looking for in a man.

For example: He might have come across as being confident and emotionally strong and he may have also had a great sense of humor, so she found herself smiling, laughing and feeling great around him most of the time.

As a result, she may have then thought something like, â€œI think he might be the guy for me. Heâ€™s cute. I love the way I feel when Iâ€™m with him. I should start dating him.â€

Yet, when she gets into a relationship with him, she then discovers that how he was behaving before was just an act to reel her in.

It's not the real him.

For example: The longer the relationship continues, the more emotionally sensitive, insecure, clingy, jealous and controlling he becomes.

He also stops being fun to talk to and starts being annoying, pressuring her, controlling her and being too serious all the time.

She then begins to think something like, â€œHe used to be really sweet when I met him. Iâ€™m sure heâ€™s not a bad person, but heâ€™s definitely not the man for me if this is who he is deep down. I think I've made a big mistake by getting into a relationship with him. I didn't see this side of him when I met him. Now that I've experienced it, I know that I don't want it. He's not the guy for me. I have get out of this relationship before it gets worse and I potentially end up getting hurt.â€

She will then break up with him and try to find new a guy who really is what he appears to be (e.g. confident, charismatic, emotionally strong and masculine, enjoys making her laugh, smile and feel good around him).

You Can Change How She Feels

[image: You can change how she feels]

Don't worry about the mistakes you made with her.

That is done.

What matters the most is how you make her feel from now on.

When you start giving her the attraction experience she always wanted from you, but never told you about (e.g. make her feel feminine and girly in your presence, be the more emotionally dominant one in the relationship, have crystal clear focus and direction in life), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for you again.

She will then stop focusing on the negatives of your relationship and will feel drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

However, rememberâ€

You have to give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants, which is usually going to be different to what you think it is or what you've been offering her in the past.

For example:

A woman might want her man to be more emotionally strong and confident around her, but he tries to get her back by pouring his heart out via text, e-mail, social media messages, on phone calls or in person, crying to her and begging and pleading for another chance, or saying that he will do anything to get her back.

Alternatively, a woman might want to see that her guy is capable of being the man without needing to lean on her for guidance, but he instead asks her to tell him what he needs to change, or that he needs her back to because she helps him focus and get things done.

By behaving in those ways, heâs only highlighting to her that he hasnât really changed.

As a result, she keeps pushing him away and saying things like, *âI know you mean well, but I just donât feel the same way about you like I used to. I will always have a special place for you in my heart, but our relationship is over now.*â

So, if you want your ex back for real, make sure that you prepare yourself to attract her in the ways that she really wants.

Don't go offering her things that she isn't going to feel attracted, excited and happy about (e.g. pouring your heart out to her when she actually wants you to be more ballsy).

When you attract her in the ways that she really cares about, she wonât be able to stop herself from wanting to be around you more and more.

The idea of you finding another woman will suddenly make her feel sad and anxious.

To avoid losing you and the new, much enjoyable attraction she feels for you, she will give you another chance and see how it goes.

So, make sure that you do this right.

Attract her in the ways that she really cares about and you will see her change and open back up to you right away, or within days.

I Don't Know What to Say to My Ex if I Contact Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's what to say and do when you contact your ex on a phone call.

Note: If you don't want to call her and would prefer to text, I recommend that you read my other article, How to Attract Your Ex Back Via Text (opens in a new window when you click it).

However, if you are confident enough to call her, this is what you should say and do to get her back:

1. Start with a brief, but sincere apology

[image: Start with a brief, but sincere apology]

Even if you've already apologized to your ex for what happened between you and her, it's good to just briefly, but sincerely say sorry one more time.

Saying sorry again doesn't mean you should grovel, suck to her or try to make her feel pity for you.

Just keep it as brief as possible and then get on with making her smile, laugh and feel good talking to you.

Example 1:

If you and her are on good terms and she will be happy to hear from you, say something like:

You: Hey, how are you?

Her: Good thanks, you?

You: I'm doing great. Hey, before we continue, I just wanted to say sorry to you again for what happened between you and I. I'm sorry for putting you through that.

Her: [Either says that it's fine, don't worry about it or wants to talk about it a bit more]

Then, get on with making her smile, laugh and feel good talking to you.

Example 2:

If you and her had a messy break up and she's not going to be happy to hear from you, start the call off and then say something like:

Hey, by the way I'm sorry for what happened between us. I now understand what I did wrong and why it caused your feelings for me to change. If our roles had been reversed and you were behaving like that, I would have probably felt the same way. It wasn't fair on you and I see that now. Regardless of what you may think of me right now though, I want you to know that I'm sorry that things worked out the way they did between us. The truth is, everyone makes mistakes in a relationship. I never claimed to be perfect, but to the best of my knowledge, neither is anyone else. I just want you to know that I'm not the same guy that you broke up with. I don't expect you to believe me right now and that's okay. I'm not asking you to take me back or anything like that. Of course, I would be lying to you if I said that I don't care about you anymore. I definitely do care about you, but I accept that we are broken up. I just want to say sorry for how everything turned *out. You are a great woman and definitely deserved better. So, sorry about that.*â□□

By being confident and mature enough to apologize to her in that way, youâ□□re showing her that youâ□□ve learned from the experience and have already taken positive steps to become a better man than you were before.

This is attractive to her because you aren't stuck at the same level as you were when she broke up with you.

You're one of the rare men who learn from an experience and become a better man as a result, rather than making the same old mistake over and over again throughout life.

When she gets the sense that you are one of the rare men who become better and better over time, it makes her feel sparks of respect and sexual attraction for you.

As a result, she feels much more willing to genuinely forgive you and open up to talking to you further and even meeting up with you in person.

You then need to make sure that youâ□□!

2. Focus on making her smile, laugh and feel happy when talking to you

Itâ□□s only natural that the idea of contacting an ex for the first time after a break up might make a guy feel nervous or stressed.

He may even think things like, *â□□ Will she even want to talk to me? Will there be a lot of long awkward silences between us? What should I say to her? What will make her see that Iâ□□m genuinely sorry for what happened and that I want to make it up to her?*â□□

He might then decide to call her and try to discuss the relationship with her in detail and work through any problems that they had or still have.

Yet, doing that simply makes her remember the scale of the problems they were having or still have.

It makes her think something like, *â□□ Yeahhhâ□□! Iâ□□d forgotten about some of those things he did, but now that heâ□□s mentioned it, I feel even more turned off by him.*â□□

She then closes up and it becomes even more difficult to get her to meet up with him to get her back. So, what should you do instead?

Make her smile and laugh and feel good, especially when sheâ□□s trying hard to make you feel uncomfortable or nervous by being cold towards you, or is creating drama by being cold and saying things like, *â□□ Why are you calling me?*â□□

For example: Imagine that youâ□□re on a phone call with your ex and the first thing she says to you is, *â□□ Oh, itâ□□s you again. What do you want now?*â□□

A nervous, insecure guy might begin to stumble over his words and say things like, *â□□ Iâ□□m sorryâ□□! I just wanted to talk to you and see how you are,*â□□ which puts her in the more dominant position and causes her to feel even more turned off by what she perceives as his emotional weakness.

Alternatively, he might seem nervous and hesitant as he tries to talk to her, which will make her feel turned off because he doesn't even have the balls to remain confident when talking to a woman.

Women hate it when a guy feels intimidated by her, but still wants to be with her sexually and romantically.

Being intimidated makes a woman feel unsafe with him.

She feels like she would need to protect him from the big, bad world out there, so she stops feeling like a woman around him.

This is why it's essential that you always remain confident and don't ever give a woman the impression that you are intimidated by her in any way.

It's not about being rude, aggressive or controlling.

None of that.

You just have to have the balls to laugh at her attempts to you feel intimidated and then guide the conversation or interaction back to mutual laughter and feelings of love.

So, if you call her and the first thing she says to you is, â€œOh, it's you again. What do you want now?â€ what should you say and do?

A great way to get her smiling right away is by laughing at her bitchiness (This part is important. You have to literally laugh) and with a smile in your voice ask something like, â€œWow! Is that how you say hello these days? Gee, a lot has changed about you since we last spokeâ€ and then have a laugh with her about that, or, “Haha! That's how you answer the phone with me now? I love it. Funny stuff.”

Alternatively, if she's more open to talking to you again and says, “Hi, how are you?” when you call, you can say something like, â€œI'm good. How about you ex girlfriend? How you doing?”

She will most likely laugh at you referring to her as 'ex girlfriend' and she will feel respect for it too, because you have the confidence to risk saying something like that, rather than feeling intimidated by her and the situation and being on your best behavior as a result.

Another example is if she is trying to make you jealous by talking about her life without you.

You should literally laugh and with a smile in your voice say something like, â€œWowww, I'm soooo jealous...â€ and then laugh and say, â€œJust kidding...that's sound great. I'm glad that your life has been much more fun without me.â€

By saying something like that to her, she will be impressed that you're confident enough to joke around with her and risk saying things, even though you and her are now broken up.

When she feels respect and attraction for you again, it becomes difficult for her to keep thinking things like, â€œHe's my ex and he stuffed up. I don't want to talk to him anymore. It's over! I don't have any feelings for him!â€

Instead, she thinks, â€œIt's actually kind of nice to be talking to him again. I miss his funny sideâ€ I like his confidence too. Maybe there is a chance for us. Maybe we could meet up and see where things go.â€

She then allows her defenses to come down and becomes more willing to see you in person to experience the new and improved you face-to-face.

Once she's feeling good and enjoying talking to you again, you need toâ€

3. Get her to meet up with you in person to say hi as friends

After a bit more laughter and easy-going conversation, just say, â€œAnyway, itâ€™s been good to chat to you again like this. Let's meet up sometime this week for a quick cup of coffee. Of course, itâ€™s just as friends, so donâ€™t expect a cake with your coffee or anything sweet like that, okay? It's just coffeeâ€ and have a laugh.

She will most likely be laughing, smiling and having fun, because she can sense that youâ€™re being easy-going and are not pressuring her into doing anything that she feels uncomfortable with.

She will also notice that thereâ€™s a little bit of teasing and flirting going on, which will be exciting to her.

She may then think something like, â€œHe really sounds so different now. Heâ€™s just so confident and self-assured all of a sudden. It might actually be a lot of fun to see him in person again. Iâ€™m curious to see what happens if we meet face to face.â€

Of course if she doesnâ€™t say, â€œYesâ€ to meeting up right away, donâ€™t let that throw you. Just smile and say, â€œCome on! It's just a coffee. We can do that. Let's catch up and say hi.â€

Chances are high that she will then agree to the meet up and you can then arrange a day and time.

Then, you need toâ€¦

4. Reactivate her feelings in person

[image: Reactivate her feelings for you in person]

At the meet up, itâ€™s very important that you continue behaving in some of the ways that will naturally reactivate your exâ€™s feelings for you.

For example: Being confident even if sheâ€™s closed off towards you or tries to dominate the interaction, making her feel like a feminine, attractive woman in your presence, using humor to lighten the mood and put her at ease and showing her that you're not insecure or emotionally sensitive like before (if that applies to you).

If you're making her feel attracted, she is going to have a very difficult time saying no to hugging you, kissing you and hooking up with you again sexually because she will want it to happen too.

This is why it's so important that you focus on triggering feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside of her.

Don't go to the meet up and act like a nice friend.

That's not going to work.

You've got to trigger her sexual and romantic feelings.

That is what works to get an ex woman back.

Of course, she might act like she is not even interested in getting back with you at all, but if she goes to a meet up with you, then she is open to getting back with you on some level.

So, be prepared for the possibility that she might come to the meet up with her guard up.

She might even be thinking things like, â€œBe careful. Just because he sounded different over the phone, it doesn't mean that he's really changed. You can't let him hurt you again. Don't show him that you're interested right away. See how the meet up goes and then decide later.

That is why it's very important that, right from the onset, you show her via your actions and the way you talk and interact with her, that you really are a new man now.

For example:

- If she's being cold and distant, show her the strength of your confidence by never feeling nervous or unsure of yourself.
- If she acts like she's over you, don't feel rejected or unwanted. Instead, be confident and use humor to spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you.
- If she talks about other guys to make you feel insecure, just laugh about it and tell her that you're happy for her.
- If she tries to dominate the interaction, put her back in her place in a loving, but assertive way.

When she can see that you remain confident no matter what she throws at you to make you feel intimidated or insecure, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again.

Those feelings then begin to make the negatives in your relationship seem less important to her.

[image: Reactivate her feelings for you in person]

She begins to realize that you are now a completely new and improved man that she can look up to, trust and feel proud of.

Then, the idea of hugging, kissing and possibly even having sex with you again to see where things go, begins to feel like something she might like to do.

However, if you meet up with her and remain on your best behavior (e.g. being a nice friend), act nervous and insecure or let her push you around, then she's just going to think something like, I was right to trust my instincts. A leopard can't change its spots and my ex is still the same guy that I broke up with. Nothing has changed. At least now I know for sure that he's not the guy for me and I can move on with my life without any doubts. I'm never going to meet up with him again. It's over.

So, make sure that you are fully prepared to re-attract her at the meet up.

Don't blow your chance with her.

5 Classic Mistakes to Avoid Making When Contacting an Ex Woman to Get Her Back

Contacting your ex is easy if you are feeling confident, emotionally strong and worthy of your ex.

However, if you're feeling insecure, emotionally sensitive and doubting your attractiveness to your ex, it's possible that you might make one or more of the following mistakes!

1. Trying to get her back via text messages

A guy might sometimes say to himself, I don't know what to say to my ex if I contact her by calling her. What if she doesn't even want to talk to me on the phone? Maybe it's better to just text her. That way, she can take her time to reply to me. If she wants to get on a call, she will tell me and I will then call her.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that when a woman has broken up with a guy, it's usually because she's lost respect and attraction for him.

So, when she gets a text from him, rather than look at it objectively and assume he has good intentions, she's more likely to think, Nice try buddy, but I'm not going to fall for your attempts to get another chance by texting me. Grow a pair of balls and call me. If you can't do that, don't expect me to help you feel confident enough via text. Grow a pair or leave me alone.

Here's the thing!

Texts on a little screen don't have the same impact as words spoken over the phone, or in person where a woman can see a guy's body language and assess his state of mind.

For example: Is he being confident and emotionally strong, or is he nervous and self-doubting?

Is he making her laugh and smile, or is he making her feel tense and stressed out?

Is he feeling worthy of her, or is he feeling intimidated by her and hoping that she takes pity on him and gives him another chance?

This is why texts are simply one of the worst approaches to use when getting an ex woman back.

It's fine for a woman to text her ex guy back, because we men don't require a woman to be confident and emotionally strong.

Yet, women require that from a man.

The rules for a man getting a woman back are different to the rules for a woman getting a man back.

You have to do what a man needs to do to get a woman back.

One of those things is to have the balls to call her and re-attract her on the call and then get her to meet up with you in person.

In person, she will get a crystal clear picture of who you are now and see that you really have changed.

Another mistake that you might make if you're not feeling confident and worthy of your ex when you contact her is!

2. Coming across as emotionally weak or emotionally sensitive when you talk to her

Sometimes when a guy contacts his ex for the first time after a break up, he is thinking things like, I can't do anything to upset her. No matter what she says, I just have to be nice to her. Hopefully that will show her that I'm really sorry for what happened and she will then be more open to giving me another chance. I've got to show her that I'm suffering and that I'm not as confident as I used to be. Maybe that will make her take pity on me and give me another chance.

He might then allow her to treat him disrespectfully as a way of showing her that he's so upset, lost and sad without her that he's willing to do anything or put up with anything to get her back.

However, rather than make a woman think, Amazing! He's so sweet and agreeable, even though I'm being such a bitch to him. I should definitely give him another chance. After all, what women doesn't want a wimpy ass guy? she will simply feel turned off and close up even more.

So, make sure that you don't let your ex dominate you during interactions because you're hoping that she will then take pity on you.

Women feel attracted to emotional strength in men, not weakness.

3. Not using humor because you're afraid she might not like it

When talking to her ex, a woman will usually avoid laughing at his humor as much as possible.

This is her way of testing to see if he will remain confident, or become anxious and insecure when he notices that she isn't really laughing much or at all.

Don't let that put you off the idea of making her smile and laugh though.

So many guys make that mistake and end up decreasing the chances of getting their ex woman back.

For example: If a guy's ex woman is the kind of woman who will test his confidence by playing hard to get and not laughing at his jokes, he might decide to just try and talk to her in a nice, friendly way.

He hopes that he can just talk to her as a friend and have an innocent chat and she may then open up to him and be happy to meet up with him.

That can happen if the woman still has strong feelings for her ex, but if she doesn't have feelings, he literally needs to create those feelings.

Using humor is one of the quickest ways to make a woman have feelings for you again.

As long as you are being confident, she will relax, open up and allow herself to feel some attraction for you.

Yet, if you just use a friendly, nice approach (and she doesn't have any feelings for you), she won't feel a spark and quickly lose interest in talking to you.

She will then say something like, "Look, I have to go. We don't have anything to discuss. It's over, okay? Please don't contact me again."

You don't want something like that happening to you, right?

If not, make sure that you confidently use humor when talking to her to get her to relax, open up and enjoy herself when she's talking to you.

The fact is, when a woman is laughing and smiling, it's becomes very difficult for her to continue feeling angry, annoyed or irritated at the same time.

So, get her smiling and laughing.

Another mistake that you might make if you're feeling insecure and unworthy when talking to your ex is

4. Feeling unwelcome to flirt with her and build up sexual tension between you and her

Sexual tension occurs when a man and a woman are interacting and feeling attracted to each other, but not kissing and having sex.

Sexual tension is released when you kiss and have sex.

So, if you want your ex to feel the desire to kiss you and have sex with you again, you must build up feelings of sexual tension so she feels the need to release it with you.

Don't play it safe and act like just a friend.

If you want her back for real, you have to focus on triggering and building on her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

[image: Feel welcome to flirt with her and build up the sexual tension between you and her]

When you do that, she will feel turned on and be willing to give the relationship another chance, or at least hook up with you to see how she feels afterwards.

So, don't waste another moment worrying what to say if you contact her.

Get her on a call, re-attract her and get her back.

Do it before she meets a new guy who makes her feel a lot of attraction.

Do it while you still have the chance.

I Want to Get My Ex Back Before Valentine's Day

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's what you need to do to get your ex back before Valentine's Day:

1. Prepare to attract her in the ways that are important to her

[image: Prepare to attract her in the ways that really matter to her]

For a woman to be able to love, respect and feel attracted to a guy over the long-term, he has to be able to attract her in the ways that are important to her.

For example: She wants a guy who is confident in any situation in life, or a guy who is able to use humor to make her laugh and snap out of a tantrum she is in the middle of throwing.

She might also want a guy who always makes her feel like a real woman in the relationship, rather than making her feel like his buddy or worse, like his big sister or a mother figure in his life.

She might also want a guy who is driven to succeed and never gives up, or a guy who is so confident that other guys respect him in social situations.

If he can attract her in the ways that are important to her, then anything else he occasionally does (e.g. buys her a nice gift or flowers, says something sweet to her) is so much more enjoyable and meaningful to her.

However, if a guy can't attract her in the ways that are important to her (e.g. because he's insecure, is too emotionally sensitive, can't handle it when she tests his confidence, is controlling or jealous), then flowers, gifts or sweet words just aren't going to be enjoyable or mean much to her at all.

This is why you've got to get clear on what your ex really feels attracted to about a man and what she really wants to experience in a relationship.

Quite often, what a guy thinks is important to his woman (e.g. spending every spare moment with her, listening to her all the time, supporting her emotionally) isn't that important to her at all.

Of course, pretty much every woman loves a guy who cares, listens and supports her emotionally, but without sexual attraction, a guy like that is just a friend to her.

To keep a relationship together with a woman, you have to create and maintain feelings of sexual attraction.

and I mean create.

Sexual attraction is something that you actually create inside of a woman.

When you display personality traits that are sexually attractive to women (e.g. emotional masculinity, confidence, charisma), your ex will feel attracted to you on some level.

She might try to fight it on the inside, but she won't be able to stop it.

Attraction is an automatic reaction that men and women have to each other.

If attractive traits are displayed, attraction is triggered.

That said, if you display traits that are unattractive (e.g. you're too emotionally sensitive, you're insecure, you lack charisma because you are suppressing your authentic personality around her), your ex will feel turned off by you.

Attraction is literally under your control.

You are either saying or doing things that attract your ex, or you're not.

It's as simple as that.

Now, back to the example of a guy being in a relationship with a woman and not understanding how to make her feel attracted...

[image: Unable to attract her in the ways that are important to her]

If a guy is unable to attract a woman in the ways that are important to her, she will start wondering if he's being extra nice and romantic to hopefully distract her from the fact that he has no idea how to make her happy.

He's just being romantic, sweet and nice and hoping that she sees that as being enough.

She won't though.

Without sexual attraction, a relationship between a man and a woman is going to fall apart.

It's not like how it used to be in the 1800s or early 1900s where a woman had to stay with a man for life, even if she was unhappy.

Back then, it was shameful to get divorced (remember, most people were virgins when they got married. There wasn't a dating scene like there is today), so a woman had to stick with a man until death, even if he wasn't making her feel respect, attraction and love.

Obviously, that's not how the world works today.

Women are free to leave a relationship if they aren't feeling respect, attraction and love for their man.

So, if a guy is trying to keep his woman for life by being really nice, sweet and romantic to her, but is unable to make her feel attracted and in love, then it's just not going to work.

She might accept the nice treatment, gifts and romantic gestures for a while, but she will eventually realize that she just can't stop herself from finding other men more attractive than her current guy.

She might stick with him for a while because she doesn't want to break his heart, but her instincts will keep pushing her to leave and hook up with a guy who actually makes her feel attracted in the ways that are important to her (e.g. she wants a guy who is more ballsy, more emotionally masculine).

So, if you want to get your ex back before Valentine's Day, don't make the classic mistake of sending her flowers in the hopes that she will pick up the phone and say, â€œWow! Thank you so much! The flowers you sent me are so lovely. I know it's Valentine's Day, so you might already have a date, but if you're not doing anything, I'd love to see you.â€

That can happen if your ex has been missing you like crazy and is still in love with you, but that probably doesn't apply to your situation, right?

If it did, you probably wouldn't be looking for help on how to get your ex back.

You'd just text her or call her and get her back.

The guys who need my help to get a woman back are in a situation where their ex woman doesn't want to be with them anymore.

That applies to your situation too, right?

She doesn't have strong feelings for you anymore, has broken up with you and is going to be moving on without you and not really ever looking back.

If that's the case, she probably isn't going to be swept off her feet by flowers, a sweet Valentine's card or letter or a text on Valentine's Day.

Why?

She doesn't have strong feelings for you at this point.

If she doesn't have strong feelings for you, the first step is to create feelings of sexual attraction inside of her.

So, if you're going to call her or text her on Valentine's Day, just make sure that you focus on reactivating her feelings for you first.

Don't go straight for the kill and ask her to be your Valentine, ask for another chance with her or try to discuss the relationship.

Additionally, don't contact her and act like a neutral friend.

You need to create feelings of sexual attraction inside of her.

If you do that, she will naturally feel attracted to you and if she doesn't have a Valentine, she will almost certainly catch up with you on the day.

So, how can you make her feel attracted?

Make sure that you understand what is really important to her in terms of attraction, rather than trying to offer her what you assume might be important to her.

For example: A woman might find one or more of the following things to be very important in terms of her attraction to a man:

- He maintains his confidence, no matter what situation he finds himself in (e.g. she tries to make him feel insecure by throwing a tantrum, or she is being cold and aloof towards him, or when another guy tries to flirt with her in front of him).
- He is loving, caring and devoted to her, but he doesn't let her walk all over him or dominate him.
- He makes her feel sexy and desirable in his presence, rather than being too nice and neutral around her.
- He believes in his value to her and the world, rather than feeling like he's not good enough or that everyone else is better than him.
- He doesn't get angry or sulk when she throws a tantrum. Instead, he uses his emotional masculinity to remain confident in the moment and have the balls to joke around, get her laughing and bring the interaction back to love and laughter.
- He is focused on achieving his biggest goals, dreams and ambitions in life, but also allocates time to spend with her and make her feel loved, appreciated and included in his life.
- He gets along well with and is respected by most or all of her family and friends.
- He supports her emotionally, but doesn't act like one of her girlfriends and waste time talking about emotions and problems all day long. He listens and supports her for a while, then snaps her out of the mood by using humor to get her laughing and smiling again. He brings the interaction back to love and laughter.
- He is ballsy and dominant around her, but doesn't go overboard and start being aggressive or controlling. He is still a good, loving man. He just has more emotional masculinity than the average guy.

- He loves her deeply, but isn't clingy, needy or jealous.

Those are some of the things that can be important to a woman in terms of her attraction to a man.

If you want your ex back for real, you've got to get clear on where you really went wrong, so you can make the right changes, adjustments or improvements to yourself.

Then, when you interact with your ex (on a phone call and especially in person), you will be able to re-attract her in the ways that really matter to her.

She will sense the changes in you by listening to how you talk and by observing your body language.

When she senses the changes, she will naturally start to reconnect with her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Her wall will come down and she will open up to exploring her new, improved, more meaningful feelings for you.

So, once you have prepared yourself to attract her in the ways that she really wants, you need to

2. Get in touch as a friend by calling her, not texting her

You don't want to do that, right?

If you're like 40% of the guys that I've helped to get an ex woman back, you would prefer to just text her.

Yet, I don't recommend it.

I'm saying that from YEARS of experience helping men to get women back.

Texts suck when trying to get an ex back who doesn't have feelings for you.

Texts work beautifully if your ex still has feelings for you, is missing you and wanting you back.

Yet, that probably doesn't apply to your situation, right?

I know that it might seem easier and safer just to text her, but it's really a bad idea.

Why?

If she doesn't have feelings for you or worse, she remembers you based on how you behaved during and after the break up, she's not going to look at your text in a positive light.

So, you need to give her some real, first hand evidence that you are confident and more importantly, she feels good when talking to you.

On a phone call, she can hear the tonality of your voice and get a sense of your confidence and emotional strength.

Via text, she can't hear any of that, so she has to assume what you might be feeling as you send the text.

If she is holding onto a negative perception of you, she will think negatively of you and almost certainly ignore your text.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back before Valentine's Day, I recommend that you grow a pair of balls and just call her.

On a phone call, you can make her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again, which instantly makes her drop her guard and open up to you.

She's having a good time and enjoying talking to you, so she doesn't need to play hard to get via text and ignore your text for days or weeks and then forget all about it, or meet some other guy and hook up with him instead.

You're on the phone with her and she's feeling good talking to you.

If you're making her smile and laugh, she is almost certainly going to say, "Yes" to meeting up with you in person.

On the other hand, if just she gets a text message, or a letter via e-mail or in the post from, it's just a bunch of words to her.

There's no proof that you'd make her feel differently in person.

So, rather than give you the benefit of the doubt and assume you've changed and are now able to re-attract her in the ways that she really wants, she will almost certainly remain closed off.

She may think something like, "Nice try buddy! I don't believe anything about you has changed. Since you don't even have the balls to pick up the phone and talk to me in person, I'm more inclined to believe that you're hiding behind a text because you know that you still have no idea how to make me want you again. You're just sending out a feeler text and hoping for the best. Well, the best you're going to get is nothing."

Alternatively, she may just roll her eyes, think, "Whatever" and get on with what she was doing.

It all depends on how much the guy turned her off, how bad the break up was and how dead her feelings are for him.

This is why I don't recommend that guys hide behind the safety of texts.

If you want the highest chance of getting your girl back before Valentine's, then grow a pair and call her.

By the way!

If you try to call her and she doesn't answer, don't worry.

Hang up and send her a text like, "Hey Tina, there's something quick I need to ask you over the phone" and then call her a couple of minutes later.

If she doesn't answer, try calling her again the next day.

If she doesn't answer, send her this text, "Hey Tina. Looks like you're busy at the moment. Just trying to get through to you to ask you something quick. I might try calling you another time."

She will most likely text you or even call you (depending on how she feels about you at the moment).

Whatever happens, just get her on a phone call.

When talking to her on the phone, make sure to keep the conversation fun, light and easy-going and avoid getting into any heavy discussions about the relationship.

Here's an example of how to make her smile and open her up to the idea of meeting you for a catch up!

Imagine that you're on the phone with your ex and she says something along the lines of, "Look, I'm really busy. What do you want to talk to me about?"

You can say something like, "This won't take long, but I really need your help."

Most women are nice, so she will instinctively drop her guard a little bit because you are asking for her help and might say something like, â€œWhy? Whatâ€™s wrong?â€

You can then reply in a joking way, â€œWell, after we broke up I vowed never to have another cup of coffee until you and I can share a cup together as friends. However, my resolve is slipping fast and Iâ€™m going into all sorts of withdrawal symptoms. So, for the sake of my health, you have to agree to meet up with me for that coffee right awayâ€! itâ€™s a matter of life and death!â€

She will then probably realize that youâ€™re joking with her and she will likely laugh about getting caught out with your joke and maybe say something like, â€œI thought there was something really wrong with you!â€

You can then continue joking with her by saying, â€œThis is serious! I need a definite day and time or else itâ€™s all over for me. I am going to give in and have a coffee any day now. So, letâ€™s catch upâ€! how does tomorrow at 3pm sound?â€

At that point, she will likely be smiling, laughing and feeling relaxed and at ease talking to you (because youâ€™re not being all serious and nervous with her).

She may then begin to feel curious about your ability to confidently joke around with her, rather than being like a typical guy who is too afraid to risk saying other than, “Oh, hiâ€!so, how have you been?”

If you can joke around with her in some way when you start the call, she will naturally feel some respect and attraction for you for having the courage to do it.

When that happens, she will open herself up to the idea of meeting up with you again, because she will start to have some feelings for you too.

It won’t just be about you having feelings for her and wanting her back.

She will want it too.

3. Get her to meet up with you as a friend

If she hasn’t already agreed to meet up with you for coffee, make sure that you get her to do so.

If she resists a bit by saying something like, â€œI donâ€™t know,â€ or â€œIâ€™m not sure if it’s a good idea,â€ you can add, â€œOh, it’s fineâ€!itâ€™s just a quick cup of coffee as friends. It doesnâ€™t mean that weâ€™re getting back together. Weâ€™re simply being two mature adults who are willing to say hello as friends. We can do that, right?â€

As long as you remain relaxed and confident when saying it, she will sense your non-neediness and almost certainly say something like, â€œOkay, I guess we can do that.â€

Then, just go ahead and organize to meet up with her as soon as itâ€™s convenient for the both of you.

When you see her in person you need toâ€

4. Reactivate her feelings at the meet up

[image: Reactivate her feelings at the meet up]

For example: Some of the ways to reactivate her feelings are by:

- Maintaining your confidence around her regardless of what she says and does to make you feel insecure or nervous.
- Taking the lead during the conversation and not allowing her to call the shots or dominate you.
- Making her laugh and smile to put her at ease in your presence.
- Showing her that you're emotionally independent and living a happy, successful life with or without her.
- Making her feel like a sexy, desirable woman in your presence, by being an emotionally masculine man.

The more attracted she feels, the less she focus on the negative things about you she used to feel turned off by.

Instead, she will be thinking things like, â€œHe's so different now,â€ or â€œHe has really changed,â€ or â€œI can't believe it feels so good to hang out together again.â€

She may try to hide her change in feelings if she wants to play hard to get.

However, in most situations, a guy will be able to notice an obvious, distinct change in her behavior, body language, vibe and conversation style that shows her rising interest and excitement.

Remember: How you make your ex feel when you interact with her is the most important part of getting her back.

You have to make her feel positive emotions such as love, respect, sexual attraction and excitement, rather than negative emotions like anger, annoyance, stress, irritation or disappointment.

When she can see that you really have changed and she really does feel differently around you now, her guard will come down and she will open up to being with you again.

Then, at the back of her mind, she might start thinking, â€œMaybe we can get together before Valentine's Day. What a great time to start a new, exciting relationship with him again. I should do it!â€

Finallyâ€¦!

5. Get the relationship back together

[image: Get the relationship back together]

If you've successfully reactivated her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, getting back together will be something that both of you want to do.

However, even though she will be feeling attracted and excited, don't expect your ex to make it easy for you by saying, â€œI want us to get back together again,â€ because chances are, she won't do that.

Most women don't want to seem to keen, make it easy for an insecure guy or get rejected for showing interest in a guy who was just reeling her back in to dump her, so he could feel good about himself again.

So, even though she is feeling attracted and excited, it's possible that she might continue acting like she's not interested in getting back into a relationship with you at all.

This is why you must be the emotionally strong one and lead both of you back into a relationship together, regardless of the mixed signals she is giving you.

Don't doubt yourself.

Just move forward to a hug, kiss and then sex.

Get her back into a relationship by remaining confident and emotionally strong all the way.

If you wait around for her to take the lead and give you the go ahead, she may begin to think, “I guess I was wrong about him being a different guy now. He's still insecure and doubting himself like always. Well, if he's not going to make a move, I need to get out of her and start moving on without him.”

She then closes up, says something like, “Look, I have to go. This was a mistake meeting up. I'm sorry if I gave you the wrong impression. Please don't contact me anymore” and then leaves.

Don't let that happen to you.

To get your ex back before Valentine's Day, you need to be a man about it.

You've got to lead the way and make it happen.

If you reactivate her feelings for you and get her back before Valentine's Day, she is going to be just as happy as you are to be in love on that special day.

You and her will get to spend Valentine's Day feeling totally in love, happy and in a relationship that is better than it ever was before.

That is a good thing for you and her, so don't think that you're doing anything wrong by getting her back.

What you're about to do is a good thing for you and her.

So, get her back and enjoy the love and great times ahead with her!

Why Does My Ex Still Text Me if She Doesn't Want Me Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible reasons why your ex still texts you even though she doesn't want you back are:

1. She is open to getting back with you, but just isn't feeling a spark with you yet

[image: She wants you back, but just isn't feeling a spark with you yet]

Sometimes a woman might find herself in a relationship limbo where she's broken up with her guy because he stopped making her feel the way she wanted to feel in the relationship with him (e.g. attracted, respectful, in love), but at the same time, she's not completely over him either.

In the back of her mind, she may think, "If only he could change a bit (e.g. become more ballsy and assertive, stop waiting for me to tell him what to do, be more emotionally masculine so I can feel girly and feminine in comparison to him), then I'd definitely be willing to give the relationship another try."

She will then text her ex as a way of keeping the lines of communication open, in the hopes that he will do something to show her that he's changed and spark her feelings for him again.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't recognize the great opportunity that is staring them in the face (i.e. a chance to re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction) and instead waste time wondering things like, "Why does my ex still text me if she doesn't want me back? What can it all mean?"

Here's the thing:

If your ex is staying in touch with you, deep down she may be hoping that you'll do something to trigger her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again.

She won't necessarily admit that to you though.

She will most likely try to avoid looking too keen or showing too much interest, in case you then change your mind about her, stop replying and she then feels rejected.

She wants to remain in the position of power, so she's going to play it cool and just hope that you have the balls to call her, get her to meet up with you and then re-attract her at the meet up.

So, don't waste time waiting for her to make it clear to you by texting something like, "I still miss you. Do you think we can meet up and see where things go from there?" because most women just won't do that.

Instead, a woman will keep texting her ex for a little while and when she sees that he's not following through (i.e. calling her, getting her to meet up with him), she'll just say to herself, "Oh well. It looks like I'm just wasting my time. I guess he's not interested in me anymore, so I better forget about him and move on."

Then, when she suddenly stops texting him, the guy might send her a message saying, "Hey, what happened? What is something I said? Why are you being so quiet all of a sudden?" and she then doesn't reply.

She remains quiet and quickly tries to move on by flirting with or hooking up with new guys, so she's not so dependent on her ex.

Before he knows it, she has a new boyfriend and has completely moved on.

Don't let that happen to you.

Note: If it has happened to you though, don't worry. You can still get her back if she has moved on!

Another reason why your ex might be texting you is because!

2. She is using your interest in her to boost her self-esteem

For example: A woman will send her ex a text saying, Hey, how have you been? I've been missing you a bit lately, and when he responds with something along the lines of, I've been missing you too! I feel so empty without you. We should be together. You're the only woman for me, she can sit back and feel good about herself knowing that he still has feelings for her and hasn't been able to move on since the break up.

She can continue trying to date new men and not worry about her ex forgetting about her or not caring about her anymore.

She can also feel confident knowing that even if things don't work out right away with other guys, her ex is still thinking about her, missing her and wanting her back.

So, she can do whatever she wants with new guys and if she needs to use her ex as a further self esteem boost, she can contact him, suggest meeting up and get him to show interest in her in person.

Do you think that your ex might be texting you for that reason?

Here's the thing!

If your ex is only texting you to give herself a nice self-esteem boost, you don't have to just put up with it.

You should definitely allow her to continue contacting you, but you should also turn the tables and get her missing you and wanting you back.

How?

Use any interactions that you have with her from now on as an opportunity to make her feel attracted to you again, while also not desperately or obviously trying to get her back.

When she is feeling attracted, but can also see that you're not pushing to get her to commit to a relationship, she will naturally feel drawn to you and want something to happen.

You can attract her by maintaining your confidence when she tries to make you feel insecure (e.g. she teases you about your new haircut, she talks about other guys who are interested in her).

You can also attract her by being confident enough to use humor, flirt with her and suggest catching up in person.

When she realizes that she is reconnecting with her feelings of respect and attraction for you, her guard will naturally come down.

Then, her texts will become her way of staying in touch with you in the hopes that you might get back together again, rather than just a game to make her feel more confident around other men.

Another reason why your ex might be texting you is becauseâ€¦!

3. She wants to get emotional revenge on you for how badly you treated her or made her feel during the relationship

[image: She wants to get revenge for how you treated her]

Sometimes, if a woman feels bitter about her break up with a guy (e.g. because he treated her badly, took her for granted, was too jealous and controlling, cheated on her), she might decide to get emotional revenge.

She will stay in touch with him via text as a way of giving him false hope about getting her back and thus, stop him from fully getting over her and moving on.

For example: She might send her ex a text message like, â€œHey. Iâ€™ve been thinking about you lately. It feels so weird coming home every night and not finding you here. How have you been?â€

The guy may then wonder, â€œIs this her way of letting me know that she still has feelings for me and wants to get back together?â€

If he then responds with something along the lines of, â€œHey, Iâ€™ve been thinking about you too. I miss you. How about we get together sometime for a catch up?â€ she will either just ignore him, or simply text something like, â€œNo, I don't think that's a good idea. Sorry for giving you the wrong impression. Ignore my last text. I shouldn't have said that,â€ leaving him feeling hurt and confused.

If they continue to text back and forth, she will pull him in, only to then push him away when she shows interest or asks to catch up.

She just wants to mess with his head and cause him as much emotional pain as possible, to get revenge for how he treated her.

So, be careful about getting caught up in text message conversations with your ex that go nowhere and always leave you feeling confused.

If you allow your ex to mess with you like that, she will lose respect for you (e.g. because you're putting up with her bad behavior, seem desperate) and it will become harder for you to get her back.

What should you do instead?

Take charge of the situation and use it as an opportunity to re-spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

When she feels strong, positive emotions for you again (e.g. respect, sexual attraction, love, intrigue, excitement), it wipes the slate clean.

She stops seeing you as the old you who hurt her and she starts feeling attracted to the man that you are now.

She realizes that you really have changed and that there's no point trying to keep pushing you away.

A final reason why your ex might be texting you is becauseâ€¦!

4. She's a typical modern girl who texts all day and night to avoid feeling bored or lonely

In today's world, it's very rare to find a person who doesn't spend a considerable amount of time each day on his or her smartphone to either text, check social media or browse the web.

In most cases though, women tend to be on their phones a lot more than men and tend to text a lot more than men do.

For example: A study by Pew Research Center in the USA found that 79% of women say that they spend time texting their partner daily, compared with 66% of men.

That's a 13% difference, but as you may have noticed, with some girls, it's a lot more of a difference than that.

Some girls are addicted to their smartphone and love to text chat with pretty much anyone they know.

With this in mind, it's possible that you are simply part of a network of people your ex has access to text, so she does.

In cases like that, it doesn't mean that you can't get her back.

You simply have to use the text interactions as an opportunity to spark her attraction, get her on a phone call, get her to meet up with you and then re-attract her at the meet up to get her back.

Mistakes to Avoid if You Still Want Her Back

Most guys who get broken up with aren't lucky enough to still have an ex who is willing to communicate with them even if it's only via text.

So, regardless of her reasons for texting you, your ex has given you a channel to stay in touch with her and also to reactivate her feelings for you.

Don't waste that chance.

Her texting you is a good thing, whichever way you look at it!

Use the communication as a way of re-attracting her, so she naturally wants you back.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't do that and end up turning off their ex woman by making one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Quickly or instantly replying to all of her texts, no matter how busy he is Sometimes, a guy assumes that if he doesn't instantly reply to every text from his ex, she will decide that he's no longer interested and will stop texting him, causing him to lose his chance with her.

Yet, rather than make a woman think, "Wow, he must really still care for me if he answers me so quickly every time, no matter what time of day or night it is," she will think something like, "Why does he always reply so quickly? It's almost like he's just sitting around doing nothing other than waiting for me to text. Doesn't he have a life? Doesn't he focus on his work (or study) while he is doing it? He seems so desperate. I think I need to back off for a while, because I don't want him thinking I'm interested in getting back together."

So, just make sure that don't make the classic mistake of instantly replying (i.e. within seconds or minutes) to every text from your ex.

Of course, don't go the opposite extreme and ignore her texts for days, because that tactic will also likely backfire on you.

Instead, just keep it natural and reply according (e.g. Reply immediately if you're having a live, back and forth text conversation. Reply after 5 minutes, 30 minutes, an hour or even the next day if she just texts you about something random).

Another classic mistake that other guys make in your situation is

2. Thinking that ignoring her texts will impress her and make her want him back

Ignoring texts can sometimes impress a woman if her ex guy was very needy and would always immediately reply to everything she sent.

However, most women know that there's a big difference between how a guy will often act via text compared to how he will act on a phone call or in person.

So, just ignoring a text from an ex isn't the magic solution to getting her back.

In fact, in some cases, ignoring texts from an ex woman can cause her to give up and quickly try to move on with a new guy so she doesn't feel the need to text her ex anymore.

So, forget about playing games with your ex to make her want you back because it usually backfires.

Instead, just get her on a phone call with you and make her laugh, smile and feel happy to be talking to you again.

[image: Meet up with her and get her back for real]

Then, get her to meet up with you, re-attract her at the meet up and get her back.

Another mistake that guys make in your situation is

3. Hiding behind texts because he's too afraid to call her

Although texting is a good way to break the ice with an ex, it's not what's will make her feel surges of respect and sexual attraction for you.

Instead, she'll quickly get to the point where she thinks something like, "Why doesn't he do something other than send me these pointless texts? I need a man, not a boy. He's clearly afraid to call me. I'm over it. I've got to find myself a man."

Some guys are simply too afraid to call their ex and potentially get rejected, so they convince themselves that text is the way to slowly open her back up.

A guy will usually hope that if he just texts her for long enough, she will eventually call him or ask to catch up with him.

Yet, what I've found by helping men to get women back for many years now is that is a woman will rarely (if ever) lead the ex back process after dumping her man.

I've only see that happen if the woman is still desperately in love with him, can't deal with the pain of not having him in her life or can't find a replacement guy.

In all other situations, a woman will wait for her ex to take the lead in the ex back process and guide both of them back into a relationship together.

If he does, she will start to believe that he is the confident, emotionally strong and mature man she always wanted him to be.

As a result, she will then be happy to relax her guard and allow herself to respect him, feel sexually attracted to him and fall back in love with him again.

On the other hand, if he just hides behind texts, she will just assume that heâs too weak-minded and wimpy for a girl like her.

As a result, she will force herself to start flirting with or hooking up with new guys to move on without him.

So, if you want your ex to want you back, don't waste anymore time texting her.

If you haven't been able to get her back via text so far, you're most likely never going to be able to get her back that way.

I recommend that you prepare yourself to properly re-attract her on a phone call and in person.

When you are ready to do that, I recommend that you call her and start the rapid ex back process to get her back for real.

What Does it Mean if Your Ex Texts You Randomly to Say Hi?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible reasons why your ex might text you randomly to say hi are:

1. She's sending out a 'feeler text' to see if you're still interested, before she hints that she is missing you

[image: She is sending out a feeler text to see if you are interested]

In most cases, a woman won't just come out and tell her ex that she misses him before she knows that he has some feelings for her too.

This can be because she's shy, doesn't want to make it easy for him to get her back, is afraid of being rejected by him or just wants to see how he reacts if she doesn't show obvious interest (e.g. Will he be confident and get her back? Will he feel insecure? Will he get annoyed at her?).

So, to find out where she stands with him now, she will send him a feeler text.

For example: She might randomly text something like, *â"¢Hey, I just wanted to say hi. What have you been up to lately?*â"¢

If she misses him and wants him back, she will hope that he texts back with something like, â"¢Hey, I'm glad to hear from you. I've been well. Life has been good, but I have been missing you as wellâ"¢ and she can then open up and say, â"¢I've been missing you too."

She hopes that he will then take the initiative, call her, arrange a meet up, re-attract her at the meet up and get her back.

Unfortunately, a guy is still so hurt from the break up that he is scared to act on her subtle hints, so he just keeps texting back and forth with her.

In most cases, the woman will continue to show interest via text, but will gradually lose interest if she notices that he doesn't have the balls to call her and is waiting for her to say something obvious like, "I want you back. Call me. Get me to meet up with you. Let's do this!"

This is why confidence is so important when getting a woman back.

You have to look at any contact from her as being a sign that she is still interested in you and is hoping that you make the ex back process happen.

If you lack confidence, you will doubt yourself, waste too much time texting her and potentially lose her if she meets another guy who she feels much more attraction for.

So many guys suffer that fate because they lack confidence during the ex back process.

For example: A guy will over-analyze her reasons for texting him and think things like, *â"¢Why is she texting me randomly to say hi? What is she up to? I bet she's just trying to test me to see if I'm going to get all needy and desperate. Wellâ"¢even though I really want her back, I'm not going to fail her test. I'm just going to ignore her.*â"¢

He might then ignore her text for days or a week or more to not seem needy and when he eventually replies she doesn't reply back (i.e. because she may now be thinking that he's playing games with her, or simply isn't interested in getting back together with her again).

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't waste time playing games with her (e.g. ignoring her texts for long periods of time, acting disinterested when you reply, telling her that you're over her and don't want her back).

If she is keeping the lines of communication open between you and her, then I recommend that you assume it is because she misses you and wants to get back together again.

As a result, you should focus on making her feel more attracted to you and then guide her through the ex back process (i.e. get her to meet up with you, re-attract her at the meet up, get the relationship back together).

Another reason why your ex might still be randomly texting you to say hi is that

2. She's hoping that you will reply, create a spark and then call her to arrange a time to meet up

[image: She is hoping that you will reply and create a spark]

Sometimes, a woman is simply hoping that by randomly getting in touch with her ex guy, he will understand her expression of interest and then make a move to get her back.

A lot of guys think that making a move means texting back and forth.

It's literally the biggest mistake that I see guys making these days when trying to get an ex girl back.

In many cases, a guy will convince himself that texting is the right thing to do, but in reality, he's only doing it because he's scared to call her and get her to meet up with him.

For example: A guy will say to himself, "Maybe she just wants to stay in touch with me until she feels ready to take things to the next level. So, until then, I'm not going to get pushy and scare her off by calling her. Besides, if she wanted me to call her she would say so. If I play my cards right, she'll eventually get tired of texting and she'll suggest that I give her a call, or even better, suggest that we meet up. Until then, I will just stick to text and hope for the best."

Yet, rather than make a woman think that she should be the one to grow a pair of balls and call her ex (i.e. be the man in the situation), she loses interest in him for being such a wimp and hiding behind texts.

She may also think something like, "Clearly he's not as interested in getting back together as I thought. Oh well, I gave it a shot. I guess I just need to get over him now and move on."

Here's the thing:

The longer a guy takes to call his ex on the phone and actively re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for him, the more he risks losing her.

All it takes for her to move on is to meet a new guy that she feels more attracted to.

She doesn't have to remain loyal to her ex because they've broken up, so if she feels like hooking up with a new guy, she can and usually will.

Then, when her ex finally builds up the courage to give her a call, she will say something like, "I'm sorry. I tried texting you to say hi before, but you didn't do anything about it. I've met someone else now and I'm happy. You should have called me when you had the chance. I wish you all the best now. Goodbye.â€

He is then left feeling crushed that he missed his opportunity to get her back.

Of course, he can still get her back if she has moved on, but it just makes it harder for him because another guy is now in the picture.

So, if you want to avoid something like that to happening to you, I recommend that you stop wondering things like, â€What does it mean if your ex texts you randomly to say hi,â€ and just get her on a phone call with you.

When you're talking to her on the phone, focus on making her smile, laugh and feel happy to be talking to you again.

When she's smiling and laughing while talking to you, the idea of seeing you again in person starts to feel like something she really wants to do.

So, make sure that you get her on a phone call with you right away.

By the way!

I absolutely do not recommend that you ask her to meet up with you via text messages.

Most guys try to do that (because they're too afraid to call, or think she prefers text) and it doesn't work.

If you want the highest chance of getting her back, you have to be confident enough to get her on a phone call.

On a phone call, she can hear the tonality of your voice to get a sense of your confidence and emotional strength.

If she senses confidence and emotional strength, she will automatically feel some respect and attraction for you.

However, if she senses insecurity and self-doubt, her guard will go up and she will find it difficult to feel much or any respect or attraction for you.

So, make sure that you are feeling confident and then just call her.

When you re-attract her on the phone, her guard comes down and she becomes open to meeting up with you to see what happens.

You can say something like, â€Anyway, so it's been fun talking to you again. How about we grab a cup of coffee together sometime this week as friends? I'm busy tomorrow and Tuesday, but I'm available on Wednesday and Thursday. Which day suits you the best?â€

If she sounds a bit uncertain, you can then add in a relaxed, easy-going voice, â€Don't worry. It's just a coffee as friends. I'm not asking you to get back with me. It's just a quick cup of coffee and a catch up between friends. We're mature enough to be able to do that, right? So, how about it? What's it going to be, Wednesday or Thursday?â€

When you get her to agree, just go ahead and arrange a time, date and place to meet up.

[image: Re-attract her at the meet up]

Then, re-attract her and get her back at the meet up.

Another reason why your ex might still be randomly texting you to say hi is!

3. She misses you or thinks of you from time to time, so she decided to text you to say hi

[image: She misses you, so she wanted to say hi]

Sometimes a woman will miss her ex and send him a text to say hi because she was randomly thinking about him, or had been missing him sometimes and decided to act on that feeling.

In some cases, a woman might have come across some old photos of her ex on her phone, laptop or social media pages and it stirred up some good memories.

Alternatively, she may have passed an old hangout (e.g. a restaurant, bar, beach) that reminds her of him, so she just decided to text him to say hi.

Here's the thing thoughâ€¦!

If a woman misses you and is secretly hoping that you and her might be able to get back, she usually won't come right out and admit it.

Why?

Some of her reasons might be becauseâ€¦!

- Although she does miss him, she fears that he might not have changed since the break up (e.g. he's still insecure) and worries that it might be a mistake to get back with him.
- She knows that he still doesn't understand her real, secret reasons for breaking up with him (e.g. she might have said something like, â€œI need some spaceâ€ or, â€œI don't have feelings for you anymoreâ€ when breaking up with him, but her real, secret reason was that he was too emotionally sensitive and it turned her off).
- She's not sure if he feels the same way about her and doesn't want to make a fool of herself by saying she wants to get back together, only to then be rejected by him.
- She wants him to take the lead in the ex back process without her help or reassurance.

So, if your ex randomly texts you to say hi, there's a good chance that it's because she misses you and is thinking about you.

The question is thoughâ€¦!

What are you going to do about it?

Are you going to continue wondering things like, â€œWhat does it mean if your ex texts you randomly to say hi?â€ or are you going to call her, spark her feelings for you again and get her back?

Another reason why your ex might still be texting you isâ€¦!

4. She's checking to see if you're still missing her, or if you've moved on

There are many reasons why a woman will check to see if her ex is still missing her, or if he has already moved on.

For example:

- She doesn't like the idea of her ex moving on before she's had a chance to get over him and find a new guy.
- She's mad at him for hurting her and wants to give him false hope to punish him further.
- She still has feelings for him and she's afraid of losing him for real.
- She is curious to see if he has been able to recover from the break up and move on.
- She is curious to find out if he's still committed to her and the relationship and is hoping she will come back.

To find out what she wants to know, a woman might text her ex to say hi and maybe even ask him things like, "So, what have you been up to?" or even "Are you seeing anyone else yet?"

Here's the thing though!

I don't recommend that you spend too much time thinking about what her motives could be.

If you want her back, you just have to take the lead and make the ex back process happen.

Don't wait for her to give you a crystal clear signal (e.g. a text saying, "I want you back. Call me!") because chances are high that she won't be that direct and open.

So, simply pick up the phone and start triggering her sexual and romantic feelings for you by making her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you.

Then, confidently guide her back into a relationship with you.

You have all the power to make her feel attracted again, but she's not going to wait for you forever.

If you think you have a chance with her, act on that now.

What Does it Mean if Your Ex Kisses You On the Cheek When She Sees You?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible meanings for the kiss on the cheek from your ex:

1. She's trying to show you that her heart is still open to you

Sometimes, a woman will continue to have feelings for her ex after a break up, even though she won't openly admit it to him.

For example: She might think to herself, I know that we're not together anymore, but I do miss how good it felt to be in his arms. Yes, he stuffed up (e.g. because he was too insecure and needy, he was too nice and allowed me to walk all over him), but he wasn't all bad. There are many great things about him that I loved (e.g. his drive and determination, his ability to make me laugh). If he changed the things that were turning me off, I would be interested in getting back together again.

She won't tell him that though because she doesn't want to have to explain all of her subtle, personal needs and wants in terms of attraction (e.g. she wants him to be more ballsy, to dominate her more in the bedroom, to make her feel more girly in comparison to his masculinity).

It's embarrassing for a woman to admit that and in many cases, a woman fears that a guy will take it the wrong way (e.g. start becoming very aggressive and domineering, when all she really wants is him to be a bit more ballsy, while still being a good guy).

So, she will just keep quite and hope that he realizes what she needs from him, changes and gets her back.

Most guys don't realize what their ex woman really needs from them in terms of attraction, so they fail to get her back.

To properly re-attract your ex, you have to be offering her the kind of attraction experience she really wants, which is almost always different to what you think it is.

If she was getting the attraction experience she really wanted, she most likely wouldn't have broken up with you.

That's to say your ex doesn't have any feelings for you anymore though.

In many cases where a woman still kisses her ex on the cheek, she's trying to show him that her heart is still open and she's hoping that he can re-attract her.

So, how can you re-attract her?

Some of the things that you can do to reactivate your ex's feelings of attraction are:

- Understand her real reasons for breaking up with you (e.g. Did you take her love for granted and assume that she would stay with you forever regardless of how you behaved? Did you stop believing in your attractiveness to her and became needy and clingy as a result? Did you break her trust by lying or regularly losing control of your emotions and scaring her? Did you make her feel feminine and girly in comparison to your masculinity, or did you make her feel more like a neutral friend? Did you remain confident in the relationship, or did you become too emotionally sensitive?)

- Make some changes or adjustments to yourself based on the real reasons why she broke up with you.
- Interact with her (over the phone and especially in person) so she can see for herself that, not only have you understood her reasons for breaking up with you, but you have also improved and become a better man as a result.

When she can see for herself that you really have changed and are no longer the same guy she broke up with, she will naturally feel respect for you because you put in the effort to improve and succeeded at it.

When she respects you, she will also feel sexually attracted to you and with those two emotions, reconnecting with the love in her heart becomes easy.

You can then guide her back into a relationship with you and enjoy the great times ahead together for you as a couple.

So, make sure that you are ready to properly re-attract her and reactivate her feelings when you interact with her.

Don't just assume that because she kisses you on the cheek when she sees you, it means that she will one day say, "I want you back. Let's start again."

That's not how most women work.

Why?

A woman wants to see that you are man enough to take responsibility for the ex back process and get her back, rather than waiting around for her to making it easy for you.

Some guys might think, "Why are women like that? Why don't they just say what they want, rather than play all these silly games?"

The main reason why is because women are instinctively attracted to men who remain confident and go after what they want in life (including their ex if they still love her) regardless of how challenging it may be.

This is a primal, instinctive type of attraction that is directly linked to a man's perceived ability to survive, thrive and prosper under pressure.

It's something that women feel and react to instinctively, rather than it being a case of women just wanting to be a pain in the butt.

Women simply react to their instincts, so if a guy consistently triggers her instincts in a positive way, she feels attracted to him and wants to be with him.

So, it's important that you remain confident and believe in yourself, no matter how distant your ex is being or what she is saying to try to make you feel insecure.

You have to believe in yourself.

Don't wait for her to spell it out for you (e.g. "Okay, I want you back now. Let's get into a relationship") before you make a move and make it happen.

Just focus on sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you whenever you interact with her and confidently guide her back into a relationship with you again.

Every day, all over the world, guys are able to get their ex woman back in that way and you can do it too.

Believe in yourself.

Get her back.

Another reason why your ex might kiss you on the cheek is thatâ€¦!

2. She's just trying to keep you hoping, while she secretly moves on behind your back

[image: She is secretly moving on behind your back]

There are many reasons why a woman might want to give her ex false hope, while she secretly focuses on finding a replacement guy behind his back.

For example:

If he broke up with her initially and she accepted him back, only to then break up with him again, she might want to make him regret breaking up with her by moving on before he does.

In other words, it's payback for how he made her feel and it's also emotional protection for her so she feels better about the break up and he is in pain as he sees her move on.

Alternatively, a woman might feel insecure about her attractiveness and want to make sure that she finds herself another guy before she fully breaks off with her ex.

So, she will keep him around and make him feel as though she is still interested (e.g. by kissing him on the cheek when they meet up), but she will be secretly trying to find a replacement guy, so she can move on before he does.

In a case like that, it's not payback.

It's just about emotional protection, so she can more easily move on from the break up and not experience the kind of emotional pain that the person who gets dumped usually feels.

Finally, another reason why a woman will sometimes string her ex along, is because she wants to get revenge on him for the pain he caused her in the relationship.

He treated her badly, took her for granted and never really made her feel secure in his commitment for him.

So, after going through that for many months or years, she now wants to get some revenge.

She will kiss him on the cheek when she meets him and let him feel as though he has a chance with her, but she will never commit to the idea of giving him another chance.

He will try hard to impress her and basically do whatever she wants to get another chance with her, but she will continue to give him mixed messages and never commit to giving him another chance.

Then, when she has secured a replacement guy, she can say, â€œThereâ€™s something I need to tell you. Iâ€™ve met someone else and Iâ€™m really happy now. So, I ask that you please respect that. Itâ€™s over between us. I wish you all the bestâ€ and watch as his heart breaks into a million pieces.

Revenge.

It feels good for one person and horrible for the other.

Yet, that's what happens to a guy when he doesn't know how to re-attract his ex and make her want him back so badly that she stops the games and just gives him another chance.

So, be careful not to believe that your ex is giving you another chance, simply because she gives you a kiss on the cheek when you meet up.

It might simply be a ploy from her to keep you around long enough to finally get revenge on you for how you made her feel.

If you think that your ex might be kissing you on the cheek to keep you hoping, I recommend that you make her feel very attracted to you again, but don't show her that you're trying hard to get her back.

Stop chasing and start making her feel attracted.

When she is attracted and notices that you're not chasing her and seem to be moving on with your life, she will feel the pain of losing you and want to give you another chance to stop the pain.

How can you make her feel attracted to you again?

The best way to do it is to interact with her over the phone and in person, so she can feel attracted to the new and improved you (e.g. you're so much more confident now, you make her feel girly and feminine in comparison to the more masculine way that you talk, feel, behave and take action).

You can also show her that you believe in your attractiveness and value to her by maintaining your confidence around her, especially when she tries to make you feel insecure by talking about another guy or being cold, distant or even rude.

[image: You've changed. I never thought I'd feel this way again]

Then, when she is feeling attracted again and possibly saying things like, â€œYouâ€™ve really changed. I never thought Iâ€™d feel this way about you again, but I do. I really enjoy hanging out together now,â€ go ahead and give her 3 to 7 days of space.

She will be feeling attracted and wanting you, but will also notice that you're not chasing her.

This allows her to really start to miss you and begin to wonder about the possibility of losing you to another girl.

In most cases, a woman will text or call the guy during the 3 to 7 days to say hello because she won't be able to deal with the pain or the fear of losing him.

Another reason why your ex kisses you on the cheek when she sees you might be becauseâ€

3. She's just using what she thinks is good social etiquette in a situation like that

In a case where a woman has little or no experience with relationships and break ups, she might simply be confused about what the right way to interact with an ex is.

So, to be nice, she gives you a kiss on the cheek when you and her meet up.

Alternatively, she might be worried that you will get angry or start pressuring her to get back with you if she seems distant, so she will try to make you feel okay by greeting you with a kiss on the cheek.

In her eyes, sheâs trying to ease the tension and make it easier for you and her to interact with each other now that youâve broken up.

Of course, if you still have feelings for her and really want her back, itâs only natural that her kissing you in the cheek might make you believe thereâs more behind it than just saying hello in a polite way.

The good news is that there can be much more behind that kiss than meets the eye.

As mentioned earlier in this article, she might be doing it as a way of showing you that her heart is still open to you and sheâs hoping that you re-attract her and get her back.

So, itâs always better to think of the kiss in the positive way.

[image: Always choose to be confident around a woman]

As a man, you should always choose to be confident around a woman, rather than doubt yourself because women are naturally attracted to confidence in men.

Of course, itâs also important to understand the other possible meanings for the kiss (e.g. sheâs just doing it to be nice, she thinks that itâs the right etiquette to use with an ex), so you are being realistic and not missing potential signs from her that sheâs no longer interested.

If she isnât interested, donât worry.

You can make her interested.

A womanâs attraction for a man is fluid and changeable.

In other words, if you are talking and behaving in ways that make a woman feel naturally attracted to a guy (e.g. youâre being confident, charismatic, masculine), then your ex is going to feel attracted to you and as a result, is going to start to feel interested in being with you again.

However, if you are talking and behaving in ways that make a woman feel turned off (e.g. youâre being insecure, awkward, emotionally sensitive), then she isnât going to feel attracted and as a result, isnât going to be interested in getting into a relationship with you again.

So from now on, I recommend that you use every interaction that you have with her to spark her feelings for you and make her feel properly attracted again.

Then, when she kisses you on the cheek, she will secretly be thinking something like, âI wish heâd take me in his arms and kiss me for real. I want him back. I hope he makes a move and kisses me for real. Maybe we can even have sex today. Letâs see what happens.â

She will then wait for you to have the confidence to make a move and get her back.

A final reason why your ex might kiss you on the cheek when she sees you isâ

4. Itâs her way of saying that she only sees you as a friend now

Women arenât all the same, so thereâs not a guaranteed set list of things that a woman will do to show her ex boyfriend that she wants him back, or doesnât want him back.

For example: You and your ex might have had a passionate sexual relationship and have really enjoyed kissing and making out with each other for long periods of time.

Now that she only gives you a quick kiss on the cheek, itâs her way of showing you that sheâs no longer going to be passionate or sexual around you anymore.

However, if you want her back, you don't have to just accept that and move on without her.

You can re-attract her and make her want more than just giving you a kiss on the cheek.

If she currently sees your relationship as just a friendship, then use that to your advantage.

Use the friendship with your ex as a way of staying in touch with her and changing how she feels about you by re-attracting her again.

For example: The next time your ex kisses you on the cheek in a friendly way, rather than just accept it and be on your best behavior around her, use it as an opportunity to attract her by using humor to make her laugh.

So, when she kisses you on the cheek, you can smile, pause for a moment and jokingly say, "Oh, so I get a kiss on the cheek do I? What's next? Are you going to play footsies with me under the table, or tell me that you have sore shoulders and need a massage?"

In other words, you're playfully suggesting that she's being sexually forward and is trying to make moves on you and get you back.

Women love that kind of humor and will almost always get in on it and start joking around with you.

For example: She might say, "No, it was just a friendly kiss on the cheek" and you can then playfully and suspiciously say, "Ohhh, okay then. I believe you. Just keep your feet away from under the table. No footsies" and have a laugh with her.

When you're making her feel attracted to you again (e.g. by being confident, using humor, being charismatic), she will stop looking at you as a friend, or as her ex that she doesn't have any feelings for anymore.

Her feelings will come flooding back and she will know that she wants more than just to give you a kiss in the cheek.

[image: Get more than just a kiss on the cheek]

She will want a relationship with you again.

That's what you want, right?

If so, then make sure to use any interaction that you have with her from now on to make her feel respect, sexual attraction and love for you again.

If you do that, it won't just be a kiss on the cheek that she gives you.

My Ex Unfriended Me On Facebook. Now What Do I Do?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

When your ex unfriends you on Facebook, it's not the end of the road.

You can actually use it to your advantage to make her miss you and want you back.

How? Follow these 6 steps:

1. Change your post settings to public, so she can see whatever you post even though she's not a Facebook friend

[image: Change your Facebook post settings to public]

One of the best ways to re-attract your ex is by enjoying a fun life without her and letting her see it via social media.

If she has unfriended you, just change your post settings from 'friends' to 'public' for everything that you post from now on.

Believe it or not, even though she is the one who unfriended you, she is still going to be curious about what you're up to.

If she is checking social media and thinks of you, she will try to stop by your profile to see if there's anything new.

In most cases, a woman just wants to check to see if her ex guy is sad, lonely and lost without her.

If she sees that there's nothing going on in his life, she can feel good about herself and not have to worry about him moving on and being happy again before she is.

If she checks his profile and sees that he is confident, happy and enjoying fun times with other people, then things change.

She starts to feel respect and attraction for him based on the fact that he has been emotionally strong enough to get on with life without her.

As a result, she starts to miss him and imagine what it would be like if they were back together.

So, make sure that whatever you post on social media from now on shows you being confident, emotionally strong and getting on with your life in a positive way.

Not all guys know what you're learning right now.

So, when a guy's ex woman unfriends him on Facebook, he might make the mistake of sending her an emotional message like, "Why have you unfriended me? What did I do?! Is this what our relationship has come to? Are you just going to delete me from your life? Did I even mean anything to you?"

He might start talking about his feelings for her and hoping that she takes pity on him.

Alternatively, he might get angry at her and start calling her all sorts of names or accusing her of being disloyal, a user and so on.

Yet, as you would understand, that's not an effective approach to take to get a woman back.

Rather than making her feel good about refriending him, she is more likely to think, "I can't" believe how heâ€™s behaving now. I mean, I felt a bit guilty for unfriending him, but now that Iâ€™ve seen this side of him Iâ€™m glad that I did it. Iâ€™m better off cutting him out of my life completely from now on. I probably should also block his number on my phone so he canâ€™t call or text me. Maybe need to mark his e-mail as spam too. Iâ€™m done with him.â€

Important: Whatever you say and do from now on will either make your ex feel respect and attraction for you, or turn her off the idea of being with you even more.

So, be careful about what you say and do from now on.

Many guys ruin their chances of getting a woman back by losing control of their emotions (e.g. sulking, getting angry, seeking pity, being jealous or controlling, verbally attacking her, crying or being wimpy).

You’ve got to maintain control of your emotions and be a man that she can naturally feel respect, attraction and love for.

If you’re no longer able to interact with her on a phone call or in person, make sure that youâ€™|

2. Post up photos of you having fun with new people

[image: Post up photos of yourself having fun with other people]

When your ex decides to check up on you (e.g. because sheâ€™s bored, lonely or curious) itâ€™s important that you are portraying an attractive image for her on social media.

For example: Imagine the impression that a woman will have if her ex only posts photos of him alone, or looking sad or bored.

Rather than think, â€Maybe I should take him back. Heâ€™s clearly having such a difficult time without me, so he needs me. I feel so flattered to see that he canâ€™t get on with his life now that weâ€™re broken up. I just love knowing that Iâ€™m his source of confidence and happiness. He needs me. He’s a needy guy. I love needy guys! I have to take him backâ€ and then quickly re-friending him on Facebook out of pity, she will likely be thinking, â€He’s so unattractive now that he can’t feel confident without me around. I want a man who is confident, happy and forward moving in life no matter what happens around him. Heâ€™s just letting his life pass him by now as he sits around feeling sorry for himself. Iâ€™m glad that weâ€™re not together anymore because being with him would have dragged me down too. I made the right choice. I’ve got to keep moving on without him.â€

Now compare that to what will be going through your exâ€™s mind when she sees photos of you and other people (e.g. new friends or acquaintances) doing fun things together like:

- Participating in outdoor events (e.g. hiking, group exercise in park, white water rafting, abseiling).
- Going to parties (e.g. a beach party, a fancy dress party, a street party, BBQ at someone’s house).
- Going to interesting events (e.g. a music festival, a carnival, a Formula 1 Grand Prix in a different country).
- Doing fun activities with other people (e.g. salsa dancing).

Most guys worry that their ex woman will be angry and seek revenge by quickly hooking up with other guys.

Yet, that's not how a woman's attraction works.

Women are naturally attracted to confident guys who are liked by other people.

On the flipside, women are naturally turned off by insecure, self-doubting guys who don't feel worthy of being around happy people who are enjoying their life.

Sometimes it's not just worthiness though.

Sometimes a guy feels worthy, but he's so upset about the break up that he can't be bothered dealing with other people.

and that's the problem.

Women aren't attracted to guys who are emotionally dependent on them.

If a guy can't back on his own two feet after a break up, a woman is going to feel turned off by his emotional dependence on her and the relationship.

What a woman wants is a guy who is confident, happy and forward moving in life, with or without her support or reassurance.

A woman doesn't want to be a guy's source of confidence, happiness, self-esteem, worthiness or purpose in life.

This is why it's so important to show your ex that you're not lonely, lost and depressed without her.

You've got to rise up to the occasion and be more emotionally strong than you've ever been before.

This break up is a one, big test for you.

You're either going to pass it and get her back, or you're going to fail it and lose her.

It's up to you.

If you want to show her that you've changed and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you via social media, you've got to start posting up photos of you having fun with other people.

When she sees that, she will naturally start to miss you and in most ex back cases that I've worked on, the woman will then refriend her ex.

So make sure you ditch the sad, lonely photos right away and replace them with some fun alternatives.

BTW: Many guys don't post sad, lonely photos of themselves.

Instead, they post photos of their pets, car, landscapes and places they visit.

Those are lonely photos too.

If your ex assumes that you're hurting from the break up and aren't having fun with other people, she will look at photos like that as meaning that you're all on your own and feeling sad, lonely and lost without her.

It doesn't matter if you post a happy photo of your pet, or post a photo of you learning how to fly a plane on your own.

None of that stuff makes a woman think, "Wow, he's so confident now. He's having fun with other people. Maybe there are women around who will feel attracted to him now. I have to get him back."

The only thing that works is posting up photos of you having fun with other people.

3. Change your profile photo to a confident, happy photo of yourself

Youâ€™ve probably heard of the expression that, â€œA picture is worth a thousand words.â€

In terms of attracting an ex back, “a picture is worth a thousand words” simply means that you can show her the new you without having to write to her about it and explain.

On that note, I don’t recommend that you write to your ex and tell her about all the things you’ve changed, how you feel about her and so on.

That doesn’t work.

A woman doesn’t want to have to read a long letter, e-mail or message from her ex guy that she is no longer attracted to.

If she receives something like that and hasn’t seen photos of him having fun with other people, she will just assume that he’s hurting, lost, sad and lonely without her.

Not attractive.

So, don’t try the old “love letter to an ex girlfriend” thing.

It doesn’t work.

Remember: If sheâ€™s unfriended you on Facebook, itâ€™s most likely because she doesnâ€™t think very highly of you at the moment.

She has probably lost most or all of her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

So, if she notices that you still have the same Facebook profile photo that hasnâ€™t changed since before she broke up with you, she is going to look at you as still being the same.

Rather than think, â€œWow. He must be so busy enjoying life without me that he hasnâ€™t even had time to change his profile photo,â€ sheâ€™s more likely to think, â€œThatâ€™s so typical of him. Heâ€™s still stuck at the same level he was at when we broke up. Nothing about him ever changes. As much as I hate to admit it, Iâ€™m much better off without him. His life is going nowhere.â€

So, make sure that you update your profile photo as well.

The more confident and happy you appear in your profile photo, the more attractive you become in her eyes.

While youâ€™re at itâ€¦!

4. Change your cover photo to a photo of you having great fun with other people

[image: Make your ex miss you via Facebook]

So many guys make the mistake of having a cover photo of a landscape, a car, a game they like, a pet and so on.

That doesn't work to re-attract and ex woman.

You've got to show her that you're having fun with other people.

If you do, she is much more likely to contact you, refriend you or at least accept your friend request.

In some cases that I've seen, a woman will use the change of her ex's cover photo as an excuse to contact him.

For example: She might message you and say something like, â€œHey, how are you doing? I just saw your new cover photo â€œ itâ€™s really nice. You look like youâ€™re having so much fun. So, what have you been up to? How's things?â€œ

To spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you again, you just need to be confident, easy going and talk to her in a friendly way, without trying to get her back right away.

For example: You can respond with something along the lines of, â€œWho is this? Hehe. Just kidding, itâ€™s great to hear from you. Yes, I am having lots of fun these days. I canâ€™t believe how busy things have been for me lately. Iâ€™ve met some great new people and weâ€™re doing a lot of cool stuff together. How about you? How have you been?â€œ

If she wants you back, she will feel some emotional pain to hear that you're having fun without her and seem fine.

She might then decide to refriend you as a way of opening the lines of communication between you and hopefully signaling to you that she wants you back.

However, if she doesn't refriend you right away (e.g. because she doesn't want to come across as the jealous ex), you can take the initiative andâ€¦

5. Contact her via a Facebook message to refriend you, or ask her on a phone call

Although messaging your ex is the quickest way to ask her to refriend you, itâ€™s also a lot easier for her to ignore you or play hard to get.

So, if it's possible, I recommend that you get her on a phone call with you instead.

Start the call off in a positive, confident way and focus on getting her smiling, laughing and feeling good while talking to you.

When you do that, she will naturally feel some respect and attraction for you and will be more willing to re-add you as a friend.

By the wayâ€¦

Most guys try to skip all of this and try to get their ex woman back via text.

Yet, since she has no evidence that he has changed, she either ignores his texts or replies to some and then eventually blocks his number.

This is why itâ€™s essential that you follow the steps above before you try to get her back for real.

When she can see for herself that you really have changed, she will naturally open up to refriending you, talking to you on the phone again and meeting up with you in person.

Finallyâ€¦

6. Get her to meet up with you in person to say hello as friends. Then, re-attract her at the meet up

[image: Get her to meet up with you as friends]

Once you've gotten your ex to refriend you, go ahead and ask her to meet up with you.

This is always best done over the phone, because it's easier for you to attract her by being confident and making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

However, if you try to call and she doesn't answer, don't worry.

A few minutes later, just send her this message: Hey Liz, how about we meet up sometime this week for a quick cup of coffee and to say hello as friends?

If she is hesitant, you can say, Look, it's not big deal. It's just a quick catch up. However, if it makes you feel better, think of it as a chance for us to say goodbye and not contact each other again, if that's what you really want. So, how about it? I'm busy on Tuesday and Wednesday, but free to catch up on Monday and Thursday. Which day suits you best?

If she agrees, you can then arrange to meet up with her at a convenient place and time.

When she meets up with you and sees that you really have changed, not only will she not want to say goodbye forever, but she will also be willing to refriend you if she hasn't already.

Remember: Just because your ex unfriended you on Facebook, it doesn't mean that all hope is lost.

You can re-attract her via social media and guide her through the rest of the ex back process.

How Can I Stop Myself From Feeling Jealous and Hurt When My Ex Talks About Her New Life Without Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

To stop yourself from feeling jealous and hurt when your ex talks about her new life without you, I recommend that you follow these 6 steps:

1. Become emotionally independent of her

[image: Become emotionally independent of her]

Essentially what being emotionally independent means is that although you want your ex back, you don't actually need her back to feel good about yourself and your life.

It doesn't mean that you have to ignore her for months or even talk to or date other women.

None of that.

You just have to quickly get yourself to a point where you are no longer depending on her for your sense of confidence and happiness.

You want her back, but don't need her.

Do you think you can do that?

Right now, the idea of getting over the break up and living a happy, productive, independent life without her might seem almost impossible, right?

You want her back so bad.

Don't worry, I understand.

However, becoming emotionally independent of her is not only something that you can do (very quickly), but it's also something you must do if you want her back.

Here's why:

The more time you waste remaining stuck thinking things like, "How can I stop myself from feeling jealous and hurt when my ex talks about her new life without me? How can she have moved on so quickly? Didn't what we had together mean anything to her? Why doesn't she care? I want her back so bad. I need her in my life. I miss her so bad. Why does this hurt so much?" the more you actually ruin your chances of getting her back.

Why?

Women aren't attracted to guys who are emotionally dependent on them.

A woman feels attracted to a man who loves her and wants her, but who doesn't actually need her for his sense of identity, happiness and confidence in life.

If a guy is emotionally dependent on his woman, she is going to pick up on that based on how he talks to her, behaves and takes action.

She can even pick up on it while texting back and forth with him, based on how he replies, the effort he puts into impress her, what he focuses on about what she is texting, how confident or insecure he seems and so on.

She can see itâ€¦and it's not attractive at all.

Look at it this wayâ€¦

Imagine that a woman calls her ex boyfriend (or husband), has a bit of a chat and then tells him about how she is planning on going to a party on the weekend with her friends.

She then asks, *"So, what about you? Are you doing anything interesting this weekend?"*â€¦

If he then responds with something like, *"No. Iâ€™m not doing anything. Iâ€™m just staying home. Maybe Iâ€™ll watch TV, but Iâ€™ll probably just catch up on some work for Monday,"*â€¦ what will she think?

Will she think something like, *"Oh, how sweet! He's just sitting around doing nothing now that we've broken up. I feel so flattered that he is still dedicated to me, even though I don't plan on getting back with him. Maybe I should give up all the fun that Iâ€™m currently having to get back with him,"*â€¦ or will she be more likely to think negatively of him for not having the confidence to get on with his life in the meantime?

Here's the thing..

To show her that he's moving on, he doesn't need to go and date other women or get over her completely.

Instead, he just needs to get on with life and feel confident, happy and forward moving without her. Why?

Women don't respect and feel attracted to guys (especially ex's) who are emotionally dependent on them.

It's just not attractive to women.

[image: A woman doesn't want an emotionally dependent man]

A woman doesn't want to feel responsible for a guy's confidence, happiness and sense of self worth in life.

She wants a man who has all that without needing her support.

Ironically, when you take ownership of your confidence, happiness and sense of self worth, a woman actually cheers you on and wants to support you.

She feels proud to have you as her boyfriend (or husband) because she knows how difficult it is to find a confident, emotionally independent, good man loves her and cares about her.

It's so difficult for women to find that.

It's super easy for a woman to find an emotionally dependent (e.g. clingy, needy) guy, but to find a real man is next to impossible for most women.

So, when a woman finds a real man, she just doesn't want to let go.

She feels so much respect, attraction, love and pride about being with him that there's no benefit to her to break up with him.

However, with an emotionally dependent man, she feels embarrassed, annoyed, turned off and unhappy, so there is plenty of benefit for her to break up with him and try to find someone new.

How about you and your ex?

Are you read to interact with her and let her sense your emotional independence, or do you still feel needy of her love, attention and approval?

Do you want her back, or do you need her back?

If your ex interacts with you and senses that you need her back to feel better about yourself, she will close up and feel turned off by you.

So, make sure that you are prepared to properly re-attract her by letting her see that you are no longer dependent on her for your emotional security.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should put on an act and pretend that you don't care about her anymore either, to hopefully hide your pain.

Why?

If she currently doesn't have feelings for you and is already getting on with her life, it won't matter much to her if you've also moved on.

Sure, her ego might feel a bit bruised, but if she's busy partying and possibly even hooking up with and dating other guys, she will most likely feel relieved that you're not desperately trying to get her back anymore.

So, if you want your ex back, don't bother pretending to be over her in the hopes that she will care.

Instead, focus on becoming emotionally independent and getting to the point where you genuinely believe that it's possible for you to live a happy and fulfilled life without her.

The best way to do that is by making your purpose in life (i.e. your biggest goals, dreams and ambitions) the most important thing to you, rather than putting your ex on a pedestal and seeing her as your main reason for living.

Sure, you still care for her and want her back, but you don't need her to give you a sense of identity and purpose in life.

Some guys worry that if they give their ex woman that impression, she will feel annoyed that he doesn't need her and is doing fine without her.

That's not how women work though.

Women want an emotionally independent, emotionally strong, forward moving guy that they can go along with.

A woman doesn't want to have to be the strong one in the relationship or be the leader, so don't think that you will be turning her off by being a strong, leading man who is getting on with and enjoying his life without her.

It will attract her.

She might test your confidence by pretending to be annoyed by it, but that is only a test.

She just wants to see if your newfound approach to being a man is real, or if you're just putting on an act to impress her.

The fact, a guy who has a bigger purpose in life (other than his relationship with a woman) is naturally more confident, has a higher self-esteem and is emotionally independent.

As a result, he is naturally more attractive to women.

You can't lose by being that way.

So, don't worry about her potentially feel upset about you getting on with your life without her.

She won't be upset.

She will be impressed.

She will also feel regret for breaking up with you and start to feel like she is losing the man she should be with.

As a result, she will begin to feel drawn to you and her new life will stop feeling as fun without you in it.

The next step is to

2. Improve your ability to attract her during interactions

When some guys read about improving their ability to attract their ex during interactions, they often make the mistake of thinking about attraction in terms of the physical.

Don't do that.

Physical attraction is the least important thing to your ex right now when it comes to you.

What matters is emotional attraction (i.e. how she feels when she interacts with you, based on your confidence level, approach to the conversation, behavior).

Not all guys know that though.

So, when a guy focuses on making superficial improvements to himself (e.g. going to the gym, buying new clothes, getting a new haircut), he is simply wasting precious time, money and energy on the wrong things.

For example: Imagine that a guy spends a month improving himself physically by losing some weight (or putting on some muscle) and getting himself a new wardrobe.

He then calls his ex on the phone and convinces her to meet up with him to show off his new, attractive look, which he hopes will make her want him back.

At the meet up, his ex says things like, "You look so great," or, "I like your new style. It really suits you."

He then thinks, "Cool! She likes my new look. It's only a matter of time before we get back together again."

Then, just when he thinks everything is going well, she says, "By the way, I'm going away for a few days with some friends for a beach party vacation. I'm so excited about it. My friends are bringing along some guys who are really good at surfing. One of them has promised to teach me how to surf. I can't wait! It's going to be so much fun."

Suddenly, all the things about him that initially turned his ex off come to the surface (e.g. his insecurity, self-doubt, jealousy).

He starts feeling like he did when they were a couple (i.e. overly protective, clingy, suspicious of her).

He then says, "Why are you meeting up with me then? You're obviously going to be sleeping with other guys this weekend. Why would you even waste my time by coming to meet me? Did you just want to rub it all in my face and hurt me even more?"

She is then left thinking, "He's still the same. He's so insecure. This meet up was a mistake" and she then leaves and it becomes even more difficult for him to get her back.

Here's the thing...

It's totally natural and normal for a guy to assume that his ex woman is going to potentially sleep with one of the surfer guys.

That's totally normal.

However, verbalizing it, complaining about it and making a big deal about it is not helpful to his cause of getting her back.

If he had just said something like, "Coolâsounds like it will be fun. I've always wanted to give surfing a try. People say it's hard to stand up on the board and keep your balance" and let her talk about it with him, she would have relaxed and opened up further.

He could have then attracted her by being confident and using some humor like, "Well, you're a bit of a clumsy girl, so you'll probably be falling off most of the time" or something like that.

As a result, she could have relaxed and opened up a little bit more, rather than having to close up completely because he was being insecure, jealous and controlling.

When she relaxed and opened up, he could have continued to build on her attraction for him.

If he did a good enough job of it, the meet up may have ended in a kiss and maybe even sex.

Then, she might have cancelled plans to go on the beach party weekend.

Of course, there's no guarantee of that, but it's a much better approach to take than being a turn off.

So, don't make that mistake of turning your ex off when you interact with her.

Remember: How you make her feel during interactions from now on is what matters most to her.

For example: When you talk to your ex on the phone or in personâ!

- Do you make her feel feminine and girly, or are you always on your best behavior and treat her more like a neutral friend or big sister when she's with you?
- Do you make her laugh and feel happy to be interacting with you, or does she feel tense, stressed out and like she can't wait to get away from you as quickly as possible?
- When she is being cold or distant, do you remain confident and self-assured, or do you become nervous, anxious and start doubting your attractiveness to her?
- Are you more emotionally dominant than her, or does she walk all over you with her confident personality?

Those things matter way more to a woman than a guy's appearance.

It's about how you make her feel when you interact with her.

That is what counts.

So, if you're serious about getting your ex back, you have to improve your ability to attract her during interactions.

The more she can see that you're no longer the same guy she broke up with, the more interested she will be in including you back into her new life.

3. Reactivate her feelings for you

[image: Reactivate her feelings for you]

Every interaction that you have with your ex from now on will be an opportunity for you to reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love.

Whether you're sending her a quick text, e-mail, a message on social media, calling her on the phone or meeting up with her in person, it's a chance for you to reawaken and build on her feelings for you.

So, make sure that you're not avoiding her.

To get an ex woman back, it's essential that you interact with her, so you can have opportunities to re-attract her.

So, don't ignore her because it's too painful for you to hear her talk about her new life without you.

You have to be stronger than that.

You have to take control of the ex back process, by interacting with her and making her feel attracted to you again.

One of the best ways to do that is to make her laugh and smile every time you interact with her.

For example: Imagine that you're on a phone call with your ex and she says something like, "I'm taking a cooking class next week."

Rather than give her a boring response like, "Oh, that's nice, which will do nothing to spark her feelings for you, you can instead say (in a joking way), 'At last! You're finally admitting that you need help! You're the only person I know who can't even boil water without burning it!'" and have a laugh.

Note: That kind of humor will still work if a woman is a bad cook or not.

If she's a bad cook, she will laugh and feel a bit self-conscious about the fact that she's hopeless in the kitchen.

If she's a great cook, she will know that you're just teasing her and will appreciate the balls you have to joke around with her in a moment like that, rather than being on your best behavior and being Mr. Nice Guy to suck up to her.

So, don't be afraid to joke around with your ex and let her feel your confidence as a man.

Women thrive on a man's confidence.

When you are confident enough to make a woman laugh and smile (especially in moments where other guys would be nervous, hesitant and cautious), a woman naturally feels respect and attraction for you.

The same applies to your ex.

She will feel it, even if she doesn't openly admit it to you.

Once you have reactivated some of her feelings, her guard will come down and she will feel much happier to talk to you on the phone and see you in person more often.

Then

4. Make her feel jealous that you are living a great life without her, or are at least very happy without her

[image: Make her feel jealous that you are living a great life without her]

At the moment, you can't stop yourself from feeling jealous and hurt when your ex talks about her new life without you.

Why?

You feel attracted to her and want (or need) her back, but she isn't interested and is happy without you.

That's a horrible feeling.

Don't worry though...

The good news is that you can transfer that feeling to her and make her feel horrible about not having you in her life anymore.

Even though she might not openly admit to you, when she sees that you're happy without her, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling twinges of jealousy.

You don't have to go out and date other women.

However, it will be helpful if you can be around friends where women are included in the group.

If your ex is attracted to you again, even just the idea of you being around other women will send her imagination running wild.

She will start imagining you feeling confident around other women and women feeling attracted to you as a result.

She will then imagine you kissing and having sex with a new woman and then beginning to forget about her.

If she wants you back, it will make her feel the horrible feeling of losing the one you really love.

You know the feeling.

It's the worst.

Give that feeling to her by letting her see that you're happy and enjoying life without her, AFTER you have re-attracted her.

It's important that you interact with her and re-attract her first, otherwise she won't really care about what you're up to and won't feel the pain of losing you.

So, make sure that you do it right.

Re-attract her first by interacting with her and making her feel attracted to the new and improved you (e.g. more emotionally intelligent, more emotionally masculine, charismatic, funny, confident).

A lot of guys don't know what you're learning right now, so they try to show their ex woman how sad, lonely and confused they are without her.

A guy does that in the hope that his ex woman will take pity on him, stop moving on with her life and come back.

Yet, in most cases, that tactic only backfires and causes a woman to think, "I'm so glad I dumped him! What a wimp! I can't believe that he's still stuck in the same frame of mind as he was" when we broke up. He hasn't made any progress and has just been wallowing in self pity. If I had any doubts about breaking up with him before, I don't anymore. I can now see that I'm definitely better off without him.

As you would know if you've read this far, a woman doesn't want a guy who is emotionally dependent on her.

She doesn't want to have to soften up and be a certain way to compensate for a guy's insecurity and lack of manliness.

A woman wants a man who is confident, happy and forward moving in life whether she is in his life or not, or whether she supports him or not.

A woman doesn't want to have to take on a supporting, encouraging role for an insecure guy|especially an insecure ex!

So, if you focus on being happy, fulfilled and more successful in life without your ex, you naturally become more attractive to her.

All of a sudden, she stops feeling like she made the right decision by breaking up with you and starts feeling like it was a mistake.

The next step is to

5. Make her miss you

The best way to make your ex miss you is by interacting with her over the phone (or in person if you can) and creating a newfound spark of respect and sexual attraction inside of her.

Once you relight the spark and bring her feelings back to life, she naturally starts to think about you and miss you.

So, after interacting with her and making her have feelings for you again, I recommend that you give her 3 to 7 days of space so she can miss you.

When she doesn't hear from you, she can then start thinking, Why isn't he calling me? What is he up to? Could he be out with another woman? Why do I even care? I hate to admit it, but I really miss him.

She might then text or call to say hello and possibly even suggest meeting up again in person.

Of course, in difficult cases where a woman really hates her ex, it might take 3 to 4 cycles of sparking her feelings and then giving her a few days space before she will really miss him and starts texting and calling him on her own.

However, from what I've seen by helping guys get women back for many years not, in most cases, 1 or 2 cycles (of interacting with her, reactivating her feelings and then giving her a few days of space) is enough.

Note: A mistake that some guys make is thinking that if ignoring a woman for 3 to 7 days will make her miss him, then avoiding her for 30 or even 60 days will work even better.

Yet, that's not how it works.

Why?

If a woman doesn't have much, or any feelings for her ex, not hearing from him will be a relief in most cases.

She can think, â€œOkayâ€¦well, I guess itâ€™s truly over between us then,â€œ and she will continue moving on with her life.

So remember, you just have to trigger your ex's feelings for you and then only ignore her for 3 to 7 days, if you want her to miss you enough to want you back.

Waiting any longer than that is not only a waste of time, but it might also backfire on you if she finds herself another guy while you're ignoring her for a long period of time in the hope that she comes running back.

6. Believe in your value based on the improvements you've made to yourself

Yes, you made some mistakes in the past, but youâ€™re not that guy anymore.

Youâ€™ve changed and improved and are now the kind of guy that any woman would feel proud to call her man, right?

If not, get to work on that right awayâ€¦!

Make sure that you improve, adjust or change the things that turned your ex off and lead to the break up.

If you can show her that when she interacts with you, she will be impressed and begin to feel some respect and attraction for you again.

So, don't beat yourself up the mistakes you made in the relationship.

Get past that.

Level up as a man and get ready to re-attract her.

When you do that, you will automatically begin to feel confident and believe in your value and attractiveness to her.

It will stop being about you trying to get her back and start being about you and her feeling attracted to each other and wanting to be together again.

By the wayâ€¦!

She wants to see that you believe in yourself and your value to her.

She might not admit that openly to you, but it's a very important part of re-attracting her.

The more you can believe in yourself and your attractiveness to her, the more you will exude the type of confidence and emotional masculinity that will make your ex (and other women) want to be with you.

She will be able to sense that youâ€™ve changed (e.g. you are truly confident and emotionally independent and don't need her to feel good about yourself) and as a result, she will automatically feel surges of respect and attraction for you again.

Finallyâ€¦!

7. Work on getting her back, but also work on making progress with your big ambitions and goals in life

One of the best ways to stop yourself from feeling jealous and hurt when your ex talks about her new life without you, is by getting busy on making progress on your big goals, dreams and ambitions.

This doesn't mean that you must go out and find random things to do to keep your mind off your ex.

Instead, it has to be about your biggest goals, dreams and ambitions.

For example: Ask yourself

- What is my biggest ambition in life outside of a relationship with a woman?
- What do I dream of being able to do, become, be, achieve or create?
- What is the one, big thing that I've always wanted to do with my life, but had been putting off because of the relationship with my ex?

The answer might come to you right away, but if it doesn't, just keep thinking about it.

Most guys get a gut instinct feeling of what they know they should be doing with their life.

If you get that feeling, follow through on it.

Start making progress and push yourself to rise through the levels of your true potential as a man.

You don't need to achieve it overnight (you can't anyway).

Just start making real progress towards it, so you can see that you don't actually need your ex to feel confident, happy and worthy in this life.

That's what she wants to see from you.

[image: Let her see that you really are different now]

When she sees that you are emotionally independent of her and are happy, confident and forward moving in life, she will automatically feel a newfound spark of respect and attraction for you.

As long as you have interacted with her and made her feel attracted to you, she will start wanting to become a part of your life again.

Important: You don't have to make huge progress and achieve your ambitions to make her feel respect and attraction for you.

You just have to start making some progress, so she can see that you are emotionally independent of her.

When she sees that, her guard will come down and she will allow herself to start feeling attracted to you again.

When that happens, she will naturally start to love you, miss you and want you.

As a result, getting her back happens naturally, easily and quickly.

So, don't waste anymore time.

Do what you have to do and you will not only get her back, but you will become an even greater man in the process.

My Ex is Getting Serious With Her New Guy. Can I Get in the Way?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, you can get in the way of your ex's new relationship.

Here's what you need to do:

1. Understand what part of the attraction experience he is giving her that you didn't

[image: What is he giving her that you didn't?]

Guys often find themselves wondering, "What can she possibly see in him? He's not her type. I'm such a better guy than him!" when thinking about their ex's new guy because he is usually very different in style, personality and behavior to themselves.

Yet, one of the main reasons why her new guy is attractive to her at the moment is because he is so different.

The thing is, when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because certain things about his thinking and behavior has caused her to lose too much respect and attraction for him to justify remaining in a relationship.

She will then try to find a guy who isn't like her ex, in the hope that he will offer a better relationship and attraction experience.

For example: If her ex was too emotionally weak around her and couldn't stand up to her when she was moody or treating him badly, her new guy will usually be more assertive, emotionally strong and able to put her back in her place (in a loving way) when needed.

Her ex might feel like he is a better guy because he is nicer, loves her more and only has good intentions with her.

He may think something like, "How can she even love a guy like him? He's always telling her what to do and pushing her around. When she was with me, I treated her like a princess and never denied her anything. I just don't understand what she sees in him. Does she want to be treated badly? Is that it? Is that what she wants?"

No.

What he doesn't realize is that being too nice and submissive around a woman isn't attractive.

A woman wants a man she can look up to, rely on and depend on to be the man all the time.

This is important to a woman because it makes her feel safe in the knowledge that if he and her encountered any challenging, mean or bad people in life, he would be able to handle the situation.

It's not about getting into a fight or anything like that.

It's simply about having the type of confidence and emotional masculinity to let people see that he's not someone to be messed with.

When a guy lacks that, he attracts the attention of bad people (i.e. because he looks like an easy target) and that makes a woman feel unsafe.

So, if he wasn't able to stand up to her in the relationship (e.g. when she was being difficult, throwing a tantrum, disrespecting him) and put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way, she just couldn't feel safe with him.

Putting her back in her place isn't about being aggressive, screaming at her or threatening her.

No.

It's not about that at all.

Instead, it's about having the balls to laugh at her when she is being a bitch, rather than getting upset about it or cowering and letting her walk all over you.

A real man doesn't feel intimidated by his woman's outbursts and he also doesn't get upset and demand that she stop.

He looks at her as being a girl, regardless of how old she is.

He's a man, she's a girl and anything that she says or does to try and intimidate, insult or anger him is just funny.

It's like a little kid trying to tell off an adult and make the adult feel intimidated.

That's the sort of energy a man needs to have.

It's not about actually saying to the woman, "Hah! You're like a little girl. I'm not intimidated."

No.

That would be just insulting to her.

Instead, it's about having the confidence and energy of a masculine man, so she can see that nothing she says or does makes you feel intimidated, upset or angry.

You are always in control.

That's what she really wants.

So, if a guy can't handle his woman's outbursts, she will lose faith in his ability to protect her.

She will think something like, â□□He canâ□□t even stand up to me and make me feel like I should respect him, so what are the chances of him being able to hold his own around other men? Is he going to crumble and be wimpy and weak around challenging men? Thatâ□□s not the kind of man I want to be stuck with for life. I need a man who is confident and emotionally masculine. A guy that other men respect and treat well. I don't want to be stuck with a guy who needs me to protect him from the big, bad world out there. I need a real man.â□□

[image: Relationship falling apart]

She will lose respect for him, stop feeling attracted to him and if he can't man up, she will eventually fall out of love and break up with him.

Then, when she meets a new guy who is emotionally strong and more dominant than her ex, she will feel attracted to him and want to be with him.

It doesn't mean that her new guy is perfect though.

He's probably got a whole bunch of flaws that will turn her off.

So, if you want to get in the way of her new relationship, make sure that you don't sit around feeling like her new guy is better than you.

He isn't.

He's just offering her parts of the attraction experience that were missing with you.

If you can up your game and get ready to offer her a full attraction experience the next time you interact with her, you will have a very high chance of getting her back, or at least just hooking up with her to begin with, so you can mess up her new relationship.

Another example is where a woman's ex approach life more like a teenager than a grown man (e.g. he spent way too much time playing video games or hanging out with friends and doing nothing, rather than following through on his big goals, dreams or ambitions).

If she then meets a man who has drive, determination and is working towards achieving his big goals in life, she's naturally going to feel drawn to him.

He will give her what was missing with her ex (i.e. she can feel secure about her future with him vs. feeling like she's stuck with a guy who is going nowhere in life) and therefore, she will appear to be very happy with him initially.

It doesn't mean that their relationship will last though.

Most guys aren't able to guide a relationship through all the stages, so it ends in a break up like approximately 50% of relationships and marriages out there.

Additionally, most rebound relationships (the relationship a person has immediately or shortly after breaking up another relationship) don't last very long because the new person seems attractive initially in comparison to the ex.

However, the new person usually has a whole lot of flaws that ruin the relationship quickly or gradually.

So, if you want to get your ex back even though she is getting serious with her new guy, it's important that you prepare to attract her in ways that will actually matter to her.

If you try to get her back by offering her things that she doesn't care about (e.g. being extra nice and sweet around her, promising to change whatever she tells you to), she's just going to keep saying things like, "You need to stop contacting me. Can't you see that I'm with someone else now? I'm happy and I'm not going to dump him for you. Please accept that it's over between us and move on. Leave me alone."

So, make sure that you understand what part (or parts) of the attraction experience her new guy is giving her that you either didn't give her or stopped giving her over time.

From there, you need to

2. Be ready to let her experience that side of you when you next interact with her

For example: Imagine that a guy got broken up with by his woman because he was too soft with her. She could walk all over him, intimidate him and generally get her way all the time.

If he calls her up and she tries to put him off by being cold and distant, he needs to show her that he is now able to maintain his confidence and be the man.

No matter what she says or does, he remains in control and even has the presence of mind to joke around with her and get her smiling, laughing and feeling good.

Now imagine that her new guy is too serious all the time and isn't really the sort of guy to joke around and get her laughing.

So, she has started to feel annoyed or frustrated by the one-dimensional experience in the relationship (i.e. her new guy is confident, but he's actually kind of boring).

When she talks to her ex, she finds herself smiling, laughing, feeling good and feeling impressed at his ability to stay confident under pressure.

She is then left thinking, What's happening? Not only is my ex being emotionally strong and confident (things that she likes about her new guy), but he's also being so much fun and making me laugh, even when things are so tense between us. On the other hand, my new man is always so serious about things. He never really makes me laugh and feel happy the way my ex can. I'm confused. I don't know what to do. I feel like my ex is the better man and I'm losing out by being with this new guy. Maybe I need to give my ex another chance.

Her guard then comes down and she becomes willing and open to interact with you again on the phone and in person.

You then need to

3. Contact her to arrange a meet up as friends, or ex's who are going to say goodbye over coffee

The best way to show your ex that you are now the man she always wanted you to be, is by interacting with her in person.

Talking to her over the phone will definitely spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. when she hears the confidence in your voice, you make her smile and feel good to be talking to you again), but the best results will happen when she sees you face-to-face.

So, you need to contact her and get her to agree to meet up with you in person.

Don't worry about the new guy.

He's with your woman.

Just do what you need to do to get your woman to meet up with you, so you can re-attract her and get her back.

Here's how you can do it:

Call her (don't text her) at a time when it will be easy for her to talk to you (e.g. when her new guy most likely isn't around, when she's not at work).

Get her smiling and laughing as soon as you can.

Aim to have a brief conversation with her and keep things light and relaxed.

Don't get into long discussions about what went wrong in the relationship, or ask her if she is getting serious with her new guy.

After 1-2 minutes (or when you feel the moment is right based on the vibe between you and her), say something like, Anyway, I probably should get going now. It was good to chat again and let her answer (e.g. "Yes, it was").

Then add in, “By the way...I know that you’re in a new relationship now and I respect that. I don’t ever expect you and I to get back together, but I did want to ask you to do one last things for me” and let her ask, “What is that?”

Then add in, “Well, I think it would be nice for us to be able to have a coffee just as friends to say hi and say goodbye in person. I’m going to be busy tomorrow and Thursday, but I have Wednesday and Friday open at the moment. So, you are in for just a coffee? Which of those days suits you best?” and let her answer.

She might initially be resistant and say something like, “I’m not sure. I have a boyfriend now and I don’t think it’s a good idea.”

Regardless of her excuses, just stay calm and say, “Hey, it’s only a quick cup of coffee. I’m not asking you to cheat on your new guy or anything like that. We can have coffee as friends without it being a big deal, right? Besides, if we meet up and you decide that you never want to see me again, we can say goodbye there and I promise to never contact you ever again. So, how about it? Can we at least part ways on good terms with a coffee as friends?”

In most cases, a woman will agree and you can then go ahead and make plans to meet her at a time that suits you both.

You then need to

4. Re-attract her at the meet up

[image: Making your ex feel that special something that brings a man and a woman together and keeps them together]

At the meet up, make sure that you reawaken her feelings for you (e.g. being confident, charismatic and charming, making her laugh and smile, being emotionally strong and masculine, flirting with her, making her feel girly in comparison to your masculine vibe and conversation style).

When you do that in person, it instantly makes her begin to look at you in a completely different light.

She realize that you aren’t the same guy she dumped.

You have leveled up and fast.

All of a sudden, her walls come down and she starts to doubt how strong her commitment is to her new guy.

She may then start thinking things like, “I feel so confused. I thought that things were getting serious with my new guy, but I’m not so sure anymore. Meeting up with my ex in person has made me realize that I do still have feelings for him and even worse, now that he’s changed so much I think find him even more attractive than before. I don’t know what to do. All I know for sure is that I like my ex again. I feel like kissing him. What is going on?”

When you make her feel that way, it becomes easy to mess up her new relationship and get her back.

Of course, not all guys learn what you are learning her right now.

As a result, a guy will head to a meet up with his ex and waste the opportunity by making some or all of the following mistakes:

- Asking lots of questions about the new guy because he is insecure about his attractiveness to her.
- Asking her to remember the good times that she had with him as a reason for her to want to come back to him.
- Asking if it's a rebound relationship and whether he should wait for her or not.
- Appearing to have an inactive or unhappy lifestyle since the break up (e.g. he hasn't been doing anything to move on, he's been posting up lonely, sad or depressing things on social media, he's avoiding going out with friends or has become a bit of a loner).
- He's lost the confidence that attracted her to him in the first place.
- He is afraid to flirt with her and create a sexual spark because he's worried that it would 'cross the line' or be inappropriate now that she has a new guy.
- He appears to feel unworthy of her now because she seems happy with the new guy.

Some guys hope that their ex woman will take pity on them and feel guilty for having a new guy and moving on so easily.

Yet, rather than make a woman think, â€œAwwwâ€ he's so lost and lonely without me. I feel so flattered that he has simply been waiting around for me to come back. I should dump my new, confident, forward moving, emotionally strong guy and hook up with my sad, insecure ex again. Yes, that's what I should do!â€ she just feels even more turned off by him.

If she wants to tell her ex where he messed up, she might say something like, â€œLook. I met up with you because I thought you had changed, but I see now that you're still stuck at the same level as you were at before. I've moved on and I'm getting serious with my new guy now, so please don't ruin that for me. Let's just accept that this meet up was our last goodbye and go our separate ways. Please don't call me again because I won't answer next time, okay. You and I are officially over now. Goodbye.â€

Don't let that happen to you.

Remember: At the meet up, you must allow her to experience the new and improved you (i.e. via the way you talk to her, behave and interact with her), so she can begin to feel respect and attraction for you again.

When she feels that way, her guard will automatically come down and she will begin to feel unsure about her new guy.

At that point, you canâ€

5. Get a goodbye hug and kiss and if possible, hook up sexually to mess with her feelings about him

[image: Get her to hug you]

If you have successfully reawakened your ex's feelings for you at the meet up, she will be feeling relaxed and happy by the time you and her are ready to say goodbye.

So, rather than letting the opportunity to get physical with her pass you by, make sure that you get a goodbye hug.

For example: As you both start getting ready to part, you can say to her, â€œHey, this was pretty cool. We actually managed to get through a cup of coffee together without causing a big scene. Iâd say we passed the âexâs can be friendsâ test with flying colors, don't you think? So, how about we go for gold now and give each other a goodbye hug?â

Alternatively, you might say, "Okay, well I should head off now. It was great catching up as friends. Come here. Bring it in for a goodbye hug."

She might be a little resistant at first and say something like, âNo, I donât think I should do that. I have a boyfriend and I donât think heâd like it if he found out.â

If she does, just remain relaxed and say, âHeyyyyyâ! itâs just a hug. Weâre friends now. Friends can hug without it being a big deal. Come onâ! bring it in for a hugâ and approach her with your arms open and let her come into the hug.

When she does, be relaxed and confident and pull her in close.

Give her a nice, warm hug and then, if you are confident enough in the moment, lean in and give her a quick kiss on the lips.

If she responds positively, deepen the kiss and then either go to her place or yours to hook up sexually.

If she is unsure about going, just say, "Don't worry. Let's just hang out. If we get there and you want me to leave (or she wants to leave your place), just say the word and I will go right away."

When you have sex with her again, she will really begin to doubt her feelings for the new guy.

By the wayâ!

If you try to go in for the initial kiss and she pulls away and seems a little uncertain, just say, "Hey, itâs just an innocent goodbye kiss. We can do that,â and she will almost certainly then go along with it.

However, even if she doesnât want to kiss right away or hook up with you sexually, donât worry about it at all.

As long as you have successfully made her feel a renewed sense of respect, sexual attraction and love for you at the meet up, she will go away doubting her feelings for the new guy and missing you.

All it takes is a little bit of doubt to get in the way of your exâs new relationship and before long sheâll be thinking, âI donât know what to do. I thought I was over my ex, but I canât get him out of my mind. I donât want to rush into another serious relationship when Iâm still in love with my ex.â

When that happens, all thatâs left for you to do is confidently guide her back into your arms where she belongs.

My Girlfriend Said That I Should Find Someone Else

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

3 common reasons why a woman will say that to her boyfriend are:

1. She doesn't think that he can change enough to become truly compatible with her

[image: She doesn't think that he could change to become truly compatible with her]

In a happy relationship, a woman is usually willing to overlook some of the things that she doesn't like about her boyfriend (e.g. he's not very confident, he gets nervous or shy in certain situations, he gives her too much power over him), because she hopes that he will change over time.

However, if she gets a sense he's not willing or able to change and become more compatible with her, she will eventually break up with him and try to move on.

When a guy gets dumped in that situation, he will often try to get her back by explaining how much he loves her and cares for her.

Yet, that's not what she's concerned about.

She's turned off by subtle things about him that he either unaware of, unwilling to put in the effort to change or simply doesn't know how to change them.

For example: A woman might secretly want her guy to be a bit more confident and ballsy, rather than always being so nice and accommodating with her.

He might think that he's doing the right thing by being really nice and accommodating, or he may realize that he's being too soft, but just doesn't know how to be more ballsy and manly in the ways she wants.

Even though he is a good guy and has good intentions, she just can't feel properly attracted to him, so she sees them as being incompatible.

Another example is where a guy doesn't know how to get his girlfriend out of a bad mood (e.g. when she's throwing a tantrum, feeling irritated by him and complaining about little things) and make her smile, laugh and feel girly around him.

Instead, he gets angry at her, argues with her, or feels intimidated by her and tries to be even nicer to hopefully settle her down, but that only makes her more furious.

Women hate it when a guy gets upset, complains to her or demands that she stop throwing a tantrum. She doesn't want to stop because he says so.

She will stop if he has the balls to change her mood in the moment.

In other words, he doesn't look control of his emotions (e.g. get upset) because she's being difficult.

Instead, he has the balls to remain confident, be the man and guide the interaction back to love and laughter.

Guys who can do that are referred to as 'real men' by women.

It takes a lot of confidence and a good, loving heart to be able to do that when a woman is being a pain in the butt (e.g. throwing a tantrum, being unreasonable, insulting you).

So, if a guy can't offer that to a woman, he will always disappoint her and she will never truly feel compatible with him.

Before she breaks up with him, she will try her hardest to get him to change and start being a more emotionally masculine man (i.e. a man who doesn't sulk, seek pity or get upset when a woman is being a pain in the butt).

To push him to change, she will be disrespectful towards him in public, disregard what he says, get moody and sulky over insignificant things and generally be difficult to deal with.

If he realizes what she is really trying to do and changes, she will feel a deep respect, attraction and love for him and won't ever want to lose him.

Women know how rare it is to find a real man.

On the other hand, if he gets angry, becomes emotional or tries to suck up to her and do whatever he can to calm her down, she will lose even more respect and attraction for him.

She will realize that he just isn't strong enough for a woman like her.

As a result, she will say something like, â€œLook, you and I are just too different. I think it's better if you find someone else who will be more in line with your personality. I'm not the girl for you. You need to forget about me.â€

Of course, the guy won't agree because he feels attracted to her.

Yet, what he doesn't understand is that he's not making her feel attracted to him.

He's simply trying to get another chance with her by telling her how much she means to him and trying to get her to see his point of view about the relationship (e.g. it can work, it's worth fighting for).

She doesn't agree though because he has been unable to attract her in the ways she really cares about.

So, if your girlfriend is saying that you should find someone else, it's most likely because you haven't been able to attract her in the ways that she really cares about.

For example: Some of the ways that a guy might turn his girlfriend off are that

- He's too easy going and leaves all the decisions up to her. He thinks that will make her happy, but it simply makes her feel like the more dominant one, so she stops feeling like a girl and feels more like the man.
- He wants different things in life than she does (e.g. he wants to hang out with friends all the time and just have fun, whereas she wants to settle down and have a family).
- He's too serious and lives a fairly boring lifestyle, so she doesn't feel good about a future with him.
- He assumes that because they loved each other so much at the start, she will always stick with him. So, he then begins to take her for granted and just expect her to put up with whatever way he treats her.
- He's too tense, anxious or stressed, so she just can't seem to relax and feel happy around him.
- He doesn't get along with her family and friends, who are an important part of her life.
- He gets nervous or in social situations (e.g. around her friends, family or co-workers).
- He treats her more like a friend and as a result, the sexual spark dies out and she no longer looks at him with feelings of lust.

- He's too clingy and needy of her attention, which makes her feel smothered by the relationship.
- He's too soft and gentle with her. She wants a guy who is more masculine in his energy, behavior and approach to her.
- He loves her way more than she loves him. That's not the kind of relationship she wants. She want a guy that she is madly in love with and is a challenge for her to maintain the interest of.

Do any of the above apply to your relationship with her?

While reading through the list, you most likely had a few moments where you realized where you really went wrong with her.

That's okay.

Don't panic.

You are making progress.

You are going to get her back.

The most important thing for you to do now is to begin to make some changes, adjustments or improvements in the areas where you were turning her off.

For example: If you were too much of a romantic and became overly clingy and needy as a result, you need to start being a more well-rounded man and stop relying so much on what you can get from a relationship with her.

In other words, start making progress on your biggest goals, dreams and ambitions in life, while also getting her back.

Don't put your entire focus on her and the relationship.

Women hate it when men do that.

A woman wants to be with a man who loves her and wants her, but doesn't desperately need her to be with him so he can have sense of identity and purpose in this life.

It's not about acting like you don't care about her anymore.

No.

That's not what it is at all.

It's simply about being more balanced, well-rounded man, so she can naturally feel respect and attraction for, rather than having to put her guard up and keep you away from her because you need her so much.

Women sense these things.

and it's very important to them.

[image: But I love you! Let's work this out]

A woman doesn't want to get stuck being a man's purpose in life and have him become increasingly clingy, controlling and jealous over time.

She wants a balanced, well-rounded man who she can naturally feel respect, attraction and love for.

So, whatever the reasons are why your girlfriend dumped you, make sure that you are making changes, adjustments and improvements in those areas.

Then, when you interact with her again (e.g. via text, on social media, on a phone call and especially in person) you will be able to show her that you really have changed.

When she sees for herself that you are now the man she always wanted you to be, she will stop telling you to find someone else.

She will realize that letting you go will be a mistake.

She will notice that she now feels a new kind of respect and attraction for you that is more powerful than what she used to feel.

When that happens, getting her back is natural and easy.

Another reason why a woman might tell her boyfriend to find someone else is thatâ

2. She has lost respect for him

[image: She has lost respect for him]

In a relationship, it is the manâs responsibility to maintain and build on his womanâs feelings of respect, attraction and love for him over time.

One of the ways that a man can build on his woman's feelings over time is by being a consistent man.

He is always the kind of man that can look up to, respect and feel proud of (e.g. because he is confident, he treats her with respect, he is emotionally strong and masculine, he has a definite purpose in his life that heâs working towards, he is cool under pressure).

A man doesn't have to be perfect, but he does need to aim to be very consistent and if he does make a mistake, he need to learn from that and improve.

If he does that, a woman will happily learn from her mistakes and improve along with him.

However, he has to go first.

He has to be the leader.

A man cannot expect a woman to be the stronger one and be a role model for him by being more consistent.

It is the man's responsibility to be the emotionally stronger one and lead the way to a better relationship over time.

If he fails to do that (e.g. he crumbles when things become challenging, he is too emotionally sensitive, he allows her to dominate him in the relationship, he becomes insecure), she will gradually lose respect for him over time.

It doesn't matter how good of a man he is and how good his intentions are, the relationship will begin to fall apart if she is unable to respect him.

Why?

When a woman stops respecting her guy, it becomes very difficult to feel sexually attracted to him.

As a result, her feelings will begin to fade and before long, she will stop loving him altogether.

Before getting to the point where she breaks up with him, a woman will usually try to warn her man by giving him hints about where he is going wrong.

For example: If a woman has lost respect for her guy because he is too wimpy and insecure, she might say things like, âYou're too nice. Why are you always letting other people walk all *over you? You need to stand up for yourself once in a while.*â□□

If a woman wants her guy to be more emotionally dominant than her, she might say to him, *â□□ Why donâ□□t you make the decisions for a change? Iâ□□m tired of feeling like I have to take care of you all the time. You're like a big baby that I have to take care of. It would be nice for me to be able to relax and let you decide things for a change.*â□□

If the guy picks up on her hints and makes some adjustments, she will naturally feel attracted to him and appreciate his efforts.

As she begins to respect him again, she will also start to feel more sexual attraction and as a result, loving him becomes easy and enjoyable for her.

Yet, if he doesnâ□□t take the hint and just keeps doing what he had been doing, she will eventually get so sick of it that she will break up with him and try to find herself a new guy.

How about you and your girlfriend?

Is it possible that you caused your girlfriend to lose so much respect for you that she could no longer feel attracted and in love with you anymore?

For example:

- Did you stop being the confident, self-assured guy that she fell in love with initially?
- Did you become needy, insecure and clingy?
- Did you continue to make her feel loved and appreciated, or did you make the mistake of assuming that because she loved you so much in the beginning, she would put up with anything?
- Did you make her feel like a feminine, sexy woman in your presence, or did you start treating her more like a friend or roommate?
- Did you continue guiding both you and her to a better future together, or did you settle for a mediocre life because you just wanted to hang out with her and not spend time working on your goals and ambitions?
- Did she feel like she could trust you and depend on you, or did you lie to her or disappoint her too often?
- Were you too protective of her to the point where she felt smothered by the relationship and didn't feel like she had any freedom?
- Did you always let her win arguments or get her way because you didn't want to upset her, or because you were afraid of standing up to her and losing her?

It's essential that you understand where you really went wrong with her, so you can begin offering her the right things.

For example: You might start trying to be even nicer to her, when what she really wants to see is you being more ballsy, having more confidence and making her feel the need to impress you.

So, make sure that you get clear on what you really need to change, adjust or improve about yourself to get her back.

If you do that, you will naturally make her feel respect and attraction for you again and she'll stop telling you that you should find someone else.

For example: If your girlfriend tries to test your confidence by being very cold and bitchy, don't get upset about it.

Instead, show her the new you by remaining calm and turning her bad behavior into something you can both laugh about (e.g. “Oh, well someone is Little Miss Bitchy today, isn’t she?” and have a laugh with her).

If she tries to test whether you’re more emotionally dominant now by telling you what to do, show her you’ve changed by standing up to her in a loving way.

The more you can show her that you’re not the same guy she dumped, the less she will want to keep away from you.

Even if she tries to fight it, her heart will be saying, “Isn’t this what you always wanted? You shouldn’t keep pushing him away. He’s not the same guy anymore. You like who he is now. Explore that. Enjoy it. Give him a chance.”

Another reason why a woman might tell her boyfriend (or ex boyfriend) that he needs to find someone is that

3. There’s no spark between them, so she feels like more of a friend to him

Sometimes, a guy becomes so comfortable in his relationship with a woman that he falls into the habit of treating her more like his best friend or roommate, rather than like a feminine, sexy woman that he finds attractive.

For example: A guy might stop noticing her efforts to look sexually attractive for him.

If she puts on a special dress to please him and he doesn’t even notice, or if she asks him, “Do you like my new dress?” and he just says, “Yes, it’s nice” she is going to feel disappointed.

What she wants to see is that he is very attracted to her physical appearance.

Women know that their physical appearance is the most attractive thing to other men, so if her own guy doesn’t feel attracted, she starts to feel unloved, unwanted and insecure.

What she would love to hear him say is something like, “Of course I like your dress, but I much prefer what’s underneath it,” or, “Sexy, I know what I want tonight” or, “Turn around, let me see your ass in that dress. Ooh yeah, I’ll be tapping later.”

Some guys just don’t feel comfortable saying that, other guys are worried that she might get angry and other guys think that women are a pain in the butt for wanting sexual compliments like that.

Whatever a guy thinks, reality is reality.

A woman wants her guy to look at her in a sexual way, appreciate her appearance and make her feel good about it.

If he doesn’t do that, she will eventually begin to seek that validation from other men by flirting with them.

A lot of guys don’t realize that until it’s too late.

For example: Many guys say things like, “She knows that I find her sexy because we have sex often. Besides, I used to tell her how beautiful she was a lot when we first met. She remembers that. I don’t need to keep telling her.”

That's where he is wrong.

Women are a lot more insecure than men, especially about their appearance.

A woman needs the validation from her man.

If he doesn't give it to her and she has to pressure him into giving her a compliment, it will seem forced and insincere and as a result, it will take the romance out of the moment for her.

If that keeps happening, she might then stop making the effort to please him and the initial spark that drew her to him in the first place will begin to fade away.

Eventually, she might say to him, "You should find someone else" and leave him because he just isn't taking on his role as a man in the relationship by making her feel like a sexy, desirable woman.

Here's the thing!

In the past, a woman had to stay with a man, even if she was unhappy, but the rules have changed now.

In today's world, a woman doesn't have to stick with a man if he stops making her feel the way she wants to feel in a relationship.

She can leave and find a new guy and in most cases, the people in her life will encourage her to do it because they want her to be happy.

In the past, a woman would be looked down on and people would shame her if she had more than one man.

Not these days.

In today's world, a woman enjoys a kind of freedom that allows her to follow her heart and do whatever she wants, even if it leaves some guys brokenhearted along the way.

So, if you want your girlfriend to stop saying that you should find someone else, it's essential that you focus on making her feel sexual and romantic feelings for you.

If you made the mistake of treating her more like a friend, then you need to change your approach immediately.

Don't keep being the friendly, neutral guy that you've been in the past and expect that she will change and get back with you.

You have to face up to reality.

Sexual and romantic attraction is what makes a woman feel drawn to a guy and want to be with him, not friendly, neutral feelings.

By the way!

Even though you and her are now broken up, you shouldn't be afraid to make her feel sexy and wanted.

You've got to rise up to the challenge and start being the kind of man that she can feel aroused by during conversations and interactions.

Don't play it safe and be Mr. Friendly or Mr. Neutral.

Instead, you've got to be sexual, charismatic and arousing to her.

One of the ways you can do that is by using flirting to create a spark between you and her and then continuing to build on the attraction to create sexual tension.

When a woman is feeling sexual tension, she will want to release it with kissing and sex.

If you do that, she won't be telling you to find someone else because she will want you for herself.

5 Classic Mistakes That Other Guys Make When in Your Situation

When other guys are in your situation (i.e. their girlfriend breaks up with them and tells them to find someone else), they will often make one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Begging, pleading or crying to her

If a woman has already disconnected from her feelings of respect and attraction for a guy, seeing him lose emotional control of himself and start begging, pleading or crying to her will just turn her off even more.

Rather than feel flattered that he's so desperate to get her back, she will think, "This is so un-cool. Doesn't he realize that weak, wimpy, desperate behavior is a turn off for women? I want a man that I can look up to and respect, not an emotionally weak and needy guy who can't even handle being broken up with."

2. Pouring his heart out to her

Even though a guy means well when pouring his heart to a woman who is breaking up with him, it just doesn't work.

Why?

If a woman doesn't have much (or any) feelings for the guy she is breaking up with, him telling her how much he still loves her just isn't going to matter to her.

Instead, she will say something like, "Look I know you mean well, but we're just not right for each other. You need to find someone else."

For her to care, the feelings have to be mutual.

So, if a guy is pouring his heart and hoping that it will change her mind, he will be disappointed when she keeps rejecting him and pushing him away.

3. Saying that, without her, his life just isn't worth living anymore

Rather than feel flattered, a woman will feel smothered and turned off by his inability to cope without her in his life.

Why?

Women hate to feel responsible for a man's emotional state in a relationship or in life.

A woman wants to be loved and appreciated by her man, but she also wants him to be happy, confident and forward moving in life whether she's with him or not.

She doesn't want to be his support system (e.g. like a mother, mentor, big sister).

She wants him to be able to stand on his own two feet and be someone that she can lean on when she is feeling vulnerable.

She doesn't want a guy who needs her to keep picking him up, patting him on the back and telling him that everything will be okay.

4. Getting angry at her for leaving him at a low point in his life

He might feel angry about that and think that she is in the wrong, but that's because he simply doesn't understand how a woman's attraction really works.

Women are attracted to emotionally strong men who can handle the challenges of life and keep going until they succeed.

Every man goes through low points in his life (e.g. losing a job, problems with family or friends) and a woman will stick by him if he remains emotionally strong and keeps making progress.

However, if a guy gets stuck at a certain level of life and becomes more of a burden than a benefit to her, it's only natural that a woman will start to feel annoyed by that.

After all, she's not his mother.

A mother will put up with that kind of thing for her child, but not a girlfriend or a wife.

In a sexual, romantic relationship with a woman, a man needs to be strong and push past problems in his life, rather than wallowing in self pity and expecting his girlfriend (or wife) to comfort him for months or years on end.

Remember: For a woman to be able to feel sexually attracted to a guy, she has to be able to respect him.

It's totally fine to go through low points in life or experience challenges, but it's how you deal with those that really count to a woman.

If you use the problems to make yourself stronger, wiser and more capable, a woman will naturally respect you and love all the more for it.

However, if problems in life make you become emotionally weaker and you end up expecting her to carry you and comfort you, a woman will lose respect for you.

That might suck for some guys to hear, but it's life.

As a man, you have to be strong.

So, when a guy gets angry at a woman for leaving him at a low point in his life, she's not going to feel like she is making a mistake if he was stuck at that level for a long time.

She will feel as though she made the right decision and now needs to find a stronger man who is more capable of dealing with life.

Finally, another mistake that guys often make in your situation isâ□!

5. Asking her to tell him what he needs to change to make her love him like she used to

This is probably one of the biggest mistakes a guy can make.

Why?

A woman doesn't want to be responsible for shaping a guy into the man that he needs to become, so he can eventually make her feel respect, attraction and love for him.

She just wants him to figure it out on his own, rather than leaning on her for guidance and support and making her feel stressed out in the process.

Getting Her Back

[image: Getting her back]

How you make your girlfriend feel from this moment onwards is what really counts.

The more respect, attraction and love you make her feel when interacting with her, the more she will want to keep you for herself.

She won't want another girl taking you away from her and getting to enjoy the new and improved man that you now are.

She wants to enjoy being with you now because you make her feel so good.

So, don't waste another minute.

She's waiting for you to change how she feels.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me Via Text. How Can I Get Her Back if She Won't Answer My Calls?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's what you need to do to get your ex back if she won't answer your calls:

1. Get her to agree to one phone call

How?

Call her one more time at a time that you think she will answer.

If she doesn't answer, send her this text message, Hey [insert your girlfriend's name here], there's something quick I want to ask you over the phone. If you don't ever want to talk to me again after we talk on the phone, I will accept it and leave you alone. If I don't hear back from you by tomorrow, I'll try calling you the next day.

If she texts back and says something along the lines of, I'm available now, just go ahead and call her.

If she texts back and asks, What do you want to ask me? Just text me the question, you can reply and say, This is better said over the phone.

If she doesn't text anything back, just call her the next day.

If she doesn't answer when you call, don't text her again right away.

Instead, just wait for the next day and call.

Then, if she still doesn't answer, text her this, Hey [insert your girlfriend's name here], I know that you don't want to be with me anymore and I accept that, but I just want to ask you something quick over the phone.

By this stage, her curiosity will most-likely have gotten the better of her and she will either reply to say that you can call her now, or she will answer your next call.

That's how you get on another phone call with a stubborn ex girlfriend who won't answer your calls anymore.

By the way|

Only use the text message as a way to make her drop her guard so she will agree to talk to you on the phone.

Don't make the mistake of hiding behind texts and thinking that you're making progress that way.

Texts are the worst way to try to get a closed off ex girlfriend back.

She will feel annoyed and turned off by the texts and will almost certainly get to the point where she stops replying or decides to block your number.

So, only use texts to get her on a phone call.

When on a phone call, you can properly re-attract her and get her to feel good talking to you again.

You can then get her to meet up with you in person.

Not all guys know this though, so they end up ruining their chances to get their ex girlfriend back.

For example: A guy might feel nervous about talking to his girlfriend on the phone because he worries that she will just reject him again and might feel so annoyed with him that she demands that he never contact her again.

So, rather than being a man about it and getting her back by using attraction, he hides behind text messages and hopes that she slowly changes her mind.

He may think to himself, “If she hasn’t been answering my calls, it’s probably better not to talk to her on the phone right away. I’ll just stick to texts to explain my feelings to her and show her how sincere I am. Then over time, when she realizes how badly she hurt me by breaking up with me via text, she’ll start to feel sorry for what she’s done. Then, she’ll be the one calling me and I’ll get her back.”

If her texts start to become cold, distant or show that she just doesn’t care about him and the relationship anymore, he might feel upset that about that.

Not knowing what else to do, he might try to seek pity by texting her things like, “Did what we had together mean anything to you at all? I mean, how could you just break up with me via text and then not even have the decency to answer my calls anymore? It’s like our relationship never happened. All the great times we had just flushed down the toilet. How can you be so cold hearted like that? I love you more than anything. I guess you didn’t feel the same way. Regardless of how you feel about me, I just want you to know that I still care for you and I want to make things right between us.”

He’s hoping that she will feel guilty for being so selfish and self-centered and then give him another chance.

While that might work on some women (e.g. very young women, women who are inexperienced with relationships, women who are still in love with their ex), it just doesn’t work in most ex back situations.

Most ex back situations (where guys actually need help to get their woman back) are when the woman no longer has feelings for him and doesn’t want to be with him anymore.

She is capable of dealing with the break up, finding a replacement guy and moving on from her ex.

Guys who are in a situation where their ex woman still loves them and wants to be with them, don’t arrive here looking for help.

Those guys just need to call her, say hi and suggest a meet up and they’ll get her back.

However, in almost all ex back cases (your case probably fits into this category), the woman is over it and isn’t interested in getting back together with her ex.

So, with the example earlier where the guy was texting his ex things like, “Did what we had together mean anything to you at all? I mean, how could you just break up with me via text and then not even have the decency to answer my calls anymore? It’s like our relationship never happened. All the great times we had just flushed down the toilet. How can you be so cold hearted like that? I love you more than anything. I guess you didn’t feel the same way. Regardless of how you feel about me, I just want you to know that I still care for you and I want to make things right between us” she’s just not going to care or be interested.

She will think something like, “If he thinks that whining, complaining and trying to make me feel bad is going to change my mind about him, he has another thing coming. If anything, his current *behavior is only making me feel more certain about my decision to cut off all communication with him. He's just talking about his feelings for me and what he wants. He doesn't even know what will make me feel attracted to him again. He just wants me to feel guilty for dumping him via text. Well, I don't feel guilty. I felt turned off by him near the end of the relationship and I still feel that way. Unless he can change how I feel, I'm moving on.*â€œ

So, don't waste time using text message to try and make your ex want to give the relationship another chance.

You should only text her to get her to agree to talk to you over the phone, if she doesn't answer your calls.

Remember: Call first, text second.

Texts should not be your number one approach with her.

I know that you probably think that she prefers texts, but who cares what she prefers?

You've got to do what works.

â€œand texts don't work on a girl like her.

You have to have the balls to call.

Once you get her on a phone call with you, the next most important thing that you need to do isâ€œ

2. Get her smiling, laughing and feeling happy to be talking to you again

Rather than being too serious and getting into long discussions with her about how you messed up and how sorry you are, I recommend that you use humor to break the ice and make her feel a bit more relaxed.

For example: When she answers the phone, laugh and say, *â€œFinally, I get through to you. Getting hold of you is harder than getting hold of the president!*â€œ

Then, joke around with her a little bit and make her feel good.

Of course, sometimes a woman will make it difficult for her ex to interact with her by being cold and distant towards him.

For example: She might answer the phone and say something like, *â€œWhat do you want?*â€œ or, *â€œDon't try to suck up to me. Just say what you want to say and then leave me alone. I'm not interested in making chit-chat with you.*â€œ

Naturally, this might make a guy might feel upset and even a little bit dejected and he may think to himself, *â€œIt's hopeless! She's just not interested in me anymore. I can't do this!*â€œ

Yet, here's the thingâ€œ

Taking a woman's coldness too seriously is actually counter-productive.

How so?

It makes you feel insecure, which then makes you appear unattractive to her.

Always remember: Women are attracted to confidence, not insecurity or self-doubt.

This means that you should have the confidence not to take her drama so seriously and always remain in control of your emotions.

Don't let her little outbursts throw you off because if you do, she will feel turned off by your self-doubt and inability to be the man and lead the dynamic.

So, if your girlfriend is initially being cold, distant and even a little bitchy towards you when you get her on the phone, don't let it bother you.

Instead, turn her coldness into something to laugh and smile about together.

When you make a woman laugh and smile, you are helping her to forget the pain, anger and resentment that she felt towards you.

Even if she tries to fight it, she won't be able to stop herself from relaxing and opening herself up to interacting with you again.

If you can build on those good feelings while talking to her, she will stop wanting to hang up the phone as quickly as possible and even look for reasons to keep you on the line longer.

Then, you need to

3. Ask her to meet up with you as friends to say hello

[image: Meet up with her and make her feel something for you again]

You can't truly get an ex back unless you meet up with her in person, so make sure that you don't avoid the meet up.

You've got to get to the meet up and be prepared to fully re-attract her, so she naturally wants to get back with you.

Don't go to a meet up with the same knowledge about attraction that you had when in the relationship.

No.

That won't work.

You've got to level up.

You've got to be able to attract her in ways that you weren't able to in the past.

So, make sure that you arrange a meet up when talking to her on the phone.

For example: After a bit of light-hearted conversation where you're making her laugh and smile, you can say, "Anyway, so it has been fun talking to you again" and let her say something, (e.g. "Yeah, you too").

Then say, "I know that we're never going to get back together. That's fine and I accept that. However, I think it would be fun to catch up for a quick coffee as friends to say hi sometime this week. What do you think?"

If she says something along the lines of, "No, I don't think that's such a good idea," or "I'm not ready to see you again," don't make the mistake of giving up and then cutting off contact for weeks in the hope that she changes her mind.

So many guys make that mistake!

Here's the thing!

If a woman broke up with a guy via text and has been refusing to answer his calls, she probably isn't going to care if he stops contacting her after she says no to meeting up.

Rather than worrying that he's not contacting her anymore, she may think something like, â€œHe went to all that effort to get me on a phone call with him and then just went quiet when I said no to meeting up. What a wimp. I guess I was right about breaking up with him after all. I almost believed that he'd changed when he made me laugh over the phone that day, but now I see that heâ€™s still the same guy I broke up with. Iâ€™m glad heâ€™s not calling me anymoreâ€ | it gives me more time to move on and find another guy who isnâ€™t going to be so immature. Maybe I should even block him number to teach him a lesson if he eventually decides to call me. Hopefully that will get him to realize that he should have gotten me back sooner, rather than giving up after my initial no.â€

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

If you want to get her back, you're going to need to be confident in yourself and not lose hope when she initially says no.

After all, a woman will almost always initially say no to her ex as a way of testing his confidence and sincerity about wanting her back.

She wants to see if he has the confidence to continue believing in himself and getting her to feel attracted to him again, rather than being an insecure, emotionally weak guy who needs her to make the ex back process easier for him.

She also wants to see if his efforts to get her back are sincere (i.e. because he really loves her, really will be different this time around), or if he was just doing it because wanted sex a few more times before breaking up with her.

So, if your girlfriend is initially reluctant to meet up with you, don't give up right away.

Instead, say (in a confident, easy-going tone of voice) something like, â€œHey, itâ€™s just a quick catch up to say hello as friends. It doesnâ€™t mean that weâ€™re going to get back together just because weâ€™re drinking coffee. That would only happen if we were drinking beer. Seriously though, itâ€™s no big deal and if you want to say goodbye at the meet up, I promise to never contact you again after that. You have my word on that. If you don't want to ever speak to me again after we have this coffee, I will never, ever contact you again.â€

In most cases, a woman will agree and say something like, â€œOkay, maybe just a quick coffee, but that's it,â€ or, if sheâ€™s more easy going and has a good sense of humor, she might say, â€œFine, but you can forget about that beer! It's coffee onlyâ€ and have a laugh with you about it.

Then, just go ahead and make plans to meet her at a suitable time for both of you.

At the meet upâ€¦!

4. Make her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you

Getting your ex to agree to see you in person is a major step to getting her back.

However, it's not the end of the road.

You still have to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new and improved you in person.

You've got to let her experience the changes in you and feel attracted to that.

So, don't think that simply getting to a coffee with her means that you're definitely going to get her back.

You have to make her feel those special feelings that bring a man and a woman together in a romantic way.

For example: Some guys go to all the trouble of getting their ex woman to meet up with them, only to then turn her off by being nervous, insecure and being on their best behavior.

The woman then thinks to herself, "Well, this was a big waste of my time! I can see now that he's still the same guy as before, so my instincts to break up with him were right. I need to finish my coffee as quickly as possible and get the heck out of here. Then, if he ever contacts me again, I will block his number. It's over!"

Remember: The only thing that matters to her right now is her feelings.

You have to make her have feelings for you.

It's obvious that you have feelings for her and want her back, but that isn't her problem.

She is focused on herself now.

If she is going to want to give you another chance, you have to make her feel sexual and romantic attraction for you again.

For example: If she comes to the meet up and is acting cold and distant towards you and possibly saying something like, "I don't know what I'm doing here. I think this was a big mistake," rather than letting that make you feel nervous and insecure around her, just use it as an opportunity to show her your new and improved confidence and emotional strength.

You can jokingly say something like, "Yes, it was a big mistake. What a horrible situation we are in. We're having coffee. This is such a disaster" and then laugh, to show her that you're not going to be dragged into her fake drama.

Likewise, if she says, "Why are we even meeting up like this? We're broken up?" you can jokingly say, "Because I needed someone to buy coffee for me. Thanks" and then have a laugh.

That doesn't mean you now need to make her pay for the coffee.

It's just a joke.

Essentially, you need to make sure that you don't take her tests of your confidence so seriously.

You've got to understand what women say things that they don't even mean, just to test a guy's confidence and see how he will react.

If a guy is able to remain confident and be a good man by leading the conversation towards love and laughter, a woman simply cannot stop herself from feeling attracted to him again.

Finally, at the end of the meet up make sure that you

5. Get a warm, goodbye hug and if possible, get a kiss and transition to sex that day or night

[image: Get a warm goodbye hug]

If youâ€™ve been re-attracting her during the meet up, getting her to give you a goodbye hug wonâ€™t be difficult at all.

She will be feeling attracted and open, so it will feel totally natural to hug you and say goodbye.

Simply say to her, â€œHey, Iâ€™m glad we had this catch up. Iâ€™m impressed at how cool weâ€™ve become as exâ€™s after everything that happened between us. Weâ€™re not enemy exâ€™s who hate each other anything like that. Weâ€™ve been mature about it and are now just friends. So, letâ€™s head off now. Come here, bring it in for a hug goodbye.â€

Adding in the part about just being friends will make her feel like she is losing the romantic, sexual relationship with you that she is now feeling open to again.

Women love when guys offer a bit of a challenge when she is feeling attracted and interested.

Of course, donâ€™t go too far and start acting really hard to get.

Itâ€™s just about adding in subtle things that make her think, “Oh noâ€¦I donâ€™t want to just be friends. I want him to kiss me. I want him back!”

So, donâ€™t go too far with playing hard to get or being a challenge.

Just keep it subtle and light.

Anyway, about the hugâ€¦

If she seems a bit reluctant to hug you, donâ€™t worry.

Sometimes a woman will do that just to test a guyâ€™s confidence and sometimes she will do it because she doesnâ€™t want to look too keen.

So, remain confident and keep moving into the hug.

Make it a warm hug and if she seems open, lean in and give her a kiss.

If she doesnâ€™t pull away, deepen the kiss and then take the initiative and head back to your place or hers and lead up to sex.

How Can I Get My Ex to Realize That There is Still Something Special Between Us That is Worth Fighting For?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's what you need to do:

1. Stop trying to convince her to give you another chance and start reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings

Her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction are the most important thing right now.

If she's not feeling that way for you, then she's not going to want a relationship no matter how hard you try to convince her.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys simply aren't aware of that while trying to get an ex woman back.

For example: When a guy is thinking, â€œI love her so much! She is so special to me! I can't lose her! What am I going to do? How can I stop my ex from walking out of my life forever? How can I get her to realize that there is still something special between us that is worth fighting for, if she won't listen to me?â€ he might then begin to behave totally out of character.

He might send her long text messages or e-mails pleading for another chance, repeatedly call her up on the phone to discuss the relationship, or ask her what he could change to make her want to give him another chance.

When talking to her in person, he might say something like, “You are the only woman that I have ever loved this way. I've never loved a woman as much as I love you. The thought of losing you forever is unbearable. I haven't been able to eat or sleep properly since the break up. Every day is just a blur and all I really do is think about you, the great times we had together and how we shouldn't be throwing that away. So, please don't do this to us. We don't have to break up. Can't you see that there's always been something special between us? We have a special connection and we can have an even better relationship if she just give this a chance. I love you more than anything and I know that you love me. Isn't our love worth fighting for? Please don't walk away from what we have. I love you so much.â€

He's hoping that when she sees how much he truly cares for her, she will feel flattered and will give him another chance based on that.

Yet, that's not how it works.

If a woman has lost respect, attraction and love for a guy, him telling her how much he still loves her and that what they once had was so special, isn't enough to bring those feelings back.

In fact, rather than making her think, â€œOh, that's so sweet!!! He's so right! There is something special between us that is worth fighting for,â€ she's usually going to be thinking about all the things he did near the end of the relationship and since the break up that turned her off.

As a result, she will think something like, â€œHe's just going on and on about how he feels, but he's not actually taking my feelings into consideration. Maybe he thinks that I just broke up with him on a whim? I had very good reasons for doing it and he obviously doesn't understand that yet.

He doesn't even know what was really turning me off about him. He just doesn't get it. So, heâs just hoping that Iâm going to forget about all the things that caused me to stop loving him and give him another chance based on his feelings for me. I bet he even believes that I'll be flattered because he confessed his deep, undying love for me. He probably also thinks that I won't be able to easily find real love with a new man and that the love we shared means we are soul mates and are destined to be together forever. Well, heâs in for a surprise. Not only am I not interested in what he has to say anymore, but his actions are actually motivating me to move on as quickly as possible, just so I can show him that I don't actually need him.â

She then becomes less and less willing to talk to her ex and opens herself up new guys by flirting, going out to party and accepting offers from guys who want to date her.

Before her ex knows it, she's having sex and falling in love with a new guy just to prove to him (and possibly herself) that she is fine without him.

You don't want to make your ex feel that way and push her into the arms of another guy, right? So, let's make this easy for you instead.

To get her back, you need to stop trying to get her to see your point of view or realize that the relationship is worth fighting for.

What you need to do instead is focus on making her feel the way she really wants to feel in a relationship.

Do you know what has been missing in what you've been offering her?

[image: Can't you see that our relationship is worth fighting for?]

Have you been trying to get her back even though you haven't improved or changed the things she really cares about?

For example:

- Are you still insecure and emotionally sensitive, but she wants you to be very confident and emotionally masculine?
- Are you still looking at her as your main purpose in life or reason for living, when she wants you to be more emotionally independent and start following through to achieve your big goals and ambitions in life?
- Are you still being very neutral around her, but she wants you to be a lot more masculine in your energy, behavior and actions?

When you truly understand what has been missing in the relationship and start offering her that, she will be impressed and start paying attention to you again.

She will feel as though it would be a mistake to let you go because you're obviously now the kind of man that she wanted you to be all along.

She can feel that now and it is making her feel drawn to you and want to be with you.

She can stop herself from imagining being back with you, in your arms and being kissed by you.

She wants that.

That's what you need to do for her.

You need to let her see that you're not stuck at the same level you were at when you and her split up.

You have leveled up as a man.

You are different now and she really likes who you are and how you now make her feel.

When her feelings come flooding back, she will realize that you were right about your relationship being worth fighting for.

She will realize that she almost lost you and as a result, she will stop being so closed off towards you and open back up to truly loving you again.

Another way to change how she feels is toâ€¦

2. Stop talking about the relationship and just start laughing, smiling and having fun together when you talk

[image: Stop talking about the relationship and start smiling, laughing and having fun together]

If you want to get your ex to realize that there is something special between you and her that is worth fighting for, you need to make her have real feelings for you again.

At the moment, you feel attracted to her and you love her, but does she feel that way about you?

If not, then she's not going to agree with you that you and her need to fight for the relationship, because she's just not going to feel the same way about it.

How can you make her feel the way you feel?

A great way to start is by using every interaction that you have with her from now on (e.g. via text, on a phone call and especially when you see her in person) to make her smile, laugh and feel good when talking to you.

If you do that, she will begin to think, â€œDid I make a mistake by breaking up with him? Will I ever be able to find another guy who makes me feel the way he does? We always have so much fun when we talk. I love him. He is special to me. There is something unique about our connectionâ€¦and I'm not sure that I am willing to lose that now. I meanâ€¦why do I feel so sad about losing him all of a sudden? Why do I feel like I made a decision that I no longer want to stand by? Maybe heâ€™s right after allâ€¦maybe our relationship is worth fighting for. Maybe we are supposed to be together. Maybe I should just give him another chance. After all, I feel good when we talk now, so why not?â€

When you make her feel that way, getting her back is easy.

However, if every time you interact with your ex, youâ€™re trying to discuss the relationship and what went wrong, you will never be able get to that point with her.

She will feel stressed, annoyed and overwhelmed by your need to discuss the relationship and try to 'work things out' when she simply doesn't feel the same way you do.

So, make sure that you focus on making her have strong feelings for you as your number one priority.

You have to stop worrying about trying to get your point across and start giving her what she wants.

If you do that, it will feel fairer to her and she will stop being so closed up and stubborn about sticking to her decision.

Of course, not all guys get to learn what you are learning here right now, so they annoy their ex woman until she eventually says, "Leave me alone! Never contact me again!"

[image: Leave me alone and never contact me again]

Just imagine how a woman feels when her ex guy is constantly saying things like, “I’m so sorry. I stuffed up everything between us! It’s all my fault. I’m such an idiot! Please forgive me and give me one more chance to make things up to you. I know that I’m not worthy of your love anymore, but if you give me a chance, I’ll do anything you say to make you happy.”

Will she be thinking, “That’s so sweet. He’s insecure and feels unworthy. Wow! That’s exactly the kind of guy I want in my life,” or will she be thinking something like, “Seeing him behave this way is doing nothing to change my feelings for him. In fact, all of his begging, pleading, apologizing and asking me to tell him what to do only turns me off even more. Doesn’t he realize that a woman wants to be with a man she can look up to, respect and feel attracted to, rather than an insecure, needy guy who doesn’t believe in himself and in his value to her?”

If you chose the second option, you’re obviously right.

Women aren’t attracted to emotional weakness or to submissive, desperate behavior from men.

If a guy wants to get his ex woman back, he has to be confident and believe in himself at all times.

He also needs to make sure that he doesn’t waste time going on and on about his feelings, needs and wants.

That’s not her problem right now.

She’s single now that she has broken up with him and as a result, she’s not obligated to care about his feelings, needs or wants.

If he wants her to care about him and the relationship, he has to focus on making her have strong feelings again, so she naturally decides to give him a chance without feeling like she is being forced into it.

One of the easiest ways to bring back some of a woman’s feelings is to use humor to get her smiling and laughing.

For example: Imagine that you’re talking to your ex on the phone right now.

She says something like, “I just don’t know! I’m not sure I can forget about what happened between us and try again. I don’t feel the same way about you anymore.”

Rather than getting upset about it and launching into a long apology and explanation about why you believe there’s still something special between you (which will likely only cause her to switch off even more), just turn it into something that you and her can laugh about together.

You can say (in a joking way), “Hey, do you remember when you broke my favorite coffee mug?” and she then says, “Yes” and you can say, “Well, I forgave you that” and have a laugh.

Then say something like, “If I was willing to forgive you for breaking my favorite coffee mug, you should be able to forgive me for 100s of mistakes I made in our relationship. That’s fair. One broken coffee mug for 100s of my mistakes and for being such a jerk to you” and have a laugh with her about that.

You can then say, “Seriously though, I am sorry for what happened and I am a different guy now. I’m not the same as I used to be. Can you see that?” and let her answer.

If she answers with something like, “I don’t know! I don’t know if anything about you had changed” you can then add in, “Yeah, you’re right! I’m still the same jerk as before. In fact, I’m even more of an asshole now” and have a laugh with her.

You're obviously joking when you say that last bit and she will understand that.

She will notice that no matter what she says or does, you maintain your cool, remain confident and even have the good nature to focus on making her smile and laugh when talking to you.

You're not like a selfish, needy guy who would get angry, irritated or upset if she wasn't being nice, friendly and open when talking to him.

Instead, you're a confident, loving, good man who has the ability to turn a potentially negative statement from her around into something that both of you can laugh about together and feel good about.

That's how it's done.

If you are making your ex smile, laugh and feel good, she won't be able to deny to herself that there is still something special between you and her that shouldn't just be thrown away.

Another way to make your ex realize that there is still something special between you is to

3. Make her miss you

[image: Make her miss you]

When guys think about making an ex woman miss them, the first thought that usually comes to mind is to ignore her for 30, or even 60 days, as a way of showing her that he doesn't care.

A guy hopes that she will fear losing him, feel rejected because he's not contacting her and then coming running back.

Yet, that result rarely, if ever, happens.

Why?

Think about it like this

If you dumped a woman that you didn't like or feel attracted to anymore and she then didn't contact you for a few weeks or months, would you go running after her and begging her to come back, or would you feel relieved, or possibly not even notice that she's gone?

Chances are high that you wouldn't care, right?

You'd just get on with your life and try to find a woman that you are attracted to, right?

That's how a woman feels when she gets ignored by an ex guy that she isn't attracted to anymore.

Since she doesn't have feelings for him anymore, it just doesn't matter to her that he isn't contacting her.

She doesn't feel like she is losing anything, so she happily moves on without him.

This is why I don't recommend that a guy ignore his ex woman for 30 to 60 days as his main method of getting her back

What should you do instead?

You should interact with her, make her smile and laugh and feel good in your presence and then give her a few days of space (no more than 3-4), so she can miss you and start thinking, Hey, why isn't he calling me? I was actually enjoying having him in my life again. I can't believe it, but I really do miss him. I hope he's going to contact me again soon. I hope he hasn't met a new *girl. I want him back.*â€œ

Then, contact her again and repeat the process until she wants to get back with you and give the relationship another chance.

In most cases, a guy can achieve that the first time he does it (i.e. interact with her, attract her, give her a few days of space, contact her again, get her back), but in some cases, a guy needs to do it 2-3 more times before she opens back up and gives him another chance.

So, if your ex doesn't come running back to you after the first time, don't give up hope.

Instead, just continue to build on her new feelings for you during every interaction and then give her a few days of space.

Before you know it, she will stop being so guarded, open up to you and want to be back with you in a relationship.

Finallyâ€¦

4. Make sure that you're not turning her off in subtle ways

When a guy is desperately trying to convince his ex to give him another chance, he's usually on his best behavior â€” at least that's what he thinks anyway.

However, without even realizing it, a lot of guys say and do things that turn their ex off even more.

So, rather than convincing her that the relationship is worth fighting for, his behavior just gives her more reasons to remain broken up.

For example: After the break up, a guy might start feeling insecure and unworthy around his ex, causing him to give her more power over him than she actually wants.

He may say to himself, *â€œI have to make sure that I'm always on my best behavior around her and never step out of line. I will let her call the shots from now on and I will do whatever she wants me to do. Hopefully that will make her happy. Then, when she sees how much of a good guy I'm being, she will hopefully take pity on me and give me another chance.*â€œ

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that rather than make his ex feel respect and attraction for him, his behavior just makes the rift between them even bigger.

Why?

Firstly, if a guy is being super nice to his ex woman all of a sudden, she's going to see right through it.

She's not stupid.

She will know that he's just trying to suck up to her, because he doesn't have a clue how else to make her feel sexually attracted and respectful towards him.

Secondly, when a woman feels like she is more emotionally dominant than a guy (i.e. she has power over him, she calls the shots, he is following her lead, he is sucking up to her), she won't be able to feel respect for him.

Respect is so important.

If a woman can't respect a guy, then she also can't feel real sexual attraction for him and without those two emotions, there's nothing to fight for.

The guy might really feel as though the relationship is worth fighting for (i.e. because he respects her, feels attracted to and is in love with her), but she pretty much feels nothing for him now.

She can't respect him and as a result, she can't feel attracted to him.

Without respect and attraction, she can't be in love with him.

So, the feelings just aren't mutual.

He feels a lot for her, but she is turned off by his behavior and just can't get herself to agree that there's anything worth fighting for anymore.

Another subtle way that a guy will turn an ex woman off is by seeming to be lost without her.

For example: A guy might

- Stay home and refuse to go out with friends and have a good time in case his ex calls him. He wants to show her that she is all that matters to him.
- Post lonely photos of himself online, to hopefully make her feel pity for him and give him another chance based on that.
- Post status updates like, "Another Saturday night at home. Feeling so lonely without my girl," or "Miss my girl so much it hurts," on his social media pages.
- Call her up at random times and not really have much to say. He tells her that he just wants to hear her voice.
- Show up unexpectedly at her place of work, or at her house and appear sad, lost or distressed without her.

Sounds like something out of a romantic Hollywood movie, right?

Yeah, well that sort of thing works in movies because the actors have to follow the script.

It's designed to entertain the audience.

Yet, in real life, a woman isn't entertained by or attracted to that kind of behavior from a guy.

Rather than making a woman feel flattered that her ex is so lost and hopeless without her, she feels turned off by his neediness.

Women aren't attracted to men who need them to feel okay about themselves.

Women want men who are confident, happy and forward moving in life with or without the support of a woman.

Being forward moving in life is not about meeting or dating other women by the way.

Instead, it's about getting on with life, enjoying yourself and making progress in life, even though she's not by your side anymore.

If she can see that, she will be impressed, feel respect for you and feel some attraction.

However, if you appear lost, lonely, confused or distressed without her, she will be turned off and feel even more determined to remain broken up with you.

So, if you want her, firstly make sure that you're not turning her off in subtle ways (e.g. by being too insecure and needy, being too nice around her and being afraid to make her feel attracted, letting her dominate you emotionally).

Secondly, make sure that you're not sitting around waiting for her to contact you and say, "I miss you and want you back!"

That's like hoping to win the lottery.

If you want to get her back, you have to be the one who leads the way by contacting her, making her feel attracted and guiding her back into a relationship with you.

Make your own luck.

Get her back by using natural attraction.

If you do that, you won't have to try hard to convince her that the relationship is worth fighting for.

She will feel the same way as you do (i.e. attracted and in love) and will naturally want to get back with you and give the relationship another chance.

My Ex Said That She is Okay About Being Friends, But Doesn't Want Me to Pressure Her About Getting Back Together

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your ex currently doesn't want to get back together again and is only interested in being friends, here's what you need to do to get her back.

1. Accept the friendship, so you and her won't feel awkward about saying hi on the phone or in person sometimes

[image: Accept the friendship so you can stay in touch]

Being her friend keeps the channels of communication open, which then allows you to re-attract her and get her back.

So, just accept the so-called 'friendship' and use it as your way to get her back.

Let her know that being friends you and her should be able to call each other and say hi, without it being awkward.

If she agrees to that, you will then be able to call her anytime you feel like it and she can't really get annoyed with you, or say something like, "Why are you calling me?" or, "What do you want?"

If she does, you can say, "Hey, I thought that we agreed to be friends and not get back together as a couple. Well, calling to say hi is what friends do sometimes. It's no big deal. Why are you getting so upset? We're just saying hi."

She will be then more likely to accept it and stop trying to make it out to be a problem or a nuisance. As a result, you can use the interactions to re-attract her and get her back.

By the way!

You should consider yourself fortunate that your ex said okay about being friends.

Most guys who get their ex woman back don't even have that luxury because she says something like, "It's over. I never want to see you again."

Yet, you are being offered an opportunity to be her so-called 'friend' and you can use that to re-attract her and get her back.

So, make sure that you accept the friendship.

When faced with the choice of a friendship with an ex, many guys make the mistake of saying something like, "Sorry. That's just not going to work for me. I want to be your boyfriend or nothing at all. I simply can't be your friend if you don't want to be with me. It would hurt me too much."

This isn't always the guy's fault.

Sometimes people tell him not to accept the friendship, to show his ex that he is standing his ground.

Yet, it doesn't work.

See Myth #3 in this video!

Rather than make a woman say, "Oh no! I never realized you felt so strongly about it. Okay, I give in. I don't want to just be friends if it means I am going to lose you. Let's get back together again as a couple," she will be more likely to say something along the lines of, "Well, if you feel that way then let's not be friends at all. It's over between us now. Goodbye."

If the guy then changes his mind and begs or pleads for a friendship, he turns her off even more.

So, if your ex has been offering you a friendship, I recommend that you accept.

Accept it and use it as your easy way to interact with her, re-attract her and get her back.

You can say something like, "Sure, let's be friends. It will be nice to be able to talk on the phone, or meet up for a cup of coffee sometimes, without feeling awkward and uncomfortable around each other. It's great to see that we're both being mature adults about the whole thing."

Then, while being her friend, focus on making her feel respect and sexual attraction for you again.

Remember: Staying friends with your ex is not about being a neutral friend and being on your best behavior around her.

If you behave like that, she won't feel a sexual spark and as a result, she won't feel motivated to give the relationship another chance.

So, if you want to get her back, make sure that you use every interaction as a way of building her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you.

How?

2. Make her feel attracted to the new and improved you when you talk to her on the phone and in person

[image: Make her feel attracted to the new and improved you in person]

Your best chance of getting back together with your ex is by making her feel attracted to the new, improved man you have become since the break up.

Here's an example!

Imagine that a guy is on a phone call with his ex woman.

He starts off by saying, "Hey ex girlfriend! I mean friend" and has a laugh.

He then adds in, "Only kidding! I thought I'd give you a call because I just ate some doughnuts and had 2 cups of coffee, so I'm feeling very talkative all of a sudden. Sugar rush! How are you?"

Alternatively, he calls her up and says something like, "Hey buddy" in a playful tone of voice, to let her know that he's making fun of the fact that they are now friends.

He then adds in, "So, what's my good old friend up to today? I'm just about to catch up with a couple of friends, but I thought I'd give you a call and say hi to see how you're doing. How's things?"

She then says something like, "Oh, not bad! I'm just chilling out at home. I was about to start cooking some food for dinner."

He can then playfully add in, “Are you making enough for two? I’m hungry” and then add in, “Just kidding. I’ll going to eat now with my friends, but I do miss your cooking from time to time. What are you making?”

She then says, “Carbonara pasta” and he jokingly says, “Oh, reallyâ€¦I’m glad you didn’t invite me over for that! I hate your carbonara pastaâ€¦so bland...no taste at all” and then have a laugh.

He can then add in, “Only messing with youâ€¦you make a great carbonaraâ€¦probably better than most Italian restaurants in townâ€¦I used to like eating that” and have a laugh with her.

He can then add in, “Okay, anywayâ€¦I’d better head off. Enjoy your pasta” and end the call.

By approaching the conversation in that way, sheâ€™s most likely going to smile and laugh and feel good about talking to him again.

As a result, she will begin to feel some respect and attraction for him and question whether a friendship is really all she wants.

Now, compare that to a guy who calls his ex woman and says, “Hi. I just wanted to see how you are. I know that you said you only want to be friends, but do you could change your mind about us one day?”

By talking to her in that way, he’s not doing anything to reactivate her feelings for him.

He’s essentially just asking for another chance because he wants it.

He’s not doing anything to make her smile, laugh, feel good and feel attracted when talking to him.

He’s asking her because he’s trying to get what he wants.

He is lost without her and needs her back.

Yet, thatâ€™s not makes a woman want to give her ex guy another chance.

A woman doesn’t want to be manipulated into giving her ex another chance because he can’t deal with the idea of standing on his own two feet without her.

She doesn’t want to feel as though he needs her to feel okay about himself again, or to avoid the embarrassment of having to continue being single and admitting to his family, friends or coworkers that he couldn’t get her back.

In her mind, that is his problem, not hers.

Additionally, when a woman gives her ex guy a chance to stay in her life by offering him a friendship, she doesn’t want him using that as a way to pester her about changing her mind and giving the relationship another chance.

So, make sure that you are causing your ex to feel respect, attraction and love for you when she interacts with you, rather than trying to get her to change her mind because you want her back so much.

Use the friendship to re-attract her, not to be a friend or to pressure her about giving you another chance.

When you focus on re-attracting your ex and making her feel good around you, she naturally begins to feel impressed by the new and improved you.

She sees for herself that you’re no longer the same guy she dumped, or said that she only wanted to be friends with.

You’re different now.

All of a sudden, she realizes that you are now the kind of man that she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love again.

Then, the idea of getting back together again doesn't seem impossible to her anymore.

3. Don't try to be her friend via text

When a woman says that she is okay about being friends with her ex, he might think to himself, â€œIf I just text her, she won't feel as pressured as she would if we were talking to each other in person. So, I'll just send her texts every day to keep in touch. Eventually, if she sees that I'm being a good friend to her without pressuring her to get back together, she will give me another chance. So, I will just stick to text as my way of getting her back.â€

Yet, using text to get an ex back rarely, if ever, works.

Why?

In most cases, a woman feels annoyed about receiving endless messages from her ex.

As a result, she slowly stops responding as often, until eventually she just doesn't reply at all and simply ignores him.

Alternatively, she might continue texting back and forth to keep him around, while she secretly tries to find a replacement guy and move on before he does.

That way, she can eventually send him a text like, “I met someone else recently and we've been dating. We are now in a relationship and are very happy, so I can't text you like this anymore. I know that I said we could be friends, but I want to give my new boyfriend a real chance. Sorry. I hope you understand. All the best. Goodbye.”

You don't want to get a message like that from her, right?

If not, then make sure that you don't waste time being her friendly, text buddy.

If you want her back as a girlfriend (fianc  or wife), you have to re-attract her on phone calls or in person.

When she interacts with you and realizes that you're no longer the same guy she broke up with (e.g. you're more confident and emotionally strong now, you're more ballsy and can stand up to her when she's being domineering, you're more mature and have a clearer understanding of how to make her feel attracted), she will instinctively feel drawn to you again.

As a result, she won't want to just remain friends.

She will feel the urge to kiss you again, have sex and enjoy being in love with the new you.

From there, you just need to make sure that you

4. Give her the missing pieces to the attraction experience that she always wanted with you

[image: Give her the missing pieces to the attraction experience]

Do you know what was really missing from the relationship?

Are you aware of the subtle things that turned her off and made her stop feeling attracted to you?

For example:

- Were you too emotionally sensitive, so she ended up complaining to you about your behavior and telling you that she wanted you to be more of a man?
- Did you devote yourself way too much to her, which then stopped you from following through on your big goals or ambitions in life? Did she complain about you needing too much of her time, making her feel smothered or turning her off with your neediness?
- Did you take her for granted by treating her badly and expecting her to put up with it?
- Did you make her feel special, loved and appreciated, or did you end up making her feel stressed out, unhappy and unwanted?
- Were you able to maintain a happy, loving relationship full of laughter and good times, or did you give her that at the start, but then stop putting in the effort later on?
- Did you get annoyed or angry when she tested your confidence (e.g. when she threw tantrums, insulted you, didn't follow your orders), rather than laughing at her tests and bringing the interaction back to love and happiness?
- Did you take love more than you gave love in the relationship (e.g. expected her to give you a lot of compliments and treat you well, but you didn't give the same back in return to her)?

Those are the kinds of things that really matter to a woman when in a relationship.

Now that you and her have broken up, what is most important is that you change and improve yourself, so she can really feel the changes in you and see for herself that a relationship with you would be very different now.

So, have you changed and improved?

Are you ready to interact with her, properly re-attract her and get her back?

If not, ask yourself this question: When I interact with my ex on the phone or in personâ€¦!

- Do I turn her on (by being confident, charismatic, funny, masculine), or do I turn her off (by being insecure, anxious, self-doubting, nervous, needy)?
- Do I make her smile, laugh and feel happy to be in my company, or does she seem tense, stressed out or bored?
- Do I make her feel feminine and girly in comparison to how masculine I talk, behave and feel around her, or do I make her feel neutral like a friend?
- Do I make her feel like she is more dominant than me and that I need her to be gentle with me, or does she feel submissive around me because I'm so emotionally strong and emotionally masculine?
- Do I focus on flirting with her to create sexual tension between us, or do I just talk to her like a neutral friend?

If you are doing it right, she will automatically begin to look at you as being more than just a friend.

As a result, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you in a sexual, romantic way because you are now giving her the missing pieces of the attraction experience that she always wanted from you.

You have leveled up as a man and are now what she always wanted.

When you do that, you will see the sparkle in her eye again.
She will look at you with love, lust and feeling like she did in the beginning.
The final thing you need to do isâ€¦!

5. Get her to forgive the old version of you

Forgiveness allows her to wipe the slate clean and start a new relationship with you, without always expecting you to mess up like you used to in the past.

In essence, itâ€™s like youâ€™re a completely different man now and sheâ€™s getting to know you for the first time, rather than judging you by your past behavior.

So, getting her to forgive you is an important step in the ex back process.

Note: Getting your ex to forgive you is not about begging, pleading or groveling for forgiveness.

Instead, itâ€™s about genuinely apologizing to her once, getting her to forgive you and then moving forward together as a new couple.

Important: If you have made her feel attracted to you again, she will be more than willing to forgive the old you.

However, if you try to skip re-attraction and go straight to forgiveness, she won't want to do it.

Why?

She will see that it's just about you trying to get what you want.

You're trying to get her to forgive you to get another chance, even though she's not even attracted to you anymore.

So, don't do it that way.

Make sure that you properly re-attract her first and then ask for her forgiveness for who you used to be.

If she is feeling lust, love and respect for you, she will naturally say yes to forgiving you and as a result, her perception of you will completely change.

All of a sudden, she will stop focusing on the mistakes you made in the past and start feeling impressed by the new and improved man that you now are.

So, if your ex wants to be friends, make sure that you accept it!
