talking to him now. It feels different. Itâ€™s interesting. I wonder what else about him has changed and would change if I gave him another chance. I canâ€™t believe Iâ€™m even thinking this, but I want to see him again. Iâ€™m curious to see where things will go from here. Maybe we can even get back together again. Maybe it isnâ€™t over. Maybe the break up has been what our relationship needed to improve and become what it is now becoming. I want to see him again.â€

She might then appear more open to you all of a sudden (e.g. if youâ€™re talking on the phone, she may hint at meeting up sometime, if youâ€™re talking in person, she might start lightly touching her throat, licking her lips or touching you more often as a sign that sheâ€™s feeling attracted to you).

You can then say something along the lines of, â€Well, anywayâ€ itâ€™s been really great talking to you again, but I guess I should get going now. I just want you to know that there are no hard feelings and I wish you only the best for the future. From here on, we can just be friends then. Okay, bye,â€ and then end the call, or get up to leave if youâ€™re talking in person.

By ending the interaction when sheâ€™s feeling drawn to you again, it ensures that she is left wanting more.

Additionally, by saying that youâ€™re not going to bother her again, youâ€™re planting a seed in her mind that sheâ€™s never going to see or hear from you again.

Sheâ€™s not going to want to have to live with that.

She will want to see you again and as a result, she will try to keep the interaction going, or will accept it ending and will then contact you minutes, hours or days later.

Of course, if you sense that she is willing to get back with you, then you donâ€™t need to play that move.

Simply hook up with her and get back with her right away.

Problem solved.

Yet, if you sense that she is attracted to you again, but needs to experience the pain of losing you first, then you can end the interaction and walk away as â€friendsâ€ so she feels like itâ€™s not over.

In almost all cases, a woman will try to stop you leaving and you can then agree to continue the interaction and arrange a meet up (if youâ€™re talking on the phone), or hook up sexually (if you were talking in person).

However, if you leave the interaction and then donâ€™t hear from her for a week, you can always contact her as a friend after a week because you said, â€From here on, we can just be friends then. Okay, byeâ€ when you left the interaction.

Simply text her and say, â€Hey, weâ€™re still friends right?â€ with a smiley face, have a conversation and get to a meet up.

When you meet up in person, continue making her feel attracted and building up sexual tension between you and her by flirting and then release the sexual tension with kissing and sex.

Just know that the kissing and sex will feel amazing for the both of you.

Itâ€™s not just you who will feel amazing.

She will be rushing with feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

Getting back together with an ex, especially when it was completely over, is an amazing experience for both the man and the woman if the man uses the power of attraction to get her back.

That said, here areâ€¦|

3 Things You Shouldnâ€™t Do if You Want Her Back

So, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦|

Your ex has been saying that itâ€™s over and thereâ€™s nothing more to say about it.

Yet, just because she said that, it doesnâ€™t mean she will feel that way no matter what.

You can change how she feels about you and when you, she can change how she thinks about you and the relationship.

Of course, this doesnâ€™t mean you should chase after her or make a nuisance of yourself to make her change her mind.

Instead, you need to say and do the types of things that will make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

That is what works.

When a woman feels a renewed sense of attraction for her ex guy, she naturally changes her mind without you having to try to convince her to give you another chance.

She changes her mind because she feels good about you now.

So, focus on re-attracting her, rather than pushing her away byâ€¦|

1. Trying to make her feel guilty for not being willing to discuss the relationship and work things out

Some guys become very frustrated and annoyed at their ex girlfriend when she isnâ€™t willing to discuss the relationship and work things out.

From his perspective, she is his girlfriend and because of all the good times theyâ€™ve experience and how well he has treated her (or how much he has done for her), she should do the right thing and discuss the relationship with him.

If she doesnâ€™t do that, then she is a selfish bitch, cold, unloving, unfair and so on.

Yet, he doesnâ€™t realize that if a man breaks up with a woman, or a woman breaks up with a man, it is not mandatory or a legal requirement to sit down and discuss the relationship to work it out.

Instead, each individual has the right to leave a relationship and the right to decide whether or not they want to discuss why.

Yet, some guys donâ€™t learn that until after they get angry, annoyed or irritated and try to make their ex girlfriend feel guilty for not being willing to work things out with a discussion.

As a result, he might say something like, â€œI canâ€™t believe youâ€™re doing this to me! Did our love mean anything to you all? Do you know how much I love you and care about you? How can you just walk away from me like this and not be willing to discuss it? I know that I wasnâ€™t the perfect boyfriend, but I donâ€™t think I deserve this kind of treatment from you. Why are you leaving me without even giving me a chance to make things right? You wonâ€™t even talk about it with me. Instead, you just say is that itâ€™s over and thereâ€™s nothing more to say. How selfish of you. The least you could do is listen to what I have to say. Why won't you even try to make things right between us? Did you ever even love me?

From his perspective, he loves her and is sincerely trying to make things work.

So, why won't she listen?

One of the main reasons is that she has broken up with him and therefore, no longer has enough feelings for him to want to be in a relationship.

Why should she want to fix the relationship at that point?

Because he's a good guy and had good intentions?

From her perspective, it can feel like it's too late for that.

She can end up thinking, "Well, why wasn't he this serious and motivated to fix the relationship before? Is it just an act to get me back? Will he ever be able to change? I can't see any evidence that he has changed? He is only saying that he is willing to change. I don't want that. I would only want a changed version of him or absolutely nothing. I'm not getting back with him if he doesn't get why I am breaking up with him, fix it and start being the kind of man I want."

This is why, when he tries to discuss the relationship with her, rather than feeling open to talking things through with him, she closes up and feels like he is wasting her time.

She may even accuse him of being selfish, which will usually make no sense to him at all.

He may think, "Why is she saying that I am being selfish? I am trying to work things out?"

It just doesn't make any sense to him.

Yet, it's simple.

She says that he is being selfish because he is asking her to want to give him another chance, even though he doesn't know what the problem is and probably won't know how to fix it.

So, she would be getting back with a guy who is still going to turn her off, annoy her and frustrate her in ways that he probably won't know how to fix.

Therefore, she would only be getting back with him because he loves her and wants her back so much.

Yet, she probably won't be able to feel love and desire for him because he probably won't be able to fix the things that have been turning her off.

As a result, getting back with him would feel unfair to her and as though she is giving way more than she is getting, which can result in her using the word "selfish" to describe his requests.

The way women use language can be confusing at times, but the solution is always simple.

Attraction.

When you make her feel attracted to you, her perception of you and the potential of the relationship changes.

She starts feeling good about the idea of getting back with you and wants it, without you having to waste time trying to convince her (which rarely works anyway when a woman is saying, "It's over and there's nothing more to say").

So, focus on attraction.

Donâ€™t try to get your ex back by discussing things with her.

Understand that if she doesnâ€™t feel enough attraction for you, sheâ€™s not going to care much about getting back with you.

Whatâ€™s in it for her?

Youâ€™ve got to understand that to get a woman back, itâ€™s about her feelings, not yours.

Itâ€™s about her feelings, not your discussions.

So, donâ€™t try to discuss her back into a relationship, or guilt trip her back into a relationship.

Those approaches push women away, especially when she feels as though thereâ€™s nothing more to say.

Use attraction to draw her to you and make her want to be back with you because it feels good for her to be around you.

Another mistake to avoid if you want her back isâ€¦

2. Assuming that her words are final and thereâ€™s no chance for you anymore

When a woman says, â€œThereâ€™s nothing more to say. Itâ€™s over between us. Just accept that and leave me alone!â€ it can sound completely final.

So, itâ€™s only natural that when a guy hears his girlfriend (fiance or wife) say that, he might begin thinking, â€œWell, itâ€™s over then. I have no chance now. She seems so certain of her decision. Itâ€™s like she hates me now. I guess Iâ€™ve lost her for real. Itâ€™s hopeless. Itâ€™s done.â€

Yet, what a guy like that doesnâ€™t realize is that a womanâ€™s feelings can be changed and brought back to life based on how he talks, acts and behaves around her, as well as how he responds to what she says and does.

For example: If a man talks to his ex woman and is being confident and emotionally masculine and is making her laugh, smile and feel like a feminine woman in his presence, sheâ€™s naturally going to feel some sparks of respect and attraction for him again.

On the other hand, if a man talks to his ex woman and is being insecure and unsure of himself, then sheâ€™s not going to feel attracted to him.

As a result, sheâ€™s just going to keep pushing him away and saying that itâ€™s over.

Unfortunately, many guys out there donâ€™t realize that they can take control over how much attraction a woman feels for them.

A womanâ€™s attraction for you can literally change based on how you interact with her.

Most guys donâ€™t know that though.

So, rather than actively re-attracting an ex woman and naturally getting her back, they often give up, walk away and miss out on being with the love of their life.

Donâ€™t do that to yourself.

If you want your ex back, you have to believe in yourself and in your ability to change how she feels.

Understand that the more respect and attraction you make her feel during interactions with you, the more she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

Even though she said it was over, she can literally change her mind and get back with you.

Don't go through your life looking back and wishing you gave yourself the chance to re-attract her.

You can do it.

Don't doubt yourself.

Another mistake to avoid if you want her back is

3. Trying to get her back with the same old approach to attraction you have always used

At this point, (i.e. she's saying, There's nothing more to say, it's over) you've probably tried many things to make your ex change her mind about breaking up and it hasn't worked.

This is why, if you want her back, you're going to have to change your approach.

If you don't, she will most likely just continue rejecting you and may end up blocking your number, removing you from her social media and telling you to never contact her again.

Don't let it get to that point.

Instead, use a different approach from now on.

Focus on creating feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside of her (e.g. by maintaining your confidence around her regardless of how cold she's being towards you, using humor to break down her defenses and make her feel good to be around you, flirting with her to create sexual tension).

When you do that, her feelings for you will naturally begin to resurface, whether she wants them to or not.

It happens automatically.

It's a totally natural and irresistible process.

It's how men all over the world get women back, even when the woman was saying that she didn't want anything to do with him anymore.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Lied to Me About Seeing Someone Else

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

A woman will often lie about seeing someone else if she started seeing the new guy before she broke up with you (i.e. she cheated on you), or if she started seeing him shortly after the break up.

There are many reasons why a woman will do that, which I will explain in this post.

I will also explain what you need to do if you want to get her back quickly and easily.

1. She started seeing him before breaking up with you

[image: She started seeing him before she broke up with you]

If she started seeing him before she broke up with you, she may have kept it a secret due to one of the following reasons:

A) She is the sort of woman who likes to move on before her guy does, so she always gets to be the dumper

Some women do that to ensure that they never end up getting dumped and left behind, especially by a boyfriend that they are losing interest in and want to dump anyway.

So, before she breaks up with her boyfriend, she will secretly begin looking for a replacement man while she maintains the relationship with her boyfriend.

If he happens to notice that she's behaving a bit suspiciously (e.g. she comes home later than usual, makes secret phone calls while he's in the shower/out for a run/watching TV, lies about where she's going and with who, always seems to be texting and turns away from him so he can't see her screen), he might then ask her if she's seeing someone else.

She will then lie to him and possibly even get angry at him for accusing her of such a thing, as a way of making sure that he doesn't dump her first.

Then, when she has secured her new man into a relationship or is at least casually hooking up with him, she will break up with her boyfriend and he will then be left behind feeling devastated.

It's a pretty cruel move that some women use, but the reality is that guys who are able to use it (i.e. guys who know how to attract and hook up with women easily) often do that when breaking up with their girlfriend.

They get a replacement girl, start sleeping with her, make her fall in love and then go and break up with their girlfriend.

In some cases, the guy will lie about it and say that he's not seeing someone else, whereas in other cases he will say, "Sorry, but I've met someone else and I really like her" to break his girlfriend's heart as the relationship ends.

It's a cruel world out there sometimes when it comes to dating, which is why you really need to be aware of how to handle yourself in a relationship with a woman.

It's not your fault that your ex lied, but if you want to avoid it happening again, then make sure that you never put yourself in a position where a woman wants to dump you like that again.

Watch this if you want to learn how to make a woman never want to leave you:

Alternatively, if you just want to learn how to get your ex back now that she has been dating someone else, watch this:

Another reason why your ex may have lied to you about seeing someone else while she was still in a relationship with you isâ€¦

B) She felt bad about cheating on you and wanted to walk away giving you the impression that she broke up with you for other reasons

In some cases, a woman will find herself feeling attracted to a man who is not her boyfriend.

This will usually happen if sheâ€™s not getting the attraction experience she wants in the relationship (e.g. her boyfriend treats her more like a buddy than an attractive, desirable woman, heâ€™s too nice, she walks all over him with her confident, dominant personality).

If her boyfriend isnâ€™t able to improve and start making her feel the kind of attraction she wants, but the other guy seems totally capable of it, then she might allow herself to get seduced by the other guy.

She might feel guilty for feeling that way, but attraction is a powerful force and can cause both men and women to do things they normally wouldnâ€™t (i.e. cheat).

So, even though she tries to stop herself from hooking up with the new guy, the powerful allure of attraction can then lead her to kissing him, having sex with him and developing feelings of love for him.

Yet, at the same time, she might not want to hurt her boyfriend by telling him that she cheated on him and is now breaking up with him to be with someone else.

[image: She was trying to avoid the drama that could come with telling you the truth]

After all, he could become really angry about that and hurt her, or he could end up crying his eyes out and guilt-tripping her into giving him another chance.

So, she lies about seeing someone else as a way of sparing his feelings and potentially avoiding a dramatic and possibly very dangerous break up scenario.

Of course, you probably wouldnâ€™t threaten or hurt your girlfriend, but thatâ€™s not the point.

Women still follow their ancient instincts to avoid putting themselves in a situation where they could get hurt physically by a man due to breaking up with him.

If you are not the kind of man who would do something like that, she will instead want to avoid seeing you break down in tears, plead with her and make her feel guilty and horrible about what she has done to you.

Situations like that can result in exhausting, emotionally draining conversations in person that go on for hours and involve a lot of tears and emotional pain.

Thatâ€™s why a woman will feel compelled to lie to her ex about seeing someone else.

She keeps it a secret so she can move on and get into a relationship with her new man, while giving her ex the impression that she broke up with him for other reasons that have nothing to do with her cheating on him.

In this way, she wonâ€™t feel so bad for her actions and her ex will hopefully feel better about being dumped.

Yet, in your case, you ended up finding out that she lied, which would have really hurt you.

If you want to get her back though, you need to get past that hurt and focus on following through on the steps required to get her back:

Another reason why your ex may have lied to you about seeing someone else while she was still in a relationship with you isâ€¦!

2. She started seeing him shortly after breaking up with you

[image: She started seeing him shortly after breaking up with you]

In a case where a woman started seeing a guy shortly after she broke up with you, she may have kept it a secret due to one of the following reasons:

A) She wanted to hurt you by stringing you along and then eventually telling you

Sometimes, a woman will feel bitter and angry towards her ex for stuffing up the relationship, wasting her time and causing her to have to end up breaking up with him.

As a result, when she does find a new man, rather than telling her ex about it so he can move on too, she strings him along (i.e. pretends to be interested in him, says she isnâ€™t interested in dating anyone else right now, says she just needs a little time to heal before she opens back up to him, says she needs a little space first, etc) as a way of getting revenge on him.

Then, after weeks (and in some cases, months) of texting, she then tells him the truth and leaves him feeling upset, disappointed, angry and betrayed by her.

In the meantime, she has been happily hooking up with her new man and feeling smug about getting her revenge on her ex boyfriend.

Another possible reason why your ex lied to you about seeing someone else shortly after you and her broke up isâ€¦!

B) She didnâ€™t feel like she had to tell you

In some cases, a woman simply doesnâ€™t feel like she owes her ex an explanation about what sheâ€™s doing in her life now that theyâ€™re broken up.

In her mind she may be thinking things like, â€œHeâ€™s no longer a part of my life. What we had is over. Besides, Iâ€™m not his property, so I donâ€™t have to tell him what Iâ€™m doing or who Iâ€™m dating now.â€

If her ex then happens to ask her if sheâ€™s seeing someone else, she simply lies about it because she firmly believes that itâ€™s none of his business.

She believes that she was an individual before getting into the relationship, during it and now after it as well.

As an individual, she feels as though she can do whatever she wants and not have to tell her boyfriend about it, regardless of how it might affect him.

So, if you still want a chance of getting your ex back, donâ€™t ask her why she lied to you about seeing someone else because she's probably going to feel as though you are treating her like your property.

Instead, just focus on reawakening her sexual and romantic feelings for you during interactions, so she has a reason to want to be with you.

Remember: Each individual gets to decide who they want to be with.

The way to make an individual woman want to be with you, is to trigger her personal feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

When you do that, she gets back with you and wants to stay with you because of her feelings for you. Her feelings for you are the ticket to getting her back.

In fact, it's only real way to get an ex woman back and it works naturally and easily.

You don't have to waste energy trying to convince her, or waste time hoping that she might come back if you stay out of her life.

You can literally trigger her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you now or in the next few days and she will come back on her own because she will feel drawn to you for her own reasons.

Another possible reason why your ex lied to you about seeing someone else shortly after you and her broke up is that

C) She wasn't 100% sure about the new guy yet

[image: She wasn't sure about the new guy yet]

Sometimes a woman will get into a relationship pretty quickly after a break up to help herself move on, but because the new relationship is a rebound (i.e. a relationship someone has immediately or very quickly after breaking up a serious relationship), she may be unsure about whether it will last.

So, to keep her options open, she will lie to her ex and say that she currently isn't seeing anyone, is only friends with a guy, or isn't interested in dating at the moment.

She wants to give herself time get to know her new man better and see if she can establish an emotionally enjoyable enough relationship with him, before she fully cuts her ex out of her life.

She also does that to hopefully stop herself from being seduced by her ex back into a relationship, because she knows that her ex could re-attract her and get her back if he knew what he was doing.

Yet, she wants to keep her options open.

She doesn't want to completely cut her ex off at that point, so she lies.

Essentially, she's just buying time for herself until she's 100% sure of her new relationship and confident that she will be able to handle the pain of the break up enough not to go back to her back.

When that happens, she then feels comfortable with her ex finding out that she lied to him about seeing someone else, because she has already moved on much further than him, which leaves him feeling the one who is being rejected.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't just sit around doing nothing hoping that she will comeback to you.

In almost all ex back cases, if a guy doesn't re-attract his ex and seduce her back into a relationship (after she dumped him), then she will move on while he left behind thinking things like, â€œWhy did she lie to me about seeing someone else? Why didnâ€™t she give me a chance to get her back? Why hasnâ€™t ignoring her been working? I thought that if you just cut off contact with a woman sheâ€™d come back. It didnâ€™t work. She moved on even further without me. Why didnâ€™t she care that I wasnâ€™t contacting her? Why didnâ€™t she contact me and give me another chance?â€

The answer is simple.

In almost all cases where a woman has dumped a guy, she wonâ€™t chase after him and try to get him back for no reason.

If he wants her back, he has to take the lead and make it happen by interacting with her, re-attracting her and seducing her back into a relationship.

So, if you want your ex back, you need to go get her.

If you donâ€™t, the new guy will win.

Why let him take your girl?

Why not give yourself the chance to win her back and claim that victory for yourself?

If you do, you will be proud of yourself for the rest of your life, even if you eventually decide to break up with her after getting her back and being with her for a while.

Itâ€™s your choice though.

You can walk away defeated, or become the victor in this situation.

Itâ€™s totally up to you.

Another possible reason why your ex lied to you about seeing someone else shortly after you and her broke up isâ€¦

D) She still wasnâ€™t over you, so she wanted to keep seeing the new guy until she was. Then she would tell you

In some cases, a woman will still have feelings for her ex after a break up.

In the back of her mind, she may even be thinking things like, â€œIâ€™m going to have to lie to him and say that I need space for a while and then secretly start moving on with another guy. If I donâ€™t do that and he tries to talk me out of breaking up, I know that I probably wonâ€™t be able to resist him. Yet, our relationship just isnâ€™t working and I donâ€™t know if it ever will. So, I have to lie and get some space away from him so I can start moving on. Then, when Iâ€™m ready to fully break up with him, I will do it. For now though, I will just pretend that Iâ€™m not seeing anyone.â€

Hereâ€™s the thing thoughâ€¦

Yes, it sucks that she lied to you.

Itâ€™s a horrible betrayal.

Yet, just because your ex lied to you about seeing someone else as a way of getting over you, it doesnâ€™t mean you canâ€™t re-spark her feelings and get her back.

You can.

When you say and do the types of things that are attractive to her, she will automatically feel drawn to you again.

She will want to talk to you on the phone and see you in person.

All it takes then is for you to kiss her, hook up with her sexually and get her back into an actual relationship with you.

Men all over the world do that every day and get ex women back; including women who've cheated on them or lied to them.

Ex back cases like that happen every day.

However, for you to be successful in getting your woman back like other guys have done, you need to change your approach with her because your approach so far hasn't been working.

You have to use an approach that will reactivate her feelings for you.

For example: Some of the things that will do that are:

- Maintaining your confidence around her regardless of what she says or does to make you feel jealous, insecure, or as though you're not good enough for her anymore.
- Using humor to make her smile and laugh and feel good when she is interacting with you, rather than making her feel tense, defensive or annoyed by accusing her of lying to you about seeing someone else, or even hinting at it.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension, rather than talking to her in a neutral way like just a friend, or in a hostile manner due to the betrayal you feel based on her lies.
- Showing her that even though you still want her back, you're not sitting around feeling depressed and hopeless without her. Instead, you're confident, happy and busy getting on with your life without her (e.g. by pursuing your goals and dreams, partying and having fun with old friends and making new ones, doing things you always wanted to do but never got around to when you were with her, taking up a new hobby or interest that involves being around other people and having fun).
- Showing her via your attitude, conversation, actions and behavior that you've leveled up as a man (e.g. you're more confident and self-assured than before, more ballsy, more emotionally independent, more mature and determined to succeed in your life).

The better you are at making her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you, the faster she will reconnect with her feelings of love for you.

She then naturally drops her guard and opens up to having real feelings for you once again.

It then becomes very difficult for her to stay with the other guy or to continue to date new guys, because deep in her heart she knows that you are a great man and she has probably made a huge mistake by leaving you.

As a result, she will naturally want to give you another chance for her own reasons.

4 Mistakes to Avoid Making if She Lied to You About Seeing Someone Else and You Want Her Back

If you want to forgive your ex for lying to you about seeing someone else and get her back, you can.

If you want to move on and find a new woman, you can do that too.

It's your call.

However, if you do want to get her back, you need to make sure that you use the correct approach (i.e. an approach that causes her to want you back for her own reasons).

If you donât use the correct approach with her, you will likely end up turning her off even more and possibly giving her the satisfaction of knowing that she hurt you and has probably scarred you for life.

Donât let that happen to you.

Become the victor in this situation, not the victim.

Get her back, make her fall in love you again, enjoy the relationship and then decide whether you want to remain committed to her or break up with her.

Put yourself in the position of the chooser.

Reclaim your power, rather than being hurt for life and never being able to trust your ability to maintain a womanâs attraction in a relationship, therefore causing you to always feel insecure in relationships.

If you do want her back, be sure to avoid the following mistakes:

1. Getting very angry at her about her lies and playing into her plan to hurt you emotionally

Right now, you might be feeling betrayed that she lied to you about seeing someone else.

Betrayal can naturally cause feelings of anger, as well as deep hurt and sadness.

You might want to cry and hide yourself away from the world, or you might want to shout at her and call her all sorts of names for lying to you like that, especially after everything you and her shared together.

You probably did a lot for her.

You may have been a great boyfriend in so many ways.

Yet, she lied.

It sucks, big time.

Hereâs the thing thoughâ!

If your ex wants to see you suffer as she moves on without you, then showing her your anger will simply play into her hands.

Rather than feeling guilty about lying to you, she may end up thinking something along the lines of, *âGood. Iâm glad heâs hurting. Hopefully itâs a wake up call for him. Maybe he will finally learn his lesson and start being the kind of man that a woman wants to stay with. Who knows. Maybe he will stay the same though. I am going to continue moving on though because I donât any evidence that he has changed.*â

Thatâs not what you want her thinking.

Instead, you want her to be thinking things like, *âWow, I canât believe heâs now being so calm and emotionally mature about me lying to him. Itâs really not what I was expecting at all. In fact, I thought he would lose it and instead heâs maintained his composure and seems fine. Heâs different from the guy I broke up with now. Iâm curious to find out more.*â

She then naturally wants to interact with you more over the phone and in person to see what else about you is different.

Then, you can easily re-attract her and get her back, or at least hook up with her again to see how you both feel.

Another mistake to avoid making if you want her back isâ€¦!

2. Seeming to be insecure about the new guy

Right now, your ex would be comparing you to her new guy.

If she is trying to get over you and move on, she will be aiming to convince herself that he is a better guy than you and that she made the right decision by breaking up with you.

So, if you behave like an insecure guy when you interact with her (e.g. ask her what her new guy has that you donâ€™t, seem jealous, accuse her of dating him because heâ€™s more good looking/rich/successful), then you will be giving her the confirmation sheâ€™s looking for that youâ€™re not the man for her.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Even though most women wonâ€™t admit it (because they donâ€™t want men to act arrogant), they feel the most attraction for men who donâ€™t see other guys as competition.

In other words, men who honestly believe that they are the best man available and a woman would be lucky to be with them.

When a man has that type of belief in himself, he exudes the type of confidence that attracts women like a magnet.

If he is also a good guy, then itâ€™s a bonus and women love that too.

However, itâ€™s important to point out that women still feel magnetically attracted to bad men who have that type of confidence in themselves.

As I said though, itâ€™s not something most women are willing to admit because they donâ€™t want it to go to guyâ€™s heads, to the point where men start acting very arrogant.

Instead, women simply feel more attraction for men who understand it, without having to be told by a woman.

This is why, if you give your ex the impression that youâ€™re feeling unsure about yourself in comparison to the new guy, she will instinctively feel turned off by you.

She will then perceive her new man as being better than you (even though heâ€™s not) and feel like she has made the right decision to be with him.

When that happens, regaining her respect and attraction for you becomes a lot more difficult.

You can still regain her respect and attraction, but you have simply made it more difficult.

So, if you want to get her back, make sure that from now on, you come across as a man who believes in himself and his value to her when you interact with her.

Donâ€™t ever display any type of insecurity or self-doubt in comparison to other men, but at the same time, donâ€™t go saying that youâ€™re the best man in the world and any woman would be lucky to have you.

Instead, just let that belief in yourself come through in how you talk, behave and interact with her.

Be prepared though: She might test to see if your confidence is real by saying some things to see if you become insecure.

Donâ€™t take what she says personally.

Just know that she is testing to see if your new, magnetically attractive level of confidence is real.

If it is, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling attracted and drawn to you.

On the other hand, if you canâ€™t handle any pressure and lose your confidence, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling more turned off and repelled.

Another mistake to avoid making if you want her back isâ€¦!

3. Calling her names

As tempting as it may be to say things like, *â€œHow can you lie to me? Doesnâ€™t anything we shared together mean anything? You at least owe me the courtesy of being honest with me about who youâ€™re seeing. I never realized this about you before, but you are lying, untrustworthy bitch. I canâ€™t believe you would do that to me! You used to say that you loved me. Was that even real? You lying bitch!*â€œ to her, just donâ€™t do it.

Rather than helping you get her back, calling her names will result her losing respect for you and losing trust in you for losing control of your emotions.

Women are attracted to men who can maintain control of their emotions under pressure and turned off by men who canâ€™t handle the pressures of life.

Itâ€™s not something that women go around admitting (because it sounds cruel), but itâ€™s the reality.

If you have already called her names, then donâ€™t worry – whatâ€™s done is done.

From now on, just make sure that you are using an attractive approach that draws her back to you, rather than pushes her away further.

Another mistake to avoid making if you want her back isâ€¦!

4. Not focusing on what actually works to get a woman back after a break up

What happened has happened.

She lied.

It sucks.

Yet, if you want her back for real, you need to reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you during interactions so she begins to doubt her choice to move on without you.

Donâ€™t waste interactions you have with her by going on and on about how she lied to you, or even hinting at it and how it has hurt you.

Thatâ€™s not going to work.

Likewise, if you just cut off contact and hope that she comes back, she will almost certainly just keep moving on with him or with a new guy.

Take control of the situation.

Do what works to get her back and get her back.

You can do it.

After you have re-attracted to her, gotten back with her again and are enjoying a sexual, loving relationship, you can then decide whether you want to stay with her or break up with her.

Many men do decide to stay with their ex woman, even though she lied because she ends up apologizing and wanting to make it up to him.

However, some men do report back to us that they got their ex woman back, made her fall in love again, enjoyed some great times and then broke up with her.

How you approach it is up to you.

Yet, one thing you need to know for sure is that you can get her back FAST.

In the next few days to a week, she can be back with you and loving you if you use the right approach.

It's actually easy to do.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Does No Contact Work If Your Ex Is Seeing Someone Else?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

No contact rarely works to get a woman back and is even less effective if she is seeing someone else. However, it can work in some cases, which may not apply to your situation.

For example:

1. Is your ex only seeing the new guy to make you jealous, so you try to get her back?

[image: Is your ex only trying to make you jealous, so you try to get her back?]

This is a rare kind of case and doesn't apply to the majority of cases where a guy is trying to get his ex woman back.

Here's how it works!

A woman breaks up with a guy, only to then realize that she still has feelings for her ex and wants him back.

Yet, she doesn't want to directly say something like, "I think I made a mistake by breaking up with you. Can we please put it behind us and give our relationship another try?" because she doesn't want to be rejected by him.

After all, he could say, "No, it's over. I've moved on" and she would then feel like the one who has been dumped and left behind.

So, to protect herself emotionally, she begins dating a new man.

She hopes that it will make her ex feel hurt enough to then try to get her back no matter what.

[image: She dates a new guy to hopefully make her ex feel compelled to get her back]

In a case like that, using the No Contact Rule (i.e. not contacting her for a period of 30-60 days) can work because she is only doing it to try to get her ex back.

So, eventually she contacts him, arranges to catch up and then tries to get the relationship back together.

Yet, the NC rule can also backfire in cases like that as well.

For example: If a woman doesn't hear from her ex for a month or more, she will often just assume that he's over her, or that he doesn't want her back now that she's been with another man.

She will then focus on her current relationship and try to make it work with the new guy instead.

So, even though she wants her ex back and he's using No Contact because he wants her back too, they both end up losing out because he didn't have the courage to contact her and get her back.

Of course, she didn't approach the ex back process well either, but that's what happens out there.

So many couples who could have gotten back together end up remaining broken up because one of them, or both of them is afraid of getting rejected.

Don't let that be you.

If you want your ex back, it's up to you as the man to make the first move, even if she is seeing someone else.

There's nothing wrong with contacting her (even if she has a new man in her life), to say hello as friends.

From there, you need to reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. maintain your confidence regardless of whether she's warm or cold towards you, make her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking you, flirt with her to create some sexual tension).

The more you make her feel attracted to you, the more she will want to be your girl again, or at least hook up with you again to see how she feels.

If you make her feel more love and attraction, she will then leave her new man and come back to you.

Another factor that will determine whether or not the No Contact can work when your ex is seeing someone else is!

2. Does the new guy make her feel more attracted and in love than you ever did?

When a woman breaks up with her man, it's usually because she's not getting the type of relationship experience she really wants (e.g. her man is too nice. She prefers a guy who is a bit more ballsy around her).

As a result, she gradually disconnects from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him, which leads to her eventually breaking up with him.

If she then gets into a new relationship right away, it will usually be with a guy who is able to give her the attraction experience that was missing in her relationship with her ex.

For example: If a woman's ex guy lacked confidence in his value and attractiveness to her, which then resulted in him become clingy and needy, she will usually get into a new relationship with a man who is very confident and sure of himself.

If her ex was too submissive around her, let her make all the decisions in the relationship and generally be the boss of the two of them, she will then feel drawn to a guy who is more emotionally dominant than her.

If her ex was too emotionally soft around her and treated her more like his best friend than his girl, she will naturally look for a man who knows how to make her feel strong surges of sexual desire by making her feel girly in comparison to his masculinity (i.e. his masculine vibe, energy, behavior).

If she gets with a new guy who makes her feel more respect, attraction and love than her ex, she usually won't care if her ex contacts her or not.

On the other hand, if her ex contacts her and uses the interactions they have to make her feel strong surges of romantic and sexual attraction for him (e.g. showing her that he's transformed himself into a better man since the break up, making her feel like a feminine woman around him, making her laugh and smile and feel good to be interacting with him), his chances of getting her back increase dramatically.

Why?

She might realize that even though she was initially attracted to the new guy, he isn't perfect and has his faults too.

At the same time, she then starts to remember all the good things about her ex that she misses (e.g. he always treated her with respect and kindness, he was supportive of her dreams, he was always nice to her family and friends, he was trustworthy) and she realizes that she may have made a mistake in breaking up with him.

This is why you need to interact with your ex and actively make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you, rather than just ignore her.

What a lot of people don't realize is that the No Contact Rule works well for women who have been dumped by a man, but it rarely works for men who have been dumped by a woman.

In almost all cases, if a man wants to get a woman back after she dumped him due to her no longer having feelings for him, then he needs to interact with her to create new feelings inside of her that draw her to him and make her feel compelled to give him another chance.

Another factor that will determine whether or not the No Contact Rule will work when your ex is seeing someone else is

3. What do you think she will do if that relationship ends?

If she breaks up with the new guy, or if he breaks up with her, will she start to miss you and reach out to you, or will she move on and find herself another new guy?

If she didn't have feelings for you when she broke up with you, what makes you think she will suddenly have feelings for you after another relationship breaks up?

Time apart?

Well, that does happen in some cases, but in most cases, a woman just keeps moving on.

If you don't contact her, she can end up thinking something like, "Well, I guess it's too late for us now. He has clearly moved on and forgotten all about me and I don't blame him since I was the one who got into another relationship after we broke up. Maybe he never realized how much I still cared for him and wished we could work things out. I don't know. He probably just assumed that my feelings for him were dead and he walked out of my life for real. I have only myself to blame, but what's done is done. I need to accept that he's gone and try to move on too. I don't want to reach out to him and show interest only to be rejected by him, or to find out that he's happy with a new girl. I'll just keep moving on."

So, don't go through the next few months or years of your life thinking that the No Contact Rule is going to fix everything and get you and her back together.

The NC Rule just doesn't work the same on women as it does on men.

Another factor that will determine if NC will work on her is

4. Will she care if you don't contact her?

If your ex doesn't have feelings for you and has started seeing someone else, she probably won't care much if you cut off contact with her.

She may wonder why you're not contacting her, but if she broke up with you due to a lack of attraction, then she's not going to come running back because you don't contact her.

Instead, she will focus on falling in love with the new guy and gradually begin to forget about you.

Of course, sometimes a woman will worry that her ex isn't contacting her and be concerned for him, so she will reach out to say hi.

Yet, an ex reaching out to say hi isn't the same as getting your ex back.

This is why you will see some guys saying, â€œNo Contact works! I waited 3 weeks and she contacted me,â€ but then go on to say that they haven't gotten her back yet.

It's simply the woman reaching out to say hi and see if he's okay, or her reaching out to see if he is still missing her and wanting her back.

Many women will want to see that their ex still misses them, so she can then feel better about herself as she moves on (i.e. he wants her, but she doesn't want him. She can feel like the more valuable one. She doesn't feel rejected).

So, don't look at a text from your ex as getting her back.

Getting her back means that you and her are having sex again and are in a relationship for real.

Anything less than that means you haven't gotten her back.

To start getting her back for real, you need to interact with her and make her feel sparks of attraction for you.

Then, don't contact her for a few days unless she contacts you.

If she contacts you, then great – she is showing signs of being interested.

It's not a guarantee that she wants you back, but it's a good sign.

If she doesn't contact you again, don't worry – simply contact her again, make her feel more attraction and then don't contact her for a few days.

When you reactivate her feelings and then ignore her for a few days, it's so much more effective than the NC rule because she suddenly cares that you're not contacting her.

She has had new interactions with you that have made her feel attracted and interested.

As a result, she can then naturally start thinking things like, â€œWhy am I suddenly thinking about my ex all the time when I have a new guy already? It doesn't make sense. I thought I was over him and even happy to be moving on with someone else, but now I'm not sure anymore. I feel so confused about it all. On one hand, I'm in a new relationship, but on the other, I'm missing my ex and worrying about him not contacting me. Maybe he will find a new girl and move on. I don't want to lose him if he's the one and I don't want to hurt my new man either. It's confusing. Maybe I should just call him and see how I feel.â€

That's how you want her to be thinking and feeling about you, because it then becomes about her wanting you back rather than just about you wanting her back.

On the other hand, if you use the No Contact Rule on your ex before you've reawakened her feelings for you, she's probably not going to care and will simply focus on forgetting about you by committing herself to the new guy and falling in love with him.

4 Common Mistakes to Avoid if You Decide to Remain in No Contact

Right now, it may seem impossible for you to get your ex back, especially if she is seeing someone else.

However, the reality is that when you approach the ex back process correctly, the impossible becomes possible.

She suddenly wants you back and you get her back.

Yet, that will rarely happen if you make one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Waiting around for the relationship to end and losing confidence in the meantime

The longer a guy waits before he begins the ex back process to get his ex woman back, the higher the chance of him beginning to lose confidence in his value to her and as a result, in his value to other quality women.

Before long, he may start thinking things like, It's too late now. I've lost her. She's with someone else and she'll never come back to me. He's better than me anyway, otherwise she wouldn't be happy with him. Maybe I won't be able to keep a quality woman like her. Maybe I have to accept less.

Yet, negative, insecure thinking like that will slowly eat away at whatever remaining confidence he has.

Then, if he does interact with his ex (or tries to meet other women), he will most likely get rejected because they will sense his insecurity and lack of self-belief and feel turned off by it.

That will further reduce his confidence and by that point, he will be feeling depressed, dejected and lost about how to approach his life with women.

Don't let that happen to you.

You have to start to believe that you are good enough and that you can do this.

You can get her back.

Believe in yourself.

Give yourself a chance to do it.

You can do it.

Don't sit around waiting for her for months, which may then turn into years or turn into her getting out of that relationship and then dating new guys.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Assuming that she will want to go back to you because you haven't been contacting her

In almost all cases, a woman will only truly care that her ex is ignoring her if she still has feelings for him and is secretly hoping they will eventually get back together.

If she feels like she is over him and wants to move on, or is happily moving on, she will rarely go back to an ex just because he didn't contact her.

You have to wake up to the reality of how getting an ex woman back actually works, before you leave this too late.

Get the ex back process started and get her back.

Don't waste months assuming that you're doing the right thing by contacting her, while she is happily moving on and enjoying life without you.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Hoping that she doesnâ€™t meet another guy after her new relationship ends

If a woman knows that she can easily find a replacement guy (e.g. she is attractive, many guys like her and are asking her out, she knows how to flirt and get men interested, she uses apps like Tinder, Bumble or Hinge), then the chances of her being single and lonely for very long are quite low.

So, if your current ex back strategy has been to wait for her to break up with her new man and then hope that she doesnâ€™t find someone else after that, then youâ€™re making a big mistake.

Remember: Itâ€™s much easier to change how a woman feels when you are actively interacting with her and making her feel sparks of attraction for you again, compared to just cutting off contact and hoping that she doesnâ€™t meet a new guy when her relationship ends and hopefully come back to you.

If you interact with her in the next few days and reawaken her feelings for you, then you and her could be hooking up days later.

You and her could be back together for real by next week.

Alternatively, if you just wait around and do nothing, you might never get a chance to be with her ever again.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

4. Not manning up and getting her back before itâ€™s too late

The longer a guy waits to get his ex back, the more likely it is that he and her will become completely different people.

By the time he eventually makes a move (in some cases it can be many months or even years later), he discovers that they no longer have anything in common (e.g. sheâ€™s more serious than she used to be, she is much more confident than he is, she has been hanging around with totally different crowd).

Then, he might even feel like he doesnâ€™t want her back.

So, after all that waiting with the No Contact Rule, he ends up with nothing.

He didnâ€™t get another chance with her and likely held back from loving new women in other relationships he had since, because he was holding out for her.

Yet, by the time he eventually contacted her, theyâ€™d both changed and become too different of people to connect and be in a relationship.

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

If you honestly want your ex back, donâ€™t wait until you and her have become two very different people to try and make it happen, because it will probably be too late for you then.

Take action now!

Get her on a phone call, or get her to meet up with you right away and begin reawakening her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

The more respect and sexual attraction you make her feel for you when interacting with her, the more drawn to you she will become.

Suddenly her new man won't seem as perfect to her as he once did and she will become open to hanging out with you more to see how she feels.

You can then fully reactivate her feelings for you and guide her back into a sexual, loving and committed relationship with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Is it Normal to Feel Anger After a Breakup?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, itâs completely normal and natural.

Here are a few examples of how a woman's behavior and treatment of a man can cause him to temporarily feel some anger towards her:

1. She suddenly breaks up with him, even though he had been treating her very well

[image: She suddenly breaks up with him, even though he had been treating her very well]

During the relationship, he was kind and considerate, never took her for granted, always made the effort to get on with her friends and family, showered her with attention and generally did his best to be a good boyfriend.

Yet, she just dumped him out of the blue, with seemingly no warning or little warning.

In a case like that, a guy might feel angry due to feeling betrayed by her, especially after all he had done for her and if she had previously said that she loved him and wanted to be with him for life.

Itâs like everything she said meant nothing and everything he did for her didnât count.

All the fun experiences they had, the great dates, the great sex, the happy moments together, all of the support he gave her, how much they connected and so on.

All of that just flushed down the toilet, even though he was treating her well.

As a result, he might think, *âHow could she do this to me? I did everything I could to make her happy and she just dumped me. She seems totally fine about it too. Itâs like our relationship didnât even happen. The bitch. After all I did for her. I canât believe it. Sheâs like a completely different person all of a sudden. Itâs like I mean nothing to her. The bitch!*â

Yet, although itâs totally normal for him to feel some anger due to feeling betrayed, he has to get past that so he can solve the problems that lead to the break up if he wants to get her back.

The reality is that there would have been things about his approach to the relationship that turned her off, caused her to find it difficult to be in love with him and made her feel as though sheâd be better off breaking up with him.

For example: Although he was a good guy who always treated her well, he might have also been fairly insecure about himself and his attractiveness and value to her.

As a result, he became needy and clingy in the relationship.

He needed her to show him affection, love and interest, otherwise he became emotionally sensitive.

That turned her off because women arenât attracted to emotional weakness.

Additionally, he may have also stopped doing things independently of his woman (e.g. meeting up with friends, pursuing his own interests or hobbies, following through on his own goals) and instead wanted to do everything with her.

He might have also become upset when she wanted to do things with her girlfriends that didnât involve him.

Over time, his insecurity began to erase all the good things he did for her in the relationship.

She became distant and began pulling away, which then resulted in him asking if she was still attracted to him or in love with him.

Yet, because he was asking from a place of emotional weakness, his question and behavior turned her off further and she ended up saying, â€œI donâ€™t knowâ€ or, â€œMaybe, Iâ€™m not sure.â€

That then resulted in him becoming more insecure and turning her off further.

Not knowing how to fix the relationship and make her feel attracted to him again, he may have tried to do even more for her (e.g. take her out for a romantic dinner, buy her flowers, run errands for her, do household chores).

Yet, rather than making her think, â€œWow, my guy is so amazing! Iâ€™m so lucky to have him,â€ she began to think something along the lines of, â€œHe doesnâ€™t get it. Doing things for me isnâ€™t what will make me feel attracted again. He needs to stop being such a pushover. He needs to be able to put me back in my place in a dominant, but loving way sometimes. He needs to man up and make me feel like his girl. He doesnâ€™t know how to do that though, so thereâ€™s no point continuing on with the relationship. Iâ€™ll never be happy because he just doesnâ€™t get it.â€

She then suddenly dumps him and he feels angry that she is leaving him after all the good things he has done for her.

He doesnâ€™t understand that a womanâ€™s romantic and sexual love is not based on what he can give to her.

Instead, a womanâ€™s romantic and sexual love is based on how your approach to interactions with her makes her feel (e.g. using an insecure, nice guy approach vs. confident, dominant, loving approach, or being way too giving or way too selfish vs. being a balanced, loving man).

Another example of a woman breaking up with a guy who has been treating her very well, is where the dynamic between them feels more like a friendship, than a mutually passionate, in love boyfriend-girlfriend.

So, in a case like that, the relationship may have started off well, but then became stale over time because he was always doing â€œguyâ€ things with her (e.g. watching sports, discussing serious topics for hours on end, always being very practical, logical and straightforward and expecting her to think, behave and act in the same way all the time).

Although she occasionally enjoyed doing those things with him, she just got bored of the relationship being like that all the time.

She longed for him to treat her like a sexy, desirable woman and make her feel strong sparks of sexual attraction for him (e.g. by flirting with her to create sexual tension, complimenting her on her appearance, showing his desire for her, taking a more playful, light-hearted approach to conversations and interactions as times), but he either didnâ€™t want to, or he honestly didnâ€™t think he was doing anything wrong and just kept on using his approach to the relationship.

He may have thought that she would just stick around because, after all, he is a good guy.

Yet, while being a good guy is part of the recipe for long term relationship success, itâ€™s not everything.

You also need to be able to make your woman feel attracted and in love with you and that doesnâ€™t only come from niceness, goodness and kindness.

Unfortunately, many guys never learn what really attracts women and as a result, their relationships fall apart all throughout life.

For a guy like that, no matter how much he gives to a woman, it's never enough because the fundamental feeling of attraction just isn't there.

How about you?

Is it possible that your ex felt turned off by certain aspects of your behavior and approach to the relationship that you didn't know was a problem?

If so, being angry at her won't help get her back.

What will get her back?

Understanding where you went wrong and then quickly transforming yourself into a better version of your former self (e.g. more confident and emotionally masculine, more manly, more assertive and decisive).

Then, when you interact with your ex and she experiences the new you for herself, she will automatically begin to feel new sparks of respect for you based on you having the courage and ability to face your issues head on, fix them and then get on with being a more attractive man to her.

When she starts to feel sparks of respect you, she will then start feeling sparks of attraction for you and with those two things back in place, reconnecting with her feelings of love is something that happens naturally and automatically.

So, don't waste your time feeling angry at her and what happen.

Just get her back.

Another breakup reason that can cause a man to feel angry at his ex woman is

2. She cheats on him or betrays him in some way

[image: She cheats on him or betrays him in some way]

Having your trust broken by the woman you love (e.g. being cheated on, lied to, stolen from) can be devastating and no one can really blame you if you felt a bit of anger and resentment over it.

Here's the thing though!

No matter how angry you might currently be feeling towards your ex, it's not going to help you move on and get an even better woman than her (or if you want to, to forgive her and get her back).

Instead, being angry is going to keep you stuck in a cycle of negative emotions and possibly even make you feel bitter and distrustful of all women.

Some women go down that path after being cheated on or treated badly by men and eventually say, All men are assholes.

Obviously, that isn't true.

There are so many good men out there who would treat a woman well.

So, whatever you do, don't become one of the men who mistakenly believe that all women are bitches, untrustworthy and disloyal.

There are so many good women out there.

Additionally, it's important to understand that a bad relationship dynamic (i.e. one person being way too nice to the other) can cause a good man or woman to turn into a bad man or woman.

For example: A man might start out being very nice to a woman, but when he notices that she puts up with anything from him because she doesn't want to lose him, he may start being less nice.

Then, over time, he might actually be a bit of an asshole to her.

He's not an asshole though.

He's a good guy.

Yet, her approach to the relationship brought a new side of him out because she was just too nice and forgiving.

The same applies to a man's approach to a relationship with a woman.

In many cases, a woman is a good woman and would be loyal to a man, but her guy brings out a selfish, inconsiderate side of her that changes how she thinks, behaves and acts regarding the relationship.

Eventually, she cares so little about him that she cheats on him, betrays him and dumps him.

Yet, if she was in a relationship with a different man who knew how to maintain the relationship correctly, she would have been loyal for life.

So, if your ex betrayed you, cheated on you, lied to you and so on, you need to be able get past the anger if you want her back.

You need to focus on what caused her to become that type of woman in a relationship with you and what would bring out her good girl side from now on.

Another breakup reason that can cause a man to feel angry at his ex woman is!

3. She blames him for everything that went wrong in the relationship

[image: She blames him for everything that went wrong in the relationship]

It's understandable that if a woman says something like, "It's all your fault that we are breaking up. I tried, but you just kept doing (this or that) and that is why we have gotten to this point. It's your fault. I didn't do anything wrong. You messed up and now you've lost me" you might feel a bit angry and probably resentful towards her as well.

After all, she made mistakes too.

It's not all your fault.

Yet, here's the thing!

Although feeling angry in a situation like that is understandable, you shouldn't let her see you get angry or upset.

If she sees you getting upset, it can make her think something like, "Good! I'm glad it's irritating him. It serves him right for what he did to me."

If she sees you becoming very angry, she may think, "Well, I obviously can't trust him now. He's crazy. I'm afraid he might hurt me or something now, so I will have to keep my distance. Maybe I should find a new boyfriend quickly, so I at least have someone to protect me" and so on.

So, rather than getting angry at her for blaming you for this or that, just laugh at her.

Literally laugh and say that she's a little drama queen, or say that she's funny and you never realized what a pain in the butt she was.

Say it in a light-hearted, loving manner though.

It's not meant to be an insult.

You're just being a man who has the balls to laugh when his woman is trying to bring him down.

She will almost certainly not admit it, but laughing at her (in a loving, but dominant way) will automatically make her feel sparks of respect and attraction for you.

A lot of guys don't realize that though and they go through life with a fear of women.

Guys fear the anger that a woman might show if he laughs.

Yet, she is a woman.

If a man is afraid of a woman, she isn't going to feel attracted to him.

It's just how it works.

Essentially, with a woman, if you fear her reaction, she won't feel attraction.

Remember that.

It's not about being an asshole.

Instead, it's about having balls, but still being a loving man.

So, in the case of laughing at the fake drama she is trying to create by blaming you for everything, you're simply laughing at the ridiculousness of what she is saying.

You're not taking it seriously, but at the same time, you're still being a good guy.

BTW: If you are worried about laughing at her, then you can use a different approach of just remaining calm and in control of your emotions, rather than getting angry.

That also works.

[image: Let her see that you are the man]

Essentially though, you need to let her see that you're not afraid of her, you don't get angry when she creates fake drama and you are the man in the dynamic between you and her.

If you do that, she will automatically feel respect and attraction for you, which then causes her to worry about losing a man that she has real feelings for.

As a result, she opens back up and you can guide her back into a relationship with you.

She may currently be at a point where she wants nothing to do with you anymore, but you can change how she feels about that.

If you approach the ex back process correctly, you can literally cause her to feel compelled to get back with you and give you another chance.

3 Mistakes to Avoid When Feeling Angry at Your Ex After a Breakup

Although it is normal to feel anger after a breakup, be sure to avoid making any of the following mistakes and causing more problems and heartache for yourself in the process:

1. Showing that anger to her and hoping that it will somehow make the situation better (i.e. hopefully make her feel guilty)

In most cases, showing anger just pushes a woman away.

Rather than feeling guilty, apologizing to him and getting back with him, a woman often ends up thinking things like, “Well, this is exactly why we broke up. I can’t rely on him handle difficult situations in life like a real man. Although I do feel a bit bad because he’s feeling hurt, I also feel relieved that our relationship is over. He’s out of control. I just can’t trust him to not hurt me physically if he’s being like that. So, I have to move on.”

Of course, a guy often quickly realizes his mistake and regrets becoming so angry, but once he has shown that side of himself, she has seen it.

He can recover from that, but he needs to make sure that he uses a different approach that makes her feel attracted and actually want the relationship, rather than using the ineffective ex back approach that he has been using so far.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Sending her angry texts, or writing her an emotional letter or email

Even if the breakup is your ex’s fault, or if she treated you unfairly during and after the break up, sending her angry texts, emails or a letter to proclaim your disappointment will rarely help.

If she notices that your text/email/message/letter is filled with anger and accusations, she will assume that you would be like that in person and therefore, will be less willing to meet up with you.

So, try to avoid showing any anger via texts, messages, emails or letters.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Remaining stuck on feelings of anger, rather than being practical by working on the solution to the problem

Anger can eat away at your happiness and make you become bitter and resentful over time.

It can lead you down a path of negativity that results in insecure, fear and even a secret hatred of women.

Don’t go there.

Get on the right path by using a positive, practical solution to getting her back or happily moving on without her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Said We Both Need to Be Apart to Work on Ourselves

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are the 4 most common reasons a woman will say that:

1. She is hinting to you that if you change, she will be open to giving you another chance

[image: She's hinting that she will give you another chance if you change]

Sometimes, a woman might realize that although she still loves her man, she can't see herself staying with him for life unless he truly changes certain things about himself.

For example: A guy might be a good, honest, caring guy, but he may have gotten into the habit of expecting his woman to make all the decisions in the relationship and be "the boss."

In his opinion, he's doing what he believes will make her the happiest and is being a good boyfriend (fiancé or husband) to her because he is letting her get her back.

He believes that it will make her feel happy with him, love him and respect him for being so considerate of her.

Yet, it doesn't.

Rather than feeling satisfied and fulfilled with the role of boss, a woman will almost always become frustrated with her man and will begin to lose attraction for him.

Why?

Although a woman is happy to make decisions, a man shouldn't just hand over his power to her and hope that she will be happy to mother him, or be like a big sister to him.

Taking on that role isn't sexually attractive to almost every woman on the planet (there are some weirdo women out there who like it).

Almost every woman wants to feel like her man can and will make decisions for them, even if she doesn't always agree with him right away or make it easy for him.

In other words, he satisfies her instinctive need to be with a man who can not only handle a bit of challenge from her, but can handle himself out there in the world.

Women instinctively don't want to have sex with men who can't at least stand up to a woman in a loving, but dominant way.

If a woman is in a relationship with a guy long enough and has been turned off by his inability to put her back in her place in a loving, but dominant way, then will fall out of love with him.

She will seem fine (for a while), but underneath she will be thinking things like, "Why can't he man up and take charge for a change? Why do I always have to be the one who calls the shots?

Why can't he stand up to me? I need a man with more balls. I'm tired of leading for the both of us all the time. I would love to be able to relax into being a woman, while he acts like the man.

Maybe I should break up with him and see what happens. Maybe that will wake him up and make him motivated enough to change. If he can change and become more assertive and emotionally dominant like a real man, then we can get back together again, but if not, I will just have to move on and find another man who can."

Of course, in many cases, a woman won't come out and tell her guy what is bothering her.

Why?

Simple.

She doesn't want him to talk her out of her decision of breaking up with him by promising to change, rather than actually changing what is turning her off.

She also doesn't want to tell him every little problem with how he is approaching attraction in the relationship, because she doesn't want him doing everything she says.

If he does, he will seem like he is under control, which will turn her off more.

So, rather than teaching him how to be the man she wants, a woman will often just say something along the lines of, "I think it's best if we take a break from each other for a while. We both need to be apart to work on ourselves before we can be in a relationship with each other."

The guy is then left feeling very confused as to what the heck that could mean.

It could mean anything.

So, what should he be working on?

His physique? His career?

No.

In almost every ex back case I've worked on over the years, the guy simply needs to fix the subtle stuff (i.e. how he is approaching interactions with her, how he behaves and reacts to her, making her feel the need to treat him better, etc).

Yet, most guys out there simply aren't aware of that.

So, when a woman says, "We need to be apart to work on ourselves" a guy will often start offering her all the wrong things to try and get her back (e.g. buying her flowers or gifts, telling her how much he still loves her, promising her that he will do whatever she wants if she comes back to him, writing her a letter to express his undying love, crying to her, saying that he's going to go to therapy to fix childhood issues, etc).

Those things simply turn a woman off even more and convince her that he's not the right guy for her anymore.

BTW: One of those examples above (going to therapy and telling her all about it) is such a common mistake that guys make.

To summarize: If you have to go to therapy, then go ahead, but don't go telling her about your 'personal journey' to fix your childhood issues or other issues via therapy.

Just get on with fixing and improving yourself and then let her experience it.

The same goes with you potentially learning from me.

Don't tell her about the issues you are learning about overcoming, your struggles to change and so on.

A woman doesn't want to feel like she is being dragged down into a guy's personal issues.

She wants to see him rise above it all, without having to blab on about it or seek pity or reassurance from her.

So, if you want to get your ex back, you first need to learn where you have been going wrong (e.g. not manly enough, too nice, too neutral around like a friend) and then fix and improve those areas very quickly.

When you understand what actually matters to her and you make those changes, it will automatically reawaken her feelings of respect for you.

When she respects you, she will then naturally begin to feel attracted to you again in a sexual and romantic way.

When that happens, she then becomes open to giving the relationship another chance because you've proven to her that you really are different now.

More importantly though, she will have evidence that she now feels differently about you.

She now looks at you with more respect, attraction and love.

When that happens, you stop hearing excuses like, "We need to be apart to work on ourselves" and instead start hearing, "I want to see you. I miss you."

Another common reason why a woman will say it is!

2. She wants to have some time apart so she can find a replacement guy

[image: She wants time apart to find herself a replacement guy]

This is fairly common, but is rarely admitted by women because it can make them seem like a selfish person.

Yet, it's just what happens.

She wants to open herself up to other guys, but doesn't want to admit it.

To let her ex down gently and give herself enough time to find a replacement guy, she might say something along the lines of, "Look, I still really care about you, but for now, I honestly believe that we both need to be apart to work on ourselves. Let's not talk to each other for a while."

"I'll contact you when I feel ready and we can then see if we can get back together again. In the meantime, all I ask is that you respect my need to be apart for a while. We both have a lot of work to do before we would be ready for a relationship. So, let's just take some time apart."

A guy will usually then accept her decision and stop contacting her for weeks, or even months, while he waits for her to come back to him.

In the meantime, she is now free to go out and meet, hook up with and date other guys until she finds a guy that she wants to be in a committed relationship with.

Then, when her ex finally contacts her to see if she's ready to give him another chance, she can say something like, "I'm sorry, but I've met someone else and I'm very happy with him. I hope you understand and accept that we're just not meant to be together. I realized that when I had a chance to work on myself and find out what I really want. We had our chance together and it didn't work. You really are a great guy though and I'm sure you'll find a new girl soon. You deserve to have a woman who loves you and wants to be with you. I'm sorry I can't be that woman. It's over."

He's then left feeling devastated and wondering why giving her space didn't work.

Here's the reality about getting a woman back (it works differently when a woman wants to get a man back)!

If you're not actively sparking your ex woman's feelings of respect and sexual attraction, then another guy usually will.

Women tend to go with how they feel in the moment, so if she happens to meet a guy who makes her feel attracted and turned on and he has the balls and know-how to make a move and kiss her, or initiate sex, then she will usually just go along with it.

If they connect, enjoy each other and want to continue seeing each other, she can then begin to fall in love with him, or at least want to have fun with him for a while.

This can lead to both of them falling in love and becoming official as boyfriend and girlfriend and in some cases, even ending up getting married.

This is why, regardless of what your ex is saying right now (e.g. â€œI need to be alone for nowâ€ or, â€œDonâ€™t contact me for a whileâ€ or, â€œWe both need to be apart to work on ourselvesâ€), giving her way too much space will usually only result in her using that time to move on.

So, donâ€™t fade into the background and wait for her to miraculously change her mind about the break up, because she probably wonâ€™t.

You have to make her want you back.

How can you do that?

By interacting with her and making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

The more respect and attraction that she feels for the new and improved you, the more open she becomes to getting back together.

On the other hand, if you step back and wait for things to fix themselves (i.e. you give her weeks or even months of space to work on herself) and another guy comes along and activates her sexual and romantic feelings for him, she will almost certainly forget all about you and just starting moving on with him.

Another common reason why a woman will say that isâ€

3. She is trying to get out of the relationship with an excuse, rather than directly telling you that she doesn't want you anymore

[image: She is just using that as an excuse to get out of the relationship without you hassling her too much]

If a woman finds herself in a relationship that doesnâ€™t live up to her expectations (e.g. her guy has been taking her for granted for too long, the relationship has become boring and predictable, she no longer feels the spark of attraction she once felt, her guy has become too emotionally sensitive or insecure), then she may decide to end it rather than wasting more time.

Yet, rather than be direct about it, a woman will often say something like, â€œI do love you, but we have had a lot of problems in our relationship. So, I think we just both need to be apart to work on ourselves for a while,â€ as a way of letting her guy down easy.

Some of her reasons for doing that might beâ€

- She doesnâ€™t want him to quickly start acting like heâ€™s changing and improving to force her into giving him another chance, even though she doesnâ€™t want to.
- Sheâ€™s afraid that if she tells him her real reasons for wanting to break up (e.g. that she no longer feels sexually and romantically attracted to him, heâs not manly enough for her, sheâs finds the relationship boring), he might react in ways that she doesnât want to deal with (e.g. get angry or possibly even violent towards her, beg, plead and cry, threaten to hurt himself).

- She doesnât want to give him a chance to talk her out of her decision (e.g. by promising her he will change, telling her how much he still loves her).
- She doesnât want to teach him how to be the kind of man she needs in her life.
- She doesnât want him to take her feedback the wrong way (e.g. one of her secret reasons for breaking up with him might be that heâs too submissive and timid and letâs her get away with disrespecting him. She fears that if she tells him that, he might take it too far and become too assertive, controlling and aggressive in an attempt to show her that heâs not a pushover anymore).
- She worries that if she says that itâs totally over, he might move on faster than she can and she will then be the one who feels rejected and left behind. So, she wants to string him along for a while to give herself enough time to move on before he does.

Additionally, by saying that they both need to be apart to work on themselves, a woman knows that her guy will feel compelled to show her that he is willing to work on himself to fix the relationship and keep it together.

She knows that if he says, âNo. I donât want to work on myself. You have to accept me as is, right nowâ then she can say, âOkay fine, itâs over then.â

So, a guy will usually feel like he has to go along with her request to have time apart so they can work on themselves, rather than seeming unreasonable, lazy or selfish.

As a result, a woman can then get out of the relationship and give herself some time to move on without her ex making a big fuss about it.

Another common reason why a woman will say that isâ!

4. She is reacting to her loss of feelings for you and doesn't know what else to do, or how to explain it to you

[image: She is reacting to her loss of feelings for you]

Sometimes a woman might initially feel drawn to a guy because he displays the qualities and personality traits that she is looking for in a man.

Yet, when she gets into a serious relationship with him, she gradually discovers that heâs not really the man she thought he was.

For example: She realizes thatâ!

His confidence was just an act and in reality, he is actually quite insecure and unsure of himself deep down.

Despite making her feel strong sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for him in the beginning, she now feels more like his friend or roommate than his woman because heâs just too neutral around her.

Despite taking the lead initially, he has now taken a back seat and expects her to make most or all the decisions for the both of them, which makes her feel like his mother or big sister and that turns her off.

Although he initially seemed to be easy-going, emotionally independent and carefree in the relationship with her, he soon started to worry about losing her and ended up becoming insecure, needy, clingy or controlling.

Although he seemed to be moving forward in life and have big dreams and goals, she now realizes that he's stuck at the same level and is either not truly interested in making progress on his goals, or he just isn't able to do because he lacks the competence or skills required.

The more she notices things like that, the more her feelings of true respect, attraction and love begin to fade and eventually, she may decide that he's just not the right man for her.

Yet, she might not know how to explain what she's feeling to her guy (i.e. that something feels wrong to her, that she loves him, but always feels uneasy about a future with him because their life together doesn't seem to be developing the way she hoped it would).

So, she feels stuck.

On one hand, she loves him, but on the other, something is telling her leave him and try to find a new guy who would be more capable of keeping a relationship together and in love for him.

However, rather than directly breaking up with him by saying something like, âIt's over. You have no chance of getting me back. I am going to try to move on after breaking up with you because I want to try my luck at finding a man who gets how to make a woman remain in love she says that they need to be apart to work on themselves instead.

As a result, he then feels confused about the break up and assumes that the best approach is just to give her space to think about things, which then leaves her free to move on without him seducing her back into a relationship.

Of course, the good news in a situation like this is that if the guy can quickly transform himself and understand how to seduce an ex back into a relationship, then he will usually be able to do that fairly quickly and easily.

So, what are you going to do from now on?

Are you going to sit around saying, âMy ex said we both need to be apart to work on ourselves, or are you going to quickly change and improve the things about yourself that caused her to disconnect from her feelings for you and get her back?

Are you going to wait and hope that she doesn't move on over the next few weeks or months, or are you going to seduce her back into a relationship today or in the next few days?

The choice is yours.

3 Common Mistakes to Be Aware of When Giving an Ex Time Apart

Understandably, your ex's suggestion for time apart to work on yourselves make have left you feeling confused.

It really is one of those vague things that women say to men, which can leave a man thinking that he has no choice, but to comply with what she said.

As a result, he may make one of the following classic mistakes, which just makes him feel more lost and confused and gives her more reason to move on without him.

1. Believing that time apart is the best way to get back together

Time apart works if a woman is still in love with her ex, feels attracted to him and respects him, but she is experiencing a lot of personal issues.

That can work.

Yet, it can also backfire and give a woman enough time to get over her ex, open up to new guys and try to make herself feel better by hooking up with them, or falling in love with one of them.

So, time apart isn't always the answer.

What is?

After helping new men get women back for over 10 years now, I have found that what always works is when the man focuses on re-attracting the woman, so he can then naturally seduce her into a relationship.

In other words, he makes her have strong feelings for him again based on the new ways in which he now talks to her and behaves around her.

As a result, she begins to feel differently and doesn't feel the need for anymore time apart and wants him back.

So, rather than backing off and giving your ex time to get over you and find herself another man, give her a few days of space and start the ex back process with her right away.

This means that you should use the next few days (or a maximum of a week) to:

Quickly transform yourself into a better version of the man you used to be in the relationship with her (e.g. more confident, manly, emotionally independent, assertive).

Interact with her over the phone and in person and make her feel surges of sexual and romantic attraction for you again (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, flirting with her to create sexual tension, being manly to make her feel girly in comparison to you).

Then, when she's open to you, go ahead and hug, kiss and have sex to connect in a physical and emotional way again.

After you've had sex, let her be the one who is hinting at getting back together.

Don't push for a relationship.

Just make her feel such a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for you that SHE wants to get back together with you and YOU then say yes to that.

When you approach the ex back process in this way, you stand a much better chance of getting your ex back than any other way.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Giving her endless time apart and hoping she comes back on her own

Sometimes a guy assumes that if his ex is asking for time apart to work on herself, then she will come back to him when she is ready.

He assumes that because they used to love each other so much, had so many good times together, had enjoyable sex and told each other how much they loved each other, then she won't be able to move past that.

She will feel compelled to get back with him because of how good things used to be.

No.

She broke up with him because things were no longer like that and possibly not like that for quite a long time.

That was then and this is now.

So (if your ex had lost a lot of respect, attraction and love for you by the time she broke up with you), don't sit around hoping that she will remember all the good times and come back because of that.

That almost never happens when a break up occurred due to the woman losing too much respect, attraction and love for her man.

Instead, like with most things in life, when her ex is not there, a woman usually gets distracted by someone else and begins to forget about her ex and move on.

So, don't waste weeks or months avoiding your ex and waiting for her to come running back to you, because you might get a big shock when you finally contact her and she says something along the lines of, â€œIâ€™m sorry. While I was working on myself, I realized that you and I are not right for each other after all. So, I have moved on and I am happy with someone else now. I hope you will accept that and get on with your life too.â€

Don't make the classic mistake that so many guys make where they assume that the No Contact Rule (not contacting an ex for 30-60 days after a break up) works the same on men and women.

It doesn't.

It's a technique that works well when a woman has been dumped by a man, but not the other way around.

As a man, if you want your ex woman back, you need to interact with her and reactivate her feelings for you, otherwise she will usually just move on.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€

3. Seeking pity from her before giving her time apart from him

For example: A guy might say to his ex woman, â€œWhy can't we just try and work things out like normal people? Why do we have to be apart? I promise I will work on myself if that's what you want. Just stay with me. I can't do this without you. Please baby, I really need to you to stick around. You mean everything to me. Without you, my life isn't worth living.â€

He hopes that by making her feel sorry for him, she will change her mind and give him another chance.

Yet, that rarely (if ever) happens.

Instead, his attempts to manipulate her into staying with him out of pity simply turns her off even more.

Additionally, if she is asking for time apart after having had slowly fallen out of love with him over a period or months or years, then she will be at a point where she doesn't really care about how he feels anymore.

At that point, she cares about how she feels.

This is why, if you want an ex woman back, you have to reawaken her feelings for you as you interact with her, so she then has a reason to get back with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Wants Me Back, But Won't Admit it

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why:

1. She wants you to suffer for a little longer, before she eventually gives you another chance

[image: She wants you to suffer a little longer, before she gives you another chance]

This often happens when a woman still feels angry and annoyed at her ex for stuffing up a perfectly good relationship.

As a result, she may think something like, â€œIâ€™m not going to make it easy for him to get me back. Iâ€™m going to let him suffer for a while until her learns to appreciate me and treat me right.â€œ

She might then give off all the signs that she wants him back (e.g. she agrees to meet up with him, she hugs him and kisses him), but if he asks her if she wants to get back together again, she pulls away as a way of punishing him for his past mistakes.

Naturally, this can leave the guy feeling frustrated and wondering, â€œI sense that she wants me back, but she admit it. Why? What is she playing at? What do I need to do to change her mind?â€œ

Hereâ€™s what you need to knowâ€¦

It doesnâ€™t matter if your ex wants to admit that she wants you back or not.

What matters is that you maintain your confidence (even though she is giving you mixed messages) and focus on making her feel so much respect and sexual attraction for you during interactions (e.g. over the phone and especially in person, not so much via text), so she naturally continues to feel drawn to you and wants something to happen between you and her.

If you can show her that you have the emotional strength to maintain your confidence and not give up until you get her back, while at the same time sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. by being emotionally masculine, making her laugh and smile and feel good when sheâ€™s with you, flirting with her to create sexual tension), she will feel compelled to drop her guard and open herself up to you again.

Of course, she may act like she is unsure, but if she is still interacting with you and catching up with you, then she wants you back, but simply isnâ€™t willing to admit it.

You need to be the more confident and courageous one during this time.

Donâ€™t let her mixed messages throw you off and make you doubt her interest moment to moment.

Let her see your steady, unwavering confidence in yourself.

That is irresistibly attractive to all types of women, even though some women will never give a guy the gift of admitting it to him.

So, rather than waiting for her to admit that she wants you back, just be confident enough to seduce her back into kissing, having sex and being back in a relationship with you again.

At some point, it will be very clear that she is committed again, but always be prepared to ignore her mixed messages that are designed to mess with your confidence.

Don't take her mixed messages personally.

Just let her see your steady, unwavering confidence in yourself and your attractiveness to her no matter what.

Another possible reason why your ex won't admit that she wants you back is

2. She doesn't want you to just get her back, so you can then dump her for revenge

[image: She doesn't want you to just get her back, so you can then dump her for revenge]

A woman will often fear getting back with an ex who she dumped in case he tries to get even with her, by pulling her back in, only to push her away and leave her feeling like the one who is being rejected and left behind.

So, rather than risk getting hurt in that way, she will avoid fully committing to him and will instead stick around in the hope that he will give her some kind of proof that he won't hurt her.

Of course, you're probably a really good guy and want your ex back for real, but she doesn't know that for sure.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, you're going to have to convince her.

How?

Well, the obvious answer sounds like it would be to tell her that you are serious about wanting a relationship.

Yet, that only works if your ex is truly attracted to you and in love with you and is hoping to work things out.

If your ex is currently turned off by you, has lost respect for you, isn't in love with you and as a result, doesn't want to be in a relationship with you, then telling her that you are serious about having a relationship with her will only push her away.

So, what should you do?

This

Another possible reason why your ex won't admit that she wants you back is

3. She is afraid that the relationship won't be any better than before and will just result in a break up once again

[image: She is afraid the relationship will just break up again anyway]

Most break ups between a man and a woman don't just happen without at least a few arguments happening first, or a few relationship problems that don't seem to be going away.

In some cases, a couple might even separate for a few days (e.g. she goes to hang out with friends for the weekend, they stop talking over the phone) to allow for things to cool down between them before they reconcile again, or to hopefully have some time to think about where they've been going wrong, make some changes, catch up again and hope that things are now better.

Yet, in many cases, a guy doesn't really know what else to do in the relationship other than what he has been doing, so he continues to get the same kind of results with her.

Then, by the time they break up, the woman will have usually reached a point where she no longer believes the relationship can be fixed and saved because the guy is unable, or unwilling to change. This is why an ex woman will often want a guy back, but not be willing to admit it because she doesn't want to give him a chance to only to then have to go through the emotional trauma of a break up once again.

So, if you want your ex back, you need to show her (not tell her) that you have changed.

Don't say, I promise I will change if you come back, because that is a maybe promise.

Likewise, don't say, I've changed. Please give me another chance because that can seem desperate, forced and needy to a woman, which will be a turn off.

What should you do instead?

Just show her.

Prove it to her through your actions, behavior, attitude and the way you talk and interact with her from now on that you have changed.

Women see that as manly, capable, confident, intelligent and smooth, which is much more attractive and appealing than a guy pleading for another chance.

Essentially, you need to make her feel like SHE wants to give you another chance because SHE now feels differently around you, rather than pleading for another chance because YOU have changed and YOU really want her to give you a chance.

Hopefully you can see and imagine the huge difference between those two approaches and how they affect a woman's feelings of attraction, respect, love and desire for her ex.

Another possible reason why your ex won't admit that she wants you back is that

4. She is interested in another guy, but doesn't want to admit it

[image: She is interested in another guy, but doesn't want to admit it]

Sometimes a woman will break up with a guy and find that she's now interested in another guy, or she will have a crush on the other guy prior to the break up and now feel free to pursue him.

Yet, at the same time, she also has feelings for her ex and is still wondering if there's still a chance they can work things out.

This puts her in a situation where she doesn't want to lose out on either option.

It may seem a bit selfish, but men who are in the same situation (i.e. have a girlfriend who they've lost interest in and at the same time, have happened to meet a new woman who is interested) will often do the same thing.

It sucks, but it happens.

The way to protect yourself against that ever happening in a relationship is to know how to deepen a woman's feelings over time and make her feel like if the relationship were to end, it would be her loss.

This makes a woman stick to a man like glue for life, whereas when a man makes a woman feel like he is the one who fears losing her, it gets rid of that glue and creates a sense of detachment from him that results in her being ready to stray if the relationship becomes stale and she happens to meet someone else.

So, back to the scenario of a woman who wants an ex back, but won't admit it (because she has recently met someone else)â€¦!

On the one hand, she may want to explore her feelings for the new guy and see if she can have a better relationship with him than she did with her ex.

Yet, on the other hand, if things donâ€™t work out with the new man, she doesnâ€™t want to ruin her chances of getting back with her ex if she tells him that sheâ€™s interested in someone else right now.

So, she strings her ex along for now (i.e. by giving him the impression that she might be open to getting back together, but just isnâ€™t sure yet), while she explores her feelings for the new guy.

If things work out with the new guy, she can then say to her ex, â€œI have to tell you something. Iâ€™m sorry if this hurts you and I hope you donâ€™t hate me for it. I know that youâ€™ve been hoping that weâ€™ll get back together, but Iâ€™ve met someone. Iâ€™m seeing him now and I am happy. So, I think itâ€™s better for both of us to make a fresh start with different people, rather than going back to a relationship that didnâ€™t work. I hope you understand. I wish you all the best.â€

This is one of the reasons why you shouldnâ€™t wait around for your ex to admit that she wants you back.

Instead, you need to go through the ex back process and get her back.

Do it while you can, so you donâ€™t end up regretting losing her for the rest of your life.

Some guys get over their ex within months, but many guys still think about and miss an ex woman years and sometimes decades later in their life.

If you have an opportunity to get her back now, then do it.

Get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex wonâ€™t admit that she wants you back isâ€¦!

5. She is waiting to see if you will change the things that really matter to her first

[image: She is waiting to see if you change the things that really matter to her]

One of the main things that can convince a woman to admit her feelings for her ex and give him another chance, is when he shows her via his attitude, actions and behavior that he has fully understood some of her important reasons for breaking up with him and has already taken action to improve those things about himself.

When she can see for herself that he really is a new man now, it makes it easy for her to let down her guard and open back up to being his girl again.

For example: Some of the changes your ex might want to seeâ€¦!

- You are so much more confident and self-assured now, rather than doubting yourself around her, other people or in life.
- You no longer feel the need to be clingy or possessive towards her because you have become emotionally independent.
- You are more emotionally dominant now, but are still a good, loving man (i.e. youâ€™re not afraid to stand up to her in an assertive, but loving way when sheâ€™s out of line).
- You are now able to fully take on the role of being the manly leader of the relationship, which means she can now relax and be a feminine, girly woman around you.

- You are more focused and have a clearer picture of where your life is going now, which means that she can now feel safer about her future with you.
- You are more emotionally masculine now and you treat her like she's a sexy, desirable woman when she's with you rather than like a friend. This results in her feeling sexually attracted to you again, instead of feeling neutral around you like a friend.
- You now understand how to communicate with a woman in a relationship that not only causes her to respect you and appreciate you, but makes her feel respected, appreciated, understood and loved.
- You are able to avoid unnecessary arguments with your new approach to communication, which results in you and her feeling happier, more relaxed and wanting to spend more and more time around each other.

When your ex can experience those kinds of changes in you (even glimpses of it in a 2-3 minute conversation initially), she will naturally drop her defenses.

She may then admit that she wants you back, but if she doesn't she will show you that she wants you back by continuing to communicate with you and spend time with you.

Avoid Making the Following Mistakes When Attempting to Get Her Back

So many guys find themselves in a situation like yours and then ruin it by making one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Assuming that she is completely in control of the situation

Sometimes a guy assumes that a reconciliation between him and his ex will only happen if she wants it to and that he's literally at her mercy until she says a clear, "Yes" or "No."

Yet, here's what a guy like that doesn't understand!

He can take control the situation by focusing on making her have stronger sexual and romantic feelings for him whenever he interacts with her.

Her feelings are your ticket back into a relationship with her.

It's the path.

It's what works.

It's not about your feelings for her.

It would be nice if you could just say, "I love you and really want you back" and for her to then say, "Oh, okay. Then, in that case, let's get back together."

Yet, that's not how it works obviously.

What works is when you make the woman feel such a strong, renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for you that she either says that she wants to get back together, or she simply gets back with you and shows that she wants to be back with you by spending a lot of time with you.

That's how it works with women.

So, don't put all of the power and control in her hands by waiting around for her to give you a â€œYesâ€ or â€œNoâ€ about reconciling.

With most modern women, they simply won't say it.

Instead, they will show it.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Trying to discuss things in detail via text or email

If a woman is being a bit closed off and doesn't want to meet up with you or even talk over the phone, you might decide to just try to work things out via text.

Yet, texting simply isn't the most effective way of getting an ex back and can actually cause more problems than it fixes.

Why?

A woman can't see a guy's body language or hear the tonality of his voice when he texts.

So, even if he is feeling really confident when he types his messages to her and puts in a lot of effort to explain things, it can cause a woman to imagine him frantically typing up large messages and sending them to her as he desperately tries to get through to her and get her to understand.

That turns her off.

Now of course, her assumption about him might not be true, but a woman will often think that based on her current feelings and perception of him (e.g. how he behaved leading up to, during and after the break up).

So, if you want your ex to take you seriously, make sure any discussions you have with her about the relationship are done over the phone and preferably in person and then, only after you've reactivated some of her feelings for you.

If you just try to force the issue with her via text, she's likely just going to remain closed lipped and refuse to admit anything about how she really feels about you.

Likewise, if you text her too much, she can literally go from liking you to feeling annoyed by you and then feeling turned off.

You have to understand that a woman's attraction for a man works differently than a man's attraction for a woman.

Don't expect her to be sensible and reasonable like a man.

She is a woman and feels attracted to a man for all sorts of subtle reasons, which you usually cannot control via text.

So, do whatever you can to get to a phone call or in person catch up.

That's where fast, natural attraction and reconciliation happens.

Texting is where long, exhausting conversations happen that almost always lead to misunderstandings, frustrations and further problems when a guy wants to get his ex woman back.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Cutting off contacting for weeks or months in the hope that it makes her come crawling back

[image: Cutting off contact in the hope that she comes crawling back]

That approach might work if a woman is still deeply in love with her ex and desperately wants him back.

Yet, even in cases like that, if the guy suddenly disappears from her life, she might take it as a sign that heâs over her and may then just focus on getting over him and moving in with a new man.

After all, she has to take care of how she is feeling and if she is feeling rejected by her ex because he has cut off contact, she can easily hook up with a new man to make herself feel better.

This is why itâs always best to take control of the ex back process rather than wasting time by cutting off contact with your ex and hoping that she takes the lead and gets you back.

When you interact with her and reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you, she then has a reason (right now) to admit that she wants you back or at least show you that she want you back by spending time with you, kissing and having sex with you again.

So, you donât have to sit around waiting and worrying for weeks and months in the hopes that she doesnât meet any other guys.

You can get her back pretty much right away, but only if you take action now.

Make it happen.

It is totally within your control.

She is your woman.

Get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get Revenge on a Cheating Girlfriend

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you're serious about getting revenge on a cheating girlfriend, here are 4 options you can choose from to achieve it:

Option 1: Re-attract her so she wants to sleep with you again. Then, sleep with her, make her want to give the relationship another chance and then reject her by breaking up with her.

[image: Break up with her after sleeping with her again]

To accomplish that, you need to make her feel like you've forgiven her and just want to see her as a friend from now on.

Saying that you just see her as a friend is a little rejection to begin with, which is part of the plan.

It can make her want to make you see her as more than just a friend, which then causes her to try to use her charms on you to seduce you, get you to like her and get you to think of wanting to be with her again.

In that mode of thinking, she will open herself up to flirting with you.

So, while you are saying that you just want to be her friend and behaving in that way, you then start adding in flirting to make her feel attracted and excited that there is still a sexual vibe and dynamic between you.

This causes the irresistible feeling of sexual tension.

Sexual tension happens when a man and a woman feel sexual desire for each other, but don't immediately release it with kissing and sex (e.g. because they are exes and it doesn't seem appropriate, she cheated on him and now feels drawn to him again so she's confused about her feelings, they're in a public place and can't just start kissing and having sex there and then, etc).

To help you understand it further; sexual tension also happens between coworkers who are attracted, but can't do anything about it due to restrictions at work, or if one or both of them is already in a relationship.

Sexual tension essentially happens when you want to be having sex, but something is in the way.

This also applies to foreplay, prior to actually having sex, just as another example for you.

So, don't overlook the power of sexual tension.

Use sexual tension to make your ex feel attracted to you again and want to sleep with you, even if she is thinking, "Just once and then I'll dump him again."

Of course, you're not going to let her get to dump you again because you're going to make her want sex, have very enjoyable make up sex (i.e. the sex a couple has when they make up after a break up), cause her to want to make you ask for a relationship and then you will reject her when she eventually starts hinting at it.

That will be your revenge and it will work.

So, from now on, make your ex feel so attracted and drawn to you again that she feels like she just has to have you.

When you know that she is attracted, suggest going back to your place (or hers) to talk and when you get her alone, release the built up tension between you with kissing and then blow her mind awesome make up sex.

After having sex, she may start hinting at having a relationship with you, or ask if you are hoping to work things out and get back together.

You can then laugh and say something along the lines of, â€œNo, thatâ€™s not going to happen. You cheated on me. Weâ€™re having fun today, but thatâ€™s it. Itâ€™s over between us as a couple.â€

She will almost certainly then start to cry and will genuinely feel the pain of rejection and you will have gotten your revenge.

Another way to get revenge on a cheating girlfriend isâ€

Option 2: Start sleeping with a new woman who your ex will see as being more attractive than her. Catch up with your ex and make her want you back, but then reject her when she tries to reconcile.

[image: Start sleeping with a woman that she will see as being more attractive than her]

One of the very best ways to get revenge on a cheating girlfriend is to show her that youâ€™ve already moved on with a woman who is even more attractive than her.

Doing that has a double effect on her.

Firstly, it causes her to feel insecure about herself and her desirability as a woman, which might make her want to get you back to prove to herself that sheâ€™s still attractive to you.

Secondly, it can cause her to begin thinking things like, â€œWow, sheâ€™s really pretty. Maybe thereâ€™s something about him that I overlooked when we were together. Attractive women find him appealing, so they must see something that I didnâ€™t. Why didnâ€™t I see it? What was I missing? Maybe Iâ€™m not good enough for him. Maybe he deserves a more attractive woman than me. Maybe I just cheated on the best guy I will ever find in my life.â€

Something along those lines anyway.

Essentially, she becomes insecure, starts to doubt her decision and her behavior towards her ex and becomes curious to see if he still likes her.

If your ex reaches out to say hi, you can pretend to be open to seeing her in person and then arrange to meet up.

At the meet up, focus on sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. by using ballsy humor to make her laugh and feel good to be around you again, by maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what she says or does to test you, by standing up to her in an emotionally masculine way when she tries to dominate you during conversation thereby making her feel feminine in comparison to you, by using flirting, by letting her see that youâ€™re not needy for her, but youâ€™re still being good to her).

Then, when sheâ€™s fully re-attracted and possibly saying things like, â€œI know I messed things up between us by cheating on you, but I really regret that now and I want you to know that if we ever got back together, I would never do that again. Iâ€™m actually quite ashamed of myself for doing it.

It was so childish and irresponsible of me. If we did get back together, I know I wouldn't do it again you can respond with something along the lines of, â€œNo, we couldn't ever get back together. You cheated on me. That's not something that can be recovered from. I'm with a new woman now and we're happy, so I only wish you the best.â€

You will then have gotten your revenge and can move on from there, while she is left behind feeling rejected and bad about herself for losing such a great man.

Another way to get revenge on a cheating girlfriend isâ€¦!

Option 3: Move on with your life and start posting up photos on social media of you having fun with new women and friends.

When a woman cheats on a guy, she will assume that he will then feel terrible about it and possibly spend a lot of time feeling sad and dejected on his own.

So, if she sees him looking happy, confident and living a great life without her, it will bother her, even if she never admits it.

For example: She may begin thinking things like, â€œWhy is he so happy so soon after we broke up? It's like me cheating on him didn't even bother him. Is it possible that he never really loved me after all? Maybe I was the fool who believed that he cared about me. I would be devastated if I got cheated on. Why is he so happy? Is he seeing a new woman or something? Is she prettier than me?â€

So, while you're moving on, feeling confident, living a great life and putting her and what she did behind you, she will be sitting around feeling confused about how things played out.

Seeing you so happy will make her question her attractiveness and value to you, which will often cause a woman to reach out and try to confirm that you do still love her, want her and feel attracted to her.

Yet, if you don't give her that validation, she will continue to feel lost, abandoned and rejected.

So, focus on yourself and on do things that put you around other people in places where you will be able to have some fun (e.g. hang out with friends and do new things, go out to bars and meet new women, pursue your goals and dreams, join meet up groups in your area, take up a new hobby or interest that involves other people, go traveling).

Then post up the photos on social media of yourself looking happy, confident and having fun with other people (especially other women if you can) and just know that your ex will almost certainly be looking at them and feeling twinges of regret and jealousy.

Note: If she has unfriended you, or stopped following you, simply post your photos as â€œpublicâ€ so she can see them from the outside.

Let her see that her cheating didn't ruin you and instead, caused you to level up and become even more attractive and appealing than you were when she first met you.

Let her feel like the one who has lost something great.

Another way to get revenge on a cheating girlfriend isâ€¦!

Option 4: Get her back and make her fall back in love with you. Then, dump her on her birthday, so she remembers you for the rest of her life.

Give her a present on her birthday with a note inside.

When she opens it and reads the note, it will have a simple message for her, â€œHappy birthday. You're dumped. Bye.â€

Of course, thatâ€™s not a very nice thing to do and might be a waste of your time to go get her back and then dump her.

Itâ€™s up to you.

How much emotional pain do you want her to feel for cheating on you?

Do you want to be nasty about it, or do you want to reject her and dump her shortly after getting back together?

Alternatively, do you just want to move on with a new, attractive woman and let that be your revenge?

Where Some Guys Go Wrong When Attempting to Get Revenge On a Cheating Girlfriend

When a guy gets cheated on, itâ€™s only natural that he will be feeling negative emotions (e.g. anger, betrayal, resentment, bitterness).

Yet, when heâ€™s feeling like that, heâ€™s more inclined to behave in unattractive ways that push his girlfriend away further.

For exampleâ€¦

1. Badmouthing her to her friends, family or coworkers

Although a guy might feel justified in blaming his ex girlfriend for everything and wanting to go and tell everyone who knows her (e.g. mutual friends, family, coworkers) things like, â€œItâ€™s her fault that weâ€™re no longer together. She cheated on me, broke my trust and ruined our relationship. Sheâ€™s such a slut! She has no morals! I canâ€™t believe I ever loved her,â€ itâ€™s almost never a good idea.

Why?

Not only is it unfair to her friends, family or coworkers to drag them into the drama and expect them to pick sides, but it also just makes him seem immature and inexperienced about the reality of loyalty in male-female relationships (i.e. you never own the other person in a relationship. They can still change their mind and not want to be with you at any moment. Some women canâ€™t be trusted, but most can. Sometimes a woman might stray if there is not enough love, respect and attraction in a relationship. The same applies to men and why they cheat on women. Thatâ€™s the reality).

In some cases, badmouthing her can make the person heâ€™s talking to think something along the lines of, â€œWell, no wonder she cheated on him. He canâ€™t cope with problems and challenges like a man. She probably cheated on him because she was looking for a real man. Maybe he deserved it. Maybe he needed to be taught a lesson for him to grow up.â€

Of course, they will rarely say that to him.

Instead, they might simply begin to avoid him until he realizes the reality of relationships and understands that both him and her probably caused the cheating to happen.

Another way that guys go wrong after being cheated on by a girlfriend isâ€¦

2. Writing her a letter about his pain to make her feel guilty

When a guy is hurting because he got cheated on by his girlfriend, he may decide to write her a letter as a way of expressing his pain and disappointment to her.

He hopes that making her feel really bad about it all will make him feel better after he hits â€œsend.”

He might also hope that by making her feel bad about cheating on him, she will regret it and want him back.

Yet, rather than getting the satisfaction of seeing his ex girlfriend regretting her actions and possibly even begging for his forgiveness, writing a letter to her usually backfires and ends up making a guy feel even more angry and betrayed.

Why?

A guy in emotional pain over a woman isnâ€™t attractive to her.

Women arenâ€™t attracted to neediness and dependence on them.

Women are attracted to men who are emotionally independent and who do not need a woman to make them feel confident, secure and happy.

So, even though getting cheated on is a nightmare of a thing to experience as a man, itâ€™s not something that you should ever go sulking to a woman about.

She isnâ€™t going to be attracted to you if she senses that you need her back to feel whole again.

So, skip the letter and just talk to her in person and re-attract her, or use one of the methods mentioned earlier to get her back and then dump her when youâ€™re ready.

Donâ€™t make the mistake of pouring your heart out to her in a letter, telling her about the pain youâ€™re experiencing, or writing to express your disappointment in the hope that it will turn things around.

Focus on what actually attracts women, not on what turns them off.

3. Getting angry at her and expressing it in different ways

Understandably, anger is usually the first thing a guy feels when he finds out that his woman cheated on him.

Itâ€™s probably one of the worst feelings of betrayal that a guy can ever experience.

It hits so hard that all of a sudden, your body heats up, you feel a knot in your stomach, you canâ€™t eat, sleep or think straight and as a result, you can naturally feel a fair bit of anger towards her and the guy who kissed her or had sex with her.

Thatâ€™s all understandable, but if you want to get her back or at least win the emotional war after being cheated on, you have to avoid getting angry at her and expressing it in different ways.

For example: When a guy gets cheated on by his girlfriend, he mightâ€™

- Insult her and call her names (e.g. slut, whore, tramp, skanky ass ho, piece of shit).
- Accuse her of never loving him in the first place.
- Get aggressive towards her and start pushing her around, or, in extreme cases even slap her or hurt her.
- Throw all her things out on the street, or break her belongings that are still at his place.
- Post nasty things about her on social media (e.g. put a picture of her on his Facebook page with a caption saying something like, â€œThis is my cheating girlfriend,â€ or â€œDonâ€™t trust this woman, sheâ€™s a cheating whore!â€)
- Try to beat up the guy she cheated on him with.
- Threaten to kill her or hurt her.
- Threaten to kill or hurt himself.

Yet, those things arenâ€™t going to achieve anything other than make him look like a jerk and convince his ex that he deserved to get cheated on.

She can then move on without even feeling remorse for her actions because she can say, â€œHeâ€™s an assholeâ€ or, â€œHeâ€™s crazyâ€ and so on.

If he picks up on that kind of attitude from her, it can make him feel even angrier than before.

So, donâ€™t let that happen to you.

Control your anger and win the emotional war by being smart and in control of the situation from now on.

Let this be a huge win for you, rather than an emotional scar that ruins future relationships for you.

Let it be something that improves you and gets you more prepared for a successful, faithful, loving relationship that lasts for life.

So, go ahead and get your revenge (e.g. get her back and dump her, or get a new woman and then reject your ex when she tries to get you back, etc) and then move on from there.

Donâ€™t make the mistake of allowing her mistake to cause you to become angry and become the villain in the situation.

Keep your cool.

Another mistake that other guys make isâ€¦

4. Getting back with her without being prepared to take on the power position in the relationship

[image: Getting back together without preparing to take on the position of power in the relationship from now on]

Sometimes, a woman immediately wants to get back with her boyfriend after cheating on him, so she will try to reconcile the relationship.

In some cases, a guy will then decide to forgive her and give her another chance.

That can be okay, but it can also be a recipe for disaster if he isnâ€™t prepared to take on the position of power in the relationship from then on.

For example: Rather than taking on the dominant role in the relationship and creating a new dynamic that causes her to respect him, love him and be loyal to him, he becomes hesitant, quiet, inward and unsure of how he should treat her.

As a result, she takes control of the relationship dynamic and ends up feeling like the more emotionally strong and secure one, which causes her to lose respect and attraction for him.

If a woman can't respect her man, then she won't be able to feel sexually attracted to him and without those two all-important feelings, there's no reason for her to be faithful or stay in the relationship for the long run.

Another way that guys go wrong is

5. Starting to get back with her, but then ruining it by continually talking about the cheating and how it hurt him

It's one thing for a guy to say that he can forgive his girlfriend for cheating on him and another thing to actually do it.

It's not easy.

It's a huge betrayal.

Just imagining her having sex with another guy, giving him oral and enjoying it is too much for some guys to deal with.

Yet, sometimes a guy is so keen to get his girlfriend back that he tries to convince himself that it will be possible for him to look past her mistake and start a new relationship on a clean slate.

Then, if she agrees to get back together with him, all he can really think about is what she did.

Did she enjoy him more? Did he have a bigger dick? Did she try things sexually with him that we've never done? Does she wish she was with him instead? and so on.

He might then start talking about the cheating and how bad it made him feel to hopefully make his girlfriend feel so guilty for what she did, that she will then stay faithful to him and never cheat on him or leave him again.

[image: She breaks up with him again because he can't get over her cheating past]

Yet, the opposite usually happens when a guy uses an approach like that.

Why?

A woman doesn't want to constantly have her past mistakes thrown in her face by the man she loves.

She also doesn't want to be with him out of guilt or pity.

A woman wants to be with a man because she is in love with him and doesn't want to lose him.

She doesn't want to feel like being with her guy is her duty because she is a bad person and needs to be punished now.

So, if she realizes that even though her boyfriend said that he forgave her, in reality he didn't and is still really bitter about it, then she won't feel motivated to stay in a relationship where she keeps being put down.

Here's the thing

Even though you definitely have a good reason to feel hurt about what your girlfriend did to you, if you decide to get back with her, you have to be able to fully forgive her cheating and let it go if you want the relationship to last.

If you don't, she may cheat on you again or just dump you and move on to another man who doesn't make her feel bad when she's with him.

Of course, if you want to get revenge on her, then you can pretend that you've forgiven her, make her fall in love with you again and then dump her.

The choice is yours right now.

What are you going to do?

Time is ticking!

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Having Trouble Getting Over a Breakup? Do This...

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you're having trouble getting over a break up, here are 4 things you can do from now on to feel better and move on:

1. Come up with a list of positives and negatives about her

[image: Come up with a list of positives and negatives about her]

Right now, you're probably still missing your ex in many ways and that alone is causing you to feel troubled by the break up.

For example, you may remember how great she was in bed, how amazing she smelled, how her skin felt next to yours, how you used to feel about her beauty, how she had a cute giggle that made you smile and so on.

Yet, continuing to think like that isn't going to help you get over the breakup.

It will just keep you stuck on her.

So, if you want to get past her and into a new woman, it's very important that you start making progress in a new direction.

One of the best ways to do that to is by making a list of your ex's positive and negative qualities, to help you realize that she isn't perfect.

In fact, there are no perfect women in the world, just like there aren't any perfect men.

Your ex may have been perfect for you in many ways, but if you want to get over the break up, you need to start focusing on the negatives too.

Here are 10 examples of potential positives and negatives that a guy might come up with about his ex girlfriend or ex wife.

Positives:

1. She's beautiful.
2. She's smart.
3. She has a great sense of humor and can make me laugh.
4. She's supportive of my goals and dreams.
5. She's nice to my family and friends.
6. She's a good cook.
7. She likes many of the same things that I do.
8. She's ambitious and driven.
9. She's fun-loving.
10. She's great in bed.

Negatives:

1. She's a bit of a nag.
2. She likes to throw tantrums and be very annoying to get my attention.
3. She's too much of a party girl and probably isn't ready to settle down.

4. She's a bit lazy and doesn't pull her weight.
5. She isn't affectionate.
6. She always insists on doing things her way.
7. She's closed-minded.
8. She refuses to try new things.
9. She is always saying bad things about other people to make herself feel better, but it just ends up making her bitter and insecure.
10. She expects me to pay for everything.

These are just some examples to get you thinking about the things that might be applicable to your ex.

What positives and negatives come to mind right now as you think about your ex?

Try to think about it for a couple of minutes.

Just make sure that you avoid focusing mostly on the positives and thinking things like, "I can't come up with anything really bad about her. I mean, she really is an amazing girl. No one is perfect. I'm not perfect either. Maybe I need to accept her flaws."

Yes, that is a possible path to take, but if you want to get over her, you need to focus on her negatives and use that as a reason to find a new woman who doesn't have those negatives.

If you are finding it difficult to do that, try hard to think of the potential long term consequences of her negatives.

For example: Imagine a woman who always insists on doing things her way in a relationship.

Over time, the guy might get tired of arguing with her about it and he may start giving in to her more and more.

Eventually, she ends up being the one with all the power in the relationship and she then feels more emotionally dominant than him.

When that happens, she gradually begins to lose respect for him for being such an emotional wimp around her and not being man enough to stand his ground in a dominant, but loving way.

When she stops respecting him, she naturally stops feeling attracted to him and without those two things, she will eventually fall out of love with him as well.

This can then lead to her breaking up with him, because she no longer feels like she can look up to him and respect him as her man.

In another example, imagine a woman who is lazy and doesn't really care about her man.

That type of behavior will usually only get worse in the long run, which will lead to arguments, resentment and then possibly cheating, or straight to a break up or divorce.

This is why it's important to admit to yourself that your ex wasn't perfect.

It's not about seeing her as being a bad person.

Instead, coming up with a list of positives and negatives is a way of putting your relationship with her into a more balanced perspective, so you can stop being so troubled emotionally about losing her.

The next thing you can do to get over the breakup is

2. Decide if you want to get her back just one last time

[image: Decide if you want to get her back one last time]

You might be having trouble getting over your breakup, but that doesn't mean you want your ex back for life.

Sometimes, you can feel a lot better by re-attracting your ex, hooking up with her again sexually and being together briefly as a couple, before breaking up with her on your own terms.

You can then walk away feeling less rejected and hurt because she accepted you back and you then broke off the relationship when you were ready.

Many men and women do that to the person who broke up with them, so they can then stop being so troubled by the break up and move on.

If you are willing to do that with your ex, then you will need to follow through on the ex back process to get her back and give yourself that shot.

The first step of the ex back process is re-attraction.

This means, you need to interact with your ex every chance you get via text, social media and most importantly over the phone and in person and begin re-attracting her (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again, being confident with her regardless of what she says or does to make you feel unsure of yourself, showing her via your attitude, actions and behavior that you've transformed yourself into a better man than before, flirting with her to create some sexual tension).

Then, after you've completed the other steps of the ex back process, proceed to hook up with her sexually and get a relationship started once again.

If you then want to break up with her at that point, proceed with it, but if you want to give the relationship a real chance and see if you and her can make it last, then go for it.

You have nothing to lose and everything to gain by giving it a try.

Alternatively, if you don't want her back at all and just want to get over her, here is something else you can do:

3. Start having fun outdoors with new people

Right now, the idea of getting out, meeting new people and doing anything fun without your ex might seem too hard for you, or just like something you don't want to do because you feel like being anti-social at the moment.

You might just want to be left alone to try and heal, or at least to hang out with friends or family where you feel comfortable and don't have to put in a lot of effort to look cheerful or interested.

Yet, that's not going to help you get over your breakup.

Here's the thing:

Catching up with existing friends (or family) will inevitably lead to discussions about your ex, which will most likely make you miss her even more than you already do.

You will likely see your friends or family happy and secure in their relationships, which will make you feel like the odd one out.

As a result, you will keep going back to missing your ex and wishing that the break up didn't happen.

The more you miss your ex and feel the deep pain associated with it, the more likely it is that you will begin to think, act and behave in unattractive ways (e.g. you may appear sad and lonely, you might say things from a place of insecurity, neediness or loneliness, which will turn your ex off and likely any other attractive, single women that are in your life, you may keep looking at photos and videos of you and her and wishing you could go back in time to be there with her again).

If you fall into that way of thinking and behaving, you will on the wrong path to re-attracting your ex. Why?

Women are instinctively attracted to the kind of men who are emotionally strong and can cope with whatever life throws at them (e.g. a difficult breakup) and turned off by men who fall apart, go inward and feel lost when faced with a challenge.

So, if you interact with your ex (e.g. on a phone call or in person) and she senses that youâre not coping very well without her, she will interpret it as emotional weakness and naturally feel turned off.

This is why itâs so important for you to start having fun again with new people and not just with your old friends.

Even though it may be hard for you right now, make the effort to get out and meet some new people.

If youâre unsure how, here are some ideas to get you thinking.

You canâ

- Attend a meet up group in your area (for ideas check out meetup.com).
- Start a new hobby (e.g. dancing classes, martial arts, hiking).
- Join a group exercise class.
- Join a travel group and start getting away over the weekends and exploring new and exciting places with the group.

Additionally, if youâre friends arenât available to go out meeting women with you, here are some tips and techniques for you to go on your own:

The more you focus on having fun without your ex, the more you will find yourself feeling better every day.

As an added bonus, the happier you become without her, the more attracted to you she will feel if and when you interact with her.

Suddenly, youâre no longer her dumped ex who canât live without her and has had trouble getting over the break up.

Instead, you are happy, confident and getting on with your life.

Sure, you might still want her back, but you know that you no longer need her back to be able to enjoy your life or feel good about yourself.

If you do interact with her, she will pick up on that and it will make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

At that point, you can re-attract her and get her back if you want, or just feel good that your ex wants you back and use that as an additional confidence boost as you get on with enjoying your life without her.

The next thing you can do to get over the breakup isâ€¦!

4. Become more emotionally independent as a man

To feel emotionally independent as a man (a quality that women find irresistible in men) you need to reach the point where you canâ€¦!

- Be happy and content with or without your ex in your life.
- Be confident in yourself, regardless of what happened between you and her, or whether she is still there to support or reassure you.
- Be confident in yourself regardless of what anyone says or does around you (e.g. they arenâ€¦t nice to you, they exclude you, they overlook you).
- Believe in yourself and in your attractiveness as a man, regardless of what your ex may have said about you when you and her broke up.

Important: Being emotionally independent doesnâ€¦t have to mean that you donâ€¦t want her back no matter what.

Instead, it simply means that youâ€¦re not going to sit around and let years of your life pass you by just because sheâ€¦s not your girl anymore.

Watch this video I made about the decades of your lifeâ€¦!

How are the remaining decade of your life going to play out with women?

Are you going to always miss your ex and wish you used your chance to get her back while it was still possible?

Are you going to move on and attract new women who might be an even better match for you?

Are you going to get over your ex, move on and never look back?

Whatever you do, start making decisions and taking action from a place of emotional independence.

Itâ€¦s the best way to live life as a man.

It frees you up to go after what you want (even if that is your ex for now) without ever feeling needy, insecure or reliant on one particular woman to make you happy, secure and confident in yourself.

In the case of wanting an ex back, quickly get yourself to the point where you want her back, but donâ€¦t need her back to feel good about yourself or to live a successful, happy, confident life.

Whether you get over her and move on, or get her back, itâ€¦s just so important that you achieve emotional independence.

Why?

One of the reasons why is that some guys mistakenly think that to make a woman feel loved, happy and appreciated in a relationship, he has to make her the centre of his world.

Everything he does should be for her.

No, no, no.

Thatâ€¦s not emotional independence.

Thatâ€¦s betting his entire happiness and fulfillment in life on her being happy with how much he gives to her and does for her.

That just doesnâ€¦t work in the long run.

Yet, many guys don't realize it until they've wasted years or decades of their life trying to please women in that way.

For example: A guy like that might want to give up his interests and hobbies, put his dreams on hold and even stop hanging out with his friends to spend more, or even all of his time with his girl.

He assumes that by putting her in first place in his life, she'll see how devoted he is to her and she will then in turn be equally devoted to him too.

Yet, that's rarely how it works.

Instead, when a man makes his woman his main purpose in life and reason for living, he will eventually begin to behave in an insecure, clingy, needy way (e.g. he will need her to keep showing him how happy she is, how in love she is, otherwise his entire world will be threatened).

Over time, his needy, clingy behavior will drive a wedge between them and cause her to lose respect and attraction for him.

When that happens, staying in a relationship with him will become something that no longer appeals to her.

It will feel forced and as though she is just sticking around to help him avoid crumbling and falling apart without her.

That's not what a woman wants, even though movies and TV drama shows might pretend that it is.

Women want a man who is emotionally independent, loves her and makes her feel wanted, but also gives her the feeling that she needs him and that it would be her loss if the relationship ended, not the other way around.

So, if you want to get your ex back, one of the main things you need to show her is that you haven't been sitting around feeling sad, lonely and lost without her.

Instead, you are now emotionally independent and feel really good about yourself and your life without her.

Don't rub that in her face by saying it, but just let her sense that via your social media posts (i.e. you having fun with new people) and the way you talk and interact with her (i.e. without any sense of neediness, but while still being a good, loving man).

When she notices that, she will like it and it will attract her to you.

She may initially feel confused about her feelings, but she won't be able to ignore them if you continue to interact with her and build up more attraction.

Soon enough, she will be the one who is having trouble getting over the break up and will want to get back with you to make herself feel better.

Try to Avoid Making the Following Mistakes When Getting Over Your Break Up

These days, a lot of men have trouble getting over break ups with women and often then make one of the following mistakes, which don't solve the problem!

1. Assuming that the solution is to unfriend her, block her and completely delete her from his life

[image: Blocking her won't make you forget her]

Right now, it might feel comforting to get rid of all signs that your ex ever existed in your life (e.g. unfriend her, block her, delete photos of her, get rid of anything personal that she left behind).

Unfortunately though, that doesn't take away the pain or the deep memories of her.

Instead, you're just left with what you can remember, which is usually just going to be the stuff that makes you feel good about her.

As a result, you just end up feeling stuck, depressed, lonely and like you'll never be happy again without her, which doesn't help you feel the confidence that you need to feel to get her back, or get over her.

Remember: Hiding from your problems doesn't make them go away.

They're still there.

At some point, you will come across your ex again (e.g. at the mall, university, work, a mutual friend's house, she sends you a friend request, she opens her social media profile to be viewable publicly, you search and find photos of her at her new place of work, a friend sends you a pic, a friend runs into her and passes on a message for you, etc).

At that point, you're either going to be ready to re-attract her, or you're going to be at a loss of what to do because, up until that point, you've been pretending she doesn't exist.

She does exist.

The question is: Are you going to pretend she doesn't and try hard to ignore the deep memories you have of her, or are you going to face up to reality and decide that she exists and you're either going to get her back or move on with new women to get over her?

Try to make a decision and then begin making progress in the direction you have decided to go.

In the meantime, another mistake to avoid is

2. Not improving your ability to attract her and as a result, feeling lost and hopeless without her

One of the most important elements of being a confident man around women, is knowing how to attract them at will (i.e. on purpose, not by luck) and then how to keep a relationship together.

Watch this

If you don't have the skill of being able to attract a woman at will and make her want to please you and stay with you in a relationship, you will always feel a lack of confidence around women.

You either have it or you don't.

So, a mistake that a lot of guys make when they get dumped by a woman is to go into their shell and hide themselves away from women for a long time.

During that time, most guys won't learn how to improve their attractiveness to women, or they will focus on improving things about them that are only external (e.g. their looks, career).

Yet, even if a guy improves his appearance or career, he still has to be able to handle the first 5 minutes of a conversation with an attractive women.

He still has to be able to make her want him and hope to be his girlfriend.

He still has to be able to keep the relationship together for life, rather than ending up getting dumped again or divorced.

Itâs not something that any of us guys can escape.

So, if youâve been feeling lost without her because you know that itâs difficult for you to attract new, quality women, then now is the time to get this area of your life handled.

Donât make the mistake of just hiding yourself away and developing insecurities about women, or assuming that all of your problems with women will go away if you go to the gym or improve your career.

Guys with muscles get dumped and guys with a great job get dumped too.

What matters is your ability to attract a woman as you talk to her and interact with her and your ability to keep a relationship happy, attracted and in love for life.

When you have that skill, you will be confident with women for life.

Yet, if you remain stuck at the level you are at now, you will almost certainly always feel insecure and unsure of yourself around attractive women and fear getting dumped, cheated on or divorce throughout the rest of your life.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

3. Focusing on the painful emotions of being dumped, rather than seeing the break up as an opportunity to become the man he knew he could have been becoming all along

You can let this breakup bring you down and cloud the rest of your life with a dull pain that you always feel in the background, or you can use it as a springboard to a much better, stronger, more desirable version of you.

You can literally become so much more confident, strong and wise from this moment onwards, or you can weaken and fade into a version of yourself that you wonât be happy with.

So many guys let a break up with a woman destroy them for years or decades.

Donât do that to yourself.

Use the break up as an opportunity to quickly become the amazing man you know you can be.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Was I Wrong to Block My Ex Girlfriend?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends.

1. Did you block her to hopefully make her regret leaving you?

[image: Did you block her to hopefully make her regret leaving you?]

If so, then the act of blocking her can work if she is still in love with you and secretly wants you back.

Yet, if she doesn't secretly want you back, then she probably won't care much or at all about you blocking her.

Additionally, if she tries to contact you and sees that she is blocked, it can have a negative effect depending on the reason for the break up.

For example: If one of the main reasons she broke up with you was because she thought you needed to be more manly, then she might look at the act of blocking her as being immature and childish.

Her perception of a manly man may be a man who doesn't need to block her and instead, can handle any contact she may have with him because he is emotionally strong and mature.

She may feel as though it's only really women who block guys or who can't handle communicating with an ex, but men shouldn't be so emotional and reactive like that.

If that's the case, she might think something like, â€œWhaaat? He blocked me? Why? I can't believe how childish he's behaving. Like a girl. This is just more proof that I made the right decision by breaking up with him. He's definitely not the man for me. I can now put that relationship behind me and move on and find myself a real man without having any regrets.â€

So, what should you do now?

You've blocked her.

How can you reverse the situation?

Firstly, you need to be man enough to take responsibility for your actions.

So, you have two options right now:

1. Unblock her and hope that she contacts you. (That might not happen for weeks or months, during which time she may move on).
2. Unblock her and send her a message saying, â€œHey. I blocked you and then unblocked you. Just thought I'd let you know. Sorry for being an idiot.â€ That will make her feel compelled to forgive you and possibly message you back. Either way, you can message her a few days later and then get her on a phone call.

Be prepared for the phone call though.

She might not be initially receptive and open, but you can change that by warming her back up to you as you talk to her.

So, imagine that you're on a call with your ex and she says something along the lines of, â€œWhat do you want? Why are you calling me? Aren't you the one who blocked me? Why are you calling me now? I donât get it.

Rather than becoming defensive or annoyed, or losing confidence and becoming unsure of yourself, just laugh at yourself and say something along the lines of, âYeah, that was me. I think I was suffering with a little bout of âidiotitisâ at the time. Fortunately, Iâm all better now and have a laugh with her about it.

Then add, âSeriously though, Iâm sorry that I was being silly when I blocked you like that. It was a childish and immature thing to do. Anyway, I accept that you and I have broken up. All I want is for us to get past that and at least be friends from now on, thatâs all. We can be friends, right?

By laughing at yourself and then admitting your mistake, it shows her that you really have changed and are no longer the same guy she broke up with.

You have learned from the experience and have already taken steps to become a better, more emotionally strong and mature man.

Additionally, by getting her to agree to be friends, it then makes it okay for you and her to text each other, get on a call and if the vibe is good, even arrange to catch up in person to say hi.

Thatâs the smooth way to get an ex woman back.

The woman enjoys it, feels good about it and wants it and youâre just guiding her through it all.

It works and it doesnât result in you being rejected because youâre not using an approach of asking for a relationship with her.

Youâre just making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you and then guiding her towards hugging, kissing, having sex and then (and only then) being in a relationship with you again.

By the way!

Remember not to lose your confidence (or cool) if she doesnât forgive you right away for blocking her.

Many women wonât make it easy for a guy to instantly get her back after heâs blocked her.

So, in some cases, a woman will initially pretend that she wonât forgive him, that she doesnât care that he blocked her in the first place and that she doesnât want to be friends with him anyway, to see if heâs going to give up right away, or if he will remain confident enough to keep guiding her back into a relationship.

Of course, that doesnât mean you should beg and plead with her to change her mind or pressure her into wanting a relationship, because that will only turn her off even more.

Instead, just maintain your confidence and use humor to break down her defenses and make her open back up to you.

You can then use your friendship with her to fully reactivate her feelings for you, get to kissing and sex again and then get her back into an actual boyfriend-girlfriend relationship.

2. Did you block her because she was harassing you?

[image: Did you block her because she was harassing you?]

In a case like that, blocking your ex girlfriend can be a good thing, especially if you donât want her back due to her harassing you or being nasty towards you.

You can simply keep her blocked, cut your losses and move on.

Additionally, it can also lead to her wanting you back in some cases too.

For example: If your ex girlfriend still has feelings for you and has been harassing you because she's worried that you might move on without her, blocking her can cause her to finally come out and confess that she wants you back.

You are then in the position of power and can guide her back into a relationship with you.

Yet, not all women react nicely to being blocked.

Depending on the reason for the break up and how the guy behaved leading up to, during and after the break up, getting blocked can really make a woman angry for how he is now treating her.

She can feel disrespected, abandoned and used, which can result in her being nasty in certain ways (e.g. contacting his friends to reveal his secrets, causing problems for him at work, etc).

How the woman reacts really depends on what kind of person she is, how the break up went down, how much she cares about her ex, how impacted she feels by the break up, if she has a new guy and is happily moving on and so on.

3. Did you block her to prevent your new girlfriend from feeling hurt, jealous or annoyed?

[image: Did you block her to prevent your new girlfriend from getting hurt?]

If you've happily moved on with another woman and have no intention of getting back with your ex girlfriend, then blocking her for the benefit of your new girlfriend is a good thing to do.

However, depending on what type of woman your girlfriend is, she may actually like it and feel more attracted to you if she sees that your ex is still trying to get you back.

It really depends.

Some women have a really hard time trusting guys, just like some guys have a really hard time trusting girls.

So, if your new girlfriend has trust issues, wants a serious relationship and doesn't want your ex girl hanging around, then it can be helpful to block your ex and keep her out of your life.

As you probably know by now, trust is one of the most important parts of a relationship between two people.

Without trust, a relationship will erode away via fights, accusations, resentment, anger and desire for revenge until the relationship feels more like two enemies than a loving, boyfriend and girlfriend.

So, if you're worried about your new girlfriend feeling as though you can't be faithful to her, blocking your ex will let her see that she has nothing to worry about anymore.

Your ex is gone and she is your woman.

On the other hand, if you've only been dating other women to make your ex jealous and hope that it causes her to come back to you, then blocking her might not be the right approach, because she may take it as a sign that you're completely over her and she will then move on with another guy herself.

4. Did you do it because you couldn't handle seeing her social media profile?

[image: Did you block her because you couldn't handle seeing her social media profile?]

If so, then it points to a major thing you need to improve about yourself as a man to re-attract her and keep her in a relationship; your emotional strength.

An emotionally strong, masculine man doesn't run or hide from challenging situations. He faces them head on, while remaining calm and in control of his emotions.

He doesn't rely on a woman's signs of interest, nice behavior towards him or loyalty to him to feel confident about himself.

As a result, women feel magnetically attracted to him and want to be loyal for life so they don't lose him.

It's a completely different way of approaching life as a man, which results in a totally different experience with women.

Part of being able to live that type of life is being emotionally independent, or having independent confidence.

This means that you don't rely on a woman or other people around you in life to make you feel good enough about yourself so you can feel confident or worthy.

You feel that way on your own, based on your decision about yourself that you are worthy.

You are a great man and are always becoming an even greater man.

You are amazing and on your way to becoming even more amazing.

That's how you have to think about yourself to have independent confidence, or to be emotionally independent.

It's such a rare, powerful quality to have as a man, which is why women are so attracted to it.

It makes men and women respect you, look up to you and want to be like you.

It's a powerful quality and very few men have it.

So, if you want to re-attract your ex girlfriend and get her back, the first thing you need to do is to get to the point where you approve of yourself and know that you are good enough for her (and for any other woman you want).

The more you believe in yourself and your ability to re-attract your ex girlfriend, the more it will become a reality.

You will see improvements immediately and every day from now on if you adopt that mindset.

Yet, don't wait around for weeks or months to contact her and let her experience the new and improved you.

Take action like a real man and make it happen within the next few days to a week.

When your ex girlfriend experiences the changes in you (i.e. she sees that you're now more confident, emotionally strong and emotionally masculine), her feelings about you will automatically begin to change.

Even if she tries to deny it to your face, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling new sparks of respect and attraction based on you being man enough to quickly learn from your mistakes and improve.

She will then begin to feel confused about her decision to break up with you.

When those kinds of thoughts enter her mind, the door to getting her back begins to open and you can then walk right through and get her back.

Where Some Guys Go Wrong When Blocking an Ex After a Break Up

In most cases, blocking your ex will simply cut off your chances of interacting with her to re-attract her and get her back.

If she is interested, tries to reach out to you and sees that she is blocked, it can cause her to quickly try to move on with new guys to make herself feel better.

She may also decide to block you during that time, so you can't contact her and mess with her emotions.

So, apart from a few exceptions, it's almost always better to avoid blocking her (or unblock her if you have blocked her already) and just get on with re-attracting her and getting her back.

That said, here are 2 common mistakes some guys regarding blocking an ex woman.

The first one is about social media!

1. Forgetting that she can easily check his social media profile from someone else's phone, including a mutual friend if they have one

Women always want to check up on their ex after a break up.

It's a natural curiosity that is very hard to ignore, especially in today's world with access to social media.

In some cases, a woman will check her ex's social media because she misses him and wants to see if he's also feeling a bit sad and lonely without her.

In other cases, she checks to see if he's struggling without her, so she can then feel good about herself, or she wants to make sure that he doesn't move on before she does, so she doesn't have to feel like she is the one being left behind after the break up.

Whatever her reasons, an ex woman will almost always find a way to check up on her ex guy, even if he's blocked her.

If she then comes across a sad, lonely social media photo of him, or a post where he's talking about how much his life sucks, she will automatically start to feel better about herself (because the break up is hurting him more than her) and turned off about him (because women are turned off by emotional weakness in men).

So, if you've already blocked your ex, make sure that you update your social media pages and post lots of photos of you having fun with other people since the break up.

The more she can see that you're having fun without her (not photos of you doing things on your own. It has to be with other people), the more she will want to interact with you again.

She will feel as though she is missing out on experience a new, more confident and happy you, which will make her feel like she is being rejected in a weird kind of way.

Itâ€™s almost as though you are happier now that youâ€™re without her.

She canâ€™t have that happen.

She has to make you feel like you need her again.

As a result, she will most likely text you, message you on social media or call you (if youâ€™ve unblocked her) or pass a message through a friend (if sheâ€™s still blocked) and pretend that she just wanted to say hi as a friend, or to see how you were doing.

Donâ€™t be fooled by only wanting to say hi, or just wanting to see how you are doing.

Secretly, she will be feeling surges of respect and attraction for you again for being able to live a happy, fulfilling and successful life with or without her in it.

From there, you simply need to create some sparks of attraction inside of her as you talk to her and then arrange a meet up so you can get her back.

So, make sure that your social media profile is showing you looking happy, confident, loved and included (i.e. around other people who clearly want you to be there).

Let her feel like the one who is missing out.

That is what works on all types of women, young and old.

I know this because Iâ€™ve helped 1,000s of men to get their ex woman back.

It works.

Another mistake that guys make regarding blocking their ex isâ€¦

2. Assuming that she will care that she is blocked

Sometimes, a guy will block his ex girlfriend hoping that she will care so much that she will desperately try to contact him, but she wonâ€™t.

In other cases, he will hope that she notices and then tries to contact him to find out whatâ€™s up.

Yet, she doesnâ€™t even care or notice that she is blocked and simply uses the time that he is out of her life, to move on.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she will usually have reached a point where she has disconnected from her sexual and romantic feelings for him.

In other words, she doesnâ€™t feel much or anything for him anymore and is emotionally ready to move on.

Many women get prepared weeks or even months before a break up.

So, when she finds herself single again, a woman will often focus all of her attention on moving on, finding herself a new man and living life on her own terms without the stress that sheâ€™d been experiencing leading up to the break up.

This usually means that sheâ€™s not losing any sleep worrying about why her ex blocked her.

Instead, she may even be thinking things like, â€œCool. Iâ€™m glad he blocked me rather than constantly texting, calling, messaging me to give him another chance. Now I can enjoy my life without him seducing me back into a relationship. I can focus on finding myself another guy, without the hassle of dealing with an ex. Too easy.â€

So, if your ex girlfriend doesn't have feelings for you anymore, what you need to understand is that you stand a much better chance of getting her back by interacting with her (via text, on social media and especially over the phone and in person) and using those interactions to reawaken her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, than you do by blocking her and hoping she will somehow come running back to you.

Of course, if you've already blocked her, it's not the end of the world.

Just go ahead and unlock her, call her and begin reactivating her feelings for you.

If she doesn't answer your call, just text her.

Yet, make sure that you get to a call though.

Attraction happens so much faster and easier on a phone call compared to text, so don't hide away from a phone call behind way too many texts.

If you text too much, she may end up playing hard to get and going cold on you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Said It's Best That We Don't See Each Other or Talk to Each Other Anymore

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why your ex said that:

1. She wants to create some distance between you and her so she can move on with another guy

[image: She wants to create some distance between you and her, so she can move on with another guy]

If a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy and wants to remain broken up, she will usually try to avoid interacting with him too much after the break up.

She will aim to create distance between herself and her ex, so there is less of a chance of him being able to re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship.

A woman may do that if she wants to be alone for a while, open herself up to dating other guys to see how she feels, or even if she is already interested in a new guy or dating a new guy.

She essentially wants to give herself a chance to see if she can move on without her ex.

Yet, she doesn't want to tell him that directly.

So, rather than saying something like, "Look, I'm not going to change my mind about breaking up with you. In fact, I'm probably just going to move on and find myself a new guy. Please stop bothering me and accept that it really is over between us," and then have to deal with his response (e.g. he might beg and plead with her to change her mind, cry, get angry and call her disloyal or other names), she instead tries to cut him off by saying that it's best they don't see each other or talk to each other anymore.

That way, she can make a clean break and then move on with another guy if she wants to, without having to constantly deal with an overly-emotional ex.

Here's the thing though!

You don't just have to accept defeat and give up on her because she has recommended or thinks that it's best if you and her don't see each other or talk to each other anymore.

You can seduce her back into a relationship, so you and her can have a new chance at what you had!

You can literally change how your ex feels about you and the break up by changing your approach to interactions with her from now on.

So, rather than making the mistake of nagging, begging, pleading or harassing her to stay in touch with you, just focus on making her feel so good when she interacts with you (i.e. attracted, turned on by her new approach, curious about the new you, relaxed and happy when talking to you) that she wants to keep hearing from you.

She wants it.

When she wants it, she opens up to you and doesn't want to lose you.

That is the easiest, most effective and loving way to get an ex woman back.

In her mind, she feels as though it's all on her terms and she is deciding everything, but in reality, it's half on her terms and half on yours.

You are making her feel attracted to you again and guiding her back into a relationship and she is deciding to open up to that and give it a chance because it feels so good to her.

So, make sure that you are clear on this: When you change the way you interact with her (i.e. make her feel surges of respect and sexual attraction for you again), her feelings about you and the relationship will automatically change, often within minutes or hours.

She will get to the point where she thinks something like, “I feel different all of a sudden. Now, the idea of moving on with someone else doesn't feel right to me anymore. Maybe we can work things out between us after all. I don't want to lose him. In fact, I want him hugging me right now. I want to kiss him.”

Then, getting back together will happen naturally and quickly.

However, if you accept defeat based on her saying that she thinks it's best that you don't see each other or talk to each other anymore, you could lose her for life.

Additionally, she may decide to move on with another guy without having any regrets, leaving you behind in ruins, missing her and regretting not giving yourself a chance to get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex said that she doesn't want to see you or talk to you anymore is that

2. She is tired of you trying to get her back even though you haven't really changed

[image: She is tired of you trying to get her back even though you haven't really changed]

If a woman feels like her ex keeps trying to convince her to get back together, but doesn't want to change or doesn't even know how or what to change (e.g. she wants him to stop being so emotionally sensitive and be more manly, but he has no clue how to be like that. He thinks that he needs to be nicer, more polite and considerate. Yet, she wants him to grow a pair of balls and make her feel like a woman in comparison to his loving, but dominant masculinity), then she won't waste time interacting with him.

Instead, she will focus on getting over him and moving on by opening herself up to more masculine men.

This is why, if you want your ex to change her mind about not seeing or talking to you anymore, you need to show her via your actions, behavior and the way you talk and interact with her that you've already changed and improved on some of the things that really matter to her.

For example: Some of the things a woman might want to really see change in her guy are that

- He maintains his confidence regardless of what she says or does to make him feel insecure (e.g. she acts cold and aloof, throws a tantrum and blames him for the break up), rather than losing confidence and becoming insecure like he has, especially near the end of the relationship. He uses humor to change her mood from angry to happy, rather than getting dragged into her fake drama and losing control of his emotions. Alternatively, simply not losing his cool when she creates fake drama to test him.
- He believes in himself and in his value to her and the world, rather than feeling like he's not good enough for her, or like other guys are better than him and she secretly wants to be with them.

- He makes her feel like a sexy, desirable woman, rather than treating her like a neutral friend or like one of his buddies.
- He is loving, caring and attentive, but he doesn't let her push him around and get away with bad behavior (i.e. being very disrespectful towards him, being selfish). He puts her back in her place in a loving, caring, but dominant way.
- He has a plan for his life (and by association her life too if she is lucky enough to be with him) and he is motivated, focused and active in pursuing that plan, rather than being a grown man who still acts and behaves like a teenager (e.g. irresponsible, immature, stuck in a rut, wastes a bit too much time watching TV or playing video games).
- He is emotionally independent and has goals, interests and friends that are independent of his relationship with his woman, rather than making her his main purpose and source of happiness and entertainment in life.

These are just a few of the changes your ex might want to see in you before she starts believing you and stops wanting to cut all ties with you.

You don't have to achieve everything all at once, but you do need to let her see that you have changed.

Don't tell her that you've changed and try to sell yourself.

Let her sense it based on how you react, respond and act and also based on what she finds out as you talk and interact with her.

When she notices that you really have changed and so quickly, she will feel a strong, surge of respect and attraction for you again.

She will then naturally stop pushing you away and start feeling like she wants to open up and experience the new and improved you.

As a result, her defenses come down and she opens back up to talking to you and being with you to see what happens from there.

If you know how to get her back at that point, you will have a very high chance of getting her back.

Another possible reason why a woman will say she doesn't want to see you or talk to you anymore is because!

3. She cares about you as a person, but just isn't attracted to you anymore

[image: She cares about you as a person, but isn't attracted to you anymore]

It can often be difficult for a woman to handle interacting with her ex when she knows that he has strong sexual and romantic feelings for her, but she no longer feels the same way about him.

Yet, because she cares about him as a person and doesn't want to continue seeing him unhappy and disappointed every time she tells him that she's not interested in getting back together, she will often suggest that they cut off all contact to make it easier for him to heal and move on.

Another reason she may suggest that is because if he sticks around and she starts dating other guys, or even gets into another relationship, she doesn't want to deal with his reactions to it all.

So, ask yourself: Could that be a possible reason why your ex said that it's best that you donâ€™t see each other or talk to each other anymore?

Is she really just trying to avoid your reactions to what you will see happen in her life (or find out about) over the next few weeks?

If so, you need to take control of the situation and turn it around to your advantage now, before you become even less of a priority for her.

Firstly, you need to let her know that you accept the break up and that you only want to be friends from now on.

Then, you need to use the friendship (and ability to contact each other as friends) to immediately re-spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you, so she begins to be the one who wants to be more than friends.

By the wayâ€¦!

The important thing to remember is that you canâ€™t push her for a relationship commitment right now, because if you do, she will quickly close back up again and may end up saying something along the lines of, â€œI knew I shouldnâ€™t have agreed to be friends with you. You were only saying that to have more time with me so you could convince me to get back together. Even though I really do care about you as a person, I just donâ€™t feel the same way about you anymore, and I donâ€™t want to keep seeing the hurt look on your face every time I say that. This is why, Iâ€™m going to stop seeing you and talking to you from now on. I know it seems harsh, but itâ€™s for the best for both of us. Please donâ€™t make this harder than it already is and just let me go.â€

Sheâ€™ll say it in her own way, but she will basically mean that.

She will feel disappointed that youâ€™re pushing for a relationship when she doesnâ€™t have the same kind of feelings for you and will likely use that as a reason to further distance herself from you.

So, just focus on using interactions with her to relight the spark of attraction inside of her (e.g. by maintaining your confidence around her even when she says that she never wants to get back with you or if she talks about dating other guys, by making her laugh and smile and feel good in your presence, by flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you, by using your masculinity to make her feel feminine and girly in comparison to you).

The more respect and sexual attraction you can make her feel during interactions, the more open she will become to getting back with you.

Yet, if your plan is to beg, plead or try to convince her to change her mind by explaining why she should give you another chance, then sheâ€™s probably going to just stick to her decision to cut you out of her life.

Another possible reason why a woman will say she doesnâ€™t want to see you or talk to you anymore after a break up isâ€¦!

4. She still feels attracted to you and loves you, but her gut instinct is telling her to remain broken up with you

[image: She is attracted, but her gut instinct is telling her to move on]

There are instances where a woman will suggest cutting off all contact with her ex to protect herself because she still has strong feelings for him, but deep down she knows it just wonâ€™t work out in the long run.

For example: Some of her reasons might beâ€¦!

- Heâ€¦s a really nice guy, but he doesnâ€¦t make her feel strong sparks of attraction for him because of how he treats her. It feels more like a friendship than a relationship and she doesnâ€¦t want that. She wants a good guy who makes her feel the need to be very nice to him, rather than a nice guy who essentially tries to make her love him based on how nice, good, generous, loving and caring he is.
- Heâ€¦s stuck in a dead-end job and isnâ€¦t doing anything to improve and upgrade himself, or he works way too much and doesnâ€¦t give her enough time and attention.
- Heâ€¦s jealous and controlling and often gets very angry at her, to the point where she worries that over time, he might even become violent towards her.
- They have different ideas about what they want in life (e.g. he wants to go traveling and not have too many responsibilities in life, whereas she wants to settle down and start a family, or vice versa).
- She feels like sheâ€¦s more emotionally mature than him and that heâ€¦s not likely to change any time soon, or on the other hand, he is too serious and she prefers having a more light-hearted, easy-going and sometimes immature approach to life because she believes that in the end, nothing really matters anyway, so why not just have fun and enjoy life.
- She feels like heâ€¦s too good for her because heâ€¦s very good looking, way cooler than her or comes from a much better family and upbringing.
- Sheâ€¦s noticed that he has a wandering eye (very attracted to other women and canâ€¦t seem to remain focused on her), so sheâ€¦s afraid that he will eventually act on that desire and physically cheat on her.

As a result, she decides to distance herself from him to help herself get over him and be able to move on with a guy who she hopes wonâ€¦t end up disappointing her in other ways.

Of course, there is no guarantee of that for her and she likely knows it.

She knows that itâ€¦s not easy to find true love and if you find it, sometimes it is worth fighting for.

If you want your ex to feel as though what you and her shared is worth another try, you need to focus on quickly improving on some of the things sheâ€¦s worried about, so that she can see for herself that her concerns are unfounded.

For example: Some of the things you might do to convince her areâ€¦!

- Flirt with her and make her feel like a desirable woman when sheâ€¦s with you (so she feels that â€œsparkâ€œ with you) rather than talking to her in a neutral way.
- Start getting clear on your big goals and ambitions in life and try to make progress on them, or if youâ€¦ve been neglecting her, try to start living a more balanced life where possible, so you would actually have some additional time and attention available for her.
- Spend less time or completely cut ties (for now) with some irresponsible friends and begin hanging out with more mature friends.
- Take a moment to understand what really attracts women to men after a break up and learn that, so you can prepare yourself to properly re-attract her and get her back.

Initially, she might feel a bit nervous about giving you another chance (because she may not believe you can change), but when she sees for herself that youâ€¦re now at a different level than before, she won't be able to hold out for very long.

Suddenly her resolve to not see each other or talk to each other anymore will begin to fade and from there, you get quickly get her back.

Another possible reason why a woman will say she doesn't want to see you or talk to you anymore after a break up is

5. She's trying to tell you to leave her alone and is simply being polite about it

Sometimes a woman will have distanced herself from her feelings for her ex, a long time before she breaks up with him (i.e. some women get ready for a break up months in advance).

So, by the time that the couple is officially broken up, the woman is emotionally ready to move on and make a clean start with someone else.

Yet, her ex, who has often be surprised by a sudden break up, will feel shocked and may begin doing all kinds of ineffective things to convince her to give him another chance.

For example: He might

- Call her on the phone to discuss the relationship and try find a solution to help them get back together again.
- Send her flowers or gifts to apologize for his mistakes.
- Send her long text messages, emails or letters explaining his feelings for her.
- Invite her out for coffee as friends and then bombard her with reasons why they belong together, plead for another chance or worse, he may even start crying.

Although his intentions are good and he's just trying to get the woman he loves back, him pressuring her for a relationship just doesn't seem fair to her because she doesn't feel the same desire and wanting for him.

She has prepared herself for the break up, has disconnected from her feelings and is now trying to get away from her ex so she can hopefully move on.

So, what she would love to do is tell him to leave her, and explain that she doesn't love him anymore and let him know doesn't want to be in a relationship with him ever again.

Yet, because she's a nice person, she doesn't want to be so blunt about it and cause him extra pain.

As a result, rather than being so blunt, she instead says that she thinks it's best they don't see each other or talk to each other anymore.

She hopes that he will just accept that, so there is then enough of a distance between them for her (or both of them) to move on.

Here's the thing though

Even if your ex is only being polite to you and currently isn't interested in getting back together, it doesn't mean you can't change how she feels.

You can.

When you reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you again (e.g. by using humor to break down her defenses when you talk with her on the phone or in person, showing her that you've moved past the level you were at before, making her feel attracted in new and exciting ways) she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels really good to her.

In fact, for most women, it (falling back in love with an ex who has changed) is one of the most emotional, exciting experiences they have in life.

She won't know that though if you just ignore her now and hope that she comes back.

You have to do what works to make her fall in love with you again now, or you may potentially lose her for life.

5 Mistakes That Can Slow the Ex Back Process Down in Cases Like Yours

Your situation is unique, but there are so many common things that guys experience in a break up situation like yours.

Additionally, so many guys make the same types of mistakes when in a situation like yours.

So, if what you really want is to get your her, then make sure that you get clear on what to say and do to make it happen, rather than just trying to guess your way through it.

For example: Be sure to avoid the following common mistakes that can turn her off and slow down the process of getting her back:

1. Asking her why she feels that way

[image: Asking her why she feels that way]

Even though you might believe that you have a right to ask for an explanation from her (after all, she was your girl), your ex might not see it that way.

She may then end up feeling resentful about needing to explain herself to you (about why she thinks it's best that you and her don't see each other or talk to each other anymore), which then makes her even more determined to not see you or talk to you anymore.

It then becomes more difficult for you to re-attract her and get her back because her guard is up and she is actively trying to avoid you.

So, forget about her reasons and just focus on changing her mind by reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you during the interactions that you have with her.

When she feels so much respect and attraction for you again, the idea of not seeing you or hearing from you won't appeal to her anymore.

In fact, she will start to feel like not getting back with you would be her loss because she will miss out on experiencing the new, exciting emotions she now feels for you.

2. Asking her what you can do to change her mind

Asking a woman what you need to do to make her want to be with you usually only makes her feel stressed and annoyed with you for needing her to explain how to attract a woman.

The way she sees it, that is your responsibility, not hers.

So, rather than feel flattered that you want her female input on how to become a better man for her, she instead feels turned off by the fact that you can't figure out how to be the kind of man that she wants and then start being that man, without her help and guidance.

Additionally, she worries that if she tells you what to do, you will do it and then it will feel fake or forced.

She wants you to figure out how to do it and then just do it, so you and her can get on with being in love in a romantic and sexual way.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't rely on her to tell you what you need to do to accomplish it.

Instead, make her feel strong surges of respect and attraction for you again when you interact with her and you and her will then naturally get back together immediately or very quickly.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Trying to get her to change her mind by declaring your undying love for her

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy and then breaks up with him, it then changes the way she thinks about him and looks at him.

In the past, she may have only had positive thoughts about him when she was in love, but now her mind is swarming with negative thoughts that cause her to want to be apart from him and move on.

So, rather than feeling flattered that her ex still loves her so much, a woman will instead feel annoyed by his constant pressure to commit to a relationship with him when she doesn't even feel the same way.

Here's the thing

A woman doesn't want to be in a relationship with a guy just because he loves her.

Instead, she wants to be with him because she loves him.

So, if you want your ex to stop saying that it's best that you don't see each other or talk to each other anymore and open back up to giving the relationship another chance, you have to stop focusing on how you feel about her.

How you feel isn't the point.

What matters to her is how she feels.

So, start making her have strong feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again whenever you interact with her.

It might only take you one interaction to get her to change, or two or three.

Either way, you can do it if you use this approach.

Men all over the world get their woman back by doing this.

It's natural, quick and always effective.

Just remember though: Getting your ex back should not be all about how much you love her and need her back for your reasons.

It has to be about her feeling respectful and attracted to you and wanting you back for her reasons (i.e. she doesn't want to lose you).

Another mistake to avoid making is

4. Getting angry at her or accusing her of being selfish

It can come to quite a shock to some guys to hear their woman say that she no longer wants to speak to them or see them anymore.

In some cases, a guy will feel right to become very angry with his ex for wanting to completely cut him out of her life.

Yet, expressing that anger is only going to convince her that she made the right decision to break up with him and remain broken up with him (i.e. because she may fear that he will turn into an angry, controlling ex boyfriend).

So, the best way to get an ex woman back is to maintain control of your emotions and use any interactions you have with her to reactivate her feelings for you.

Let her see that even under the kind of pressure that youâve been under lately, you are still able to maintain your cool and be a confident, loving man.

That makes a woman feel a lot of respect for a man, which usually then leads to her feeling open to feel attracted to him.

When that happens, the door is open to attract her further and get her back; often right away.

Yet, what if a guy has already made the mistake of getting very angry with his ex?

In many cases, if he genuinely realizes his mistake, changes and then re-attracts her, a woman will usually be willing to forgive his mistake and give him another chance.

The reason why is that attraction has a very powerful effect on both men and women.

All over the world, both men and women are often willing to totally forgive mistakes to get back together with the person they are so attracted to.

A woman will literally say something like, âI donât care what happened in the past. I know he has changed. I miss him so much now. I want him back. I am going to give him another chance.â

So, be sure to use the power of sexual and romantic attraction to make your ex feel compelled to give you another chance.

5. Accepting her words as meaning that itâs over and that you can never re-attract her or get her back

A common reaction that guys have when they get broken up with is to take whatever their ex woman says to heart.

For example: If a woman says, âI think itâs best that we donât see each other or talk to each other anymore,â a guy might interpret that to mean, âItâs over between us and nothing you can say or do will make me change my mind. So give up right now and go away. We will never, ever speak to each other or see each other again. Goodbye.â

Yet, hereâs the thingâ

Feelings change all the time.

Just because your ex is feeling as though she doesnât want you in her life right now, it doesnât mean she will feel that way a week from now when youâve reactivated some of her feelings for you.

Get it?

You can literally change how she feels and as a result, affect how she thinks, feels, behaves and acts in relationship to you.

You can literally make her want to be back with you, even if she has recently told other people that itâs over.

On the other hand, if you decide to take your exâs word for it and give up on getting her back, you will probably end up missing out on another opportunity to be with the love of your life.

Youâll then never truly know if your ex was the right one for you and you may spend the rest of your life comparing every other woman you date to her and wondering what it would have been like if you hadnât given up.

So, if you want your ex back, donât give up just yet.

Re-attract her so she wants to get back with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Will My Pregnant Ex Come Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends.

Here are 5 possible outcomes for you and her:

1. She will come back if she only really left you due to big changes in her hormones

[image: Her changing hormones led to her hasty decision to break up with you]

When a woman is pregnant a lot more changes than just the shape of her body.

She also experiences fluctuating hormones that can completely upset mental and emotional well-being as well.

In fact, according to Dr. Lucy Puryear, a psychiatrist specializing in women's reproductive mental health at Baylor College of Medicine, a woman can experience six (or more) different types of emotional changes while she's pregnant and after the baby is born, in addition to all her other usual emotions.

For example:

1. Mood swings (e.g. moodiness, irritability or annoyance over things that would normally not annoy her).
2. Fear (e.g. of having a miscarriage, of doing something wrong that will impact the baby, of whether or not she will be a good mother, about the stability of her relationship in the future).
3. Anxiety (this can be intensified if a woman was prone to being stressed or feeling anxious before she fell pregnant).
4. Forgetfulness (i.e. mental fogginess and occasional memory lapses, which can add to her stress levels).
5. Weepiness (e.g. crying for no reason).
6. Nesting instinct (i.e. preparing for the baby's arrival, in some cases, obsessively).

Based on that, chances are high that your ex may have been going through a fair bit of unusual, emotional turmoil when she broke up with you.

When her hormones begin to change throughout the pregnancy, she may begin to think, What have I done? How could I have acted so crazy? I don't want to be broken up. Why did I leave him? Did I over-react?

Another possibility is

2. She won't come back because she isn't attracted to you and doesn't believe that will change

[image: She isn't attracted to you and doesn't believe that will change]

Once again, when a woman is pregnant, a lot of the things she may have previously suppressed or ignored suddenly come to the forefront.

For example: She might realize that although her guy is a really nice guy, she hasn't actually felt a spark with him for a very long time and instead of experiencing sexual and romantic feelings for him, she feels more neutral or friendly towards him.

Yet, now that she's pregnant, making decisions about her future become more pressing and serious.

As a result, she might decide not to remain stuck in a relationship that doesn't fulfill her emotional needs and expectations just for the sake of the baby.

She may even say to herself, "I know this is going to be difficult, but I honestly don't believe things will change because he doesn't know how to make me feel attracted. He makes me feel more like a friend. So, I will probably end up breaking up with him anyway and it will be harder after the baby is here. So, this break up is for the best."

In a case like that, a woman will try to stick to her decision and not go back to her ex.

Yet, that doesn't mean her ex man can't change how she feels and as a result, get her to willingly decide to give him another chance.

If her ex can re-spark her feelings of attraction for him and show her that he's changed in some of the ways that are important to her, getting back with him will suddenly become something that she wants to do.

So, if you want your pregnant ex to come back, make sure that you give her good reasons to do so.

For example: Come up with a clear list of reasons why she broke up with you.

Then, when you know what was turning her off, start to change and improve yourself in ways that will re-attract her.

By the way!

If you're unsure where to start, here are some questions that will help you uncover the deeper, possibly even secret reasons why your woman may have broken up with you:

- Did you have a long term plan for your life together and were you actively pursuing that plan, or were you just drifting along without any serious goals or ambitions and spending more time watching TV or playing video games than focusing on your future and the future of your family?
- Were you loving, attentive and caring towards her, or were you too wrapped up in your own world (e.g. your work, hobbies, hanging out with your friends, playing video games, your goals in life) to notice that she felt neglected and abandoned by you?
Was your relationship balanced where you had goals and dreams and were making progress towards them, but you also made time to make her feel appreciated and important too?
- Did you give too much or too little to the relationship?
- Did she feel the need to impress you and maintain your interest, or was it one-sided where only you felt the need to impress her and maintain her interest?
- Were you the more dominant one in the relationship, or did you let her get away with bad behavior and become disrespectful towards you?
- Did you make her feel like an attractive, desirable woman in your presence, or did you treat her more like a neutral friend (e.g. you and her ended up hanging out like buddies)?
- Did you maintain your confidence when she lost control of her emotions and was throwing a tantrum or creating drama, or did you lose your composure, get angry or sulk?

- Did you maintain her sexual and romantic feelings for you over time, or did you just assume that because you both loved each other at the start, the relationship would last for life no matter what?

Once you know what to fix, you can then focus on fixing that and getting her back by re-attracting her to the new and improved you.

You donâ€™t have to fix everything or become perfect.

Even just letting her experience 50% improvements in who you are in most areas, will cause her to feel drawn to you and see that you really have changed.

Another possibility in your case is thatâ€™

3. She will come back because she doesn't want to end up being a single mother

[image: The fear of being a lonely, stressed single mother may drive her back to you]

In some cases, a woman might come to the realization that even though her ex was not her perfect man, itâ€™s still better to raise a child with a father figure than trying to do it all by herself.

She may come to think, â€œWell, he really is a good guy and I could do a lot worse. So what if our relationship is not exciting anymore like it used to be? Most relationships start off great and then settle into a comfortable routine, right? Thereâ€™s nothing wrong with that. It doesnâ€™t mean we donâ€™t love each other anymore. Besides, I know he will be a good father and thatâ€™s what counts. Also, he will support me and help me raise this baby, unlike other guys who would just run at the first sign of responsibility. Iâ€™m lucky to have him. I should get back with him.â€

She then goes back to him and settles into a mundane relationship.

She tries to put on a good act of being happy, but if the attraction and love isnâ€™t there, it wonâ€™t last.

For example: If another guy comes along and fills in the gaps that are missing in her relationship with her man (e.g. he makes her feel more sexually attracted, heâ€™s more exciting, heâ€™s more confident), she will almost certainly leave the relationship.

Of course, that doesnâ€™t have to happen to you.

If your ex comes back on her own and you want to keep her back, you need to focus on creating a relationship dynamic that causes her to feel real love, respect and attraction for you.

Get her to feel the type of love, respect and attraction that makes her realize that no other guy is necessary.

You, her and your child (or children) are all that matters.

Another possibility in your case is thatâ€™

4. She won't come back because she doesn't feel like she needs be with you to raise the baby

[image: She doesn't feel like she needs to be with you to raise the baby]

Sometimes a woman feels like sheâ€™s better off without her ex no matter what.

So, even though she risks being a single mom and all of the stress and pressure that comes with that, she sees it as a better option than going back to her ex.

For example: A woman might feel like that whenâ€¦|

- She is the more emotionally dominant one and makes all of (or most of) the important decisions in the relationship. As a result, she thinks something along the lines of, â€œWell, what do I need him for then? I will just end up with two babies to take care of (him and the baby), rather than the one that Iâ€™m having. I donâ€™t want to take care of him anymore like a big sister or mother would. I have enough responsibilities now without worrying about a grown man who canâ€™t make a decision on his own without my input.â€
- She is the more financially stable one, so she will more than likely end up having to support him too.
- He has taken her for granted in the past. As a result, she worries that she would be looking after a newborn baby and potentially running around after him too (e.g. cooking all the meals, cleaning and washing, running errands for him, having to show him lots of love to keep him happy, not getting enough love in return).
- Sheâ€™s emotionally stronger than him and knows that she will be able to cope by herself, while he might become insecure about her love for the child and react by being clingy, needy, irritable and so on.

So, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦|

In todayâ€™s world, a woman no longer feels like she has to be in a relationship with a guy if he canâ€™t give her what she wants.

Itâ€™s not like in the past where a woman was completely reliant on a man to support her and protect her.

Sometimes things change (e.g. she loses her job, thereâ€™s a natural disaster, pandemic), but for the most part, a woman is usually able to take care of herself and be protected by the police and the settings of a modern, civilized society.

So, if a woman gets a sense that her man is not really offering her anything of value (e.g. examples of value are that he is emotionally stronger than her so she feels safe to be with him, he is loving and supportive, but still puts her in her place when she steps out of line, he has goals for the future and is actively working towards them like a real man), then she will usually just stick to her decision to remain broken up.

If you want your pregnant ex to come back to you, you need to make sure youâ€™re the kind of man she would happily give another chance to (e.g. confident, emotionally strong, manly, ambitious).

Donâ€™t go to her and try to sell yourself as being new and improved and then ask for another chance based on that though.

If you do that, she will likely reject you, put her guard up or play hard to get because youâ€™re giving her so much power over you.

Instead, interact with her and let her pick up on the fact that you really have changed, so she can naturally feel attracted and drawn to you and want you back for her own reasons.

Another possibility for you is thatâ€¦|

5. She doesn't want to come back because of how badly you reacted to her change in behavior, mood and attitude during the pregnancy

Sometimes, a guy might not handle the changes in his woman very well during her pregnancy (e.g. she gets tired more quickly than she used to, she is short tempered or bursts into tears for no apparent reason, she doesn't feel like having sex anymore) and as a result, arguments will break out, resentment will build and a couple can be pushed to the brink or even break up because of it.

For example: A guy might

- Become very angry at her (e.g. if she doesn't want to have sex anymore, doesn't enjoy going out as often, doesn't have the energy to cook and clean like she used to).
- Become needy (e.g. because he's worried he will lose her love and affection to the baby, because she isn't treating him the way she used to and seems more focused on herself now).
- Begin to treat her very badly in response to her mood swings (e.g. he shouts at her about crying for no reason and says things like, "Stop crying about trivial things. You're really annoying these days! I have a lot on my plate right now and don't need all this emotional bullshit. So stop it!").

In instances like that, a woman will usually be reluctant to go back to her ex and may be thinking things like, "If that's how he behaved when I was pregnant, how will he behave with a crying baby in the house? He will probably end up treating me even worse than before. Not only don't I want to experience that side of him again, I never want to put my child in that kind of environment. I've made my decision to break up with him and I think it's best if I stick to it and move on. He's not man enough to handle a pregnancy or the raising of a child. He's too emotionally sensitive and gets way too angry at me too easily."

So, what should you do if you reacted badly to your ex's pregnancy changes?

Is it still possible to get her back?

Yes.

You made a mistake, but everyone makes silly mistakes at some point in their life.

That doesn't make you a bad person.

When your ex can see for herself that you've learned your lesson and that regardless of how moody, temperamental or emotional she's behaving (when you next interact with her on a phone call or in person. Not via text – she can't tell via text), you remain cool, calm and collected and use humor and an easy-going attitude to turn the situation around, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some respect for you again.

You can then build on those feelings and get her back.

4 Mistakes That Some Guys Make When Waiting For a Pregnant Ex to Come Back

When a guy behaves unattractively after a break up, it helps to further convince a woman that she made the right decision to break up with him.

This is why, from now on, it's essential you don't make any of the following mistakes that other guys make in a situation like yours:

1. Taking all the blame for her change in behavior, mood and attitude during her pregnancy

Sometimes a guy wants his ex back so badly that he's willing to take all the blame and let her walk all over him.

A guy will often do this when the break up was her fault, or mostly her fault.

He might say something like, It wasn't your fault you felt the way you did, it was mine. I promise that if you come back, I won't step out of line again no matter what. I will do whatever you want. I was in the wrong, not you.

Yet, here's the thing!

Taking the blame when you did nothing wrong (or when it was mostly her fault) is the worst thing you can do.

Not only will your ex perceive you as being emotionally weak, she will also lose respect for you for not being able to stand up to her when you know she was the one who was out of line.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should be nasty towards your ex, totally blame her or treat her badly in any way.

Instead, just continue being the good man that you are and let her see that, even though you understand why she was behaving that way (i.e. the pregnancy hormones), you're not going to take all the blame for the break up just to get her back.

You don't need to tell her that you're not taking all the blame.

Just don't take all the blame and don't blame her.

Focus on re-attracting her, making her feel love for you again and guide her back into a relationship so you can be a family together.

Important: Don't use that reason be a family together as the reason why you want to get back though.

Some guys try to manipulate their woman into getting back with them by guilt tripping her about the baby not having a family.

That approach will not work in the long run and almost never works in the short term.

A woman will get back with a man if she feels a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for him.

Then, and only then, will she start having fond, happy feelings about being a family together.

So, don't lead with, Let's do this for the baby. It's going to need a father and us to be a family.

That approach doesn't work.

To get a woman back, it's about how she feels about you.

Do you make her feel like she should respect you?

Do you make her feel attracted when she talks to you?

Do you make her feel rushes of love as she talks to you?

That is what counts.

The next mistake that some guys make in a situation like yours isâ€¦!

2. Confessing his undying love for her and hoping that it makes her realize how important he is to her

In a womanâ€™s mind, she usually has a very good reason why she broke up with her ex (i.e. she disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for him over time and he wasnâ€™t able to get her to reconnect with those feelings because he kept using the same old approach with her, or ended up using an unattractive approach, such as becoming insecure, jealous, controlling or neglectful towards her).

So, if the guy then comes along and says things like, â€œI just want you to know that I still love you and I truly believe we can make things work. Please give us another chance. I donâ€™t want to lose you,â€ rather than think, â€œOh, well that changes everything! Now that I know I matter so much to him, I have to go back. After all, where will I find another guy who will love me like he does?â€ she instead feels annoyed with him for believing that his feelings for her are what matters the most.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

A woman usually only appreciates it that a guy loves her and is devoted to her when she feels the same way for him.

In other words, she feels respect, attraction and love for a guy and sees that he feels the same way = She appreciates it.

However, if a guy feels respect, attraction and love for her and she doesnâ€™t feel the same way towards him = She doesnâ€™t really care.

Itâ€™s about her feelings.

The same would apply to you if a woman really loved you, felt attracted to you and respected you, but you didnâ€™t feel the same way.

While itâ€™s a little bit nice that she is that into you, it doesnâ€™t mean that you are going to settle down with her because of it.

The feelings have to be mutual.

So, if you want your pregnant ex to come back, focus on reactivating her feelings for you, rather than telling her about your feelings for her.

Only when she is feeling an outpouring of respect, attraction and love for you again (which you can make her feel within minutes to hours of interacting with her), will getting back together seem like the right thing for her to do.

The next mistake that some guys make in a situation like yours isâ€¦!

3. Assuming that because she is carrying his child, it means they have to be together or she has to love him

[image: Having your baby doesn't guarantee her love for you]

As difficult as it may be to accept, the truth is that you cannot convince a woman to come back to you just because she's pregnant with your child.

Even if you and her talked about being a family together and even if you truly believe that you will be a great father, it just doesn't matter to a woman when she loses touch with her feelings for you.

The truth is, if a woman no longer feels the same way, she doesn't have to stay with a guy if she doesn't want to.

In the past, a woman was obligated to stay in a relationship with a guy for the sake of her baby.

She had to stick by him whether she was happy or not, because there was such a huge stigma attached to being a single mother.

Unfortunately, in today's world, raising a child without a father is no big deal anymore.

Women all over the world are doing it and are often celebrated as heroes or amazing women by the media.

So, if a woman no longer has feelings for her ex, chances are high that she's not going to go back to him just because she's having his baby.

She will rarely, if ever, feel enough guilt about being a single mother to go back to him for that reason.

The way to get her back is via her feelings for you.

That is what works, regardless of what country is from or culture the woman is a part of.

It's about her feelings for you.

Focus on that and you will get her back.

The next mistake that some guys make in a situation like yours is!

4. Not giving her the kind of attraction experience she really needs from him to want to give him another chance

If a guy interacts with his ex and makes the same old attraction mistakes that he made before, it goes without saying that she won't feel very motivated to get back together with him.

She will just feel the same towards him and she won't like it.

You need to inspire her and wake her up with a new attraction experience.

For example:

Rather than always being nice and sweet and a pushover around her, start being more of a playful challenge so she can laugh and feel like you have a lot more balls these days, but are still a good man.

Rather than pretending you want to only be friends with her now, flirt with her and create some sexual tension between you, so she naturally feels drawn to you in a sexual way.

Rather than feeling insecure and unsure of yourself when she's being cold and distant towards you, maintain your confidence with her so she can feel attracted to your confidence, emotional strength and masculinity.

Rather than getting caught up in feelings of tension and awkwardness by always being serious when talking to her, use humor to bring down her defenses and make her feel good to be around you again.

When she experiences those kinds of changes in you, she naturally drops her guard and opens up to being with you again.

This is your chance to get her back before the baby arrives.

When the baby arrives, it will be a lot of hard work, she won't be getting much sleep and she won't have much spare time.

Now is the time to act.

Get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

When is it Too Late to Contact an Ex?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It's never too late to contact her.

Of course, it's always much better to get in touch with her before any of the following happens...

1. She gets married and starts a family with a new guy

If a woman falls in love, gets married and starts a family with another man, chances are pretty high that she won't be expecting her ex to contact her and try to get her back.

Of course, that doesn't mean you can't contact her if you want to.

Yet, if she's happy, then she's not going to be interested and she will likely say something along the lines of, "Why are you contacting me after all this time? Don't you know that I'm married now? What we had together ended long ago and there's really nothing left for us to even talk about. Please don't contact me again, because I don't want my husband to get upset. Goodbye. I wish you all the best."

[image: She could be unhappy in her marriage]

Naturally, there's also a chance that your ex is unhappy in her marriage.

For example: According to some research, having a baby can increase the likelihood of a break up or divorce by up to 37% due to the stress of raising a child.

Also, according to statistics, divorce in the US, Australia and UK is between 40-50% percent.

So, if your ex is currently married but experiencing difficulties in her relationship with her husband due to the stress of a new baby, or because they're not getting along, not attracted or no longer in love, then it's possible that she will be happy to hear from you again.

If that's the case, then you can focus on reactivating her feelings for you and getting her back after she goes through with her divorce.

It is possible to get an ex back in a situation like that, but it's always better not to let things get to that point (i.e. waiting until she marries and moves on) before you make a move to get your ex back.

So, don't waste a lot of time ignoring your ex for additional weeks or months.

Instead, just make a move.

Remember: The longer you take to contact her, the more time you're giving her to get over you and move on with another man.

In most cases, you only need to give a woman 3 to 7 days of space to allow for things to calm down between you and her and make her open up to interacting with you again.

During that time, you should focus on improving your ability to attract her, so that when you do interact with her again, you will be able to re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Only when she experiences new, exciting feelings for you, will she truly drop her guard and allow herself to hang out with you more often to see where things go from there.

On the other hand, if you just sit around wondering, "When is it too late to contact an ex? Should I give it another few weeks to see if she contacts me? Will she think I'm desperate for contacting her" after all this time/â€¦ then you may miss your chance with her completely.

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

Stop waiting around and start re-attracting your ex right now, before itâ€™s too late.

Another sign that it might be a little too late to contact an ex is if...

2. She moves overseas and is loving her new life

[image: She moves overseas and is loving her new life]

When a woman emigrates to another country and starts a whole new life there, itâ€™s almost certain that sheâ€™s not going to want to take any of the old baggage from her past with her.

Instead, sheâ€™s going to want to make a fresh start by meeting new friends, dating new guys and generally getting involved with her new country and lifestyle.

So, if sheâ€™s happy, moving on and enjoying her new life in a different country, sheâ€™s very likely not going to be thrilled to hear from her ex guy all of a sudden.

Instead, sheâ€™s probably going to be on her guard and feeling reluctant to interact with him again.

Of course, even in a situation like that, itâ€™s not too late to contact an ex and get her back.

Many guys do get their ex woman back long distance, but if you want to do it, you have to be willing to contact her, re-attract her and either go and meet up with her in person, or get her to meet up with you.

Just be ready for the potential that she might initially be a bit resistant to meeting up with you again.

For example: Even if sheâ€™s somewhat happy to hear from you again, sheâ€™s probably not going to give it all up to come running back to you because you got in touch with her.

Yet, if you get in touch with her and begin reawakening her sexual and romantic feelings for you, she may decide to come back for at least a holiday to see how she feels when sheâ€™s with you again, or you can go and visit her.

You can then use the time together to show her that youâ€™re a new man and allow her to feel attracted to that.

If you do it right, she will begin to feel as if she doesnâ€™t get back with you, she may lose the love of her life and regret it for life.

Another sign that it might be a little too late to contact an ex is ifâ€¦

3. She becomes a lot more successful than you financially

Some women are totally fine with being with a guy who isnâ€™t as successful as them, but an ex who has remained at the same level and hasnâ€™t made any progress towards achieving his major goals and dreams in life is usually a bit of a turn off for most women.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

A woman usually won't care about being with a guy who earns less money than her, or has a less impressive career, as long as she can see that he has a life purpose that heâ€™s working towards (i.e. big goals, dreams or aspirations).

Yet, if she sees that her ex man is just drifting through his life without any ambition, interests or goals, she usually won't be excited if he contacts her, unless she is still totally attracted to him and missing him.

If she isn't missing him, she will usually say something along the lines of, â€œLook, it's really nice of you to contact me after so long, but I don't think we should talk to each other again. We're different people now. We're no longer compatible. I wish you all the best with your life. Bye.â€

So, if you want to contact an ex who has become more financially successful than you since your break up, then make sure that you at least make some progress on your important goals and ambitions in life before contacting her.

You don't have to achieve anything big, but at least start making some progress if she has been making big progress in her life.

Then, when you contact her and she sees that you're making an effort to move up through the levels of life like she has been, you become someone she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and feel compatible with.

She may then become open to interacting with you again to see how she feels, because you are now more of the kind of man she sees herself being with.

From there, you can then use interactions with her to reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you and get her back.

4 Common Mistakes to Be Aware of When Contacting an Ex Again

If you want your ex back (even if it has been a long time since the break up), the best approach is to just go ahead and contact her and begin re-attracting her.

Unfortunately, where a lot of guys go wrong, is being too hesitant (i.e. waiting additional weeks and months) to the point where they end up missing out on their opportunity to get her back.

Don't let that be you.

From this moment onwards, your thoughts, behavior and actions will determine whether you will be successful in getting your ex back or not.

So, make sure you're not doing any of the following things and unintentionally reducing your chances with her:

1. Having an opportunity to get her back, but not being man enough to start the ex back process with her

In most ex back cases, all it takes to get a woman back is for the guy to contact her and reactivate some of her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for him.

The woman then begins to open back up to the idea of giving him another chance, or at least starts to consider it.

Unfortunately though, most guys don't realize that, so they let the opportunity pass them by due to feelings of fear and doubt.

For example: A guy may think, â€œIt's just too late to contact her now. I had my chance and I didn't take it. If I reach out to her now, she will probably reject me because she will almost certainly have a new man in her life by now. Even if she doesn't, any feelings she may have had for me will be long dead. It's hopeless. I have to accept that what we had is truly over and try to move on, even though I feel that she was the one for me.

Here's the thing!

If your ex is single and you contact her and reactivate some of her feelings, you and her can get back together and enjoy a new relationship with each other.

On the other hand, if you don't contact her at all, she will almost certainly find someone else soon, fall in love with him and have a happy and gratifying relationship with him instead.

Alternatively, if your ex already has a new man and you contact her and seduce her, she may dump him and decide that she'd rather be with you.

Conversely, if you do nothing, she may end up being with him for months, years or even decide to marry him (even if she isn't very happy. So many men and women do that).

Whichever way you look at it, taking action NOW means you could win her back, but doing nothing guarantees that you almost certainly won't get her back and she will probably move on with a new man.

This is why, if you want your ex back for real, don't sit around wondering any longer if it's too late to contact her.

Instead, start going through the ex back process.

Get her back.

2. Assuming that she couldn't possibly feel attracted to you again

When a guy doesn't know how to re-attract his ex woman, he will naturally feel a bit unsure of himself and his value to her.

He may think something along the lines of, Well, it's been quite a while since we broke up. What if I contact her now and she doesn't attract me anymore at all? I will just make a fool of myself and put her in the awkward position of having to tell me that she's not interested. Maybe it's better if I just let things be the way they are. Besides, if she still had any feelings for me at all, she would have reached out to me by now.

As a result, he avoids starting the ex back process.

He may then spend the rest of his life thinking things like, If only I had the courage to contact her before it was too late, we could have been together now. We could have been happy again.

Alternatively, if he does pluck up the courage to contact his ex, he might get rejected because she will sense his lack of confidence and feel turned off by it.

Here's the thing!

Women are attracted to confident men who believe in themselves.

Likewise, women are turned off by insecure men who doubt themselves.

So, if you've been waiting a long time to contact your ex and have been doubting your chances of attracting her again, you must begin to build your confidence back up right now.

Believe that you are good enough for her right NOW.

When you believe in yourself and in your value to her (and to other women as well), not only will your ex feel naturally attracted to you again, but it will also be easier for you to attract other women as well.

Stop doubting yourself.

You can make her feel attracted to you again.

You can create a new spark with her.

3. Assuming that not contacting her will make her eventually miss you and want you back

[image: Maybe if I wait a bit longer she will contact me]

If your ex hasn't started missing you and contacted you by now, chances are pretty high that she's not going to contact you if you wait even longer.

Why?

Firstly, even when a woman still has feelings for her ex and is in fact missing him, if she doesn't hear from him first, she will often take that as a sign that he's no longer interested in her.

Then, rather than contact him and make a fool of herself if he says something along the lines of, *â€œWhy are you contacting me? Aren't you the one who wanted to break up? Well, it's over. I've moved on and have a new girlfriend now,*â€œ she just tries to move on without him.

Additionally, in cases where a woman has disconnected from her feelings for a guy (i.e. because he was needy, insecure), not hearing from him for a long time doesn't make her miss him and desperately want him back.

Instead, it usually comes as a relief to her to not have to deal with a desperate, needy ex who is trying to get her back.

She just focuses on getting on with her life and finding herself a new man who is capable of fulfilling her emotional and sexual needs.

So, if you actually want to get back together with your ex for real, don't waste any more time waiting for her to make the first move.

You need to be the one who contacts her and begins re-attracting her.

Call her on the phone or meet up with her in person and actively reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so she naturally feels drawn to you and wants to hug you, kiss you, have sex with you and get back together.

What have you got to lose?

You and her could be happy again.

Just do it.

Contact her.

4. Assuming that she would think you are desperate for contacting her

She will only feel that way if you're contacting her in a desperate way (e.g. if she doesn't respond to your messages or calls you continue to contact her over and over again saying things like, *â€œPlease answer me. I really need to hear from you!*â€œ, if you sound needy when you interact with her, if you beg for another chance).

On the other hand, if you contact her and she gets a sense that you're confident and happy without her (based on your attitude and the way you talk and behave), she's not going to think you're desperate.

Instead, she will feel respect for you for getting over the break up in such an emotionally strong way and getting yourself to the point where you are happy, confident and enjoying life.

When she feels respects for you you, she will naturally start to feel sexually attracted to you again and from there, it's only a matter of time before she will allow herself to let down her guard and reconnect with her feelings of love for you too.

So, don't be afraid to contact her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get Her to See That We Shouldn't Have Broken Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 ways to do it:

1. Make her feel it, not think it

[image: Make her feel it, not think it]

In general, men are thinking creatures who prefer to understand things on an intellectual level.

So, for a man, a well designed explanation about something is enough to either convince him that itâs a great idea, or that itâs a waste of his time.

This is why, when a couple breaks up but the guy feels that it shouldnât have happened in the first place, his first instinct is to talk to her and convince her to see things from his point of view.

In a case like that, the guy is usually 100% sure if he explains to her why things went wrong between them and gives her a list of valid reasons why they belong together, she will start to think about the break up the same way as him (i.e. that they shouldnât have broken up).

Yet, what most guys donât understand is that women in general are feeling creatures and no matter how convincing the argument, if a womanâs heart isnât in it, sheâs not going to be convinced.

So, if you want to get your ex to see that you shouldnât have broken up, donât waste time trying to convince her with logic, because sheâs probably going to remain closed off and disinterested.

In her mind she may even be thinking things like, âAll I hear is him telling me how we belong together and how wonderful things used to be between us, but thatâs not how I feel about it. In fact, I feel sad and disappointed and like nothing turned out the way I wanted it to. All I can think about is how he stuffed up and made me lose respect, attraction and love for him over time, not how nice things used to be in the beginning. I know he means well, but if he wants me to give him another chance, heâs going to have to do more than tell me that he believes we shouldnât have broken up. He needs to show me that he can be the man that I want him to be and that this time around he can make me feel the way I want to feel when Iâm with him. Only then will I consider getting back together again.â

Hereâs the thingâ

After a break up, a woman doesnât want to have to put in loads of effort to make a relationship work with a guy that she no longer feels respect, attraction or love for.

Instead, she wants to be left alone so she can move on and make a fresh start with someone else who sparks those feelings inside of her.

This is why, you have to stop focusing on what you want and start giving her what she wants (i.e. to feel strong surges of sexual and romantic attraction for you based on your new and improved behavior).

It canât be all about how much you believe that you and her shouldnât have broken up.

It has to be about her feeling that way for her reasons (e.g. she likes how confident you are now rather than insecure and needy, she likes how manly you are and how you stand up to her in an assertive, yet loving way when sheâs being difficult or putting you down, she likes how you are able to make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman when sheâs with you rather than neutral or like a friend).

Focus on that and you will naturally get her to see that you shouldnât have broken up.

Keep pushing her to logically accept that you and her are meant to be together and she will almost certainly keep pushing you away and saying things like, âForget it! I donât feel the same way as you do. Please accept my decision to be broken up and move on.â

Yet, when you focus on attraction, she will naturally feel drawn to you again.

You wonât have to convince her with long discussions.

She will want you back for her own reasons (i.e. she feels attracted to you again and doesnât want to end up regretting letting you go if she canât find a guy who makes her feel the same way).

Another way to get your ex to see that you shouldnât have broken up is toâ!

2. Level up as a man

[image: Level up as a man]

Basically what this means is that you fully understand all her reasons for breaking up with you (even the secret, hidden ones that she never told you about), and then taking action to improve yourself in some of the ways that are important to her.

This is not about changing yourself to become a perfect man for your ex, itâs simply about becoming a better, more well-rounded version of yourself.

For example:

- If youâre confident in certain situations (e.g. at work, when doing something you love and are really good at), but insecure in others (e.g. in your relationship with her, in social situations), you now focus on becoming more confident and self-assured no matter what the circumstances.
- If youâre a great leader in the workplace, but in your relationship you tend to be a bit of a pushover and you allow your woman to call all the shots, you now become more emotionally dominant and can stand up to her in an assertive, yet loving way when she tries to boss you around.
- If your habit is to treat your woman like sheâs your best friend, making her feel neutral, friendly feelings towards you, you now focus on flirting with her and creating so much sexual tension between you and her that not only does she feel sexy and desirable again, she also canât wait to kiss and have sex with you again.
- If youâve been drifting along and taking things slow when it comes to your goals in life, show her that youâre now making progress a lot faster than before and are moving up through the levels of life like a real man.

The more your ex can see that youâve transformed yourself into the man she always wanted you to be, the more respect she will start to feel for you again for leveling up as man.

When she respects you, she will also start to feel attracted to you again and from there, reconnecting with her feelings of love will happen pretty quickly from there.

As a result, she drops her guard and opens up to interacting with you on the phone and in person.

You can then easily build up her feelings and get her back.

Another way to get her to see that you shouldn't have broken up is to

3. Let her see that she can still smile, laugh and feel good when talking to you

[image: Let her see that she can still smile, laugh and feel good when talking to you]

After a break up, most couples feel a lot of tension and uncertainty when interacting with each other.

As a result, conversations end up being strained and filled with seriousness and anxiety.

Yet, that's not going to help bring down a woman's defenses and make her start seeing her ex in a more positive light.

This is why, it's very important that you avoid serious discussions about the relationship and how you believe that you and her shouldn't be broken up and focus instead on making her laugh, smile and feel good every time she's talking to you.

For example: Imagine you're on a call with your ex and she says something like, "You really do need to accept that we're broken up now and stop calling me whenever you feel like it."

Rather than turn this into a serious discussion about how you think you and her shouldn't have broken up in the first place, use it as an opportunity to lighten the mood and make her feel happy that you called her instead.

You can do that by jokingly saying something along the lines of, "What are you talking about? I never call you unless it's a special occasion. Today is Tuesday, so happy Tuesday!" and then have a laugh.

She is most likely going to laugh too and will know that you're only joking.

She's also going to feel more relaxed and happy to be talking to you again, because you're being funny and care-free, rather than pushing her for a relationship again.

The more you use humor to make your ex laugh, and smile, and feel good when interacting with you, the more it gets rid of her focus on the negatives.

Suddenly your mistakes don't seem as important anymore because she is feeling good around you.

When she interacts with you now, she can laugh, and smile, and feel good, rather than feeling tense or awkward or weird.

It just feels comfortable, happy and positive.

Of course that doesn't mean you should go overboard and crack jokes all the time.

Instead, just add some humor to your interactions with her.

Get her laughing and smiling because it just relaxes the vibe between you and that then causes her to start seeing you in a different light.

She starts to feel drawn to you in a way that feels good to her and she then becomes open to the idea of getting back with you again.

Another way to get her to see that you shouldn't have broken up is to

4. Re-attract her and then let her miss you for a few days

[image: Re-attract her and then let her miss you for a few days]

One of the best ways to make an ex want you back is to spark her feelings for you and then to ignore her for a few days.

Dan Bacon (founder of The Modern Man) explains why you should re-attract her BEFORE you ignore her, rather than just ignoring her...

Essentially, what happens is that when you interact with her and make her feel surges of sexual and romantic attraction for you again and then stop calling her, she naturally starts to miss you.

She felt attracted, she felt a spark and now you're gone.

As a result, she begins thinking things like, “Why isn't he calling me? Did I push him too far and he suddenly decided that I'm serious about the break up, so he's decided to move on? I hope not! I don't want him to get out of my life anymore. I actually want to see if we can work things out after all.”

When she's thinking like that, all her resistance begins to fade away and getting her back becomes easy, because she's now the one worried about losing you.

So, get your ex on a phone call or to a meet up with you and begin re-sparking her feelings for you.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by:

- Showing her that you're much more confident than you used to be, especially when she tries to make you feel unsure of yourself by being cold, distant or by telling you that she doesn't want to get back together again.
- Using humor to bring down her guard and make her feel good to be talking to you and seeing you again (especially if she's initially being closed off towards you).
- Flirting with her to create a sexual vibe between you.
- Turning her negative feelings about the break up into something you can both laugh about together.
- Making her feel like a feminine, girly woman around you by being more emotionally masculine than before, rather than making her feel neutral or friendly feelings towards you by being too nice, sweet or submissive with her.

The more you re-awaken her feelings for you, the more she will want to talk to you and see you again.

From there, cut off contact with her for a few days (3 to 7), so she can begin to miss you.

During that time, or after a week, she might call you to say hi, or if she's a bit shy, she may send you a text instead and wait to see how you respond.

Whatever happens, you need to call her and arrange a meet up so you can fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

By the way:

Even if she doesn't contact you, it doesn't mean she's not missing you.

Instead, she might be feeling too unsure of herself to reach out to you in case you reject her, especially since you were the one who cut off contact with her this time around.

So, to protect herself from being hurt if youâre not interested in her anymore, she might stay quiet and wait for you to make the next move.

This is why, if she doesnât contact you within a week, just go ahead and call her again and arrange a meet up.

If you donât make a move and instead wait from a sign from her, you stand the risk of making her think that youâre not interested in her anymore.

She may then force herself to completely disconnect from her feelings for you and maybe even finds herself a replacement guy to help her get over you faster.

3 Common Mistakes to Be Aware of When Trying to Convince Your Ex to Get Back Together

You can get your ex to see that you and her shouldnât have broken up when you approach the ex back process in the right way (i.e. interact with her, reactivate her feelings, get her back).

However, if you make attraction mistakes at this very crucial time, you may end up turning her off more and convincing her that she made the right decision by breaking up with you, instead.

This is why, itâs important that you avoid making any of the following mistakes:

1. Trying to make her understand how much she means to you, in the hope that it changes her mind about the break up

Right now, how you feel about your ex is pretty obvious.

You care about her and you want her back.

However, her feelings for you are likely not that obvious.

Instead, she will probably be feeling a range of emotions and generally speaking, most of them wonât be positive.

So, if you then start pushing her and telling her all about your feelings for her, rather than make her realize her mistake and quickly get back with you, she may instead end up thinking things like, âHow dare he talk to me about how much I mean to him and how he still loves me! He should have thought about that before he stuffed everything up. Now he wants me to get over it and give him another chance, but he doesnât realize that I donât feel the same way about him, and until he can prove to me that heâs truly changed and that things will be different this time, Iâm not interested in any of his sweet talk!â

She then closes herself off and refuses to listen to you, making it even more frustrating for you.

This is why, you need to forget about your feelings for her and focus on making her have feelings for you.

When she can respect you and feel attracted to you again, she will be happy to know that you still care for her and want her back, but not before that.

Another mistake to avoid isâ

2. Offering to change things that she doesn't really care about

For example: A guy might offer to be a more attentive boyfriend or husband to his woman.

In his mind heâs likely thinking, *âAll women want more attention. Iâm sure this will calm her down and make her happy again.*â

Yet, what he doesnât realize is that what she really wants is for him to become more manly and stop being such an emotional wimp around her, or in life.

Alternatively, a guy might improve his physical appearance because in the past he noticed that his woman made positive comments about guys who had big muscles, wore fancy clothes or had a specific hairstyle.

However, what really turned her off about him was his lack of confidence.

Hereâs the thingâ

If you donât get clear on what turned your ex off about you (even the secret, subtle things she never told you about), you will almost certainly offer to change the wrong things.

She will then take that as a sign that you donât understand her and as a result, she will be even more convinced that you and her are wrong for each other.

Another mistake to avoid isâ

3. Bringing up good memories from your past together in a long email, letter or social media message

This can work if a woman is still in love with her ex guy.

However, most guys who need help to get a woman back aren't in that fortunate position.

Most guys are trying to get an ex woman back who no longer feels enough respect, attraction and love to justify being in a relationship.

He really wants to be with her, but she isn't feeling it.

So, when he writes to her about good memories, she isn't fooled by that trick and sees exactly what he is up to.

She also doesn't feel like she is missing out on much because she no longer feels attracted to him.

Instead, she likely thinks something along the lines of, *âThose were different times. I was in love with him then, but I definitely am not now. All that is in the past and I donât really want to think about it. Whatâs important for me at this point is to move on and make a fresh start, not fantasize about happier times that no longer exist.*â

So, if you want your ex to care, you need to make her care.

That means you need to interact with her every chance you get (especially over the phone and in person) and make her feel strong surges of respect and attraction for you again.

When you do that, remembering the good times you and her had before takes on a special significance, because she begins to hope that maybe you can make more happy memories together.

She then becomes open to seeing that you and her shouldnât have broken up after all.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Wants Space. Should I Contact Her?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If she wants space, you should give her a bit of space before contacting her again.

However, don't wait too long to contact her.

Giving 3 to 7 days of space after a break up is usually more than enough to let her see that you are respecting her wishes and aren't desperately trying to force her into a relationship with you again.

Watch this to understand why waiting for longer than a week is usually a waste of time and leads to her moving on...

So, here's what a guy should do, based on the reason why she dumped him:

1. If he got dumped for being insecure and then desperately tried to get her back after the break up

[image: If she dumped him for being insecure and then he desperately tried to get her back]

After a week of space, where he allows for things to calm down between him and his ex, he needs to call her on the phone (not text her) and say something along the lines of, "Hey, I know you probably don't want to talk to me right now, but I just wanted to apologize to you for the way I behaved in the relationship with you and when you asked for space. I see now that I made a bunch of silly, desperate mistakes because I didn't want to lose you. I don't blame you for pushing me away the way you did. However, I want you to know I accept that you want space and I promise not to pressure you into doing anything you don't want. We can just be friends for now, okay?"

Of course, saying that to her doesn't mean she's going to immediately say, "Oh, okay. I believe you. I'm sure you're no longer insecure and needy. That's so great! All is forgiven, so let's just forget about this whole 'I want space' thing and get back together again right away."

Instead, she will likely test him to see if what he's saying is actually true, or if he's only putting on an act to try and get her back.

For example: She might say something along the lines of, "I don't care whether you accept my wanting space or not. You behaved like a real jerk and you convinced me that what I actually want is to break up with you. So please leave me alone. It's over between us."

Naturally, if he's only pretending to be more confident and emotionally strong, her saying that she wants to break up will almost certainly shock him, thereby confirming her suspicions that he hasn't changed.

However, because he used the time apart to quickly transform himself and is now genuinely more confident and self-assured, he responds by laughing at her (in a loving way) and saying something along the lines of, "Stop being such a drama queen. Yes I made a mistake, but nobody is perfect, not even you. So, let's stop making a big deal out of what happened and let's just be focus on being friends for now."

Initially, she might be a bit shocked that he's now actually talking to her in that way and not taking her drama seriously.

Yet, even if she doesn't show it, she will be feeling a burst of respect and attraction for him for not behaving like the insecure, needy guy she used know.

She then naturally becomes open to meeting up with him in person as friends, to see for herself that he's really changed.

At the meet up, she's almost certainly going to test him some more (e.g. pretend that she's over him, ask for more time apart, flirt with other guys in front of him or tell him that other guys have been asking her out on dates) to see how he will respond.

When she sees that nothing she says or does makes him feel insecure anymore and instead, he remains calm, relaxed and confident around her, her guard will come down and she starts wanting to be around him again.

He then needs to use interactions with her to fully reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him, until she's the one saying things like, "I miss you and I've changed my mind about wanting space. What I really want now is to work on our relationship and get back together again."

Another example of how a guy can approach it is

2. If he got dumped for taking her for granted. Then, then apologized and begged for another chance

[image: Dumped for taking her for granted. Then, apologized and begged for another chance]

He needs to give her a week of space where he no longer calls her or tries to make her change her mind.

Then, after a week, he needs to call her on the phone and apologize to her again, but this time without groveling and make it clear to her that he now fully understands how he messed up.

For example: He might say something along the lines of, "I know I apologized to you before, but I made a mess of it. This time, I just want to say I'm sorry for the way I treated you. I realize that I wasn't a very good man to you and I understand that my actions caused you to feel unloved, unappreciated and taken for granted. Of course, I don't expect you to change your mind about wanting space just because I'm apologizing to you. Instead, I just want you to know that I really do care about you, even though my past actions didn't make you feel that I do."

He then needs guide the conversation towards the mutual understanding that it's okay for a guy (and a woman) to make mistakes in a relationship and that it doesn't always mean the end

He can then say something like, "I know that actions speak louder than words, so I'm not going to tell you that I've learned from my mistakes and have become a better man as a result, I'm going to show you."

By saying something like that to her and taking responsibility for his actions, he automatically sparks some of her feelings of respect and attraction for him.

She then stops being so defensive and closed off and becomes more open to interacting with him more.

He can then get her to meet up with him in person, so that she can experience the new him for herself (by the way he behaves and interacts with her).

When she realizes that he really is a better man and that heâs no longer taking her for granted, while at the same time not sucking up to her or groveling, she will automatically feel attracted to him again.

She will then naturally open up to forgiving him for real and agree to giving the relationship another chance.

Another example of how a guy can approach it isâ|

3. If he accepted the break up right away and ended things on good terms

[image: He accepted the break up right away and they ended things on good terms]

He needs to give her 3 days of space and then call her on the phone where he focuses on making her laugh and smile and feel good to be hearing from him again.

For example: When she says something along the lines of, âSo, how has your day been so far?â rather than reply with something mundane like, âOh, Iâve been busy at work mostly. How about you?â which will do nothing to spark her feelings for him, he instead says something that makes her laugh like, âItâs been great so far and itâs about to get even better.â

She will then likely respond with something along the lines of, âOh, really? Why?â and he then replies by saying, âWell, because Iâm waiting for this really beautiful woman to invite me to lunch.â

She will then probably feel a bit disappointed and ask something like, âWell good for you. So, why are you telling me this?â and he can then jokingly say, âWell because that girl is you and Iâm starving to death here waiting for you to invite me. Whatâs taking you so long?â

At this point, she will naturally laugh and she will also feel flattered that heâs calling her beautiful.

As a result, her guard will come down and rather than feeling tense about talking to him again, she feels relaxed and open to catching up with him in person.

Then, when she meets up with him and experiences the new him face-to-face (e.g. heâs more confident and self-assured around her, heâs more emotionally masculine and doesnât let her dominate him during conversation, he treats her like a feminine woman rather than like a neutral friend), she naturally changes her mind about needing space and wants to be his girl again.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making When Giving a Woman Space

If you want to get your woman back into a relationship with you, you need to be able to understand what aspects of your thinking, behavior and attitude will turn her on, or turn her off.

This is why, itâs very important that you donât make the following mistakes and end up pushing her out of your life for good:

1. Giving her 30 to 60 days of space and hoping that it magically fixes everything between them

Giving a woman a lot of space is not the magic ingredient for fixing a relationship.

Instead, if a woman comes back after a few weeks or months apart from her guy and notices that heâs still making the same attraction mistakes he made before, she will usually walk away and this time, permanently.

Hereâs the thingâ!

More time apart doesnât fix a relationship.

Instead it gives a woman time to get over her guy and move on.

Even if she doesnât do that, if after 30 or 60 days she interacts with her guy and she discovers that heâs just been sitting around waiting to get her back without changing or improving anything about himself in that time, sheâs more than likely just going to walk away; this time for real.

This is why, if you intend giving your ex space, make sure that you donât think thatâs all you have to do to make things right between you and her.

You need to improve on some of the things that are important to her, so that when you interact with her and she notices youâre at a different level than you were before, she will feel motivated to work things out and get back together again.

Another mistake to avoid isâ!

2. Accepting her request for space and deciding to never contact her again unless she reaches out first

[image: Never contacting her again]

When a woman asks for space, itâs usually because she has either totally disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her guy, or sheâs very close to it.

Basically, sheâs distancing herself from him to decide if itâs worth it to try and fix the relationship, or if she should just cut her losses and find herself a new man.

So, if the guy then completely disappears from her life and doesnât call or even text her, it makes it so much easier for her to decide that heâs not the one for her anymore.

Note: If you want to keep your girl, you canât sit around waiting for her to hopefully realize that she still cares about you and wants you back.

You have to make her care.

You have to get her to realize that even though you and her experienced some problems, what you have together is worth it and losing you would be the biggest mistake of her life.

Thatâs why, itâs important that you donât give her more than a few days of space, before you begin interacting with her again and reactivating her feelings for you (e.g. by using humor to dissolve resentments, showing her that youâve already started transforming yourself into a better man, flirting with her to create sexual tension between you and make her want to release that tension through kissing and sex).

The more she starts to miss you when youâre not around (i.e. because youâve sparked her feelings on a call or at a meet up and then didnât contact her again for a few days), the more open sheâll become to working things out as quickly as possible so that you can get back together again.

On the other hand if you donât reach out to her at all, chances are, sheâll begin thinking about all the things you do that turn her off (e.g. youâ€¢re too insecure and this makes you clingy and needy, you take her for granted, you make her feel like the man in the relationship because you were too emotionally sensitive and this makes her feel like sheâ€¢s always taking care of you rather than the other way around) and as a result, she ends up deciding that a break up is inevitable.

Donâ€¢t let that happen to you.

You need to stay in contact with her if you want her back.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¢

3. Not giving her any space at all

The opposite of giving your woman too much space and losing her because she moves in, is not giving her any space at all and annoying her instead.

As a result, she feels like not only arenâ€¢t you being respectful of her wishes, youâ€¢re also behaving in an immature, childish way, which gives her one more reason to consider breaking up with you for real.

If you donâ€¢t give your ex any space to allow for things to calm down and make her miss you, it makes it more difficult for you to break through her defenses and get her to open back up to you.

This is why, the rule of thumb is: Give her 3 to 7 days of space.

Then, contact her, preferably over the phone and arrange a meet up so that you can begin reactivating her feelings for you.

In the meantime, use the time apart to begin improving yourself, so that when you interact with her, sheâ€¢s bowled over by the positive changes she experiences (e.g. youâ€¢re more confident and self-assured, youâ€¢re more manly around her, youâ€¢re less unsure of yourself when sheâ€¢s being cold or unresponsive).

When she sees for herself that you really are a different man, she will likely be the one saying something along the lines of, â€¢You know whatâ€¢ I donâ€¢t want any more space. I want to be with you. Letâ€¢s just be together again. Iâ€¢ve missed you.â€¢

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¢

4. Not understanding her real reasons for wanting space

A woman who is blissfully happy in her relationship with her guy wonâ€¢t want to spend even one day away from him.

So, if your girl is asking for space, it generally indicates that there are certain things about you, and her relationship with you that arenâ€¢t fulfilling her emotional needs.

This is why, if you want to resolve this problem once and for all (i.e. make sure she never wants space again), you need to understand what aspects of your thinking and behavior is turning her off and undertake to improve on those things (e.g. Do you make her feel feminine and girly or does she feel more like a friend around you? Are you confident with her or do you feel unsure of your value to her? Are you manly enough for her or does she feel like sheâ€¢s the boss in the relationship?).

Itâ€¢s not about becoming some perfect, robot boyfriend (or husband) to your woman, but rather about showing her that youâ€¢re serious about making the relationship work.

When she can see for herself that youâ€¢re putting in the effort, she will automatically want to respond by being a good, loyal, loving, devoted woman to you.

Thatâs how it works.

You make her feel loved and appreciated and emotionally safe and she tries to be the best woman she can be in return, because she knows sheâs lucky to have you.

So, focus on that and sheâll be back in your arms again within a very short time.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex Said, 'I Never Meant to Hurt You'

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are the 5 most common reasons why a woman will say that to her ex man:

1. She saw him as a nice guy, but always knew the relationship would end if he didn't change and become more manly

[image: She always knew the relationship would end if he didn't become more manly]

Sometimes, a woman will date a guy she perceives as being good enough for right now, but she doesn't foresee herself being with him in the long-term.

Basically, she likes him and thinks of him as being a nice guy, but he's not her ideal man and she knows that.

He is too soft, gentle, sweet and nice for her.

However, either because she's just coming out of a bad relationship and wants to just be with a good guy for a little while who will treat her well and give her the nurturing she needs to heal, or because she doesn't want to be single when all her friends are dating, she accepts him for now.

Secretly though, she's likely hoping that he'll eventually change and become the man she wants him to be.

She wants him to man up.

Yet, when that doesn't happen, she may then decide to break up with him and find herself a new man who is emotionally strong enough for a woman like her.

Of course, that doesn't mean she doesn't have any feelings for him and she might feel really bad about hurting him.

However, she knows that if she sticks with him, she will probably end up having to change her personality too much (e.g. take the lead in the relationship and be the more dominant one because he won't, become a nagging girlfriend) and she doesn't want that.

She might then say something along the lines of, 'I'm sorry about all of this. I never meant to hurt you. I really do care for you, but I think it's best if we don't see each other anymore.' to try and ease the blow.

If this is the case between you and your ex, the good news is that it's not too late to get her back.

If you can quickly transform yourself into a more emotionally strong, emotionally masculine man, you can then easily re-attract her and get her back.

When she can see for herself that you're no longer going to submit to her and allow her to walk all over you, she will be able to reconnect with her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

When that happens, her guard comes down and she becomes open to interacting with you more and more over the phone and in person, to see where things go from there.

Another common reason why a woman will say that to her ex is

2. She cheated on him in the heat of the moment

[image: She cheated on him in the heat of the moment]

A woman might sometimes get caught in a bad situation where she ends up doing something against her better judgment (i.e. cheat on her man).

For example: A woman might go out for a girls night out to a club or bar.

There she will inevitably interact with all kinds of people and that may include guys who are there looking to pick up a woman for a one night stand.

Ordinarily, she wouldn't give any of these guys the time of day, but after a drink or two she might start feeling attracted to one of these guys if he gives her the right kind of attraction experience (e.g. he's confident, charming, charismatic, emotionally masculine, funny).

She may then drop her guard and in the heat of the moment, end up kissing him and then hooking up with him sexually.

However, that doesn't necessarily mean that she's a bad, disloyal woman (although there are some untrustworthy women out there who get a thrill out of cheating on their guy).

Instead, it simply means that she got carried away and most likely feels shocked about what happened.

Of course, if her guy finds out and breaks up with her as a result, it's only natural that she will feel guilty and she may then say something along the lines of, I'm so sorry. I never meant to hurt you. This just happened and I couldn't stop myself. I hope one day you will be able to forgive me.

Here's the thing though!

When a woman is truly in love and attracted to her man, she won't easily be seduced by another man, even when she's drunk.

So, if your ex cheated on you, maybe it's because somewhere deep down she felt that something was missing from her relationship with you.

For example: Ask yourself!

- Did I make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman or did I treat her more like a friend or one of the guys?
- Was our relationship still interesting, fun and exciting, or did it become a bit boring and dull?
- Did I pay attention to her needs and desires in the relationship, or did I become neglectful and started taking her for granted?
- Was I the kind of man she could look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, or did I behave in ways that eroded her feelings for me over time (e.g. became insecure, needy, clingy, possessive, untrustworthy)?

Depending on your answers, you may discover that there were certain aspects of your thinking and behavior that may have pushed your ex into doing what she did.

That's not to say that cheating is excusable.

It's not.

However, if you're willing to forgive your ex and get her back (after you've made sure that sheâ€¢s not a serial cheater), you need to understand what aspect of the attraction experience was missing in her relationship with you.

Then, you need to quickly change and improve in some of the ways that are important to her and re-spark her feelings for you again, until sheâ€¢s the one begging you to get back together, because she canâ€¢t bear the thought of losing you.

Another common reason why a woman will say that to her ex isâ€¢!

3. She cared about him, but couldn't stop herself from feeling attracted to another guy

[image: She cared about him, but couldn't stop herself from feeling attracted to another guy]

In some cases, a woman might find herself in a relationship thatâ€¢s become too boring and predictable.

Yes, she still cares about her man, but she no longer feels strong sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for him.

Basically, heâ€¢s become more of a friend or roommate to her than a boyfriend or husband.

So, when another man comes along and makes her feel strong surges of sexual and romantic attraction for him, she may end up feeling drawn to him and wanting to be with him, more than she wants to be with her guy.

In a case like that, to get her back, the guy needs to make her feel such strong sexual and romantic feelings for him, that the idea of losing him forever because of a casual attraction she may have felt for another guy will make her feel sick to her stomach.

Heâ€¢s got to get her to the point where she wants him back for her own selfish reasons (i.e. sheâ€¢s worried she will never find another man who makes her feel the way that he does).

This is why, you canâ€¢t sit back and let some other man walk off with your woman.

If you want her back, you need to do what it takes to get her back.

That means, you need to reactivate her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you during interactions, so that she only has eyes for you.

Some of the ways you can do that are by...

- Believing in yourself and in your value to her, rather than doubting yourself and thinking that the other guy is better than you, just because she felt attracted to him.
- Showing her that youâ€¢re a new and improved man that she can now truly look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, rather than continuing to turn her off by making the same mistakes as before.
- Being a good man to her, but also being confident and assertive when interacting with her, rather than agreeing with everything she says or does to please her and turning her off instead.
- Maintaining your confidence with her when she tries to test you by talking about other guys that she finds attractive.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension, rather than being friendly, neutral or distant.
- Making her smile and laugh and feel relaxed to be around you again, rather than trying to get into intense, deep discussions about why she felt attracted to another guy.

Once she is feeling respect and attraction for you again, you can then progress to giving her a hug, a kiss and then hook up with her sexually.

Blow her mind and make her realize once and for all, that no man makes her feel the way you do. Another common reason why a woman will say that to her ex isâ€¦!

4. She was hoping that the relationship could end without either person getting hurt

[image: She was hoping the relationship could end without either person getting hurt]

If a woman discovers that her and her guy have grown apart (e.g. because sheâ€™s ready to be more serious and focused on achieving her goals while heâ€™s still partying with his friends, sitting around playing video games, or stuck in a dead-end job, she wants to settle down and have a serious relationship which includes starting a family while he wants to go traveling for a few years instead), she may start feeling restless in the relationship with him.

She might say to herself, â€œWe no longer want the same things in life. Everything that initially drew us together is now what is pulling us apart. I just donâ€™t want those things anymore, but I can see that heâ€™s not ready to change and I donâ€™t want to waste years waiting around in the hope that it might happen someday. However, I donâ€™t want to hurt him. I just think weâ€™ll both be better off with other people.â€

Initially, she might try to stick around and try to make it work, even though she doesnâ€™t feel fully committed to the relationship with him.

However, if she realizes that heâ€™s not going to change and mature in the same ways that she has, she will break up with him and say, â€œIâ€™m sorry to do this to you. I never meant to hurt you, but I think this is for the best for both of us.â€

Another common reason why a woman will say that to her ex isâ€¦!

5. She's just saying that to make herself seem innocent, so you don't get angry at her for dumping you

[image: She is just saying that, so you don't feel angry at her for dumping you]

Women often turn on the tears for this as well.

A woman will act as though she is totally heartbroken and it will seem real, even though she always knew that you and her would break up, if you weren't able to change your ways.

To protect herself from a guy becoming angry (or even violent), a woman will usually try to make it seem as though she didn't see the break up coming and always thought he was the one.

This gives a guy a better send off, rather than saying, â€œHey, deal with it. It's over. I never truly loved you because you weren't manly enough for me. You were too soft. Goodbye.â€

Alternatively, sometimes a woman is just the kind of person who likes to get into relationships with guys, use them and then move on to the next guy.

Basically, she never fully commits herself to one man and she always intends to cheat on him, or dump him when she feels like it.

Why?

- Maybe itâ€™s because sheâ€™s a cold-hearted person who enjoys seeing other people hurting.

- Maybe she was badly hurt by a guy in the past (e.g. an old boyfriend, her father left her when she was young) and now sheâs vowed to never let a man get the better of her again.
- Maybe sheâs insecure about herself and her value to a man so she fears a guy will never truly love her for her, which is why she never fully opens up and allows herself to fall in love.

Whatever her reasons though, she usually makes sure that sheâs the one who ends the relationship and leaves the guy feeling brokenhearted.

However, she also doesnât want to be the âbad guyâ in the situation, so to avoid that, she says something along the lines of, âIâm sorry. I never meant to hurt you. I hope you will forgive me and be able to move forward with a new woman. Youâre a great guy and you deserve to be happy.â

In most cases, the guy will then feel protective towards her and he may try to make her feel better by saying things like, âI know you didnât intend for this to happen. I love you and I hope youâll be okay.â

She can then move on and go ahead and do this to the next guy who falls into her trap, while her ex spends months and even years pining over her and thinking about how sweet and innocent she is.

4 Common Mistakes to Be Aware of If You Want Her Back

If you want your ex back, donât spend a lot of time dwelling on why she said that she never meant to hurt you and focus instead on saying and doing the types of things that will make her want to be your girl again.

This is why, itâs important that you avoid making the following mistakes as you try to get her back:

1. Seeking additional pity from her in the hope that it gets you another chance

Seeing as your ex has already apologized to you for hurting you, going on and on about how terrible you feel and how youâre struggling to cope is unlikely to score you any more points with her.

So, rather than make her think something along the lines of, âI really did a number on him, didnât I? He doesnât deserve to be suffering this way; heâs too much of a nice guy. I owe it to him to at least try and work things out,â sheâs instead going to feel resentful towards you for trying to make her feel even worse than she already does.

As a result, she will lose even more respect for you for trying to manipulate her in that way and she will then likely decide that sheâs better off without you after all.

So, if you really want to get your ex woman back, donât bother trying to make her feel more pity for you.

Instead, focus on reactivating her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, so she naturally feels drawn to you and becomes open to giving the relationship another chance for her own reasons.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

2. Assuming that talking about your feelings will make her have feelings and want you back

Although you still care a lot for your ex, she likely doesn't feel the same way about you, otherwise she wouldn't have broken up with you and hurt you in the first place.

So, if you then try to influence her decision by saying things like, "You do realize that I still love you, don't you? It doesn't matter to me what happened, as long as we can work things out between us and get back together again. You mean the world to me and I can't imagine my life without you," rather than respond with something along the lines of, "That's wonderful! I was hoping all along that you would say that. Now we can forget about everything in the past and start over," she will instead pull away from you even more.

Here's the thing!

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, hearing about his feelings for her isn't going to suddenly make her feel the same way about him.

So, if you want your ex to want you back, don't waste time discussing your feelings with her.

Instead, focus on using every interaction you have with her from now on to make her feel respect and sexual attraction for the new, improved version of you.

The more attracted she feels to the man you have become, the more she will start to feel drawn to you again.

When you approach it that way, you don't have to try to force an answer out of her that she doesn't want to give.

Instead, you allow her to fall in love with you again because it feels right to her to do that.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Not realizing the real, more subtle reasons why she felt turned off by you

In most cases, a guy likely knows what aspects of his thinking and behavior turned his ex off in the relationship with him (e.g. he spent too much time working and she felt neglected, his friends or family didn't like her, she complained about him being too irresponsible).

Yet, there are also many, more subtle things that turn a woman off and lead to a break up that a guy often doesn't even know about.

For example: Some of those things might be

- How he is too needy and clingy and always wants to spend time with her, because he's too afraid to follow through and make progress on his big goals, dreams and ambitions in life.
- How he struggles to make decisions and leaves everything up to her.
- How he seems so confident when he's at home with her, but when he's out in social situations he becomes submissive and meek.
- How he tends to spend more time working than he does with her and when he does spend time with her, he is emotionally unavailable.

These are just a few of the things that a woman will find unattractive in her man but will rarely tell him about it, because it's either too complicated to explain, it's too personal and would hurt him, or he would start making promises to change as a way of stopping her from leaving him. So, rather than getting into all the subtle details, she instead just breaks up with him and tries to move on.

This is why, if you want to get her back, it's essential that you first understand her real, secret reasons for breaking up with you.

When she experiences your new, attractive behavior, she will naturally begin to feel more respect for you as a man.

She will then drop her guard and allow herself to open back up to the idea of hanging out with you more to see where things go from there.

4. Not leveling up as a guy to re-attract her in ways that will get her attention

For a woman to want to be with a man, she needs to know that she will be able to grow and become a better person, because he's at a level where he makes her strive to be her best self (and visa versa).

So, when she breaks up with a guy, it's usually because his level and her level are no longer in sync (e.g. she's become more emotionally mature than him, she's more emotionally independent while he's clingy and needy, she's focused on making progress on her goals while he's still messing around playing video game or watching TV).

This is why, if you want your ex to give you another chance, you need to make sure that you level up as a man and not try to get her back by giving her the same attraction experience as before.

You've got to be ready to give her the kind of attraction experience that will cause her to feel like she just has to give you another chance, or else she will regret it for the rest of her life.

When you can do that, it becomes easy to get her back, because she wants it too.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Acts Hot and Cold

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why:

1. You re-attract her a little, but then turn her off again

[image: You re-attract her a little, but then turn her off again]

When a guy gets broken up with, but still loves his ex and wants her back, the first thing heâll usually do is try to convince her that heâs changed some of the things that turned her off, so she will then give him another chance.

For example: A guy might remember that most of the arguments he had in the relationship with his ex girlfriend were about him lacking ambition and being too laid back about his future.

So, to convince her that heâs changed, he might tell her that heâs busy looking for a better job, or that heâs thinking about enrolling in classes to improve his qualifications so that he can advance in his career, or that heâs applied for a promotion at work.

Then, when his ex girlfriend sees that heâs taken her feelings and concerns into consideration and is actually making an effort to better himself, she might begin thinking things like, âIt looks like I eventually got through to him, even though I had to break up with him for it to happen, but at least heâs finally making some positive changes in his life that will result in him progressing and having a better future.â

She then naturally starts to feel more respect and attraction for the new man that she now thinks heâs become and she starts to respond to him in a more positive (i.e. she acts hot) way.

Yet, over time, she may begin to realize that even though heâs saying that heâs moving forward in his life, nothing really seems to be happening.

Basically, heâs always talking about going to do apply for a promotion or, going to look for a better job, but it never actually happens.

As a result, she starts to feel like heâs messing with her and only saying those things to make her take him back and she may think things like, âHeâs been pretending that heâs changed, but deep down heâs still the same lazy, unmotivated man I broke up with. I canât believe I fell for his lies! Heâs not really making progress in his life. Instead, heâs just saying that he is to reel me back into a relationship with him. What a jerk!â

Naturally, when she begins thinking that way, she responds by acting cold, disinterested and possibly even annoyed and hostile towards him.

This is why itâs so important for you to truly change and improve before you interact with your ex.

That doesnât mean you have to become perfect to get her back, but you do have to genuinely make some improvements to yourself so she can see that youâre better now than you were before (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more emotionally masculine, more focused and goal oriented, more manly).

Remember: Actions speak louder than words.

When she sees the result of the changes you make to yourself, rather than you telling her about them, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her. Then, she will automatically act hot all the time, because she feels respect and attraction for you again.

On the other hand, if you only pretend to change just to get her back, she will stay cold and then getting her back becomes a lot more difficult for you.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend acts hot and cold is

2. She is testing to see how confident you are now after the break up

[image: She is testing to see how confident you are now after the break up]

Genuine self confidence is one of the most attractive qualities a man can have.

It doesn't matter if he's not very good looking, doesn't have a lot of money or drives a small car, when he's confident, he automatically becomes more attractive in a woman's eyes.

Conversely, a man can be really handsome, rich or drive a fancy car, but if he lacks confidence in himself and is insecure around a woman, she will instinctively feel turned off by him.

That's just how attraction works for a woman.

So, after a break up, a woman will usually test her ex's confidence again (she almost certainly did it the first time around when he tried to get her to go out with him), before she lets down her defenses and opens herself up to giving him another chance.

Of course, there are many things she can do to test him, but one of the most common ways is to act hot and cold and then wait to see how he will react.

For example:

- Will he get upset and ask things like, “Why are you doing this to me? Why are you treating me this way?”
- Will he crumble and start doubting his chances of getting her back just because she isn't being nice to him all the time?
- Will he beg her to tell him what he's doing wrong and why she's treating him that way?
- Will he try to suck up to her even more in the hope that she will be nice to him all the time, rather than being hot one minute and cold the next?
- Will he ask her to tell him what he needs to do to make her want him back?
- Will he give up on getting her back and just walk away, simply because he can't handle the way she's behaving?

If he reacts in any of those ways, it will prove to her that she made the right decision by breaking up with him.

She will then likely go completely cold and try to push him away for real this time.

On the other hand, if he maintains his confidence with her, regardless of how she treats him, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some respect for him again.

When she starts to respect him, she will also feel attracted to him again and when that happens her guard naturally comes down and she opens up to interacting with him more and more to see where things go.

This is why, itâ€™s very important that every time your ex girlfriend acts hot and cold you maintain your confidence with her.

The more you can do that, the more attracted to you she will feel, even if she doesnâ€™t want to, making it easy for you to get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend acts hot and cold isâ€¦!

3. Sometimes she feels confident and happy without you and other times she doesn't

[image: Sometimes she feels happy and confident without you and other times she doesn't]

Something that a lot of guys donâ€™t know about women is that they are so much less confident about themselves than they let on (according to a global study conducted by Dove cosmetics, 96% of women donâ€™t consider themselves to be beautiful).

So, when a woman breaks up with a guy, chances are she will initially feel a bit unsure about her decision.

In her mind she may be wondering things like, â€œWhat if Iâ€™m just too unattractive and no other guy wants me? Will I end up being single forever? Will I be the only one of my group of friends who is alone while theyâ€™re all in love and happy in relationships?â€

Naturally, when sheâ€™s feeling like that, she may act hot when interacting with her ex, because at the back of her mind she may be thinking something along the lines of, â€œWell, at least he still finds me attractive and wants to be with me. I guess if I canâ€™t find another man I can always go back to him. It will be better than nothing.â€

On the other hand, she might go out to a club or bar with friends and get approached by many different guys who tell her that sheâ€™s hot.

Alternatively, a guy at work or university may tell her that heâ€™s had his eye on her for a long time but has been avoiding her because she had a boyfriend before.

Additionally, she might join a meet up group in her area and start going out more with like-minded people and having loads of fun.

In these instances, she will almost certainly be feeling very confident about herself and her attractiveness as a woman.

She will likely also be feeling happy and more positive about her future.

If she then happens to interact with her ex boyfriend when sheâ€™s feeling like that, she will usually act cold, because sheâ€™s feeling more sure about herself and her chances of moving on with a new man if she wants to.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend acts hot and cold isâ€¦!

4. She wants to see if you will get angry and give her a reason to completely cut you out of her life

[image: Will you give her a reason to cut you out of her life completely?]

Sometimes, when a guy wonâ€™t let go of his ex and continuously tries to get her back, she might decide that the only way to get rid of him for real is by making him lose his temper with her.

As a result, she ends up acting hot and cold from one interaction to the next in the hope that he will get angry with her and say something along the lines of, *â€œWhat the hell is wrong with you? Why are you acting like such a bitch? Why canâ€™t you just stick to being one thing? Iâ€™m fed up with your games!*â€œ

She can then say something like, *â€œI knew that you were just sucking up to me because you wanted me to give you another chance! How dare you get angry with me? Did you forget that Iâ€™m no longer your girlfriend? You donâ€™t own me and now that Iâ€™ve seen your true colors, you can be sure that I would never get back with you. So, please donâ€™t bother contacting me again, because I never want to see or talk to you ever again!*â€œ

Sheâ€™s then able to make a clean break from her ex, without constantly having to deal with him trying to get her back.

Of course, if this is the case with your ex girlfriend, you can actually turn it around and re-attract her instead (e.g. by using humor to change her coldness into hotness, maintaining your confidence with her regardless of how sheâ€™s behaving, flirting with her to create sexual tensions between you).

Then, rather than give her a reason to completely cut you out of her life, she will instead begin feeling drawn to you again.

When that happens, her guard will naturally come down and youâ€™ll begin to notice that she no longer acts cold when she interacts with you.

You can then fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend acts hot and cold isâ€¦!

5. She doesn't know how else to deal with breaking up with you

[image: She doesn't know how else to deal with breaking up with you]

If a woman doesnâ€™t have much experience with break ups (e.g. this is her first or second serious relationship), she may not really know how to deal with all the different emotions sheâ€™s experiencing.

For example: Imagine a woman is sitting at home alone and remembering all the good times she had with her ex.

Sheâ€™s feeling sad and lonely and this makes her miss him.

She then decides to call him on the phone to say â€œHiâ€œ and to take away some of her loneliness.

Understandably, the guy might then interpret her behavior in a positive way and he may even begin thinking things like, *â€œSheâ€™s being so nice all of a sudden. Maybe sheâ€™s finally started to regret her decision to break up with me and this is her way of giving me a sign that she wants to get back together again.*â€œ

Then, a few days later the guy calls her on the phone to ask her to meet up with him.

Essentially, heâ€™s following through on what he assumes is her openness to work things out with him.

Yet, rather than happily accept his invitation she instead says something along the lines of, â€œWhy would I want to meet up with you? Weâ€™re broken up, or did you suddenly forget? I donâ€™t want to see you. Iâ€™m busy trying to get on with my life and you need to accept that and stop pestering me about getting back together again, because itâ€™s not going to happen.

Naturally, the guy is left feeling hurt and wondering, â€˜Why is my ex girlfriend acting hot and cold? What's the matter with her?â€™

The reason is, she doesn't know how else to behave.

She's just reacting to how she feels in the moment.

When she's feeling sad, lonely or depressed, she instinctively turns to her ex for comfort and this can be interpreted as her acting hot.

Then, when she's feeling more confident and in control of her life, she pushes him away, thereby acting cold.

However, what the guy doesn't realize is that while his ex is acting hot and cold, she's still open to interacting with him and this is the opportunity he needs to reactivate her feelings for him and get her back.

This is why, if your ex is currently talking to you, it's a good thing.

Use the open communication between you and her to re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you and make her want you back.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making When Your Ex Girlfriend is Acting Hot and Cold

If you want to get your ex back, you need to re-attract her first and that likely won't happen if you make any of the following mistakes:

1. Trying to get her back via text

It's almost guaranteed that a woman will be hot and cold via text.

Here's why:

Even if a woman really likes you or loves you, she will still be hot and cold via text at times.

That's just how women are.

For example:

- Some women see that as flirting (e.g. she's playing a bit hard to get and you will then chase her and this will create some sexual tension between you and her).
- Some women do it to test your confidence (e.g. will you crumble and doubt your chances of getting her back, or will you remain emotionally strong, get her on a call, then to a meet up and back into a relationship with you).
- Some women do it to reconfirm who is the boss or in charge in the relationship (e.g. will you be the man and take control of the situation by not allowing her to mess you around, or will you step back and allow her to call the shots in the hope that this will please her and make her want you back).
- Some women do it because they feel bored of texting back and forth with their ex, so they do it to amuse themselves, or to force him into calling.

The fact is, you can never fully interpret a woman's intentions via text.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back for real, you need to get her on a call or to a meet up with you.

In that way, you get to be the one who calls the shots.

No matter how much she acts hot and cold, when you focus on saying and doing the types of things that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. being confident, emotionally masculine, manly), she will automatically stop because she will feel drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Offering her the same attraction experience that got you dumped and expecting her to be hot all the time

Sometimes, a guy is so eager to get his ex back as quickly as possible, that he fails to realize that to get her back this time, he's going to have to give her a new and improved attraction experience.

This means, even though things like flowers, romantic dinners, long walks on the beach, or other romantic gestures worked in seducing her before, they're almost certainly not going to work again.

Why?

Essentially, the first time the relationship was starting with a clean slate.

He hadn't made any mistakes to turn her off, so these gestures seemed sweet, romantic and special to her.

However, this time her opinion of him is clouded by what happened to cause them to break up, so she's not going to be very impressed if his idea of getting her back is to send her flowers (or something equally insignificant).

So, even though she might initially respond by being friendly and nice, once the initial thrill wears off and she realizes that he's stuck offering her the same old attraction experience as before, she will likely begin thinking things like, "I can't believe that he thinks flowers/being extra nice to me/ romantic dinners/ buying me gifts is going to take away all the negative stuff that happened between us and make me give him another chance. Doesn't he realize that there are much more serious issues that need to be addressed before I would ever consider getting back together again? This just proves to me that I made the right decision to break up with him. He just doesn't get it and he clearly never will. I need to forget about him and move on."

She then turns cold and pushes him away, leaving him feeling confused and wondering why she's being so inconsistent.

This is why it's very important that when you try to get your ex back, you offer her a new and improved attraction experience.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Misunderstanding her behavior

Sometimes a woman will act hot and cold after a break up because she is worried that her ex guy will reel her back in and then dump her.

She fears that he wants to get revenge on her for dumping him.

So, when sheâs feeling positive about his intentions with her, she responds by being open and friendly towards him.

However, when sheâs feeling more insecure and unsure of herself, thatâs when the doubts begin eating away at her and thatâs when she pulls away from him, acts cold and pretends that she wants nothing to do with him.

Hereâs the thingâ

If you want your ex back, you canât let her behavior influence you.

You need to do what you need to do (i.e. interact with her, make her laugh and smile and feel good to be around you again, reactivate her feelings and get her back), regardless of what she does to put you off or encourage you.

The more that you give her the kind of attraction experience she always wanted from you, but never got, the more she feels like sheâs willing to take the risk of you dumping her, or else she might end up regretting it later on.

When you make her feel that way, her sexual and romantic feelings for you begin flooding back and you can then get her back and enjoy a new relationship.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

4 Ways to Become the Man That She Would Want Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Getting broken up with can either cause you to lose confidence in your attractiveness to women and go into your shell, or become more confident than ever before and become a magnet to women (including your ex).

What many guys don't know is that going through the ex back process is an incredibly transformative experience that helps you become an even better man than you were before.

The ex back process is essentially about finding out where you messed up (usually not what she told you), improving in subtle areas (e.g. confidence level, approach to communication, masculine expression), re-attracting her and then keeping the relationship back together.

Before you begin that process though, here are 4 ways to help you become the man that your ex would want back:

1. Become the most confident you have ever been in life

[image: Become the most confident you have ever been in life]

If you don't have a clear understanding of what confidence is, it's very easy to get caught up thinking that it's okay to feel dejected and to put yourself down after a break up.

You may even be thinking things like, It's all my fault that this happened, or I didn't realize how lucky I was to have her and I stuffed everything up. I ruined her feelings for me. She deserves a better guy than me, or How will I ever find another woman like her to accept and love me?

Yet, that's not what someone who has confidence in himself would be thinking.

Yes, it's only right that you will be feeling sad and disappointed about your break up.

Sure, you may experience days where you miss her so much it hurts.

Yet, feelings of sadness, disappointment or of missing your ex have nothing to do with how confident you feel about yourself as a man.

For a clearer understanding, here is the dictionary definition of confidence:

Confidence (noun): Belief in oneself and one's powers or abilities; self-confidence; self-reliance; assurance.

So, it's very important that you use this opportunity (i.e. your break up) to build up your confidence, to the point where no matter what life throws at you (e.g. another break up, getting fired from your job, a challenging health issue, financial problems), nothing can erode how you feel about yourself as a man.

Never again will you have doubting thoughts about yourself, your value to women or your worthiness to your ex or anyone else.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by:

- Seeing yourself as already being a better man than you were when your ex dumped you, because you've understood where you went wrong in the relationship with her.

- Taking definite steps to change and improve those things about yourself so that when you interact with your ex and other women, you automatically spark feelings of respect and attraction in them by displaying some of the qualities theyâ€¦re instinctively drawn to (e.g. emotional strength, assertiveness, being a man of action, self-assurance).
- Changing your self-talk (e.g. rather than putting yourself down when you make a mistake or fail at something and calling yourself things like, â€¦Loser, idiot or chumpâ€¦ you say things like, â€¦Everyone makes mistakes. This just gives me an opportunity to get even better.â€¦)
- Becoming more emotionally independent, so you donâ€¦t need your exâ€¦s (or anyone elseâ€¦s) approval or emotional support to feel good about yourself. Youâ€¦re now a self-approving, confident man with or without her.
- Believing in your attractiveness to your ex and other women, so you donâ€¦t feel as though any woman you want is out of your league. You know that you are more than good enough for any woman you choose and it comes through in your body language, attitude and behavior.

The more you believe in yourself, the more confident you will become.

Then, without even realizing it, it will become a reality.

If you then interact with your ex and she experiences the new you, her feelings will automatically begin to change.

Even if she tries to deny it to your face, she wonâ€¦t be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again for being so emotionally strong and becoming an even better man after the break up than you were before, rather than sinking into a pit of negativity, self-doubt and insecurity.

She will feel a spark with you and will wonder if maybe she should give you another chance.

When those kinds of thoughts enter her mind, the door to getting her back begins to open up and you can easily reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you and get her back.

Another thing you can do to become the man that she would want back isâ€¦!

2. Toughen up in the most important way of all: Emotional Masculinity

[image: Toughen up in the most important way of all: Emotional masculinity]

Emotional masculinity is different to physical masculinity.

So, before you rush offÂ to join a gym and begin pumping weightsÂ to get biggerÂ muscles, or change your wardrobe or appearance to look moreÂ manly (e.g. you start wearing leather jackets and dark sunglasses), consider the following:

If a guy is emotionally wimpy or sensitive, a woman isn't impressed if he has muscles or any other type of physical masculinity.

So, even though she may appreciate and even be impressed that a guy has made an effort to improve himself physically, sheâ€¦s going to be more interested in seeing whether heâ€¦s improved himself emotionally as well.

For example: Imagine a woman broke up with a guy because he was too wimpy and emotionally soft in the relationship with her.

No matter how much she pushed him, or how badly she treated him, he always backed down and let her get her way.

At the same time, he was often clingy and needy and got upset every time she wanted to do things independently from him and asked things like, “Do you still love me? Why don’t you want to be with me like I want to be with you?” or “Why do you hurt me this way? Don’t you realize you mean the world to me?”

Then, after the break up, he put all his attention on transforming himself into a really muscular, body-builder type with new clothes and a new haircut to re-attract her.

Yet, when she interacts with him, he still reacts the same as he did before (e.g. is wimpy and weak-minded, lets her get away with bad behavior, cries about how much he misses her).

As a result, rather than think things like, “Wow, he looks so hot and sexy now, that it doesn’t matter to me anymore that he still hasn’t leveled up as a man. I’m just going to overlook the fact that I can’t respect and feel attracted to an emotionally weak, wimpy guy and get back together with him because of his new appearance,” she’s going to be thinking something like, “It’s a pity that he didn’t put as much energy into improving the things about himself that really matter to me, like his emotional masculinity and his ability to make me feel respect and attraction for him as a man. If he had, I wouldn’t think twice about getting back with him. I would automatically want to give him another chance. However, he thought that his appearance was more important to me than fundamental traits like emotional strength, emotional independence and confidence. Too bad. I guess it’s truly over between us now.”

Here’s what you need to get clear on!

What matters most to a woman is your emotional masculinity.

In other words, your balls.

When she can experience the new emotionally masculine you during interactions, she will naturally relax into thinking, talking and behaving like a real woman around you (i.e. feminine, girly).

Her guard will then start to slip down and she will open back up to being in a relationship with you again.

Of course, that doesn’t mean you should let yourself go, avoid exercising and wear old, unattractive clothes.

Instead, just know that it’s not the most important thing to a woman.

Who you are as a man is (i.e. confident, emotionally masculine, emotionally dominant).

Another thing you can do to become the man that she would want back is!

3. Become fearless when it comes to love

[image: Become fearless when it comes to love]

Too many men are afraid to show their love and appreciation of a woman in a relationship, because they worry that it won’t be reciprocated and they will then be in the one down position.

Yet, a real man doesn’t ever worry that he will be in the one down position, because he never is.

It takes balls to be fearless when it comes to love.

To not need 100% reciprocation from your girlfriend or wife all the time.

Ironically, when you are that type of man, she loves you more than she has loved any other guy.

So, if you were a bit closed off in your relationship with your ex before, you need to become more fearless when expressing your emotions now.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should suddenly become an emotional wuss who doesn't stop talking about his feelings.

Instead, it's about being fearless with your emotions like a man (i.e. maintaining your composure and masculinity, while also expressing some emotions without fearing how your ex will react or respond).

For example: Imagine you're meeting up with your ex to say Hi as friends.

An emotionally fearless man will have the balls to say something like, I'm happy to see you. You really look amazing.

On the other hand, a man who is emotionally closed off and afraid of being hurt by showing love will likely say something along the lines of, Hey, how are things with you these days?

As you can probably see, there's a big difference between the two.

One is open and loving, the other is closed and guarded.

Another example is if the woman then responds to the emotionally fearless guy with something like, Thanks. It's nice of you to say that. However, I hope you don't think my agreeing to meet up with you again means I want to get back with you, because I don't.

Once again, the truly emotionally fearless guy (not one who is pretending to be), will maintain his confidence and respond with something like, Who said anything about getting back together again? Sure I'd really like that, but I've accepted your decision and I'm cool with us just being friends for now.

When you do that with a woman, she naturally feels strong surges of respect and attraction for you for being man enough to open up to her, without being needy or insecure about it, even though you're broken up.

She then feels drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her and you can then build on her feelings and get her back.

Another thing you can do to become the man that she would want back is

4. Have the courage to guide awkward interactions back to laughter and feelings of easy love

[image: Have the courage to guide awkward interactions back to laughter and feelings of easy love]

In most ex back cases, the guy will usually be feeling awkward, tense and unsure of himself as he attempts to interact with his ex woman again.

At the back of his mind he may even be wondering things like, What if she refuses to talk to me? or, What if she tells me that she'll never give me another chance? or, What if I can't convince her to give our relationship one more try?

Yet, thinking like that only creates more tension.

As a result, the interaction becomes unpleasant for both the guy and the woman and she then likely says something like, Look, I think we both stand a better chance of healing from this break up if we don't see or talk to each other again. Please accept that and try to move on.

That's not what you want.

This is why, it's always best to use humor to lighten the mood when interacting with your ex, so that she ends up thinking things like, He's so different now. I actually look forward to hearing from him or seeing him again. He really is a new man. Maybe we can work things out between us after all.

So, don't be afraid to make her laugh and smile when you talk to her, rather than being too serious and only focusing on discussing the relationship and what went wrong.

When you use humor to guide awkward conversations or interactions back to laughter and feelings of easy love, it becomes a lot more difficult for your ex to hold on to her negative feelings about you.

She starts feeling respect and attraction for you again and her guard comes down, making her more open to the idea of talking to you on the phone and seeing you in person again and again.

You can then fully reactivate her feelings for you and guide her back into a loving relationship with you, that's even better than it was before.

Become the Man That She Would Want Back Faster By Avoiding These Common Ex Back Mistakes

You can get your ex back if you want to.

However, you need to approach it the right way.

If you don't, you may end up turning her off even more and reducing your chances with her.

This is why, you need to avoid making the following ex back mistakes:

1. Talking about how much you want her and hoping that saying it will make her want you in the same way

Sometimes a guy might say things like, I want you to know that I still love you and really want you back. I really want us to figure this out and get back together again.

Essentially, he's hoping that his ex will then say something like, Oh, that's amazing! Now that I know you still care for me, I can open up and be honest with you too! I want you back too!

Yet, here's the thing!

If a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a man, then him telling her how much he wants her isn't going to make her suddenly feel the same way about him.

So, if you want your ex to want you back, don't waste time discussing your feelings with her.

Instead, focus on making her feel respect and attraction for the new, improved version of you, so that her wanting you back happens naturally.

When you approach it that way, you don't have to try to force an answer out of her that she doesn't want to give.

Instead, you allow her to want you back out of her own free will, because it feels like the right thing for her to do.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

2. Not knowing what women really find attractive in a man

Often, a guy thinks that what a woman wants in a man is for him to be kind and sweet and to let her call all the shots and make all the decisions.

He might also think that giving up everything else in his life (e.g. his goals, interests, hobbies, friends) and sticking solely with her is a sign of his devotion to her.

However, although he might think that heâ€™s doing the right thing by showing her that heâ€™s willing to do anything for her, thatâ€™s not what women find attractive in a man.

Yes, there are some women who like that kind of behavior in a man, because it gives them a sense of power over him (i.e. usually unattractive women who wonâ€™t be able to find another man).

The majority of women however, donâ€™t.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

A womanâ€™s emotional attraction to a guy is based on how he makes her feel by the way he talks, interacts with her, his body language, his attitude and the way her responds to her.

Itâ€™s who he is when sheâ€™s interacting with him.

For example:

- Is he confident and emotionally strong, or insecure and uncertain of himself?
- Does he make her feel like a feminine woman when sheâ€™s with him, or does she feel neutral or friendly emotions towards him?
- Does she look up to him, respect him and feel proud that heâ€™s her man, or does she feel like she canâ€™t look up to him and respect him and even looks down on him a little bit?
- Is he manly and leading in the relationship, or does she feel like sheâ€™s emotionally stronger than him and like she has power over him and is calling all the shots?

Thatâ€™s what really matters to a woman.

So, if youâ€™re serious about becoming a better man and getting your ex back, you have to understand what attracts a woman to a man and give her those things.

When you interact with her in ways that spark her feelings, everything changes.

The process of getting her back becomes really easy, because she is feeling open to you.

She likes interacting with you. She enjoys it.

However if you continue to interact with her in ways that turn her off, then getting her back is going to be very difficult.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Trying to impress her by making superficial changes to your physical appearance

The truth is, that although your ex might appreciate it if you make some effort to improve yourself physically, itâ€™s almost certainly not going to be the thing that convinces her to give you another chance.

What will?

The way you make her feel when she's with you.

For example:

- Do you make her feel like a feminine woman when she's with you, or more like a neutral friend?
- Do you make her feel safe and taken care of by being the more emotionally dominant one, or does she feel like she has to take care of you?
- Do you say and do things that earn her respect, or do you often behave in ways that make her look down on you and feel disappointed with you?

These are the types of things that really matter to a woman.

So, change your physical appearance if you want to, but be aware that it's the emotional changes you make that will get results in the end.

The next mistake to avoid is!

4. Trying to be romantic before making her feel attracted to you again

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings for a guy, him doing things to be romantic (e.g. buying her flowers, sending her love letters or poems, asking her to go out to an intimate dinner with him), doesn't appeal to her.

Instead, she feels annoyed that he thinks romantic gestures will make her forget about the reasons why she broke up with him and give him another chance.

As a result, she loses even more respect for him.

This is why you shouldn't try to be romantic with your ex if she doesn't have feelings for you anymore.

Women only appreciate romance from men that they feel sexually and romantically attracted to.

So, focus on re-attracting her first.

Then, when you're also romantic after that, she will appreciate it and feel grateful to be with a man who not only sparks her feelings in the ways that are important to her, he also showers her with romance.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Told My Ex That I Accepted the Break Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reactions from a woman when a man openly accepts her decision to break up with him:

1. She believes him and feels relieved that she can now move on in peace

[image: She believes him and feels relieved that she can now move on in peace]

Sometimes, when a woman breaks up with a guy, he might say something along the lines of, â€œThatâ€™s fine. If thatâ€™s what you want, I accept your decision and I promise I wonâ€™t act like a crazy, love-struck ex who always chases after you and try to make you change your mind.â€

In his mind, he may be hoping that if he says that to her and doesnâ€™t resist the break up, it will shock her into realizing that she actually does still care for him and reverse her decision.

However, in many cases, this approach can backfire, because rather than change her mind a woman might instead think something like, â€œOh, thank goodness! I honestly thought he was going to make a big fuss and try to talk me out of leaving. Fortunately though, heâ€™s handled this much more maturely than I anticipated and now I can move on with my life without constantly having to deal with a desperate ex trying to get me back. What a relief!â€

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Even if your ex does feel relieved that you told her that you accepted the break up and sheâ€™s planning to move on now, deep down, she will likely also be feeling some respect for you for not giving her a hard time about leaving you.

You can use that to your advantage, because she will probably be open to at least interacting with you now (e.g. via text, social media, over the phone and even seeing you in person).

All you need to do is to make sure that you spark some of her feelings for you each time you interact with her (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good, by showing her that youâ€™ve leveled up as a man, by being emotionally masculine with her so she feels feminine and girly, by flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you).

The more you do that, the more her guard will come down around you.

When that happens, itâ€™s only a matter of time before she wants to be your girl again.

On the other hand, if you just say that you accept the break up with her and then do nothing to reactivate her feelings for you, she will likely just move on without giving you a second thought.

Another possible reaction from a woman when a guy accepts a break up isâ€¦!

2. She doesn't believe him and suspects that he's just saying that to bring her guard down

[image: She doesn't believe him and suspects he is just saying that to bring her guard down]

If a woman knows that her ex still has feelings for her and if she gave him half a chance he would do anything to get her back, then him saying that heâ€™s accepted the break up wonâ€™t sound very convincing to her.

Instead, she will likely think something along the lines of, It's just his way of making me think that he's moving on, so that I will drop my guard around him. Then he'll likely try to worm his way back into my heart and convince me to give him another chance. Well, I'm not falling for that. I've broken up with him for good reasons and unless he can show me that he's changed the things that truly matter to me, telling me that he accepts the break up isn't going to be enough to make me change my mind.

She then becomes even more closed off towards him (e.g. she unfriends him on social media, blocks his number on her phone, refuses to see him in person), making it even more difficult for him to reactivate her feelings and get her back.

Another possible reaction from a woman when a guy accepts a break up is

3. She feels like the relationship is fully over now, so she begins to regret it and want him back

[image: She feels like the relationship is fully over now and she regrets it and wants him back]

In some cases, a guy saying that he accepts the break up with his ex is just the shock she needs to make her realize that she made a mistake and wants him back.

As a result, she might

Text him to say Hey and see what happens from there (e.g. will he start re-attracting her and try to get her back, or will he act like a nice neutral friend towards her).

Give him hints during interactions that she's open to getting back together again (e.g. she might flirt with him and act like she's still interested in him, she says things like, What we had together was good. I wish we could go back to that again, she makes excuses to talk to him and hang out with him more often).

Do nothing and hope that he was only lying when he said he accepts the break up and that he will actually try to get her back.

Accepts that she stuffed up and forces herself to get over him and move on.

Call him and say something along the lines of, I know you said that you accept the break up, but I now realize that I made a big mistake. Can you forgive me and give our relationship another chance?

Yet, here's the thing

You can't count on your ex to make it easy for you to get her back, by actually saying that she regrets breaking up with you.

In fact, it's more likely that she will try to get over you and move on, because she will fear being rejected by you if she tells you that she regrets her actions.

So, getting her back really is up to you.

If you want her, you need to make it happen and not sit around hoping for signs from her.

You need to interact with her and actively spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you again, so she can't stop herself from saying something along the lines of, I'm so sorry about breaking up with you. It was a stupid mistake and I truly regret it. Can we just put it all behind us and try again?â€œ

You can then get her back into a relationship with you thatâ€™s so much better than before.

Another possible reaction from a woman when a guy accepts a break up isâ€œ!

4. She doesn't care what he thinks or feels anymore, so it doesn't mean much to her

Usually, when a woman breaks up with a guy, sheâ€™s already made up her mind about it many days, weeks or even months before she actually goes through with it.

Sheâ€™s gradually prepared herself and has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him, so when the time comes to say the words, â€œIâ€™m breaking up with you. Itâ€™s now over between us,â€œ sheâ€™s ready.

So, if he then tells her that he accepts the break up, rather than think something like, â€œOh no! What have I done? I realize now that this is a mistake. I donâ€™t really want to lose him. I only thought I was over him, but now that heâ€™s willing to let me go, I see that I still love him. I need to tell him Iâ€™ve changed my mind before itâ€™s too late,â€œ she instead thinks things like, â€œWell hooray for that! He makes it sound like I care if he accepts the break up or not. Well, I donâ€™t. He can take it or leave it, but as far as Iâ€™m concerned, Iâ€™m moving on with my life and Iâ€™m making sure heâ€™s not in it.â€œ

She then focuses on meeting new guys, hooking up and falling in love.

Meanwhile, her ex is still hoping that by telling her that he accepts the break she will suddenly realize her mistake and change her mind.

Yet, that doesnâ€™t happen, because when she broke up with him,â€œ she no longer had feelings for him.

So, she just doesnâ€™t care whether he accepts it or not.

This is why, if you want your ex back, telling her that you accept the break up canâ€™t be your main strategy.

It can be part of the ex back process, but not the only thing.

For you to get her back for real, you need to do more than that.

You need to reawaken her feelings for you, so she starts to feel as though losing you will be something that she will regret for the rest of her life.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€œ!

- Making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again over the phone or in person.
- Maintaining your confidence with her, especially if sheâ€™s pretending not to be interested in you anymore and is trying to make you feel nervous or unsure of about yourself.
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you, rather than being on your best behavior around her and treating her like a neutral friend.
- Not giving her too much power over you (e.g. by doing everything she tells you to do, letting her call all the shots) and instead, letting her see that you are now even more masculine in the way you think, talk, behave and react when interacting with her.

When you approach the ex back process in that way, your ex will naturally begin to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and start to drop her guard.

She realizes that you really are different now and that you make her feel differently when she's with you as well.

She becomes curious about her new feelings for you and wants to explore them, rather than cutting you off and then potentially regretting it later on.

She then becomes open to talking to you, hanging out with you and seeing where things go from there, thereby allowing you to fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another possible reaction from a woman when a guy accepts a break up is

5. She feels like it's too late to tell her that now, because he has already turned her off by being needy and desperate for a while after the break up

[image: She feels like it's too late to say things like that now because she's completely turned off]

Sometimes, the shock of being broken up with might cause a guy to react in unattractive ways.

For example: He might

- Beg and plead with her and say things like, "Please baby, don't do this to me! I can't stand to lose you. I know I've stuffed up and made you feel unhappy with me, but I promise that if you give me just one more chance I will do whatever it takes to make you happy again. Please give me a chance. I promise you won't regret it."
- Break down and cry.
- Promise her that he will do whatever she wants him to do if she will change her mind.
- Tell her how much he loves her and how he can't live without her.
- Call her or text her constantly to try and stay on her mind.
- Show up at her house or workplace to try and talk things out with her.
- Ask mutual friends or family to put in a good word for him.

As a result, when he finally gets to the point where he tells his ex that he's accepted the break up, it's usually too late, because she's lost too much respect and attraction for him as a man.

So, if you've behaved in any of the above-mentioned ways, it's very likely that you've turned your ex off in the process.

However, that doesn't mean you can't turn things around and get her back.

You can.

As long as you focus on saying and doing the types of things that will reactivate her feelings for you from now on (e.g. being confident, emotionally strong, more manly, more emotionally independent), her defenses will naturally begin to come down.

You can then show her that you really have changed and make her fall in love with the new you.

Get Her Back Quicker and Easier By Avoiding These 4 Mistakes

If you want your ex back, it's very important that you take the right approach.

If you don't, you may end up turning her off even more and losing her for real this time.

This is why, you need to avoid making any of the following mistakes:

1. Hoping that telling her you accept the break up will be enough to make her want you back

Although telling your ex that you accept the break up is an important step in the ex back process, thereâs a lot more that needs to happen after that before she will be yours again.

If you donât take steps to fully reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, the best you can hope for is for her to say something along the lines of, âIâm glad youâve finally accepted that itâs over between us. At least now we can both begin to heal and move on. Maybe we can even be friends sometime in the future when things have settled down between us, okay? However, for now, letâs take some time apart and focus on ourselves.â

So, if thatâs not the outcome you want, make sure that you follow up your acceptance with interactions that spark her feelings for you.

The more you make her feel drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her, the more open she will become to getting back together again.

On the other hand if you donât do anything else now that youâve told her that you accepted the break up, chances are high that sooner rather than later youâll be finding out that sheâs in a new relationship with a guy who isnât you.

Donât let that happen.

Take action now.

Another mistake to avoid isâ!

2. Not realizing that, whenever you interact with her, you still turn her off in subtle ways, which make her feel confident about her decision to remain broken up with you

Sometimes, a guy will continue to turn his ex off every time he interacts with her over the phone, or in person without even realizing it.

For example: Some of the ways he might do that are byâ!

- Always being available to talk to her no matter what time of day or night it is. This gives her the impression that heâs got nothing else going on in his life and that heâs just sitting around waiting for scraps of attention from her.
- Being nervous and tense while talking to her. This indicates to her that heâs lacking the all-essential trait of confidence that sheâs looking for in a man.
- Seeming sad and depressed all the time. She then gets a sense that he lied about accepting the break up and heâs sitting around moping and feeling lost without her.

As a result, she doesnât feel that all-important spark of attraction for him for being an emotionally strong, confident man that she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love.

She then feels that she made the right decision by breaking up with him and then opens herself up to meeting new men to move on with.

Another mistake to avoid isâ!

3. Hoping that she takes pity on you for having to accept the break up, when she's not the sort of woman to feel pity and come running back

Most women in today's world are emotionally and mentally tough.

So, when a guy tries to make an ex woman take pity on him for accepting a break up, even though he really still wants her back, rather than feel motivated to bend a little bit and give him another chance, she instead feels annoyed with him for trying to manipulate her back into a relationship.

She then becomes colder and more unapproachable, making it difficult for him to reactivate her feelings and get her back.

Here's the thing!

If you want your ex back, don't try to make it happen by trying to manipulate her feelings of pity or guilt.

If she's a strong-willed woman, she's simply not going to fall for it and it may even cause her to stop interacting with you altogether, making getting her back more difficult for you.

Another mistake to avoid is!

4. Accepting the break up and then leaving the ball in her court

In some cases, a guy will tell his ex that he accepts the break up and then distance himself from her while he waits for a sign from her that she's missing him.

Yet, that almost never happens.

Instead, the woman will take his acceptance as a sign that the relationship is truly over and she will then focus her attention on moving on and finding herself a new man.

In cases where a woman still has feelings for her ex and was secretly hoping they could work things out, not hearing from him after he accepts the break up will likely be like a cold slap in the face.

She may then start thinking things like, "Why did I ever think that he still cares for me. Clearly he's no longer interested and I'm just wasting my time waiting for him to make a move. I need to get over him and get on with my life. After all, that's exactly what he's done."

Naturally, that's not the outcome you're looking for, so don't leave the ex back process up to your ex.

You're the man so it's up to you to get her back if you want her.

So, now that you accepted the break up, focus on using interactions with your ex to spark her feelings of respect and attraction again.

The more attracted she feels to you again, the more worried she becomes about you moving on without her.

She then wants to talk to you over the phone and meet up with you in person more and more, making it easy for you to get her back and enjoy a new, exciting relationship with her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I'm Taking Care of My Ex Girlfriend's Dog. Yet, She Doesn't Want Me Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

3 things you should start to do if you want your ex girlfriend back:

1. Use the times when she visits her dog to re-attract her

[image: Use the times she visits her dog to re-attract her]

Even though your ex girlfriend is currently saying that she doesn't want you back, it doesn't mean she will stick to that decision once you've reactivated some of her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Fortunately, unlike a lot of guys who get broken up with and who struggle to find a way to interact with their ex without being rejected by her, you have the perfect "excuse" that makes her accessible to you almost any time you want (i.e. you're taking care of her dog).

This means, every time she calls to check up on her dog or comes to visit him/her, you have a chance to spark some of her feelings for you again.

How can you do that?

Some of the ways you can do that are by:

Becoming more confident and self-assured about your attractiveness and value to her, rather than feeling insecure around her and worrying about her saying that she doesn't want you back.

Showing her that you've added to your strengths and improved your weaknesses, rather than staying the same and expecting her to want you back just because you still care for her.

- Improving your ability to make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman in your presence, rather than treating her like a neutral friend.
- Being more manly in your attitude and in how you think, talk, behave, and interact with her, rather than allowing her to dominate you with her confident personality.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension between you, rather than "playing it safe" by pretending you're not interested in her and only talking about her dog with her.
- Making her smile and laugh and feel relaxed to be around you, rather than trying to turn every conversation with her into a discussion about the relationship and what it would take for her to give you another chance.

When you start making her feel sexually attracted to you again, it then gives you the confidence to not accept the scraps that she is giving you by letting you take care of her dog.

Not only will you feel more in control of the ex back process (rather than letting it be all up to your ex girlfriend), she also stops thinking of you as her good, old reliable ex boyfriend who is only there to take care of her dog.

As a result she starts to feel drawn to you again.

When that happens, her guard comes down and she opens herself up to kissing and sex to see where things go from there.

Another thing you should do isâ€¦!

2. Use the dog as a source of humor when you see her

[image: Use the dog as a source of humor when you see her]

It has been said that laughter is the best medicine.

So, what better way to ease the tension between you and your ex girlfriend and take the bite off any negative feelings she might still be holding onto about you than to make her laugh when sheâ€™s with you.

For example: The next time she comes to visit her dog, you might say something like, â€œIâ€™m sorry you came all this way for nothing, but your dog isnâ€™t here right now.â€

She might then ask something along the lines of, â€œWhat? Where is he?â€

You can then respond in a joking way, â€œWellâ€¦ heâ€™s been so happy since you left that when I told him you were coming to visit today, he decided to go out for a walk. Heâ€™ll be back later,â€ and have a laugh with her about that.

Note: That kind of thing is to be said to her in person with a smile and in a joking manner, not via text.

When you use humor and get your ex smiling and laughing, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to hold on to her decision not to get back together again.

As a result, she starts feeling respect and attraction for you again and she begins thinking things like, â€œThis is interesting. Heâ€™s so funny and confident all of a sudden. I wonder what has gotten into him. Maybe heâ€™s really changed after all. Maybe I should stop pushing him away and see what happens instead.â€

You can then build on her feelings for you and make her want you back.

Another thing you should do isâ€¦!

3. When she is attracted to you again, use the dog to do something romantic

[image: When she is attracted to you again, use the dog to do something romantic]

Romance is only enjoyable for a woman when the feelings are mutual.

So, you need to re-attract your ex girlfriend first before doing this.

Then, when you know that she is re-attracted based on how you have been interacting with her, you can use her visit to see the dog to melt her heart a little.

For example: Something you might do isâ€¦!

Hang a little sign from the dogâ€™s collar or neck, saying, â€œWanna go for a walk?â€ and then walk the dog together.

On the walk, if she seems open (e.g. sheâ€™s laughing and smiling a lot, playfully teasing you or touching you on the arm), you might try and hold her hand.

If she doesnâ€™t pull away, continue walking hand in hand for a while.

At the right moment (e.g. she turns to look at you and smiles, she moves closer to you), you can go ahead and give her a kiss on the lips.

[image: Kiss her when the moment is right]

From there, if she opens open to it, go back to your place and hook up with her sexually.

Then, continue showing her during every interaction you have with her that you've transformed yourself into the kind of man that she can now look up to, respect and feel attracted to (e.g. confident, more manly, emotionally mature, emotionally independent).

As you do that, she will naturally begin to fall back in love with you.

By the way!

Don't give up if she doesn't want to hold hands, kiss or have sex again.

The important thing is that you maintain your confidence with her and you continue building her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you over time.

The more she experiences the new you for herself, the more she will fall for you again, even if she initially didn't think it was possible.

You and her can then get back together in a relationship that is so much better than it was before.

4 Common Mistakes to Avoid When Taking Care of Your Ex Girlfriend's Dog if You Want Her Back

When you spark your ex girlfriend's feelings of respect and attraction for you, everything changes.

Her guard comes down and she opens herself up to getting back together again because being around you feels good to her.

On the other hand, if you keep saying and doing the kinds of things that make you appear unattractive in her eyes, she's just going to keep blocking you and saying things like, "Look, I really appreciate that you're taking care of my dog, but we can only be friends from now on. I just don't have feelings for you anymore. Please accept that."

She may then try to find herself a replacement man as quickly as possible as a way of convincing you that she doesn't want you back.

This is why, you need to focus on doing the right things, rather than making any of the following mistakes:

1. Taking extra good care of the dog in the hope that it impresses her and makes her take pity on you

Sometimes a guy might spend almost all of his time pampering his ex's dog (e.g. talking him for long walks, buying him new toys to play with, feeding him only the best and most expensive food).

Secretly he's hoping that his ex will think something along the lines of, "Wow, he's really been spoiling my dog so much! That's just so sweet and thoughtful of him. It makes me feel like such a bitch for refusing to give him another chance. Based on how amazing he's been by taking care of my dog even though we're broken up, I owe it to him to at least try to work things out."

Yet, although a woman might appreciate that he's being so kind and helpful, feeling sorry for him isn't the main thing that will change her feelings for him.

What will?

Reactivating her feelings of respect and attraction for you, so she feels drawn to you and becomes open to giving you another chance.

So, even though the guy might be a good guy and has good intentions, a woman usually won't see it that way.

He won't see what he is doing as needy and desperate, but she will.

So, don't bother trying to make your ex woman feel pity for you for being so nice to her dog, while she's being mean to you, because it will most-likely backfire.

Instead, just focus on reawakening her feelings of respect and attraction, so she naturally wants you back because it feels right to her.

Another mistake to avoid making is!

2. Suggesting that the dog is depressed without her around

While this might be true, it's not the sort of emotional blackmail that gets a woman back into a committed relationship.

Instead, she will likely think something like, "I can't believe that he's trying to put me on a guilt trip. Does he really think I'm going to get back with him just because my dog is depressed?"

She will then look at her ex as being manipulative, childish and emotionally immature, which are all traits that turn women off about men.

She will then be even more convinced that breaking up with him was the right decision.

This is why, it's important that rather than looking for excuses to get her back, you instead quickly level up and become a more emotionally attractive man.

When you do that, she will have a really good reason to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

It will be based on something solid and genuine (i.e. you've transformed yourself into a better man), rather than on something superficial like her dog being depressed.

As a result, her guard will come down a little and you can then build on her feelings and get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

Another mistake to avoid making is!

3. Not getting to the core reasons why she doesn't want you back

In her mind, your ex has probably got some very good reasons for not wanting to give you another chance.

The important thing, is that you understand her reasons, so you can quickly change and improve some of those things.

When you do, all her excuses fall away and she then naturally and automatically starts to feel drawn to you again.

So, you really do need to figure it out.

Don't ask her that though.

It's not her job as an ex girlfriend to explain how you can get her back.

You have to understand that without her help.

By the way

If you don't know what to look for, here are some questions to help you start figuring it all out:

- Are you the kind of man that she can look up to and respect, or does she feel like you're not living up to your full potential as a man (e.g. because you don't have any big goals or dreams that you're working towards achieving, you're too childish and immature, you don't have a purpose in life, you tend to lose confidence and go into your shell in social situations)?
- Do you make her feel the way a woman wants to feel in a relationship with a man (e.g. feminine, girly and sexually desirable), or does she feel more masculine in contrast to you because you're too insecure or emotionally wimpy?
- Does she feel lucky to be with you, or does she feel like she can do better?
- Do you believe in your attractiveness and value to her, or do you secretly believe that you got lucky and that you will never be able to get another woman who is as attractive as her?

By asking yourself questions like that, you can zone in on what is making her not want you back, and then change those things about yourself.

When she realizes that you're no longer turning her off like you used to and are instead making her feel surges of respect and attraction for you, she will naturally start to change her mind about giving you another chance.

Another mistake to avoid making is

4. Potentially continuing to be way too generous and kind to her

If one of the reasons why your ex girlfriend broke up with you was because you let her walk all over you, she isn't going to be impressed that you're now dutifully taking care of her dog.

Instead, she will likely continue to use you for her convenience, while she secretly focuses in moving on behind your back.

Then one day, she may show up at your place and say something like, "I'm here to fetch my dog. I've met someone else and we're moving in together and there will be lots of space for my dog at our new house, so I can take care of him now. Thanks for looking after him, you've been a real sweetie."

Here's the thing

A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy that allows her to walk all over him, just so he can get to spend some time with her.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend to give you another chance, make sure you don't let her take advantage of you in the process.

There's nothing wrong with looking after her dog if you said that you would, but that doesn't mean you should bend to her wishes every time (e.g. you make yourself available whenever she wants to visit the dog, you agree to look after him longer even though she said it would only take a few days/weeks/months before she was settled and could take him back).

Let her see that you are a good guy who is willing to be nice to her, but are also confident enough to say no to her when she's pushing the line.

Another mistake to avoid making is

5. Not giving her a compelling reason to want you back

The most compelling reason is when you reactivate your ex's feelings and she suddenly feels a newfound respect and romantic attraction for you.

You can do that based on how you now interact with her.

For example: Some of the things you can do to spark her feelings for you are

- Maintain your confidence with her regardless of what she says or does to mess with your head.
- Make her smile and laugh and feel relaxed to be around you again.
- Flirt with her to create sexual tension between you and her.
- Show her that you're a new and improved man that she can now truly look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love.
- Be a good man, but also be confident and assertive when talking to her, so that she doesn't take you for granted.

The more you make her feel good when she's interacting with you, the more she will want to be around you.

You can then progress to giving her a hug, a kiss and then hook up with her sexually and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Make Your Ex Love You Again Fast

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How fast you can get her to truly love you again depends on why she broke up with you.

Here are some break up examples and what a man needs to do to get his ex woman to love him again.

The first example isâ€¦!

1. If she broke up with you because you gradually turned her off over time

[image: She broke up with you because you gradually turned her off over time]

In that case, you need to level up as a man and re-attract her to the new and improved you.

Don't doubt yourself.

Just interact with her, over the phone and more importantly, in person and create a new spark of romantic attraction based on the new you and how you make her feel.

Then, don't rush or push to get her back.

Just let her feel drawn to you again based on the man you have become and how she now feels when sheâ€¦s with you, which is different to how she felt before (e.g. she felt bored, turned off and annoyed with you, but she now feels excited, turned on and eager to interact with you more and more).

When she begins seeing you in a more positive light, her feelings of respect and attraction will naturally begin to resurface.

When that happens, her romantic attraction will reactivate her love and she will almost certainly want you back fast.

So, focus on that.

By the wayâ€¦!

Some of the things that you can do to reactivate your exâ€¦s feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you are:

Understand her real reasons for falling out of love with you.

For example:

- Were you an emotionally strong and confident man in the relationship with her, or were you a bit insecure, needy and emotionally wimpy?
- Did you make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman when she was with you, or did she end up feeling like more of a neutral friend, or worse, â€¦one of the guysâ€¦?
- Did you have a strong purpose and direction in life outside of your relationship with her, or did you make her your main focus and reason for living?
- Were you emotionally masculine when around her, thus allowing her to fully relax into being a feminine woman around you, or were you too emotionally sensitive so she felt more dominant than you?

Begin fixing those things about yourself, so that when you interact with her over the phone and in person, she will be able to pick up on the changes in your attitude and the way that you now talk, think, behave and respond to her.

Let her see that you believe in your attractiveness and value to her by maintaining your confidence when she tries to make you feel insecure.

Use humor to bring down her defenses and make her smile and laugh and feel good every time she is interacting with you.

Flirt with her to create some sexual tension and make her want to release that tension with hugging, kissing and sex.

You don't have to be perfect to re-spark your ex's feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Instead, you just need to make some adjustments and improvements to yourself and show her that you really are now at a different level from the one you were at when she broke up with you (i.e. you've leveled up).

When you interact with her in ways that spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you, everything changes.

The process of making her love you again fast becomes possible, because she actually feels drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

On the other hand, if you don't level up and instead continue to make the same old attraction mistakes you made before (e.g. being needy and insecure, being too nice and sucking up to her so she feels like she has power over you, not making her feel feminine and girly in your presence), then getting her to reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again is going to be very difficult.

So, make sure that you are ready to properly re-attract her and reactivate her feelings when you interact with her over the phone and in person.

The more you re-attract her, the faster her feelings of love will come rushing back.

Another thing that will determine if you can make your ex love you again fast is

2. If she broke up with you to teach you a lesson

[image: She broke up with you to teach you a lesson]

Sometimes, a woman might reach a point in her relationship with you where she feels like nothing she's tried to convince you to change and improve certain aspects of your thinking and behavior (e.g. she's had arguments and disagreements with you, she's nagged you, she's threatened to break up with you) is getting through to you.

So, as a last resort, she might decide to break up with you to teach you a lesson and possibly get you to transform yourself into a better man.

For example: Imagine you kept treating your ex woman badly and took her for granted (e.g. you broke most of your promises to her, you stopped noticing her efforts to look good for you, you didn't pull your weight when it came to doing chores, you let yourself go and expected her to still feel attracted to you).

As a result, she became sick of being in the one down position in the relationship.

So, she dumped you to hopefully make you realize what you have.

In that case, if she sees that you're enjoying your life without her and not trying to get her back, she will almost certainly regret what she did and come running back to you.

So, rather than chasing after your ex and desperately trying to convince her to give you another chance and turning her off in the process, focus instead on doing some of the things you've neglected because of your relationship with her.

For example: You can

- Concentrate on achieving some of your big goals, dreams and ambitions in life.
- Do something new that involves meeting new people (e.g. take up a group sport or recreational activity such as tennis, football, martial arts, join a dance club or a photography club). Don't pick up a hobby where you are alone, or feel left out. It's essential that you get around other people, so you don't feel alone or left out.
- Reconnect with old friends and go out and have fun with them.
- Join a meet up group in your area and make new friends while doing something you enjoy.
- Join in on a pub crawl or a bar tour or any nightlife group event available in your area, even though you're not a tourist. If anyone asks why you're there when you're not a tourist in the city, just say, "My friends were busy tonight, so I thought I'd get out and have some fun on a bar tour (or pub crawl). Let's all have a good night" and cheers a drink with that person.

The more you focus on becoming genuinely happy and content in your own life, not only does that stop you from feeling lost or lonely without your ex, but you also become more attractive to her as well.

Suddenly, she starts to see you as being more of a catch than you were before.

She will then likely panic at the thought of losing you for real and reach out to you (e.g. send you a text, social media message or call you on the phone to say hi).

You can then re-spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction and make her love you again.

Another thing that will determine if you can make your ex love you again fast is

3. If she broke up with you because you became too insecure

[image: She broke up with you because you became too insecure]

Insecurity is one of the biggest reasons why a woman will break up with a guy.

Here's the thing

In most relationships a guy will start off being somewhat confident and self assured, which is attractive to women.

Then over time, this confidence begins to fade and is replaced with feelings of self-doubt about his attractiveness to his woman, which causes him to become clingy and needy.

Of course, even though this behavior is unattractive to a woman, she usually won't break up with her guy right away.

Instead, she will usually try to get back the confident guy she originally fell in love with by saying things like, "You're the guy I want to be with. No other man compares to you in my eyes. I love you and I only want to be with you. I wish you would believe me."

However, if the guy continues to feel unsure of himself around his woman, she will eventually lose too much respect and attraction for him as a man.

When that happens, she will fall out of love with him, leading to her breaking up with him.

Does this sound a bit like you?

Did you lose confidence in yourself and in your attractiveness to your woman and became clingy and needy as a result?

If that is the case, then you need to quickly become so much more confident.

Then, interact with her and blow her mind with how differently you make her feel now.

Of course real confidence is not about being pushy, demanding or aggressive.

Instead, itâs about being relaxed and standing up for yourself in a loving way, no matter what challenges she throws your way as you are getting her back (e.g. youâre talking to her over the phone and she is being cold or even unfriendly towards you, youâre talking to her in person and sheâs saying things like, âI donât have feelings for you anymore and nothing you say is going to change that,â or âIâm much happier being single and dating many different guys rather than being stuck in a relationship with one guy. Itâs a lot more funâ).

When she can see that you remain in control of your emotions and donât begin doubting yourself and your chances of getting her back, she will automatically feel surges of respect and attraction for you again, even if she doesnât openly admit it.

You can then build on that initial spark by attracting her in other important ways (e.g. making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine vibe, being a good guy without handing your power over to her, showing her that youâve changed and improved in some of the ways that are important to her), it wonât take long before she begins to reconnect with her feelings of love for you again.

However, itâs always best to build on a foundation of complete confidence in yourself and an absolute feeling of worthiness for the woman you are interacting with.

Women love it when guys have that kind of confidence and when you do, it makes everything else that you do so much more attractive and appealing to her.

So, believe in yourself and in your value to her and she will believe it too.

She will then want to be with you again, because it feels right for her to be with you.

3 Mistakes That Slow Down the Ex Back Process

If you want to make your ex love you again fast, itâs vital that when you interact with her from this moment onwards, you focus on saying and doing the types of things that will make her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you again.

The more drawn to you she feels the more her feelings for you will return and then getting her back becomes easy for you.

On the other hand, if you say or do things that turn her off, the love will remain buried and then it slows down the ex back process.

This is why you need to make sure that you donât make any of the following mistakes with your ex:

1. Acting like you don't care about her anymore, when you really do and are missing her desperately

Sometimes, when a woman is pushing her ex away and saying things like, â€œLook, you really do have to accept that it's over between us. I just don't love you anymore and nothing is going to change that. So, please stop trying to make me change my mind. It's over,â€ it's understandable that he might think to himself something along the lines of, â€œFine. If she doesn't want me anymore, then I don't want her either. I don't need her in my life. I don't care if we get back together or not.â€

So, if he then happens to interact with his ex woman and she asks how he's been, he might respond by saying something like, â€œOh, I'm doing really well. Sure, I struggled a bit in the beginning when we broke up, but I'm completely over you now. I've moved on and I feel great about my life. How about you? How has your life been since I last spoke to you?â€

Secretly, he's hoping that his words will shock her into saying, â€œWhat? How can you be over me? I still love you and I was hoping that we could put all this behind us and get back together again!â€

Yet, here's the thing!

A woman can easily pick up on whether her ex is really over her, or just saying that he is to try and make her panic and want him back. How?

She can tell by observing his body language and analyzing the tonality of his voice, his behavior and the way he reacts and responds to what she says and does.

So, even if his mouth is saying, â€œI'm over you,â€ if she says something like, â€œYeah, I'm over you too. I have a new boyfriend now and he's amazing!â€ his body language will almost always give him away (e.g. he flinches when she says that, his mouth turns down, he looks hurt).

She will then feel turned off by him even more for trying to fake confidence and emotional independence.

So, if you want to make your ex love you again fast, don't play games with her by pretending that you're over her.

Be calm, confident and in control of your emotions as you get her back, but don't pretend that you don't care about her anymore.

It's not necessary.

There's nothing wrong with wanting her back.

Just don't be needy and desperate about it.

The next mistake is!

2. Hoping that telling her how much you love her will make her love you back in the same way

[image: Hoping that telling her how much you love her will make her love you back in the same way]

Although you still love your ex and want her back, telling her that you do will likely only cause her to think something along the lines of, â€œWhy is he telling me this? Doesn't he realize that I don't love him anymore? I'm not going to change my mind just because he still cares for me.

Here's the thing!

While you're thinking about your feelings, you've overlooked one important thing: Her feelings.

Right now, your feelings are pretty much unimportant to her.

Instead, what she cares about is herself and what she wants and the only time that's going to change is if you actively make her care.

How can you do that?

By reactivating her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

If you don't do that first and you just rush into pouring your heart out to her, she's not going to give you the response you want (i.e. tell you that she loves you to).

However, if you use interactions to make her feel surges of respect and attraction for you, she will quickly start feeling the love in her heart again.

She then feels happy when you tell her that you love her, because she loves you too.

However, you have to reactivate her feelings for you first.

The next mistake is!

3. Hooking up with a new girl to make her feel jealous

Sometimes a guy will hook up with a new woman in the hope that his ex will find out, get jealous and want him back.

Although that definitely does work on some women, it simply doesn't work on all women.

Here's why!

In some cases, a woman will see that as the final straw and then quickly flirt with new guys and do the same, so she can get revenge.

In other instances, a woman won't care at all, because she is already over him.

She's too busy living her life to even notice.

Finally, there are times when a woman does feel jealous and does care, so she comes running back to her ex as a result.

You have to use the right approach for your situation.

However, if you want to make your ex love you again fast, trying to make her jealous is usually not a good idea.

Not only could trying to make her jealous backfire (e.g. she believes you've moved on so she gives up and finds a new man, you end up hurting another woman in the process because you're only using her to get your ex back), it also takes too long.

On the other hand, if you interact with your ex and spark her feelings for you, you can get her back within a week, or a few weeks if she's really mad at you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex Girlfriend Insults Me When We Talk

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why an ex girlfriend will do that:

1. She is testing you to see if you can now stand up for yourself in a dominant, but loving way when talking to her

[image: She is testing to see if you can stand up for yourself now]

A woman will often do that if one of her main reasons for breaking up with her man was because he was too emotionally weak and she felt more emotionally dominant than him (i.e. she could control him).

So, to see if heâs changed and stopped being such a push over around her, she might act like a bitch towards him during interactions and insult him when they talk on the phone or in person.

If he gets upset with her and maybe even says things like, *âWhy are you being so mean to me? Why do you always have to insult me when we talk? I know I made some mistakes, but I said I was sorry. What can I do to prove it to you and make you stop treating me this way?*â she will automatically know that heâs still stuck at the same level he was at when she broke up with him. She can then move on without any regrets.

On the other hand, if he handles her insults in a calm, confident, emotionally mature way and even laughs at her (in a loving way) for being so mean to him, she will naturally begin to feel surges of respect for him again.

She will appreciate the fact that he has leveled up since the break up and is now able to approach her bad behavior in a dominant, but loving way.

Heâs not getting angry at her, heâs not being overly domineering and heâs not being nasty in return for her nastiness.

Instead, heâs maintaining his cool and reacting to her nastiness with loving dominance, which shows her that he loves her, is a good man and isnât intimidated or angry by what she is saying or doing.

This makes her respect him.

When she respects him again, she will also begin to feel sexually attracted to him and with those two things in place, reconnecting with her original feelings of love for him then becomes possible.

Of course, a woman wonât only test to see if a guy will stand up to her if he was emotionally weak before.

In some cases, insulting her ex is a womanâs way of checking to see if heâs become a wimp since the break up, especially if heâs been sucking up to her and being extra nice in the hope of getting her back.

Remember: The majority of women want to be with a man who is more emotionally masculine than her and who can take the lead in a relationship, thus allowing her to relax into thinking, talking and behaving like a real woman around him (i.e. feminine, girly, emotional, in love).

If a woman gets the sense that her ex is going to continue being emotionally soft and will let her dominate him just to get her back, she isn't going to feel motivated to give him another chance. So, if you want your ex girlfriend to stop insulting you, the first step you need to take is to stop allowing her to get away with her bad treatment of you.

That doesn't mean you should insult her back or behave in a rude or vulgar way.

Instead, you just need to firmly, yet lovingly put her in her place and let her know that it's not okay for her to talk to you that way.

Then add some humor to ease the tension and turn a difficult situation into an opportunity to spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

From there, you need to take the lead in the ex back process, build up her feelings for you and get her back into a relationship where the dynamic is the way it's supposed to be (i.e. you're the more emotionally dominant one and she's the more submissive one)

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend insults you when you talk is

2. She is trying to get revenge for how you made her feel in the relationship

[image: She is trying to get revenge for how you treated her and made her feel in the relationship]

Sometimes a woman might want to get revenge on her ex for the pain he caused her during the relationship, so she treats him badly and makes a point of insulting him.

She may even say to herself, "He was such a jerk to me. Now is the time to give him a dose of his own medicine and see how he likes it when he gets treated like crap. I bet he's not going to like that!"

Essentially, she's likely hurting and she wants to lash out at him to make him feel what she felt when she was with him and teach him a lesson.

Yet, she's only doing that because the guy is usually letting her get away with her bad treatment of him (e.g. because he thinks he deserves it, he's too afraid to stand up to her in case she cuts off all contact with him, he believes that if he's really nice to her she will eventually stop insulting him).

Yet, that almost never happens.

Instead, she continues being mean to him and he keeps letting her do it to him.

Unfortunately though, that's not going to help with getting her back.

This is why, if you want your ex girlfriend to stop insulting you and start opening back up to you, you need to change how she feels about you.

You need to make her stop thinking about taking revenge on you and begin wanting to give you another chance, because she feels so drawn to you again.

So, focus on using your interactions with her to spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you, regardless of how much she's insulting you.

When she realizes that no matter what she says to upset you or hurt you, you just remain confident and relaxed, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling surges of respect for you again.

When that happens, she will also start to feel attracted to you again and then her walls will naturally come down.

You can then hook up with her sexually one more time.

Sex speeds up the process of reconciling the relationship.

It doesn't fix everything, but it's one part of the ex back process that you need to make sure you include along the way, if you want to get her back for real.

3. She is trying to show you that she no longer cares enough about you to be nice

In most cases, by the time a woman gets to the point where she's breaking up with a guy, it means that she has already disconnected with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, when she interacts with him after the break up, her feelings for him are so switched off, that she doesn't feel the need to be nice to him.

At the back of her mind she may even be thinking things like, "He deserves to be treated this way after how he behaved. I don't owe him anything and I sure don't need to be nice to him. If he doesn't like it, then he should go away and stop contacting me."

Of course a lot of guys don't realize this and they end up feeling hurt and wondering things like, "After everything we shared together, I don't understand why she's being so bitchy to me and insults me when we talk."

The reason is this: If a woman doesn't have strong feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for a guy and he does nothing to actively spark those feelings inside of her, she has nothing to make her feel motivated to be nice to him.

This is why, you can't sit around expecting your ex girlfriend to care that she's insulting you and become nicer to you on her own, because she probably won't.

That is, not until you reawaken her feelings for you, so she starts to feel drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

When you approach the ex back process in that way, your ex girlfriend will naturally stop insulting you, because it won't feel like the right thing for her to do anymore.

She will then drop her guard when she talks to you and you can then confidently build up her feelings for you and guide her back into a relationship with you.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend insults you when you talk is

4. She is testing to see if you will lose control and get angry

[image: She is testing to see if you lose control and get angry]

There are several reasons why a woman might try to trigger a man's anger.

For example: A guy might have anger issues and it's one of the things that led to the break up.

So, to make sure that he's changed before she opens herself back up to him (i.e. because most guys say they have changed to convince their ex to give them another chance), a woman might decide to test him first by pushing all his anger buttons (e.g. insult him, act cold and distant, tell him that she will never forgive him for what he did to her).

[image: She is testing to see if you lose control and get angry]

Depending on his reaction she will know if he's really changed and then decide to try again with him, or move on and make a clean start with someone else.

Another reason why a woman might test a guy to see if he'll get angry or lose control of his emotions, is if he had a bit of a temper before and sheâs worried it can lead to more serious things (e.g. he becomes violent) and she wants to be sure first before she opens herself up to him again.

A third reason why a woman might behave this way is because sheâs actually hoping that her ex will lose it, so she then has another reason not to get back with him.

She can then say something like, âHow can you ask me for another chance after the way you got so angry with me? I would be crazy to get back with you after that. Iâd spend most of my time worrying that if I said something to annoy you, you would lose control and possibly even hurt me. No thanks! Your reaction was the proof I needed to show me that I made the right decision by breaking up with you. So, please donât try to call or see me again.â

So, as you can likely see, itâs very important that you maintain your composure around your ex, regardless of what she says to upset you.

Then, you need to turn her insults into laughter and smiling and begin reactivating her feelings for you, so that she will start to doubt her decision to break up.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend insults you when you talk isâ!

5. She is abusing her position of power now that you want her back so badly

[image: She is abusing her position of power]

When a break up happens and a guy feels mostly responsible, heâs usually very remorseful about it.

As a result, he might take all the blame for what happened on himself and allow his ex to insult him and treat him badly because he secretly feels like he deserves it.

This gives his ex power over him because she feels like sheâs holding all the cards.

She knows that heâs sorry for what happened and she also knows that he wants her back.

This makes her feel emotionally more dominant than him and it causes her to wield that power over him by insulting him and generally being quite bitchy towards him.

At the back of her mind she may even be thinking things like, âLetâs see how much heâs going to suck up to me, even though Iâm being such a bitch to him.â

Of course, the more he lets her flaunt her power over him, the less respect and attraction for him she feels and his chances of getting her back start to fizzle.

This is why, you canât let that happen to you.

The truth is, a woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to, respect and feel proud of, not a guy who is too timid to stand up to her and put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way (i.e. be the man).

So, even though your ex girlfriend might be giving you the impression that she likes being more emotionally dominant than you (i.e. by the enjoyment she gets when she insults you and sees the pain she is causing you), sheâs not going to respect you if you actually fall for that act and then hand all of your power over to her.

Instead, sheâs going to walk all over you, while she secretly looks to find herself a new man that she can fully respect and submit to.

4 Common Mistakes to Avoid When Your Ex Insults You

You can take this situation and turn it around and make your ex want to get back with you if you want to.

However, that will depend on whether you say and do things that reactivate, or extinguish, her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

So, avoid making these mistakes if you want to re-attract her:

1. Seeking pity in response to her insults

A guy will usually do this because he secretly hopes that if he makes her feel sorry for him, not only will she stop insulting him, but she will also want to give him another chance.

Yet, that's not usually what happens.

Instead, a woman's instincts kick in and she begins to perceive him as being wimpy and emotionally weak.

As a result, not only doesn't she want to give him another chance, she also feels contempt for him for being so emotionally sensitive, that she ends up insulting him even more.

Another mistake is

2. Acting like her insults are a big deal

Making a big deal about it every time your ex girlfriend insults you, is the quickest way to make her feel like she has power over you.

As a result, she ends up insulting you even more, to see if you have the balls to stand up to her (in a loving way), or if you're just going to continue letting her get away with it.

Remember: Women are instinctively attracted to the qualities in a man that best display his emotional strength (e.g. confidence, assertiveness, decisiveness, determination, certainty, ballsiness, calmness under pressure), and are turned off by qualities that display emotional weakness (e.g. insecurity, self-doubt, an inability to cope in challenging situations).

So, you have to remind yourself not to take her insults so seriously from now on.

The more you can relax and maintain your confidence and composure when talking with your ex, the more likely it is that she will stop insulting you, because her insults aren't affecting you the way she wants.

Another mistake is

3. Not laughing at her (in a loving way) when she is being like that

In most cases, when a woman insults her ex, his first instinct is to be extra nice to her, or to reason with her, in the hope that this will make her stop.

Yet, that usually makes him seem emotionally wimpy to her, which only adds to her reasons for feeling turned off by him.

As a result, she instinctively insults him even more, rather than less.

Here's the thing

If you don't stand up to your ex for insulting you, in a loving way of course, she will instinctively perceive you as being emotionally weak and she will lose even more respect and attraction for you. Then, rather than open up to the idea of giving you another chance, she will likely be thinking things like, "I'm so glad we broke up. I now realize that he's too much of a wimp for me." So, the next time your ex insults you when you talk, rather than try to be the bigger man and be nice to her despite her bad behavior, use humor instead to put her back in her place in a loving way and show her that you're not going to take that kind of treatment from her anymore. Initially she might be shocked, but even if she doesn't openly show it, she will be feeling attracted to your confidence and emotional strength.

Another mistake is

4. Insulting her back to get even

It's only natural that when a woman is insulting you to your face, you're not going to like it. It may even spark some anger inside of you and you might want to retaliate by insulting her back and saying mean, hurtful things to her too.

Yet, although it might feel right in the moment, due to how much anger you're feeling, it's just not going to help you get her back at all.

It's childish and immature and it leads to nowhere.

Instead, it will only cause her to feel even less respect for you for losing control of your emotions and behaving like a brat with her.

She may then decide to block you on her phone, unfriend you on social media or continually reject your attempts to get her to meet up with you, making it very difficult for you to reactivate her feelings and get her back.

Another mistake is

5. Trying to get her back before re-attracting her to the new and improved you

After a break up, some guys focus more on what they want (i.e. to get their ex back) than on making her feel the way she needs to feel to open back up to the idea of giving her ex another chance.

In cases like that, when a guy is interacting with his ex, he will usually talk about how much he loves her, how he misses her and how he will do anything to get her back.

However, what he doesn't do is spark her sexual and romantic feelings for him again, so she wants to get back together.

Here's the thing though

If you want your ex girlfriend to stop insulting you when you talk and open back up to the idea of being in a relationship with you, then you need to focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, as you interact with her over the phone and in person (not via text).

Make her feel drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her and then, the idea of getting back with you seems like the next, natural step.

On the other hand, if you don't spark her feelings for you first and just focus on trying to convince her to change her mind based on your feelings for her and chances are high, she's not going to change her mind.

What matters to her is how you make her feel right now.

So, focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good every time you interact with her.

Don't make it all about you and your feelings.

Make the feelings mutual (or at least kind of mutual) before you try to do anything else.

If you approach the ex back process in that way, she will naturally stop insulting you and begin wanting to be your girl once again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get an Ex Back Who is Very Different Than You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 tips to help you get her back, despite the differences between you and her:

1. Understand that you really don't have to be the same to be in love

[image: Understand that you really don't have to be the same to be in love]

Right now it might seem that the main reason why you and your ex are no longer together is because you are very different to each other.

You may also believe that being different is a bad thing.

Yet, itâ€™s not.

Although itâ€™s great to be in sync with your woman (i.e. you understand each other and connect on the same level), itâ€™s not necessary to be the same.

As a man you will naturally display characteristics and personality traits that are different to your woman.

For example: If a guy is emotionally dominant, itâ€™s better if his woman isn't like that too.

If she is, they will likely get into a power struggle with each other and this will almost certainly lead to arguments and disagreements.

Another example is if a woman is emotionally sensitive and tends to cry or get upset when sheâ€™s under stress, or even for no reason at all and itâ€™s perfectly fine for her to do that.

However, itâ€™s not okay for her guy to be like that as well.

If he is, she will feel turned off by what she perceives as his emotional weakness and she won't be able to look up to him and respect him as her man.

As you can see, thinking, acting and behaving like your woman isn't the thing that keeps a relationship together for life.

What is?

Mutual respect, attraction and love.

When you have that, both of you don't ever feel the need to break up, regardless of what other people think or say, or how different you are from each other.

Instead, you only want to be together with each other in a committed relationship because thatâ€™s when you feel the most fulfilled, loved and happiest.

Another tip to help you get her back isâ€¦

2. Focus on the 3 most important feelings of all

[image: Focus on the 3 most important feelings of all]

Those feelings are respect, attraction and love.

Here's how you can do it...

The way it works is that if your ex can respect you and feel attracted to you, then she will automatically begin to love you again (romantically, not just as a friend or ex).

It doesn't matter if you are interested in different things, are from different walks of life, or have different ways of living.

Romantic love brings people together like nothing else.

So, focus on making her feel respectful and attracted to you, every time you interact with her.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦

- Maintaining your confidence regardless of what she says or does (e.g. she says something like, "This just won't work. We're too different," or "I'm sorry but our differences are too obvious. We can't be together.")).
- Making her smile and laugh and feel relaxed to be around you again, rather than trying to convince her to get back together again.
- Believing in yourself and in your value to her, rather than worrying about your differences and coming across as insecure and unsure of yourself.
- Being emotionally strong and assertive when talking to her, so she can see that you're not going to crumble just because things seem a bit difficult at the moment.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension between you and her so she wants to release that tension with kissing and sex, rather than playing it safe and failing to make her feel attracted to you.

The better you are at making her feel strong surges of respect and attraction for you, the faster she will reconnect with her feelings of love and consider getting back with you.

So, focus on that.

Another tip to help you get her back isâ€¦

3. Try to adapt to her ways a little more

[image: Try to adapt to her ways a little more]

If a woman is totally in love with a man, she will usually try to adapt to his lifestyle and way of being (e.g. she will spend more time with him and his friends rather than her friends, take an interest in his hobbies, hang out at most of the places he likes).

However, if a woman is your ex, then she's almost certainly not totally in love with you anymore.

So, to give her some comfort about the possibility of a relationship with you, it's important that she can sense that you can now hang with her on her level and understand things that are important to her.

For example...

If you and her are from a different economic background (e.g. she's wealthier than you), then to show her that you're willing to adapt to her a little bit, you can focus more on your career.

If she can see that you're rising through the levels of life and even though you're not wealthy right now, you are on your way to being a successful man sometime in the future, she will begin to feel better about being in a relationship with you.

This isn't about her being shallow and only looking for a rich man, but more about her being able to feel proud of you and show you off to her family and friends (especially if they've been trying to convince her to dump you).

Another example is if your ex is really passionate about a specific hobby (e.g. horse riding, paragliding, kickboxing) that you don't like, but which is a big part of her everyday life.

To show her that you're willing to meet her halfway, you might become more involved in what she's interested in.

Again that doesn't mean you have to do what she does, but if you show more interest (e.g. learn more about her hobby, join her when she goes to events, give it a try at least once), she will naturally feel some respect for you for putting in the effort.

She then becomes more open to interacting with you, which gives you the chance to fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another example is if you're more of a loner than her and don't like to go out much and socialize with other people, while she's a bit of a social butterfly who loves to hang out in big crowds of friends or to go partying.

In a case like this, it's important that you reach a point where she feels like you're putting in the effort to have more fun with her, while at the same time, you don't end up resenting her for making you into someone you don't want to be.

That might mean you agree to go out with her on Saturday nights to any party, club or gathering she chooses, while you do something that's just the two of you on Friday or Sunday nights.

The more your ex can see that you're putting in the effort to adapt to her way of life, the more she will doubt her decision to break up with you.

She may then start thinking things like, "He really is making an effort to change and adjust to my ways. Maybe I should meet him half way and give him another chance."

You can then build her feelings for you and get her back in a relationship that's better than before, because it's now based on mutual respect and understanding.

Another tip to help you get her back is

4. Don't try to force a relationship to happen

[image: Don't try to force a relationship to happen]

Although you might really want to get back with your ex, don't make the mistake of pushing her for a relationship right away.

It should happen naturally, as a result of the 3 main feelings (i.e. respect, attraction and love) being in place first.

So, don't put that kind of pressure on her too early.

Instead, just focus on making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you whenever you and her are interacting over the phone and especially face-to-face.

Let her really want you back, rather than trying to pressure her into making a decision she's not fully prepared for.

In that way, when she's ready give the relationship one more try, it will happen naturally all by itself, because she will really want it too, without you having to push her into it.

So, stop worrying about how different you and her are and how you can make a relationship with her work and concentrate on building up her feelings for you.

The more you do that, the more getting her back into a relationship with you again will become a reality.

Another tip to help you get her back isâ€¦

5. Interact with her and let her feel attracted and curious about the new, more compatible you

The most important thing to do from now on, is interact with your ex and continue sparking her feelings for you.

That means, you canâ€¦t pretend that you only want to be friends now and that youâ€¦re not interested in her sexually and romantically anymore.

It also means, you canâ€¦t just text back and forth with her and expect her to suddenly begin thinking things like, â€œI know we broke up because we are very different from each other, but now Iâ€¦m ready to overlook that and get back with him because I really enjoy his text messages.â€œ

Instead, you need to get her to a meet up with you, so that she can experience the new, more compatible you for herself.

Remember: Your ex is most-likely going to be a bit resistant at first about seeing you again and sheâ€¦s probably going to test you to see if you and her really are more in sync with each other, or if youâ€¦re just pretending to be more like her to get her back.

For example: Imagine a woman broke up with a guy because heâ€¦s too serious and stern, while sheâ€¦s more light-hearted and doesnâ€¦t take things so seriously all the time.

So, to get her to a meet up with him, the guy calls her on the phone and uses humor to break down her defenses and to show her that heâ€¦s more relaxed and open now than he was before.

Naturally she feels drawn to this new, more easy-going side to him, so she agrees to meet up with him in person, because she wants to satisfy her curiosity about the new, more compatible him.

However, she also wants to make sure that how he is now making her feel is real (e.g. respectful, attracted, excited, at ease) and will continue if they get back together again.

At the meet up, she might say something along the lines of, â€œI donâ€¦t know why Iâ€¦m even bothering meeting up with you. We are just too different and if it didnâ€¦t work before, itâ€¦s not going to work again. People just donâ€¦t change,â€œ to see how he will react.

In the past, his serious side would have likely felt upset upon hearing something like that and he may even have tried to use logical explanations to try and convince her.

However, the new version of him knows from experience that that approach just doesnâ€¦t work.

So, this time, he uses humor to break down her defenses and to confirm to her that he really has changed and is now truly more compatible with her.

So, when she says that to him, he laughs and responds with something along the lines of, â€œOf course people change. Iâ€¦ve changed 3 times today. I changed my shoes, my shirt and even my socks! Are you trying to tell me youâ€¦re still wearing the same clothes from yesterday? I canâ€¦t believe it!â€œ and has a laugh with her about that.

She then begins to believe that he really is more relaxed and light-hearted than he used to be.

As a result, she starts to see that they are now more compatible in the ways that are important to her and she then drops her guard and opens herself up to the idea of getting back together again.

In the same way, when your ex becomes curious about the changes in you and how good they make her feel, she then naturally becomes more open to seeing you again to see what happens.

You then have an opportunity to continue building on her feelings so you can get her to the point where she wants to be your girl again.

3 Common Problems to Be Aware of When Trying to Get an Ex Back Who is Very Different Than You

As you may have realized by now, the differences between you and your ex won't matter, when you know what to do to reactivate her feelings for you.

However, there are also some pitfalls which you need to be aware of, so that you can avoid them.

For example: 3 of those are!

1. Seeing her as being too good for you because she is different

For example: A woman might come from a wealthy family, be smarter or seem cooler than her guy.

As a result, he might end up thinking things like, "I don't know how to make things work with her. She's just too good for me. I can't expect her to lower her standards and accept a guy like me. That just wouldn't be fair to her."

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that feeling like he's not good enough for his ex only makes him seem less attractive to her (and to other women).

Why?

A woman likes the idea of being with a man who is always confident and believes in himself no matter what happens.

The more emotionally strong he is, the more she is able to look up to him, respect him, feel attracted to him, love him and feel proud to be his girl.

So, when a guy doesn't feel worthy enough to be with her, rather than make her feel happy that he values her more than he values himself, she feels turned off by his lack of confidence.

So, make sure you're not putting your ex above yourself in terms of value.

When you accept and believe that you are more than good enough to be her man, she will start to see it too and the getting her back becomes easy.

Another pitfall to avoid is!

2. Lowering yourself to show her that you aren't too good for her

For example: A guy might be too good for his ex and try to dumb himself down, act more irresponsibly and swear a lot more to fit in with her and her friends.

He might also act like he doesn't care about success in life, if she happens to not care about it.

Essentially, he's trying to make himself more compatible with her.

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

Initially, lowering yourself for your ex might seem like you and her now have more in common, but eventually, youâll begin to feel resentment towards her for turning you into someone you donât really want to be.

At the same time, she will pick up on the fact that youâre only doing this to please her so that you can get her back and she will feel turned off by what she perceives as your desperation.

The truth is, even though compromise is a key ingredient for a successful relationship, changing your core personality is not.

If you canât be your genuine self with the woman you love, then what you and her share isnât real and it will eventually break you apart; either because you donât like the man youâve become for her, or because she doesnât like it.

Another pitfall to avoid isâ!

3. Not focusing on what matters the most

What matters most are her feelings.

If she has strong sexual and romantic feelings for you, sheâs not going to worry about how different you are compared to her.

She is just going to want to be with you.

Thankfully, feelings can be created.

Her feelings for you are largely based on how you interact with her (e.g. are you confident or nervous, manly or neutral?).

So, just because your ex is very different than you, it doesnât mean you canât change how she feels and get her back.

You can.

You made her want to be with you once before, so you can definitely do it again.

However, for that to happen, you have to focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new you from now on.

When you interact with her in ways that re-spark her feelings for you, everything changes.

She starts to want you again because she is attracted to you and it feels really good to talk to you, be around you, kiss you and have sex with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex Wife Doesn't Want to Talk to Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why:

1. She is trying to create some distance between you, so she can move on

[image: She is trying to create some distance between you, so she can move on]

Sometimes, a woman is unsure how to go about distancing herself from her ex husband so that she can make a new start in her life without him.

For so long he has been a very crucial part of her life and in many ways she has likely been dependent on him (e.g. to take care of the finances for the both of them, to make her feel safe and protected, to contribute to the household expenses, to help out with the chores).

However, now that they are no longer together, she needs to take on all those responsibilities for herself and move on.

It's not that she necessarily wants him back, but it also doesn't mean it's easy for her to let him go.

So, rather than continue keeping him in her life (i.e. by interacting with him over the phone and in person), she may just decide to cut him off completely to make it easier for herself to let him go and move on.

In that way, she hopes that if she creates some distance between them, she can find herself another man and start a new life.

Here's the thing though!

If you don't want that to happen, you need to change your approach to interactions with your ex wife, so she doesn't want to shut you out.

How can you do that?

Rather than getting into serious discussions about the divorce or endless, pointless arguments about what happened with your ex wife, just focus on making her laugh and feel good to be interacting with you again.

For example: If she blames you for something that happened when you were married, rather than react in your usual way (e.g. by defending yourself, throwing all her mistakes in her face too) turn it instead into something you can both laugh about.

Note: That doesn't mean you shouldn't take what she says seriously.

It simply means that you're looking for something positive to laugh about together in stressful moments, rather than getting caught up in feelings of anger and disappointment and ending up arguing and feeling disconnected from each other as a result.

The fact is, if you can make your ex wife smile, laugh and drop her defenses around you, it will make it a lot more difficult for her to stay stuck on the idea of not talking to you anymore.

She may then begin thinking things like, "Okay, maybe cutting him out of my life completely is a harsh step. After all, he is still my ex husband and we have a shared history together."

So, don't waste time trying to convince your ex wife to reconsider her decision to not talk to you anymore.

Instead, make her change her mind by re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you, so she wants to keep you in her life.

Another possible reason why your ex wife doesn't want to talk to you is

2. You are trying to talk to her via text

[image: You are trying to talk to her via text]

It's understandable that if your ex wife is refusing to talk to you over the phone or meet up with you in person, you may have resorted to interacting with her via text, just to get through to her.

However, here's the thing

Although texting is fine if you have something quick to say to her, lengthy discussions shouldn't happen via text, especially if they are about the marriage, the kids or other in depth topics.

Here's why

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, anything he says to her via text will likely annoy her, because she's feeling closed off towards him.

So, rather than look at what he's texting with an open mind, she instead ends up thinking things like, "This is so typical of him! He wants to talk about serious things via text, rather than man up and look me in the eye while he's doing it. It's just another sign that this divorce was the best decision I made."

She then becomes more convinced that she doesn't want to talk to him anymore.

She feels turned off because he's putting way too much effort into typing long, detailed texts and trying to work through relationship problems via messages.

Basically, when a guy uses texting as his main method of communicating with his ex wife, it only highlights to her that he can't handle the situation like a real man.

She then pushes him away and refuses to talk to him anymore.

So, if you want to get your ex wife to not only respond to your texts, but also want to interact with you over the phone and in person, make sure that you only text her short messages that will make her smile or laugh.

However, don't hide behind texts.

Instead, start reactivating your ex wife's feelings of respect and attraction for you on a phone call and then follow through with a meet up, where she can see for herself that you really are a very different man from the one she divorced.

That's the real, fast, manly way to get a woman back, regardless of whether she's an ex girlfriend or an ex wife.

When you make her have feelings for you again in person and she then begins to reconnect with her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you again, she naturally wants to continue talking to you and seeing you.

However, when you hide behind texts, it just doesn't make a woman feel motivated to stay in touch with you.

Another possible reason why your ex wife doesn't want to talk to you is

3. She can see that you still don't understand what really turned her off, or you haven't yet changed it

[image: She can see that you still don't understand what really turned her off, or you haven't yet changed it]

Quite often a guy will attempt to stay in his ex wife's life in the hope that she will eventually reconnect with her lost feelings of love for him and give him another chance.

Although this is quite possible, the problem arises when the guy doesn't know what aspects of his thinking, behavior and attitude turned her off in the first place, so he continues to make the same attraction mistakes as before while he tries to get her back

So, while he's hoping that staying in touch with his ex wife is the key to finally getting her back, she's likely thinking things like, â€œWhy won't he leave me alone? After all, our divorce is final and it's better for both of us if we go our separate ways and try to make a fresh start. Maybe if he had changed or improved a little bit since we broke up, I would have wanted to at least remain friends with him, but seeing as he's still stuck at the same level he was at when we divorced, I don't see any point to keeping him in my life. He's just holding me back and preventing me from moving on.â€

This is why, if you want your ex wife to remain open to interacting with you, you need to show her that you understood her real, secret reasons for divorcing you and have already taken steps to improve some of those things about yourself.

That doesn't mean you have to be perfect in order for your ex wife to want to remain a part of your life, it just means you need to show her that some definite, positive changes have been made.

By the way!

If you're unsure of what may have caused your ex wife to want to get divorced, here are some of the things that can turn a woman off about her husband!

For example:

He stopped being the confident, emotionally strong man she married and has become very insecure, emotionally sensitive and unsure of himself, resulting in her having to be the emotionally stronger one and take care of him (e.g. by boosting his ego, encouraging him to take more risks in his life, pushing him to try new things).

Although he initially seemed to have a purpose and direction in life, she's now realized that it was all an act and that he never actually takes steps towards accomplishing his goals and ambitions. He's all talk and no action.

She fell in love with him at the start because he didn't need her and it was fun to chase him, but he ended up changing completely and becoming a needy, clingy husband.

He started off being a nice guy who could stand up for himself, but over time he became wimpy and submissive around her. He allowed her to get away with bad behavior, which made her feel unsafe about his ability to handle other challenging people in life (e.g. at work, friends, family).

He started off being loving and attentive towards her, but as the marriage progressed, he began to take more and more advantage of her (e.g. didn't pull his weight in the home, failed to show appreciation for her efforts to look good for him, didn't notice all the nice things she did for him).

Before they got married he made promises to her (e.g. to buy a house, to go traveling, to focus on their careers for the first few years before having children, that he would provide for both of them so that she could finish her studies), but over time she realized that he had no intention of keeping his word to her.

At the beginning of the marriage he treated her like a sexy, desirable woman that he couldn't get enough of, however, over time the spark died and he started to treat her like a friend or roommate.

By understanding and then changing the things that really matter to her, your ex wife will be able to begin feeling respect for you again.

When she starts to respect you, she will also feel attracted to you and with those two very important emotions in place, reconnecting with her feelings of love won't be very far behind.

Another possible reason why your ex wife doesn't want to talk to you is

4. She is tired of giving in and letting you walk all over her

[image: She is tired of giving in and letting you walk all over her]

Sometimes, a guy will continue to treat his ex wife like they're still married.

For example: He might

- Ask her to run errands for him (e.g. fetch his suits because the cleaners are on her way home from work, buy a few things for him as well when she goes grocery shopping for herself).
- Show up at her house with his dirty laundry and ask her to wash it for him by saying that his washing machine is broken, or that it will only be a one time thing, or because he can never do it as well as she does.
- Call her all the time to ask her to help him find random things in the house (e.g. various documents, the extra washing powder, his spare car keys, the instructions on how to use the dryer/microwave oven/vacuum cleaner).
- Ask her to still host business dinners for him, entertain friends or take care of obligations they have with family or friends on his behalf.

Although a woman might initially give in and help out where she can (after all they were married and she understands that it's likely difficult for him to adjust to her not being around and doing all the things she used to do for him), if she gets a sense that he's using her and subconsciously still acting like they are married, she will almost certainly get fed up.

In a case like that, she may decide to cut him off completely and refuse to talk to him, so that she can get on with recovering from the divorce and moving on.

Here's the thing

If you've been taking advantage of your ex wife (e.g. because you miss her and it feels comforting when she still does the things she used to do for you), it's time for that to stop.

If you want her back, you need to focus on reactivating her feelings for you, rather than walking all over her and taking advantage of her good nature.

Only when she's feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her, will she also be happy to help you out, not before.

Another possible reason why your ex wife doesn't want to talk to you is

5. She has heard it all before and doesn't believe you this time

By the time a divorce goes through, a couple will likely have had several fights and arguments and possibly even a separation.

So, the woman will have likely heard all her guy's promises and excuses to change before.

This is why, if after the divorce the guy continues to say things like, "Please give me a chance to make things right between us. I know I really stuffed up, but I've truly learned my lesson now. I promise that things will be different if you just give me one more chance. I really still love you and I don't want to let you go," rather than feel happy that there's still a chance of reviving her marriage, she simply won't fall for it, because she's likely heard it, or something similar, before.

As a result, she may decide to cut him out of her life completely (especially if they don't have children or other binding obligations together) and refuse to talk to him or see him in person.

So, what can a guy do in a situation like that?

Firstly, he needs to take steps in actually changing and improving some of the things that caused the break up in the first place (e.g. if he was reckless and rash before, he's now more responsible and grounded, if he was lazy and lacked ambition before, he's now more focused and is actively pursuing his big goals in life, if he was too clingy and needy before, he's now emotionally independent and making progress and having fun in his life without her).

Then, he needs to interact with her over the phone and especially in person and let her pick up on the changes.

He doesn't tell her that he's changed.

He lets her pick up on it herself.

Women are very good at noticing the subtle changes in the behavior of men, which indicate a man's confidence, emotional masculinity and self-esteem, because it naturally comes through in his attitude and in how he talks to her, what he says and how he reacts to what she says and does, without him having to say anything to her about it.

So, don't bother trying to convince your ex to give you another chance by making promises to her that things will be different this time, or try to detail all the little things you've changed about yourself to hopefully hear her say, "Wow! I'm so impressed. Okay, you can have another chance now."

Instead, just be the new, improved, more confident and emotionally strong version of yourself when you talk to her and she will inevitably pick up on it.

However, even when she gets to the point where she can see that you really have changed and is willing to interact with you more and more, you shouldn't be asking her to get back together again.

Remember: A relationship is the final step of the ex back process, not the first.

That means, before even getting to the point where you suggest having a relationship again, you have to first re-attract her and get to a kiss and then sex.

Focus on that and a relationship will naturally begin to be discussed or considered after that.

4 Common Mistakes to Be Aware of When Interacting With Your Ex Wife From Now On

Just because your ex wife currently doesn't want to talk to you, it doesn't mean she will feel that way after you've reactivated some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

This is why, you need to make sure that every time you interact with her from now on, you're turning her on, rather than turning her off.

That means, you can't be making any of the following mistakes:

1. Always trying to have serious conversations with her about the relationship

[image: Always trying to have serious conversations with her about the relationship]

Right now, you and your ex wife have gone likely being going through the long and often difficult process of breaking up a marriage (i.e. getting separated or going through divorce proceedings).

As a result, your ex wife may feel as though everything that needed to be discussed has already been discussed and that there's nothing left to talk about.

So, if you continue to try and have serious conversations with her about the relationship, how sorry you are about hurting her and how you wish things could have worked out differently, without first changing how she currently feels about you (e.g. like it's all your fault), rather than make her open back up to you, it will just highlight to her all the reasons why you're divorced.

Here's the thing!

At this point in the ex back process, you need to focus on making your interactions with your ex wife feel as fun, enjoyable and stress free as possible.

It's not about constantly cracking jokes around her and not taking things seriously.

Instead, it's simply about not making every conversation you have with her about the relationship.

When she's smiling, laughing and enjoying being in your presence again, it becomes difficult for her to keep thinking, "I don't want to talk to him anymore. I want him out of my life."

Instead, she drops her guard and opens up to at least being friends for now and you can then build up her feelings for you and get her back.

Another mistake you shouldn't be making is!

2. Asking for another chance, even though you haven't reactivated her romantic feelings

[image: Just give me another chance, please. I love you...]

Even though you might still have feelings for your ex wife and want her back, chances are, she doesn't currently feel the same way.

The truth is, for a relationship to get back together, there needs to be mutual feelings.

It doesn't have to be exactly mutual, but your ex wife does need to still have some positive feelings for you.

If you try to get her back when she doesn't, she's naturally not going to want to talk to you or see you anymore.

She's going to be saying, â€œNo! I'm not interested. Why are you being like this? We're divorced for a reason and you need to accept that and leave me alone.â€

So, if you want another chance with your ex wife, you need to re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you first.

You don't have to be perfect to re-attract her, just better.

Then, when you interact with her again and she sees that you're at a different level than you were when you and her were married, her walls will naturally begin to come down.

Even if initially she tries to stop herself from caring about you again, she won't be able to stop herself from imagining what being the wife of the new you would be like.

She then opens back up to talking to you again and seeing you in person and you can then build up her feelings and make a fresh start together.

Another mistake you shouldn't be making is

3. Making her feel like she is obligated to talk to you because of your history together

Sometimes, a guy makes the assumption that because him and his ex wife were married, she owes it to him to stay in touch.

At the back of his mind he may even be thinking things like, â€œI don't know why she's being like this. She was my wife and even though things didn't work out between us, she can't just stop talking to me. That's not right. After all we've been through, she can't just turn her back on me like this. What we had was big and now we're a part of each other's lives forever, whether she wants that or not. That's just how it is.â€

Yet, that's not how it works.

What you and your wife had is in the past now and unless you and her have children together, or are business partners or something similar, if she doesn't want to keep you in her life, she doesn't have to.

So, if you want your ex wife to continue talking to you so that you can get her back, stop demanding it and start making her feel like she wants to.

In other words, don't make interactions with her feel like a pain in the butt.

Instead, make her laugh and smile when you're interacting with her.

Then, she will automatically want to keep you in her life because she feels good when talking to you, not because she has to, based on your history together.

Another mistake you shouldn't be making is

4. Sucking up to her in conversation

In some cases, after a divorce, a guy might act super nice and sweet to his ex wife, in the hope that she will feel bad about not wanting to talk to him anymore.

Unfortunately though, rather than that happening, his sucking up to her actually results in her feeling annoyed by his lack of confidence and balls.

In her eyes, he no longer has the ability to be the man in the relationship.

He is essentially handing over all of his power to her in the hope that she is nice to him and takes pity on him.

That's not enjoyable for a woman.

She wants him to be good to her, but not to lower himself as a way of hopefully gaining her pity.

As a result, she loses even more respect for him and feels determined to cut him out of her life for real.

So, don't bother sucking up to your ex wife to make her feel pity for not wanting to talk to you.

Instead, focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you, so she naturally wants to talk to you and see you again.

You can then make her fall in love with the new and improved you and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Was the Rebound, I Got Dumped and I Want Her Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 things you should do right now to begin the process of getting her back:

1. Get clear on what made you seem like an appealing rebound to her, but not an appealing lifetime relationship

[image: Why she wanted you for a rebound, but not for the long term]

Sometimes, a woman might come out of a serious relationship with a guy and immediately get into another relationship to help her get over the pain of the break up.

Yet, quite often, her rebound guy is not someone she perceives as being her ideal man.

Instead, he is usually the kind of guy who different to her ex.

For example: If a woman's ex was very confident in his attractiveness as a man and it caused him to flirt with other women in front of her, she may decide to now date a guy who is a bit more insecure and who feels like he's lucky to have her as his girl.

In this way, she will be able to feel safe with him, knowing that he would never dump her for another woman.

Yet, deep down she knows that being with an insecure guy who lets her get her way all the time, isn't what she really wants in the long-term.

[image: Why she wanted you for a rebound, but not for the long term]

He's great for the time-being while she heals and gets over the pain her ex caused her, but when it comes to settling down and committing to being with one guy for life, she knows that she wants a guy who is confident, self-assured as well as loyal and devoted only to her.

This is why, if you want your ex back, you need to get clear on what it was about you that she felt attracted to versus her ex and why it wasn't what she wanted for life.

For example: Some of the things that most women look for in a man they want to settle down with are:

- He is kind, loving and devoted to her, but he doesn't let her walk all over him and get away with being disrespectful towards him or behaving badly around him.
- He is confident and self-assured, but he doesn't become insecure and starts doubting himself if her or anyone else doesn't approve of him.
- He believes in himself and in his attractiveness to her and to other women, but he doesn't have a wandering eye or make her feel like she's not good enough for him.
- He is easy-going, relaxed and playful, but he also has a plan for his life (and by association hers) that he's actively pursuing.
- He likes to be around her and spend time with her, but he also has his own interests, hobbies and friends that he likes to hang out with.
- He is the boss in the relationship and makes most of the decisions for the both of them, but he also values her ideas and opinions and lets her lead when appropriate.
- She is also his friend in the relationship, but he makes sure that she feels like a sexy, desirable woman when sheâs with him.

- He feels attracted to her and loves her, but he also knows that in order for her to want to stay with him for life, the attraction between them needs to be mutual.

These are just a few of the things that a woman looks out for in her relationship with a man.

When you discover where you went wrong, you can then quickly make some attractive adjustments to yourself and interact with your ex to re-attract her.

She will then be able to sense the changes in you simply by listening to how you talk and by observing your body language.

When she does, she will automatically feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and open back up to at least talking to you over the phone and seeing you in person more often, to explore those feelings.

Then, when she realizes that you really are everything she ever wanted in a man and more, she will naturally want to get back together again right away, before some other woman snatches you up.

The next thing you can do to get her back isâ!

2. Quickly improve on your weaknesses

By first getting clear on what made you seem like an appealing rebound to your ex, but not an appealing boyfriend/husband in a lifetime relationship, youâre likely to have a better idea of where you came up a bit short.

Thatâs actually a good thing and nothing to beat yourself up about.

You now have a chance to improve and transform yourself into an even better man than you already are.

The main thing is that you understand and improve on your weaknesses.

For example: Some of the things you can improve in yourself areâ!

- Become more confident and self-assured.
- Believe more in yourself and in your value to her.
- ImproveÂ your ability to flirt and create sexual tension between you and her.
- Be more manly in your attitude, thinking, behavior and conversation style.
- Improve your ability to make her feel like an attractive, desirable woman in your presence, rather than making her feel like a friend.
- Become more emotionally independent and get to the point where you are happy with or without her.
- Be a good guy, but stop being a pushover around her and allow her to dominate you.
- Be more fun-loving and carefree, while still maintaining your emotional maturity.
- Be a leader when it comes to your relationship with her, rather than waiting around for her to give you guidance and direction.

The more emotionally attractive you become (e.g. emotionally strong, emotionally masculine, confident, driven, emotionally independent, emotionally mature), the more your ex will begin to look at you as being someone she can be with in the long-term.

When that happens, she wonât be able to resist giving you another chance because interacting with you feels so good to her.

The next thing you can do to get her back isâ€¦!

3. Don't overlook the things she claimed to NOT like about her ex

[image: Don't overlook the things she claimed to not like about her ex]

Just because a woman says she doesn't like something about a guy, it doesn't mean she's actually looking for the complete opposite in her next man.

For example: Sometimes a woman will break up with a guy because he didn't treat her very well. Naturally, she didn't like that about him, but she did like his confidence and manly attitude and behavior.

So, even though she may have complained about him being an asshole, that doesn't mean she is looking for a sweet, good boy type of guy to take his place.

Instead, she is looking for a man who is confident and manly, but is also a good guy.

Based on that, what are the things your ex woman hated about her ex?

Did you try to be the complete opposite of that to please her?

For example:

- If she said her ex was too possessive and jealous, did you try to be too laid back, thus making her feel like you didn't really care that much about her?
- If she said her ex was too emotionally independent and did everything without her, did you compensate for that by spending all your time with her and making her feel smothered and stifled as a result?
- If she complained that her ex wasn't emotionally open enough and never told her how he felt about her, did you go the opposite way by proclaiming your love for her all the time, turning her off in the process by what she perceived as your emotional wimpiness?
- If she talked about how her ex always made the decisions in the relationship without ever asking her for her insights or opinions, did you decide to let her call all the shots to make her happy and ended up making her feel more emotionally dominant than you?
- If she whined about how her ex always wanted to have sex with her to the point where she felt too much like a piece of meat, did you then treat her more like a friend to show her that you like her as a person, extinguishing the spark of attraction between you as a result?

Once you understand what your ex is really looking for in a guy, you can easily change and give her those things.

When she experiences some of these changes for herself, over the phone and especially in person, she will realize that you really are the man she has been looking for after all.

She will then automatically reconnect with some of her sexual and romantic feelings for you and become open to at least interacting with you more often to see where things go.

The next thing you can do to get her back isâ€¦!

4. Understand what would make her want to give you another chance

[image: Understand what would want to make her give you another chance]

Sometimes, when a rebound guy gets dumped, he might start thinking things like, “Why did this happen? What did I do wrong? She always said that I was a nice guy and that she liked that about me, so it must be something else. Maybe, Iâ€™m just not good looking/rich/successful enough. When I think about her ex, the one thing that stands out about him is that he was really muscular and enjoyed going to the gym a lot/drove a really fancy car/was a successful business man. Maybe that is what was missing in me. Maybe I need to improve myself in those areas to re-attract her. Then, when she sees that Iâ€™m not only a nice guy, I also look good/have more money/have a better job, she will want me back again.”

He might then put in a lot of effort into improving himself externally as a way of getting his ex back. Yet, although a woman might appreciate it that heâ€™s improved himself physically, or has made some progress in his career, in most cases, itâ€™s not going to change her mind about dumping him. Why?

Most women are more excited by a manâ€™s ability to attract them emotionally during interactions, than they are to other more superficial things such as his appearance, money or status.

So, although those things (appearance, money or status) can initially attract a womanâ€™s attention, what really attracts her and makes her want to stay with a guy for the long term is how he makes her feel as he talks to her and spends time with her.

This is why, running out and changing things about yourself like your appearance, or even your car, to impress your ex and hopefully get her back is usually just going to be a waste of your time.

What really counts is your emotional attractiveness.

When you are emotionally attractive on the inside (i.e. confident, self-assured, emotionally masculine, assertive, charming) it will automatically come through on the outside for her to see and feel attracted to.

She will feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for the real you (i.e. the man you are inside, not your muscles, car or money).

Suddenly, you seem like the right guy for her and she wants to give you another chance because she feels that if she doesnâ€™t, she may end up regretting it for the rest of her life.

3 Common Mistakes That Rebound Guys Make When Trying to Get Her Back

It doesnâ€™t matter that you were her rebound and she dumped you.

What matters is what you do from now on to get her back.

Are you going to be saying and doing the types of things that will re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you and show her that thereâ€™s more to you than she originally thought, or are you going to be turning her off and convincing her even more that she made the right decision to break up with you?

Itâ€™s all up to you.

However, if you want to get her back, make sure you don't make any of the following attraction mistakes that guys make in situations like yours:

1. Trying to appeal to her in all the wrong ways

For example: A woman might initially be attracted to her rebound guy because of his bad boy attitude.

However, once she dumped him, he turned into a needy, clingy guy who seemed lost without her.

In his mind, he likely thought that she would feel flattered to see how important she was to him and that he loves her and needs her to be happy in his life.

Yet, that usually has the complete opposite effect.

Rather than make a woman think, "Wow, I never realized how important I was to him. Maybe he was the right guy for me after all," she instead feels turned off by what she perceives as emotional weakness and thinks something along the lines of, "I now see that my instincts about him were right. He wasn't really as emotionally strong as I thought he was. Instead, he's actually quite wimpy and needy. I was right to dump him. He's definitely not the man for me!"

This is why, it's very important that if you want to re-attract your ex, you don't suddenly change your core personality and start behaving in ways that actually turn her off (e.g. being needy, insecure), rather than on.

What you need to be doing is adding to your good points not taking away from them.

So, if you were a good guy to her, but a bit unsure of yourself, don't try to be extra nice and sweet to her now to get her back.

Instead, get more confident and self-assured, while still maintaining your niceness.

If you and her got on well together, don't pretend that you only want to be her friend now.

Instead, be friends with her, but also focus on sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you during interactions.

When you give her the attraction experience she really wants, she will begin seeing you as more than her rebound and you can then get her back and keep her.

Another mistake that some guys make in a situation like yours is

2. Writing a letter or email to explain how much she means to him

Although this might seem like a good idea, it usually backfires for two main reasons.

Firstly, when a woman has lost touch with her feelings for a guy, him telling her how much she means to him isn't something she cares about or wants to hear.

The feelings aren't mutual so it doesn't matter to her what he feels or what he wants.

Secondly, a letter or email is just a bunch of words on a screen or a piece of paper.

It doesn't give her any firsthand, real life evidence that he's changed.

So, in most cases, because she can't hear his confidence in the tonality of his voice, or see it in his body language, she just assumes that he's still the same guy she broke up with (e.g. wimpy, submissive, easily pushed around).

This is why itâ€™s never a good idea to hide behind letters or e-mails with an ex woman.

If you want to convince your ex to feel the same way you do about her, the best way to go about it is by letting her fully experience the new, improved you in person.

When she can see your body language and the way you maintain your confidence around her, regardless of what she says or does to mess with your head (e.g. sheâ€™s cold and aloof, tells you she just canâ€™t love you), she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling some respect for the new and improved you.

When that happens, she also starts to feel attracted again.

From there, her defenses come down and then, even if she tries to fight it, she canâ€™t stop herself from feeling drawn to you again and wanting to at least hang out with you more to see how she feels.

Another mistake that some guys make in a situation like yours isâ€¦

3. Not changing his approach to attraction

For example: A woman might have dumped her rebound guy because she got bored of him.

Basically, he was just too nice and sweet for her and she never felt like she had to do anything to impress him or be a good woman to him.

He always accepted her no matter how badly she behaved or how she treated him.

Yet, he is behaving like that as he tries to get her back.

Regardless of whether sheâ€™s being pleasant towards him, or a cold, unfriendly bitch, he continues to be nice and sweet to her.

As result, she continues to feel turned off by him and doesnâ€™t want to give him another chance.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, you need to change your approach and do what actually works.

What works is offering her a new and improved attraction experience (e.g. instead of putting up with her bad behavior like you used to, you stand up to her and put her back in her place in a loving but assertive manner, instead of being needy and clingy, you start being a truly confident man around her who loves her and wants her, but who doesnâ€™t need her).

The more that you give her the kind of attraction experience she always wanted from you, but never got, the more she feels like she just has to give you another chance, or else she might end up regretting it later on.

You can then get her back and get on with enjoying an amazing relationship together.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

4 Tips For Rekindling a Lost Love

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 tips to help you rekindle the love between you and her, so you can get her back into a relationship once again:

1. Get clear on why the love faded away between you and her

[image: Get clear on why the love faded away between you and her]

The main thing that will cause a woman's love for her man to fade away is when he stops acting and behaving in ways that make her feel respect and attraction.

For example: He stops being confident and becomes insecure and needy, he stops leading in the relationship like a real man and instead expects her to make all the decisions for the both of them, he stops making her feel loved and appreciated and begins taking her for granted instead.

So, if the guy then wants to rekindle the lost love, his first step needs to be to get clear on what aspects of his thinking and behavior turned his ex off in the first place and then take action to improve those things about himself.

Then, when he interacts with her and she notices that he's transformed himself into a better man, even if she initially tries to fight it, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to him again.

How about you?

Do you understand the secret, subtle or deeper reasons why your ex's love for you faded away?

If you're not quite sure, here are some questions to ask yourself to gain clarity:

- Did you pretty much always maintain your confidence with her, or did you slowly begin to feel insecure about yourself and your value to her?
- Did you remain emotionally strong and independent in the relationship, or did you end up becoming too clingy, needy, jealous or possessive?
- Were you the more emotionally dominant one in the relationship, or did you hand all your power over to her and allowed her to boss you around?
- Did you make her feel strong sparks of attraction for you by being emotionally masculine around her, or did you make her feel more like a friend or roommate when she was with you?
- Was she able to look up to you, respect you and feel proud of you as her man because you were rising through the levels of life with determination and focus, or did she feel a bit embarrassed by you because you were just drifting through life?
- Did you and her have the same relationship goals (e.g. to move in together, buy a house, get married, start a family), or did you want different things?

When you know where you went wrong, focus on improving those things about yourself.

Then, let your ex experience the new you during interactions.

When she sees that you're now behaving and responding in completely different ways to the way she remembers, her guard will naturally come down and she will start thinking of you in a more positive light.

When that happens, she will be more receptive and she will feel open to the idea of exploring her new feelings of attraction for you again to see if you and her can rekindle your lost love.

The next thing you can do to get her back is toâ€¦!

2. Understand that both of you will most likely have changed a lot as people

[image: Understand that both of you will have likely changed a lot as people]

A lot can happen after a couple breaks up.

Whether itâ€™s for a short time or a long time spent apart, they will naturally change in many ways.

For example: Some of the ways that a woman might change areâ€¦!

- She dates other guys, has casual sex, or even falls in love with another guy and gets into a relationship with him, so sheâ€™s a lot more experienced with relationships and break ups.
- She becomes more emotionally mature than she was before the break up and is now not interested in the same things as before (e.g. she used to like to party and live a carefree life and now she is more serious and focused on her studies or career).
- She survives an illness, the death of a loved one, or some other challenging situation on her own and becomes emotionally stronger because of it.
- She goes traveling, interacts with people of different cultures and that changes her at a deep level.
- She gets a promotion at work with a lot more money, which then changes other things in her life like where she lives, the types of places she hangs out at, her wardrobe and possibly even the people she makes friends with.
- She dates several different guys and she learns more about what she likes and doesnâ€™t like in a man.

Of course, the changes are almost never one-sided and the guy will also change.

Some of the ways he might do that areâ€¦!

- He realizes where he went wrong in the relationship with his woman and uses the time apart to transform himself into a better man (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more emotionally masculine, more emotionally mature). As a result, he becomes more attractive to women and can now pick any woman he wants rather than settle for what he can get.
- He dates other women and even gets into another relationship and realizes that no other woman compares to his ex.
- He dates other women and learns about what he really wants in a woman.
- He closes himself off after the break up because he canâ€™t deal with the pain of losing his woman and becomes a loner.
- He focuses on pursuing and achieving his biggest goals in life and changes the direction of his life for the better.

As you can see, you and your ex will likely have both changed in many different ways since you broke up.

That means, you will have to get to know each other all over again in a whole different way.

You can't just assume things will be the same just because you knew each other before.

So, when you interact with your ex from now on, focus on making her fall in love with the man you are now, rather than letting her fall back to thinking of you the way you used to be.

The more she enjoys being around you, the more her defenses will start to fade away.

She will then open up to getting back with you, or at least spending more time with you to see what happens from there.

The next thing you can do to rekindle your lost love is to

3. Prepare to create a new spark of romantic attraction inside of her when you interact

[image: Prepare to make her feel a new spark of romantic attraction]

If you interact with your ex in a way that doesn't make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you (e.g. sucking up to her, acting like just a friend, letting her call all the shots), she's likely just going to perceive you as being only a friend at best, or feel like you're wasting her time and that you having nothing in common anymore, at worst.

This is why, it's very important that you prepare yourself to get her back.

For example: Some of the things that will spark her feelings for you during interactions and make her want to be your girl again are

- Showing her by way of your attitude, behavior, conversation style and actions that you have already fixed some of the issues that were turning her off before (e.g. if you were insecure before, you're now more confident and believe in your value as a man, if you were too nice with her before and allowed her to push you around, you're more assertive towards her now, if you were too emotionally dependent on her before, you now show her that you are happy and moving forward in your life with or without her).
- Reacting differently to what she says and does, (e.g. if she dominated you with her confident personality, you now lovingly stand your ground with her when she tries to bully you, if she previously made you feel upset or angry when she created unnecessary drama, you now relax and adoringly laugh at her attempts to fluster you).
- Making her feel feminine and girly in your presence by being an emotionally masculine man around her, rather than being extra nice or neutral.
- Flirting with her and creating sexual tension between you and her, rather than pretending you're no longer interested in having a relationship with her.

When you interact with her and she can see that you've become the kind of man she always wanted you to be (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more emotionally masculine, more emotionally independent, assertive) she automatically begins to feel respect for you again.

When she respects you, she also starts to feel attracted again and with those two things in place, she can reconnect with the love as well.

Her guard naturally comes down and she becomes open to seeing what happens from there.

The next thing you can do to rekindle your lost love is to

4. Get in touch with her and make it happen

[image: Get in touch with her and make it happen]

To effectively rekindle the love between you and your ex, you have to be interacting with her.

However, don't fall into the habit of texting your ex or sending her messages via social media, without ever working up the courage to call her, or see her in person.

You might think that it's best to take things slowly because you don't want to scare her off.

You may even be hoping that she will take the lead and let you know when she's ready to talk to you over the phone or see you again.

However, a woman will rarely make the first move with an ex she no longer loves.

Instead, she will usually message or text back and forth for a while and when she realizes that it's going nowhere, she will either stop responding to him altogether, or assume they're texting friends now and focus on moving on with a new man in her real life.

So, if you want to get your ex back, it's very important that you call her over the phone, spark some of her feelings for you and then arrange a meet up with her.

For example: Imagine you're on a call with your ex and you've been making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

You can then say something along the lines of, “Hey, it's been great talking again. It's good to see that we can still have a laugh together even though we're broken up. Let's do this in person sometime this week and catch up for a quick cup of coffee to say hello as friends. Of course, it's not about us getting back together. It's just a catch up to say hello. I'm free in Wednesday and Thursday afternoon, how about you?”

If you've created enough feelings of respect and attraction inside of her during the phone call (i.e. by being confident, flirting with her, using humor), she will likely agree to meet up with you.

However, if she doesn't say “Yes, right away,” don't worry about it.

Most women are usually a bit resistant when it comes to meeting up with an ex guy, because they don't want to come across as being too easy, or are afraid of getting hurt again (e.g. in case you get her back and then dump her to get revenge on her for breaking up with you in the first place).

So, just maintain your confidence and say something like, “Hey, it's just a quick cup of coffee between two friends. It's no big deal and no strings attached. So, how about it? I'll be busy on Monday and Tuesday. Which days this week are you free?”

She will then most likely say “Yes,” and you can go ahead and make plans to meet up with her at a time that suits you both.

By the way!

Make sure that when you see her again, you continue to make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

Don't meet up with her and just have a nice, friendly chat.

[image: Meet up with her and turn on the charm]

You've got to turn on the charm and make her feel like she's been missing out by not being with you anymore.

If you do that, she will naturally begin to open up and you will get her back pretty quickly and easily.

Avoid the Following Mistakes If You Want to Rekindle the Love Faster and Easier

Getting an ex woman to fall in love with you again isn't as difficult as you might think.

It all depends on your approach.

When you interact with her and say and do things that spark her feelings for you, she naturally starts to feel surges of respect, attraction and love for you again.

However, if your interactions turn her off, her feelings for you will remain buried.

So, to make her love you again, make sure you don't make any of the following mistakes:

1. Not making the feelings mutual before you even hint at a possible relationship

[image: Not making the feelings mutual before you hint at a possible relationship]

Sometimes, a guy might reach out to an ex via email, text, letter or social media and explain how he feels about her, his regrets about the relationship and how good it would be to catch up.

However, if the woman didn't feel attracted to him when she broke up with him, she likely still feels the same way and she won't feel very excited about his sudden declaration of love.

This is why, you need to do things one step at a time.

Attraction comes first, then everything else follows on from there.

It can't just be about you loving her and wanting her back.

Instead, she has to feel like she wants you back for her own reasons (e.g. she doesn't believe another guy can make her feel the way you do, she will regret it if she doesn't give you one more chance).

You can make her feel that way by reawakening her sexual and romantic feelings during interactions (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, flirting with her to create a sexual vibe, showing her you're a new man now) and then not pushing for a relationship.

She feels attracted to you again and notices that you're not trying to get her back.

As a result, she begins to worry about losing you for real this time (i.e. because you can easily attract another woman), so she becomes open to giving the relationship another try.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Coming across as self doubting when he communicates with her

Almost nothing kills a woman's feelings for a guy faster than a lack of confidence.

He can be really good looking, rich and successful, but if he's constantly unsure of himself and doesn't believe in his attractiveness and value as a man, he's not going to be attractive to most women.

So, if he then interacts with his ex and he struggles to maintain his confidence with her, especially when she tests him by being cold, disinterested and offish towards him, she will feel turned off by what she perceives as his emotional weakness.

Then, rather than want to give him another chance, she will likely make all kinds of excuses to discourage him from pursuing her (e.g. â€œIâ€™m seeing someone else now,â€ or â€œI donâ€™t want to be in a relationship with anyone at the moment,â€ or â€œI need to concentrate on my studies/work/career, so I canâ€™t afford to get distractedâ€).

Of course, if the guy is truly self doubting, he will take that as a sign that she doesnâ€™t want him and he will give up on getting her back, potentially missing out on being with the love of his life.

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

From now on, rather than filling your head with doubts and negative self-talk, focus instead on imagining every conversation that you have with your ex going well.

Picture her smiling, laughing and feeling good to be talking to you because you are being confident and self-assured.

The more you do that, the more it becomes the truth, even if initially it was only a pretence.

Then, when you interact with you ex and she notices how sure of yourself you are, she will naturally start to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new, emotionally strong, confident version of you.

Then, reconnecting with her lost feelings of love happens naturally and easily, because you are now the kind of man that she always wanted you to be.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

3. Acting like just a friend and not including any flirting

If you want to rekindle the lost love between you and your ex, acting like a nice, neutral friend around her isnâ€™t going to make that happen.

Why?

When thereâ€™s no sexual vibe, she just doesn't feel like the love would come back.

She doesnâ€™t see the point of opening herself back up to a man that she canâ€™t see a romantic, sexual future with.

So, even though they might share a friendship, itâ€™s unlikely going to turn into a relationship from there without the sexual, romantic component added.

For a woman to want to be in a relationship with a guy, sheâ€™s needs to feel sexually and romantically attracted to him for her to fall in love with him.

So, if you want to rekindle a lost love, you need to make your ex feel attracted, sexually and romantically.

This means you need to change your approach from being nice, neutral or friendly, to using interactions to flirt with her and turn her on sexually, so she actually wants to be with you again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Does Active No Contact Work?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Not for most ex back situations.

Here's the thing:

No Contact is not contacting an ex for 30 to 60 days after a break up.

It also involves ignoring any attempts she makes to reach out to you (e.g. she sends a text to say "Hey", sends you a message you on social media or even calls to say hi).

No Contact is passive because you're not really doing anything (other than waiting for the time to pass until you can contact her again).

Active No Contact is not contacting an ex for 30 to 60 days after a break up and ignoring her attempts to reach out to you.

Sounds the same right?

Well, the only difference is that with active No Contact, you actively work on improving yourself and healing from the break up during the 30 to 60 days, so you can be ready to re-attract your ex.

...if she actually calls, or answers your text or call after the 30 or 60 days.

...if she hasn't moved on and found happiness with a new guy.

...if she didn't get revenge on you for not reaching out, by hooking up with new men to make herself feel better about you not reaching out.

Lots of ifs, so it just doesn't work in most situations.

What does work?

Watch this...

In addition to the 3 proven to work alternatives to the No Contact Rule that Dan Bacon teaches in the above video, here are 5 additional tips about what really works to get an ex woman back:

1. Giving her the right amount of space for your situation

[image: Giving her the right amount of space for your situation]

Not all women require a month or two of space before hearing from their ex boyfriend or husband again.

In fact, a lot of the time, the longer a guy takes to begin the ex back process with his ex, the more likely it is that she will move on.

Here's the thing:

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she's usually disconnected from her positive feelings for him (e.g. respect, attraction, love) and has replaced them with a lot of negative emotions (e.g. anger, bitterness, disappointment).

In her mind she may even be thinking things like, "I just want to get away from him and try to fix my life. I don't want to feel this way anymore. When I see my friends, family and even strangers looking so happy in their relationships, I feel jealous because I don't have that. At least now I've taken the first steps to moving forward and finding a man who can make me feel the way I want to feel, when Iâm with him.â

So, if her ex then decides to use No Contact as a way of getting her back and he ignores her for 30 or even 60 days, rather than miss him and begin regretting her decision to break up with him, she will usually just feel relieved and happy.

She will then use that time to fully get over him and find herself a new man.

Naturally, there are cases where using No Contact on a woman works.

However, that usually only happens if the woman still has feelings for the guy and sheâs secretly hoping that he will try to get her back.

If he then ignores her instead, it can cause her to panic and try to initiate contact with him.

Of course, if he then continues to ignore her even more (i.e. because the full 30 or 60 days have not passed yet), she will almost certainly take it as a sign that heâs over her and she will then focus on getting over him too, usually by hooking up with a new man as quickly as possible.

Then, when he finally contacts her, she will say something along the lines of, âWhy are you calling me after all this time? Did you think I was going to sit around waiting for you? Well I did, but you didnât want anything to do with me. Now itâs too late. Iâmve moved on and I have a new boyfriend and Iâm happy, so please leave me alone.â

Donât let that happen to you.

The truth is, in almost all ex back cases, up to a week of space is more than enough time to allow for things to calm down between a man and a woman.

So, if your reason for using No Contact is to get your ex back, then 3 to 7 days of space is usually enough.

The next tip that works isâ!

2. Interacting with her and creating a spark of romantic attraction again

Once you contact your ex again, the important thing is not to act like a nice, neutral friend who is no longer interested in getting her back.

Instead, you need to ensure that you make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you again.

When you do, you will see that things will automatically start to change.

She will begin to feel differently about you.

Then, getting her back becomes easier, because sheâs open to the idea, rather than her thinking things like, âNot only did he stuff up, now heâs actually ignoring me too. What a jerk!â

So, how can you begin changing how she feels?

Some of the ways you can do that is byâ!

- Maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what sheâs saying or doing to put you off, (e.g. sheâs being scornful or indifferent towards you, sheâs blaming you for the break up).
- Reacting differently to what she says and does, (e.g. if she tries to start an argument with you, rather than get upset or lose your temper with her like you did in the past, you now remain calm and use humor to diffuse the situation).

- Being relaxed and easy going around her and making her feel good to be interacting with you again, rather than pushing her to get back into a relationship with you and making her feel tense, annoyed or defensive as a result.
- Being more emotionally dominant with her, rather than allowing her to call all the shots, because you want her to like you again.
- Being more emotionally masculine around her and making her feel feminine and girly, rather than being too nice or neutral and making her feel like a friend, or nothing at all, in your presence.

The more your ex interacts with you and discovers that youâ€¢re nothing like the man she broke up with, the more her feelings of respect and attraction for you will begin to resurface.

As a result, her defenses start to come down and she then becomes more open to talking with you over the phone and meeting up with you in person, to see what happens next.

Another tip that works isâ€¢

3. Building on the spark to make her have sexual, loving feelings that draw her back into a relationship with you

[image: Building on the spark]

Building on your exâ€¢s newfound feelings for you is the best way to ensure that you get her back and keep her.

So, make sure that every interaction you have with her from now on (via text or e-mail, on social media, over the phone and especially in person) is turning the spark into a fire.

This means, you need to say and do the types of things that will make her feel even more respect and attraction for you than before and begin to see you as the new man you have become.

For example: Make her laugh and smile and enjoy talking to you and being around you.

Then, when sheâ€¢s alone, she will naturally begin to miss you and think things like, â€¢I canâ€¢t believe how much Iâ€¢m thinking about him these days. I actually miss him when I donâ€¢t hear from him. What is happening to me? Why am I feeling this way about him when I was so sure before that it was over between us? Am I really falling back in love with him again? Should I give him another chance after all?â€¢

The more respect and attraction you make her feel, the less she focuses on the negatives of the past and the more she feels drawn to the idea of being your girl again.

From there, even if she previously felt convinced that she was ready to move on, the idea of losing you for real suddenly starts to bother her.

Then, getting her back into a relationship becomes easy for you, because she wants it too.

The next tip that works isâ€¢

4. Showing her via your actions, behavior and attitude that you really have changed in some of the ways that are important to her

[image: Showing her via your actions and behavior that you have changed in the ways that are important to her]

Nothing is more convincing to a woman that a relationship is worth saving than seeing that her ex has transformed himself and is now at a completely different level to the one he was at when they broke up.

Not only does that show her that he has understood some of her secret reasons for breaking up with him, he's also taken the necessary steps to quickly change and improve and become a better man as a result.

This earns a lot of her respect back.

Then, because she respects him again, she feels more open towards him.

This then allows her to start feeling attracted to him too and with these two emotions in place, falling back in love with him is only a matter of time.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back for real, the best investment you can make is in improving yourself.

When you do that, not only does it become possible to re-attract her and get her back, you also become a better man for yourself and it improves many of the other areas in your life too (e.g. if you become more confident, not only is that attractive to your ex, it also comes through at work/university and people feel more drawn to you).

So, focus on that.

By the way!

If you're unsure about what you need to change about yourself to re-attract your ex, here are some questions to ask yourself that might help:

- What aspects of my thinking and behavior turned her off when we were together? (e.g. Did I become too insecure and emotionally dependent on her, and caused her to feel smothered by me? Did I take her for granted and make her feel unloved and unappreciated? Did I mature as quickly as her, or did she feel like she had to take care of me and act like the "grownup" in the relationship)?
- What do I think was missing from our relationship? (e.g. Did I continue to make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman or did she feel more like my friend or roommate? Did she feel safe about our future together, or did she feel uncertain? Did we have mutual goals, or was it "each person for themselves")?
- Did she want me to behave in a way that I wasn't aware of? (e.g. more ballsy, more motivated and goal oriented, more affectionate, less needy or clingy?).
- Was I trying to get her to accept things about me that she didn't find attractive? (e.g. my insecurity about my value to her, my jealous or controlling behavior, my lack of direction in life)?

By understanding where you went wrong with your ex and then changing and improving some of those things about yourself, you take away her excuses not to want to give you another chance.

You're a new man now, so she naturally starts to see you in a new (more positive way).

As a result, getting back together again becomes something she actually wants to do.

The next tip that works is!

5. Hooking up with her sexually and blowing her mind so she wants to be your girl again

Sex speeds up the process of getting the relationship back together.

It doesn't fix everything, but it's one part of the ex back process that you need to make sure you include along the way, rather than acting neutral or like just a friend to your ex.

This is why, once you've built up her feelings for you and made her feel attracted to you again, the next step is to hook up with her sexually to get her to start seeing you as her man again.

So, how can you do that?

Imagine you're at a meet up with your ex.

The important thing is that you continue making her feel sexual attraction and respect for the new you.

Then, notice any signs that she may be giving you that she's open to connecting with you on a more intimate level (e.g. she keeps touching you, licks her lips often, plays with her hair or a necklace).

When it feels like an appropriate time, go ahead and give her a hug and if she doesn't pull away, give her a kiss as well.

From there, if she's open, you can go to her place or yours and hook up with her sexually.

Remember: When you re-spark your ex's feelings of respect and attraction for you and then you blow her mind with the best sex she's ever experienced (with you or anyone else), it will be difficult for her to want to walk away from what the two of you share together.

When that happens, the relationship resumes naturally and easily, because she wants it as much as you.

Enjoy the great times ahead with her!

Problems to Avoid When Considering No Contact as Your Way to Hopefully Get Her Back

If you want to get your ex back for real, you need to make sure that you approach the ex back process in the correct way for your situation.

If you don't, you may end up making it harder for yourself than it actually needs to be.

Watch this video from Dan Bacon (founder of this website) for examples:

Here are 3 mistakes to avoid making if you are considering using NC as your way of hopefully making her want you back:

1. Assuming that cutting off contact for 30 to 60 days is necessary for every break up

Most guys who consider using No Contact to get an ex back, often make the mistake of thinking that all women respond well to being ignored for 30, 60 or even more days.

Yet, that's actually far from the truth.

Hereâ€¢s why!

In most ex back cases, the main reason why a woman will break up with her guy is because sheâ€¢s reached the stage where she no longer feels enough respect, attraction and love to want to be in relationship with him anymore.

So, if he then decides to ignore her for a few weeks, or months, rather than come running back to him, she instead feels relieved that she doesnâ€¢t have to deal with a needy, desperate ex who is trying to get her back.

She then uses that time to fully get over him and find herself a new man to have sex with, date and be in a relationship with.

Then, if her ex finally makes contact with her again after months of silence, the only response heâ€¢s likely to get is her laughing and saying something along the lines of, â€¢Why are you calling me after all this time? Did you really think I was going to sit around waiting for you? Well hereâ€¢s a news flashâ€¢! Iâ€¢ve moved on and I have a new man now and Iâ€¢m truly happy. So please donâ€¢t call me again. What we had has been over for months. You need to accept that and move on.â€¢

As a result, cutting off contact with her for 30 to 60 days was a completely ineffective strategy and absolutely backfired on the guy.

So, unless your ex is still secretly in love with you and is hoping that you and her will get back together again, or sheâ€¢s struggling to find herself a replacement guy, ignoring her for 30 to 60 days is not going to make her come running back to you.

This is why, the best and most successful ex back approach is interacting with your ex and actively making her feel sparks of attraction for you again, not ignoring her.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¢!

2. Putting the ball in her court

[image: Putting the ball in her court]

Sometimes a guy assumes that getting back together with an ex is entirely up to her.

So, he decides to use No Contact on her as a way of letting her call the shots.

Basically heâ€¢s thinking something along the lines of, â€¢If she still wants me, she will miss me when she doesnâ€¢t hear from me and she will contact me. We can then take it from there and try to work things out. On the other hand, if sheâ€¢s not interested in me, she wonâ€¢t ever get in touch and I will have my answer.â€¢

Yet, thatâ€¢s not always how it works.

In some cases, even when a woman does miss her ex and wants to get in contact with him, she wonâ€¢t because sheâ€¢s afraid that the main reasons heâ€¢s ignoring her is that he doesnâ€¢t care about her anymore.

This makes her fear being rejected by him, so she gives up on getting him back and tries to move on.

Hereâ€¢s the thingâ€¢!

A woman will rarely take on the dominant, masculine role of the man to get the relationship back together again.

Instead, she will usually sit back and wait to see if her ex has the balls to take on the leading role in the ex back process.

If he does, she will be able to respect him again.

When she respects him, she will feel start to attracted to him and will then begin to open back up to the idea of being his girl again.

On the other hand, if he sits around ignoring her and waiting for her to make the first move, she will lose more respect for him for not having the courage to take the lead and get her back.

So, if you want your ex back, make it happen, because she almost certainly won't.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Trying to play games with her, rather than just being a man about it

Most of the time, a guy will use No Contact as a way of trying to get his ex back, because he doesn't really know what else to do.

Basically, he's hoping that by suddenly cutting off contact with her, she will wonder, What is he up to? Why isn't he contacting me? and then become curious enough about him to call him and say hi, or ask to meet up with him in person.

Yet, that approach rarely works when a woman has lost respect and attraction for a guy, because she just doesn't care enough to want to find out.

Rather than miss him, she instead feels relieved that he's out of her life without too much of a fuss and she then focuses on moving on without him.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't waste time playing mind games with her that she may not even notice.

Be a man of action and get her back now.

If you wait too long because you keep wondering things like, Does active No Contact work? you may end up losing her.

So, make sure that you don't become one of those guys who are afraid to go after what they really want (i.e. in your case, getting your ex woman back).

You can get her back without having to wait 30 or 60 days if you really want to.

Believe in yourself.

Take action and make it happen!

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

The Best Thing to Do to Get Your Girlfriend Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The best thing to do to get your girlfriend back is to focus on attraction.

If she isn't attracted to you anymore, she's not going to be interested.

If you don't re-attract her and reignite her feelings in some way, she will most likely remain uninterested.

Her feelings of attraction for you are the most important feeling of all right now.

That's why you need to make sure that you're making your ex girlfriend feel surges of sexual and romantic attraction for you during every interaction you have with her from now on (e.g. via text, social media and especially on the phone and in person).

Here are 3 examples of what can make a woman feel attracted to her ex boyfriend:

1. He levels up (i.e. he's not at the same level he was when she dumped him)

[image: He levels up]

Going through the ex back process with a woman is a hugely transformative experience for a guy if he wants it to be.

He can start off feeling like a failure and having no confidence in himself and in his attraction to his ex and other women and end up becoming truly confident and realizing that he's a valuable, worthy man.

However, for that to happen, it's very important that after the break up, he levels up.

That means, he can't stay stuck thinking, acting and behaving the way he always has in the past and expecting things to change and improve (e.g. being insecure and needy, needing his woman's support and approval to make decisions about his life, having no clear purpose and direction that he's working towards and expecting his woman to accept that).

On the other hand, the more he transforms himself (e.g. he becomes more confident and self-assured, emotionally mature, determined and goal oriented), the more attractive he becomes to his ex and to other women as well.

Then, when he interacts with her and she notices that he's at a different level than he was when she broke up with him, she will naturally begin to feel some respect for him again.

When she respects him, she will also feel surges of attraction for him again and then her defenses begin to melt away, making it possible for him to re-attract her and get her back.

Another thing a guy can do to get his girlfriend back is

2. He truly understands what she wants now and she can feel that as she interacts with him

[image: He truly understands what she wants now and she can feel that as she interacts with him]

When a woman feels that her ex has understood her real, possibly even secret reasons (i.e. the things that she never told him about) for breaking up with him and has improved some of those things about himself, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling attracted to him again.

Even if she initially felt convinced that nothing would make her change her mind about breaking up with him, she suddenly doesn't feel so sure about her decision.

She then becomes open to talking to him on the phone and meeting up with him in person more often, to see where things go from there.

This is why, understanding what a woman wants and then giving it to her is a very important step in the ex back process.

For example: Some of the changes a woman might want to experience as she interacts with her ex are:

- He's less insecure and self-doubting now, which means he no longer feels unsure of himself around her, regardless of what she says or does to test him. He now reacts differently when she doesn't agree with him or insults him and rather than get upset or feel like he's not good enough, he remains relaxed and confident.
- He's more emotionally independent, which means he doesn't need her in his life so that he can feel okay about himself. He has his own interests, goals and friends and he's busy living a happy and fulfilling life without her. Yes, he wants her back, but he doesn't need her back.
- He's more emotionally mature now, which means she can interact on the same level with him, rather than feeling like a mother or big sister around him. He's no longer drifting through life and being irresponsible, making her feel unsafe and unsure about her future with him.
- He's more manly now, which means she feels like a feminine woman around him, rather than like a neutral friend or roommate. She can no longer dominate him with her confident personality and instead feels like she can depend on him to be the man and lead the way for the both of them.
- He's much more easy-going and relaxed around her now, rather than always taking things so seriously and getting upset when she creates drama to test him.

When she experiences those kinds of changes in him, she naturally starts to feel surges of respect and attraction for him again.

When that happens, her defenses come down and she opens up to being in a relationship with him again.

Another thing a guy can do to get his girlfriend back is:

3. He attracts her in new ways

[image: He attracts her in new ways]

Most guys don't realize that what worked to attract their woman the first time around (e.g. sending her flowers, buying her gifts, writing her a love letter, being extra nice and sweet to her), is unlikely to work again. Why?

When a guy meets a woman for the first time and begins seducing her into a relationship with him, everything about him is fresh and new to her.

She doesn't know him, so everything he says or does is exciting and interesting to her.

So, she actually feels flattered and attracted when he sends her flowers or writes her a love letter, because she's beginning to fall in love with him.

As a result, his gestures come across as being romantic to her and she naturally responds to him by opening up to him sexually and romantically.

However, after a break up, the same things usually don't work, because the woman has developed a negative picture of him in her mind.

Remember: Romance (e.g. flowers, gifts, love letters, niceness) is only enjoyable to a woman if she has feelings for a man (i.e. she respects him, feels attracted to him and is either falling in love with him or is in love with him).

This is why, when a guy uses that approach on her after a break up, rather than see it as being romantic, she instead usually thinks something along the lines of, “Is this all he knows how to do? Does he honestly believe that flowers, love letters and being nice and sweet to me is going to convince me to change my mind? Well, he's in for a big shock. I know him too well, so his usual tactics don't impress me. If he wants me back, he's going to have to show me a new side to himself, that I can actually feel interested in.”

Basically, she's not falling in love with him for the first time.

Instead she knows him (i.e. both his good and bad qualities).

So, if for example, the guy was too emotionally sensitive and would often cry to her when faced with a challenging situation, or got upset when she didn't give him all of her attention, then him sending her a love letter and telling her how much he loves her and can't cope without her will only highlight to her a side to him that she doesn't find attractive at all.

This is why, if you want to get your girlfriend back, you need to make sure you approach the ex back process differently to the way you approached making her your girl the first time around.

Begin attracting her in new and exciting ways, so that she can start feeling respect and attraction for you again.

Only when she feels attracted to you in new ways, will she be willing to let her defenses come down and open up to the idea of being in a relationship with you again.

By the way!

If you're not sure how to attract your ex girlfriend in new ways, here are some examples of what naturally attracts a woman to a man:

- He makes her feel feminine and girly when she's with him (e.g. by being more emotionally masculine), rather than making her feel neutral because he treats her like a friend or like she's better than him.
- He makes her laugh and smile and feel good to be around him again, rather than being too serious and making her feel bored, disinterested or even annoyed.
- He maintains his confidence regardless of what she says or does to make him doubt himself and his chances of getting her back.
- He flirts with her to create some sexual tension between them, rather than sucking up to her and making her feel turned off by what she perceives as his desperation.
- He has purpose and direction in his life outside of his relationship with her, rather than seeing her as his main reason for living.

- He takes the lead during interactions and is assertive while still being a good guy to her, rather than allowing her to call the shots and walk all over him.

The more you begin to attract your ex girlfriend in ways that she doesn't expect, the less convinced she will feel about her decision to break up with you.

Suddenly, she will begin feeling surges of respect and attraction for you again, even if she doesn't want to.

Then, getting her back becomes easy, because she wants it too.

Get Her Back Quicker By Avoiding These 4 Mistakes

[image: Get your ex back quicker by avoiding these 3 mistakes]

Getting an ex woman back is relatively easy when you say and do the kind of things that enhance her positive feelings for you and diminish the negative ones.

So, before you do anything else, make sure that you're not making any of the following mistakes with your girlfriend and turning her off as a result:

1. Hoping that simply ignoring her will make her want you back

A break up usually happens when the happy, loving feelings in the relationship fade away and are replaced by more negative emotions such as anger, resentment and disappointment.

So, if your ex girlfriend is currently feeling that way about you (i.e. negatively), chances are high that if you ignore her (i.e. you use the No Contact Rule), she's not going to care that much.

In fact, she may even be a little bit cheerful and relieved not to have to put up with you trying to get her back.

As a result, your tactic will have backfired and you may then end up losing her to another man.

Watch this...

Remember: If you're not around actively sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you, then some other guy will be.

The No Contact Rule works well for women who use it to get a man to call them and want them back, but it rarely works for a guy who has been dumped by a woman who no longer wants to be with him.

Most women who have disconnected from their feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy and then dumped him, don't sit around losing sleep over the fact that he's done what they asked him to do in the first place - go away/leave her alone/don't contact her.

So, if your intention is to actually get back together in a relationship with your girlfriend, then act like it.

In other words, stop ignoring her and start re-attracting her...now.

The more drawn to you she feels in a way that feels good to her, the more open she will become to getting back together again.

On the other hand, the less she hears from you, the more likely it is she'll replace you with a new man who does make her feel attracted.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ□|

2. Trying to discuss the relationship or work things out via text

Even though it may seem like the right thing to do, trying to work things out with your ex via text is almost always a bad idea. Why?

Firstly, talking about something as serious as a relationship gone wrong via a few lines of text, only makes a woman feel like sheâ□□s not even important enough for the guy to look her in the eye while heâ□□s trying to get her back.

Additionally, when a guy keeps bringing up the relationship and all his mistakes, without the benefit of being able to throw in some humor to ease the tension between them (like he would if he was talking to her over the phone or in person), it usually only makes his ex girlfriend re-live all the negative emotions she experienced at the time.

As a result, she becomes closed off and unwilling to cooperate with him.

So, if you want things to go your way and get your girlfriend back, donâ□□t try to make it happen via text.

Instead, interact with her over the phone and especially in person and show her by the way you think, talk and behave that youâ□□ve moved past the level you were at when you were together and make her feel respect, attraction and love for the new you.

When you focus on doing that, rather than reminding her of the old you, the ex back process becomes so much more effortless.

She naturally feels attracted to you again and is compelled to at least kiss you and have sex with you again to see how she feels.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ□|

3. Talking about your feelings, needs and wants, rather than creating new feelings inside of her

A lot of guysÂ are unknowinglyÂ influenced by what they watch on TV or at the movies.

A guy may fully know the difference between what he sees on TV and the movies versus real life, but if he watches a lot of TV dramas and movies, they can affect his thinking.

For example: When a guy notices that in a romantic movie or TV drama series, all the man really had to doÂ was approach his ex and tell her all about his feelings for her and how much he still wants to be with her, for her to then give him another chance, heÂ hopesÂ that methodÂ will work in real life too.

Unfortunately though, it almost never does play out like it does in the movies or on TV.

In real life, a woman only cares about a manâ□□s feelings for her, if she has sexual and romantic feelings for him too.

If she doesnâ□□t, sheâ□□s usually just going to feel uncomfortable at best (because she wants to reject him in the nicest possible way), or irritated at worst (because heâ□□s not letting her move on).

This is why, if you want your ex to care how you feel about her, you need to make sure that you reactivate her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you first.

It has to be all about her feelings for you, rather than the other way around.

Right now, your feelings don't matter.

So, focus on that.

Then, when she's feeling attracted to you again, she will also be happy that you still care about her and want her back, but not before.

The next mistake to avoid making is!

4. Appearing lost, confused and emotionally insecure without her

Even if it's the truth, letting your ex know how much you're struggling to cope without her is one of the fastest ways to turn her off even more.

Here's the thing!

Although a woman appearing lost, confused and emotionally insecure without her ex is perfectly fine, a man being that way is not.

Why?

What men and women feel attracted to is completely different.

So, when a woman is falling apart after a break up, it can make her ex feel flattered that she misses him so much and can't cope without him.

Her neediness actually brings out his protective instincts and he feels the urge to protect her and take care of her.

On the other hand, when a man is losing it after a break up, a woman's instincts kick in telling her he's too emotionally weak and wimpy to be able to be able to take care of her, so she feels turned off by him even more.

So, if you want to re-attract your ex girlfriend, make sure that you don't turn her off by appearing emotionally weak and needy.

Yes, you want her back, but you don't need her back.

When she can see that you're confident, happy and emotionally fulfilled even though she's no longer your girl, she will automatically feel respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, her defenses come down and you can then guide her back into a new and improved relationship with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I'm Better Looking Than Her Rebound Guy. What Does She See In Him?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 possible reasons why she's with her rebound guy, even though you're better looking than he is:

1. Many women end up accepting a less attractive guy (physically) in the hope that he will be motivated to stay with her for life

In some instances, a woman might hook up with a guy who is really good looking.

As a result, he might feel like he's better than her, because he often gets attention from other women.

Even though he may not come out and say it to his girl, at the back of his mind he might be thinking things like, "She's lucky to have me. I could have my pick of women, but I chose her. I hope she appreciates it."

This kind of thinking can then lead to him treating her badly or making her feel unappreciated.

For example: A guy like that might

- Look at and even flirt with other women in front of her, without caring about her feelings.
- Talk about his plans for the future without including her.
- Belittle her, both in private and in front of other people.
- Be unsupportive of her big dreams and goals in life.
- Look down on her (e.g. he doesn't value her friends, family, education, interests).

This may cause the woman to feel insecure, jealous, angry and even begin to behave in ways that she doesn't want to (e.g. she always checks up on him to see if he's cheating on her, she hides her true personality from him and instead tries to mould herself more into the kind of woman she thinks he wants her to be, she avoids her friends/family/pursuing her interests because he doesn't approve).

However, over time, she might reach the point where she begins thinking things like, "I hate the person I've become in the relationship with him. I'm no longer myself. Instead, I'm always trying to be what he wants me to be so that he will treat me better and give me the love and attention I crave. At the same time, I'm always afraid he's going to find another, more attractive woman than me and leave me. I can't live like this. I feel miserable all the time. I've got to leave him."

She will then almost certainly break up with him and look to find herself a new man.

[image: She hopes that he will stay with her]

This may often be a guy who is less attractive than her current man, because she knows that a guy like that will be grateful to have a woman like her interested in him.

As a result, he may end up treating her better, being more loyal to her and possibly giving her the security about the future that she felt was lacking in her relationship with her better looking ex.

Another possible reason why your ex is with a less attractive guy than you isâ€¦!

2. She enjoys the emotional connection she has with him

[image: She enjoys the connection that she has with him]

Sometimes, a woman might hook up with a guy who she feels a lot of physical attraction for (i.e. because he is very good looking).

However, after the initial lust wears off, she may discover that sheâ€™s not really attracted to him emotionally.

For example: She might realize thatâ€¦!

- Him and her have very different views about life (e.g. sheâ€™s serious-minded and has a definite purpose and direction in life while he is childish and immature and only wants to live in the moment, she likes to save and invest her money while he spends every cent he gets instantly, sheâ€™s more of a bookworm while heâ€™s more of an adventurer).
- She doesnâ€™t like his quirks or odd personality traits (e.g. he bites his nails, he never finishes what he starts, heâ€™s too much of a perfectionist and he gets annoyed with her when she doesnâ€™t do things his way).
- He isnâ€™t a man of his word, but you are.
- Heâ€™s too emotionally closed off, but you were more open.
- They donâ€™t share a similar vision for the future (e.g. to settle down and start a family together).
- She doesnâ€™t enjoy his company that much and prefers to hang out with her friends than with him.

She may then decide to break up with him and find herself another man who is more emotionally compatible with her.

When she does, she wonâ€™t be too concerned if heâ€™s not as good looking as her ex.

Instead, she will feel drawn to him based on how he makes her feel when sheâ€™s with him (e.g. respectful, attracted, understood, valued, emotionally safe).

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

A womanâ€™s emotional attraction to a man is much more powerful than her physical attraction to him.

So, even though she may initially feel drawn to a guy based on his appearance, if she canâ€™t connect with him emotionally as well, her feelings for him will quickly fade away.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, you canâ€™t expect your looks to do the job.

Sure she was attracted to you once and she will likely still feel physically attracted to you now.

However, itâ€™s how you make her feel when sheâ€™s with you that matters most (e.g. does she feel feminine and girly, emotionally safe, loved and appreciated, desirable).

So, if you want to get your ex back, you have to spark her feelings in ways that are important to her emotionally and then also make her feel attracted to you physically.

When you do that, chances are high that she will quickly begin regretting her decision to break up with you.

Her guard comes down and she becomes open to getting back together again.

On the other hand, if you don't make her feel the way she wants to feel when she interacts with you, but her rebound guy does, then she will feel more attracted to him and then getting her back becomes a lot more difficult.

Another possible reason why your ex is with a less attractive guy than you isâ€¦

3. He was waiting in the wings in the hope that you and her would break up and she's now giving him a chance

Quite often, after a break up a woman tends to feel a bit insecure about her attractiveness.

Even if she's the one who initiated the break up in the first place and even if she's a really beautiful woman, she may still end up thinking things like, What if I can't find another guy? or What if no other man finds me attractive?

She may then quickly get into a rebound relationship with a guy she's known for a while who had been interested in her, to make herself feel better.

Of course, if the guy is then able to make her fall in love with him by displaying some of the qualities and personality traits that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, emotional strength, emotional masculinity, drive and determination), she will stick with him, regardless of his looks.

On the other hand, if he thinks, acts and behaves in ways that are unattractive to her, she will quickly dump him and look for a new man to get into a relationship with, now that she feels more confident about herself.

Either way, if you want her back, you can't sit around waiting to see which way things are going to turn out with her new guy.

If you want her back, you need to interact with her over the phone and in person and reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

The more you make her feel attracted in new and exciting ways, the more likely it is that she will begin to notice her new guy's flaws (e.g. he's not as attractive as you, he's not as confident and emotionally strong, he doesn't have your charm and charisma).

She then begins to question her decision to break up with you and she becomes open to at least interacting with you more to see how she feels, opening the way for you to get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex is with a less attractive guy than you isâ€¦

4. She moved on as quickly as possible, to avoid missing you and going back to you

[image: She moved on as quickly as possible to avoid missing you and going back to you]

Just because a woman breaks up with a guy, it doesn't necessarily mean she no longer has any feelings for him.

So, to avoid being tempted by him if he calls her and says things like, Please forgive me baby. I know I stuffed up, but I promise if you give me just one more chance, I will do whatever it takes to make you happy, she quickly gets into a rebound relationship instead.

She will then likely use the new guy to distract her and help her get over her ex.

Then, if things don't work out with him, she can dump him and move on.

However, because she was never fully committed to him in the first place seeing as he was only her rebound guy, she won't have to go through what she did with her ex (i.e. miss him and want to go back to him).

In a case like this, getting your ex back is pretty easy.

You need to interact with her every chance you get, make her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

When you reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you, she naturally gets to the point where she feels that if she doesn't get back with you, she might end up regretting it later on.

She then becomes open to dumping her new guy and giving you another chance.

On the other hand, if you just wait around hoping she will realize she wants you back and break up with her new guy, she may fall in love with him for real instead and even end up marrying him.

Alternatively, if it doesn't work out, she might find a new man who sparks her feelings in interesting ways and get into a relationship with him instead.

Either way, you will end up being the one who misses out.

So, don't wait to see what happens.

If you want your ex back, make it happen now.

Another possible reason why your ex is with a less attractive guy than you is!

5. She is only using him for now and will dump him when she's ready

[image: She is only using him for now and will dump him when she's ready]

Sometimes a woman will immediately get into another relationship after breaking up with a guy, to help her from missing her ex, or from feeling tempted to get back into a relationship with him when she knows that things won't work out between them.

Yet, her new guy may not actually be someone she perceives as being her ideal man (e.g. because he's too nice and sweet, he's insecure about himself and his value to her, he's too emotionally soft).

Instead, he's likely just the kind of guy she believes will treat her well and give her a chance to heal from her break up, without her having to worry about falling in love with him.

Then, when she fully gets over her ex and regains some of her confidence, she will usually dump her rebound guy and focus on finding herself the kind of man she really wants to be in a relationship with (e.g. confident, emotionally strong, emotionally masculine).

Of course, if her rebound guy changes his approach to attraction and begins displaying the qualities she's looking for in a man, she will quickly change her mind about breaking up with him.

She will hold on to him instead, even if he's not as good looking as her ex or other guys that might be interested in her.

Remember: A woman's attraction to a man is based more on how he makes her feel when she's with him, than on how good looking he is.

It's who he is when she's interacting with him that matters to her.

For example:

- Does she feel good in his presence or does she feel tense, annoyed or bored?
- Does she feel turned on or does she feel neutral, like a friend or even a little bit turned off?
- Does she feel like she can look up to him and respect him or does she look down on him?
- Does she feel like she can rely on him to be the man all the time, or does she feel emotionally stronger than him and that she has to take care of him?

Those are the types of things that really matter to a woman.

So, if you want your ex back, make sure youâre not using the wrong approach to re-attract her (e.g. focusing on looks rather than feelings).

When you spark her feelings again by thinking, acting and behaving in some of the ways that truly matter to her, she will not only want to be with you again, she will also appreciate that youâre a good looking guy as well.

Being Better Looking Than Her Rebound Guy Wonât Get Her Back if Youâre Making These Attraction Mistakes

You can get your ex back if you want to.

It all depends on your approach to attraction with her.

Is what youâre saying and doing turning her on, or is it convincing her even more that her rebound guy is better than you?

It all depends on whether you make any of the following mistakes with her:

1. Asking her why she is with him

[image: Asking her why she is with him]

It might be tempting for a guy to want to say to his ex something along the lines of, âWhat are you doing with him? Heâs not good enough for you. Canât you see that heâs not good looking? Youâre a beautiful woman and you should be with a guy who is more attractive than him.

Yet, rather than make a woman think something like, âHe has a point. I do deserve to be with a good looking guy, she will likely just think something along the lines of, âOh, heâs so jealous! He canât see why I would date a guy who is less good looking than him. Yet, what he doesnât realize is that by saying that to me, heâs proving to me that he still doesnât have a clue what a woman wants in a man. He still thinks that looks are more important than how he acts, thinks and behaves in a relationship with a woman. Well, thatâs why heâs broken up with. He just doesnât get it.

She will then feel drawn to her new man even more, even if heâs not perfect.

So, donât make that mistake with your ex.

Her reasons for being with a guy who is less attractive than you are none of your business.

What is your business though, is how you make her feel when you interact with her from now on.

The more you spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you when you talk to her over the phone or in person, the more drawn to you she will feel again.

Then, getting her back becomes easy and it will have nothing to do with your looks, but rather with who you are as a man.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

2. Assuming that looks is what really keeps a woman impressed and interested

Although a guyâ€™s attraction to a woman is based mostly on physical appearance, a womanâ€™s attraction to a man is based more on how he makes her feel when sheâ€™s with him.

This is why, a woman can easily date an unattractive guy and in her eyes see him as the most good looking man in the world.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Looks might initially attract a woman when she notices a guy across a room.

However, if she interacts with him and he displays unattractive behaviors and personality traits (e.g. heâ€™s arrogant and self-absorbed, or insecure and needy, heâ€™s domineering and pushy or too nice and submissive), she will suddenly start seeing him as being less attractive regardless of his physical appearance.

The same applies to a guy who is ordinary or even a bit unattractive.

If he displays the types of characteristics and behaviors that are naturally attractive to women, (e.g. confidence, emotional strength, emotional masculinity, the ability to make her feel feminine and girly in his presence) he will suddenly become a lot more good looking to her.

So, donâ€™t make the mistake of thinking that just because youâ€™re better looking than her rebound guy, you should automatically be more attractive to your ex.

Thatâ€™s not how it works.

If you canâ€™t make her feel the way she wants to feel when sheâ€™s with you (i.e. respectful, sexually attracted, loved and appreciated, excited, emotionally secure) based on the way you talk, act, think, behave and interact with her, sheâ€™s not going to care if you have super model looks and her rebound guy is downright ugly.

Instead, sheâ€™s going to pick him over you.

That is unless you start attracting her in the ways that she wants.

Only then will she see you as being better than him and begin to want you again.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

3. Never really understanding the missing pieces of the attraction experience you were offering to her

Sometimes, when a guy realizes that his ex woman is dating a guy who is not as good looking as him, he might begin thinking things like, â€œWhat does she see in him?â€œ

He may then waste a lot of time trying to figure that out, rather than trying to understand what pieces of the attraction experience were missing in his relationship with her.

As a result, when he interacts with his ex and she realizes that heâ€™s still stuck at the same level he was at before, she feels happy with her decision to break up with him.

This is why, if you want your ex to see you as being better than her rebound guy, you have to understand her real reasons for breaking up with you.

Then, when you interact with her from now on, you can give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants (e.g. make her feel like a sexy woman in your presence rather than a neutral friend, stand up to her in a loving way when she's trying to dominate you emotionally, maintain your confidence with her regardless of what she says or does to get under your skin), rather than offering her things that she doesn't want (e.g. superficial things like looks).

When she can see for herself that you're now the kind of man she always wanted you to be, she will naturally drop her defenses and open back up to you.

You can then reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

However, if you don't change your approach and hope that you'll win her back based solely on your looks, you will likely be disappointed when she sticks with her rebound guy, or finds another man to be with other than you.

Another mistake to avoid making is

4. Assuming that she must feel embarrassed for dating a less physically attractive guy

Although there are some shallow women out there who will only date guys who are very good looking or have loads of money or status, the majority of women are not that shallow.

Instead, most women will easily date a less physically attractive man if he can give her the attraction experience she really wants.

So, don't assume that your ex will care that you are better looking than her rebound guy.

As long as he is making her feel more sexual and romantic attraction for him than you are, she will stick with him.

This is why, if you want her back, you have to stop focusing on looks and start focusing on attraction.

That's the main thing that matters when getting an ex woman back.

The more attracted you make her feel, the more she will want to be around you.

Then, when the time is right, go ahead and hug, kiss, have sex and get her back into a relationship with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Life Has Gone Downhill Since She Left Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 things you can do to turn things around and start cruising back uphill to get your ex back:

1. Understand that there are ways you can get her back

When a guy gets broken up, his friends and family will often want to make him feel better by trying to get him to forget about her and move on.

As a result, the main advice he will get will be something along the lines of, “Just give it time. It’s natural to feel down after a break up, but it’s not the end of the world. Take up a new hobby to distract yourself and once things have cooled off, she might start missing you and come back again” or, “Get yourself a new girl and she will come running back.”

Although that kind of advice can work for some guys, it doesn’t work for all.

In fact, ignoring her or trying to find a new girlfriend can cause a guy to feel even worse when he notices that, not only is his ex not coming back to him, but she is happily moving on with another guy.

This is why you need to use an updated, more approach to getting your ex back that actually works on today’s women.

Fortunately, today there are many more options available to you than just making your ex feel jealous, or waiting around for her to start missing you.

You can take control of the ex back process and make her actively want to be your girl again.

How?

By doing the types of things that will quickly reactivate your ex’s sexual and romantic feelings for you.

For example:

- By maintaining your confidence with her no matter how she behaves or what she says to you.
- By making her laugh and smile and feel good when she’s interacting with you.
- By showing her, via your actions and attitude, that you have improved in some of the ways that are important to her.

That way, she naturally feels as though letting you go for real will be a big mistake.

Focus on that.

The next thing you need to do is

2. Prepare yourself before beginning the ex back process

Essentially, what this means is that before you make contact with your ex and try to get her back, you need to first understand her real, sometimes even secret reasons for breaking up with you.

If you don’t, you will likely end up offering her things that she doesn’t want and as a result, she will continue saying things like, “No. I told you that I’m not interested. Please stop bothering me. Getting back together is just not going to happen.”

For example: A guy mightâ€¦

Offer to spend more time with his ex rather than pursuing his own interests or hobbies or hang out with his friends, but what she actually wants is for him to be more emotionally masculine and not be so emotionally dependent on her.

Promise to be more helpful around the house (e.g. take out the garbage, help with the washing and cleaning up), but what she really wants is for him to treat her more like a desirable, sexy woman rather than his neutral friend.

Be extra nice and sweet when heâ€¦s with her, but what she wants is for him to be more assertive and take the lead in the ex back process and then when he gets her back, in the relationship.

So, as you can see, understanding what your ex really wants from you is a very important step to getting her back.

If you donâ€¦t, you may end up convincing her even more that she made the right decision to break up with you.

By the wayâ€¦

If youâ€¦re currently wondering, â€¦How do I find out what her real reasons for breaking up with me are? Should I just ask her to tell me?â€¦ the answer is, absolutely not!

If you want your ex to spell things out for you, you will end up turning her off even more. Why?

Women donâ€¦t want to be responsible for shaping you into the man that you need to become.

Essentially, a woman doesnâ€¦t want to be your teacher in life and tell you how to think, act and behave to make her respect you, feel sexually attracted to you and love you.

So, how else can you figure out what she really wants if you canâ€¦t ask her?

You can ask yourself some questions that will naturally and easily help you better understand what your ex wants from you in a relationship with you, so that you can begin giving her those things as you interact with her from now on.

For example: Ask yourselfâ€¦

- What aspects of my attitude, thinking and behavior initially attracted her to me (e.g. was it my confidence, my great sense of humor, my emotional masculinity, my drive and determination)?
- Did I continue to act, think and behave in those attractive ways throughout our relationship, or did I slowly slip into behaving in unattractive ways (e.g. feeling insecure and becoming needy and clingy as a result, treating her more like a roommate than the woman I canâ€¦t keep my hands off, taking her for granted and expecting her to do everything for me without doing things back in return)?
- Did I try to get her to accept things about me that just werenâ€¦t attractive to her (e.g. displaying annoying habits that she clearly didnâ€¦t like, becoming too jealous and angry, being too emotionally sensitive, sulking or giving her the silent treatment when things didnâ€¦t go my way)?

By answering those questions, you will begin to get a clearer understanding of what you need to adjust in order to properly re-attract your ex.

Then, once you know what you need to doâ€¦

3. Start the ex back process

When you better understand some of the issues that caused your ex to break up with you and have adjusted your approach accordingly (e.g. you're now more confident and self-assured, more emotionally masculine, less unsure of your value to her), your next step is to interact with her on a phone call or in person and show her that you're a different man now.

For example: One of the ways you can do that is by calling her on the phone and using some humor to make her smile, laugh and bring down her defenses.

Don't try to talk about the relationship, or attempt to get her to agree to giving you another chance.

Instead, focus on saying and doing the types of things that will spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. being ballsy and confident, flirting with her to create sexual tension) and make her want you back for her own reasons (i.e. because she feels good)

Then, once she has dropped her guard a little bit and is feeling more relaxed and happy to be talking to you, say something along the lines of, “Well this has been fun. It's really nice to see that we can actually talk as friends, rather than being tense or hostile towards each other. So, based on that, let's meet up sometime this week and say hello in person as friends only, of course.”

In most ex back cases, the woman will be a little bit resistant at first (e.g. because she doesn't want to come across as being desperate, she doesn't want to make it easy for him to get her back).

She may even say things like, “No, I don't think that's a good idea,” or “I'm sorry, but I think it's best to not see each other in person again.”

However, regardless of how she responds, just maintain your confidence with her and say something like, “Hey, it's just a quick catch up to say hello in person, as friends. It's no big deal and it definitely doesn't mean that if you agree to meet up with me, I'm going to assume you want to get back together again. I accept that we're broken up and I have no intention of making you do anything you don't want to do. Instead, it's just two friends having a quick cup of coffee together. So, now that we've cleared all that up, which day are you free? I have some time available on Monday or Wednesday.”

She will then likely agree to see you in person, even if it's just to prove to you that she can be as mature about the break up as you're being.

You can then go ahead and arrange a time that is suitable for you both.

Then, once you see her in person, you can

4. Get her back and enjoy life with her from then on

[image: Get her back and enjoy life with her from now on]

At the meet up you must continue to use your new and improved approach with her.

For example: Your approach might include some of the following things

Being confident and self assured regardless of what she says or does to make you feel nervous, tense or unsure of your chances of ever getting her back.

Flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you.

Making her smile and laugh and turning her negativity into something that you can both laugh about together.

Being a good guy to her without being a pushover or letting her dominate you with her confident personality.

Holding your ground with her in an assertive, yet loving way when she tries to control the interaction (e.g. by telling you what to do).

When you make her feel surges of respect and attraction for you again, she will naturally begin to open up to the idea of giving you another chance.

Then, when the time is right, hug her or kiss her, hook up with her sexually, get the relationship back together and enjoy the good times ahead.

Get Your Life Back On Track Faster By Avoiding These Common Ex Back Mistakes

Right now, you feel like your life has gone downhill since your woman left you, but if you want to, you can start going uphill again.

In fact, you can even get her back if you want to.

It all depends on your approach.

When you think, act and behave in emotionally strong, confident and attractive ways, you automatically become more appealing to your ex.

On the other hand, if you think, act and behave, in unattractive ways, you end up pushing her away even more and that keeps you stuck on the downhill path.

So, if you don't want to stay on that path any longer, make sure you avoid making the following mistakes with your ex from now on:

1. Focusing on the pain you feel without her in your life

[image: Focusing on the pain you feel without her in your life]

There's no denying that it sucks to be broken up with.

It's also understandable that you might think things like, "Losing her is the worst thing that's ever happened to me. My life has gone downhill since she left me. Everything about the future looks empty and pointless. I don't see why I should continue pursuing my goals now that she's no longer here to share in my successes. I wish there was something I could do to make her change her mind, but she seems determined not to be my girl anymore. It's over and I need to accept it."

Yet, by thinking that way, not only are you staying stuck in an emotional state where you feel unhappy all the time, you're also preventing yourself from moving forward and becoming the kind of man who can easily attract her back (e.g. confident, determined, capable of turning difficult situations in life into something positive).

As a result, when you then interact with you ex over the phone, in person, or even if she just sees your sad, lonely posts and pictures on social media, she will automatically feel turned off by what she perceives as your emotional weakness and inability to cope with your problems in life like a real man.

She then feels even more sure of her decision to leave you.

You don't want that to happen.

This is why, if you want your ex back for real, you can't allow your feelings of loss to paralyze you and stop you from living a happy, successful life with or without her.

If you do, not only will you continue feeling like your life is going downhill, you will also potentially ruin your chances of getting her back.

So, stop focusing on the pain of the situation and only focus on what is required to get your girl back.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Focusing on the problems you've experienced since the break up and feeling hopeless to turn things around

If you spend most of your time thinking things like, "My life is just falling apart without her. Nothing seems to be going my way anymore. It's like she was my lucky charm and now that she's gone, everything is crumbling around me. I feel so stuck and hopeless and like nothing is ever going to get better for me," then you're only focusing on the problems, rather than looking for a solution.

As a result, you stay stuck in a negative cycle where you continue to dwell on how terrible your life is without her and how you don't believe things will ever get better.

That isn't going to help you recover and get her back.

So, what can you do instead?

Focus on thinking, acting and behaving in ways that will reactivate your ex's sexual and romantic feelings for you so that you can get her back.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is by

- Being confident and believing in your attractiveness and value to her regardless of what she said when she broke up with you or since the break up, to put you down.
- Making progress on your goals and dreams in life rather than staying stuck in a rut and doing nothing just because she's gone.
- Using interactions with her to make her laugh and smile and feel good to be around you again, rather than being serious or even sad and depressed and turning her off as a result.
- Flirting with her every time you interact with her to create sexual tension rather than being on your best behavior and giving her the impression that you're no longer interested in her.

The more you stop focusing on your problems and instead take action to make yourself feel better, the more likely it is that you'll begin to notice things getting better around you.

Suddenly your ex begins to look at you with more positive eyes and then getting her back becomes easy for you to do, because she's open to you.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Not knowing that it is possible to turn things around with her

It's understandable that when a woman leaves a guy and possibly says something along the lines of, "Please accept that what we had is over. I really don't love you anymore and nothing that you can say or do can change that." he might start believing that getting her back is impossible.

Yet, here's the thing!

Just because your ex woman is saying that she doesn't have feelings for you right now, it doesn't mean she will feel the same way a week from now after you've reactivated her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

So, don't give up based on what she's saying now.

You really can change how she feels and get her back, if you want to.

So, focus on using interactions with her to reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and you'll be surprised at how quickly she can go from saying things like, "It's over," to saying, "Maybe I made a mistake."

Another mistake to avoid making is

4. Remaining stuck in grief, sadness and loneliness for years

Sometimes a guy will feel so emotionally damaged after a break up that he ends up staying stuck in his misery and despondency much longer than he needs to.

In some cases, it might be years before he feels ready to even go out and have fun with his friends and meet new people.

In the meantime, he's not only lost out on some of the best years of his life, he's also more than likely lost the chance to get his ex woman back.

If he then tries to make himself available to meet new women, he usually feels so rusty and unsure of himself that he ends up turning women off with his approach.

Alternatively, if he attempts to contact his ex to see if she's available, he almost certainly discovers that she has already moved on and is in another relationship (possibly even engaged or married), or is simply happy being single and sleeping with different guys whenever she wants to.

He's then left feeling sad, lonely and hopeless all over again.

Don't let that guy be you, where you stay stuck in a negative cycle for months or years and lose out on getting your ex back, or finding yourself another, even better woman than her.

What you need to understand right now is that healing from a break up doesn't have to take you very long at all.

In most cases, a guy can get himself ready to confidently re-attract his ex woman in one week or less.

So, rather than remaining stuck in grief, sadness and loneliness for months and years, focus instead on improving your approach to attraction.

Then interact with your ex over the phone and especially in person, reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid is

5. Becoming unattractive to other women because of the emotional pain you unconsciously communicate when interacting with them

Have you ever noticed a guy who every time he interacts with a woman, he ends up talking about his ex with her.

For example: A guy like that might say things like, â€œI havenâ€™t been able to cope very well since my ex broke up with me,â€ or â€œMy life has gone downhill since she left me,â€ or â€œShe really broke my heart and itâ€™s been difficult to move on.â€

Alternatively, he might just appear unsure of himself around women.

Basically, he just goes around projecting an image of himself that is unattractive, insecure, despondent and hopeless.

As a result, he ends up getting rejected by the women he approaches, which then makes him feel even more unworthy.

You canâ€™t let that happen to you.

You have to stop believing that your life has gone downhill since she left you and start believing in yourself and your ability to re-attract her, or any other woman you want.

When you change your mind about yourself (i.e. stop thinking about yourself as unable to cope without your ex), things in your life will begin to change too.

So, donâ€™t waste any more time allowing the emotional pain youâ€™re feeling to ruin your chances with other women or from getting your ex back.

Your life going back uphill is your choice now.

You can continue going downhill, or turn things around and head right to the destination you really want.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

What Happens if You Break the No Contact Rule?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible things that could happen if you break the No Contact Rule (i.e. you contact her before 30 days):

1. She's happy you contacted her because she has been missing you

[image: She is happy you contacted her because she has been missing you]

In cases like that, you can then re-attract her, build on her feelings and get her back.

Yet, if you decide to keep cutting off contact and end up waiting too long to contact her, she may just decide to move on.

This is why I recommend that you use one of the following 3 alternatives to the 30 Day No Contact Rule:

Here's the thing:

When a woman's ex man hasn't called her since the break up, she may begin to wonder, "Why isn't he calling me? Is he okay? I know I decided to break up with him, but I do still miss him. I wish he would just reach out to me and say hi. Maybe if he did, we could actually work things out and get back together."

In cases like that, a woman will remain open for a week and in some cases, a little longer.

Yet, if her ex continues to ignore her (e.g. for 30 or even 60 days), her feelings will usually begin to change.

She will go from missing him and being open to potentially giving things another shot, to thinking things like, "He hasn't even bothered to contact me once to see how I'm doing. I guess he didn't care about me after all. What an asshole. It's like I meant nothing to him. Well, these are the last tears I'm going to cry over him. I'm going to start seeing other guys and get on with my life."

She then opens herself up to going out, meeting new men, hooking up with them sexually and getting herself a new boyfriend.

Meanwhile, her ex who is using the 30 Day No Contact Rule (or even 60 Day NC Rule) is likely hoping that she is missing him like crazy and will contact him any day soon.

Yet, the phone never rings.

Instead, he watches as she moves on and posts photos of herself on social media having fun with other people, hanging out with new men and looking happy and content without him.

Then, his heart sinks and he wonders, "Why didn't I just break the No Contact Rule and call her? Why did I think I had to wait so long?"

Simple.

He believed that, for some reason, he needed to wait exactly 30 days.

Why 30 days?

It's just an online myth.

Itâ€™s a random number that someone came up with.

It means nothing.

It wasn't scientifically tested or proven.

It's just a nice sounding number.

That's all.

So, if you want your ex back, you have to adapt your approach to your situation, rather than blindly waiting for exactly 30 or 60 days before calling.

Watch this to understand whyâ€

The reality is that if you break the No Contact Rule and contact her, you have a much higher chance of actually creating a spark with her and getting something going between you and her once again.

On a phone call or in person, you can instantly begin to reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you based on how you now interact with her.

When you do that, thereâ€™s no need to wait any longer.

She is feeling attracted to you and drawn to you once again and you then hook up with her to see how you both feel, or connect on a new level and get the relationship back together.

Thatâ€™s how real men get their ex women back.

They donâ€™t sit around waiting for 30 or 60 days in the hope that it will magically change their exâ€™s mind.

They re-attract her, hook up with her and get the relationship back together right away, shortly after or a little while (i.e. a week) after the break up.

So, donâ€™t waste any more time ignoring her.

In most ex back cases, 3 to 7 days of space after a break up is usually more than enough because it shows that youâ€™re not desperately trying to get her back, but it also shows that you care and are man enough to call her and say hi to have a mature chat and see what happens.

During the 3 to 7 days, your ex will have plenty of time to stop focusing on the things about you that were turning her off (e.g. if youâ€™d become too possessive and clingy, if youâ€™d been treating her more like your friend than your lover) and begin to miss the things she does like about you (e.g. how you made her feel special when she was with you, how you were so ambitious and hard-working, that youâ€™re a really good guy, how you were able to make her smile and laugh when she was sad).

Itâ€™s enough time.

So, donâ€™t make the mistake of thinking that if 3 to 7 days of space will make her miss you, then cutting off contact for the full 30 or 60 days will make her miss you like CRAZY.

Remember: If you wait too long to make a move, your ex may take it as a sign that youâ€™re over her and move on with another guy to make herself feel better.

So, just call her and begin reawakening her feelings of respect and attraction by making her laugh and smile as she experiences the new and improved you (i.e. more confident, more emotionally masculine).

Then, arrange to meet up with her.

When you meet up with her, re-attract her, seduce her and get her back.

Another possible outcome when you break the No Contact Rule is that

2. She doesn't reply

[image: She doesn't reply]

When a woman finally hears from her ex after a long period of no contact (i.e. 2, 3, 4 or more weeks), she may decide to just ignore his message.

Here are some of the reasons why:

- She doesn't want to seem too eager to hear from him, so she ignores him to see what he will do next (i.e. Will he try again, or will he give up?
- Was he just testing the waters to see if she was missing him, so he could feel good about himself?).
- She has already moved on and doesn't care that he's trying to contact her.
- She's angry with him for taking so long to reach out to her after the break up.
- She's worried that he might be messing with her head and if she responds, he will then reject her.
- She wants to test his confidence and see if he's got the balls to try again, even though she ignored him the first time around.
- She is confused about the meaning of his text (i.e. Is he just saying hi as a friend, or is he interested?).
- She is turned off that he essentially seems to be asking for another shot at the relationship via text, even though he has been silent all this time.

So, the question is: What would you do if you broke the No Contact Rule and your ex didn't reply?

Would you lose confidence and begin thinking things like, â Well, I guess I have my answer. She's not interested in me anymore. I should just forget about her and try to move on, or would you remain confident and then give it a few days before contacting her again?

With women, the best option is always to remain confident.

Always believe in your attractiveness and value to a woman.

Always know that you can make a woman feel sparks of attraction for you when you interact with her.

So, even though she might be a bit cold at the moment, that can instantly or very quickly change when she begins to feel sparks of attraction for the new and improved you when you talk to her on a phone call, or interact with her in person.

Another possible outcome when you break the No Contact Rule is that

3. She replies to some of your texts and answers some of your calls, but not all

[image: She replies to some of your texts and answers some of your calls, but not all]

If you intend to break the No Contact Rule, don't do it just to spend a lot of time sending your ex pointless texts or making multiple phone calls as a friend.

Always remember: Your main goal when texting an ex is to get her on a phone call with you as soon as possible, so you can then begin reawakening her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

From there, your main goal is to get her to meet up with you in person, so she can fully experience the new you for herself and open back up to being your girl once again.

Donâ€¢t waste time with pointless text conversations.

Donâ€¢t get on phone calls just to chat as friends, without then arranging to catch up in person to say hi.

Make progress.

Go through the ex back process and get her back for real.

Donâ€¢t hesitate.

Donâ€¢t procrastinate.

Get it done.

Get her back.

Unfortunately, many guys donâ€¢t ever read what you are reading now and as a result, they end up losing their ex in the process.

For example: Even though a woman might respond to some of her exâ€¢s texts or calls, it doesnâ€¢t mean that she will remain interested in that type of exchange forever.

If he doesnâ€¢t get things moving along to the next level, she will end up thinking something like, â€¢Why is he just texting me like a friend? I donâ€¢t have time to chit-chat with him every time he feels like texting me or calling me. Is this his way of trying to get me back? If it is, I bet heâ€¢s waiting for me to give him a clear sign that I want a relationship before he makes a move. Well, heâ€¢s in for a long wait, because if he doesnâ€¢t have the balls to be the man and make this happen, then Iâ€¢m not going to do it for him. I donâ€¢t want to get back with a guy who isnâ€¢t man enough for me anyway. Iâ€¢m giving him another few days and if he doesnâ€¢t get things moving along with us, Iâ€¢m going to go on a date with that guy at work (or university).â€¢

Remember: Your main goal is to reawaken some of her feelings, so she wants to see you again in person.

Then, when you meet up with her, focus on making her feel a lot of respect and attraction for the new and improved you, without trying to sell yourself to her.

Just let her experience it and feel attracted to the new and improved you, so she then drops her guard and opens back up to the idea of being in a relationship with you again.

As long as you know what to say and do at that point, you will get her back.

Guys all over the world do that every day and get their ex woman back.

You can do it too.

Another possible outcome when you break the No Contact Rule isâ€¢!

4. You realize that the so-called 'No Contact Rule' isn't actually a scientifically proven rule

[image: You realize that the so-called 'No Contact Rule' isn't actually a scientifically proven rule]

Although itâ€¢s called the No Contact Rule, the truth is, it's more of an idea than a scientifically proven rule that must be adhered to at all costs, or else!

Essentially, the belief around the 30 Day No Contact Rule is that if you ignore your ex for a month, she will eventually begin to miss you and come running back to you.

Yet, as you would understand, it's not a mandatory requirement that after a break up, a couple cannot speak to each other for 30 to 60 days.

You CAN speak to each other before then.

You CAN get her back before then.

In fact, from all of my experience helping men to get women back, I've found that the majority of men get their woman back by contacting her immediately, or after giving her 3 to 7 days of space.

If a man has waited longer that, it's not a problem in many cases.

He just has to START doing what works from now on.

What works?

Re-attracting her to reawaken her feelings, seducing her and then getting her back.

In almost all cases, it's only when a man reawakens his ex woman's that she actually begins to care about him and want him again.

Why?

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she no longer feels respect for him as a man and isn't attracted to him anymore.

If he then uses the No Contact Rule and ignores her for a full 30, or even 60 days in the hope that it will make her miss him and come crawling back, it just not going to work in almost all cases.

Why?

She doesn't even miss him or want him back because she no longer has feelings for him.

She doesn't respect him and she's not attracted to him, so she doesn't feel motivated to go back to him.

As a result, she doesn't care that he's not contacting her.

Instead, she simply moves on by opening herself up to new guys.

By the way!

Where the 30 Day No Contact Rule can work is if a woman is still attracted to her ex guy and doesn't really want to break up with him (e.g. they broke up after a big fight, she wanted to scare him into changing).

If he doesn't contact her, she may then contact him and try to get the relationship back together.

Yet, that probably doesn't apply to your situation, right?

If it did, you wouldn't be seeking help on how to get her back.

In your situation, your ex no longer wants to be with you, but you want to be with her, right?

If so, then don't waste time ignoring her in the hope that it make her coming running back.

It won't.

You've got to interact with her and re-attract her.

When she feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she then starts to doubt her decision to end things and begins to feel drawn to you.

In that moment, you can then start to guide her through the rest of the quick ex back process and get her back.

Another possible outcome when you break the No Contact Rule isâ€¦!

5. She wants to reply, but is afraid that you might reject her

[image: She wants to reply, but is afraid that you might reject her]

Sometimes a woman will have feelings for her ex even though she dumped him.

As she tries to get over him and move on, she may continue to think things like, â€œI miss him. I hope he calls me soon so that we can work things out.â€œ

Yet, when she doesnâ€™t hear from him for a while, she may begin to doubt his feelings for her.

â€œWhy is he ignoring me? I guess Iâ€™m the only one who still has feelings for him. Clearly he doesnâ€™t feel the same way about me. Maybe he got over me right away.â€œ

So, if he then breaks No Contact and sends her a text to say hi, she may worry that heâ€™s only doing it to check that sheâ€™s still missing him as he moves on without her.

Rather than jumping at the chance to talk to him, she ignores his text.

He then takes it as a sign that she doesnâ€™t want him anymore and they end up losing each other because of a misunderstanding.

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

Remember: If your ex doesnâ€™t initially reply to you when you break No Contact, donâ€™t assume that sheâ€™s not interested.

Instead, look at it from her point of viewâ€¦!

After all, you havenâ€™t been contacting her for quite a while already, so she may assume that you are over her and are just trying to mess with her head by contacting her again.

So, donâ€™t give up if she doesnâ€™t jump for joy when you text or call.

Instead, give it a few days and then contact her again, preferably by calling her on the phone.

Then, meet up with her, re-attract her, seduce her and get her back.

Where Some Guys Go Wrong After Breaking the No Contact Rule

1. Not getting ready to re-attract her on a phone call and in person

Sometimes, a guy will stress and worry as he counts off each day of No Contact one after the other.

Day 22, day 23, day 24â€¦only 6 more days to go.

During that time, he will be wondering if at the end he will get his ex back, or if she will have moved on without him.

Then, when the day finally comes around the he is â€œallowedâ€œ to contact her (according to the ridiculous 30 Day No Contact Rule), he forgets to prepare for the most important thing of all: Re-attracting her.

He texts her in a neutral way and gets a neutral response.

They have a friendly conversation and she then says goodbye and wishes him the best.

Alternatively, they have a friendly conversation on the phone and she wishes him the best, or he asks if she is willing to change her mind and she says no.

She then goes away thinking, â€œWell, I finally heard from him and now weâ€™ve really parted way. I was hoping that things would be different somehow and that he would have used the time weâ€™ve been apart to at least change and improve a little bit, but that clearly didnâ€™t happen. Heâ€™s still stuck at the same level he was at when we broke up. I guess I need to accept that itâ€™s truly over and that he wasnâ€™t the right guy for me after all.â€

She may then decide to block his number and unfriend him from social media, or keep him as a friend on social media and let him see her moving on without him, as she posts photos of herself having fun and enjoying single life, or enjoying dating a new guy.

He waited 30 days, didnâ€™t prepare to attract her, got friend-zoned and now what?

For most guys, they assume that they now have no chance with their ex.

No, no, no.

You always have a chance to re-attract her.

Just do it sooner, rather than later, before she moves on and settles down with a guy she really loves.

The sooner you re-attract her, the sooner you can get her back and enjoy a new relationship on a completely new level with her.

2. Interacting with her and coming across as pretty much the same guy she dumped

Although a guy might not always know what went wrong, his ex woman will usually be very clear on her reasons for breaking up with him.

In her mind, there were certain aspects of his thinking and behavior that she didnâ€™t want to put up with anymore (e.g. he was too insecure, too selfish, too needy, too stressful to be around).

So, when a guy tries to get his ex back after breaking No Contact, she will be looking to see if he has changed, or is still essentially the same guy she dumped.

For example: She will be wondering things like:

- Is he more confident and self-assured now, or is he still insecure?
- Is he more manly in his behavior, or is he still wimpy, hesitant or timid?
- Is he more assertive, or does he still back down too easily when I challenge him during a conversation?
- Has he figured out how to flirt with me to create sexual tension, or is he still talking to me in a neutral type of way like a friend?
- Has he realized that being selfish in a relationship doesnâ€™t work in the long run, or is he just pretending to be nicer to suck up to me so he can get another chance?

Depending on the approach that he uses and how genuine she senses it to be, she will either feel attracted and motivated to give him another chance, or she will feel that she made the right choice by breaking up with him.

So, if you want your ex to give you another chance, make sure that when you interact with her after breaking No Contact, you don't come across as being pretty much the same guy she dumped. Additionally, make sure that you're not just putting on an act of being nicer or more considerate than you actually are, or want to be. Make real changes and make them fast. Then, interact with her, re-attract her, seduce her and get her back.

3. Thinking that she's in control of the ex back process

Even if she initiated the break up, or said that she never wants to see you again, it doesn't mean she is in control of whether you can get her back or not.

You are.

How?

You've just got to focus on re-attracting her and when you do, the whole game changes.

She opens back up to you.

She's starts wanting you back and missing you when you're not around.

You then seduce her and get her back now, rather than never.

Go ahead and make it happen.

Get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Just Got Dumped By the Love of My Life

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 optional paths that you can now follow, with only one of them resulting in you getting her back.

Which path will you choose?

1. Quickly improve your ability to attract her. Then, re-attract her, get her back and enjoy an even better relationship with her this time around

[image: Quickly improve your ability to attract her. Then, re-attract her, get her back and enjoy an even better relationship with her this time around]

If you truly believe that your ex is the love of your life, then one of the best decisions you will ever make is to focus on getting her back for another chance at the relationship.

Getting another chance is not about chasing after her, or making the kinds of mistakes that will turn her off even more (e.g. begging and pleading with her to change her mind, promising her that you will change anything that she wants if she will just give you one more chance, telling her that sheâs the love of your life and that you canât function or be happy without her).

Instead, getting another chance is about using a different approach to her now, so you can regain her respect, attraction and love.

When she feels a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for you, she will naturally open herself up to the possibility of you and her being together as a couple, or at least hooking up again to see how she feels.

What should you change about your approach to her?

That depends on who you are, what mistakes youâve made in the relationship and what she really needs to experience with you to feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love.

For example: Here are some of the changes that your ex might want to see in you, so she can feel attracted to you again.

- You now maintain your confidence around her at all times, rather than letting what she says or does make you feel insecure, unsure of yourself or unworthy of her.
- Youâre now a lot more loving, caring and attentive, but you arenât doing it out of desperation. Youâre doing it because you have changed and want to be that way now.
- You no longer allow her to push you around and get away with disrespecting you or behaving badly (e.g. throwing tantrums, sulking) like you used to. Instead, you now have the ability to laugh at her when sheâs being a pain in the butt, rather than getting angry or annoyed at her.
- Youâre a much more emotionally masculine guy, rather than being too emotionally sensitive and copying her way of being like you used to (e.g. being dramatic, or creating drama like a girl by getting annoyed over little things, sulking, being emotionally sensitive).
- Youâre more emotionally dominant than her now, rather than being timid or hesitant around her.
- You now have a plan for your life and are motivated, focused and active in making that plan a reality, rather than being a grown man who still behaves like a teenager (e.g. wastes his spare time by watching too much TV or playing video games, distracts himself by hanging out and doing nothing with friends, rather than following through on his goals).

- You now truly believe in yourself and in your value to her, rather than feeling like you're not good enough for her.

Once you've made some adjustments, you are ready to begin re-attracting her and getting her back.

Just know that when you interact with her on a phone call and in person, she will be able to sense the changes in you simply by listening to how you talk and interact with her now.

In person, she will also notice it by observing your body language (e.g. you're calm, relaxed and confident rather than nervous, tense and insecure) and sensing your energy.

It will naturally come through and be visible to her, so don't even need to tell her that you've changed.

In fact, you shouldn't tell her that you've changed because it can come across as though you're trying to sell yourself to her, which she can see as being a desperate attempt to get her back.

So, just let her sense the changes in you and naturally feel attracted and drawn to the new and improved you.

When she does, she will feel a strong surge of respect and attraction for you again, even if she initially tries to deny it to herself.

As a result, her defenses will then come down and she will open back up to having romantic feelings for you again.

In most cases, a woman will then want to give you another chance because she worries that she will regret it if she lets you go now that you're so much more attractive and appealing to her.

That is the path that will lead you and her to getting back together.

Unfortunately, most guys don't approach the ex back process in that way, so they end up losing the love of their life.

For example: If you don't use the above approach, another path you may go down now is to

2. Be drowned by the painful emotions and lose so much confidence in yourself that you can't re-attract her or attract a new, quality woman

[image: Be drowned by the painful emotions and end up losing so much confidence in yourself that you can't re-attract her, or attract a new high quality woman]

There's no denying that being dumped by the love of your life can be very painful.

It's also understandable that you may go through a period of time where you feel sad, depressed and even a little bit hopeless.

Yet, the question you need to ask yourself is this:

Are you going to remain stuck at that stage and end up losing more and more confidence in yourself, or are you skip wallowing in self-pity and just get on with being a better, stronger version of yourself that she will find attractive?

The thing is, sometimes a guy feels so hurt and emotionally damaged after being dumped by the love of his life, that he allows those negative emotions to erode his feelings of value and self-worth as a man.

For example: He mightâ€¦!

- Start believing that his ex is too good for him and that she deserves a man who is better than him.
- Lose confidence in his attractiveness to other women, because he begins to feel like heâ€¦s not attractive or lovable enough as a man.
- Begin thinking that he will never be able to get his ex back, so why bother trying.
- Begin thinking that he got lucky with his ex and that his luck has now run out.
- Start believing that he will need to accept a less attractive woman because an attractive woman wonâ€¦t remain interested in him.
- Believe that thereâ€¦s just no way she could ever feel attracted to him again because he screwed up so badly.

Yet, thinking like that only makes him more unattractive to his ex and to other attractive women that he may meet along the way.

Why?

Attractive women are instinctively attracted to the emotional strength in men and turned off by the emotional weakness.

In other words, when a man is emotionally strong in his relationships with women, he is going to be confident, have high self-esteem, be self-assured, be determined to succeed, be assertive and heâ€¦s going to believe in his attractiveness and value to her.

Thatâ€¦s appealing to women.

Unattractive women do tend to enjoy it when a guy is weak, because the unattractive woman feels as though she may be able to keep him in a relationship due to him not even knowing his own value.

Yet, the majority of attractive women want to be with a guy who has high self-esteem, knows that he is good enough for her and can maintain and even further strengthen his confidence while in a relationship with her.

So, if you fall into the bad habit of thinking that youâ€¦re not good enough, it will naturally start to eat away at your confidence.

As a result, not only will you be less attractive to your ex, but you will also find it difficult to attract other high quality women who are looking for a truly confident man.

You may then end up having to accept a lower quality woman that youâ€¦re not sincerely attracted to, or in love with.

Donâ€¦t let that happen to you.

Sure, if you need to, go ahead and allow yourself to some of the pain of being dumped by the love of your life.

Yet, onâ€¦t allow those emotions linger for too long and cause you to start feeling insecure and unworthy of her, or other quality women.

Once youâ€¦ve allowed yourself to experience some of the pain of losing her, just pick yourself up and start moving forward with confidence, knowing that you can re-attract your ex, or other quality women if you choose to do so.

Another way of saying that is, if you want to get your ex back, you need to believe that you can.

Believing that you can starts filling you up with the kind of confidence that causes you to think, talk, behave and act in ways that are attractive to her (i.e. you're self-assured, have high self-esteem, don't doubt yourself when around her, are comfortable flirting with her and making her want you again sexually).

So, go ahead and show her (not tell her) that you know you are the man for her.

She is the love of your life and you are the love of her life.

Believe it.

Be confident.

Believe in yourself and in your value to her and let her sense that as you interact with her.

You will then be able to re-attract her back, or attract a new woman if you prefer to do that instead.

The choice is yours.

Another path you may go down now that you've been dumped by the love of your life is to

3. Ignore her and hope that she comes back to you one day

[image: Ignore her and hope that she comes back to you one day]

Sometimes, when a guy gets broken up with, he may think, "If I give her some space, she will calm down and begin seeing things differently. She will start to miss me and realize that I wasn't that bad after all. Then she will change her mind about us and give me another chance."

He will then cut off all contact with her (i.e. he doesn't text, message her on social media, phone or visit her) for a few weeks or even months, in the hope that it will make her want him again.

Yet, that almost never works.

Here's why

Ignoring a woman who has dumped you and who no longer has strong feelings for you, is usually a waste of time because she doesn't feel motivated to want to get you back.

In most cases, rather than missing her ex who is ignoring her, a woman will feel relieved that he's not trying to get her back.

For example: She may think something like, "What a relief that he's not texting me or calling me. I thought he'd make things difficult for me by begging and pleading and asking me to give him another chance but it looks like he got the message and is leaving me alone. At least now I can focus on moving on with my life and make a fresh start, without having to deal with an ex. Maybe I will go out with the girls tonight, get tipsy and flirt with some guys. This will be fun! I'm single again! I'm free! I can do whatever I want!"

Of course, at some point, a woman may become curious about why her ex hasn't been contacting her.

In some cases, she might then text or call him to see what he's been up to.

Yet, that doesn't mean she wants him back, or that she hasn't been sleeping with new guys and enjoying the single life.

In face, if she interacts with him (after weeks or months of him ignoring her) and realizes that heâs still stuck at the same level he was at when she dumped him (e.g. heâs still insecure and needy, he still doesnât know how to make her feel attracted when he interacts with her and instead makes her feel friendly, neutral or even negative feelings for him, heâs still too emotionally sensitive), it will only confirm to her that she made the right decision to break up with him.

So, if what you really want to achieve is to get the love of your life back, donât waste time ignoring her.

Sure, itâs fine to give her a few days of space to allow for things to calm down between you, but anything longer than 7 days is usually too much and can lead to herâ!

- Having enough time to get over the pain of the break up and believe that she might be better off without you.
- Feeling attracted to other guys (and liking it).
- Finding herself another guy and moving on with him.
- Believing that you donât care about her anymore.
- Getting annoyed with you for not having the balls to get her back and make the relationship better this time around.
- Wanting to get revenge on you for not trying to get her back. She then hooks up with a new guy and posts photos of him and her all over her social media accounts.
- Blocking your number, so you canât reach out and contact her when you eventually feel like doing it.
- Planning to mess with your head if you do contact her again (e.g. pretend to be interested initially and then reveal that sheâs in a relationship with a new guy and is happy). That way, she can get back at you for hurting her by ignoring her.

So, rather than ignoring your ex and hoping for her to come running back to you one day, I recommend that you approach it in a mature, manly way.

That is where you call her or interact with her in person and actively make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again (i.e. by letting her experience the new and improved you, flirting with her to build up some new, sexual tension), but donât come across as though youâre pushing for a relationship.

When you replace her old, negative thoughts and memories of you with new, positive feelings (e.g. respect, sexual attraction, excitement, love), it stops the process of her getting over you and makes her feel drawn to you again.

She immediately starts to feel like she might regret it if she doesnât give you another chance.

Another path you may go down now that youâve been dumped by the love of your life is toâ!

4. Get over her and start dating new women right away

[image: Get over her and start dating new women right away]

You might decide that even though you really do love her and want her back, you donât need her back to feel happy and fulfilled in your life.

So, rather than sitting around waiting for her to come back, you may then focus on getting over her by hooking up with new women and enjoying casual relationships.

Eventually, you might find another girl that you love and want to be with and your ex will start to become a bit of distant memory.

Yet, if she is the love of your life, it's possible that you may not ever fully get over her.

Some men take years and even decades to get over the love of their life, whereas others always miss her and wish they could have gotten her back and had another chance at the relationship.

The choice is yours though.

If you want to get over her and move on, you might

- Start focusing on your big goals in life and make progress towards achieving them.
- Begin going out to clubs and bars with your single friends to meet, attract and hook up with new women.
- Begin having sex with new women and experiencing different kinds of love with them.
- Ask women that you've always been attracted to out on dates (e.g. someone at work or university, a woman in your neighborhood or apartment building).
- Start spending more time doing things that you always wanted to do, but avoided because of your relationship with your ex (e.g. travel, start a new hobby, join a meet up group in your area).

Another path you may go down now that you've been dumped by the love of your life is to

5. Become so traumatized by the break up that you avoid relationships with women and end up feeling lonely and disconnected for many years

[image: Become so traumatized by the break up that you avoid relationships with women and end up feeling lonely and disconnected for many years]

Sometimes a guy will be so badly affected by a break up that he can't deal with the risk of getting his heart broken again and as a result, avoids relationships by distracting himself with other things (e.g. video games, projects, work, hanging out with friends).

Even though he finds other women attractive, he's just too afraid to get hurt again, so he never seems to be able to get himself to do what it takes to make a relationship happen.

At times, he may think to himself, "Love doesn't last, so why even bother giving your heart to a woman, only for her to rip it out and throw it in your face when she's had enough of you? I never want to go through what I experienced with my ex. It's just too painful. I'm better off without a woman in my life. Besides, I have more important things to focus on like my work/studies."

As a result, he may end up being alone for years and feeling bitter that he is missing out on love and good times, while other people seem to be enjoying it and getting on with it in their lives.

Don't let that happen to you.

The truth is that you can't hide from relationships and love, just because things didn't work out with your ex.

[image: Longing for connection]

You will always feel the need to have a connection with women and to be intimate with them.

Yes, she has broken your heart, but if you want her back, or if you want to enjoy a relationship with a new woman that will work, you need to be fearless when it comes to love.

You have to be courageous enough to get the woman you want, regardless of what might happen.

You can't hide from it.

It will always be there.

You will always have that desire.

Additionally, throughout life, you will always be faced with situations that you don't like or that are challenging for you.

The sooner you can accept that and get into the habit of facing your challenges head on and succeeding, the better your life will be.

You will be one of the men who others look at and think, â€œHow does he do it? His woman respects him, is attracted to him and loves him. He has become successful in his career. He gets things done. How does he do it?â€

Simple.

He doesn't hide from the challenges of life.

He faces them head on, succeeds and then goes onto enjoy the next level of success that comes after that.

You can do that by starting now with the challenge of getting your ex back.

Start with the first step: Re-attract her.

Then, continue on with the next step: Let her sense that she will be missing out if she doesn't give you another chance.

Then, continue on with the next step.

Before you know it, she will be in your arms, kissing you, telling you that she loves you and never wanting to leave you.

You can do it.

2 Common Problems You May Encounter When Trying to Get Her Back

1. None of your family or friends want to help, or they simply can't offer you the help you need because they don't know how to achieve what you want

In many cases, family and friends get caught up in the middle of a break up whether they want to or not.

For example: A guy may turn to his parents, brothers or sisters after being dumped by the love of his life.

If he asks them for help to get her back, they will usually try to talk him out of the idea by saying things like, â€œThere's plenty of fish in the sea. Just give it some time. You will find another girl and move on. Donâ€™t worry about her. If she wants you back, she will come back.â€

Alternatively, mutual friends may be reluctant to help, because they donâ€™t want to pick sides and seem to favor him over his ex.

In the end, the only one who can help you is yourself, or someone like me who has helped men from all over the world to get an ex woman back.

Start by watching this, if you havenâ€™t watched any of the other videos Iâ€™ve put into this article for youâ€

What do you really want?

Do you want her back?

Do you want to move on?

Remember: Itâ€™s your decision whether or not you want to get her back, or move on with a new woman.

Itâ€™s also up to you to take action and start making this happen.

I can show you the way, but youâ€™ve got to follow through on the steps to get her back.

2. No one seems to understand how much she means to you and why you want her back so badly

Most people you talk to about your break up will try and make you feel better by telling you that youâ€™ll get over it, or meet another girl one day.

They have good intentions, but it can be very annoying to see that no-one really understands how much she means to you and how difficult it will be to find another girl like her.

She is unique and the connection you and her shared canâ€™t be replicated with another woman.

Yes, you could love another woman, but it wouldnâ€™t be the same.

Most people just donâ€™t get that, or donâ€™t want to talk about it.

So, do yourself a big favor and stop discussing your break up with people who will just tell you to get over it, or to focus on meeting new women.

Of course, if you want to meet new women, then go ahead.

Yet, if you want to get her back, donâ€™t go discussing your break up with people who arenâ€™t going to support you or help you achieve that.

You know what you want, so just focus on making it happen.

Men all over the world get ex women back every day.

Itâ€™s normal, common and you might just be the next guy who does it.

Sheâ€™s the love of your life.

The choice is yours.

Move on without her, or get her back?

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me Because She is Unhappy With Her Life

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's what you need to know to get her back:

1. Understand that many women use that as an excuse to break up with nice guys

[image: Many women use that as an excuse to break up with nice guys]

Imagine this.

A woman finds herself in a relationship that seems perfect.

Her and her man never fight.

Her man always treats her well and all her friends are always saying things like, â€œYou guys are so cute together,â€ or â€œHe's so nice. I wish I had a relationship like yours.â€

Yet, even though everything seems idyllic, deep down, she doesn't feel happy with him.

She knows that something is missing, but she can't seem to pinpoint it.

Eventually, she decides to break up with him, even though she can't really find a good reason why.

Yet, she can't just say something like, â€œI want to break up with you. It's over.

Goodbyeâ€ because her man will naturally want to know her reasons why and she won't have a valid explanation for him.

So, rather than getting caught up in a long discussion about why she is breaking up with him and possibly being convinced to change her mind, she instead decides to use her unhappiness with life as an excuse to end the relationship.

In that way, not only can she get out of the relationship without hurting her guy's feelings, or having to deal with him trying to convince her to change her mind, but she can also make him feel like he should be supportive towards her and give her space.

As a result, he will likely say something like, â€œI don't want to lose you. If you need a little time to work on yourself, I want you to know that I will be here to support you. If there's anything you need me to do for you, you only need to ask and I will be there for you. Just know that I love you and I want to be with you.â€

She can then use the time apart to easily move on, without too much fuss.

Of course, her sneaky way to exit the relationship doesn't mean that he can't get her back.

He can get her back if he creates a strong sexual and romantic spark that she feels like she would regret missing out on if she didn't give him another chance.

When a guy does that, a woman will almost always quickly change her mind about breaking up with him.

A woman will often then say something like, â€œAlthough many areas of my life are really screwed up right now, I've come to realize that the one sane thing is you. You make me feel safe, grounded and happy. I think I made a mistake by breaking up with you. I'm sorry for what I put you through. Let's get back together. I love you

Then, rather than her feeling dissatisfied and restless, she now feels lucky to have him as her man. As a result, she will begin to try harder to keep him happy by being a good, loving, devoted woman. If he treats her well in return and is able to keep the spark alive, the relationship will stay together and remain happy for life.

The same can happen to you.

If you want your ex back, you need to focus on reactivating her feelings for you, by offering her the attraction experience she really wants, but hasn't been getting from you.

For example:

She wants you to be more emotionally masculine, rather than being so soft or timid with her.

She wants you to be more self-motivated and emotionally independent, rather than needing her to guide you and support you all the time.

She wants you to make her feel sexy and desirable, rather than making her feel neutral around you.

She wants you to be able to laugh at her when she is being a pain in the butt, rather putting up with it and treating her even nicer, in the hope that she treats you better in return.

When she can see that you're an upgraded version of the man you were before, then the idea of getting back together will naturally begin to seem appealing to her.

2. Know that she will be happy if she meets a guy who can attract her in the ways that were lacking in your relationship

[image: She will be happy if she meets a guy who can attract her in the ways that were lacking in your relationship with her]

The mistake that a lot of guys make in a situation like yours, is to assume that because a woman is unhappy with her life, she will remain single and alone for quite a while after the break up.

Yet, the reality is that the majority of women try to move on quickly after a break up so they can feel better about themselves, or so they can create an extra barrier between themselves and their ex getting back together.

Additionally, even if a woman doesn't try to move on quickly, if she meets a guy who sparks her sexual and romantic feelings in a way that was missing from her relationship with her ex, she will naturally start crushing on him and become open to being with him sexually and romantically.

This is why, if your ex is saying that she is unhappy with her life and is using that as a reason to break up, you shouldn't just assume that she's going to be too sad or depressed to move on.

She can and she will.

Additionally, what you also need to be aware of is that when a woman is happy in a relationship, she won't want to lose what she has with him, no matter how terrible the rest of her life is.

Even if she is depressed or unhappy with her life, she will do everything she can to keep the man that she is in love with, respectful of and attracted to.

She's not going to just break up with a man who makes her feel happy, because she is unhappy.

That rarely, if ever happens and if it does, the woman is mentally ill.

No normal woman is going to leave a man who makes her feel respect, attraction and love and want to be with him.

It just doesn't happen.

So, if you want your girlfriend back, the best approach is to first understand her REAL reasons for breaking up with you, so you can then adjust and change your approach to re-attract her and get her back.

For example: From now on, when interacting with your ex, ask yourself

- Am I turning her on (e.g. by being confident, emotionally masculine, charismatic, funny), or am I turning her off (e.g. by being insecure, unsure of myself, timid, hesitant or needy)?
- Does she feel relaxed and happy to be talking to me, or does she feel tense, stressed out and like she wants to get away from me to be able to feel at ease again?
- Am I making her feel like an attractive, desirable woman, or do I make her feel more like a neutral friend?
- Does my attitude, actions and behavior make her feel respect and attraction for me, or does it make her look down on me and feel like she is with a guy who doesn't yet know how to be a real man?

When you do it correctly, she naturally starts to feel drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her and makes her want to give you another chance (i.e. because you're now giving her the attraction experience she always wanted from you, but didn't get).

She then starts to think things like, "Maybe it's not too late to get back together again. Maybe being with the new and improved version of him is what I need to finally feel happy."

When that happens, getting her back becomes easy.

3. Get clear on what has been secretly turning her off about you

[image: Get clear on what has secretly been turning her off about you]

Sometimes a woman will feel turned off by a guy for subtle reasons, which she will never tell him about (e.g. he was too timid in the bedroom, he gave her too much power during conversations and it made her feel more dominant than him, he lacked confidence around other men, which made her feel unsafe and ashamed to be his girl).

This is why, if you want to get back with your ex, you need to understand the subtle, more secret reasons she felt turned off by you.

Only by discovering that (on your own though. She won't want to tell you), will you be able to make the correct adjustments to your approach to her to naturally re-attract her.

So, if you're unsure about what those reasons might be, here are some questions to help you figure it out

- Did you confidently go after what you want in life like a real man, or did you always seem to need your girlfriend's advice, approval or say-so before you felt confident enough to take action?
- Were you confident and self-assured no matter what you were faced with in life, or did you break down emotionally and regularly lean on her for emotional support?

- Did you pass her confidence tests by not being affected (e.g. when she threw a tantrum to get a rise out of you, when she pretended to disagree with you during conversations to see how youâ€¦d react, when she rolled her eyes at you to see if youâ€¦d become insecure), or did you mostly become upset, defensive or annoyed when she tested you?
- Did you make an effort to support her as she tried to make her dreams a reality, or were you a critical or resistant towards her making progress in life because you feared it might cause her to leave you behind?
- Did you give her the time and attention she needed, or did you tend to spend more time with your friends (on work, or playing video games) than her?
- Did you make the effort to get to know her friends and family, or were you distant and disinterested in making the effort, even though you knew it was important to her?
- Did you put ongoing, consistent effort into achieving your big goals in life, or did you prefer to live day-to-day and try to make yourself seem busy so you could avoid rising through the levels of your true potential as a man?
- Did you maintain her sexual attraction for you, or did she end up feeling more like your friend or roommate?

After reading through those questions, you will most-likely have a better idea of some of the subtle things that might have turned your ex off about you.

With that knowledge, you can now change your approach to her to make her feel attracted to the new and improved you.

When she feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she will begin to have doubts about her decision to break up with you.

You can then get her back into a relationship that is even better than before.

You can also ensure that you put yourself in the position of power, where she feels the need to maintain your interest and keep you happy.

As long as a man is treating her well, thatâ€¦s the position a woman really wants to be in when in a relationship.

Most women wonâ€¦t go around admitting it, but itâ€¦s what they really want.

All you have to do is look at the women who are the happiest in their relationship with a man, the most affectionate and who treat him with respect and you will see that the man makes her feel the need to treat him well.

â€¦and she loves it.

Unfortunately, most guys donâ€¦t realize that, so they end up putting way more effort into the relationship than the woman and hope that it makes her love him.

Thatâ€¦s not how women work.

Youâ€¦ve got to make her feel lucky to be with you, to the point where she wants to treat you well and never lose you.

That is what makes a woman feel happy, energized and excited in a relationship.

4. She will want to remain broken up if she believes that the relationship would be too stressful to maintain

[image: She will want to remain broken up if she believes that the relationship would be too stressful to maintain]

For example: A guy will make a relationship feel too stressful because he will

- Text her or call her way too much.
- Need her constant love and attention to feel good about himself.
- Sulk and get into arguments with her if she doesn't give him her full attention, or seems preoccupied with other things (e.g. her phone, social media).
- Make horrible decisions without asking her that end up putting him and her into financial distress.
- Need to have long, stressful discussions about fairly simple things before he feels confident enough to make a decision.
- Be unreliable and not keep his word to her (e.g. she asks him to run an errand for her and he forgets to do it, which then gets her into trouble at work, with the government, with family or friends).
- Try to get her to think, behave and act more like him (i.e. a man), not realizing that women find that stressful and a turn off. He doesn't have the awareness to imagine that if she was trying to do the opposite to him (i.e. get him to think, behave and act more like a woman), then he would think she is crazy, annoying and stressful to be around.
- Spend all his spare time with her rather than doing anything else, to the point where she feels smothered by him and turned off by the fact that he's not rising through the levels of his true potential as a man by pursuing big goals.

When a woman finds herself in a relationship like that, she will begin to feel as though it's just too much for her to handle or deal with.

As a result, she may think, 'I've already got so many problems in my life. What I don't need is a boyfriend who makes me feel even more tense, stressed and agitated. This is just too much for me to handle right now. Relationships aren't supposed to be this hard. Maybe it's time that him and I broke up.'

Yet, rather than say something like, 'I don't have feelings for you anymore and I want to break up,' and risk him trying to change her mind (making things even more stressful for her), she will just say something along the lines of, 'I'm sorry, but I can't be with you right now. I'm unhappy with my life and if we stay together, I'm just going to bring you down with me. I need time to sort myself out before I can be in a relationship. Please accept that and don't make things harder for me than they already are. Give me the space I need.'

He then feels like has no choice but to be a good man and let her go.

In most cases, she then uses the time to move on without him.

Avoid the Following 3 Mistakes if You Want to Get Your Unhappy Girlfriend Back

Regardless of what your ex girlfriend is going through right now, she will put all that behind her and get back with you if you make her feel a renewed sense of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

To ensure that you achieve that, try to avoid making the following mistakes that other guys make when in a situation like yours:

1. Trying to be her therapist

[image: Trying to be her therapist]

If a guy notices that his woman is unhappy with her life, he might decide to try and fix her problems for her, or at least give her a shoulder to cry on and some advice on how to deal with what she's going through.

Seems like a good idea, right?

Wrong.

Rather than making her want to stay in a relationship with him, his therapist approach makes her feel like he is trying to fix her, which automatically kills her sexual feelings for him.

What works is when you make a woman feel sexually attracted and turned on by how you interact with her in a moment, rather than trying to be Mr. Fix it, so she can then get back on with being with you.

So, when a guy tries to fix his woman's emotional progress, she simply leads him around in circles because she is unwilling admit the real, more subtle reasons why she's unhappy with him.

As a result, his attempts to fix her just end up annoying her and making her feel misunderstood.

For example: She says that she doesn't know what she wants from life anymore and he tries to fix her by getting her to think of what she wants to do in life.

Yet, that isn't the real problem.

If a woman is attracted to her man and in love with him, she will be happy and won't break up with him because she's unsure what to do with her career.

Saying that she doesn't know what she wants to do in life is just an excuse.

It's a diversion, a distraction.

She can't come out and say, I'm breaking up with you because you're too soft emotionally. When I'm being a pain in the butt, you never have the balls to laugh at me and put me back in my place. You just try harder to be nicer and avoid my tantrums. You can't handle a woman like me.

So, if you want to get your girlfriend back, don't bother trying to be her therapist and solve all her problems for her.

Instead, briefly (I repeat, briefly!) give her some emotional support if she wants it, but then focus on sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Remember: The more sexually and romantically attracted to you she feels, the less she will want her problems with life to ruin what she's experiencing with you.

You will be the thing that makes her feel the happiest, so she won't want to lose that.

That is how it works.

However, if you try to fix her by acting like her therapist and trying to come up with solutions for her, she'll end up feeling annoyed that you don't even understand her and what is really going on.

As a result, she won't feel motivated to interact with you or be around you, which will make getting her back difficult for you.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Trying really hard to make her happy and coming across as desperate

When a woman is feeling sad or stressed out about her life, it's a man's natural instinct to try and protect her, take away her pain and make her feel better.

For example: He might

- Buy her things that he thinks will please her.
- Always try to crack jokes around her to take her mind off her problems.
- Offer to take her on vacations to distract her.
- Listen to her and be there for her, even when she's being unnecessarily dramatic and emotional.
- Suck up to her by being extra considerate of her feelings, needs and wants.

The thing is, if a relationship is happy and the woman looks up to her man and respects him, then she will appreciate it if he occasionally is extra nice to her if she is going through a hard time.

Yet, when a man does that because he has no idea how to make her feel attracted to him, respectful of him and in love with him, then it becomes annoying to her.

She sees his attempts as being out of desperation because he has no idea what else to do to make her happy.

He doesn't realize that making a woman happy in a relationship is simple and making a woman really happy in a relationship, is even easier.

Making a woman really happy is about making her feel the need to impress you, treat you well and show you love, while also being good to her.

That is what works.

Unfortunately, most guys don't know how to do the first part and instead try to compensate for their lack of ability in that area by doing more and more for the woman.

Yet, that isn't what makes her happy in a relationship.

It's not what women will go around admitting, but it's what happens.

Women want to feel the need to impress you, treat you well and show you love, while also seeing that you are good to them.

That is what works.

3. Trying to get her back by offering her the same kind of attraction experience that got you dumped in the first place

If your approach to her hasn't been working, don't keep doing it.

Try something different.

Start attracting her in new ways that she hasn't experienced before with you and likely never thought you were capable of.

When she experiences that, her feelings towards you immediately begin to change and she opens up to giving you another chance.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

6 Reasons Why Your Ex Girlfriend Says She Doesn't Know What She Wants Anymore

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

1. She likes you as a person, but doesn't feel a sexual or romantic spark with you anymore

If your ex doesn't want to get back with you and is using the excuse that she doesn't know what she wants anymore, the reality is that she just doesn't feel drawn to you enough in a sexual and romantic way.

She's almost certainly not going to tell you that though.

Why?

Well, she doesn't want to hurt your feelings by telling you that you just haven't been manly enough for her, so she's not feeling attracted to like she knows she should be.

[image: She wants you to be more manly, but doesn't want to have to tell you that]

She also doesn't want to tell you, "I'm not attracted to you because your behavior isn't manly enough," only to then hear you, "I promise to be more manly from now on."

She just wants you to get it and re-attract her, or if you can't get it, just give and let her get on with trying to find a man who does.

So, do you get it?

If not, this should clear things up for you!

For a guy to maintain a woman's feelings of attraction and love and to make her feel like a real woman in the relationship with him, he needs to be able to make her feel girly and feminine in comparison to his masculinity.

Making her feel girly in comparison to your masculinity comes down to how differently you think, talk, feel, behave and act in comparison to her.

So many guys make the mistake of suppressing their masculinity around their girlfriend (or wife) and end up being too cute, boyish or even a little feminine for her liking.

She stops feeling the natural, raw attraction that females feel to masculine males and when that happens, she begins to wonder if you and her are actually a good match after all.

Unfortunately, where many guys go wrong, is in thinking that being a nice, supportive guy to a woman in a relationship will be the right approach to keep her happy, attracted and in love for life.

A guy may think, "As long as I treat her well, take care of her and be a good man, she will be happy and want to stay with me."

He is then shocked when his woman suddenly breaks up with him and says something along the lines of, "I'm sorry, I think we need to take a break. You're a good man and I really to appreciate everything you've done for me, but something isn't right. I have to follow my heart. It's confusing for me. I don't know why I'm feeling this way. I just don't know what I want anymore. I think I need to be alone for a while."

In some cases, a guy will then cry and plead with her to not leave him.

In other cases, he will get angry at her for being so selfish.

In other cases, he will try to get answers from her as to why she is feeling that way.

Yet, she won't be able to tell him because she doesn't understand it herself, or she won't want to tell him because she doesn't want him to put on an act of being manly around her when that's not who he is.

Here's the thing|

Even though a woman definitely appreciates it when her man is a good guy to her, it's not the main thing that makes her want to have sex with him and stick with him for life.

What is?

His ability to create a relationship dynamic that makes her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with him (e.g. feminine, girly, free to be an emotional woman).

Being a good man to her is definitely something that helps the relationship stay together, but without the fundamental feeling of sexual and romantic attraction based on her feeling girly and feminine in comparison to you, the relationship will go stale.

The reality is that the less feminine and girly a woman feels in her man's presence, the more she will disconnect from her feelings of sexual attraction for him.

When that happens, she will begin thinking things like, I don't know what's wrong with me. Why am I feeling so unhappy in this relationship? He's a really good guy and he treats me well. He's better than other boyfriends I've had. Yet, he feels more like a friend to me than anything else. I like him as a person, but I just don't feel drawn to him the way that a woman is supposed to be drawn to her man. There's just no spark between us. I feel so confused. I just don't know what I want anymore. There was a spark at the beginning, but I just don't feel it with him anymore. He seems to feel it with me. What is wrong with me? Maybe I just need some time on my own to figure things out, or maybe I need to try to give him another chance for a while. Either way, I know one thing for sure| I am unhappy in this relationship and I don't know how much longer I can put up with it.

She may then find herself becoming increasingly cold, snappy or argumentative towards him, until she eventually gets fed up and decides to break up with him.

He is then left thinking, What the heck just happened? I thought we were good together? The relationship was working. How could she just leave me like that?

It's simple.

A lack of fundamental attraction based on the fact that the relationship was too neutral (i.e. felt more like a friendship, than a relationship where she was able to feel girly in comparison to his masculinity).

Here's the thing|

If you want your ex girlfriend back, you have to understand that she's almost certainly not going to change her mind about you unless you begin making her feel like a feminine, girly and sexually attractive woman when she's with you.

When you make her feel that way around you, her feelings about you will automatically change, even if she wasn't intending on that happening.

She suddenly starts to think things like, “Why am I feeling so attracted to him again? I don’t get it, but I like it. I want to kiss him now. I want to have sex with him. I should just do it and see how I feel afterwards.”

They then hook up and if the guy is able to continue being masculine around her, she will want him back.

On the other hand, if you attempt to get her back by trying to prove to her what a good guy you are (e.g. by being extra nice to her, offering to do whatever she wants to make her happy, running errands for her, helping her with her bills, being extra supportive and sensitive), don’t be surprised if she says something along the lines of, “I’m sorry, but I don’t know what I want anymore. I feel so confused. Maybe we’re better off just being friends for now. I don’t know. I need time to think about this.”

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend says she doesn’t know what she wants anymore is

2. She feels like a relationship with you is too much work

[image: She feels like a relationship with you is too much work]

In some cases, a woman might find herself in a relationship that has just become too stressful for her to deal with anymore.

For example:

He always needs her to reassure him that she loves him and if she doesn’t, he becomes insecure, clingy or controlling.

He texts her too much every day and she doesn’t have much time for anything else.

She feels like she’s always the one trying to improve the relationship and fix any issues they have, while her guy likes to act as though nothing is wrong or he refuses to acknowledge that he may be making some mistakes.

He keeps making promises to change (e.g. stop being so jealous and controlling, stop expecting her to make most of the decisions for them), but once things calm down between them again, he always goes back to his old patterns of behavior.

He makes her feel like nothing she does is good enough for him (e.g. he belittles her, mocks her, is never happy with anything she does for him).

She feels as though they have to put in a lot of effort into the relationship to make it feel like a normal relationship, because they aren’t really in love.

So, rather than continue to deal with the stress of being in a relationship with a guy like that, a woman will often say something along the lines of, “I don’t know what I want anymore. I need some space to think things through,” as a way of distancing herself from him.

She will then focus on finding herself a new man who doesn’t make being with him feel like hard work.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend says she doesn’t know what she wants anymore is

3. She wants to break up with you, but doesn't know how to say it directly

[image: She wants to break up with you, but doesn't know how to say it directly]

Sometimes, a woman might realize that although she initially felt attracted to her man and wanted to be with him, over time her feelings for him began to fade.

This can happen when:

- He started off being confident and emotionally strong, but became insecure and unsure of himself over time.
- He treated her like a sexy woman in the beginning of the relationship, but ended up treating her like a friend.
- He took the lead in the beginning of the relationship to seem manly, but eventually handed over power to her and expected her to call the shots.

When a woman notices things like that, her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him begin to fade and eventually she may decide to break up with him.

However, she might not know how to go about it (e.g. because it's her first break up, she doesn't want to hurt his feelings, she doesn't want him to talk her out of her decision, she's worried he might react badly and cry or get angry, she's had a previous boyfriend become very angry when she was too honest about her reasons for ending the relationship).

So, rather than risk things getting out of control, she may simply say something like, "I don't know what I want anymore," in the hopes that her boyfriend will back off and give her some space.

She will then try to quickly move on and find a new man, rather than having to deal with an ex who is trying to convince her to change her mind.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend says she doesn't know what she wants anymore is that

4. You have made her your main purpose in life and now she feels confused about how she should be approaching her life

[image: You have made her your purpose in life and she now she feels lost]

Part of what it means to be the man in a relationship with a woman, is about taking on the role as the one who is mostly responsible for guiding you and her to a better future together.

She play some part in that, but if you want you and her to be happy and not end up going around in circles (i.e. because most women change their mind like the weather), you need to embrace your masculinity and lead the way.

You need to make a decision on what you and her want for the future, make plans to make it happen and then keep going and never give up.

You don't have to achieve massive things in life to be happy.

Just set your purpose and goals based on what would make you and her happy and then work towards that, without allowing her changing moods to affect your motivation to achieve the goals.

If you can do that, you and her will have something to aim for together, make great progress in life and most likely achieve a lot more than you intended.

Why?

Simple.

Most guys do not set big goals, follow through on them and never give up.

Most guys have vague dreams that they wish they could achieve, but they never follow through until completion.

As a result, their girlfriend becomes their purpose in life and they cling to her and their distractions (e.g. watching sports, hanging out with friends, getting intoxicated, playing video games) to make them feel as though they are living a purposeful life.

Yet, as time goes by, a guy like that will eventually notice that he has wasted so much time avoiding his real dreams, while a few other men that he is aware of in his life, have followed through on their dreams and achieved success and a feeling of fulfillment in life.

The fact is, when you can be one of the rare men who has the determination and confidence to never give up on your goals, you will be amazed at how happy you are with yourself and how respectful your woman is towards you.

It's a completely different life compared to a man who hides from his potential behind his woman and distractions.

Some women are aware of this, whereas most women just sense it instinctively.

If their man is a hider, they will naturally feel restless and unhappy in the relationship and will nag and complain about how he spends his time.

Eventually, it can be one of the things that leads to a breakdown of the relationship.

It's just how things work.

If a man doesn't provide direction for him and his woman and instead clings to her to feel safe as he hides from his potential as a man, a woman's natural instincts kick in and she begins to feel as though something isn't right.

Progress needs to be made.

There has to be clear goals, ambitions and progress together as a couple, not just a relationship based on hanging out and going around in circles.

When a woman finds herself in a relationship with a man who lacks purpose or the ability to follow through and achieve his set goals, she begins to feel unsafe around her future.

She then begins to feel as though she is going to have to step up and be a more masculine woman, by becoming determined to achieve goals to ensure a safer future.

Yet, if she does that and notices that her man is now looking at her as the leader and feeling like he can just let her make all the decisions and do all the work for them, she begins to resent him.

Not because she is lazy and doesn't want to do some of the work.

It's not about that.

It's about sexual and romantic attraction.

In order for a woman to remain sexually and romantically attracted to her man, he has to be able to make her feel feminine and girly in comparison to his masculinity.

Part of being a masculine man is not hiding behind a woman, like a boy who needs his mother.

You have to be able to stand up on your own and make things happen and when you do that, you will see your woman standing right next to you, feeling sexually attracted to you, respecting you, supporting you and loving you.

She will do some of the work too, but she has to see that youâ€¢re not hiding behind her.

So, if you made your ex girlfriend your purpose in life so you could hide behind her and avoid rising through the levels of your true potential as a man, you need to show her that you are completely different now.

You are now beginning through the levels of life and reaching for your true potential, with or without her.

You donâ€¢t have to achieve big things to show her that.

You just have to start being like that for real.

When you focus on making progress in your life and begin making steps towards achieving your goals and ambitions, she automatically starts looking at you as being much more attractive relationship option than you were before.

She stops looking at you as her emotionally dependent ex who made her feel unsure about her future and begins to feel like she could be safe with you, respectful of you and attracted to you once again.

She then starts to feel clearer about what she wants (i.e. to be with you).

Her guard comes down and she opens back up to the idea of being your girl again.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend says she doesnâ€¢t know what she wants anymore isâ€¢|

5. She's been feeling more and more attracted to other men lately and doesn't know why

[image: She has been feeling more and more attracted to other men lately and doesn't know why]

When a guy begins to think, act and behave in unattractive ways in his relationship with a woman, itâ€¢s usually only a matter of time before she begins to feel attracted to other guys, even if she doesnâ€¢t want to.

For example: Imagine a guy who is always getting jealous of his woman in a relationship.

He constantly reads her e-mails, texts and social media messages and gets into arguments with her if he notices that sheâ€¢s communicating with other guys, even if itâ€¢s purely platonic (i.e. the guy is just a friend or a co-worker).

This turns her off because women arenâ€¢t attracted to insecurity and emotional weakness in men.

So, if she then happens to interact with another guy who is confident in himself and seems relaxed and easy-going around her, she may begin feeling attracted to him instead.

She may then begin thinking things like, â€¢Iâ€¢m not the kind of woman who would cheat on her boyfriend, but I canâ€¢t hide the fact that lately, Iâ€¢ve been feeling attracted to other men. I know I shouldnâ€¢t just leave him because he is insecure, but itâ€¢s really annoying to me. Sometimes I have to ask myself why Iâ€¢m putting up with his jealousy, when I could find myself a more confident man.â€¢

When she gets to the point whereâ€¢s she had enough of feeling turned off by him, she will decide to end the relationship and try to find a guy who has the trait that her ex lacked.

For example:

If her ex was clingy, a woman will usually go for a guy who is emotionally independent and focused on achieving his goals and dreams in life, regardless of whether she sticks with him or not.

If her ex was too emotionally sensitive and often got upset or worked up about every little problem in his life, a woman will usually go for a guy who is emotionally strong and faces the challenges in his life head on, rather than whining about them.

If her ex was too submissive and timid around her, the next guy a woman feels a lot of attraction for and wants to date, will usually be much more masculine in his thinking, behavior and actions.

If her ex treated her more like a neutral friend in the relationship, a woman will usually then look for a guy who makes her feel like an attractive, desirable woman when sheâ€¢s with him.

So, if you want to get your ex girlfriend back before she moves on with another guy, itâ€¢s essential that you understand what has been attracting her to other men lately.

Then, you need to quickly make some attractive changes to yourself, so you can re-spark her feelings for you.

Essentially, youâ€¢ve got to learn from your past mistakes (e.g. youâ€¢re no longer insecure and needy, youâ€¢re so much more emotionally masculine in the way that you think, act and behave now, youâ€¢re more relaxed and easy-going than you were before, you are willing to do what it takes to achieve your goals) and bounce back with an improved ability to make her feel respect, attraction and love for you.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend says she doesnâ€¢t know what she wants anymore isâ€¢

6. Her girlfriends are enjoying the single life and she feels like her relationship with you is boring

[image: Her girlfriends have been enjoying the single life and she feels like her relationship with you is boring]

Sometimes, a woman will get into a relationship with a guy because sheâ€¢s bored of the single life and feels like she wants to settle down.

Yet, if the relationship feels boring, she may begin to envy the freedom and excitement her single girlfriends are experiencing.

For example: Imagine a woman is sitting at home when one of her single girlfriends calls her on the phone and tells her that she went to the new trendy club in town over the weekend.

She then goes into detail about how great the music was, how her and the other girls danced until dawn, how they flirted and possibly even hooked up for a one night stand.

If a woman is happy and in love with her man, then sheâ€¢s not going to feel like she is missing out, because she has what she wants.

Yet, if she is bored in the relationship and isnâ€¢t in love, she will naturally feel a bit jealous of her single girlfriends.

She may then begin wondering things like, â€œMaybe I settled into a relationship too soon. Maybe I should have enjoyed being single for a little while longer. I donâ€™t feel like Iâ€™m in love and happy. Iâ€™m bored with him. I just donâ€™t know what I want anymore.â€

She might decide to break up with her boyfriend and join her single friends on the party circuit.

Yet, to avoid a nasty break up with her boyfriend, she will say something like, â€œI donâ€™t know what I want anymore. I need some time to be on my own.â€

This will ensure that she has enough time to get out there, meet new guys and move on.

She can then tell her boyfriend, â€œSorry, itâ€™s over between us now. Iâ€™ve met another guy and Iâ€™m happy with him, so please respect that. I wish you all the best.â€

So, if your ex girlfriend is saying that she doesnâ€™t know what she wants anymore, it may be because somewhere along the line she started feeling bored in her relationship with you (e.g. because you stopped making her feel attracted, excited, turned on).

If thatâ€™s the case, she is almost certainly going to try to make herself feel better by hooking up with new guys, until she can find a guy who gives her the kind of attraction and love experience she really wants in a relationship.

This is why, if you want her back, you have to understand what to change or adjust about your approach to her, so she wants that with you.

2 Common Mistakes to Be Aware of With an Ex Girlfriend Who Says That She Doesnâ€™t Know What She Wants Anymore

1. Trying to make her want the relationship by telling her how much she means to you

Sometimes a guy will pour his heart out to his ex as a way of hopefully convincing her to give him another chance.

Yet, it usually doesnâ€™t have the effect heâ€™s looking for.

Rather than making her think, â€œOMG! He really does love me. That clears everything up in my mind and makes me want to be with him too,â€ she usually pulls away even more and thinks something along the lines of, â€œI know that he cares a lot for me. Iâ€™ve never doubted that. Itâ€™s just that Iâ€™m not sure about him. I donâ€™t feel the same way that he does about me. I like him, but I donâ€™t love him right now. I appreciate what we had, but Iâ€™m not feeling drawn to him anymore. The spark just isnâ€™t there.â€

This is why, telling your ex how much she means to you is usually a complete waste of time.

You are telling her how much you love her and want her, which then makes her realize that she doesnâ€™t feel the same way about you.

If you want her back, you have to understand that what matters most right now are her feelings for you, not your feelings for her.

So, focus on using interactions to reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings to make her want you back.

When you do that, she won't be confused about what she wants.

She will want you.

You will then give her another chance with you and build on her feelings, so she becomes worried about potentially losing you.

That's how a man should approach it.

That is what works.

On the other hand, here's an example of what doesn't work!

2. Being extra nice and supportive towards her, when what is really missing is a sexual spark

Sometimes a guy thinks that if he is very nice, sweet and supportive to his ex girlfriend, she will eventually snap out of her confused state and want to get back with him.

She will realize that no other guy will treat her as well as him and then give him another chance.

Unfortunately, sexual attraction doesn't work that way.

Here's the thing!

When there's no sexual spark, a woman just won't feel motivated to give her ex another chance because she can see that it won't work.

She will see that he's trying to get her back based on a friendship, on being supportive and on being there for her.

Yet, the reality is that, while it's totally fine to be supportive and good to a woman, it's not the thing that makes her feel sexually attracted and turned on in a relationship.

So, whatever you do, just make sure you're not pretending to be an innocent friend who isn't interested in her in a sexual or romantic way anymore.

If you act like a friend, you will end up in the friend zone with her.

Before you know it, she will tell you that she's met another guy and will ask you to respect that.

So, if you want her back, don't waste time being Mr. Friendly towards her.

Make the feelings sexual, initiate a kiss and sex and then enjoy the great times ahead with her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

We Broke Up and Got Back Together: 4 Examples

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Every day, all over the world, couples do get back together after a break up.

Even in extreme cases, where the man thinks that it's too late, he is often able to get his woman back by re-attracting her and getting her to forgive his past mistakes.

It's so common, but hardly anyone talks about it and it's most-likely kept between the couples themselves.

Yet, it does happen.

Here are 4 common examples of how a relationship will break up and then how the man will get his woman back:

1. A woman breaks up with a guy because he has become too insecure

[image: A woman breaks up with a guy because he has become too insecure]

The relationship ended because the guy gradually lost confidence in himself and in his value to his woman over time.

Although he presented an attractive version of himself initially to get her interested and begin the relationship (e.g. he was confident, self-assured, emotionally strong), somewhere along the line, he began to change into a less attractive version of himself (e.g. insecure, self-doubting, emotionally sensitive).

As a result of his decreasing confidence, he began to realize that it would be difficult for him to attract another woman now.

He could see how nervous and insecure he felt around other women he found attractive and how they seemed to be turned off by him.

Noticing that, he naturally began to become insecure about losing his girlfriend.

For example: He began thinking things like, “She is my everything. What if I lose her? How will I cope without her?” or, “What if she meets another guy who is better than me? Will she dump me for him?”

He then began to focus all his energy on her and make her the centre of his world (e.g. by significantly reducing the amount of time he spent with friends or on his hobbies and other interests, just so he could be around her at all times).

As a result, he became clingy and would react in an insecure way if she wasn't making him feel loved and reassured.

He also felt unhappy and betrayed when she decided to go out with her friends or colleagues, or wanted to do things without him (e.g. focus on her own hobbies or interests).

He got jealous of any other guys in her life (e.g. male friends, coworkers, friends on social media).

This led to him constantly asking her things like, “You still love me, don't you?” or, “You do know that you mean everything to me and that I wouldn't be able to survive if you ever decided to break up with me, right?” or, “You would never cheat on me, would you?”

Initially, she tried to reassure him by saying something along the lines of, â€œOf course I still love you! How can you even think I would do anything to hurt you? Youâ€™re my guy and I only want to be with you, so relax and stop worrying so much.â€

However, over time, his clingy, needy, insecure behavior began to drive a wedge between them and erode her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him.

Eventually, she couldnâ€™t take it anymore and the thing he feared the most became a reality â€” she broke up with him.

Fortunately though, the shock of being dumped was exactly what he needed to shake him up and set him on the path to becoming a better man.

So, although he felt devastated at first, he didnâ€™t make the classic mistake that guys make and wallow in negative feelings of loss and despair and end up losing her for real.

Instead, he stopped focusing all his energy on how much he needed her in his life to feel good about himself and he got to the point where he wanted her back, but could live a happy and fulfilled life without her.

He became a more emotionally secure, emotionally mature and emotionally masculine man, which then automatically made him attractive to her and to other women as well.

He then got her on a phone call with him and sparked some of her feelings of respect and attraction by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to him again and then getting her to agree to meet up with him in person.

At the meet up, he continued to build up her feelings of respect and attraction for him by showing her via his attitude, conversation style, behavior and the way he reacted to her confidence tests (e.g. she talked about guys that are interested in having sex with her and dating her, flirting with the waiters/barmen), that heâ€™d become a more confident and self-assured man.

He also let her see that even though he was missing her, he wasnâ€™t sitting around feeling sorry for himself.

Instead, he was getting on with his life and doing all the things that are important to him (e.g. pursuing his goals, hanging out with his friends, enjoying his hobbies).

When she got a sense that he was no longer the insecure, needy guy she broke up with, her feelings of respect and attraction began to resurface.

He suddenly seemed more attractive to her than he has ever before, because he had grown up as a man and she felt herself drawn to the new, confident, emotionally strong man that he had become.

She then dropped her guard and decided to be his girl again, because it felt right.

Another example of a couple who broke up and got back together isâ€

2. A woman breaks up with a guy because he doesn't make her feel appreciated

[image: A woman breaks up with a guy because he doesn't make her feel appreciated]

In this example, the guy made the mistake of turning his woman off by making her feel unloved and unappreciated.

However, like most men, he wasnâ€™t a bad guy who went out of his way to make his woman feel that way.

In fact, in the beginning of their relationship he was very loving, devoted and caring towards her. He was always helpful and pulled his weight when things needed to be done (e.g. help clean up after dinner, run errands, take out the garbage or put gas in the car for her).

He was also very attentive and often noticed her efforts to look good for him, all the things she did for him (e.g. bring him coffee in bed in the morning, cook special meals for him, clean up after him) and how good she was to him.

Yet, over time, he became neglectful and stopped noticing and commenting on all the nice things she did for him.

He fell into the habit of assuming that it was okay for her to serve him and do everything for him (e.g. all the chores and errands) because she loved him.

He also stopped noticing and complimenting her on her efforts to look attractive for him (e.g. when she bought a new dress, changed her hairstyle).

Initially, she tried to make excuses to herself for his behavior by thinking things like, “He’s not that bad. I know that he loves me. I guess he’s just absentminded. He probably doesn’t even realize that he’s taking me for granted.”

However, over time, she began to feel unappreciated and unloved and unhappy in the relationship with him.

Her feelings of resentment built up and rather than want to contribute to the relationship and be a loving, devoted woman to him, she began to feel like pulling away, being closed off and treating him with less and less respect and devotion.

Eventually, she totally disconnected from her feelings for him and then decided to break up with him.

Naturally, he was stunned by her decision and kept wondering things like, “Why did this happen? What did I do wrong?” because from his perspective he thought everything was okay.

Yet, it wasn’t.

Fortunately though, he was prepared to take an honest look at himself and all his past behaviors and actions, so that he could find her real reasons for breaking up with him.

When he did that, he realized that even though he believed that he was a good man to his woman, the truth was that he had taken her for granted and made her feel unloved and unappreciated.

This realization shocked him into quickly changing.

He then called her on the phone to apologize to her (in a confident, emotionally strong way), by saying something along the lines of, “Hey, I just want to say how sorry I am for what happened. I realize now what a jerk I was to you and how I took you for granted. You were a kind, loving, amazing woman to me and I didn’t show you the appreciation you deserved. Instead, I thought that because you loved me, it was okay to be selfish and not pull my weight in the relationship with you. I made a mistake, but I’m not perfect and neither is anyone else. Everyone makes mistakes sometimes in a relationship and as long as the person who messed up can learn from those mistakes and become a better person as a result, it doesn’t have to be the end. Of course, I don’t expect you to take me back because I’m saying that to you. However, maybe we can put it behind us and try to be friends now.”

From there, he used humor to ease the tension between them and make her laugh, smile and feel happy to be talking to him again and asked her to meet up for a quick cup of coffee to say hello as friends.

At the meet up, she was able to see via his attitude, behavior and the way he interacted with her that he truly had changed and was now a different man

Not only was he being a good, loving man to her, he was maintaining his confidence as well, rather than sucking up to her all the time.

This made her feel strong surges of respect and attraction for him again.

She then decided to interact with him over the phone and in person some more, to see if he would revert back to his old behavior or not.

After a week, she realized that he truly had changed and was a better man now and would never make the same mistake again.

She fully forgave him and they got back together again.

Another example of a couple who broke up and got back together isâ□|

3. A woman breaks up with a guy because she's tired of all the arguing and fighting

[image: A woman breaks up with a guy because she is tired of all the arguing and fighting]

In example No. 3, the couple broke up because they were always arguing about everything, to the point where they both felt like they were in a war zone, rather than in a relationship.

Once again, the relationship didnâ□□t start out badly and in fact, they were very much in love with each other in the beginning.

Yet, over time, little disagreements became huge fights where each person felt unheard and misunderstood.

This led to her thinking things like, â□□All we ever do these days is blame each other and argue. Nothing seems like fun anymore and instead of being in love, I feel stressed out and tense all the time. I donâ□□t know why Iâ□□m still putting up with this. Iâ□□m tired of trying to make things work,â□□ until eventually she gave up and left him.

Once she was gone, the guy realized that he had allowed unimportant things to get in the way of the respect, attraction and love they felt for each other.

For example: He got angry when she complained about a problem she was experiencing (e.g. at work, with one of her friends) and when he gave her a solution she ignored him.

Basically, he expected her to solve her problems more like a man instead of allowing her to express herself like a woman and just listen and offer support, which is what she wanted.

So, to get her back, he interacted with her over the phone and in person and showed her that he had learned from his past mistakes.

When she tested him, by complaining about something that would have caused him to want to take over and fix it for her in the past, he remained calm and relaxed and just let her vent her frustrations without interfering.

She then started to believe that things really were different, so she was able to forgive him and open back up.

They then got back together and discovered that their relationship was even better this time around.

Another example of a couple who broke up and got back together isâ□|

4. A woman breaks up with a guy because he lacks purpose and direction in life

[image: A woman breaks up with a guy because he lacks purpose and direction in life]

This time, the example is about a young couple who met at university and began dating.

At first, the woman was attracted to the guy because it seemed like he had big plans for his life.

However, as time went by, she began to notice that he had no intention of getting out of his comfort zone and actually doing something productive with his life.

Instead, he was comfortable just drifting from one basic job to another and not really planning ahead well enough for the future.

As a result, she didn't feel safe and protected in the relationship with him and she began thinking things like, "When is he going to grow up and focus on doing something with his life? I can't carry on worrying about what will happen to us in the future, or if we're even going to have enough money to cover our expenses at the end of the month. All my friends are in relationships with men who are making progress in their lives. I'm the only one who always seems to be making excuses about why my guy isn't moving forward or has any goals or ambitions in his life."

Initially, she tried to motivate him to do better by suggesting he get a more stable job and by setting some goals for himself and work towards achieving them.

However, he just laughed at her and said things like, "Stop worrying so much. The future will take care of itself. Just relax and enjoy yourself."

Eventually, she stopped trying to change him and decided to break up with him and find herself another man who was more driven and goal oriented than him.

Of course the shock of losing her forced him to look at himself and what he had been doing with his life and he didn't like what he saw.

He realized she was right about him drifting through life without a purpose or direction, so he decided to change that right away.

So, he focused on quickly becoming a more emotionally mature man by getting a better job and also setting goals for his future and working towards achieving them.

He then concentrated on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for him by using every interaction that he had with her (especially on the phone and in person), to show her that he had changed and was now more focused, driven and ambitious than before.

Initially, she was a bit nervous about giving him another chance, because she didn't fully believe he had changed, but when she saw for herself that he had already begun to accomplish some of his goals, she couldn't stop herself from feeling drawn to him again.

She then began to worry that she might be losing a great man.

So, when he invited her to meet up with him as friends she agreed.

At the meet up, he continued to build on her feelings of attraction for him and showing her that he has truly transformed himself into a new, more ambitious, forward moving man.

As a result, she couldn't resist him anymore.

They kissed, hooked up sexually and got back together again.

3 Mistakes to Avoid if You Want to Get Back Together With Your Ex Faster

As you may have realized by now, getting your ex back is actually easier than you might think.

When you give her the attraction experience she really wants, her defenses naturally come down and she becomes open to being your girl again.

However, if you continue to turn her off, getting her back becomes a lot more difficult.

So, if you want to get your ex back quickly, avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Asking for another chance before re-attracting her

[image: Asking for another chance before re-attracting her]

The fundamental rule to getting an ex back is: Attraction first and everything else after that.

Unfortunately, some guys aren't aware of that fact and make the mistake of asking for a relationship before they've fully reawakened their ex's feelings.

The guy is then left feeling hurt and bewildered when she says, No.

So, if you want your ex to give you another chance, you need to make sure that you reactivate her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you first.

It's all about her feelings for you, rather than the other way around.

The next mistake to avoid is

2. Trying to get her to want the relationship by discussing all the good times and positive qualities of the relationship

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, being reminded how good things used to be between them and how happy they once were, will usually only highlight to her how bad things turned out in the end.

So, if you want to make your ex give you another chance, you have to actively make her have feelings for you based on who you are now.

Don't bother wasting time rehashing all the good times from the past.

How you make her feel right now and from now on is what really counts.

So, focus on that and get her back.

The next mistake to avoid is

3. Handing over all power and control to her

Sometimes a guy thinks that if he lets his ex call all the shots, she will perceive him as being a good guy who only cares about her feelings and will eventually give him another chance with her.

Yet, it doesn't work out that way.

In most cases, a woman wants to be with a man who is more emotionally masculine than her and who can take the lead in the ex back process, thus allowing her to relax into thinking, talking and behaving like a feminine woman around him.

If a woman gets the sense that her ex is too submissive and wimpy and afraid to assert his will with her, she isn't going to feel motivated to get back with him.

So, if you want to get your ex back, the first step you need to take is to stop allowing her to call the shots when it comes to getting her back.

Instead, you need to take the lead in the ex back process, reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you and make her want you, even more than you want her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex and I Have Agreed to Continue Texting as Friends

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 things you need to understand if you want her back for real, rather than just being a friend:

1. Understand that texting as friends is not the way to get an ex woman back

[image: Understand that texting as friends, is not the way to get an ex woman back]

Sometimes, when a woman agrees to continue texting her ex as friends, he might think something along the lines of, “If she’s not cutting me off completely, it must be a good sign. Maybe, somewhere deep inside, she still has feelings for me and doesn’t want to be broken up after all. So, if I stick around and just text back and forth with her and I’m nice and don’t put pressure on her to give me another chance, she might eventually realize that she misses me. We can then get back together again and forget this ever happened.”

Yet, that rarely (if ever) happens.

Instead, while a guy is being nice and friendly with his ex via text, she usually gets on with her life and moves on with someone else.

For example: She might

- Go to clubs, bars or parties and hook up with guys she meets there.
- Go on dates with guys that have been interested in her all along (e.g. at work or university, or that she’s met somewhere along the line).
- Join a dating site online or go on an app like Tinder where she can meet guys.

Then, one day she might text her ex something like, “Hey, I wanted you to be the first to know! I’ve met a great guy and I’m in love! I hope you can be happy for me.”

He’s then left feeling devastated and wondering what went wrong.

The answer is this: He believed that texting his ex as friends was the way to get her back.

Yet, in reality, it isn’t.

Why?

If a guy doesn’t actively spark a woman’s sexual and romantic feelings for him, she’s usually going to find someone else who will.

So, while he’s being nice and sweet and neutral towards her, he’s not making her feel sexually attracted to him.

As a result, she doesn’t see anything wrong with finding a new man.

After all, in her mind they’re just friends and his actions and behavior confirm that.

This is why, if your goal is to get back into a sexual and romantic relationship with your ex, then don’t make the mistake of texting her as a friend and assume that it will happen from there.

It won’t.

You have to spark some of her feelings of attraction for you first (e.g. by flirting with her, using ballsy humor) and then get her on a phone call with you.

On the phone call, she can more easily pick up on the attractive changes and improvements you've made to yourself since the break up (e.g. she can hear the confidence in your voice, notice that you seem to be turning her sarcasm or offishness into something you can both laugh about rather than feeling unsure of yourself).

She then becomes open to seeing you in person (which is what you want), so that you can fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

By the way!

Make sure that when you meet up with her, you're fully prepared to re-attract her and get her back.

If you're not ready, you may end up turning her off by behaving in unattractive ways (e.g. being insecure, allowing her to have control over you, being too cautious around her, treating her in a neutral way).

She may then regret meeting up with you and say something along the lines of, "I think this was a bad idea. I agreed to continue texting as friends, but this is too much for me. Let's just go back to texting and leave it at that. I just don't want anything more than that with you now."

Then, getting her back becomes more difficult, because she closes herself off from you.

However, if you're prepared and ready to attract her (e.g. by being confident and believing in your attractiveness and value to her, being emotionally strong), she will automatically pick up on it via your body language, your attitude and behavior and the way you respond to her.

She then begins to feel surges of respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, her guard comes down and getting back together becomes something that she's open to.

Another thing you need to get clear on if you want your ex back is!

2. Understand that it's so easy to turn an ex woman off via text

[image: Understand that it's so easy to turn an ex woman off via text]

Even when a woman says that she's open to texting her ex as a friend, it doesn't mean things can't go wrong.

In fact, the opposite is true.

When a woman can't see the expression on a guy's face, hear the tonality of his voice, or gauge his body language in person or on a phone call, everything he texts is open to her interpretation based on her current feelings for him.

For example: If a woman broke up with a guy because he was too insecure and lacked belief in himself and his value as a man, if he then texts something like, "I hope I'm not disturbing you right now" rather than assume he's being considerate of her, she will instead likely assume that he's feeling unsure of himself.

Alternatively, if she broke up with him because he was too indecisive and expected her to always lead the way in the relationship, if he then texts her something along the lines of, "Let me know when it's okay with you for me to text you," rather than think he's being polite, she will almost certainly take it as a sign that he still wants her to make all the decisions and be the boss.

As a result, she feels even more turned off by him and happy with her decision to be broken up. This is why, even if your ex agreed to only text as friends from now on, itâs up to you to ignore that and get her on a phone call with you as soon as possible, so that she can experience the new you for herself.

When youâre on a call with her and you then say something like, âI hope Iâm not disturbing you right nowâ she will be able to determine by the tone of your voice whether it stems from a place of insecurity or politeness.

She wonât have to guess.

She will then naturally feel attracted to you, because she can sense that youâre being confident and assertive, while at the same time being a good guy.

She then becomes open to interacting with you more over the phone and seeing you in person, which makes it so much easier for you to get her back.

However, if you stick only to texting, eventually something you say will almost certainly be misinterpreted by her and then she may text something like, âLook, I know I agreed to texting as friends, but Iâve changed my mind. I think it will be better for both of us if we just go our separate ways and try to move on.â

Another thing you need to get clear on if you want your ex back isâ!

3. Understand that unless you re-attract her in person or on a phone call, it's pretty much over now

[image: Understand that unless you re-attract her in person or on a phone call, it's pretty much over now]

Regardless of how open and friendly your ex seems to be towards you via text, nothing definite will happen with her, until you re-attract her on a call and then in person.

You could get lucky if she doesn't find any new guys attractive and then eventually comes back to you.

Yet, in the 1,000s of ex back cases we've seen, what happens when a woman agrees to text her ex guy as friends, is that she simply moves on.

The guy listens to what she has said and actually texts her as a friend.

Meanwhile, she uses the time to secretly begin moving on with a new man behind his back.

Alternatively, she gets bored of waiting for him to realize that he can get her back if he re-attracts her on a call or in person, so she stops replying to hopefully get him to understand.

If that doesn't work, she starts moving on with a new guy.

Hereâs the thingâ!

Texting is just a bunch of words on a screen.

Itâs not real.

So, after a while of texting back and forth, a woman might begin to wonder why sheâs not important enough to you for you to bother picking up the phone to say hello to her in person.

She may then decide that sheâs better off without you in her life.

This is why, if you really want to be more than a friend to your ex, you need to be courageous enough to get her on a phone call, or to a meet up with you.

From there, you need to reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again, showing her via your attitude, behavior and actions that youâre a new and improved man, flirting with her and making her feel like a desirable woman in your presence) and get her back.

Donât stick to texting and hope that she will give you another chance.

Donât act like a nice, neutral friend and hope she will somehow feel attracted to you again.

Do things the right way and you will get her back.

Do things the wrong way (i.e. only text back and forth without getting to a phone call and then a meet up) and you will almost certainly lose her for real.

Another thing you need to get clear on if you want your ex back isâ!

4. Understand that if another guy comes along and makes her feel sexually attracted, her texts to you will most-likely stop

[image: Understand that if another guy comes along and makes her feel sexually attracted, her texts to you will most-likely stop]

Most guys assume that their ex woman will remain loyal or won't sleep with a new guy for weeks or months, especially if she has agreed to text as friends, or has said something like, "I'm not interested in dating anyone else right now. I just want to be on my own."

Yet regardless of what she has said to him, sheâs a single woman now and will naturally begin to open herself up meeting, hooking up and falling in love with new guys.

Then, if it happens (i.e. she kisses a new guy, they have sex, she really likes him and they start seeing each other), the chances of her wanting to continue texting as friends reduce to almost zero (e.g. her new guy might not like it that sheâs texting her ex) and you will probably stop hearing from her at that point.

This is why, if you donât want to be left behind, you need to start making her feel attracted and turned on when she interacts with you.

If you can spark her sexual and romantic feelings before some other guy does, it will be easy for you to get her back, or at least hook up with her again to see how you both feel afterwards.

On the other hand, if you wait for a sign from her to eventually let you know that sheâs open to getting back with you, donât be surprised if she tells you sheâs in a new relationship and would appreciate it if you would stop texting her.

By the wayâ!

Some of the ways you can re-attract her are by:

- Having the confidence to call her on the phone or meet up with her in person, rather than sticking to texting like a rejected, friend zoned ex.
- Believing in yourself and in your value to her, rather than doubting yourself and then making her feel turned off as a result.
- Making her smile and laugh and feel relaxed to be talking to you over the phone and hanging out with you again, rather than trying to get into heart-to-heart discussions about the relationship and what you did wrong.

- Showing her that you've changed and improved in some of the ways that matter to her and gaining back her respect and attraction for you, rather than making the same mistakes and expecting her to accept that.
- Flirting with her to create a sexual spark between you, rather than "playing it safe" by just acting friendly, neutral or distant.

The more you awaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you, the more open she will become to giving you another chance.

Then even if she happens to meet another guy, it won't matter to her, because she has you.

Another thing you need to get clear on if you want your ex back is

5. Understand that some women say things like, "Let's stay in touch as friends" to make an ex man wait around while she moves on without him

[image: Understand that some women say, "Let's stay in touch as friends" to make an ex man wait around for her while she moves on without him]

Sometimes, a woman's ego can't stand the idea of her ex moving on before she does.

So, rather than cut off all contact with him and risk him meeting a new woman and moving on, she will instead agree to continue texting as friends.

In this way, she can give him a false sense of hope and keep him interested in her long enough for her to find a new man and move on first.

Then, while her ex is likely waiting around for her and thinking things like, "Maybe if I give her some time to allow for things to calm down between us, we can work things out after all."

In the meantime, she focuses on finding herself a replacement man.

If her ex then plucks up the courage to ask her if she wants to try and work things out with him, she will be able to say something like, "No. I'm sorry if you got the wrong idea. I only agreed to texting as friends and nothing more. I'm not interested in getting back with you. I thought you knew that. Besides, I've met someone else, so maybe it's best if we stop texting each other and focus on living our separate lives. I wish you all the best. I'm sure you will find the right girl for you. Bye."

He is then left feeling hurt, confused and wondering what went wrong.

He might then develop a fear of relationships and not only avoid trying to get his ex back, but avoid getting into relationships with other women as well.

So, don't let yourself get caught up in a situation like that.

Instead, simply take charge of the ex back process by using every interaction you have with her from now on as an opportunity to re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

The more you make her feel respect, attraction and love for you, the less likely it is that she will want to make you wait around for her while she moves on with someone else.

She instead begins to want you back herself.

You can then gently guide her back into a relationship that is better than ever before.

What to Avoid When Texting an Ex as Friends

You can use the agreement with your ex to text as friends to your advantage and get her back, or you let the opportunity slip through your hands and lose her to someone else.

The choice is yours.

However, if you decide that you want her back, make sure youâre avoiding the following mistakes:

1. Not knowing how to make her feel a sexual spark, so accepting the fate of just texting as friends

Sometimes a guy doesnât know how to go about creating a sexual spark between himself and his ex, so he gives up on the idea of getting her back and settles for just being her text buddy.

Donât let that happen to you.

Make sure that you begin re-attracting your ex right away.

For example: Some of the ways you can spark her feelings for you are byâ

- Making her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with you again.
- Being confident regardless of what she says or does (e.g. she pretends she has no feelings for you anymore, says that she doesnât want to get back with you again).
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you, rather than just being too nice or neutral with her.
- Not giving her too much power over you and doing whatever she tells you to do and instead, letting her see that you are now even more masculine in the way you think, talk, behave and react when interacting with her.

This allows her to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and sheâll begin to see herself being your girl again.

So focus on that.

Another mistake to avoid isâ

2. Not improving your ability to re-attract her on a phone call or in person

A guy will often sit around thinking about his ex and how much he misses her and wants her back, but wonât take action to improve anything about himself while heâs waiting to start the ex back process.

Then, when he does interact with his ex on a phone call or in person, she notices that heâs still stuck at the same level he was at when they broke up, doesn't feel a spark and closes up again.

This is why, you need to make sure that you improve your ability to re-attract her.

You need to understand her real, more secret reasons for breaking up with you (e.g. your inability to make a decision without her approval or say-so, being unsure of yourself around her or in social situations, being unable to pass her simple confidence tests) and change those things about yourself.

Then, when you interact with her and she picks up the changes in your attitude, thinking, behavior and the way you respond to her, she will automatically begin to feel respect for you again. When she respects you, she will naturally start to feel attracted to you again and then itâs becomes easy for her to reconnect with her feelings of love for you too. Another mistake to avoid isâ

3. Not taking charge of the ex back process

Some guys make the mistake of thinking that getting back together with an ex is all up to her. If she says that itâs okay, then the guy can go ahead and work at getting her back. However, if she says that sheâs not interested or only wants to be friends, then he has to accept that (even though he doesnât want to) and give up on the idea of being a couple with her again. Yet, hereâs what he doesnât understandâ

A man actually has a lot of control over the ex back process. If he takes the lead and focuses on making his ex woman have sexual and romantic feelings for him again, she will naturally begin to want him back for her own reasons (e.g. she worries that if she doesnât give him another chance she may end up regretting it later on, she feels attracted to him in new ways and wants to explore those feelings for him). He can then get her back much more easily because she is open to being seduced by him and seeing what happens. On the other hand, if a guy lets her lead in the ex back process, he may be waiting for a long time and then discover that sheâs moved on with someone else instead.

So, donât make the mistake of thinking itâs all up to your ex whether you get back together. If you want her back, you have to be bold and confident enough to take the lead and make it happen.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Promised That We'd Get Back Together, But Has Now Changed Her Mind

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 common reasons why a woman will do that:

1. She really meant it at the time, but then met a new guy and changed her mind

[image: She really meant it at the time, but then met a new guy and changed her mind]

There are many reasons why a woman will decide to break up with a man, other than that she no longer has feelings for him (e.g. she is getting pressured by family or friends to dump him because they feel that heâs not right for her, she has work or study commitments that she needs to focus on, she is really young and inexperienced and canât handle the stress of a mature relationship, sheâs moving away to a different city/state/country).

In cases like that, itâs not unusual for a woman to still have feelings for her guy, so she will likely say things like, *âI know this is difficult for both of us right now, but I promise we will get back together again one day.*â

Naturally, when a guy hears something like that, it gives him a sense of hope for the future, so he might then wait for her to come back to him and avoid moving on with his life in any way (e.g. he doesnât date other women and remains loyal to his ex).

This may go on for weeks, months and in some extreme cases, even years.

Essentially, he thinks that because heâs being faithful to his ex, she will be faithful to him.

Yet, it doesnât work that way.

Instead, if another man comes along and makes her feel attracted in new and exciting ways (e.g. he is more emotionally masculine and makes her feel like a sexy woman when sheâs with him while her ex made her feel more like a friend, heâs more emotionally independent while her ex was too needy and clingy, heâs more assertive and stands up to her when she creates drama while her ex was too submissive around her and allowed her to get away with bad behavior), she will almost certainly open herself up to him and forget about her promise to her ex.

Then, when her ex asks something like, *âHow much longer do you need before we can get back together?*â rather than give him the answer he wants (i.e. âSoonâ or âLetâs do it nowâ), she instead says something along the lines of, *âIâm sorry. I know I promised you that we would get back together again, but Iâve changed my mind. I really do care for you, but I think weâre better off just being friends. Thatâs just what I feel. I hope you understand.*â

He is then left feeling confused and probably even a bit annoyed at her for giving him mixed messages.

So, if your ex promised that you would get back together but has now changed her mind, she may have met a new guy recently who is making her feel more respect and attraction than you.

However, that doesnât mean that the new man is perfect and that you canât get her back.

In fact, when you make some attractive adjustments to the way you think, act and behave around her, you will be ready to properly re-attract her.

This is why, you need to first understand what aspects of the attraction experience were missing in your relationship with your ex and then change those things about yourself (e.g. become more confident and self-assured, more manly, less emotionally sensitive or closed off).

If you try to get her back by offering her the wrong things (e.g. she wants you to be more manly but you promise to let her make all the decisions in the ex back process), you're just going to push her even more into the new guy's arms.

You have to give her the kind of attraction experience that she really wants.

Additionally, if you are able to attract her in ways that her new guy can't (e.g. you make her laugh, whereas he's too serious, you are more supportive of her dreams and ambitions than he is), she will begin to have second thoughts about not getting back with you like she promised.

When that happens, she will open back up to you and you can then build on her feelings for you and get her back for real.

Another reason why a woman might do that is

2. She didn't ever mean it and was just trying to create distance between you and her, so she could have enough time to move on

[image: She didn't ever mean it and was just trying to create distance between you and her, so she could have enough time to move on]

Sometimes, a woman might worry that her man is too emotionally weak to cope with the idea of being broken up.

So, rather than risk him breaking down and crying, pleading and begging her to give him another chance or trying to convince her to change her mind (e.g. by bringing up the past, promising her that this time he really will change), she instead tries to buy some time so she can move on first, by promising him that they will get back together again one day.

However, in reality she has no intention of ever doing that and will likely even try to find herself a replacement man as quickly as possible.

In the meantime, her ex is left feeling hopeful and like things will eventually work out for them.

He may then give her a few weeks or months of space and hope that she follows through on her promise and comes back.

Yet, that never happens, because she's been using the time to fully disconnect from her feelings for him and move on.

This is why, if you want your ex to keep her promise to you, you can't just back off and wait for her to return to you when she feels ready.

Instead, you need to continue to interact with her every chance you get (e.g. via text, social media and most importantly over the phone and in person) and actively keep sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Of course that doesn't mean you should be clingy, needy or desperate about it and turn her off even more.

Instead, remain calm and focus on reactivating her feelings for you so that she changes her mind about wanting to move on.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦!

- Making her smile and laugh and feel relaxed every time she interacts with you (especially over the phone and in person), rather than trying to get into discussions about when sheâ€™ll be ready to get back together again.
- Maintaining your confidence regardless of how many excuses she makes about it not being the right time to get back together yet.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension between you, rather than just being nice, friendly, neutral or distant around her.
- Believing in yourself and in your value to her, rather than doubting yourself and then making her feel as though she has power over you.
- Being happy, confident and forward moving in your life, with or without her support, approval or attention, rather than sitting around waiting for her to give you another chance and making her feel turned off by your neediness as a result.

When you start making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again, moving on doesnâ€™t seem like such a good idea to her anymore.

As a result, her guard comes down and she opens herself up to getting back together again just like she promised you would.

Another reason why a woman might do that isâ€¦!

3. She meant it, but after thinking about it for a while, she has realized that it probably wouldn't work

[image: She meant it, but after thinking about it for a while, she has realized that it probably wouldn't work]

Sometimes, a woman might genuinely feel confident about the chances of her and her ex getting back together again when she breaks up with him.

For example: She might think to herself, â€œI know we have some problems right now, which is why itâ€™s best if we break up. However, if he makes some changes, we can work things out and give our relationship another chance.â€

However, as the days, or even weeks go by, she begins to change her mind.

Why?

She knows that her ex hasnâ€™t really changed (i.e. because she can pick it up in his actions, behavior, attitude and the way he responds to her).

So she realizes that getting back with him would not only be a waste of her time, she would also have to put herself through another break up, which she doesnâ€™t want.

This is why, itâ€™s very important that you show your ex that youâ€™ve started to transform yourself into a better man and take away any doubts she might still have about not being happy in a relationship with you this time around.

For example: Some of the changes she might want to see in you areâ€¦!

- Youâ€™re loving, caring and attentive towards her, but you donâ€™t let her push you around, get away with bad behavior or be disrespectful towards you.

- You maintain your confidence when she tries to make you feel insecure by teasing you, throwing a tantrum or creating drama.
- You use humor to change her mood from angry, annoyed or sulky to happy and relaxed, rather than getting dragged into her fake drama and losing control of your emotions.
- You make her feel sexy and desirable, rather than making her feel friendly or neutral feelings when she's interacting with you.
- You believe in yourself and in your value to her and to other women, rather than feeling like she's out of your league, or like you could never attract another, quality woman.
- You're secure in your masculinity and take the lead in the relationship, rather being submissive and handing your power over to her.
- You understand that in order for a woman to want to stay with you for life, the attraction between you and her needs to be mutual, rather than you feeling attracted to her, but not doing anything to make her feel the same way about you.

The more she can see that you really have changed and improved in the ways that are important to her, the more likely it is that she will change her mind again (i.e. she will want to get back with you now).

As a result, she will open back up to you and you can then confidently guide her back into a relationship with you.

Another reason why a woman might do that is!

4. She didn't mean it and was trying to avoid hurting your feelings

In some cases, a man is a really good guy and a nice, supportive boyfriend.

He treats his woman well (e.g. spoils her with breakfast in bed, gives her foot massages after a hard day at work, buys her flowers from time to time) and doesn't really do anything wrong.

Yet, his woman just doesn't feel a spark with him (i.e. she's not sexually attracted to him).

So, because she can't come up with a valid reason to break up with him, she might just say something along the lines of, "I need to take some time to figure out what I want in my life. It's not you though, it's me. I promise, once I sort myself out, we will get back together again."

In this way, she can let him down gently, without hurting his feelings too much (i.e. because he will be expecting them to get back together again sometime in the future).

At the same time, she's likely hoping that he will give her the space she needs to move on and find another guy who does make her feel the way she wants to feel in a relationship (i.e. excited, sexually attracted, desirable).

So, if your ex promised that you would get back together but has now changed her mind, it could be because it was never her real intention.

Instead, she may have been using it as an excuse to get out of the relationship without you making a fuss about it.

Don't worry though.

If you want her back, all you need to do is relight the spark of attraction inside of her and when you do, she will start to feel drawn to you again.

So, make sure that every time you interact with her from now on (e.g. over the phone and especially when you see her in person), you actively spark her feelings of sexual attraction for you by making her feel sexy and desirable, rather than just being nice, polite, or neutral with her.

Some guys worry about doing that because they fear it might convince her even more to not give them another chance.

Yet, in almost all cases, the opposite is true.

It actually makes her want to change her mind and get back together again.

So, don't be afraid to build up the desire in her.

The more attracted you make her feel to you, the more she will want to keep her promise to you after all.

Another reason why a woman will promise to get back with her boyfriend, but then changed her mind later on is...

5. She wanted to keep you waiting around so she could move on before you

[image: She wanted to keep you waiting around, so she could move on before you]

Sometimes a woman will promise to get back together with her ex, just to keep him hanging around and prevent him from moving.

Meanwhile, she will be secretly flirting with new guys and finding herself a replacement man, so that she can move on before him.

Why?

Even if a woman seems very confident about herself and her attractiveness to her guy and to other men, deep down she might be feeling insecure about her ability to find a new man to hook up with, date and start a relationship with.

So, to improve her chances of moving on first, she promises to get back with her ex until she finds her next man and then conveniently changes her mind.

Here's the thing though!

You don't have to sit around and wait for your ex to come back to you.

In fact, if you move on before she does, it would hurt her and cause her to come running back to you.

She'd feel attracted to you for not being an emotional wreck because she left you and for getting yourself a new woman so easily.

She may then start to think things like, "I never realized it before, but I don't like the idea of him being with another woman. I don't know why, but it makes me miss him and want him back. All of a sudden the idea of losing him makes me feel scared. Hopefully it's not already too late to tell him that I've changed my mind about us getting back together again."

She might then text, call or even show up unexpectedly at your house or workplace to try and get you back.

It's then up to you to decide whether you want to stay with your new woman, or get back into a relationship with your ex, where she now feels so much more motivated to be a good, loving, devoted woman to you because she doesn't want to lose you again.

Avoid the Following 2 Problems to Get Her Back Easier and Faster

If your ex changed her mind once, she can easily change it again.

It all depends on your approach from this point onwards.

This is why, you need to prepare yourself first, by understanding the problems you might be faced with.

For exampleâ€¦!

1. Believing in a woman's promise that she made based on emotion

Emotions can and do change.

Promises from a woman that are based on a feeling in the moment are subject to change.

This applies to perfect relationships and dysfunctional relationships.

Women always do it.

The truth is, it doesn't matter what your ex promised you in the heat of the moment during your break up.

It's just how she felt then.

However, it's not how she feels now.

Yet, to get her back, what she feels now is what counts.

So, forget about everything up to now and focus instead on making her feel strong surges of sexual and romantic attraction for you every single time you interact with her.

The more intense her feelings of attraction for you become, the more she will want to get back with you again.

On the other hand, if you make her feel neutral feelings during interactions, or even turn her off, she's not going to care what she promised you before.

That's how it works.

The next problem that might slow your chances of getting your ex back isâ€¦!

2. Not knowing what parts of the attraction experience were missing, or not being willing to improve to match up to what she really wants

If you want to get your ex back for real, one of the most important steps you have to take is to understand her real, secret reasons for breaking up with you (e.g. you were too clingy and needy, you stopped being the confident man she fell for originally, you weren't assertive enough so she felt more emotionally dominant than you).

Then, when you interact with her again (e.g. on a phone call or in person), you can make her feel attracted in the ways she always wanted.

The mistake that a lot of guys make is to use old, outdated approaches to re-attract their ex, which only makes her realize that he has absolutely no idea what is attractive to a woman when in a relationship.

Alternatively, she realizes that heâs simply not interested in changing and improving and just expects her to accept him the way he was, seeing as she was the one who promised to come back to him.

Yet, it doesnât work that way.

If a woman doesnât feel that she will be gaining by getting back with you, sheâs not going to be motivated to give you another chance.

On the other hand, if she notices that youâre now at a level of understanding that surpasses most men out there, she will want to make good on her promise and get back together with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Will a Gratitude Letter Make Your Ex Want You Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

No, but it can help bring down her guard if you approach it correctly.

Here are 5 tips to help you write an effective gratitude letter to your ex:

1. Keep it very brief. Less than 200 words

[image: Keep it very brief. Less than 200 words]

Sometimes, a guy will have a lot of things to be grateful to his ex about.

As a result, he might feel tempted to want to list them all in his letter to her, so that he can fully express his gratitude to her.

Yet, sending a long letter to a woman who has just broken up with you is usually not a good idea.

Why?

Firstly, when a woman breaks up with a guy, itâ€™s usually because she has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, when she then gets a letter from him and she sees that itâ€™s pages and pages long, rather than think something like, â€œOh, how sweet. I canâ€™t wait to read it!â€ she more likely going to think, â€œOh no! Why is he doing this to me? Does he really think I want to read this essay?

Iâ€™m sure he means well, but I just donâ€™t have the time or the interest to read all this.â€

She will then likely just throw the letter away unread, or put it somewhere and forget about it, which will defeat the purpose of sending it to her in the first place (i.e. to thank her and in the process spark some of her feelings so she wants to see him in person again so that he can get her back).

Secondly, because sheâ€™s disconnected from her feelings for him, if he writes a long letter expressing his gratitude to her, sheâ€™s likely going to take it the wrong way (i.e. that heâ€™s being needy and emotionally wimpy at a time when she actually needs to see proof that heâ€™s an emotionally strong man instead) and sheâ€™s going to feel even more turned off.

Finally, even if she does have some feelings for him and decides to read the entire letter, the longer he goes on about how great she is, the more likely it becomes that she will start to resent him and think things like, â€œIf Iâ€™m so great and he loves and appreciates me so much, why did he behave the way he did when we were together? Why does he only appreciate all my wonderful qualities and all the things I did for him now that weâ€™re no longer together? I know heâ€™s probably hoping that Iâ€™m going to be impressed by his letter of gratitude and give him another chance because of it, but it actually only makes me feel like he took me for granted in the relationship and heâ€™s now trying to make up for that by sucking up to me. Anyway, Iâ€™m glad he sent me this letter. Itâ€™s put all my doubts to rest and I now realize that I need to move on and find myself a new man who will appreciate me when heâ€™s got me, rather than after Iâ€™m gone.â€

So, donâ€™t make the mistake of thinking that the longer your gratitude letter to your ex, the more open she will become to wanting you back.

Instead, keep it short and sweet and interesting enough (about 200 words is usually long enough to say what you need without going overboard) and make her drop her guard a bit.

When that happens, she feels like the polite thing for her to do is to text or call you to say â€œThank You,â€ which is what you want.

You can then use the opening to begin reactivating her feelings of respect and attraction for you for again, so you can make her want you back.

Another tip to help you write an effective gratitude letter to your ex and make her want you back isâ€œ|

2. Don't go on and on about your feelings

[image: Don't go on and on about your feelings]

As difficult as it may be for you to accept this, the truth is, a woman only cares about a manâ€™s romantic feelings for her, if she has sexual and romantic feelings for him too.

So, if your ex is currently thinking about you in a negative way (e.g. sheâ€™s angry, annoyed, disappointed, resentful), then reading about how much you miss her, need her and how devastated you feel without her, is unlikely going to make her think things like, â€œI never realized how much he cares for me. It really feels so good knowing that Iâ€™m so loved and wanted. Maybe I should give him another chance after all.â€

Instead, sheâ€™s probably going to think something along the lines of, â€œWell, he should have thought about how wonderful I am when he had me and been a better man to me then. Now itâ€™s too late and I donâ€™t care how he feels! In fact, I hope heâ€™s really suffering! He deserves it after the way he treated me.â€

Remember: The only time your ex is going to care about your feelings, is when you make her have feelings for you again.

So, make sure that you focus on doing that (i.e. sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you) when you write your gratitude letter to her, rather than discussing your feelings for her.

Itâ€™s all about her feelings for you.

Your feelings do matter to you, but at this moment, not to her.

In some cases, a woman will even feel annoyed with her ex for talking about his feelings for her and assume that heâ€™s just being a selfish, self-absorbed jerk.

Of course, thatâ€™s not how you want her to be feeling and thinking when she reads your letter.

So, make sure you understand that it canâ€™t all be about how much you miss her, still care for her, or how much you need her back in your life, because she simply wonâ€™t care about that.

What she cares about now is her feelings, not about how you feel and what you want.

So, your approach to getting her back needs to be about how you make her feel when she reads your gratitude letter (e.g. respectful, excited, attracted, happy to be hearing from you) and then when you talk to her on the phone or in person.

Another tip to help you write an effective gratitude letter to your ex and make her want you back isâ€œ|

3. Tell her that you accept the break up

[image: Tell her that you accept the break up]

One of the biggest mistakes that guys can make when writing a gratitude letter to an ex, is saying things like, “I know you’ve made up your mind and I’m truly grateful to you for having been such an awesome girlfriend to me, but the truth is, I really can’t accept that we’re broken up. It feels like such a big mistake for us to not be together anymore. I honestly believe that you and I are meant to be together. Please let’s try and work things out.”

However, although his intentions may be good, resisting what has already happened (i.e. the break up), only makes a woman feel defensive and like he’s trying to force her into something she no longer wants (i.e. a relationship with him).

She then closes herself off even more and that makes it so much more difficult for him to get her back, because she’ll now be refusing to talk to him over the phone or see him in person.

So, what should you do instead?

A good way to make her drop her guard and begin seeing you in a more positive light, is to actually accept the break up and show her that you’re not going to be one of those guys who can’t be happy and forward moving without his ex in his life.

For example: You can do that by saying something along the lines of, “Hey Cassandra. Things didn’t go the way we had hoped and I’m sorry about that. I just want you to know that I completely accept the break up. Of course, I’m not saying I wouldn’t want to work things out with you, but I’m also not going to hold on to the past, or act like a desperate, crazy ex boyfriend and stalk you to try and get you back. Lol! We can now both move on and be happy, without any hard feelings. Love, Peter”

By saying that to her, you’re letting her know that even though you do care for her, miss her and want her back, you don’t need her back to feel good about yourself and to have a good life.

This automatically makes her feel respect and attraction for you again, for being an emotionally strong, emotionally independent man.

As a result, her defenses come down and she becomes open to talking to you over the phone and seeing you in person to see how she feels.

Of course, when you do get her to meet up with you in person and then reignite her feelings for you, chances are high that she’s going to end up wanting to hug, kiss, have sex and get back together with you again.

Another tip to help you write an effective gratitude letter to your ex and make her want you back isâ

4. Add in some humor

[image: Add in some humor to the letter]

Almost nothing else breaks the ice and eases the tension inside of a person like a good laugh.

So, rather than focusing on being too serious or sentimental in your gratitude letter to your ex, consider using some humor to break down her defenses instead and make her more open to you.

Of course, that doesn’t mean you should write jokes or say silly things, or anything else like that.

Instead, while you’re thanking her for being a great person, you can then throw in a joke about something she used to do for you to make her feel good about herself.

For example: If you say something like, “I know I never told you this before, but I really appreciate how you made my life so much easier, and you can then use some humor by adding something along the lines of, I miss that about you. Like when I couldn't find my keys and you'd always know where they were, or when I didn't know how to use the washing machine properly and you showed me the on/off button and then add a smiley face or an Lol! to let her know that you're just teasing her.

By using humor in that way and making your ex smile and laugh, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to continue thinking of you in a negative way.

Instead, she starts feeling respect and attraction for you again for having the confidence to joke around with her in that way, even though you're broken up.

As a result, her guard begins to slip down and she becomes more open to the idea of talking and interacting with you to see where things go from there.

The final tip to help you write an effective gratitude letter to your ex and make her want you back is!

5. Sign off with love

[image: Sign off with love]

Once you've said what you wanted to say to your ex, sign off by writing your name after Love you.

For example: If the guy's name is Tom, he should sign off as Love you, Tom.

This is a Neurolinguistic Programming technique of getting her to say that she loves you in her mind (i.e. she reads out, "Love You" followed by your name).

Her saying that in her mind, can begin to plant seeds of doubt about her negative feelings for you and makes her feel more open to interacting with you.

Then, when you follow up your letter with a phone call, there will likely be a little voice at the back of her mind telling her things like, This is good. You want to talk to him, because you do love him.

So, don't leave out this important step.

Quite often, a guy will be too afraid to sign off his gratitude letter with love, because he doesn't want to scare his ex off by showing her that he still has feelings for her.

In his mind he may be thinking things like, If I sign off with love, she will realize that I still have strong feelings for her and she'll close herself off even more. Then, if she won't talk to me or see me in person, I won't be able to get her back.

Alternatively, a guy might fear signing off his gratitude letter with love, because he doesn't want to give his ex power over him by letting her know that he still has feelings for her.

Basically, he's likely hoping that by sending her the letter and being grateful, it will be enough to prompt her to make the first move, without him having to reveal too much of his feelings to her to make it happen.

Yet, neither belief is true.

Firstly, if a guy pretends not to have feelings for his ex anymore, she's usually just going to move on, rather than chase after him.

At the same time, most women won't take the lead in the ex back process, regardless of whether a guy signs off with love or not.

Instead, she will usually wait to see if he has the balls to follow through with a phone call or a meet up.

So, don't be afraid to sign off with love, because women actually respect that kind of confident, non-needy honesty from a man.

She then automatically starts to feel surges of respect for you again, making it that much easier for you to fully reactivate her feelings and get her back.

Get the Result You Really Want From Your Gratitude Letter By Avoiding The Following 3 Mistakes

Now that you know what to put in your gratitude letter to your ex, here are 3 things you should avoid, if you want to successfully re-attract her and make her want you back:

1. Writing a monster sized letter or e-mail

As romantic as it may seem, writing a long letter to your ex that goes on and on about how great she is and how much she has meant to you, is usually just a waste of time.

Why?

If she's not attracted, she's not going to feel motivated to read it.

Additionally, she also feels annoyed that he's trying to suck up to her by saying sweet things that he hopes will trick her into thinking she wants him back.

Yet, she doesn't have feelings for him anymore, so it doesn't work.

Instead, she sees his letter as being a soppy, out of place, ineffective and as a desperate attempt to try to get her back.

As a result, she loses even more respect for him.

The next mistake to avoid is!

2. Talking in depth about how the break up has affected you emotionally

Being broken up with sucks and it's not unusual for a guy to feel sad and dejected because of it.

However, writing that in a letter to an ex woman and saying things like, I feel so lost without you. I'm really struggling to cope with our break up. I haven't been able to eat or sleep since we split up, is the worst thing a guy can do.

Why?

When a guy talks about how he can't cope, rather than make an ex woman feel pity for him, she instead usually feels turned off by his emotional weakness.

When she sees that he can't handle the challenges in his life (e.g. their break up) without her support, it makes her want to move on from him even more.

So, don't bother telling your ex how the break up has affected you emotionally in the hope that she will feel sorry for you and want to give you another chance and focus instead on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

That's 100% more effective.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Expecting something unusual to happen by expressing gratitude for selfish reasons

It sounds like the opposite is true. When you express gratitude, it's for the other person, right?

Not necessarily.

If a guy is thanking a woman for everything she taught him and for waking him up, it's something that he has gained and benefited from, not her.

So, don't try to trick your ex into wanting you back by pretending that your letter of gratitude is all about her and that you don't have an ulterior motive for sending it.

Most women aren't stupid and can easily see through a guy's intentions.

If she senses that you're trying to act all innocent to trick her, she will perceive you as being selfish and immature and then focus on moving on without you.

Remember: The best way to make your ex want you back is by making her have strong sexual and romantic feelings for you again by talking to her on a phone call or in person.

So, focus on getting to that point and you will be amazed at how quickly you get her back for real.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex Won't Tell Me Why We Broke Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are the 5 most common reasons why a woman will do that:

1. She doesn't want to give you clues on how to get her back

[image: She doesn't want to give you clues on how to get her back]

It's only natural that if a woman breaks up with her guy and he doesn't know why, he's going to want to know why.

He may even say things like, "Please tell me why you're doing this? If I know what I did wrong, then I can change those things about myself and give you what you want. We can be happy together again, but that won't happen if you don't tell me why you're breaking up with me."

In his mind, he likely believes that asking his woman for an explanation is normal.

He may even believe that she owes it to him to tell him why she's breaking up with him.

Yet, the majority of women don't see it that way.

Instead, a woman will usually avoid telling her guy exactly what her reasons for breaking up with him are and will simply expect him to either understand and change, or leave her alone and let her move on.

Why?

In most cases, by the time a woman gets to the point where she wants to break up with a guy, she's likely given him plenty of hints about what she wants him to change and improve about himself.

However, from her point of view, he has either ignored her, or he hasn't understood what she wants him to do and she's now tired of trying to make things work with him.

So, when he then asks something along the lines of, "Please tell me why you broke up with me," rather than make her think, "Okay, maybe if I spell things out for him he will finally change and improve and become the man I want him to be and we can then get back together again," she becomes even more closed off and uncooperative.

Here's why:

Most women don't want to be responsible for shaping a guy into the man that he needs to become.

If she has to tell him how to be the man she needs, she will lose even more respect for him because he's not his own man.

He is simply following her instructions, which then makes him come across as being emotionally weak and wimpy (characteristics that are naturally unattractive to women).

Additionally, at the back of her mind she knows that there are men out there who are aware of how to think, act and behave in a relationship with a woman without a woman's help or guidance.

So, she doesn't feel like it's fair that she has to settle for a guy who needs her help to be a better man.

She will then usually close herself off from her ex and focus on finding herself a ready-made man who can give her the attraction experience she really wants, rather than waste a lot of time trying to fix her ex so she can be with him.

This is why, if you've been asking your ex to tell you why she broke up with you, you need to stop right away.

Then you need to focus on figuring out her reasons without her help.

You can then quickly change and improve some of the things that are important to her.

Then, the next time you interact with her over the phone or in person, she will be able to pick up the changes in you (e.g. via the tonality of your voice, your body language, the way you respond to her) and she will know you're a new man.

When that happens, she naturally starts to feel surges of respect for you again for figuring things out on your own and becoming a better man.

When she respects you, she automatically begins to feel attracted to you too and with those two emotions in place, she becomes open to the idea of being your girl again.

On the other hand, if your main approach to getting her back is to continue asking her to explain why she broke up with you before you do anything else, she will likely cut you out of her life entirely (e.g. refuse to answer your texts/messages/phone calls) and move on with another man as quickly as possible.

Another possible reason why your ex won't tell you why she broke up with you is

2. She doesn't want to hear you promise to change the things she doesn't like and then feel obliged to give you another chance

[image: She doesn't want to hear you promise to change the things she doesn't like and then feel obliged to give you another chance]

Sometimes, if a woman tells a guy her reasons for breaking up with him, he will quickly begin making promises that he will change.

For example: Imagine a woman says to her ex something like, "Okay, the truth is, I broke up with you because I feel really bored in the relationship with you. Even though we're still young and vibrant, we seem to be in a rut where we are acting like an old married couple. All we ever do is watch TV or go to the movies and hang out with our friends at the same coffee shops or restaurants and doing the same things week in and week out. I just can't take it anymore! I'd rather just be single and focus on enjoying my life on my own for while."

Naturally, when her guy hears something like that, he will quickly try to convince her to change her mind by saying things like, "Please baby, don't throw away what we have. I promise I will do whatever it takes to spice things up between us. I can do better. Just give me a chance to prove it to you."

She will then feel forced to give him another chance, which she doesn't really want to do.

She wants to move on and find a new man who can give her the attraction experience she wants, rather than risk putting in all that effort with her ex and not getting what she wants, because he doesn't really know how to change and become the man she needs him to be.

For instance, her ex might begin taking her to more romantic dinners, or begin taking her to different restaurants or coffee shops to vary things up between them.

Yet, in reality thatâs not the main thing that will stop her from feeling bored in the relationship with him.

Instead, she needs him to change at a deeper, more fundamental level (e.g. he stops treating her like a neutral friend and begins making her feel like a sexy, feminine woman around him, he stops letting her get away with bad behavior and stands up to her in a loving yet assertive way).

When she can see for herself that the changes are not superficial (i.e. a change of location or entertainment), but instead go to the core of her boredom, her defenses will automatically come down.

She then becomes open to working things out, because she can see that things truly will be different now.

Another possible reason why your ex wonât tell you why she broke up with you isâ!

3. She doesn't feel like she has to tell you

[image: She doesn't feel like she has to tell you]

In some cases, when a guy asks his ex to tell him why they broke up, she might actually feel annoyed by it and think something like, âI donât owe him an explanation. Iâm my own woman and if I donât want to be in a relationship with him anymore, I donât have to.â

Hereâs the thingâ!

In todayâs world, women are more confident and independent than they used to be in the past (i.e. where women were expected to stay in a relationship with a man regardless of how unhappy they felt).

As a result, a woman can now choose to break up with a guy if heâs not making her feel the way that she wants to feel in the relationship with him (e.g. loved, appreciated, attracted, excited).

Basically, if she starts to lose too much respect and attraction for the guy because of his actions and behavior (e.g. heâs too insecure and needy, he takes her for granted, he isnât manly enough so she feels like she has to lead in the relationship), she can choose to break up with him because she is an individual and is not his property.

She may then feel that itâs not necessary for her to give him a reason why.

Itâs her decision and he needs to respect that and accept it.

Of course, when youâre on the receiving end of such a decision, it definitely sucks not to know why your ex broke up with you.

However, rather than try to get an explanation from her and likely annoy her in the process, itâs better if you figure it out for yourself.

Then when you interact with her and she notices that youâre suddenly attracting her in new and exciting ways (e.g. youâre more confident and emotionally mature, youâre more ballsy in the way you respond to her, youâre more emotionally masculine in your approach thus making her feel more feminine around you), she wonât be able to resist wanting to talk to you and hang out with you more often.

You can then fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

So, focus on that.

Another possible reason why your ex won't tell you why she broke up with you is

4. She is afraid to tell you the truth in case it hurts you

Sometimes, a woman just doesn't want to come across as being a bitch to her ex by saying something like, "I don't love you anymore. It's over."

So, rather than say things that might be hurtful to him and make him feel bad, she simply avoids giving him a reason for breaking up with him.

Instead, she might just say something along the lines of, "Look, I just don't really know what I want in my life anymore, so until I figure things out, I think it would be better if we took a break from each other for a while. Maybe some time in the future we can get back together again, but for now I need some space to sort myself out. I hope you understand."

Alternatively, she might not give him any reason at all and just leave him wondering what he did wrong.

This is why, if your ex didn't give you a reason for breaking up, it may be because she didn't want to hurt you by telling you that something about your actions and behavior were turning her off.

The good news though, is that if you figure out where you went wrong, you can quickly change and improve yourself in some of the ways that are important to her.

Then, when you interact with her over the phone or in person and she picks up on the changes in you, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, her walls begin to crumble and she begins thinking things like, "He's so different all of a sudden. Maybe we can work things out after all."

Then, getting back together again becomes something she wants too, rather than you wanting it and her looking for excuses to push you away without hurting your feelings.

By the way

Here are some examples of the type of things that women find difficult to admit are unattractive in a man to help you understand what you might have done wrong...

He was too needy and clingy (e.g. he didn't have any interests, hobbies, friends or goals in life independent of her, he didn't like it when she went out with her friends without him, he constantly asked her if she still loves him), so she ended up feeling responsible for his emotional well-being, which she doesn't want.

The sex became dull and boring, causing her to stop feeling like a sexy, desirable woman with him. She began feeling more neutral around him and like they were friends, rather than a couple.

He wasn't manly enough in the relationship with her, so she felt like she had to lead and be the man in the relationship. This made her feel more emotionally dominant than him which eroded her feelings of respect and attraction for him over time.

He was too emotionally sensitive and used to respond to stressful situations in his life like a child (e.g. threw a tantrum, cried, blamed other people for his problems).

When you fully understand where you went wrong with your ex, you can then change the things she really wants you to change, re-attract her and get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex won't tell you why she broke up with you is

5. She's afraid to tell you the truth in case it makes you angry

[image: She's afraid to tell you the truth in case it makes you angry]

Sometimes, a woman will get into a relationship with a man that she's not fully attracted to, simply because he's a good man.

Secretly, she may be hoping that her barely-there feelings for him will grow over time.

So, if he fails to create a relationship dynamic that causes her to fall in love with him, want to treat him well and be a good woman to him, she will eventually begin to lose interest.

If she then happens to meet another man who makes her feel strong surges of sexual attraction for him, she might not be able to resist the urge to cheat on her man with him.

Of course, this doesn't necessarily mean that she's a bad person that can't be trusted.

She may be an untrustworthy woman, but she could also mean that she simply wasn't getting the attraction experience she wanted from her man, so she ended up turning to someone else to fulfill her sexual and emotional needs.

Yet, rather than hurting her guy by telling him that she cheated on him, she just decides to break up with him without giving him her reasons.

So, if you continue asking your ex to give her a reason why she broke up with you, make sure you can handle whatever reason she gives you — even that she cheated on you.

It's then up to you to decide if you're willing to get back together again with her and put in the effort to make the relationship work (i.e. by creating a relationship dynamic that causes her to want to be a faithful, loving woman to you), or to walk away and find yourself another, more attractive and loyal woman than her.

3 Mistakes That Slow the Ex Back Process Down

You don't need your ex to tell you why she broke up with you to convince her to give you another chance.

What you do need, is to re-attract her by saying and doing the sort of things that are naturally attractive to women and make her feel like, if she doesn't give you another chance, she will end up regretting it for the rest of her life.

This is why, it's important that you avoid making the following mistakes that turn women off:

1. Writing her a long letter to express how you feel about her being so cold

Although it's only natural for a guy to feel frustrated and even hurt to be broken up with without knowing the reason why, sending his ex a letter saying things like, "I can't believe you can be so cold and unemotional after everything we shared together. Don't you even care for me a little bit? How can you leave me hanging like this without an explanation and expect me to be okay? I loved you and I still do and not knowing what I did wrong is driving me crazy! How can you not give a damn?"

Secretly, he's likely hoping that if he makes her feel sorry for him, not only will she tell him why she broke up with him, but she will also want to give him another chance.

Yet, thatâs practically the last thing that will happen.

Why?

Emotional sensitivity and helplessness are sexually unattractive traits in a man.

So, when a guy is being vulnerable and seems unable to cope with a challenging situation in life (e.g. his ex not telling him why she broke up with him), a woman feels turned off by what she perceives as his wimpy, emotionally weak behavior.

Then, rather than make her stop being so cold towards him and want him back, it makes her lose even more respect and attraction for him than ever before.

Another mistake to avoid isâ

2. Asking her if she ever truly loved you, or if the relationship was just fake

It might feel that way to you right now, but asking your ex if she ever loved you or if she was only with you until something better came along, is the fastest way to annoy her and possibly even make her say, âI donât know if I loved you,â just to get under your skin.

Hereâs whyâ

Women are instinctively turned off by men who need a woman to reassure them of their love or devotion, in order for him to feel like heâs good enough for her.

So when a man doubts himself and his attractiveness and value to a woman and has to ask her if her love for him was real, she loses respect and attraction for him.

So, donât put yourself in that position.

Just believe in yourself and know that regardless of what happened, she really did love you.

When you believe in yourself in that way, you naturally project an air of self-confidence that is attractive to your ex and other women.

It then becomes easier for you to re-attract her and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid isâ

3. Not realizing that his approach to attraction was most likely the main reason why

In most cases where a woman wonât tell a guy why they broke up, itâs because she doesnât want to tell him that he wasnât able to make her feel attracted in the ways that she wanted.

Some examples areâ

- He was always being really nice, when she wanted him to be a bit more ballsy.
- He kept giving her too much power, when she wanted him to take control and be the man.
- He treated her too much like a she was angelic and pure, when she wanted him to treat her like a hot, sexy woman that he couldnât keep his hands off.
- He gave up everything else in his life (e.g. his goals, dreams, friends, hobbies, interests) to devote all his time to her, when she wanted him to be more emotionally independent and not smother her so much.

Is it possible that you may have failed to notice that your approach was turning your ex off?

If so, don't worry about it.

As long you've realized your mistake, you can easily change and improve and give your ex the attraction experience that she really wants.

The more you do that, the more her defenses will come down.

She then becomes open to spending more time with you.

You can then fully reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you, get her back and enjoy a new and improved relationship with her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How a Man Deals With a Break Up Compared to a Woman

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends on the man, how much he loves the woman and if he is emotionally strong enough to deal with the break up properly.

Here are common 5 examples of how a man will deal with a break up:

1. A man accepts it, gives her some space for a week and then gets her back

[image: A man accepts it, gives her a week of space and then gets her back]

One of the best ways for a guy to deal with a break up, is to get his ex back by reversing the break up. This doesn't mean that he runs after her in a desperate, needy way and begs and pleads with her until he wears her down and she agrees to give him another chance, only for her to break up with him a few days or weeks later when she realizes that nothing has changed.

Instead, it's about him being emotionally mature in his approach to the ex back process and doing what needs to be done to, not only re-attract his ex, but also to become a better man in the process.

A guy like that will firstly avoid causing a scene when the break up happens.

Instead, he remains calm and emotionally strong and says something along the lines of, â€œAlthough I do still care for you and would have preferred that we try to work things out, I accept your decision to break up. I promise I won't pressure you into doing anything you don't want. We can just be friends from now on, okay?â€

By saying that to her, he immediately sparks some of her feelings of respect for him again, because he's being so emotionally strong and mature about the break up.

He then gives her a week of space where he doesn't contact her at all (i.e. no texting, messaging her on social media or calling her on the phone).

This gives her time to calm down and begin to miss him.

Of course, he then doesn't waste that week by sitting around moping and thinking negative thoughts like, â€œI miss her so much! This is so unbearable. I just can't function without her in my life.â€

Instead, he uses the time wisely, to quickly prepare himself to re-attract her when he finally interacts with her again (i.e. in a week's time).

For example: Some of the ways he might prepare himself are:

He gets control of his emotions so that he doesn't do anything stupid that could compromise his chances of getting his ex back (e.g. drunk text or call her in the middle of the night and tell her how much he still loves her, promise her that he will do anything she wants for another chance with her). He realizes that although she misses her and wants her back, he doesn't need her to feel good about himself and to be able to live a happy and successful life.

He comes up with a clear list of reasons why she broke up with him (e.g. he wasn't manly enough for her, he had become too jealous and possessive, he took her for granted, he wasn't supportive enough of her goals and dreams, he didn't make her feel attractive and desirable anymore).

He starts working on improving those things about himself.

He begins leaning on how to re-attract her in new and exciting ways.

Then after giving her a week of space, he calls her on the phone to say hello.

Of course, like most typical women, she pretends not to be happy to hear from him and says something like, “Why are you calling me? What do you want?” to see how he will respond.

However, rather than get upset and feel unsure of himself, he uses humor to break down her defenses and make her open up to talking to him.

He makes her laugh and smile and she begins to feel really happy to be talking to him again.

He also flirts with her to create sexual tension between them and make her open up to wanting to see him in person again.

When he senses that she's feelings sparks of respect and attraction for him again, he suggests they meet up in person as friends.

At the meet up, she notices by way of his attitude, body language, behavior and the way he responds to her, that he's a completely different man to the one she broke up with.

This causes her to feel rushes of respect and attraction for him again.

At the same time, he continues to build the sexual tension between them.

Then, when the time is right and he senses that his ex is feeling attracted to him (e.g. because she keeps licking her lips, she touches him on the arm or leg, she plays with her hair or throat), he leans in and gives her a hug and then progresses to giving her a kiss.

They then go back to his place, hook up sexually and decide to get back together again.

Another example isâ€¦

2. A man breaks down emotionally, cries and starts begging for another chance

[image: A man breaks down emotionally, cries and starts begging for another chance]

Sometimes, a guy isn't emotionally strong enough to stay in control of his emotions after a break up.

As a result, he panics and begins crying, begging and pleading with his ex to change her mind, by saying things like, “Please baby! Don't do this to me! You know that you mean everything to me and that I wouldn't be able to live without you. I know that I stuffed up, but I will do anything to make it up to you. Please don't walk away from what we had together. I beg you! All I'm asking is for one more chance to make things right again. Please!”

Yet, rather than make his ex think, “Wow, I never realized it, but his feelings for me are really deep. No other guy would beg and cry this way, so this must mean he really loves me. I'm definitely going to give him another chance now, because I will never find another man who is as devoted to me as him,” she instead pulls away from him even more.

Why?

A woman's attraction to a guy is based mostly on his ability to make her feel like she can look up to him and respect him as a man.

So, when he starts begging, crying and being emotionally weak and needy, he actually makes her feel even less respect, attraction and admiration for him as a man, than she already does.

Heâ□□s turning her off further, when what he should be doing is quickly re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for him again, so she naturally becomes unsure about her decision to break up with him.

As a result, she feels certain that heâ□□s not the man she wants to be with and he ends up losing her for real.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, make sure that you donâ□□t deal with the break up in this way (i.e. cry, beg and plead).

However, if you have already lost control of your emotions in this way, it doesnâ□□t mean you canâ□□t turn things around and get her back.

As long as you have learned from your mistake, you can hold your head up high, knowing that youâ□□ve become and are currently becoming a better man because of what happened.

Youâ□□re no longer the same man who broke down and cried and begged her to change her mind and youâ□□re also not the same guy that she broke up with.

You are a better man now.

So, donâ□□t worry about how you behaved in the past (e.g. cried, begged and pleaded).

Itâ□□s what you do from this moment onwards that counts.

So, from now on, focus only on making your ex feel strong sparks of respect and attraction for the new you during interactions (e.g. by being confident and self-assured, making her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you, staying emotionally strong even when she is being cold and unfriendly towards you) and watch how easily she changes her mind about being broken up.

Another example isâ□□|

3. A man accepts the break up, but spends years trying to get over her and move on

[image: A man accepts the break up, but then spends years trying to get over her]

Another way that some guys deal with a break up is to accept it and then try to move on.

A guy like that might think something along the lines of, â□□I donâ□□t really have a choice about this. If she doesnâ□□t want to be with me anymore, I canâ□□t exactly force her. I have to accept it and move on, even though I donâ□□t want to.â□□

He then spends months and even years trying to get over her.

For example: He mightâ□□|

- Go out drinking and partying with his single friends and pretend that heâ□□s enjoying the single life again.
- Hook up sexually with lots of random women.
- Join dating sites or use dating apps to meet new women.
- Accept blind dates from well-meaning friends.

Yet, no matter how much he tries to forget about his ex, at the back of his mind heâ□□s usually thinking things like, â□□Iâ□□m just not happy. No matter how many women Iâ□□ve been with since my break up with my ex, I canâ□□t seem to find a girl that compares to her. She was my ideal woman and I let her get away and I donâ□□t believe I can ever feel satisfied in a relationship with another woman. Maybe Iâ€™m just destined to live my life alone.â€™

He might then close himself off and stop dating other women altogether and end up living a sad and lonely life.

Alternatively, he might decide to â€˜settleâ€™ for a woman that heâ€™s not really attracted to or in love with, in the hope that she will never leave him and he wonâ€™t have to experience the pain he felt with his ex ever again.

He then either ends up feeling resentful and bitter, or is shocked when she actually does leave him, because heâ€™s not being a confident, emotionally masculine man that women are naturally attracted to and want to be with.

So, donâ€™t let this happen to you.

If you decide to accept the break up with your ex and move on, make sure that itâ€™s because you want to, not because you feel that you have to, based on her feelings at the time of the break up.

Remember: Just because sheâ€™s saying that sheâ€™s over you, it doesnâ€™t mean she will continue to feel that way a week from now when you re-attract her and make her feel strong surges of respect and sexual attraction for you again.

So, donâ€™t walk away if what you really want is to get your ex back and then find yourself wasting years of your life wanting her back.

Get her back now.

You really can!

Another example isâ€¦!

4. A man loses a lot of confidence in himself as a result of the break up and then is unable to attract a quality woman

[image: A man loses a lot of confidence in himself as a result of the break up and is then unable to attract a quality woman]

Sometimes, a guy allows the pain of a break up to destroy his confidence.

He might then begin thinking things like, â€™Iâ€™m such a loser! If I couldnâ€™t even hold on to my ex who said she loved me, what chance do I have of ever attracting another woman who doesnâ€™t even know me?â€™

If he then happens to go out and interacts with other women, they immediately pick up on his feelings of unworthiness (i.e. itâ€™s in the tonality of his voice, his body language, the way he seems so hesitant and unsure of himself around them and how he fails their confidence tests) and feel turned off by him.

He then gets rejected, which only validates his negative thoughts about himself.

Yet, hereâ€™s what a guy like that doesnâ€™t realizeâ€¦!

A woman likes the idea of being with a confident, emotionally strong man who believes in himself and in his value to her.

So, when a guy is being insecure and doesnâ€™t believe that heâ€™s good enough for her, it does nothing to spark her feelings for him and make her want to talk to him, have sex with him, date him or be in a relationship with him.

This is true whether a woman is someone heâs met for the first time, is in a relationship with, or is an ex.

His confidence is what attracts her and his insecurity is what turns her off.

Of course, there are women out there who prefer to be with a man who doesnât believe in himself (e.g. unattractive women, women who like to dominate guys when in a relationship) and eventually, he might find one of those.

He then ends up in a miserable relationship with a woman he doesnât really feel attracted to or want, because thatâs the best he believes he can do.

Yet, all it takes is for him to start believing in himself again and not only will he be able to attract better quality women, he can also get his ex back if he wants to.

He just has to believe that he is good enough.

Another example isâ

5. A man walks away, hooks up with new women and gets on with his life

[image: A man walks away, hooks up with new women and gets on with his life]

For some guys, a break up is a break up.

It happens, but itâs not the end of the world.

A man like that usually knows that he can have pretty much any woman he wants (i.e. because he is confident in himself and in his value to women).

So, rather than let the break up bring him down, he just moves on to the next woman and the next relationship.

He will then just enjoy having sex and hanging out with her, until she breaks up with him, or the novelty of the relationship wears off and he becomes bored, or meets another woman that catches his eye and he decides to move on instead.

Either way, he doesnât waste any time moping about and feeling sorry for himself.

He also doesnât give his ex a second thought, because heâs too busy moving on, meeting new women, having sex and enjoying his life without her.

Which Man Are You?

Based on the examples mentioned above, the question you need to ask yourself is, how do you intend to deal with your break up?

- Are you going to be the man who does what needs to be done to get your ex back as quickly as possible?
- Are you going to be the man who falls apart emotionally and then begs or pleads with her for another chance, therefore making her feel even more turned off by you than she already is?
- Are you going to be the man who wastes years of his life wishing he had had the courage to get her back when he had the chance?
- Are you the man who will lose confidence around other women, based on your inability to keep a woman interested and therefore, end up turning off quality women and only being able to attract women that you don't really want?

- Are you going to be the man who moves on by sleeping with new women?

The choice is yours.

However, if you do decide that you want to be the man who gets his ex back into a relationship that is even better than before, you need to make sure that you approach the ex back process in the correct way.

If you don't, you could turn your ex off even more and make getting her back more difficult for you.

This is why, you need to avoid making these 3 mistakes:

1. Wanting her back, but not doing anything about it

If you know that you want your ex back, don't waste time thinking things like, "What if she doesn't want to talk to me? Maybe I should just give her a few weeks of space to allow for things to calm down between us and then maybe I'll try and get in touch with her and see what happens. I just don't want to come on too strong right now and make her close up even more."

The truth is, the longer you take to start the ex back process, the more time you're giving your ex to move on and potentially meet, have sex with and start dating someone else.

Even if your ex still has feelings for you and is actually hoping you will try to get her back, if she notices that you're not making a move, she's likely going to assume that you're not interested in her anymore.

She will then force herself to get over you and move on.

Don't let that happen to you.

If you want your ex back, there is no better time to make it happen than right now.

So, get her on a phone call or to a meet up with you, re-attract her and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Sending her a text to see if she is interested and then giving up if her reply suggests she isn't

Sometimes, a guy reaches out to his ex via text, only to feel disappointed when she doesn't reply. He then just assumes that she's moved on and gives up on getting her back.

Yet, here's the thing!

She might actually be interested, but not wanting to show that too obviously via text.

So, if you happen to text your ex and she doesn't respond or she doesn't seem too interested, don't give up.

Instead, get her on a phone call where you can make her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you and show her (via the tonality of your voice and the way you interact with her) that you're a new man.

Then, once you've sparked some of her feelings for you, her defenses come down and she opens back up to meeting up with you in person to see where things go from there.

However, if you give up at the first sign of resistance from her, you may lose out on the opportunity of getting her back.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

3. Remaining stuck at the level you were at when she broke up with you

A guy will sometimes waste a lot of time sitting around missing his ex and wanting her back, rather than actually getting to the bottom of why she broke up with him in the first place.

If he then happens to contact her to try and get her back and she notices that nothing about him has changed or improved, he makes it easy for her to permanently walk away because heâ€™s the same guy as before.

Heâ€™s stuck at the same level that he was at when she broke up with him (e.g. heâ€™s still not ballsy enough to stand up for himself when she is talking down to him, he still feels insecure and like sheâ€™s too good for him, he still treats her more like a friend than a desirable woman, he still looks at her as being the main purpose of his life, rather than being a man who is happy and moving forward with or without her).

As a result, she loses even more respect and attraction for him and feels like sheâ€™s better off without him in her life.

He then can't get her back, or attract or keep other women of her quality and caliber.

So, if you want to get your girl back, don't stay stuck at the same level you were before.

Learn from your past mistakes.

Quickly improve your ability to attract her and make her feel respect, attraction and love for you again.

Then, contact her and show her that youâ€™re a new and improved man (e.g. more confident, more emotionally masculine, more charismatic, more exciting).

When she can see that you really are at a different level as a man now, the idea of giving you another chance starts to feel like something sheâ€™s willing to do.

You can then guide her back into a relationship with you and enjoy the good times ahead.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me Because I Smoked Too Much Weed

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are the 5 most common reasons why a woman break up with her boyfriend due to his use of pot:

1. She doesn't like how it affects your ambition and progress as a man

Sometimes, smoking weed can make a man feel so relaxed and laid back, that he ends up not caring very much about progressing through the levels of life like other men.

For example: He doesn't set big goals for himself and work towards achieving them, doesn't make headway in his chosen career, doesn't have any plans for his and his woman's future together.

Alternatively, he does have big goals, but in reality, they are really just big dreams that he talks about, but never achieves.

In other words, he's a dreamer, rather than a doer.

[image: She doesn't like how it affects your ambition and progress as a man]

Alternatively, he does try hard to make progress in life, but due to being high most of the time, his output is dull and doesn't end up being good enough to make him succeed.

So, even though he might feel like everything is going along fine in his life and relationship, his woman will be wondering things like, â€œIs this it? We're stuck in a rut and not making much progress in life and all he wants to do is smoke weed. I see the boyfriends or husbands of my girlfriend or family who have goals and dreams and they're making a lot of progress. Yet, we're not. It makes me feel embarrassed around them that my life has turned out like this. I'm always making excuses for him and saying that he's going to change and improve, or that he's going to get off his butt and succeed at what he's being trying to do, but deep down I know that it's probably a lost cause. I thought him smoking weed was just a passing phase and that he'd eventually get over it, but he's just gotten worse.â€

If she then gets to the point where she doesn't feel confident that things will change, she may decide to just break up with him and try find herself a man who is moving through the levels in life, so she can feel safe about a future with him.

How about you?

Have you remained stuck in your a comfort zone in life and stopped making a lot of progress?

Alternatively, have you been trying to make progress, but you haven't really been succeeding?

Is it possible that if you were more clearheaded, you would be sharper and be much more likely to succeed?

Have you been relying on pot a little too much?

The thing is, there's nothing wrong with smoking pot.

Yet, if it gets in the way of your life and relationships, it then becomes a problem.

It's the same with drinking, playing video games, jerking off to porn, overeating, etc.

Thereâs nothing wrong with any of those things, but if you do it excessively, it begins to negatively affect your life and relationships.

So, if youâve gone too far with pot by smoking it too often, donât worry about it.

Youâre not a villain for doing that.

Yes, you made a mistake, but now you know better and you can easily change and improve and show your ex that youâve become the kind of man she can feel proud to come back to.

A good way of doing that is by moving forward in your life without her.

Now is the time to go ahead and make progress towards fulfilling your goals, dreams and ambitions in life.

For example:

- If you have a big dream in life that youâve neglected because of your weed smoking habits, now is the time to pick up where you left off and make things happen.
- If you have been trying to succeed in life, but the overuse of weed has clouded your efforts and gotten you crappy results, then you now have an opportunity to cut back on pot and start making progress.
- If youâre not sure what you should be aiming for in life, ask yourself, âWhat is my biggest dream, goal or ambition? What do I wish I could do with my life? What do I want to achieve, be or become? What is the most challenging, but meaningful thing that I want to work on for my entire life?â
- If youâve been stuck in a dead-end job, start looking for ways to improve that (e.g. find another, better job, apply for a promotion, go back to university and improve your qualifications so that you can advance in your chosen career, take a nighttime course to improve your skills in a particular area, so you can then get a better job).

The world really is your oyster and you can choose to do whatever you want and be whoever you want in this life.

If you just want to smoke weed and run the risk of letting relationships pass you by, then go ahead and do that.

Yet, if you want to have the best of both worlds where you can smoke occasionally, have a successful relationship and a successful life, then try to do things in moderation from now on.

Eventually, you might find that you only smoke once every month and then once every few months and then only on special occasions.

Itâs up to you.

Yet, one thing is for sureâ!

When you begin to move forward in life and get to the point where you have big goals, dreams and ambitions, not only will you become a better man as a result, you will suddenly become more attractive to your ex as well.

Why?

You become the kind of man she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and feel proud to come back to.

A woman naturally loves and feels attracted to a man who knows who is and what he wants in life.

So, when your ex sees that you're no longer wasting your life and are actually leveling up as a man, she will naturally begin to look at you with different eyes.

She may also start to feel worried about losing out on being with the new and improved version of you, which then makes her drop her guard and open herself up to interacting with you more.

From there, you just need to reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you, so she finds herself doubting her decision to break up with you.

It then becomes easy for you to get her back into a relationship that is stronger and better than before.

Another reason why a woman will break up with you because you smoke too much weed is

2. She is bored of how chill your life seems to be

[image: She is bored of how chill your life seems to be]

Not all women like to be in a relationship with a guy who is always busy, likes going out partying or doing things (e.g. traveling, volunteering, participating in sports/political campaigns/neighborhood watches) and who is an overly active extrovert.

In fact, some women enjoy a more mellow lifestyle where her and her man can just relax and take things easy together (e.g. take walks on the beach or in the park, watch movies, go to museums, stay at home and just hang out).

So, if a guy smokes weed and is quite mellow, it will appeal to certain types of women.

However, over time, his overly laid back approach can begin to feel boring to her and she may begin thinking things like, "Life with him is so boring. I want some action in my life every now and then. Not all the time, but sometimes it would be nice to do something exciting like go to a club and dance the night away, or go on an adventure holiday, or take up a new hobby together. Anything that's different and a bit more exciting than our hum-drum lifestyle. I liked it initially, but it's getting stale. All he really does is get high and chill. If I don't get high with him, we're on a completely different level. I want to do things and he doesn't. He just wants to get high and chill."

If he also allows smoking weed to negatively affect their sexual and emotional connection (i.e. because he's too stoned to talk or too tired to have sex and they end up being more like friends or roommates than lovers), she may start questioning why she's bothering to stay with him.

Some women will put up with that kind of relationship for years, but it will rarely last because the foundation of the relationship (i.e. lack of connection, lack of sex, lack of progress in life) is just too weak to justify sticking around for life.

Of course, if a woman breaks up with a guy like that, it doesn't always mean that all of her feelings for him are completely gone.

In many cases, the woman still cares for her ex and thinks of him as a good guy.

It's just that she doesn't feel enough of a spark with him to justify staying in a relationship with him.

Fortunately though, it's pretty easy for him to begin changing how she feels and get her back.

For example: If a guy got broken up with by his girlfriend because there wasn't enough of a spark, he can make her feel sparks for him when they chat on the phone.

He can add in some flirting and build up sexual tension, so she naturally begins to feel attracted to him.

Suddenly, she stops feeling like they are just friends and begins to feel attracted to him in a sexual and romantic way.

As a result, she begins to see him in a new light.

Then, the idea of getting back with him starts to appeal to her once again.

Another reason why a girlfriend will end a relationship because you smoke too much weed isâ€¦

3. She can see that it's more of an addiction than you realize

[image: She can see that it's more of an addiction than you realize]

In some cases, a woman will clearly see that her guy is more affected by his weed smoking habits than he realizes.

For example: He mightâ€¦

- Be forgetful and unreliable.
- Break his promises to her because he can't be bothered following through on what he said he'd do.
- Be too stoned to fix problems in the house (e.g. leaking tap, broken toilet).
- Have problems concentrating at work or while driving.
- Make poor decisions and may put himself (and her) into potentially dangerous situations.
- Sometimes experience fear, anxiety or delusions in situations where other guys would be completely calm and at ease.
- Feel paranoid and distrustful of other people.

If she notices that, she might begin to nag and complain to her boyfriend in the hopes that he will realize that he has a problem and do something about it.

If he listens to her and takes action to improve, she will feel a deep respect for him for being an emotionally strong and mature man and the relationship will become closer.

However, if he refuses to take her concerns seriously and instead makes excuses for himself by saying things like, â€œYou're making too much of a big deal about this. I'm not addicted. It's just something I do to relax. I can stop smoking whenever I want. Besides, it doesn't really affect me. You need to stop being such a nag about it. I'm fine,â€ she may eventually decide to break up with him.

By the wayâ€¦

As I said earlier, there is nothing wrong with smoking weed if you want to.

Yet, if you want things to work with your ex, you will need to compromise.

Every couple needs to adapt to each other and make compromises in order to make the relationship work.

In your case, it might mean you need to stop, or at least cut back on smoking weed to make your woman happy and want to be with you again.

It's not about letting her rule your life.

Instead, it's about being a balanced man who can give her what she needs in a relationship with you (e.g. to feel like she can depend on you, to know that you're not going to hurt her or yourself while driving a car when very high, to stop feeling like she has to keep you in line).

When you can show your ex that you're the kind of man she can rely on, look up to and respect, she will be more open to giving you another chance.

Important: Don't go and tell her that she can now rely on you and then ask for another chance.

Just show her based on how differently you now think, talk, feel, behave and act in life.

She will pick up on it.

Trust me.

Women are always looking out for and observing those things in a man.

When you display traits that make women feel respect and attraction, they feel it.

It's very simple and it works.

Another reason why a woman will break up with you because you smoke too much weed is

4. You gave her too much power over you in the relationship and now she's trying to control you

[image: You gave her too much power over you in the relationship and now she's trying to control you]

For a woman to be able to maintain her feelings of respect and attraction in a relationship, the man has to be able to maintain his position of masculinity and not be walked all over by her.

So, if a man ends up smoking so much weed that his decision making ability becomes flimsy or wishy-washy, a woman will naturally step up and start being more bossy and demanding.

If he gives into her bossiness, she will naturally lose respect and attraction for him.

Here's the thing

Most women don't want to be the boss in a relationship with a man.

There are some women who like to dominate their man, but they are the minority.

The majority of women are not attracted to emotionally weak, wimpy men who allow themselves to be walked all over by a woman.

So, if your ex has gotten away with dominating you emotionally for too long, now is the time to stand up to her (e.g. by telling her that you're not going to stop smoking weed for her) and take your power back.

Don't say it in an angry way.

Say it in a confident, easy-going manner, but assertive manner.

Say it in a loving way.

Say it, knowing that, even though she may act as though she is annoyed, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you for manning up.

The more respect and sexual attraction she feels for the new, emotionally dominant you, the less she will be able to hold on to resist giving you another chance.

Her walls will begin to crumble and then the process of getting her back becomes easier because she is open to you again.

Another reason why a girlfriend will break up with you because you smoke too much weed isâ€¦!

5. She feels like you have taken her presence in your life for granted

[image: She feels like you have taken her presence in your life for granted]

At the beginning of a relationship when things are new and exciting (e.g. theyâ€™re having sex, going on fun dates, hanging out and getting to know each other), a woman might be more open to being with a guy who happens to smoke weed.

However, over time, she may also begin to notice that his excessive smoking makes him less charming, attentive and loving towards her than he could be.

Initially, she might be okay about that, but over time, she may begin to resent that heâ€™s too busy lying on the couch stoned to pay her the attention she sometimes wants from him.

She may also find herself picking up after him and taking care of him because heâ€™s too spaced out to do anything for himself.

Over time, she might begin thinking things like, â€œThis isnâ€™t a relationship anymore. Instead, it feels like Iâ€™m his mother or his maid. All I ever do is take care of him and pick up after him, while he spends his time smoking weed and watching TV or playing video games. Iâ€™ve had it. I feel so used by him. Itâ€™s just not fair for me. Heâ€™s taking me for granted.â€

Initially, she might give her boyfriend hints about how unhappy she is and hope that he will then pick up on it and change.

Yet, if he continues to take her for granted and assumes that sheâ€™ll put up with it because she loves him so much, she will begin to feel resentful and will start disconnecting from her feelings of love for him.

If he doesnâ€™t change, she will eventually break up with him and look for a replacement guy who can give her the love experience she wants in a relationship.

So, if smoking too much pot led to you taking your ex for granted, to get her back, you need to show her (via your attitude, actions and behavior) that you have learned from your mistakes and have become a better man as a result.

2 Mistakes to Avoid Making When Attempting to Get Your Ex Back

If you want to get your girlfriend back, itâ€™s important that in every interaction you have with her from now on, you actively spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

To ensure that you do that correctly, you will need to avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Getting angry at her for not thinking the same way you do

There are many reasons why a guy might choose to smoke weed (e.g. heâ€™s a very intense person and it helps him relax, itâ€™s what his friends do and he likes to fit in with them, he uses it to help him cope with a medical condition, he likes to feel like a rebel, he feels as though it gives him access to deeper, more philosophically intelligent thoughts, he feels as though it makes his art form better, he enjoys seeing the world through the lens of being high on weed).

So, if his woman starts to nag him about it to the point where she breaks up with him, he might get angry with her for not being able to see things from his point of view.

For example: A guy might say to his girlfriend, “How can you be so closed minded about something that is legal now in many parts of the world? You knew that I smoked weed when we got together, but now you’re trying to change me and make me be someone I’m not. How can you not see that I smoke for my health/to relieve my stress/my music? Don’t you care about that? All you’re worried about is what you want, but you don’t care about what I want!”

Secretly, he may be hoping that his anger will shock her into realizing that she just needs to accept that he’s a heavy pot smoker and deal with it.

Unfortunately though, it almost never works out that way.

Instead, an emotional outburst like that usually only convinces a woman even more that her boyfriend is out of control.

She then feels more motivated to move on as quickly as possible and find a man who can offer her a more stable relationship and lifestyle that isn’t based on being intoxicated or high all the time.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

2. Promising to quit weed for her

For example: A guy might say things like, “Please baby, don’t leave me. I promise that I will quit if you just give me one more chance. I won’t ever smoke again. I promise.”

Essentially, he’s likely hoping that if she sees that he’s willing to do anything to make her happy (i.e. stop smoking weed), she will be impressed and then open herself up to getting back together again.

In some cases (i.e. when a woman really loves her boyfriend and doesn’t want to leave him), a woman will give a guy a chance, but if he can’t stick to the promise, she will break up with him again.

In most cases though, when a woman has decided to break up with a guy, she has usually been thinking about it for quite a while and is ready to end the relationship and start trying to move on.

So, when a guy offers to quit weed for her, she actually loses more respect for him because he seems desperate because he’s willing to do whatever she wants.

Here’s the thing thoughâ

A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy that is so desperate to be with her that he submits to her and allows her to tell him what he can and cannot do in life.

So, if you want your ex to give you another chance, make sure she doesn’t look at the approach you’re taking to get her back as being one of desperation or panic.

Let her see that even though you want her back, you’re not going to allow her to force you into doing something you don’t want to do, but at the same time, you’re willing to meet her halfway and consider her feelings on the matter (e.g. cut down 80% right now and then eventually cut down completely and only smoke on special occasions a couple of times per year).

Do it for you though, not her.

If she senses that you’re only doing it for her because you’re in a panic now that she has dumped you, she will see it as desperate.

On the other hand, if she sees that you've significantly cut down on or have even quit weedÂ because you want to do it and not because you're in a panic after being dumped, then she will respect your emotional strength and maturity as a man.

You can then build on her feelings and get her back right then and there, or within days.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Girlfriend Said, 'I Have No Choice But to Break Up With You'

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are the 4 most common reasons why a woman will say that to her boyfriend:

1. She is tired of being in a relationship without mutual attraction

[image: She is tired of being in a relationship without mutual attraction]

A woman will sometimes get into a relationship with a guy, even though she doesn't feel a strong spark of attraction for him (e.g. because she doesn't like being single and she likes being spoiled by a man, he kept asking her out and eventually she gave in and said yes, he was a friend and he grew on her over time).

In her mind she may be thinking something along the lines of, 'He's a nice guy and I really do like him. He's fun to hang out with and we get along well. I think that if I give him a chance, we could be happy together.'

If the guy can continue to grow her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him, she will naturally fall more and more in love with him and begin thinking of him as her ideal man.

However, if he fails to build on her feelings for him and she realizes that even though he's madly in love with her and is always saying things like, 'I'm so lucky to have you in my life,' or 'You're the perfect woman for me. I feel so happy knowing that you're mine,' she just doesn't feel the same way about him, she will feel like pulling away, being closed off and treating him with less and less respect over time.

She may then begin to ask herself things like, 'Is this it? Is this how it's supposed to feel when you're in love? Well if it is, I don't want it. It just doesn't feel right to me and I'd rather be single than settle for being with a guy I don't feel sexually and romantically attracted to.'

When a woman reaches that point in her relationship with a man where the feelings are no longer mutual, it's only natural that she may decide to break up with him.

However, rather than come out and say, 'I'm sorry but I just don't have any feelings for you anymore,' and then have to deal with him trying to talk her out of her decision (e.g. by promising her that he will change, begging and pleading with her to give you another chance, offering to do anything she wants), she may just decide to let him down easy by saying something along the lines of, 'You really are a great guy, but I have no choice but to break up with you.'

It then leaves it up to his imagination to try and understand what she meant by that (e.g. Is it because her family and friends are forcing her to break up with him? Is she struggling to cope with her work/university commitments as well as the relationship? Is something wrong with her and she just doesn't want to tell him?), without her having to explain her real reasons why.

Here's the thing though!

Even if your ex never felt strong attraction or love for you before, or stopped having those feelings somewhere along the line because certain aspects of your thinking and behavior turned her off, it doesn't mean that you can't make her feel like that now.

In fact, when you interact with her and reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with you again, making her feel like a sexy, desirable woman by being more emotionally masculine than her, being more manly and assertive in the way you respond to her), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

Even though she may have previously felt convinced that she didn't have strong enough feelings for you to stay in the relationship with you, she will suddenly start wondering if she made a big mistake when she broke up with you.

When that happens, she will open up to kissing you and having sex with you to see how she feels from there.

Another possible reason why your ex said that she has no choice but to break up with you is

2. She doesn't want to try to work on the relationship anymore

[image: She doesn't want to try to work on the relationship anymore]

In almost all cases, a woman won't just break up with a guy before she gives him at least one chance to change and improve.

For example: If a woman feels that her guy isn't emotionally dominant enough, she might say things like, I prefer it when you make the decisions for the both of us, or You're really sexy when you're in charge, or I can't relax and be myself when you don't take the lead in some of the things we need to do.

If he doesn't pick up on her hints, or simply just ignores them by telling himself something like, I don't know why she keeps saying those things to me. I just want her to be happy and that's why I let her call all the shots. Then she can have what she wants without me having to guess and then stuff things up, her hints will then begin to turn into arguments and fights where she tries to force him into taking on the more dominant role with her (e.g. by being stubborn and refusing to make any decisions, throwing tantrums).

Eventually though, if she notices that no matter what she says to him, or how many fights and arguments they get into about the same thing, he always falls back to his old pattern of being submissive around her, she may start threatening to break up with him.

This might shock him into taking her concerns more seriously and he may then say something like, Please don't leave me. I promise I will change.

She may then give him another chance (and quite often more than one) to become the man she wants him to be.

However, if he breaks his promises to her over and over again and continuously reverts back to his old pattern of thinking and behavior, her feelings of love and attraction will begin to fade away, until she finally decides to break up with him.

The guy might then try to make her change her mind yet again, but by that stage she's usually feeling so fed up with him and all his broken promises that she no longer wants to try and work on the relationship.

She might then say something like, I'm sorry, but I've given you enough chances *already and now, I have no choice but to break up with you.*â€œ

Hereâ€™s the thing thoughâ€”

For your ex to change her mind and open back up to the idea of having a relationship with you again, itâ€™s vital that you understand and then change the main thing that was turning her off about you (e.g. you were too insecure and needy, you were too submissive with her, you were childish and immature).

Only then will she be willing to let down her defenses and open up to the idea of working on the relationship again.

Another possible reason why your ex said that she has no choice but to break up with you isâ€”

3. She hopes this break will wake you up and force you to quickly change, so you and her can have another chance

[image: She hopes that this break up will wake you up and force you to quickly change, so you and her can have another chance]

Sometimes, as a last resort to shock her guy into changing and improving, she might decide to break up with him.

Essentially, sheâ€™s likely hoping that the shock of losing her will shake him up and force him to quickly change.

They can then get back together in a relationship that is better than ever before.

Unfortunately though, it doesnâ€™t always work out that way.

For example: In some cases, a guy might start thinking things like, *â€œIâ€™m such an idiot! I lost my ideal woman. Itâ€™s over and thereâ€™s nothing I can do to make her change her mind and get her back. Itâ€™s hopeless.*â€œ

He then closes himself off from her (i.e. he doesnâ€™t bother texting or calling her) and allows himself to fall into a negative funk where he loses confidence in himself and in his ability to get her back.

If his ex then happens to call him to see why heâ€™s not contacting her and discovers a guy who is wallowing in despair, she will feel turned off by his emotional weakness.

She will then likely give up on the idea of him being able to change and become the man she wants him to be and she will focus on getting over him and moving on.

This is why, regardless of what your girlfriend said to you (i.e. that she has no choice but to break up with you), you need to take action to get her back.

Firstly, you need to understand her real reasons for breaking up with you, so that you can quickly make some attractive changes to yourself.

Then, you need to interact with her over the phone and in person and begin reactivating her feelings of respect and attraction for you by showing her that youâ€™re a new and improved man now.

For example:

- Youâ€™re less insecure and self-doubting now, which means you donâ€™t fear losing her and as a result being too clingy and needy.
- Youâ€™re more emotionally independent, which means that you donâ€™t need her in your life to be able to function and feel happy and satisfied. Yes, you want her, but you don't need her.

- You're more emotionally masculine now, which means that you no longer allow her to dominate you during interactions or disrespect you in any way, like she used to in the past.
- You're now less emotionally sensitive, which means you no longer cry or whine about your problems or issues. Instead, you face them head on like a man and do what needs to be done to solve them or overcome them.
- You're more of a challenge around her now (e.g. you're not always available to her when she wants, you laugh at her in a loving way when she creates drama), which means she feels more sexually attracted to you, rather than feeling friendly or neutral emotions.

When your ex can see for herself that you really have changed this time, her feelings for you will also begin to change.

She naturally drops her guard and opens up to being with you romantically and sexually again, because she can see that you're now the man she always wanted you to be.

Another possible reason why your ex said that she has no choice but to break up with you is

4. She is tired of being taken for granted

[image: She is tired of being taken for granted]

For a woman to be happy in a relationship with her man, she needs him to be good to her, but also make her feel motivated to be good to him, treat him well and make him feel loved as well.

Unfortunately though, where guys go wrong in a relationship with a woman, is by not putting enough effort into the relationship and causing her to feel like he doesn't appreciate her or what she does for him.

So, if a woman starts to feel that she is the one in the relationship who is always compromising and putting her man's needs ahead of her own, while he always seems to be the one taking, she will naturally begin to feel resentful, taken for granted and unloved.

Initially, she might try to change his attitude towards her by sulking, getting into arguments with him, or even threaten to breakup with him.

However, if he just gets annoyed with her for creating drama, accuses her of being a moody, temperamental woman, or assumes that because she loves him she will get over it, his attitude will begin to erode her feelings for him.

Eventually, she will get to the point where she's had enough and she may then say something along the lines of, "I gave you so many chances to start treating me better and you never took me seriously, so now I have no choice but to break up with you. Bye."

If this rings a bell for you, then to make your ex open back up to giving you another chance, you need to show her (via your attitude and the way you think, act, behave and treat her) that you have learned from your mistakes and have become a better man as a result.

Of course, don't turn into a wuss either and run around doing everything just to please her, because that will give her a false sense of power over you and make her respect you even less.

Instead, briefly apologize to her for your past behavior and then just focus on making her smile, laugh and feel attracted and in love with the new you.

4 Ways That Guys Reduce Their Chances of Getting an Ex Back

When a woman disconnects from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, for him to get her back, he needs to say and do the types of things that will reactivate those feelings inside of her and make her see him in a more positive light.

Unfortunately though, a lot of guys say and do the types of things that actually turn her off even more and as a result, reduce their chances of getting her back.

Don't let that happen to you.

Here are 4 mistakes to avoid making if you want to re-attract your ex and get her back:

1. Begging and pleading for another chance, which only turns her off more

A woman's attraction to a guy is based mostly on his ability to make her feel like she can look up to him and respect him as man.

So, when a guy is begging and pleading and behaving like an emotionally weak, wimpy man around her, rather than make her change her mind about breaking up with him, he's actually convincing her even more that she made the right decision.

Even though he has good intentions (by begging and pleading), because he really wants things to work between them, his approach is all wrong.

He's trying to get her back by displaying traits and behaviors that actually turn women off, so it's just not going to work.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Asking her what you can fix or change to get another chance

This might seem like a great idea, after all, if you know exactly what turned your ex off, you'll be able to give her exactly what she wants, yet it's definitely not.

Why?

Most women don't want to be responsible for shaping their ex into the man that he needs to become to make her happy.

Instead, she wants him to figure out how to be the kind of man that she wants and then start being that man, without needing her input or direction.

If he needs her to tell him what to do and how to do it, it takes the romance out of it and she feels as though he's putting on an act to impress her.

This is why, in almost all ex back cases, you have to figure out how to re-attract her without asking her what you need to fix.

Then, go ahead and do that and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Accusing her of being selfish or heartless

[image: Accusing her of being selfish or heartless]

A guy accusing a woman of being selfish or heartless to make her change her mind about breaking up with him, is like him driving past a police officer at 200mph and expecting not to get a fine.

It just doesn't work.

Not only does it make her feel defensive and annoyed, it also highlights to her that he actually doesn't understand why she broke up with him in the first place.

Here's the thing!

A woman doesn't like to be emotionally blackmailed into a relationship.

Instead, she will feel more determined to move on and find a new man as quickly as possible.

Another mistake to avoid is!

4. Trying to convince her that he can change if she just gives him another chance

Chances are high, that you've already promised your ex that you will change many times before and haven't fully followed through on that promise, otherwise, you wouldn't be in the situation you are right now (i.e. broken up with).

So, if you try to convince her that this time will be different, you're likely just going to be wasting your and her time, because she's not going to believe.

Remember: Actions speak louder than words.

So, forget trying to convince her with words and start convincing her with your actions.

Show her that things will be different by letting her experience the new and improved you for herself.

When she can sense the changes in you, her perspective of you will change and following that, her feelings will change too.

She will then open back up the idea of giving you another chance, without you having to pressure her into it.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

When Is the Right Time to Ask Her if She Wants to Get Back Together?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

In most cases, the best time to ask your ex if she wants to get back together, is after you've had sex with her again.

Before that point, most women will say no to giving a relationship another chance, or will give wishy-washy answers like, â€œIâ€™m not sure if Iâ€™m ready yet. Letâ€™s wait a bit and see what happens,â€ or â€œI just need a bit more time to sort myself out. Letâ€™s just be friends for now.â€

Why?

You're asking her for a commitment after being dumped.

You're also asking for a relationship (that includes sex) even though she hasn't felt the urge to have it with you.

You're asking for too much too soon.

So, what you have to get 100% clear on here is that an exclusive relationship again is the LAST step of the ex back process, not the FIRST.

[image: Prior to sex, she will have her guard up]

Prior to having sex with her ex, a woman will almost always have her guard up and will say, "No" to a request to start a relationship again.

Only a woman who is still in love with her ex and missing him like crazy will be open to agreeing to a relationship right away, before having sex with him again.

For pretty much every other woman though, she first wants to see how she feels with him sexually again, before opening up to the idea of committing to a relationship.

If she commits before having sex with him and then changes her mind, she'll have to go through yet another serious break up with him, where he'll likely try the same approach again (i.e. ask for a relationship before even hooking up with her sexually).

For example: Here are 3 scenarios where a woman broke up with a man and he tried to get a relationship with her without actually changing and improving the things that were important to her first.

1. A woman dumps a guy for being too insecure

[image: A woman dumps a guy for being too insecure]

Imagine a woman is in a relationship with a guy who is always feeling unsure of himself and his value to her.

As a result, he becomes really clingy and needy.

For example: He gives up on pursuing his personal goals or dreams, stops pursuing his own interests and hobbies and stops hanging out with his own friends unless everyone is going out together as couples.

In his mind heâs likely justifying his decision by thinking something along the lines of, âWhat I want doesnât matter anymore. Itâs got to be our goals and dreams, our friends and our interests from now on. After all, weâre a couple now and we have to do everything together.â

At the same time, he also continually seeks reassurance from his woman by asking questions like, âDo you still love me?â or, âYou know that I wouldnât be able to function without you in my life, right? You are everything to meâ or, âYou wouldnât leave me, would you?â

Initially, his woman tries to reassure him of her love and devotion by saying things like, âOf course I love you,â or âYouâre my guy and I love you. Why would I want to leave you? Just relax and enjoy what we have.â

She also encourages him to be more emotionally independent and do things on his own from time to time.

However, over time, she notices that heâs not changing and he simply continues to cling to her in a desperate, needy way.

As a result, she begins to get tired of having to help him understand how to be the man she needs. She has tried for so long and has gotten to the point where she has given up, so she breaks up with him.

Of course, the thing that the guy feared the most just became a reality and all he can think about is that he needs her back as soon as possible.

So, he decides to wait for a week and then ask her for another chance.

In that week, he just sits around doing nothing else other than feeling lonely and sad and thinking things like, âI miss her so much! What will I do if she doesnât want to give me another chance? Iâll never be able to move on and find another woman to replace her.â

Then, after a week of space, he calls her on the phone.

When she answers the call, she makes sure that sheâs being cold and distant towards him and asking things like, âWhat do you want?â

Basically, sheâs testing him to see if heâs changed and become more emotionally strong and confident since they broke up, or if heâs still at the same level as before.

Unfortunately though, rather than maintain his confidence with her and then use some humor to turn her coldness into feelings of respect and attraction for him again, he instead starts to feel nervous and unsure of himself.

He then begins stumbling over his words and saying things like, âLook, I know youâre mad at me right now, but I really need you. Please give our relationship another chance. I promise Iâll do whatever you want to make you happy. I just canât go on another day without you. Please babyâ| come back to me!â

Naturally, she says âNo,â because she can immediately sense that heâs still insecure.

Essentially, heâs asking for the end result without even giving her what she wants first (i.e. to see that heâs transformed himself into a more confident, self-assured, emotionally independent man), so sheâs just not interested.

The next scenario isâ|

2. A woman breaks up with a guy for taking her for granted

[image: A woman breaks up with a guy for taking her for granted]

In this example, the guy fell into the trap of believing that the love between him and his woman would last for life, just because it was so good at the start of the relationship.

So, although he initially paid lots of attention to his woman and made her feel loved and appreciated by saying things like, *â€œYouâ€™re so gorgeous. I really love the way you always make an effort to look so amazing. Iâ€™m really proud to have you as my woman,*â€œ he soon began to pay attention to her less and less.

Over time, he didnâ€™t comment on her appearance at all and when she tried to get a reaction out of him by asking things like, â€œDo I look nice in this dress?â€œ or, â€œDo you like my hair this way?â€œ he would often brush her off with something along the lines of, *â€œItâ€™s fine,*â€œ or â€œIf youâ€™re happy with it, itâ€™s okay by meâ€œ rather than occasionally taking a moment to say, “Wow, you look good. My sexy girlfriend. I love you. Come here” and then giving her a hug and a kiss.

He also stopped pulling his weight around the house and fell into the habit of expecting her to always be the one who cooks/washes the dishes/cleans up/runs all the errands/pays the bills, while he watches TV, plays video games or hangs out with his buddies.

At the same time, all the thoughtful, romantic things he used to do for her (e.g. surprise her with a gift or flowers from time-to-time, take her on romantic dates to nice restaurants once in a while), fell away and got replaced with mundane things like ordering takeout rather than going out, socializing with friends rather than spending time alone, or watching TV rather than doing something interesting or romantic together.

Essentially, he made the mistake of assuming that just because his woman cares so much for him, sheâ€™ll put up with anything, forever.

However, it didnâ€™t work out that way.

Instead, she started to feel taken for granted and began thinking things like, *â€œIs this what itâ€™s going to be like from now on? Iâ€™m sorry but thatâ€™s not acceptable to me. I didnâ€™t sign up to be with a man who treats me like dirt. I want to feel loved and special, not like Iâ€™m another piece of the furniture, or like Iâ€™m his servant!*â€œ

Eventually, she lost so much respect, attraction and love for him as a man that she broke up with him. After the initial shock of losing her, the guy decided that he would wait 30 days before asking her for another chance.

So, he cut off all contact with her (i.e. no texts, social media messages, calls or meet ups) and ignored her for a full month.

Secretly he was hoping that she would miss him so much, that she would either come running back to him, or want to get back with him the minute he contacts her after 30 days.

Unfortunately though, what he didnâ€™t realize was that because she had disconnected from her feelings for him, not hearing from him at all after the break up, only gave her time to fully get over him and move on with another man who made her feel attracted, loved and appreciated instead.

So, when he finally did get in touch with her after a month of No Contact and asked her if she wants to get back together, he was devastated when she responded by saying something along the lines of,

“Are you seriously asking me to give our relationship another chance after you took me for granted and treated me like I didn’t matter and then, when we broke up, you continued to do it by ignoring me for a whole month? I’m sorry, but I don’t deserve to be messed around like that, so my answer is no! Besides, I’ve met someone else and he makes me feel the way you never could. So, please don’t contact me again. What we had is now truly over.”

The next scenario is!

3. A woman breaks up with a guy because she no longer feels attracted to him

[image: A woman breaks up with a guy because she no longer feels attracted to him]

This couple began a relationship with a lot of attraction and desire.

At first, everything felt exciting and new and they really enjoyed being together, kissing, having sex and getting to know each other.

Yet, over time, something began to change.

The woman began to notice that her guy was unable to maintain her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him, because he stopped behaving in the attractive ways that he had at the beginning of the relationship.

Instead, he began to think, act and behave in ways that eroded her feelings for him and made her want to close herself off, pull away and stop being a good woman to him.

For example: Some of the ways he started turning her off were!

- He began treating her more like a neutral friend, rather than a desirable woman, so the spark of lust faded away.
- He stopped being confident and self-assured like he was at the beginning of the relationship and started being insecure, needy and clingy all the time, which made her feel stressed and like she always had to take care of him emotionally.
- He refused to take on the more dominant role in the relationship and expected her to take the lead and make all the important decisions for the both of them, which made her feel like she had power over him

Naturally, this caused her to lose respect for him and she began thinking things like, “This isn’t how it’s supposed to be. I should be feeling in love and attracted to my man, but instead, I feel so turned off by him. The spark is gone between us and I don’t know if we can ever get it back. I hate to admit it, but this just doesn’t seem to be working anymore. Maybe it’s time for me to find another man who can make me feel the way I want to feel in a relationship with him (i.e. attracted, excited, turned on).”

However, rather than break up with him right away, she instead tried to shake him up a bit by making her unhappiness clear to him during conversations and even in arguments and disagreements (e.g. by saying things like, “There’s no spark between us anymore. I feel like we’re brother and sister instead of a couple” or, “You’re smothering me with your clinginess” or, “I’m tired of making all the decisions. Why don’t you be a man and do it yourself for a change?”).

Unfortunately, though, he didn’t really pay much attention to her, because like most guys, he assumed that she was just being a temperamental, moody woman and that she would get over it because she loves him.

So, when she finally broke up with him, he was shocked.

Of course he wanted her back right away, but because things ended badly between them, he decided to wait 2 weeks before asking her for another chance via text.

He believed that this was the best approach and that he stood a better chance of getting her back, if he explained (via text) that heâs figured out where he went wrong and then asks her if she want to get back together.

Yet, his approach completely backfired.

Firstly, itâs very difficult for a guy to spark a womanâs sexual and romantic feelings for him with just a few words on a screen.

So, because she couldnât see his body language, hear the tonality of his voice, or judge his actions and behavior in person or on a phone call, she just assumed that he was the same guy that she broke up with (e.g. insecure, needy, clingy, not manly enough, boring).

At the same time, she felt hurt and annoyed that he didnât even have the balls to call her on the phone and ask her.

Instead, he tried to initiate an entire reconciliation with her via text as though she meant nothing to him.

As a result, she said âNo.â

He then felt like he lost any chance he might have still had with her, gave up and spent the rest of his life thinking of her as âthe one that got away.â

If You Want Her to Say âYesâ to Getting Back Together, Focus On Sexual Attraction First

As you will likely have realized by now, getting back into a relationship is the last step of the ex back process, not the first.

The first step is to re-spark your exâs feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you in person, so she wants to get back together for real.

Thatâs how it works.

Attraction first, relationship last.

So, donât ask her if she wants to get back together, if you havenât re-sparked her feelings for you, because she wonât respond favorably to you.

At the same time, make sure you donât turn her off even more, by making any of the following mistakes:

1. Putting her in a position of power when she doesn't want to be

[image: Putting her in a position of power when she doesn't want to be]

Sometimes, a guy thinks that if he allows his ex to call all the shots (i.e. she decides when they can talk on the phone or meet up in person, or whether sheâs ready to discuss giving him another chance with her), she will be happy and then she'll be more open to getting back together again. Yet, rather than feel happy, she ends up not only messing him around, but also losing even more respect for him at the same time.

Remember: A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy that is willing to submit and follow her orders like a good, little boy.

Then, because she no longer respects him, she also can't feel sexually attracted to him and without those two things, connecting with her feelings of love for him becomes next to impossible.

So, don't hand all your power over to your ex by asking her if she wants to get back together again.

It's not really up to her whether that happens or not, it's up to you.

If you maintain your confidence with her, regardless of what she says and does to push you away and then also focus on sparking her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good every time she interacts with you), she won't be able to stop herself from wanting to be your girl again.

You can then guide her back into a relationship with you.

That's what she wants.

The next mistake to avoid is!

2. Waiting so long to start the ex back process that she just moves on

It's only natural that if you had a particularly stormy break up with your ex (e.g. the relationship ended with a fight, she said that she never wants to see you again), you might feel a bit nervous about contacting her and asking her if she wants to get back together again.

You may also have read online that guys can get their ex back by ignoring her for 30 or even 60 days.

Yet, here's the thing!

If your ex has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, the longer you wait to contact her and re-attract her, the more time you're giving her to move on.

Then, by the time you contact her to try and get her back, she will likely say something along the lines of, "Sorry, but I'm seeing someone else now, so please don't call me again."

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Thinking that asking her if she is ready is what will make her really want it

The main thing that will actually make a woman want to get back together with her ex is if he can show her via his attitude, actions, behavior and the way he responds to her that he's changed and improved some of the things that were turning her off before.

So, rather than asking your ex if she's ready to give your relationship another chance, focus instead on showing her that you've transformed yourself into a new man.

When she can see for herself that if she got back with you, things would definitely be different and that she wouldn't have to deal with the same problems as before, she will naturally stop putting up walls every time you interact with her.

This then allows her to begin feeling some of the positive emotions she's been trying not to associate with you anymore (e.g. respect, sexual attraction, romantic love).

From there, just focus on making every interaction she has with you fun, interesting and relaxed (e.g. by using humor to ease the tension between you and her, flirting with her to create a sexual vibe) and she will naturally feel a desire to work on the relationship and give you another chance.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

4. Being neutral and friendly and then asking her for another chance

If you act friendly or neutral around your ex, she will probably only ever have friendly, neutral, non-sexual feelings for you.

Then, if another guy comes along and sparks her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for him, she will quickly get into a relationship with him without giving you another thought, because youâ€™re just a nice, neutral friend in her eyes.

So, donâ€™t let that happen to you.

If you want her back, make sure that you actively spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you, rather than pretending that youâ€™re not really interested in being her man anymore, or you just want to be her friend.

Of course, itâ€™s totally fine to be friendly with her.

Just ensure that youâ€™re also making her feel strong surges of sexual and romantic attraction for you too.

When you do, the relationship will naturally get back together right away, or very quickly.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Has No Regrets About Breaking Up With Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are the 5 most common reasons why a woman will react to a break up in that way:

1. She knows that you haven't changed, so there's nothing for her to regret missing out on

[image: She knows that you haven't changed, so there's nothing for her to regret missing out on]

After a break up, a guy will likely have some communication with his ex (e.g. via text, social media, over the phone, or even seeing her again in person).

This means, she has a chance to interact with him and see for herself if he's made any changes and improvements to himself since the break up.

For example: Imagine a woman broke up with her man because he was turning her off by refusing to lead in the relationship and be the man.

Instead, he expected her to be the one to make all the decisions for the both of them and be in charge. This made her feel more emotionally dominant than him, which then caused her to lose respect for him and even look down on him a little bit and eventually led to her breaking up with him.

If he then tries to get her back by being nice and sweet and submissive towards her and possibly even saying things like, "Please don't give up on us. I will do whatever you want to make things right. You can call all the shots. I promise I won't pressure you. Just think about it, okay?" she will instantly know that he hasn't really changed.

So, while he's likely thinking that he's doing the right thing to convince her to give him another chance, what he doesn't realize is that he's proving to her that she made the right decision to break up with him instead.

She then naturally thinks something along the lines of, "I guess I don't have to stress anymore about my decision. He's still stuck at the same level he was at when we broke up and it's clear to me now that he's not going to change. Maybe he doesn't even know how to change or what to change, but that's not my problem anymore. I have no regrets about breaking up with him."

She will then usually push him away and refuse to give him another chance.

This might leave the guy feeling confused and even a bit frustrated.

In his mind he may be wondering things like, "Why is she being so stubborn? Why won't she at least try to work things out? How can she just throw away what we had without a second thought?"

Yet, what a guy like that doesn't realize, is that he's trying to get her back by offering her the same relationship experience she had with him before.

Nothing has changed or improved.

Everything is the same.

However, she doesn't want that.

After all, if she liked what she had, she wouldn't have broken up with him in the first place, right?

This is why, if you want your ex to miss you and begin having doubts about the break up, you need to show her that you've begun to change and improve in some of the ways that are important to her.

You can't be the same guy as before and expect her to want you back.

It doesn't work like that.

By the way...

Here are some examples of the changes a woman most wants to see in her ex, before she will open up to giving him another chance!

- She wants him to be more confident and self-assured about his attractiveness and value to her, rather than feeling insecure and like she's too good for him.
- She wants him to be more manly in how he thinks, behaves, talks and acts, rather than allowing her to dominate him with her confident personality.
- She wants him to make her feel like a sexy, desirable, feminine woman when she's with him, rather than making her feel like a neutral friend, or even worse, feeling no spark with him at all.
- She wants him to grow up and make progress in his life, rather than being emotionally immature and childish and drifting along without any direction or purpose.
- She wants him to be more emotionally independent, rather than clinging to her all the time and being unable to do anything without her approval, support or say-so.
- She wants him to add to his strengths and improve his weaknesses, rather than staying the same and expecting her to be happy with it.

When you transform yourself into a better man, your ex will be able to automatically sense it by listening to how you talk, observing your body language and actions and seeing you respond to her when she tests you (e.g. she doesn't respond to your texts, she is cold and distant towards you, she laughs or is sarcastic towards you when you suggest getting back together again).

However, even if she tries to hide it or pretend that she's not feeling it, she will be feeling surges of respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, her guard comes down and she opens up to talking to you over the phone or seeing you in person even more.

You can then fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

That's how it's done.

It's easy, natural and quick.

Another possible reason why your ex has no regrets about breaking up with you is!

2. You're asking for another chance via texts

[image: You're asking for another chance via texts]

Although texting is easy to do and usually the only interaction a guy can get with an ex (i.e. because she's refusing to talk to him over the phone or see him in person), it's not a very effective way of getting her back.

Why?

It's a lot easier for a woman to reject you when she can't see you or hear your voice and is only getting text messages from you.

Via text, she can't see your body language, or hear the tonality of your voice, so rather than think something like, It's so sweet how he feels so unsure of himself that he can't even talk to me over the phone, so he's trying to get me back via text. I love that he's so gentle and cautious. He's so sensitive about my feelings. That's so attractive to me. Maybe I should give him another chance, she instead thinks, Why should I even bother responding to him at all? If he doesn't even have the balls to call me on the phone to try and get me back, it's probably because he knows I'll pick up that nothing about him has really changed and that he's still the same guy I broke up with. Nothing about this behavior is making me regret my decision to break up with him. Instead, I feel even more motivated to forget about him and move on.

She will then likely stop replying to your texts, or begin to reply in a cold, distant way.

The reason is, because you haven't re-attracted her on a phone call or in person yet, she bases her feelings on who you used to be.

So, even though your intentions might be good and even if you really have transformed yourself into a better man, because you're not calling her or meeting up with her so that she can experience the new you for herself, she's simply not going to give you the benefit of the doubt.

Instead, she's going to assume the worst of you, because that's the last thing she remembers about you (i.e. the way you behaved and responded to her leading up to, during and immediately after the break up).

For example: If you were insecure and unsure of yourself at the end of the relationship, she will probably assume that you're trying to get her back via text because you still doubt yourself.

If you begged and pleaded with her to change her mind during or immediately after the break up, she'll likely think that trying to get her back via text is another desperate move on your part.

What she's almost certainly not going to do is assume that you're now a more confident, emotionally strong, emotionally masculine man who knows how to make her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with you.

This is why, you need to stop trying to get her back via text and start re-attracting her a little bit over the phone and then fully, when you meet up with her in person.

Only when she experiences the new you first hand, will she start regretting her decision to break up with you.

Another possible reason why your ex has no regrets about breaking up with you is!

3. She prepared herself for the break up long before she went through with it

[image: She prepared herself for the break up long before she went through with it]

In most relationships, a woman won't just decide to break up with her guy the first time he makes a mistake or annoys her in some way (e.g. he becomes insecure when she spends time with her friends or co-workers, he forgets to meet up with her as arranged because he's gotten carried away playing video games with his friends, he doesn't notice that she made a special effort to look attractive for him/cook a nice meal for him).

Instead, she will usually give him multiple chances to change and improve himself.

If he picks up on his mistakes and quickly transforms himself into a better man, it will automatically renew her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him and she will then put in even more effort to be a good, loving, devoted woman to him too.

However, if she notices that no matter how many hints she gives him, or arguments she has with him about it, he never seems to change or improve, she will eventually begin to close herself off from him emotionally.

She might not break up with him right away, but at the back of her mind she may be thinking things like, "This is his absolute last chance. If he doesn't shape up soon, I'm going to walk away from this relationship and never look back."

So, if he then ignores the warning signs (e.g. because he doesn't realize how strongly she feels about the problems in their relationship, he assumes she will get over it because she loves him), she will decide to finally go through with the break up, without it being that much of a big deal.

Basically, she has prepared herself over the weeks, months and in some cases even years, so when the time finally comes, it's just a formality.

It's not a shock to her, because she has already disconnected from any feelings of respect, attraction or love that she might still feel for him.

Naturally, the guy isn't as prepared for the break up as she is, so his first instinct is to usually rush into saying and doing whatever he thinks will convince his ex to give him another chance (e.g. he promises her that he really will change this time if she gives him just one more chance, tells her how much he loves her, breaks down and cries to her).

Yet, rather than change her mind like he's expecting her to (after all, she always has in the past), she instead says something along the lines of, "Nope. I have no regrets about breaking up with you. It's the right decision for me and I'm now going to focus on moving on and living the life I want without you in it."

The guy is then devastated and can't understand how this happened and why she won't give him another chance.

Here's the thing though!

If you want your ex to start regretting breaking up with you and give you another chance, the first step is to make some changes to yourself to attract her in the ways that are important to her (e.g. by becoming more confident and emotionally strong rather than feeling insecure and hesitant around her, by not being so emotionally dependent on her and being happy and content in your life with or without her in it, being more emotionally masculine in the way you talk, act, think and behave so she feels like a girly, feminine woman around you rather than like a neutral friend).

When she experiences the changes in you first hand (i.e. on a phone call or in person), she will naturally stop being so closed off towards you.

That gives you the opening you need to fully reactivate her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again, flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you, showing her via your actions and behavior that you truly are a new man) and make her begin regretting her decision to break up with you.

She then wants to interact with you more often to see where things go.

On the other hand, if you keep trying to get her back without changing the things that matter to her, you can be almost certain she won't regret breaking up with you and she will likely just move on and find a new man to be with instead.

Another possible reason why your ex has no regrets about breaking up with you is!

4. She can tell that you still don't know what kind of attraction experience she really wants in a relationship

Gone are the days where a woman would stay in a relationship with a man regardless of how unhappy she felt, simply because she was expected to by society and her family.

In today's world, a woman will quickly break up with a guy if he can't give her the attraction experience she wants from him and she won't regret it one little bit.

Some guys just don't understand that about women.

So in a relationship, a guy will often start off by making his woman feel attracted in the ways that she wants, only to gradually slack off the more comfortable he begins to feel with her.

Then, when she finally gets fed up and breaks up with him and he tries to get her back, he doesn't realize that he's turning her off in the exact same way that caused her to want to break up with him in the first place.

This is why, if you want to make your ex change her mind about the break up, you first need to understand her real reasons for breaking up with you, so you can adjust and change in the ways that will actually give her the attraction experience she really wants in a relationship.

For example: When interacting with your ex, ask yourself!

- Am I sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for me right now (i.e. by being confident, emotionally masculine, charismatic, funny), or am I turning her off (i.e. by being insecure, wimpy, submissive, timid, desperate)?
- Does she feel relaxed and happy to be talking to me, or does she feel tense, stressed out and like she wants to get away from me as quickly as possible?
- Am I making her feel like a sexy, desirable woman in my presence, or do I make her feel more like a neutral friend, or even worse, she doesn't feel anything at all for me?
- Am I leading the interaction with her in an emotionally dominant, yet loving way, or have I handed all my power over to her and am doing whatever she wants me to do to please her?
- Am I happy and satisfied with myself and my life, with or without her, or do I still need her approval and acceptance to feel good about myself?
- Does she feel respect and sexual attraction for me based on my attitude and how I now talk, act and behave around her, or does she feel like she could get a better attraction experience from another guy?

If you are doing it right, she will naturally start looking at you in a more positive light.

When that happens, her defenses will begin to come down and she will feel drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

She then starts to think things like, "I never thought he could do it, but he's really changed so much. He actually seems to understand me so much more than he ever did before. I can't believe I'm even thinking this, but maybe I made a mistake breaking up with him after all."

Another possible reason why your ex has no regrets about breaking up with you isâ€¦!

5. You've given her a false sense of power over you and the relationship

Believe it or not, whether you and your ex get back together again is not all up to her.

In fact, you have so much control that you're not aware of or using.

So, just because your ex is currently saying things like, â€œForget about it. I have no regrets about breaking up with you, so nothing you say or do will make me give you another chance,â€ it doesn't mean her decision is set in stone and you should give up on the idea of getting her back.

When you actively spark her feelings for you again, everything (including her opinion of you, her lack of regret and her decision to remain broken up) will change.

So, don't take what she's saying so seriously.

If you continue to chase after her and try to convince her to change her mind, you're just giving her a false sense of superiority over you and making her think that she has power over you, when she doesn't.

So, rather than regret her decision to break up with you, she continues rejecting you.

Yet, here's the thing!

In a relationship, if you hand your power over to a woman, she won't be able to respect you anymore.

If she can't respect you, she won't be able to feel sexually attracted to you and without those two things in place, being in a relationship with you isn't something that appeals to her romantically.

So, don't give your ex power over you by letting her decide whether you and her should be together again or not.

Instead, just maintain your confidence with her (especially when she tries to make you feel bad by saying that she has no regrets about breaking up with you) and focus on re-sparking her feelings for you every chance you get.

The more respect and sexual attraction she feels for the new you, the less she will be able to hold on to her decision.

Her defenses will begin to erode and then the process of getting her back becomes easier because she is feeling open to you.

By the way!

Don't Make These 3 Mistakes if Your Aim is to Make Your Ex Regret Breaking Up With You and Then Give You Another Chance

How you behave when interacting with your ex from now on will either spark her feelings for you and make her regret her decision to leave you, or it will only confirm what she already knows (i.e. that you're not the man for her).

So, avoid these 3 mistakes:

1. Seeking pity for how her lack of regret makes you feel

This usually only makes a woman feel like her ex is trying to manipulate her by making her feel guilty.

As a result, she loses even more respect for him and will feel even more convinced that she made the right decision by breaking up with him.

So, don't bother trying to make your ex feel pity for you.

Instead, focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you during interactions, so she naturally starts to have regrets about breaking up with you.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Getting angry at her, insulting her or accusing her of being selfish or heartless

In most cases, behaving like an out of control brat only convinces a woman that you're not the right man for her.

So, if you truly want to get her back, the best way to go about it is by showing her what she will be losing if she doesn't give you another chance.

How?

One way of doing that is by maintaining control of your emotions around her no matter what she says or does to get under your skin and upset you.

As a result, she will realize that you are being the kind of man she can look up to, respect and feel proud to be with.

She will then start to feel drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

Then, the idea of being your girl again is something she becomes open to.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Asking her if she ever truly loved you

It never works.

It's always best to assume that you are more than good enough for a woman, while also being a great man.

The assumption of worthiness projects the kind of confidence that women are attracted to.

As long as a guy is being a great man at the same time, she can naturally respect him because of that too.

However, when a man is insecure about his attractiveness and value to her and has to ask whether or not she ever loved him, she loses respect and attraction for him (i.e. because women are instinctively turned off by a guy who needs her to reassure him of her love or devotion so that he can feel confident, worthy, or happy).

So, don't put yourself in that position.

Just believe in yourself and know that she loved you.

Then go ahead and re-attract her, make her fall in love with you all over again and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Says We Will Get Back Together One Day

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are the 4 most common reasons why a woman will say that to her ex boyfriend:

1. She believes that it might be possible to get back together at some point

[image: She believes that it might be possible to get back together at some point]

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she's usually going through a lot of conflicting emotions. On the one hand, she may be feeling certain that breaking up with him is the right decision for her to make at that point in her life (e.g. because the relationship has become too stressful, she wants to concentrate on her studies or career for the time being, she's matured a lot faster than him, she's moving away).

However, at the same time, she may also be experiencing some sadness that the relationship is over and maybe even secretly be hoping that they will somehow be able to work through their issues and get back together again.

As a result, she might then say, "We will get back together again one day."

Yet, what usually happens is that both her and her ex gradually move on and don't get back together. For example: Eventually, she decides to go out with her single friends to a club or bar.

While there, she happens to meet a new man who makes her feel exciting sparks of sexual and romantic attraction.

They end up kissing and then go back to his or her place and hook up sexually.

That then leads to them dating and falling in love.

All of a sudden, thoughts of getting back with her ex begin to fade away and she enjoys a relationship with the new guy.

Of course, the same can easily happen to the guy where he meets a new woman, moves on with her and forgets all about his ex.

This is why, if you want your ex back, you need to get it done now, before you and her grow into different people and get involved in serious relationships with other people that don't break up.

So, get her on a phone call or to a meet up with you as soon as possible and begin re-sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you again (e.g. by making her smile and laugh and feel good to be interacting with you, letting her see that you believe in your attractiveness and value to her by maintaining your confidence around her, flirting with her to create sexual tension between you).

The more respect and attraction she feels for you again, the more she will begin to doubt her decision to be broken up.

Then, when her walls have come down and she's feeling open to being with you again, you can hug, kiss and hook up with her, blow her mind and get her back.

Another common reason why a woman will say, "We will get back together one day," is that

2. She is letting you down slowly

[image: She is letting you down slowly]

Even if a guy is a really good guy who would never behave badly, cause a scene or hurt his ex in any way, it's still a woman's instinct to get out of a relationship as easily and peacefully as possible even if that means giving him false hope.

So, if your ex is being nice to you and encouraging you to believe that you still stand a chance of getting back with her, it could be because she doesn't want to trigger an angry, desperate reaction from you.

So, she gives you the old, "We will get back together one day" or, "I don't want to be together now, but maybe we can reunite in the future," excuse instead, to protect herself and get the space she needs to move on without you holding her back (e.g. by chasing after her and begging and pleading with her to change her mind, promising her you'll change, offering to do whatever she wants for another chance with her).

However, it's likely that she currently has no real intention of getting back with you.

The good news though is that you can change that, but you have to change your approach to her.

For example:

If you've been irritating her by begging for another chance, switch your approach to being easy-going and fun around her from now on.

If when you're interacting with her you're always trying to have serious discussions about the relationship and about how long it will take her to feel ready to get back together again, switch to using humor to make her smile and laugh and feel good to be around you.

If you've been treating her like a neutral friend, switch to flirting with her to build up sexual tension between you.

If you've been afraid to stand up to her and question her decisions, switch to being more emotionally dominant around her.

When you change how she feels, she will then naturally change her mind and open back up to you.

However, if you continue using the same old approach over and over again (e.g. giving her reasons why you think the relationship deserves another chance, telling her how much you love her, letting her know that you don't know if you can cope without her), she will just keep saying things like, "Look, I know it's difficult for you, but we will get back together one day. I just need some space now. So, please hang in there and things will work out between us eventually," while she secretly moves on without you.

Another common reason why a woman will say, "We will get back together one day," is that

3. She doesn't know what else to say to end a relationship

[image: She doesn't know what else to say to end a relationship]

Although some women have no problem saying, "I'm sorry, but I don't have feelings for you anymore. Please accept that it's over between us and try to move on," when talking to an ex, a lot of women find it difficult to be that direct.

Common reasons why include:

- Sheâ□□s a nice person and she doesnâ□□t want to hurtÂ her ex's feelings, so she tries to break away from him gently, rather than dumping him all at once.
- She doesnâ□□t have a lot of experience with break ups and doesnâ□□t really know how else to handle it.
- SheÂ doesn't like the idea of her ex guyÂ hating her, so she tries to get out of the relationship while still being perceived as a good person.
- Sheâ□□s afraid that he might break down and start begging, pleading and crying with her to change her mind.
- She canâ□□t handle confrontations, soÂ letting him down slowlyÂ is her way of hopefully avoiding a big fight, or series of fights and arguments.

So, rather than just tell her ex that itâ□□s over, a woman might instead say something like, â□□I canâ□□t be with you right now, but we will get back together one day. Iâ□□m just not in the right space at the moment for a relationship and I donâ□□t want to hurt you while I try to sort myself out. Please give me time to be on my own for a whileâ□□ as a way of letting him down easy.

Her guy might then think, â□□Well at least she didnâ□□t say itâ□□s over, so thereâ□□s still hope for us. All I have to do is be patient and wait and eventually we can be together again.â□□

He will then likely accept her decision and give her some space (i.e. he cuts off all or most contact with her), in the hope that the more space she has to figure things out in her life, the quicker she will come back to him.

Yet, in almost all ex back cases, giving a woman too much space actually backfires.

Then, rather than them getting back together again, she instead meets a new man, falls in love with him and moves on.

Her ex is then left feeling hurt and wondering things like, â□□She said we would get back together one day, so why did this happen? Why did she find a new man when she knows Iâ□□m waiting for her? I just donâ□□t understand! How could she do this to me?!â□□

The answer is this: If you give a woman too much space and she secretly doesnâ□□t have strong feelings for you, she will almost always use the time to find a replacement guy and move on.

This is why, if your ex is currently saying that you and her will get back together again some day, itâ□□s up to you to not make the mistake of thinking that if you give her enough space, she will come back to you.

She almost certainly wonâ□□t.

The only time that will happen is if you interact with her and actively re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

So, make sure you focus on doing that, rather than sitting back and patiently waiting for her to come back on her own one day and then end up feeling betrayed when she moves on with someone else instead.

Another common reason why a woman will say, â□□We will get back together one day,â□□ isâ□□!

4. She wants you to keep showing interest in her while she moves on without you

[image: She wants you to keep showing interest in her while she moves on without you]

Sometimes a woman is just a selfish, self-centered person who doesnâ□□t care about anyone elseâ€‹s feelings other than her own.

So, to avoid feeling hurt if her ex moves on without her before she has a chance to get herself a new man, she keeps him hanging on by giving him false hope and promising him that they will get back together one day.

In that way, she ensures that she will be able to move on before he does and she won't feel the pain of being left behind like he will.

Of course, itâ€‹s up to you to not let this happen to you.

If you want your ex back, make sure that you actively do whatever it takes to re-spark her feelings for you and make her see you as a better option to any other man she might meet along the way (e.g. interact with her over the phone and in person, make her laugh and smile and feel good to be around you again, flirt with her to create sexual tension between you and her, show her that youâ€‹ve transformed yourself into a new man) and get her back.

Alternatively, if you donâ€‹t want to do that, then make sure that you donâ€‹t get caught up in your exâ€‹s silly mind games and waste months or even years of your life waiting for her to come back to you one day.

If she does come back and you happen to be available and still want her, great.

You can get back together again.

However, you canâ€‹t wait for that to happen.

Itâ€‹s now up to you.

Start the ex back process and get her back right away, or move on and enjoy your life with other women until you find your ideal woman, or you and your ex hook up again one day.

So, whatâ€‹s it going to be?

Avoid the Following 3 Mistakes to Get Her Back Faster

Right now, your thinking and behavior will either help you re-attract your ex and get her back, or turn her off and make her feel even more determined to put her relationship with you behind her and move on.

It all depends on your approach.

This is why, you need to avoid making the following 3 attraction mistakes:

1. Patiently waiting for her for months, while slowly losing confidence in yourselfÂ day by day

Sometimes, when a woman tells her ex that they will get back together again one day, he takes it as a sign that he needs to wait for that to happen.

He might then justify his decision not to move on by thinking things like, â€‹If she comes back and she finds me in another relationship, she will assume that Iâ€‹m over her and move on. Then I will lose her for real. At the same time, if I just date a lot of random women, she might feel disappointed in me for not valuing our love enough to wait. Either way, Iâ€‹ll be ruining my chances of getting her back. This is why, I think itâ€‹s best if I just wait for her to figure out what she wants and come back to me when sheâ€‹s ready. Then she will be flattered and impressed that I waited for her and she will want me even more.

He then waits around for weeks, months and in some cases, even years for her to come back to him. Yet, the longer he waits, the more he begins to lose confidence in himself.

He then starts thinking things like, “Why isn’t she coming back? Did she change her mind and doesn’t want me back after all? I don’t know what to do. On the one hand, I want her back so badly, but on the other hand, what if I ask her if we can get back together again and she tells me that she’s over me now? What if it’s too late to get her back? I’ve been waiting for her for so long that I can’t imagine myself moving on without her.”

The more he thinks like that, the more he spirals into a cycle of negative, insecure thinking, which eats away at whatever remaining confidence he has in himself.

If he then happens to interact with his ex and she picks up on his low self-esteem (e.g. via his attitude, behavior and conversation style), she loses even more respect for him as a man and doesn’t want to get back with him anymore.

Here’s the thing:

Women are attracted to confident men who believe in themselves.

Likewise, women are turned off by insecure men who doubt themselves.

So, don’t sit around waiting for your ex to come back to you and end up losing confidence in yourself along the way.

That will only damage your chances of getting her back.

So, what should you do instead?

Believe in yourself and in your value to her and other women.

Not only will you then be able to make your ex feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, you will also be able to attract other beautiful women if you want to.

You can then easily get her back, because she feels attracted to you again, rather than sitting around waiting for her to come back to you one day.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Closing yourself off to other women because you’re afraid of getting hurt again

Sometimes, a break up can cause a guy to think things like, “Why should I risk opening myself up to another woman like I did to my ex, only for her to stomp on my heart and crush it when she’s had enough? I don’t think I can take that again. As far as I’m concerned, love just isn’t worth it.”

He then becomes emotionally closed off from women and avoids getting into relationships with any woman that he senses might make him fall in love again.

Unfortunately though, what a guy like that doesn’t realize is that by closing himself off from love, he’s stopping himself from finding real happiness with a new woman, or with his ex woman.

In the end, he’s just making himself unhappy, rather than taking action and getting what he really wants in life (i.e. to fall in love again with a new woman, or to get his ex back into a relationship that is even better than before).

So, don't let that happen to you.

Another mistake to avoid making is!

3. Not following through on the full ex back process to actually get her back now

Regardless of what your ex says, nothing will happen until you make it happen.

So, rather than sitting around waiting for her to come back to you one day, take action and get her back now.

If you don't, you might end up regretting it when you discover that she got bored waiting for you to make a move and found herself another man instead.

It's up to you.

Are you going to take control of the ex back process and get her back, or are you going to wait for her to come back to you one day and lose her for real?

It seems that your choice is quite easy.

Get her back today and enjoy the great times ahead.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Isn't Even Trying to Get Our Relationship Back Together

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible reasons why:

1. She isn't attracted to you anymore, so she doesn't see any reason why she should even try

[image: She isn't attracted to you anymore, so she doesn't see any reason why she should even try]

Most relationships start off with lots of sexual and romantic attraction between the man and the woman.

For example: The guy will usually be on his best behavior and display characteristics and personality traits that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. he is confident and self-assured, he is charming and charismatic, he is emotionally masculine and makes her feel sexy and desirable in his presence).

He also gives his woman his undivided attention and compliments her on her appearance, sends her romantic texts, takes her on romantic dinner dates and generally makes her feel special and loved.

At the same time, the woman will put in the effort to look beautiful for him (e.g. she dresses in sexy clothes, wears makeup and does her hair, works out to keep in shape) and be a good, loving, attentive woman as well.

However, as time goes by and the relationship becomes comfortable, the guy might begin to slack off and begin treating his woman more like his friend, or roommate, rather than the like the desirable, sexy woman she was to him at the start of the relationship.

When that happens, the spark of sexual attraction that was originally there between them starts to fade away.

This makes her feel like pulling away, being closed off and treating him with less and less respect over time.

Initially, she might try to spice things up between them (e.g. by buying some sexy lingerie or wearing sexier clothes) to make herself more attractive to him, in the hope that he will go back to treating her like an attractive, desirable woman again.

However, if he fails to do that and remains firmly in his comfort zone where he continues to treat her like his buddy, she may begin thinking things like, â€œThe spark in our relationship is dead. All we ever do these days is watch TV, eat take out food, or go out with friends. All the romantic dinners, sexy text messages and exiting stuff we used to do together doesn't exist anymore. Not only that, he doesn't even notice me anymore. I might as well just let myself go for all the attention he gives me. He never even notices that I always try to look good for him. There was a time when he couldn't keep his hands off me and would compliment me about my appearance, but now he doesn't even notice me. I can't take it anymore! I'm tired of feeling like his buddy or roommate. I want to feel like a real woman again. I want to feel sexy and noticed.â€œ

She will then likely decide to break up with him and find a man who makes her feel the way she wants to feel in a relationship (e.g. attracted, desirable, sexy, turned on).

If the guy then tries to get her back by being nice and sweet and treating her like a neutral friend (e.g. because he doesn't want to scare her off), rather than give him another chance, she will likely just keep pushing him away and saying things like, âNo, I don't want to get back together again,â or âI'm sorry but I just don't feel like we can work things out.â

So, if your girlfriend isn't even trying to get your relationship back together, it could be because you stopped making her feel like a feminine, girly, sexy woman around you.

Don't worry though.

If you want her back, you can begin to make her feel that way from now on.

When you do, she will automatically start to feel drawn to you again, even if she initially tries to deny that it's happening to her.

So, from this moment onwards, make sure that every interaction you have with her (e.g. over the phone and especially when you see her in person), you're actively sparking her feelings of sexual attraction for you by making her feel sexy and desirable, rather than just being a nice, polite, neutral friend to her.

Remember: Even if she pretends that she doesn't like it when you flirt with her and create sexual tension between you, deep down she will be feeling drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

As a result, her walls will begin to crumble and she then becomes open to hanging out with you more, to see if you're going to continue sparking her feelings for you, or revert back to your comfort zone.

Then, when she sees that the changes are for real and that you're not going to make the mistake of treating her like a friend again, she will want to be your girl once more.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend isn't even trying to get your relationship back together is

2. She's tired of trying to make the relationship work

[image: She is tired of trying to make the relationship work]

Most women like the idea of being with a man who knows how to create a relationship dynamic that causes her to want to be good to him, treat him well and be affectionate and loving towards him, while he also treats her well and makes her feel loved and appreciated at the same time.

So, if she then notices that she always seems to be the one putting in the effort to make the relationship work, while he has the mindset that because they love each other he doesn't have to do anything more, she will start to feel unhappy and like she's being taken for granted (e.g. she's the first one to apologize and initiate a reconciliation after they have an argument while he sulks and mopes for days on end, she's always taking care of the household and cleaning up after him while he never seems to pull his weight, she is the responsible one who tries to budget so they can pay the bills and live a comfortable life while he spends their savings without discussing it with her).

If she then also happens to notice how happy and at ease her girlfriends, coworkers, sisters or cousins are in their relationships with their guys, she may begin to wonder things like, âWhy am I wasting my time trying to make things work with a man who can't be bothered to take our relationship as seriously as me? Why should everyone else around me have a relationship that works naturally and isn't so stressful and draining?

So, rather than continuing to deal with the stress, she will break up with him to then focus more on herself and her needs.

If the guy then tries to convince her to get back together again, she just isn't interested.

He may then feel confused and hurt and think things like, Why isn't she even trying to get our relationship back together? Why doesn't she care? All she has to do is tell me what she wants me to do and I will do it!

Yet, here's the thing!

Women know that some men are aware of how to manage a relationship properly, so she doesn't feel like it's fair that she has to be the one who does all the work and has to help her man become the man he should be.

So, rather than get back with him and have to deal with him constantly relapsing into old patterns of negative behavior (e.g. insecurity, jealousy, laziness, immaturity), she will try to just find herself a man who already has it together.

This is why, if you want your girlfriend to give you another chance, you have to change and improve in some of the ways that matter to her, before you try to convince her to give the relationship another shot.

Then, you need to interact with her and let her experience the new and improved you, without trying to get her back.

Just allow her to feel attracted to how different (e.g. confident, assertive, driven, emotionally mature) you are now.

When she experiences the new you, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in new and interesting ways.

She then wants to explore her new feelings for you, rather than walk away and regret losing you.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend isn't even trying to get your relationship back together is!

3. She fell out of love with you a while ago, so she had already prepared herself to be ready to move on

[image: She fell out of love with you a long time ago and had already prepared herself to be ready to move on]

In most cases, a woman will fall in love with a guy because he displays the qualities and personality traits that she is looking for in a man (e.g. he comes across as being confident and emotionally strong, he makes her feel like a sexy, desirable woman when she's with him, he takes the lead and arranges dates, he seems emotionally mature and like he knows what he wants in life).

Yet, when she gets into a relationship with him, she then discovers that the man she fell in love with isn't who she thought he was.

For example: She realized that!

His confidence was just an act and as soon as he had her, he began to feel insecure about his attractiveness and value to her and worry that she would leave him.

This then caused him to become clingy, needy and possessive, making her feel smothered and trapped.

Despite taking the lead initially (e.g. in pursuing her, arranging dates, making decisions for the both of them), once in the relationship with her, he handed his power over to her and essentially let her call the shots.

If she resisted and asked him to decide something, he just brushed her off by saying something along the lines of, â€œI just want what you want. Iâ€™m happy with whatever decision you make.â€

Despite making her feel sexy and desirable at the beginning of the relationship, he now treats her more like a friend or a roommate than anything else.

As a result, the spark fizzles out of the relationship and she stops feeling sexually attracted to him.

Although he seemed like an emotionally mature guy initially, she soon began to notice that he was actually irresponsible and childish.

Rather than focus on his goals/work/studies, he preferred to party with his friends or sit around playing video games and had no interest in making progress in his life.

This caused her to feel unsure of her future with him.

The more she noticed that he wasnâ€™t living up to the man she believed him to be, the more her feelings of respect, attraction and love began to fade away.

She will then begin closing herself off, pulling away from him and start moving on in her mind and imagining herself with a new man.

Then, by the time she decides to break up with him for real, she is already prepared to put the relationship with him behind her and move on.

If the guy then tries to get her back, sheâ€™s not going to be interested, because she has already disconnected from her feelings for him.

So, while he is still dealing with the shock of the break up and thinking about how much he loves her and wants to get her back, she has already dealt with the break up and is ready to get on with her life without him in it.

In a situation like this, if you want to get your girlfriend back, you have to stop trying to get her to want a relationship and start re-sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Remember: The first step of the ex back process is re-attraction, not a relationship.

You can get her back very quickly, but youâ€™ve got to approach it properly, one quick and simple step at a time.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend isnâ€™t even trying to get your relationship back together isâ€

4. She is now free to be her real self and it feels good

[image: She is now free to be herself and it feels good]

When a woman initially falls in love with a guy, she will usually ignore negative things about him.

She might even tell herself things like, â€œItâ€™s not so bad. Iâ€™m sure he will eventually see what heâ€™s doing wrong and change,â€ or â€œHeâ€™s only behaving like that because he loves me so much. Iâ€™m lucky to have a man who cares for me the way that he does.â€

Yet, over time, when she realizes the guy's behavior is making her think, feel, talk and behave in ways that are not who she is deep down inside, she may begin to resent him.

For example: A guy might feel that his woman is too good for him, to the point where he becomes controlling, jealous and forces her to be a lesser version of herself so as not to trigger his insecurities (e.g. he insists that she doesn't wear any make up, look at other guys, or talk to single female friends, expects her to be on her best behavior around him at all times and to regularly reassure him of her love and dedication to him and the relationship).

She then might begin thinking things like, â€œLook at what I've become. I used to be so happy, carefree and relaxed as a person and now I'm always worried about saying or doing something wrong and causing him to get angry and start a fight with me. I don't even look the way I used to. I'm this ugly mess and all because he can't handle me looking attractive in case another guy notices me. Is this how I want to live the rest of my life? Why am I putting up with this? I deserve to be who I want to be!â€

When she realizes that he has been causing her personality to change in ways that she doesn't like, she will then break up with him and focus on reconnecting with her old self again.

The guy might then try to get her back, only to feel frustrated and annoyed when she doesn't seem interested.

Yet, here's the thing!

Event though her reluctance to try and get the relationship back together doesn't make much sense to him, it makes complete sense to her.

She feels free again and as though she can be her real self at long last.

At the same time, nothing that he's saying or doing is making her want to give up her new-found freedom to be with him again.

Of course, that doesn't mean she will stick to her decision to be broken up if he quickly changes and improves and shows her via his attitude, actions, behavior and the way he treats her that he's a new and improved man.

When she can see for herself that being with him won't change her into someone she doesn't want to be (e.g. stressed out, angry, repressed), but instead makes her an even better version of herself (e.g. happy, vivacious, outgoing), she will be more open to forgiving him and giving him another chance.

This is why, if you want your girlfriend to feel motivated to try to get your relationship back together, you need to make sure you're offering her a better attraction experience than before (i.e. by changing and improving some of the things that were turning her off and showing her that you're a new man now).

However, if you continue to make the same mistakes you made before (e.g. being too controlling and possessive, taking her for granted, being insecure and needy, not being manly enough), she's naturally going to be happier without you and she's just going to keep saying â€œNo,â€ to getting your relationship back together.

Where Some Guys Go Wrong When Attempting to Convince an Ex Woman to Get a Relationship Back Together

For a woman to feel motivated to get back with her ex, she needs to see proof (i.e. in the way he acts, thinks, behaves and interacts with her) that he's really changed and improved in the ways that are important to her.

Unfortunately, some guys only make things worse by behaving in even more unattractive ways and turning her off some more.

For example: Some common mistakes that guys make with an ex girlfriend who won't try to get the relationship back together are:

1. Thinking that she is being heartless or selfish

What's really happening is that there's nothing for her to come back to.

She isn't attracted and he isn't changing his approach to make her feel attracted.

He's essentially just offering her the same thing and expecting a different reaction from her.

As a result, she doesn't feel like she'll be getting anything out of being in a relationship with him (i.e. she doesn't feel respect, attraction or love for him) and so she pushes him away and focuses on moving on.

So, if you want your ex to give you another chance, make sure you're making her feel the way she wants to feel when she interacts with you (e.g. attracted, respectful, excited).

If you keep offering her the same old attraction experience as before, don't be surprised at her lack of interest.

Another common mistake that guys make with an ex girlfriend who won't try to get the relationship back together is:

2. Feeling entitled to a relationship with her

Think about how you would feel if you broke up with a girlfriend because she kept turning you off.

What if she then felt entitled to a relationship because of your history together?

It actually makes her sound selfish, right?

That's how your ex is feeling with your approach right now.

Here's the thing:

Even if you and your girlfriend once talked about being together forever, none of that matters anymore if she has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

That was then and this is now.

So, if she no longer feels the same way, she's also not required to try and get your relationship back together again, just because you and her once shared a special connection.

As a result, if you keep pushing her, you will be the one who comes across as selfish and she will likely close herself off from you even more.

Then getting her back becomes more difficult for you, because she doesn't want to talk to you over the phone or see you in person.

Another common mistake that guys make with an ex girlfriend who won't try to get the relationship back together is!

3. Not realizing that it's not her responsibility to get the relationship back together

People are allowed to do whatever they want.

There is no rule that says a woman must try to get back with a guy that she dumped.

So, when a woman breaks up with a guy who has ruined her feelings for him, she will usually try to move on without him.

What she most-likely won't do, is feel the need to get the relationship back together again.

As far as she's concerned, there's no reason for her to want him back, so she focuses instead on fully getting over him and moving on.

So, if you want your girlfriend back, don't sit around hoping she's going to make it easy for you to get her back.

Instead, she will likely sit back and wait to see if you're emotionally strong enough to take on the leading role in the ex back process.

If you do, she will be able to respect you again.

When she respects you, she will feel attracted to you and she will then feel motivated to get the relationship back together.

On the other hand, if you wait around hoping that she will be the leader, she will lose even more respect for you for not having the balls to do what it takes to get her back.

When that happens, she will lose even more interest in the idea of getting back with you and focus her attention instead on moving on and finding a replacement guy who is man enough to lead the way in a relationship with her.

This is why, if you want her back, you've got to be man enough to take the lead and make things happen, rather than wait for her to do it for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 No Contact Rule Success Stories

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The following No Contact Rule success stories are from men who gave their woman 3 to 7 days of no contact after a break up.

Ever since I started helping men get women back, I've never recommended giving more than 3 to 7 days of space to a woman after a break up, before a man begins the actual ex back process.

The reason why is that, generally speaking, the 30 day No Contact Rule works differently on men than it does on women.

For example: If a woman immediately accepts a break up and doesn't contact her ex guy for 30 to 60 days, it works much better for her, because men like to feel like they have some ownership over a woman.

When a guy doesn't hear from his ex woman after dumping her, he may begin to feel like he has been rejected and then contact her to see if she is still missing him.

Additionally, a lot of guys really struggle to approach, attract and pick up new women.

So, when his ex uses No Contact after a break up and he isn't getting any action from new women, he starts to miss her.

However, the same doesn't apply to women.

Most women feel abandoned when a guy ignores her for a long time, so her natural instinct is to go out and find herself a new protector.

Also, most women can quickly and easily find a new man to hook up with, date and get into a relationship with after a break up.

So, when a guy ignores his ex after a break up, she usually just moves on without him.

This is why, if you intend to use the No Contact Rule to get your ex back, make sure you only ignore her for 3 to 7 days.

Any longer than that and you risk her getting over you and moving on.

By the way!

Here are 3 No Contact Rule success stories based on a guy giving his ex woman no more than a week of space, before beginning the ex back process to get her back:

1. He accepted the break up, cut off contact for 3 days, called her, arranged a meet up and got her back

[image: He accepted the break up, cut off contact for 3 days, called her, arranged a meet up and got her back]

In this scenario, the guy made sure that he reacted to the break up in an emotionally strong and mature way by saying something along the lines of, âOf course, I don't want us to break up, but I accept your decision and I won't make things difficult for you. I just want you to know that I do care for you and I hope one day in the near future we can at least be friends again. Take care of yourself. Bye.â

By not reacting to the break up in a needy, clingy, or desperate way, he automatically began sparking her feelings of respect for him again, without her even realizing it.

He then gave her 3 days of space where he didn't text her, message her on social media, call her on the phone or see her in person.

After the 3 days, he called her on the phone and instead of saying things like, "I miss you so much! Please can we meet up? I really need to see you," which almost certainly would have turned her off and caused her to say "No," he instead used some humor to ease the tension between them and make her laugh, smile and feel relaxed to be talking to him again.

Then after a few minutes of relaxed conversation where he focused on sparking her feelings of respect and attraction (e.g. by continuing to make her laugh and smile, by maintaining his confidence regardless of what she said to make him feel unsure of himself), he asked her to meet up with him for a quick cup of coffee.

Initially she said "No," because she didn't want to come across as being too easy, but he remained calm and confident and didn't give up and she then said, "Yes."

At the meet up, he continued to spark her sexual and romantic feelings for him, by showing her via his attitude, action, behavior and the way he interacted with her that he had changed and improved as a man.

When she realized that he was at a different level as a man than he was when they broke up, her defenses began to crumble.

She felt drawn to him in a new and exciting way and decided to explore those feelings by giving the relationship another chance.

In the next No Contact Rule success story

2. He cut off contact for a week, she called him on the 8th day and they met up and got back together

[image: He cut off contact for a week, she called him on the 8th day and they met up and got back together]

Rather than lose control of himself and begin behaving in unattractive ways that would cause his woman to lose even more respect and attraction for him (e.g. beg, plead, cry, promise to change, ask her to tell him what she wants him to change, tell her about his feelings), the guy instead kept control of his emotions and walked away from the relationship with his head held high.

From there, he didn't make any effort to contact his ex.

Instead, he used the time apart to:

- Improve his ability to attract her (e.g. by becoming more confident, emotionally strong, emotionally independent, assertive, mature).
- Build a strong belief in his value and attractiveness to her.
- Spend some time doing things that make him feel happy and content without her (e.g. focus on his goals, hang out with friends, do something he always wanted to do but didn't because he was too focused on his relationship).

This helped take his mind off his ex and prevented him from sitting around feeling sad, lonely and hopeless (i.e. because he knew he was taking positive steps to become a better man so that he can re-attract her).

Of course, by not contacting his ex during this time, it made her start missing him and begin wondering things like, *â€œI wonder what heâ€™s up to? Maybe heâ€™s met a new woman already and is moving on.*â€œ

So, after 8 days of not hearing from him, she decided to call him to see why he has been ignoring her. On the call, he focused on making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to him again.

He made sure to flirt with her to create some sexual tension between them and to make it clear to her that heâ€™s still interested in her, rather than act nice and sweet and neutral and make her feel like he only wants to be her platonic friend.

He then asked her to meet up with him and she agreed.

At the meet up, he showed her that he had transformed himself into the kind of man that she could now look up to, respect and feel attracted to (e.g. confident, emotionally masculine, assertive, driven).

He also continued to build up the sexual tension between them.

He then progressed to giving her a hug and when she didnâ€™t pull away, he gave her a kiss as well.

From there, they went back to his place and hooked up sexually.

She then naturally began to fall back in love with him and they got back together again.

In the next No Contact Rule success storyâ€¦

3. He called her to say he accepted the break up and wished her well. He re-attracted her on the call and then ended it. She contacted him 6 days later

[image: He called her to say that he accepted the break up and wished her well. He re-attracted her on the call and then ended it. She contacted him 6 days later.]

Just like in the previous No Contact Rule success stories, the guy didnâ€™t cause a big scene when the break up happened.

Instead, he remained calm and confident, knowing that he could easily re-attract her with the right approach.

He then called her on the phone and said something like, *â€œHey, I know that you donâ€™t want me to contact you right now because youâ€™re worried Iâ€™m going to try and change your mind. However, I want you to knowâ€¦ I completely accept that weâ€™re broken up and I promise not to pressure you into doing anything you donâ€™t want.*â€œ

By saying that to her, he let her know (without actually saying the words) that he wasnâ€™t going to sit around feeling sad and depressed and put his life on hold, just because they had broken up.

This made her feel a surge of respect for him again (i.e. because he was being a real man, rather than a pushover).

He then said something along the lines of, *â€œAnyway, thatâ€™s all I wanted to say. I wish you all the best and I hope you will be happy. Take care of yourself. Bye,*â€œ and then hung up, after she said *â€œBye,*â€œ to him too.

He then didnâ€™t contact her again (not even to send her a text to say hello).

[image: She couldn't stop thinking about him]

In the meantime, she couldn't stop thinking about him and how mature and emotionally strong he had been with her over the phone.

The more she thought about that, the more respect she felt for him.

Soon, she began to feel sparks of attraction too.

After 6 days of missing him and worrying about him moving on, she decided to call him to see what happens.

On the call, he sparked her feelings even more (e.g. by using humor to make her feel at ease, flirting with her to create a sexual vibe, showing her via his attitude, the tonality of his voice and the way he responds to her that he's a new man now).

She then started to believe that things really were different, so she was able to open back up to the idea of being his girl again.

They then got back together and discovered that their relationship was even better this time around.

5 Problems to Be Aware of When Using the No Contact Rule

Before you decide if you want to use the No Contact Rule to get your ex back (i.e. ignore her for 30 to 60 days), make sure you're clear on some of the problems that might encounter when you do. For example:

1. Assuming that what works on a man will work on a woman in exactly the same way

As mentioned earlier, men and women respond to No Contact in two very different ways and the reason is, men and women break up for very different reasons.

For example: When a guy breaks up with a woman, it's usually because she's been behaving badly, disrespecting him in some ways and generally being a pain in the butt.

So, to teach her a lesson, he might decide to break up with her.

Basically, he's hoping that she will panic, change her behavior and come running back to him.

They can then get back together into a relationship where she now behaves herself.

However, if she doesn't come back to him and decides to use the No Contact Rule instead, the guy will likely be the one who starts to panic.

He might imagine her going out to clubs, bars or parties with her single friends, meeting new guys and possibly hooking up with them sexually.

Meanwhile, he's sitting around missing her and waiting for her to come back to him.

So, what does he do?

In most situations, a guy will quickly break No Contact and text, call or meet up with his ex and she'll be able to get him back.

However, when it comes to a man using the No Contact Rule on a woman, things are different.

In almost all cases, a woman will break up with a guy because somewhere along the line he has eroded her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

He has been turning her off by thinking, acting and behaving in unattractive ways and she no longer feels the way she wants to feel when she's with him.

So, if he then tries to get her back by using the No Contact Rule, rather than make her come back to him, she actually feels relieved that she doesn't have to deal with a desperate ex and moves on instead.

Another problem to be aware of when using the No Contact Rule to get your ex back!

2. Cutting off contact for so long that she moves on

Most guys don't realize that ignoring an ex woman for 3 to 7 days is long enough to get the results they're hoping for (i.e. she calms down, misses him and opens up to the idea of interacting with him again to see what happens), so they end up going the full 30, or even 60 days of No Contact.

A guy like that usually thinks something along the lines of, "My case is different. My ex really hates me now, so if I try to call her after 3 to 7 days, she most-likely won't answer her phone. I think waiting for a few weeks, or even months, is better, because it will give her enough time to calm down and not be so angry and defensive all the time. She might also miss me a little bit and then when I contact her she will be more open to talking to me and working things out."

Yet, here's the thing!

The only thing 30 or 60 days is long enough for, is for her to meet new guys, have sex and fall in love again with someone else.

Remember: When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she's lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, when he doesn't contact her, rather than think things like, "Why is he ignoring me? What's going on? Doesn't he care about me anymore? I need to phone him right away before I lose him for real," she will likely think something along the lines of, "Well this was easier than I thought. I'm so relieved that I don't have to deal with a needy, desperate ex. Now I can move on and live my life in peace."

Even when a woman does miss her ex and wants to get back with him, when he ignores her for so long, she begins to feel hurt and like he doesn't care.

So, instead of running back to him, she forces herself to fully get over him and move on.

Either way, he ends up losing out on getting her back.

This is why, if you don't want that to happen to you, don't take too long to start the ex back process with your ex, because you might end up regretting it.

Another problem to be aware of when using the No Contact Rule to get your ex back!

3. Not preparing to re-attract her when he does contact her

One of the biggest mistakes that guys make when using the No Contact Rule, is to spend all that time that they're ignoring their ex, just thinking about how much they miss her and not improving at all.

For example: A guy who was too needy and clingy will sit around feeling sad and thinking things like, "I miss her so much. I can't wait for these 30/60 days to be over so that I can hear her sweet voice again. I just can't live without her."

Then, when he finally does contact her and she picks up that he's still the same needy, clingy guy she broke up with, rather than open up to giving him another chance, she usually just says something like, â€œSorry, but nothing has changed since we last spoke. I told you that itâ€™s over and I meant it. Now please accept it and move on.â€

Heâ€™s then left feeling devastated and wondering why the No Contact Rule didnâ€™t work.

The answer is, he didnâ€™t change or improve.

So, instead of using the time apart to become more emotionally independent (e.g. by pursuing his own goals and dreams, taking up a hobby or interest, reconnecting with his old friends), he stayed stuck at the same level he was at when they broke up.

She then sees that and obviously doesnâ€™t want him back.

This is why itâ€™s so important that you use your No Contact time wisely and prepare to re-attract your ex in the ways that are important to her.

When she sees that youâ€™ve really put in the effort to become a better man, she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

It then becomes easy for you to fully reactivate her feelings and get her back.

Another problem to be aware of when using the No Contact Rule to get your ex backâ€™

4. Reaching out via text and giving up if she doesn't seem very interested

When a woman hasnâ€™t heard from her ex for quite some time, chances are high, sheâ€™s not going to sound very happy to hear from him the first time he contacts her. Why?

Each woman has her reasons, but the most common ones are:

- She doesnâ€™t want to let on that sheâ€™s actually been missing him.
- She doesnâ€™t want to make it easy for him to get her back.
- She wants to test his confidence and see if he has the courage to keep pursuing her, even though sheâ€™s being cold and distant.
- She feels hurt that he took so long to get in touch with her and sheâ€™s now trying to teach him a lesson.

Hereâ€™s the thing thoughâ€™

Regardless of why your ex doesnâ€™t seem very enthusiastic to hear from you, donâ€™t give up too quickly and end up missing out on your chance of getting back with her.

Instead, believe in yourself and in your value to her and donâ€™t give up if she doesnâ€™t make it super easy for you right away.

Remain confident, reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you and get her back.

Another problem to be aware of when using the No Contact Rule to get your ex backâ€™

5. Assuming that she will be willing to put in the effort to contact him and get him back, just because he didn't contact her after the break up

Regardless of whether a woman has lost touch with her feelings for her ex, or is secretly still hoping for a reconciliation with him, sheâ€™s usually not going to be the one to make the first move.

Instead, sheâ€™s going to continue moving on without him, until she finally hooks up with a new man, or he takes the lead and does what he needs to do to get her back.

Here's the thing!

As the man, it's up to you to be emotionally strong enough to handle the ex back process and guide her back into a relationship.

You can't rely on your ex to be the strong one and make everything happen for you and her.

So, stop waiting for something to happen (i.e. for her to come running back to you) just because you're ignoring her and take control of the ex back process and get her back.

You need to be a man about it.

Take the first step to getting her back.

Before you know it, you and her will be in bed together, hugging, kissing and feeling that love you used to feel for each other.

This time though, it will feel even more exciting because you will have leveled up and will be attracting her in new ways that make her want you and only you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

What Does it Mean If Your Ex Texts You During No Contact?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are the 5 most common reasons why an ex will text you during no contact:

1. She just wants to check if you're still missing her, so she can feel good about herself

[image: She just wants to check if you're still missing her, so she can feel good about herself]

Sometimes, when a woman doesn't hear from her ex for a long time (i.e. because he's using No Contact as a way to get her back), she might begin thinking things like, "What happened to him? I know that when we first broke up he was heartbroken and I'm almost 100% sure that if I had given him an opening, he would have asked me to get back together again. Yet, all of a sudden he stopped texting, calling or responding to my posts on social media. I wonder what he's up to. Maybe he met another woman and is in a new relationship already. That sucks! I should get in touch with him and find out."

She may then text him to say hi and see how he responds to her.

If he then responds to her right away with something along the lines of, "Hey, how have you been? I've been thinking about you a lot lately," or "Hey, I've missed you! It's nice to hear from you again," she will get a nice self-esteem boost knowing that her ex still thinks about her and misses.

She may then decide to keep texting him and allow him to assume that it's because she misses him too.

In the meantime, she will use the knowledge that he's not moving on without her and is instead thinking about her, missing her and wanting her back, to feel good about herself.

She can then go out and meet new guys to have sex with, date and fall in love with, feeling confident about herself and her value, because she knows that her ex is still missing her.

Here's the thing though!

Regardless of why your ex texts you during No Contact, don't make the mistake of ignoring her because you believe you need to stick it out for a full 30 or 60 days.

Instead, use the opening that she is giving you to your advantage and begin re-attracting her on a phone call or in person.

The more you spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you, the less she will be able to resist feeling drawn to you and wanting to see you in person.

Then, even though she initially only contacted you to make herself feel good, she may suddenly begin thinking things like, "What is happening to me? I thought I was over him, but now I'm not so sure. He seems so different and I actually look forward to talking to him on the phone and seeing him in person. All of a sudden I miss him and the idea of losing him for real makes me feel sad. What should I do?"

When that happens, her defenses come down and she becomes open to kissing and having sex to see how she feels.

You can then fully reactivate her feelings for you (i.e. by showing her via your attitude, behavior and actions that you truly are a new man now) and then gently guide her back into a relationship.

Another thing it could mean if your ex texts you during No Contact isâ€¦!

2. She misses you and a random text is her way of trying to tell you that [image: She misses you and a random text is her way of trying to tell you that]

In some cases, when a guy suddenly cuts off all contact with his ex, it may shock her into realizing that she still has some feelings for him and that she misses him.

She might then text him to say hi and see what happens from there.

Secretly, she may be hoping that he will realize that sheâ€™s giving him an opening so that he can re-attract her and get her back.

Unfortunately though, a lot of guys miss out on that opportunity, because they waste a lot of time wondering things like, â€œWhat does it mean if your ex texts you during No Contact?â€ or, â€œShould I wait the full 30/60 days before I respond to her?â€

In the meantime, if the woman doesnâ€™t hear from him, she may take it as a sign that he doesnâ€™t want her anymore or heâ€™s moved on.

She will then likely not want to take the risk of being rejected by him by texting him again, so she will probably go quiet and focus on getting over him and finding herself a new man to make herself feel better.

This is why, if your ex has texted you during No Contact, donâ€™t mess her around by not responding to her, or replying to her but acting like youâ€™re not really interested in her anymore (e.g. because itâ€™s not the full 30 or 60 days yet, youâ€™re unsure of her feelings for you, you donâ€™t want to come across as desperate).

Just take control of the situation so that you can re-attract her and get her back.

Remember: Even though your ex might be missing you and wanting to get back with you, sheâ€™s wonâ€™t wait forever for you to make a move and get her back.

Interact with her, reactivate her feelings for you and get the relationship back on track.

Another thing it could mean if your ex texts you during No Contact isâ€¦!

3. She's over you, but thought she'd say hi as a friend

Sometimes, a woman will use the No Contact period where her ex is avoiding her to fully get over him.

However, eventually she may begin thinking things like, â€œI wonder how heâ€™s doing? I hope heâ€™s happy.â€

She might then text him to say hi as a friend and see what heâ€™s been up to since they broke up.

Of course, just because a woman is over her ex when she contacts him, it doesnâ€™t mean her feelings are set in stone and that he canâ€™t change that.

If he uses the opening sheâ€™s giving him to reactivate some of her feelings again, she will quickly go from feeling like sheâ€™s over him to wanting to be his girl again.

So, donâ€™t waste the opportunity of re-sparking your exâ€™s feelings for you by thinking negative thoughts like, â€œSheâ€™s probably over me,â€ or â€œSheâ€™s only being friendly. It doesnâ€™t mean she wants to get back together again.â€

Instead, play on the fact that sheâ€™s being friendly towards you and call her on the phone, where you can reawaken some of her feelings for you.

Then, when sheâ€™s feeling relaxed and enjoying talking to you again, get her to meet up with you in person to say hello as friends.

For example: You can say something like, â€œIâ€™m glad you texted me to say hi as a friend. Itâ€™s really good to see that we can still be mature adults and enjoy chatting to each other with no strings attached. I think it would be great to meet sometime this week. As friends of course. Nothing more. We can catch up on each otherâ€™s news over a relaxing cup of coffee and say hi as friends in person. Letâ€™s catch up on Tuesday or Thursday. Which day would be best for you?â€

If youâ€™ve successfully sparked her feelings for you during the call and sheâ€™s feeling relaxed and open, sheâ€™ll most-likely agree to catching up for a coffee.

However, in some cases, a woman might be a bit more hesitant and make some excuse to avoid the meet up.

No matter what she says though, just maintain your confidence and donâ€™t fall into the trap of doubting yourself and your ability to attract her back into a relationship.

Relax and confidently say something along the lines of, â€œHey, look â€œitâ€™s just a quick cup of coffee as friends. Itâ€™s no big deal and you can leave any time you want. So, what do you say? Are you in for a quick catch upâ€ Tuesday or Thursday?â€

At that point, she will probably agree and you can then go ahead and arrange a suitable day and time.

Then, when you meet up with her, make sure that you are ready to say and do the types of things that will reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. maintain your confidence around her regardless of her attitude towards you, use humor to ease the tension and make her laugh and smile and feel happy that she agreed to meet up with you, let her see some of the changes youâ€™ve made to yourself since the break up).

When she experiences the new you in person, most of her feelings of doubt about you will begin to melt away.

She will then naturally begin to see you in a different light and open up to the idea of getting back together again.

Something else it could mean if your ex texts you during No Contact isâ€

4. She decides to text you just to see what happens

[image: She decides to text you just to see what happens]

There are times when a guy uses No Contact to get his ex back and it causes her to begin to question her decision to break up with him.

So, even though she doesnâ€™t necessarily want him back right away, she may start wondering what heâ€™s been doing all the time theyâ€™ve been apart, if heâ€™s changed and if itâ€™s not too late to work things out between them.

She may then decide to text him to see what happens from there.

For example:

- Will he reply or will he ignore her?
- Will she feel a spark when interacting with him again or will she feel nothing?
- Will he know how to reactivate her feelings for him or will he turn her off even more?
- Will she suddenly miss him and want to see him again or will she want to go back to having no contact with him?

Depending on how he responds, she will either initiate a call with him to see how she feels about him, or she will go back to the way things were before.

Here's the thing though!

In most cases, even if a woman still has feelings for her ex and wants him back, texting him during No Contact is about as much as she will reveal.

Women want a man who has the courage to make a move, rather than having to be gently guided all the way by a woman.

So, if a guy doesn't have the courage to do that after she initiates contact with him, she will just focus on getting over him and move on.

This is why, if you want your ex back, you need to take control of the ex back process, rather than waiting for her to hopefully give you a clear sign that she's interested, before you make a move.

If you don't, she might decide that you're not man enough for her and find herself a new man who is.

Another thing it could mean if your ex texts you during No Contact is!

5. She's bored and decides to text you just for a bit of fun

[image: She's bored and decides to text you for a bit of fun]

Sometimes a woman will be sitting around feeling bored (e.g. on a Sunday evening, at the office, while stuck in traffic) and thinking things like, "I wonder what my ex has been up to all this time. I haven't heard a peep out of him for days/weeks/months. Maybe I should text him and see what happens," so she sends him a message to entertain herself.

As far as she's concerned, it likely doesn't really mean anything (i.e. it's not her way of letting him know that she wants him back) and she's simply passing the time.

However, that doesn't matter.

What matters is that she's given him an opening to begin sparking her feelings for him again so that he can get her back.

Think about it this way!

A woman texts her ex while she's bored.

Essentially she's expecting him to be nice and sweet and have a normal conversation with her about what he's been doing all the time they've been apart.

However, instead of being predictable, he uses some humor to spark her feelings and make her feel curious about his new-found confidence.

For example: She might text him something along the lines of, "Hey, stranger, how have you been?â€œ

Yet, rather than reply in the way sheâ€™s expecting him to by saying something like, â€œOh, fine. Just busy with work. How are you?â€œ he instead responds in joking way and saying, â€œWho's this?â€œ â€œSorry, I deleted your number. Didn't want to have my sexy ex girlfriend in my phone. Too tempting. Lol, how are you?â€œ

She will then likely laugh and feel flattered that referring to her as being sexy.

She will also begin to feel surges of respect and attraction for you because you have the confidence, balls and emotional strength to text her like that even though you are no longer together.

She may then begin thinking something along the lines of, â€œWhat's gotten into him? He sounds so different now. He seems so relaxed and happy. I wonder what he's up to. I know I just texted him because I was bored, but now I want to talk to him over the phone and see him in person.â€œ

She will then naturally drop her guard and you can then call her on the phone to arrange a meet up (so that you can fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back), and chances are high she will be more open to the idea, because you've already made her feel attracted.

What Happens Now? 3 Mistakes You Should Avoid Making if You Want Her Back

You can get your ex back right now if you want to.

It all depends on whether you make the following mistakes or not:

1. Thinking that she is in control of the ex back process

Just because your ex broke up with you and possibly even said things like, â€œI don't have any feelings for you anymore. What we had is over and you need to accept that, rather than keep asking me for another chance,â€œ getting her back is not entirely up to her (i.e. she is the only one who can decide if you and her can get back together again or not).

In fact, you have a lot of control over the ex back process.

Of course, it all depends on your approach.

For example: If you focus on making your ex woman have sexual and romantic feelings for you again, even if she tries to resist it, she won't be able to stop feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

As a result, her walls will begin to crumble and she will naturally go from not wanting to be in a relationship with you anymore, to being open to trying again.

On the other hand, if you ignore her for too long, or do the types of things that are unattractive to her (e.g. stick to being nice and polite around her and not sparking her feelings, letting her call the shots and dominate you, being unsure of yourself when you interact with her), it's only natural that you will have pretty much no power over the ex back process.

So, don't make the mistake of thinking it's all up to your ex whether you get back together or not.

If you want her back, you have to be ballsy enough to take the lead and make it happen.

Another mistake to avoid, isâ□!

2. Being afraid to risk rejection, so you stick to texting her and she then loses interest

Maybe your ex will reject you if you call her, but maybe she wonâ□□t.

However, if you want her back, you have to take the risk.

If you donâ□□t and just stick to texting her back and forth, chances are high, she will stop replying to you sooner rather than later.

On the other hand, if you do call her, even if sheâ□□s initially cold or even bitchy towards you, you have a chance to show her your confidence by not letting her get to you.

As a result, she will feel a spark of respect for you again for being an emotionally strong man.

When she respects you, she will also begin to feel attracted to you and with those two things, itâ□□s only a matter of time before she starts to reconnect with her feelings of love as well.

So, donâ□□t be afraid of calling her, even if you think she might not like it.

It doesnâ□□t matter what she likes.

What matters is what works and re-attracting her on a call so she wants to see you in person works almost 100% of the time.

Another mistake to avoid isâ□!

3. Assuming that No Contact is the main technique that gets a woman back

No Contact can be effective if a woman still has feelings for her guy and is secretly hoping they will get back together again soon.

If she then doesnâ□□t hear from him, it can shock her into running back to him out of fear of losing him.

Even then, she might just assume that her ex is over her and force herself to get over him and move on instead.

Another time No Contact might work is if a woman canâ□□t find a replacement guy, so she decides to go back to her ex until someone better comes along.

However, in almost all other cases, No Contact is simply the main thing that helps a woman get over her ex and move on without the drama of having to deal with him trying to get her back.

On the other hand, what works almost every time in getting an ex woman back, is actively re-sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love and making her feel that losing you would be a mistake.

So, do you want to sit around waiting for No Contact (30 to 60 days of not talking to her) to end and risk losing your ex in the process, or do you want to do what will get her back right now?

The choice is yours.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 Examples of How to Love Again After a Broken Heart

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

You have 3 main options at this point.

You can either:

1. Get her back and love her

[image: Get her back and love her]

One of the best ways to get over a broken heart, is by making your ex fall back in love with you and starting a new relationship with her that is even better than before.

So, rather than sit around feeling sad and rejected, focus instead on getting your ex back to enjoy a new relationship with her where you are in the position of power.

Of course, right now you might be thinking something along the lines of, “How can I do that if my ex said that she hates me and doesn’t want anything to do with me? Surely that’s impossible, right?”

No.

It’s not impossible.

When you approach the ex back process in the correct way, your ex can go from hating you and saying things like, “I never want to see you again!” to loving you again and saying something along the lines of, “I’m so glad you didn’t give up on me, even when I was being so closed off and bitchy to you. I love you so much!”

So, how can you make that happen?

It’s actually easier than you may think right now.

How so?

Firstly, you need to understand your ex’s real reasons for breaking up with you.

This is important, because a lot of the time, guys aren’t really sure about it.

Yes, most guys have a vague idea (e.g. they haven’t been getting along lately and have been getting into more arguments and fights than they used to), but they don’t really know her deep, secret reasons.

This is why you need to start with that.

By the way, if you’re unsure of how to go about doing it, here are some questions to ask yourself to help you gain clarity:

- Did you remain emotionally strong and independent in the relationship, or did you end up becoming clingy, needy or wimpy?
- Were you able to maintain her feelings of respect and attraction, or did you become insecure and stopped being the cool, confident guy that she originally fell in love with?
- Did you create a relationship dynamic that made her want to treat you well and be a good, loving, devoted woman to you, or did you make her feel like pulling away from you, being closed off and treating you with less and less respect over time?

- Were you an emotionally masculine man who made her feel like a feminine, girly woman in your presence, or were you submissive and timid and made her feel like she had power over you and like she was the dominant one in the relationship?
- Did you make her feel sexy and desirable when she was with you, or did you treat her more like a neutral friend?
- Did you lead in the relationship, or did you expect her to be the boss and make all the decisions for the both of you?

Once you know where you went wrong, you can quickly make some attractive changes and improvements to yourself.

From there, the next step is to interact with your ex and show her via your attitude, actions, behavior and the way you respond to her that youâ€¦ve moved past the level that you were at when she broke up with you and are now a better man.

When she experiences the new you (i.e. you are now behaving and responding in a completely different way to the way she remembers), her guard will naturally come down and she will start to feel a renewed sense of respect for you again.

When she respects you, she will naturally also begin to feel attracted to you.

She will then feel drawn to you and want to explore her new, fascinating feelings of attraction for you by being around you more and more.

You can then fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back into a relationship that has withstood a break up and is now even better, stronger and more loving than before.

From that point onwards, you will only want to be with each other, because thatâ€¦s where both of you feel the happiest, most fulfilled and most loved.

Another example of how to love again after a broken heart isâ€¦|

2. Attract a high quality woman and enjoy a new kind of love

[image: Attract a high quality woman and enjoy a new kind of love]

Although it sucks to lose the woman you love, it doesnâ€¦t have to be the end of the world.

In fact, in some instances, losing one woman can open the door to finding the woman who is truly perfect for you.

So, even though you and your ex may have shared a special connection, it doesnâ€¦t mean that she is the only woman who is ideal for you.

In reality, there are many millions of different women across the world who can easily be the one for you.

All it takes is confidence in yourself and in your value as a man to find her, as well as the ability to make her feel attracted to you as you talk to her.

When you know how to attract women as you talk to them, you instantly feel a resurgence of confidence and hope about your future.

As a result, you will naturally begin to talk and behave in the kind of ways that will attract a new, high quality woman to you.

You will then discover that there are many kinds of love in the world and although what you and your ex had together was special, you can easily find love with another woman if you want to.

Essentially, every woman you fall in love with has something special and distinctive about her that makes the relationship unique.

So, don't waste time feeling depressed or dejected and wondering if you will ever be happy again.

Instead, be emotionally strong and confident enough to go out there and find yourself another, even better woman than your ex and be happy with her.

By the way!

As an added bonus, when you are happy and moving forward in your life without your ex, you suddenly seem more attractive to her and she begins to want you back for herself.

You can then choose to stay with your new woman and build a long-lasting relationship with her, or break up with her and get your ex back.

Either way, the choice will be yours.

Another example of how to love again after a broken heart is!

3. Enjoy several casual relationships to experience different kinds of love

[image: Enjoy casual relationships to experience different types of love]

A great way to get over a break up is to have sex with and date many different women.

Not only does this restore your confidence, it also shows you that although the love you experienced with your ex was special, it is not the only love that is available to you.

Most women really love sex and want it as much as men do.

To get a lot of sex, you've simply just got to know how to make them want it with you.

It's very easy to do.

The thing is, with each woman that you have a relationship with, you will experience a completely different type of sexual experience and, if you get into a relationship, a different type of love.

It is never the same and cannot be, because each woman is a unique person and the subtle nuances and differences in your relationship will create a new type of love.

At the same time, if you learn from the mistakes that you made in the past, you will inevitably become a better and more attractive man (e.g. more confident, emotionally masculine, charismatic), and as a result, your relationships will get better too.

Then, you will have your choice of quality women that you can build a happy, long-lasting relationship with, or even re-attract your ex if you want to.

So, don't be afraid to love again after a broken heart.

Fearlessly open yourself up to love, knowing that no matter what happens, you can always find love with another woman if it doesn't work out.

4 Mistakes That Some Guys Make When Trying to Love Again

After a Broken Heart

Although losing the woman you love can be perceived as a bad thing, it can also be a time of growth and improvement if you want it to be.

Unfortunately though, a lot of guys get stuck in a cycle of negativity and despair and end up making a bunch of mistakes that prevent them from either getting their ex back, or moving on and finding another, even better woman than her.

For example: Some of the mistakes that guys make when they have a broken heart areâ€¦

1. Not improving his ability to attract women, which means that he only has access to women he doesn't want

One of the biggest mistakes that some guys make after a break up, is focus more on the pain and loss they're experiencing, rather than on the reasons why it happened in the first place.

As a result, these guys stay stuck at the same level and then end up not being able to re-attract their ex and get her back, or find a new, better woman than her.

Instead, a guy like that may end up staying single, becoming bitter and jaded about love and go around saying things like, â€œLove sucks! It's just not worth it, because it never works out and you always end up being the loser and getting hurt.â€

Alternatively, he might get into relationships with women he doesn't really want (e.g. unattractive or insecure women), because that's the best he can do.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, or to find yourself another high quality woman, it's absolutely essential that you improve your ability to make women feel attracted to you.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦

- Being more emotionally independent, so you don't need a woman's approval or emotional support to feel good about yourself. You're a self-approving, confident man who also knows how to make a woman feel good about herself when she's with you.
- Believing in your attractiveness and value as a man, so you don't feel as though any woman is too good for you. You know that you are more than good enough for any woman you want and that belief comes through in your attitude, body language, conversation style and behavior, which then makes women automatically feel more respect and attraction for you.
- Being more emotionally masculine now and not allowing any woman to have power over you. You're a good man to women, but you don't let them get away with walking all over you.
- Being less insecure and self-doubting, so that no woman can get under your skin and make you feel unsure of yourself around her.

The more you think, act and behave in these attractive ways, the easier it becomes for you to attract any woman you want (including re-attracting your ex).

By the wayâ€¦

When your ex sees that you are being man enough to quickly learn from your mistakes and improve, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again, even if she tries to deny it to your face.

She will feel drawn to you again for her own reasons (e.g. she fears walking away from the new you and then regretting it later on, she feels curious about her new feelings for you and wants to explore them).

Itâ€™s then up to you to get her back if you want to, or get another woman if you donâ€™t.

Either way, by becoming a more emotionally attractive man, you wonâ€™t have to settle for any woman that you donâ€™t really want.

Another mistake that guys make when they have a broken heart isâ€¦!

2. Focusing more on the pain of his broken heart than the solution to getting past it

Sometimes, after a particularly bad break up, a guy might find himself stuck in a dark place where heâ€™s constantly thinking things like, â€œThis was the worst thing that ever happened to me. I feel like my heart is broken into a million pieces. I miss her so much! I canâ€™t deal with all this pain. I donâ€™t know what to do to get past it. I just want her back so badly!â€œ

Yet, by doing that, heâ€™s focusing on the problem (i.e. the pain of losing the woman he loves), rather than on finding a solution (i.e. re-attracting her and getting her back).

So, donâ€™t let that happen to you.

Of course that doesnâ€™t mean you should pretend that the break up with your ex didnâ€™t happen, or that youâ€™re not feeling sad and broken-hearted.

However, dwelling on how bad you feel and how empty and aimless your life is without her in it isnâ€™t going to help you love again or get her back.

What will?

Reactivating your exâ€™s feelings of love, respect and attraction for you and getting her back. So, focus on that.

When your ex can see for herself that youâ€™re handling the break up in an emotionally strong, confident way, rather than falling apart and being unable to function without her, she will automatically start to feel a surge of respect and attraction for you again.

She then drops her guard and opens back up to interacting with you more often over the phone and in person, to see where things go from there.

Another mistake that guys make when they have a broken heart isâ€¦!

3. Thinking that it would be impossible to re-attract his ex and enjoy a new kind of love with her

Even though right now your situation might seem hopeless, because your ex is pushing you away and possibly saying things like, â€œI donâ€™t have feelings for you anymore,â€œ or â€œI never want to see you again,â€œ or even, â€œI hate you and nothing can ever change that,â€œ when you spark new feelings of love inside of her, anything becomes possible.

The truth is, thousands of couples around the world break up and get back together again (often more than once), every single day.

You and your ex can be one of those couples.

Remember: Feelings aren't set in stone.

You can literally change how a woman feels about you.

Think about it this way!

There was a time where you were a stranger to your ex and she had no feelings for you whatsoever.

Then, after she met you the first time, she probably started liking you and thinking things like, He's cute.

From there, you built on her feelings for you (i.e. by saying and doing the types of things that are naturally attractive to women) and she began to fall in love with you.

However, over time, you stopped behaving in those attractive ways and she then started to disconnect from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and began to feel more negative emotions such as anger, resentment, or disillusionment.

As you can see, your ex's feelings for you have changed many times already.

So, they can definitely change again.

When you interact with her and reactivate her feelings by showing her that you truly are a better man now (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more manly, more assertive and decisive), she won't be able to stop her feelings from changing (in a good way) again.

So, don't sit around feeling hopeless and thinking, She said it's over between us, so I don't stand a chance of getting her back.

You can get her back.

Men from all over the world get an ex back every day and you can too.

Another mistake that guys make when they have a broken heart is!

4. Accepting a less attractive woman who he will never really love in the same way he loved his ex

Sometimes, a break up can cause a guy to become fearful of falling in love again.

At the back of his mind he might be thinking things like, My ex was special. What we had together was unique and I will never be able to find another beautiful woman like her again. I just need to accept that and be content with what I can get from now on.

He then settles for a less attractive woman that he just can't fully love.

Yet, here's the thing!

If you don't ever attempt to get your ex back and instead settle for second best in life (i.e. get into a relationship with a woman who you don't fully love or feel attracted to), you may spend the rest of your life regretting it and never truly being happy.

Do you really want to live that kind of life?

The answer is almost certainly, No!

So, if you want your ex back, don't settle for a woman you don't want instead.

Take a risk to relight the fire between you and her and experience what comes with it.

Remember: The biggest regrets people have is not the things they've done, but the things they didn't do when they had the chance.

This is your chance right now.

Take it and get your ex back.

You can do it!

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Will My Ex Come Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends on the following:

1. If she meets a new guy that she finds interesting and attractive

[image: If she meets a new guy that she finds interesting and attractive]

A woman will usually have her reasons for breaking up with a guy (e.g. he didn't make her feel attracted in the ways that she wanted, certain aspects of his thinking and behavior turned her off, the relationship became boring and dull).

So, if after the break up she happens to quickly meet a new guy who seems so much more interesting and fascinating than her ex, she will focus on moving on with him, rather than going back to a relationship she no longer feels excited about.

This is why, it's up to you to make sure you don't wait around for that to happen.

Instead, you need to begin interacting with her as soon as possible (preferably over the phone and in person) and start re-sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so that no other guy looks like a better choice compared to you.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by:

Believing in yourself and in your value to her and feeling confident of your chances of getting her back, rather than doubting yourself and thinking negative thoughts like, "What if she doesn't want me?" or, "What if I contact her and she rejects me?" and then making her feel turned off as a result.

Showing her via your attitude, conversation style, actions, behavior and the way you respond to her that you're a new and improved man that she can now truly look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, rather than staying the same as before and expecting her to accept that.

Maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what she says or does to make you doubt yourself and your chances with her.

Not giving her power over you (e.g. by doing everything she tells you to do, accepting her decision about the break up, being too nice and submissive) and instead, letting her see that you are now even more emotionally masculine in the way you think, talk, behave and react when interacting with her and that she can't dominate you with her confident personality.

Making her smile and laugh and feel happy and relaxed to be around you again, rather than stressing her out and putting her on her guard around you by constantly trying to get into intense, deep discussions about the relationship with her.

Flirting with her to create sexual tension between you and to make it clear to her that you still feel attracted to her and want her back, rather than "playing it safe" by just acting friendly, neutral or distant and pretending that you only want to be her friend from now on.

This allows her to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

At the same time, she feels curious and intrigued about the new you and wants to explore the possibility of being your girl again, rather than cutting you off and then potentially regretting it later on.

As a result, she drops her guard with you and becomes open to talking to you, hanging out with you and seeing where things go from there.

Another possibility isâ€¦

2. If she gets into a relationship that works and that keeps getting better over time

[image: If she gets into a relationship that keeps getting better and better over time]

If a woman finds herself in a relationship with a guy who doesn't make her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with him (e.g. loved and appreciated, turned on, excited, like a girly, feminine woman), then she will eventually get to the point where she breaks up with him.

She will then try to find a new man who will firstly, fill in the gaps that were missing in her relationship with her ex (e.g. he's more confident and self-assured, he is more ambitious and goal oriented, he's more emotionally dominant than her, he makes her feel loved and appreciated).

Of course that's not a guarantee that he's perfect for her and that she will stay with him for very long.

However, if he can also create a relationship dynamic that deepens the feelings of love, attraction and respect between them over time and causes her to want to stay with him for life, its highly unlikely that she will feel the need to go back to her ex again.

This is why it's so important that if you want to get your ex back, you don't waste time waiting for her to come back to you on her own and giving her a chance to meet, fall in love with and settle down with a new man.

Don't make the mistake of thinking that it's all up to her whether you get back together again.

It's not.

It's up to you.

You need to quickly make some attractive changes to your thinking, behavior and the way you respond to her and then interact with her and allow her to experience those changes over the phone and in person

It's only when you re-attract your ex and let her experience new, exciting feelings that she opens back up to being with you again.

Even if she said that her decision was final and she was never, ever going to get back with you, or she seems cold and aloof towards you at first, all that will change when she begins to feel strong surges of respect and sexual attraction for you again.

When that happens, she begins to feel sparks of sexual and romantic love for you again and starts to fear that she could be making a mistake if she walks away from you for real.

At that point, it's easy to get to a hug, kiss, have sex and then back into a relationship.

However, if you just sit around waiting for her to make the first move and don't do anything to reactivate her feelings for you, she will almost certainly move on and may possibly end up in a relationship that works and keeps getting better and better over time.

If that happens, getting her back becomes a lot more difficult for you.

So, if you want your ex back, take action and make it happen before it's too late.

Another possibility is

3. If you don't contact her and re-attract her

[image: If you don't contact her and re-attract her]

Sometimes a guy feels too nervous or even unwelcome to contact his ex after a break up.

This is especially true if the break up was messy, or if the woman said things like, "It's over between us and I don't want to see you or hear from you again. Just leave me alone so that I can get on with my life!"

He might then decide to use the No Contact Rule (i.e. ignore her for 30 to 60 days) as a way of making her miss him and begin wanting him back.

Unfortunately though, what a guy like that doesn't realize is that when a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him, not hearing from him for a long period of time isn't really going to bother her.

In fact, in most cases, when a woman doesn't hear from an ex she doesn't have any feelings for, rather than miss him and want to go back to him, she will likely just think something along the lines of, "I'm so relieved! I really thought I was going to have a difficult time getting my ex to accept the break up, but it seems I was wrong. He's disappeared completely out of my life and I didn't even have to be a bitch to him to make it happen. I can now move on and find myself a new man, without still having to deal with my ex as well."

Even if a woman does still have some feelings for her ex and is secretly hoping they will eventually work things out and get back together again, when he completely vanishes from her life, she may take it as a sign that he's no longer interested in her.

She might even think things like, "I really thought he cared, but clearly I was wrong. He hasn't even bothered to text me once to see how I'm doing. Well I'm not going to give him the satisfaction of hurting me again. I'm going to put my feelings for him away and I'm going to find myself a new man to have sex with and fall in love with."

This is why it's so important that if you want to get your ex back, you don't waste time ignoring her for months and risking losing her forever.

Here's the thing

If your ex has lost feelings for you, giving her more time is unlikely to change that.

What will?

Interacting with her over the phone and particularly in person and reactivating her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

On the other hand, if your ex does still care for you and you ignore her for a month or two, you will likely damage your chances of getting her back, because she will feel hurt and betrayed by you for not trying to get her back.

In either case, you stand a much better chance of getting your ex back when you take the lead and make it happen right away, rather than sitting around for weeks and months and hoping she will come back to you on her own simply because you're not contacting her.

So, don't wait around in the background all that time.

Waiting around isn't good for your mental and emotional health.

Just pick up the phone, activate some of your ex's feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again) and get her to meet up with you in person and get her back for real.

Another possibility is

4. If she misses you, but decides to move on because she doesn't believe you could change

[image: If she misses you, but decides to move on because she doesn't believe you could change]

In most cases, a woman will continue to miss her ex from time to time.

For example: She might find herself spending the weekend home alone and think to herself something along the lines of, I miss how we used to hole in over the weekend sometimes and just make popcorn and watch movies the whole day or, I miss how he used to make me laugh and smile even when I was really angry or sad. No one else can do that.

Yet, in most cases, rather than contact her ex and see if they can work things out, a woman will instead try to fully get over him and move on. Why?

Even though she misses him, based on her past experiences (e.g. he promised to change before but was either too lazy to follow through, or he didn't actually know how to change and was just trying to hang on to the relationship as long as possible), she doesn't believe he can change and be the man she wants him to be.

So, rather than wasting more of her time by going back to him, she instead focuses on getting over her remaining feelings for him and moving on.

This is why, if you want your ex back, you first need to make some attractive changes to your attitude, thinking and behavior, before you interact with her again.

Then, when you are ready (it shouldn't take more than a few days to a week), get in contact with her, re-attract her on the call and get her to meet up with you in person, so that she can fully experience the changes in you and how good it now makes her feel.

When she realizes that you really have transformed yourself into a better man (e.g. you've become more confident and self-assured, you're more emotionally mature than before, you're more assertive and can now stand up for yourself when she's being out of line, you're able to make her laugh and smile when she is being stubborn or closed off), she will drop her guard and open up to the idea of getting back with you.

However, if when you interact with her, her suspicions about you not being able to change are proven to be true, she's not going to be keen waste more time on a relationship that won't work.

Then, getting her back becomes a lot more difficult for you.

3 Mistakes to Avoid While You Wait For Your Ex to Come

Back

If you want to get your ex back, make sure that you're not making any of the following mistakes:

1. Waiting so long that you develop insecurities about women and relationships

Sometimes a guy will sit around waiting for his ex to come back to him, without actually doing anything to get her back.

Then, after a while when he notices that she's not coming back, he begins to feel insecure about his value to her and to other women.

For example: He might

- Start believing that his ex was out of his league and that he got lucky with her.
- Lose confidence in his attractiveness to other women and begin to see women as being hard to get, or hard to keep.
- Doubt that he will ever be able to attract another woman as beautiful as his ex ever again.

Don't let that be you.

If you want your ex back, stop waiting around for her to come to you and end up losing confidence in yourself if that doesn't happen.

Be a man of action and be the one who takes the lead in the ex back process.

If you wait too long, you may end up losing your ex to another man, because she gets tired of waiting for you to make a move.

You might also end up losing confidence in yourself around women, because you secretly worry that you're unlovable.

So, make sure that you don't become one of those guys who end up being single and alone, because one failed relationship ruined your confidence in yourself and in your value to women.

Believe in yourself.

Then, if you want your ex back, take action and make it happen.

The next mistake to avoid is

2. Never fully opening yourself to another woman because you want your ex back

In some cases, a guy might sit around waiting for his ex to come back to him.

Then, when she doesn't, he might force himself to move on by getting into a relationship with a new woman.

Yet, he never fully allows himself to fall in love with her, because at the back of his mind he's still thinking about how much he misses his ex and still hoping that she might come back one day.

Deep down, he knows that he's not living up to his true relationship potential, because he's settled for a woman that he doesn't really love.

She's a nice enough person and technically there's nothing wrong with her, but he just can't allow himself to love her in the same way that he loved his ex.

Secretly, he wishes he could have his ex back, but he didn't do anything about it, so she moved on.

Don't let that happen to you.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Daydreaming about getting her back, but never following through to actually make it happen

There's no value in sitting around and thinking things like, "I miss her so much. I wish she would come back to me. If she did, I would do everything in my power to make her happy. I would be a much better boyfriend/fiancé/husband to her this time around."

Although daydreaming like that might make you feel better in the moment, it's not going to make you happy in the long term.

However, taking action, getting your ex back for real and making those dreams a reality definitely will.

So, leave the daydreaming to the girls and take action like the man you are.

When you have your ex back in your arms, kissing her and loving her, you'll agree that it was the right thing for you to do.

So, what are you waiting for?

Really.

Do you want her back or not?

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Breaking Up Due to Work Commitments

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you and your ex broke up due to work commitments, here's what you need to do to get her back:

1. Initially accept the break up and give her up to a week of space

[image: Initially accept the break up and give her up to a week of space]

The last thing a woman needs when she breaks up with a guy due to work commitments is for him to create drama (e.g. beg and plead with her to change her mind, promise her that he won't interfere with her work if they can just stay together, accuse her of not loving him because she's choosing her work over him) and make it more difficult for her to cope with the situation.

She may then become even more closed off and stubborn and possibly even say things like, â€œLook, Iâ€™m not happy about this either, but youâ€™re just making everything harder than it needs to be. I think itâ€™s better if we just stop interacting with each other altogether. It will just be easier for the both of us. So, please donâ€™t text or call me anymore.â€

This is why the best approach is for you to make this time easier for her, so that she actually thinks about you in a more positive way and misses you.

So, just accept the break up as gracefully as possible and then give her some space to let things settle down.

For example: You might say something along the lines of, â€œHey, I understand that this is a difficult decision and itâ€™s stressful for both of us. However, I want you to know that I accept that weâ€™re broken up and I promise not to make things harder than they already are. We can just be friends now, okay?â€

This will put her mind to rest and make her feel a surge of respect for you for being so emotionally mature about it.

From there, just give her a week of space where you don't contact her at all and allow for her to begin missing you and possibly even regretting her decision to break up with you.

Then, after a week!

2. Contact her and create a relaxed, easy-going vibe between you and her

[image: Contact her and create a relaxed, easy-going vibe between you and her]

Once things have calmed down a bit, you can contact your ex and say something along the lines of, â€œHey, I just wanted to see how itâ€™s going?â€ without it coming across as an attempt to pressure her into changing her mind.

However, make sure that you don't get sucked into feeling like a stranger around her now, just because you're no longer a couple.

This means, you need to create a fun, easy-going vibe between you and her when talking to her, rather than suddenly being very polite, reserved, tense and unsure of yourself around her.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by!

- Using humor to ease the tension between you and her and making her laugh, smile and feel happy to be hearing from you again, rather than trying to get into intense, deep discussions about the relationship and how you can make it work between you regardless of her work commitments.
- Maintaining your confidence and emotional strength around her, regardless of how much you've missed her and how difficult it now is to be talking to her again knowing that your relationship is over.
- Being more emotionally masculine in the way you think, talk, behave and react when interacting with her, rather than giving her too much power over you (e.g. by being too nice, accepting everything she tells you).
- Believing in yourself and in your value to her, rather than feeling despondent and like you've lost your chances with her forever and turning her off as a result.
- Letting her see that even though you miss her and want her back, you're busy getting on with your life without her (e.g. by talking about some of the things you've been up to since you and her last interacted), rather than sitting around feeling lost, desperate and stuck.

The more relaxed and happy she feels when interacting with you, the more respect and attraction she will feel for you.

She will then begin to wonder if breaking up with you due to work commitments was actually the best route for her to take.

When that happens, she naturally becomes open to interacting with you more and more, because she doesn't want you out of her life completely.

From there, you need toâ€¦

3. Attract her in new ways over the phone or in person

Creating an easy-going vibe between you and your ex is only the first step to bringing down her guard and opening her up to the idea of getting back together again despite her work commitments and the best way to do that is to attract her in new and exciting ways.

Essentially what that means is that you can't approach getting her back the same way you approached getting her to be your girl in the first place.

So, although being nice and sweet, buying her flowers and gifts, or taking her on romantic dates worked in attracting your ex before, for her to feel motivated to find a better solution for her work commitments so she can be with you as well, you need to do something different.

Here's the thingâ€¦

Even though the main reason she gave you for breaking up has to do with work, the truth is, in most cases, when a woman is with a guy she considers to be the one for her, she's going to fight tooth and nail to stay with him no matter what.

On the other hand, if there are certain aspects of his thinking, behavior and attitude that are turning her off in the relationship and then she also has commitments at work, she may use that as an excuse to end the relationship, without having to deal with him trying to talk her out of her decision.

So, it's always a good idea to think of areas in your relationship with your ex that could use some improvement.

Then, when you interact with her on the phone and in person, you can begin attracting her in ways that she always wanted, but never told you.

By the way, if you're unsure of what those areas might be, here are some questions you can ask yourself to help you figure it out:

- Did you make your ex feel respect and attraction for you by being emotionally strong and maintaining your confidence around her regardless of how difficult she was being (e.g. she was being stubborn, throwing a tantrum, disrespecting you), or did you turn her off by being self-doubting and insecure?
- Did you make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman when she was with you, or did you treat her more like a friend or one of the guys?
- Did you make her laugh, smile and feel good in the relationship with you, or did you make things stressful or annoying for her (e.g. by being jealous and controlling, being too childish and immature)?
- Did you laugh at her (in a loving way) when she created fake drama, or did you become submissive and let her dominate you with her confident personality?
- Did you support her in her big dreams and goals in life, or did you patronize her a little bit for her ambitions?

Depending on your answers, you will have a better understanding of where you need to improve.

Then, when you interact with her and she notices that you're attracting her in ways that she always wanted (e.g. you're now the confident, self-assured man she dreamed of, you're more supportive and loving, you make her feel like a feminine woman), she will naturally begin to doubt her decision to break up.

So focus on that.

The next thing you can do is to

4. Build up the sexual tension

Chances are high that just because you and your girl are breaking up due to work commitments, you're not going to stop talking to each other (over the phone) as well.

This gives you a chance to truly make her regret her decision to break up with you and start wanting you back.

How can you do that?

By building the sexual tension between you and her so much, that she can't stop herself from wanting to release that tension with hugging, kissing and sex.

Of course, once she has sex with you again, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to walk away a second time from what you and her share.

So, make sure that every time you interact with her on a phone call, you're flirting with her and making her laugh and smile, while at the same time, not trying to convince her to get back into a relationship with you.

Flirting makes a woman feel sexually attracted to you and the fact that you're not desperately trying to convince her to get back together again creates a build up of desire from her side.

She starts to think things like, â€œIâ€™m always thinking about him when I should be focusing on my work. After all, the main reason we broke up is because of that. Yet, I canâ€™t stop missing him and wishing I could be in his arms again. Why canâ€™t I stop feeling this way?â€

Thatâ€™s what you want.

Unfortunately though, a lot of guys make the mistake of thinking that flirting with an ex after breaking up due to work commitments is wrong.

For example: A guy might say, â€œI accepted her decision to break up. If I now start flirting with her, she will probably get angry with me and then she might decide that we canâ€™t even be friends anymore. Then I will lose her for real. I donâ€™t think I can do that. Besides, donâ€™t I stand a better chance of getting her back when things at work settle down if Iâ€™ve been nice and supportive of her, rather than flirting with her?â€

Yet, thatâ€™s not how it works.

If a guy acts like a nice, neutral friend to a woman, all sheâ€™s going to feel for him are nice, neutral, friendly feelings.

Sheâ€™s almost certainly not going to want to meet up with him so that she can kiss him and have sex with him.

So, donâ€™t be afraid to flirt with your ex and make her feel attracted to you again.

To get her back, you have to actively make her feel sexually attracted to you and flirting, laughing and smiling is the perfect way to build up the sexual tension between you and her.

From thereâ€¦

5. Make her want you so bad that she goes out of her way to see you even though she's busy with work

[image: Make her want you so bad that she goes out of her way to see you]

If youâ€™ve successfully built up the sexual tension between you and your ex over the phone, she will probably be longing to at least see you again in person.

To increase those feelings in her you need to let her see that youâ€™re happy and moving forward in your life without her.

For example: Imagine that youâ€™ve been flirting with your ex over the phone and building up the sexual tension between you.

The needy desperate thing to do would be to say something like, â€œI canâ€™t take this anymore! I miss you so much! Isnâ€™t there any way you can make some time to see me?â€

Unfortunately, saying something like that to your ex will probably just dampen the desire that has been building up inside of her and make her think something along the lines of, â€œJust when I thought things were different, he had to go ruin everything by being needy and emotionally wimpy.â€

So, what should you do instead?

When you notice that the tension between you and her is really high, you need to say something along the lines of, â€œOkay, I guess I shouldnâ€™t keep you from your work any longer. I know how busy you are. Besides, Iâ€™m meeting up with someone in 20 minutes and I donâ€™t want to be late. We should do this again soon though, okay? Iâll call you sometime. Bye,â and then hang up the phone after sheâs said her goodbyes to you too.

By saying something like that to you ex, you accomplish two very important things.

Firstly, youâre showing her that youâre not sitting around feeling lost and lonely without her. Instead, youâre getting on with your life without her.

Yes, you do miss her and want her back, but you donât need her to feel good about yourself, or to have fun in your life.

This automatically sparks her feelings for you, because youâre suddenly the kind of man that she can look up to, respect and feel attracted to.

Secondly, by saying something like that to her right after youâve made her feel so attracted to you, she likely starts to feel jealous and begin thinking things like, âThis isnât at all what I was expecting. I thought heâd be feeling sad and depressed about our break up, but instead heâs happy and clearly already moving on. Heâs not sitting around moping and missing me like I imagined he would be. Instead, heâs out having fun with someone else. Of course he doesnât owe me anything since Iâm the one who broke up with him, but I hate the idea of him being with another woman. It actually makes me feel sick to my stomach! I need to put a stop to this right now!â

She may then call you back and say something like, âLook, I know weâre broken up, but I really need to see you. Can we get together today or tomorrow?â

You can then play a bit hard to get and ask her, âSure, but what about your work commitments?â

She will then likely say something along the lines of, âI donât care about that. I just want to see you.â

You can then go ahead and arrange a suitable day and time.

Note: Just make sure that you donât cancel your plans for her, because that will give her a false sense of power over you, or make her think you were only lying to her to make her want you back.

Then, when you meet up with her continue to build the tension between you and then release it with hugging, kissing and sex.

Sex gets rid of the uncertainty about how you feel about each other and opens the door to discussing working around her work commitments and giving the relationship another chance.

2 Mistakes That Can Slow the Ex Back Process Down

You can make your ex change her mind about breaking up with you.

However, you can also make her feel even more sure of her decision than she was before.

It all depends on whether you make the following mistakes with her or not.

1. Making the break up stressful and time consuming by having long text conversations with her

Regardless of how much a guy misses his ex and how difficult it is for him to accept breaking up due to work commitments, texting her all the time to stay on her mind and hopefully change her decision, is actually the worst thing he can do.

Not only is it stressful and annoying to her to have to constantly keep texting him back while still focusing on her work, it likely also makes her feel like he doesn't respect how important her work is to her.

She then realizes that he's not emotionally strong or mature enough to be the man that she needs. So, rather than opening back up to him, she closes herself off even more and either blocks his number on her phone, or simply ignores him and tries to move on.

Here's the thing!

The best way to make your ex change her mind about breaking up with you due to work commitments, is by reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

When she is feeling so attracted to you again, then the idea of losing you for real becomes unbearable to her.

She then feels motivated to find a solution to her work problems that allows her to still be your girl.

The next mistake is!

2. Promising to remain faithful and wait for her, even though she isn't attracted anymore

Although you might want to sit around being a good boy who doesn't go out, have sex or date other women while you wait for your ex's work commitments to disappear, it doesn't mean she will be doing the same for you.

In fact, she's most likely going to move on if she meets a guy that she finds interesting and attractive. After all, women want sex just as much as men do, most of the time.

She has to get her needs met and if she's not getting what she wants from you, she'll most likely look for it somewhere else.

This is why you need to take action now and begin re-sparking her feelings for you every time you interact with her (e.g. via text, social media, e-mail, and especially over the phone and in person).

The more respect and attraction you make her feel, the more she will open back up to you.

She stops putting her career ahead of you and starts feeling like she doesn't want to lose you.

When she begins thinking that way, you can easily get her back, or at least hook up with her sexually to see how you both feel afterwards.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

5 Examples of How to Make Your Ex Realize That She Does Love You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways to make an ex woman realize that she does love you, so you can then get her back:

1. Interact with her and make her feel rushes of romantic and sexual attraction for you

[image: Make her feel rushes of romantic and sexual attraction for you]

A natural reaction to getting broken up with that many guys have, is to want to close themselves off from all interactions (especially with their ex) and try to cope with the pain and loss.

As a result, they withdraw into themselves and focus on how much they miss her, how sad they feel without her and how badly they just want to make things right so that they can get her back.

Unfortunately, that behavior doesn't actually yield any results.

In fact, if anything, wallowing in sadness and despair is usually a sure-fire way to turn an ex (and other women as well) off even more (i.e. because emotional weakness is unattractive to women).

So, if you want to make your ex realize that she does love you, avoiding her or falling into a downward spiral of hopelessness is not the way to go about it.

Instead, you need to stay in her life (e.g. via text, social media, and especially on the phone and by seeing her in person) and begin re-sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so that she begins to doubt her decision to break up with you.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by:

- Using humor to diffuse the tension between you and her and make her begin seeing you in a more positive light.
- Maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what she says or does to put you off, (e.g. she says things like, "You need to accept that I don't love you anymore" or, "My feelings for you are dead", she blames you for ruining the relationship, she acts cold and detached).
- Showing her via your attitude, conversation style, actions and behavior that you've changed and improved in some of the ways that are important to her, (e.g. you're more assertive now rather than being submissive or timid, you're more emotionally independent rather than being needy or clingy, you're more emotionally masculine rather than being unmanly).
- Being more emotionally dominant with her, rather than allowing her to call all the shots because you're afraid she won't like it and then refuse to give you another chance.
- Reacting differently to the way she expects you to, (e.g. if you used to get jealous every time she mentioned another guy, you now just remain calm and laugh at your past behavior).
- Flirting with her and making her feel like a sexy, desirable woman when she's around you, rather than being too nice and neutral and not making her feel anything at all.

The more your ex interacts with you and discovers that you're nothing like the man she broke up with, the more her feelings of respect and attraction for you will be reactivated.

As a result, her defenses start to come down and she then becomes more open to admitting to herself that she really does love you.

When she realizes that, her defenses come down and she starts to want you back.

Another example of how to make your ex realize that she does love you isâ€¦!

2. Stop trying to get her to understand how much you love her and how much she means to you

[image: Stop trying to get her to understand how much you love her and how much she means to you]

One of the most common ways that a guy might try to make his ex change her mind about breaking up with him is by telling her how much he still loves her.

For example: A guy might say something along the lines of, â€œI know things seem hopeless right now, but I feel it in my heart that we are meant to be together. The truth is, I still love you so much! I donâ€™t want any other woman. I just want you! You mean the world to me and Iâ€™m willing to do whatever it takes to prove it to you and get you back. You make me feel amazing and even though right now weâ€™re broken up, I honestly believe that itâ€™s just a temporary setback. We just need to iron out some of our problems and everything will be fine between us. Iâ€™m sure of it. I love you! That has to be worth something, right?â€

Essentially, heâ€™s hoping that if he opens up to his ex and expresses his feelings to her, it will wipe out all the negative things between them and make her open back up to him too.

She will then say something like, â€œYouâ€™re right! Our love is stronger than our problems! Iâ€™m so glad you told me that you love me. It made me realize that I love you too! Letâ€™s get back together again,â€ and they can then live happily ever after.

Although thatâ€™s exactly what would happen in a romantic movie, in real life, things almost never work out that way. Why?

While youâ€™re expressing your feelings to your ex, youâ€™re overlooking one important thing: Her feelings.

To get your ex to drop her guard and open back up to you again, the only thing that matters is how you make her feel.

How much you love her and care for her is pretty much irrelevant and unimportant to her now.

She cares about herself and what she wants and will only start to care about you and what you want, if you first reactivate her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

So, while youâ€™re thinking about how much you love her and how desperately you want to make her realize that she does love you too, sheâ€™s usually thinking about all the ways she feels you stuffed up and how that made her feel (e.g. angry, disappointed, frustrated, stuck).

She then zones in on those negative feelings to help her get over you and move on.

This is why, if you truly want to make her realize that she does still love you and get her back, you first have to make her feelings match up to your feelings.

It canâ€™t be you thinking, â€œI love her. I want her backâ€ and her thinking, â€œI need to forget him and find someone elseâ€ or, â€œHeâ€™s so annoying. I wish heâ€™d stop pestering me to give him another chance.

In other words, you need to make her feel the way that you feel about her, before anything will happen.

So, don't bother trying to get her to understand how much you love her and how much she means to you.

Instead, use interactions to make her feel good about talking to you and being around you again.

When you re-spark her feelings for you, her guard will naturally come down.

She then becomes open to admitting that she does love you too.

However, if you focus on your feelings for her without reactivating her feelings for you first, she's likely just going to push you away and say things like, "I'm sorry that you still have such strong feelings for me. Unfortunately, I don't feel the same way about you and nothing you say is going to change that. Please accept it and let me go."

Another example of how to make your ex realize that she does love you is

3. Be more of a challenge for her

[image: Be more of a challenge for her]

Sometimes, to get his ex to admit that she still has feelings for him, a guy might put on his best behavior around her and act like a nice, sweet, dependable guy.

Essentially, he's hoping that she will think something along the lines of, "I can't believe how sweet he is. No matter how cold or rude or even bitchy I am towards him, he just smiles at me. He's so amazing! I never realized it before but he's the nicest, most agreeable man I've ever known. I see now that I really do still love him and I'd be a fool to let him go."

She will then want him back and he will be happy again.

Yet, what a guy like that doesn't realize is that a woman doesn't want to feel as though she is more valuable than him and like she has power over him.

She wants him to make her feel as though she needs to be on her best behavior around him and chase after him because the idea of losing him for real makes her feel stressed out.

Here's the thing

A woman wants to feel that her man is a catch, not like she's doing him a favor by being with him.

She might pretend that she likes a guy who is nice and sweet and who is willing to run around after her and follow her orders like a puppet, but she's not going to respect him if he actually falls for it and submits to her demands, regardless of how ridiculous she is being.

So, if you want your ex to reconnect with her feelings of love for you, be a bit more of a challenge to her during interactions, rather than being a good little boy who never says or does anything to upset her.

You'd be surprised to see how effective standing up to a woman can be in making her reconnect to her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again.

Another example of how to make your ex realize that she does love you is

4. Use humor when she is being cold, rude or mean

[image: Use humor when she is being cold, rude or mean]

One of the best ways to spark a woman's feelings for you and make her open up to her feelings of love for you is by using humor.

When you focus on making her smile, laugh, and feel good every time you interact with her (e.g. via text, social media and especially over the phone and in person), it makes it very difficult for her to hang on to her angry, negative feelings about you.

For example: Imagine that you're talking to your ex on the phone and she's being cold, unfriendly and saying things like, "What do you want? Why do you keep calling me when I've made it clear to you that it's over between us? What must I do to prove to you that I no longer have any feelings for you?"

Hearing her say things like that to you can easily make you feel despondent and like you don't stand a chance with her anymore.

You might even want to defend yourself by saying something like, "Please don't say that. All I'm asking for is a chance to make things right between us. Please just listen to me."

Yet, by responding like that, you will miss out on the opportunity to use her negativity as a way of sparking her feelings again and at the same time, gaining back her respect for handling her bitchiness so well.

So, what would be a better way to handle the situation if your ex says something like, "What do you want? Why do you keep calling me when I've made it clear to you that it's over between us? What must I do to prove to you that I no longer have any feelings for you?"

You might respond to her by saying something along the lines of, "Okay, fine. The only way I'll believe that you no longer have feelings for me is if you invite me to your house and cook me dinner. Only then, will I be convinced that it's over between us."

She will likely sound confused or annoyed and say something like, "What? How is that going to prove anything?"

You can then say in a joking way, "We both know you can't cook. So if you cook dinner for me, I'll take it as a sign that you're truly trying to kill me off," and have a laugh with her about that.

She will most-likely laugh, or at least smile at how you handled her bitchy attitude in a confident, yet humorous way.

By the way,

It doesn't matter if what you're saying is true or not.

If it is true and her cooking is really terrible, she will laugh because she will realize that you know her so well.

On the other hand, if her cooking is great, she will know that you're teasing her.

In either case, she will almost certainly feel curious about your newfound relaxed, confident attitude towards her, which will naturally spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

When that happens, her resistance begins to crumble and she opens herself up to the idea of talking to you over the phone and meeting up with you in person to see how things go.

You can then build up her feelings for you during interactions and get her back.

Another example of how to make your ex realize that she does love you isâ€¦

5. Re-attract her on a phone call and then don't contact her for a week

[image: Re-attract her on a phone call and then don't contact her for a week]

A really great way to re-spark your ex's feelings for you is by calling her on the phone and making her feel strong surges of respect and attraction for you again.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦

- Using humor to make her laugh, smile and feel relaxed during the call with you and get her to open up to seeing you in person.
Making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine vibe.
- Being assertive and bold, rather than submissive and timid when talking to her.
- Flirting with her to relight the sexual spark inside of her that has been missing for a long time.
- Letting her see (via the way you talk to her and respond to her) that you believe in your attractiveness and value to her by maintaining your confidence when she tries to make you feel insecure and unsure of yourself (e.g. by being cold and aloof towards you, saying things like, "You really need to believe me! I don't love you anymore and I'm not going to change my mind. You need to accept that!").
- Showing her that you've changed and matured since the break up and are now a new and improved man.

As long as you remain calm, confident and relaxed while you're talking to her, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

Then, when she sounds really relaxed and open, you can then say something along the lines of, "Well, anyway, it's been great talking to you again, but I've got to get going now. I've got to meet someone in about 15 minutes and I'm already running a bit late. Let's do this again though, okay? I'll call you again sometime. Take care. Bye," and then hang up the call after she acknowledges that the call is ending (e.g. she says, "Okay, bye! talk to you soon").

Then, make sure that you don't contact her at all, not even to send her a text or social media message, for a week.

Basically, you're giving her time to miss you and begin thinking things like, "Why isn't he calling me again when he said that he would? I don't even know why I care. After all I thought I was over him, but now I'm not so sure. I really miss him. He sounded so different on the phone. I actually want to talk to him again and see what's changed and different about him. Maybe we can work things out after all."

You're also making sure that when you do call her again after a week, she will be so excited to hear from you again, that she will want to say "Yes," when you suggest a meet up.

You can then meet up with her, fully reactivate her feelings for the new you and make her realize that she does love you and wants to be your girl again.

Make Her Realize That She Does Love You By Avoiding These 3 Mistakes

To make your ex drop her guard and open back up to you again, it's very important that you approach the ex back process in the correct way.

If you turn her off even more at this crucial time, you will just end up reducing your chances of getting her back quickly.

So make sure you're not making the following mistakes:

1. Trying to get her to love you by explaining how you feel about her

For your ex to want to get back into a relationship with you, there needs to be mutual feelings between you and her, or at least close to mutual feelings.

It can't all be about you wanting her back because you love her and need her.

That is one-sided.

So, if you want your ex back, make sure that you focus on re-sparking her feelings for you first, before anything else happens.

Initially, all it usually takes is a spark of respect and she will then start to feel attracted to you again.

When she feels attracted, her walls come down and she opens up to reconnecting with the love as well.

On the other hand, if you just focus on explaining to her how you feel about her, without sparking her feelings first, she's just going to keep pushing you away and likely thinking things like, "I don't care how he feels. It's how I feel that matters to me now and I know that I don't love him anymore."

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Continually apologizing for his previous mistakes

It's perfectly fine to apologize for making mistakes in the relationship with your ex.

However, one short, sincere apology is enough.

After apologizing once, it's much more important to then show her, via your attitude, actions, behavior and the way you respond to her that you've changed and improved in some of the ways that are important to her.

When she can see that you're now at a different level as a man (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more manly, more assertive) it will make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Then, the idea of reconnecting with her feelings of love for you starts to feel like something she may be willing to do.

However, if you just apologize to her repeatedly in the hope that she will suddenly realize that she loves you, you'll be very disappointed because she will likely just move on without you.

The next mistake to avoid making is

3. Not realizing that your approach to attraction just doesn't make her feel like she's in love with you

If you keep using the same approach with your ex that you've been using up to this point (e.g. being really nice and sweet to her, treating her like a friend, letting her call all the shots), she will most likely continue to push you away.

Here's the thing:

To make your ex want you back, you need to start creating feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside of her.

It won't work if she loves you as a person, but isn't sexually attracted to you.

So, focus on building those feelings inside of her and get her back, without her even realizing she's falling in love with you all over again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Is it Too Late For No Contact to Work?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 questions to ask yourself that will determine the correct answer for your situation:

1. Will she actually care if you stop contacting her?

[image: Will she actually care if you stop contacting her?]

Sometimes if a woman still has feelings for her ex, she may secretly be thinking things like, “I just want him to realize his mistakes. Maybe if I pretend to be angry with him for a while and like I don’t want to get back with him, it will shake him up and make him change. Then, I will forgive him and give him another chance.”

In a case like this, if her ex suddenly cuts off all contact with her and stops calling, texting or messaging her, it will likely shock her into running back to him.

However, that’s not always the case and sometimes this approach may even backfire, because the woman takes it as a sign that her ex is no longer interested in her.

So, rather than chase after him and risk being rejected by him, she focuses instead on fully getting over him and moving on.

Of course, in the majority of ex back cases, by the time they’ve broken up, the woman has disconnected from her feelings for her ex.

Additionally, if the guy spent a lot of time after the break up begging and pleading with her for another chance, or chasing after her in a needy, desperate way, she will likely be feeling even more annoyed and turned off by him.

So, if he then decides to use No Contact as a way of getting her back, rather than panic at the idea of losing him, she will usually feel relieved that he’s finally out of her life.

She will then likely focus on moving on and finding herself a new man as soon as possible to have sex with, date and fall in love with.

Then, when her ex gets back in touch with her (usually after 30 to 60 days), she will probably be over him and not interested in anything he has to offer her.

Here’s the thing!

Although using the No Contact Rule does work sometimes, it actually backfires more often than not.

The question you need to ask yourself is, “Am I willing to take the risk of losing her forever?”

If your answer is “No,” then it’s definitely not a good idea to use No Contact right now. Fortunately, there is a much easier and more effective ex back approach that you can begin using right away.

Essentially, you need to interact with your ex (ideally over the phone and in person, rather than via text) and begin re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again, showing her via your actions, behavior and attitude that you’re a new and improved man, building up the sexual tension between you and her and making her want to release that tension with kissing and sex).

The more drawn to you she feels in a way that makes her feel good, the more open she becomes to getting back with you again.

On the other hand, if you just ignore her, she will more than likely get over you and move on.

Another question to ask yourself isâ€¦|

2. Have you re-attracted her before going No Contact?

[image: Have you re-attracted her before going no contact?]

Attraction is the main thing that makes a woman drop her defenses and open up to the idea of being with a man sexually and romantically.

This is why re-sparking those feelings inside of your ex is the best approach to getting her back.

When she is feeling turned on, attracted, excited, happy and other similar positive emotions, she stops focusing on all the things about you that turned her off.

If you then decide to us No Contact for a few days (anything longer than a week is a waste of time), to make her miss you, it will actually work, because she is already attracted to you and the idea of losing you actually bothers her.

On the other hand, if you do nothing to reactivate her feelings for you and possibly even do things that turn her off even more (e.g. beg and plead for another chance, cry, get angry with her and insult her, behave like a jerk towards her), then if you start ignoring her, she will almost certainly feel relieved that she no longer has to deal with your emotional outbursts.

Additionally, she's not going to feel like she's missing out on much and won't feel drawn to you.

This is why, itâ€™s almost always better to stay in contact with your ex and focus on reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

You can then decide to ignore her for a few days to make her miss you even more if you want to, or, you can just go ahead and get her back without the need to play mind games with her.

That approach works almost every time.

Another question to ask yourself isâ€¦|

3. Do you know what approach to attraction she secretly wishes you would have used on herÂ during the relationship?

[image: Do you know what approach to attraction she secretly wishes you would have used on her during the relationship?]

Sometimes, a guy might use the No Contact Rule to get his ex back and it actually works in getting her to make the first move, only to lose her again once she realizes that he still doesnâ€™t get her real reasons for breaking up with him.

Imagine thisâ€¦|

A guy cuts off all contact with his ex for 30, maybe even 60 days to make her come running back to him.

However, after a few days or a week of not hearing from him, she calls him on the phone to say hi.

He then suggests that they meet up to say hello in person and she agrees.

She then arrives at the meet up feeling a bit excited about the possibility of working things out with him and getting back together again.

However, as the interaction progresses, she begins to notice that nothing about him has really changed and he still has no idea how to make her feel attracted in the ways that she really wants (e.g. she wants him to be more manly in his approach to her but instead he's submissive and timid, she wants him to flirt with her and create sexual sparks between them but he just acts like a neutral friend instead).

She then says something along the lines of, "Look, it was nice seeing you again, but I don't think we should see each other anymore. I realize now that our relationship is beyond repair and we are better off letting go and moving on. Please don't contact me after this."

He is then left feeling confused and wondering, "I thought No Contact had worked and we were going to get back together again, so what happened? Where did I go wrong?"

The answer is: He forgot to prepare himself to re-attract her sexually and romantically.

Instead, he used No Contact as his sole approach, which was enough to get her to call him, but not enough to make her want to get back with him.

For that to happen, he needed to offer her a new and improved attraction experience.

So, if you want to get your ex back using No Contact, make sure that you first understand the approach to attraction she wants you to use on her.

If you don't, you may end up with the same results as the above scenario.

By the way!

If you're unsure of what attraction approach your ex might secretly be wishing for, here are some examples to help you get started!

- Instead of letting her call all the shots during interactions with you, take control in an emotionally masculine manner and lead the way.
- Instead of being unsure of yourself and worrying about your chances with her, be confident and believe in your value to her.
- Instead of being nice or neutral around her and pretending that you only want to be her friend, flirt with her and create as much sexual tension between you and her so that she wants to release it with hugging, kissing and sex.
- Instead of being too serious around her and only talking about the relationship with her, use humor to make her laugh, smile and feel happy to be around you again.
- Instead of getting upset when she acts cold or aloof towards you, remain calm and easy-going.

The more she notices that you're making her feel attracted in the ways that she always secretly hoped you would, the more her sexual and romantic feelings for you begin coming back.

You can then get her back and enjoy a new and improved relationship.

Another question to ask yourself is!

4. How long are you planning on sticking to No Contact?

Generally speaking, the people who recommend using No Contact as a way of getting an ex woman back, suggest that the optimum amount of time to ignore her is 30 to 60 days.

As a result, many guys will sit around waiting for weeks and months (some guys even take it to an extreme and wait for years) for their ex to come running back.

Yet, in almost all of those cases, rather than make her come back, several other, negative things happen instead.

For example: Some of those things areâ€¦|

She forgets all about him, meets someone else, falls in love and moves on.

Remember: In most ex back cases, a woman has already disconnected with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her guy by the time she breaks up with him.

So, if he then ignores her for weeks and months, rather than feel disappointed and worried that sheâ€™s losing him, she takes it as a clear sign that the relationship is truly over and she then focuses on moving on.

Another negative thing that might happen isâ€¦|

Waiting around for her slowly destroys his confidence with other women.

Although a guy might initially feel good about his decision to use No Contact on his ex, as the days, weeks and months go by, his confidence begins to erode.

He may then start to wonder things like, â€œWhy isnâ€™t she calling me? How can she not be missing me by now? I guess it was too late for No Contact to work. Obviously I blew it and sheâ€™s already forgotten about me. Maybe she never even cared for me at all. Maybe she only went out with me in the first place because she felt sorry for me and then she realized Iâ€™m not that loveable, so now she doesnâ€™t want anything to do with me anymore. If she doesnâ€™t want me back, what chance do I have of ever attracting another woman? Itâ€™s hopeless. Iâ€™m just not good enough. I guess Iâ€™m doomed to be one of those guys who are destined to be alone for life.â€

He then gives up all hope of getting his ex back, or of ever meeting a new woman and ends up being alone and bitter.

Another negative thing that might happen isâ€¦|

It makes him feel unworthy of her.

In some cases, the longer a guy goes without interacting with his ex, the more perfect she becomes in his eyes.

He forgets about all the things that used to annoy him about her and all her mistakes and he instead begins to think things like, â€œShe was my ideal woman and I ruined it. Iâ€™m such a jerk for what I did to her. I donâ€™t blame her for breaking up with me and not contacting me all this time. If I was in her shoes I would do the same thing. Sheâ€™s just too good for me and she knows it and now so do I.â€

Yet, what he doesnâ€™t realize is that feeling unworthy of his ex only makes him seem less attractive to her and other women (i.e. because women are instinctively turned off by emotional weakness in men).

If he then happens to interact with his ex, she will quickly be able to pick up on that based on his tonality, body language and the way he talks and behaves around her and it will only confirm to her that she made the right decision to break up with him.

These are some of the reason why itâ€™s very important that you know how long you intend to stick with your No Contact approach.

Remember: The longer you stay out of touch with your ex, the more you risk losing as a result (e.g. her, your confidence, your belief in your value to her and other women).

So, don't let that happen to you.

If you insist on using No Contact, then make sure it's not for anything longer than a week.

Alternatively, if you've already realized that ignoring your ex is a waste of time in almost all ex back cases, then focus instead on using an approach that actually works and get her back (i.e. interact with her, re-spark her feelings, kiss, have sex and start a new relationship with her).

Get Her Back Faster By Avoiding These 3 Mistakes

If your goal is to get your ex back sooner than later, then it's better to do the kind of things that will re-attract her now, rather than things turn her off or make her begin to forget about you and move on.

So, if you are serious about getting her back, make sure you don't make any of the following mistakes:

1. Begging and pleading with her and then going No Contact to hopefully make her care

If you've already made it obvious to your ex that you want her back by begging and pleading with her and saying things like, "Please don't throw away what we had together. I know I stuffed up but I can change. Please just give me one more chance. I promise that things will be different. I will do whatever it takes to make it work between us this time around. Please baby, I beg you!" then if you suddenly cut off all contact with her, she's more than likely going to know you're up to something.

The truth is, most women have come across the No Contact technique on the internet or heard about it from their friends, as a way of getting an ex back, so chances are high, your ex has heard of it too.

So, rather than get the effect you're hoping for (i.e. for her to miss you and come running back), she will instead likely see it as lost, desperate attempt to get her to change her mind.

Here's the thing:

If your ex has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, ignoring her is hardly the way to reignite those feelings in her.

Instead, she will see it as another sign of desperation and she will lose even more respect for you.

So, if you don't want that to happen, stop trying wimpy tricks to hopefully re-attract your ex back, and just man up and re-attract her for real.

In other words, interact with her on a phone call or in person and say and do the types of things that will spark her feelings for you again (e.g. make her laugh and smile and feel good, flirt with her to create sexual tension, show her that you're a new and improved man now).

When you do that, you'll be surprised at how quickly her mind changes.

You do NOT have to sit around waiting for 30-60 days for her to change her mind.

That approach rarely if ever works for men who want to get a woman back.

No Contact is best used when a woman wants to get a man back and she cuts off contact with him after getting dumped.

Yet, for a man who wants to get a woman back, what he will find is that if he cuts off contact with her when she isn't attracted to him anymore, she will just move on.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

2. Not realizing that No Contact is more about healing and less about re-attracting TheÂ original purpose of No Contact is to get over an ex, not get them back.

OfÂ course, some women do come back if the guy stops contacting her, but not is she's turned off by him.

So, rather than waste even more time by ignoring your ex for 30 or 60 days, youâ€¦ are better off getting her on a phone call or to a meet with you, where you can begin reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

The more respect and attraction you make her feel, the more she will want to give you another chance.

However, if you just ignore her, youâ€¦ are giving her even more time to think about why sheâ€¦ is happy to be rid of you.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Giving her too much space and she then moves on Another drawback to using No Contact on a ex woman as a way of getting her back, is that because youâ€¦ are not around to re-spark her feelings, someone else can come along and do it instead.

So, while youâ€¦ are waiting out your 30 or 60 days and hoping that sheâ€¦ will eventually want you back, she will most-likely be meeting, having sex with, dating and getting into a relationship with another man.

Donâ€¦ let that happen to you.

If you want your ex back, donâ€¦ ignore her to make it happen.

Instead, be courageous enough to take action right now.

Call her or meet up with her, re-attract her and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Resist the Urge to Text Your Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 things you can do to resist texting her:

1. Set a goal of how long you will wait to contact her again

[image: Set a goal of how long you will wait to contact her again]

By setting yourself a definite time frame, it will prevent you from either texting your ex too soon and catching her when she's still feeling too many negative emotions about the break up so she is cold and unresponsive towards you, or alternatively, taking too long to get in touch so she assumes you're not interested in getting back with her and she moves on.

So, what is the right amount of time to wait before getting in touch with your ex again?

In most cases, 3 to 7 days is more than enough.

During that time, she will have a chance to stop focusing on all the things about you that she doesn't like (e.g. how you weren't manly enough for her so she didn't feel sexually attracted to you, how you were too insecure and as a result became clingy and needy, how you always let her have her way so she felt more emotionally dominant than you) and begin to miss the things she does like about you (e.g. the way you always made her feel loved and appreciated, that you're a really good guy, how she can always depend on you to be there for her in times of trouble, the way you know how to make her smile when she's feeling stressed or down).

However, don't make the mistake of thinking that if 3 to 7 days will make her miss you a bit, then waiting for a few weeks or even months will make her miss you a lot.

It just doesn't work that way.

Yes, that can work if your ex is still in love with you and is secretly hoping that you and her will get back together again.

However, if she's like the majority of women who have broken up with a guy, she's probably no longer feeling much (or any) love, respect and attraction for you right now.

So, if you ignore her for longer than a week, she will put her relationship with you behind her and focus on moving on and finding herself a new man to have sex with, date and fall in love with.

Don't let that happen to you.

In almost all ex back cases, 3 to 7 days is the perfect amount of time to wait before you contact her. You can then text her as a way of opening the lines of communication between you and her and get her on a phone call or to a meet up with you.

Important: If you want to get her back, you can't rely on texting to make it happen.

You have to meet up with her in person so that you can fully reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you so she wants to give you another chance.

Another thing you can do to resist the urge to text your ex isâ

2. Prepare to attract her in new ways when you text her and talk to her on the phone

[image: Prepare to attract her in new ways when you text her and talk to her on the phone]

When you finally do get in touch with your ex, what you don't want to do is turn her off and make her wonder things like, What does he want? or, Why is he even bothering to contact me?

This is why it's very important that you prepare to attract her in new ways than you did before.

Remember: What worked on sparking her feelings for you when she first met you (e.g. flowers, love letters, being extra nice to her and letting her call the shots), is unlikely to impress her a second time.

Instead, she will probably think something along the lines of, Is this all he knows how to do? Doesn't he get that things have changed and that the only way I will consider giving him another chance is if he can prove to me that he will be different this time? However, based on his approach so far, it's pretty clear that nothing has really changed and he's still stuck at the same level he was at before.

She will then likely pull away from you even more and possibly even come across as being cold, bitchy and unresponsive towards you, no matter what you say or do.

This is why, if you truly want to get your ex back, make sure that you use the time that you're not interacting with her to prepare yourself to properly re-attract her.

Don't contact her and offer her the same old attraction experience that she got used to and tired of before.

Make her feel attracted to you in new and interesting ways, so she can't resist giving you another chance, or at least meet up with you and have sex with you, to see how she feels after that.

Here are some examples of how to do it:

Show her by way of your attitude, conversation style, behavior and the way you respond to her that you have already fixed some of the issues that were turning her off before (e.g. if you were needy and clingy before, you're now more emotionally independent and are happy and forward moving in your life without her, if you weren't man enough before causing her to feel more dominant than you, you're now more emotionally masculine and stand up to her in an assertive, yet loving way when she's out of line, if you were insecure and self-doubting before, you're now more confident and believe in your value as a man).

React differently to what she says and does, (e.g. if previously you let her get away with being rude, disrespectful or demanding, you now stand up to her in a loving, yet assertive way, if you previously felt jealous when she talked about other guys with you, you now remain calm and laugh at her attempts to make you feel unsure of yourself and your value to her).

Flirt with her to make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman in your presence, rather than being too nice or neutral with her so she doesn't feel sexually attracted to you.

The more she interacts with you and realizes that you're nothing like the guy she broke up with, the more attracted to you she will begin to feel.

When that happens, her guard will naturally begin to come down and she then becomes open to giving you another chance.

Another thing you can do to resist the urge to text your ex isâ€¦!

3. Do a few fun, new things that will make you feel alive again without her

Right now you may be thinking something like, â€œI donâ€™t want to think about being happy and how good my life can be without her. I want her back and thatâ€™s all I want to focus on.â€

Thatâ€™s perfectly understandable.

However, itâ€™s important for your emotional attractiveness that you push yourself to feel happy and alive without her.

Itâ€™s not about moving on and leaving her behind.

Instead, itâ€™s about making yourself feel good, regardless of whether sheâ€™s with you right now or not.

At the same time, itâ€™s a good way to take your mind off your ex and help you resist the urge to text her.

Unfortunately though, one of the most common mistakes guys make in a situation like yours is to think something along the lines of, â€œIf I start having fun and enjoying myself without my ex, if she finds out, she will assume that Iâ€™m over her and that I donâ€™t want her back. Then I will lose any chance I might have had of getting her back. This is why itâ€™s better if I just remain low key and not do anything that will convince her that Iâ€™m over her. Then, hopefully, she will realize how much I still care for her and she might then give me another chance with her.â€

Yet, thatâ€™s the worst thing that a guy can do, because it makes him come across as needy and emotionally weak.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

The more you put your life on hold and stay stuck waiting for some kind of contact from your ex, the harder it becomes for you to resist texting her (usually in a needy, desperate way) in a moment of weakness when youâ€™re really missing her.

She then realizes that youâ€™re feeling lost and miserable without her and rather than feel impressed by it, she instead loses even more respect for you for not being manly enough to be able to get on with your life without her.

This is why itâ€™s so important that you focus on having fun in your life without your ex.

Not only is that good for your mental health (i.e. you feel more confident and emotionally strong for being able to pick yourself up in a difficult situation), it is also a great way to regain some of your exâ€™s respect and attraction for you.

When you feel genuinely content in your life without your ex, you will also automatically become more attractive to her and other women (i.e. because women are instinctively attracted to men who are not emotionally dependent).

She then naturally becomes more open to interacting with you again, because she now feels drawn to you in a good way.

You can then build up her feelings for you and guide her back into a relationship with you.

Another thing you can do to resist the urge to text your ex isâ€¦!

4. Focus on regaining control of your emotions, so you will be more emotionally attractive to her when you do interact with her

[image: Regain control of your emotions to be more emotionally attractive to her]

Right now you might be feeling okay and are managing to resist the urge to text your ex all the time, but what happens if you go out with your friends, have a little bit too much to drink and then begin thinking about her?

Will you be able to resist contacting her then?

Alternatively, what if you are sitting at home alone and seeing signs of your ex everywhere around your house (e.g. a photo of you and her together, a favorite cushion that she left behind, her old toothbrush still in the bathroom) and begin thinking things like, â€œI wonder what sheâ€™s doing right now? Is she also missing me, or has she already forgotten about me and busy moving on with another guy?â€

Will you be able to stay strong then and not text her?

Well, if you donâ€™t regain control of your emotions, the answer to the above questions will almost certainly be, â€œNo.â€

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

If you are texting your ex while in a state of desperation or panic, you will only turn her off more.

This is why, you need to keep a cool head at this very crucial time and not do anything you will regret later on, or that will convince your ex that she made the right decision by breaking up with you.

You need to get rid of the feeling of neediness and desperation and relax in the knowledge that you can re-attract her and get her back.

By the wayâ€¦!

Thereâ€™s a simple breathing technique called â€œtactical breathingâ€ that the police and military use to relax and counteract the effects of adrenaline during critical situations, that you can use whenever you feel the urge to text your ex.

It will delay you for a few minutes and allow for the impulse to pass, thus preventing you from doing something silly.

Hereâ€™s how you do it:

- Breathe in deeply through your nose for a count of four, while expanding your stomach.
- Hold that breath in for a count of four.
- Slowly exhale through your mouth for a count of four.
- Hold your breath, with your lungs empty, for a count of four.

Repeat this cycle, starting from the beginning, several times until you feel calmer and more in control of your emotions.

Then, if you decide that you want to text your ex, you will be in the right frame of mind and will naturally come across as being emotionally strong, rather than sounding needy and desperate.

3 Problems You Might Encounter When Texting Your Ex

Getting an ex back is easier than you might think.

However, that doesn't mean you won't encounter any problems along the way.

Here are 3 of the most common ones:

1. Waiting for a while to text, sending it and then losing confidence when she doesn't reply

Sometimes a guy will successfully resist the urge to text his ex after their break up, so when he finally reaches out to her, he might then be feeling pretty good about himself.

In his mind he may even be hoping that his ex will be happy to hear from him now, because he didn't come on too strong at the beginning of the break up and gave her some time to miss him.

Yet, when she doesn't respond to him, those hopes get crushed and he then begins thinking things like, â€œWhy is she ignoring me? Maybe resisting the urge to text her was the wrong thing to do after all. Maybe I should have contacted her right away and tried to convince her to give me another chance. Now it's too late. She's not interested and she probably has a new man already. Damn it! I've lost her forever!â€

Yet, thinking like that only causes him to lose confidence in himself and in his attractiveness and value to her.

He stops believing in his ability to reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for him and gives up on the idea of getting her back.

What he doesn't realize is that he's the one giving up, not her.

Yes, she might have ignored his text, but that doesn't mean she's not interested in getting back together.

There are many reasons why a woman might not reply to a text from her ex (e.g. she's testing his confidence, she's worried that he might reject her if she seems too eager).

So, if you lose confidence and hope when she doesn't reply, you might miss your chance of getting her back.

Don't make that mistake.

Believe in yourself and get her back, even if she initially pretends not to be interested in you anymore.

Another problem you might encounter isâ€¦!

2. Hoping for clear signals that she wants a relationship

Most guys make the mistake of assuming that as soon as they begin interacting with their ex again after the break up, all discussions and conversations need to be about how they can get back together again.

Yet, what they don't understand is that a relationship is the last step of the ex back process, not the first.

There are several other, important steps that a guy needs to go through, before his ex will drop her guard and give him another chance.

What are those steps?

Respect. Attraction. Love.

He needs to first reactivate those feelings inside of her and make her want to be with him again for her own reasons (i.e. she feels good to be around him again, she feels excited and turned on, she feels like she can look up to him as her man again rather than look down on him).

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't waste time waiting for a clear signal from her that she wants a relationship.

Just get her on a call and begin reactivating some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Then, meet up with her in person so that she can experience the new you for herself.

When she sees that you really are a better man now, she will naturally drop her guard and open back up to her feelings of love for you.

You need to be emotionally courageous enough to take the lead in the ex back process and get her back.

Another problem you might encounter is

3. Not knowing that it's easy to get an ex woman back if he focuses on attraction and sexual tension

Sometimes a guy will try to resist the urge to text his ex, because secretly he expects her to reject him because she told him that she doesn't have feelings for him anymore.

Yet, here's the thing

Just because your ex has disconnected from her feelings for you right now, it doesn't mean she will feel the same way after you've actively made her feel strong surges of attraction and built up the sexual tension between you and her.

So, don't waste time resisting contacting her.

You actually need to text her, or even better, call her or meet up with her, so that you can reawaken her feelings for you and make her want to be your girl again.

Just take control of the ex back process, re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship with you that she always wanted but never got.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Wants Nothing to Do With Me Now

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why your ex wants nothing to do with you at the moment:

1. You were trying to get her back by offering her an attraction experience that she's not interested in

[image: You were trying to get her back by offering her an attraction experience that she's not interested in]

Sometimes when a guy gets broken up with, he gets so caught up trying to get his ex back as quickly as possible, that he forgets to make the necessary adjustments to his thinking, behavior and attitude in ways that will actually excite her and attract her back.

As a result, he might end up offering her things that she doesn't really want or care about and this only turns her off even more.

For example: He might decide to give her all the power now by letting her call all the shots (e.g. he only does whatever she says or wants, he's nicer to her, he's more considerate) if she'll just give him a chance.

Yet, rather than make her think, "Wow, he's really trying his best to make me happy. I love that he's willing to do whatever I want. It makes me feel so attracted to him and like I want to be with him again," he instead comes across as desperate and like he's putting on an act to win her over.

This convinces her that he just doesn't understand how to create the kind of relationship dynamic between them that makes her feel drawn to him again and want to be a good, loving and devoted woman to him.

She may then say something along the lines of, "Sorry, but I don't want anything to do with you anymore. What we had is over and the sooner you accept that, the sooner we can both get on with our lives."

This is why it's very important that if you want your ex to open back up to being with you again, you offer her a new and improved attraction experience.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are:

- Instead of being insecure and feeling like she's too good for you, you start believing in yourself and in your value to her. You now know that she's the one who is lucky to have a guy like you.
- Instead of being needy and clingy in the way that you think, talk and behave, you now start being a truly confident and self-assured man around her. Yes, you love her and want her, but you don't need her to feel good about yourself.
- Instead of being submissive around her and putting up with her bad behavior like you used to (e.g. when she sulks or throws a tantrum, when she demands that you do things her way), you now stand up to her and put her back in her place in a loving, but assertive manner.
- Instead of being a nice guy who doesn't say or do anything without her approval or say-so, you now start being more assertive towards her, while still being a good guy to her.

- Instead of always being on your best behavior and treating her like a neutral friend, you now flirt with her and create strong sparks of sexual attraction between you and her.

The more that you give your ex the kind of attraction experience she always wanted from you, but never got, the less sure she will feel about her decision to break up with you

Suddenly, she begins to wonder things like, â€œWhat if I donâ€™t give him another chance and end up regretting it? What if heâ€™s really changed and is now the man I always wanted him to be? What if I reject him and then never find another man who can make me feel the way that he does now?â€

When she begins thinking like that, her defenses naturally begin to come down and she then becomes open to talking to you over the phone and seeing you in person to see what happens from there.

It then becomes easy for you to build on her feelings of respect and get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex wants nothing to do with you now isâ€¦|

2. You begged and pleaded for too long

[image: You begged and pleaded for too long]

The shock of breaking up and being faced with the possibility of losing his woman forever might cause a guy to react in a way that he wouldnâ€™t ordinarily do.

Suddenly, he panics and begins begging and pleading with her to change her mind and give him another chance.

For example: He might show up at her house unexpectedly, text, e-mail, phone or message her via social media and say things like, â€œPlease baby, donâ€™t do this to me! Donâ€™t walk away from what we had together. I know I stuffed up, but I just canâ€™t cope without you in my life! I beg you! Please just give me one more chance. I give you my word that Iâ€™ll do anything you want me to do to make you happy. Just give me one more chance! I promise you wonâ€™t regret it. Please!â€

Although, this is not the ideal reaction for a guy to have (i.e. because it makes him seem desperate and needy and makes his ex woman lose even more respect for him as a man), itâ€™s not the end of the world.

As long as he quickly realizes that his begging and pleading is unattractive to her and stops doing it right away, he can recover from his mistake.

He can then focus on saying and doing the types of things that will reactivate her feelings for him (e.g. being confident regardless of what she says and does to push him away, using humor to make her laugh and smile and take away the awkwardness of interacting with each other, flirting with her to create a sexual vibe) and make her see him in a new, more positive light.

Unfortunately though, this sometimes doesnâ€™t happen and the guy instead continues to beg and plead with his ex for another chance, long after he should have stopped.

As a result, rather than make his ex think, â€œHe must really love me if heâ€™s willing to beg me for another chance for so long! After all this time he still hasnâ€™t stopped. This is so flattering! Itâ€™s like a romantic movie where the hero doesnâ€™t stop begging until he gets his girl back. Clearly, heâ€™s not going to give up until I give him another chance. How can I say no to that?â€ sheâ€™s usually going to feel even more turned off by him instead.

Why?

A womanâ€™s attraction to a guy is based mostly on his ability to make her feel like she can look up to him and respect him as a man.

So, although she may overlook his mistake if he begs and pleads with her once off and then quickly recovers himself and becomes a better, more emotionally strong man from that point onwards, if he continues to do it for too long, she will naturally begin to feel turned off by what she perceives as his needy, emotionally weak behavior.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, you need to focus on regaining her respect for you first. When she can respect you, she will naturally also begin to feel attracted to you and from there, reconnecting with her feelings of love becomes possible.

On the other hand, if your only approach to getting her back is begging and pleading with her to change her mind, you will unintentionally be reducing your chances by appearing needy and weak and turning her off even more.

Another possible reason why your ex wants nothing to do with you now isâ€¦!

3. She doesn't believe that you have changed or will ever change

In some cases, a guy will focus solely on the idea of getting his ex back, without ever taking a moment to think about what caused her to break up with him in the first place.

Then, when he interacts with her, his attitude, thinking, conversation style and behavior is exactly the same as it was before.

Hereâ€™s the thing thoughâ€¦!

If a woman gets a sense that her ex hasn't changed, or won't be able to change, or doesn't even know how or what to change (e.g. she wanted him to be more manly because he was too much of a pushover in the relationship with her, she wanted him to be more emotionally independent because he was too clingy and needy, she wanted him to be more emotionally masculine thus allowing her to be more emotionally feminine around him, but he has no clue how to be like that), she won't consider giving him another chance, no matter how much he wants her to.

This is why, if you want your ex to want to be your girl again, you need to show her via your actions, behavior and the way you talk and interact with her that you've already changed and improved some of the things that matter to her.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦!

- Becoming more confident and self-assured about your attractiveness and value to her, rather than feeling insecure and unsure of yourself with her.
- Improving your ability to make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman in your presence, rather than making her feel neutral or even worse, turned off by you.
- Being more manly in your attitude, thinking and behavior, rather than allowing her to dominate you with her confident personality.
- Focusing on achieving some of your own goals and dreams in life, rather than giving everything up to follow her and becoming clingy and needy as a result.

When your ex can see for herself that you really have changed and are now a new and improved man and that if she gets back with you, youâ€¢re not going to go back to making the same mistakes as before, sheâ€¢ll be able to start seeing you in a more positive way.

When that happens, her defenses will come down and she will open back up to talking to you and being with you and you can then fully re-attract her and get her back.

However, if you try to get her back without changing or improving anything about yourself first, sheâ€¢s likely just going to keep saying things like, â€¢I donâ€¢t want anything to do with you anymore!â€¢ and pushing you away.

Another possible reason why your ex wants nothing to do with you now isâ€¢!

4. You still don't know the real reasons why she broke up with you

[image: You still don't know the real reasons why she broke up with you]

Often, the main cause of a break up is not the big things (e.g. cheating, arguments and disagreements), but rather the very subtle things that build up and erode a womanâ€¢s feelings over time.

For example: Some of the more subtle reasons a woman will break up with a guy areâ€¢!

- How he talks to her (e.g. he talks down to her, is disrespectful).
- How he reacts to her (e.g. he gives in to her too easily or gets angry with her when she pushes his buttons).
- How he portrays himself (e.g. heâ€¢s shy and unsure of himself in social situations, heâ€¢s clingy and needy with her).
- How he judges her (e.g. when she makes a mistake, or doesnâ€¢t do things his way).
- How he tries to change her (e.g. physically, or by expecting her to say and do what he wants).
- How he tries to make her feel insecure (e.g. by putting her down and mocking her).
- How he feels insecure when she tests him (e.g. she rolls her eyes at him, pretends to disagree with him during a conversation, or acts like sheâ€¢s annoyed about things that she doesnâ€¢t really feel annoyed about and he begins doubting himself and her love for him).

This is why itâ€¢s so important that you get to the bottom of what really turned your ex off about you.

When you do, not only can you quickly change and improve those things about yourself, then when you interact with her and she notices that youâ€¢ve understood her deeper, secret reasons for breaking up with you, she will automatically begin to feel surges of respect and attraction for you again.

Even if she initially felt 100% certain that she wants nothing to do with you now, after she experiences the new you, she wonâ€¢t be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

When that happens, she will drop her guard and allow herself to open back up to the idea of interacting with you more over the phone and in person, to see if you and her can work things out after all.

Another possible reason why your ex wants nothing to do with you now isâ€¢!

5. She doesn't see any reason to give the relationship another chance at this point

[image: She doesn't see any reason to give the relationship another chance at this point]

Unless you're saying and doing things to reactivate your ex's sexual and romantic feelings for you, it's highly unlikely that she's going to want to get back together again with you.

You've got to be active to get her back, rather than sitting around hoping she will come to her senses and change her mind all by herself.

This is why, you need to make sure that you use every opportunity you get to interact with her (e.g. via text, on social media and especially over the phone and in person) to make her have some feelings for you again.

When you focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good to be interacting with you, it's much less likely that she's going to want to move on and forget about you.

In fact, the more you re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you, the more she will be thinking things like, "I know I said that I want nothing to do with him, but suddenly that's not true anymore. I was so convinced that I'm over him, yet now I look forward to hearing from him and even feel a bit disappointed if I don't. What is happening to me? Why am I feeling this way about him again? What should I do?"

The truth is, making your ex feel like that (i.e. respectful, attracted, excited) is the easiest, fastest way to get her back.

So, stop worrying about what she said she wants and start interacting with her and making her feel respect and attraction for you again.

When you reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you once more, she stops focusing on your past mistakes and how bad things were before and she begins to feel drawn to you in a whole new and exciting way.

Soon she can't stop herself from wanting to interact with you more and more, even though she might previously have thought that she didn't want anything to do with you.

From there, you can build on that spark of attraction (e.g. by showing her that you've truly changed in some of the ways that matter to her, using humor to bring down her defenses, being more manly with her and maintaining your confidence regardless of how cold or even bitchy she's being towards you) and make her want to come back to you.

On the other hand, if you just sit around feeling discouraged and accepting what she says to you (i.e. that she wants nothing to do with you now), she won't see any reason to give the relationship another chance and she will then almost certainly move on and find herself a new man.

Don't let that happen to you!

Interact with her, re-spark her feelings and get her back.

You can do it!

Where Guys Go Wrong With an Ex Who Wants Nothing to Do

With Them

Some guys don't know how to handle an ex who is saying that she wants nothing to do with them.

As a result, they end up making mistakes that turn her off even more and lose their chance of getting her back.

For example: 3 common mistakes guys make are

1. Thinking that it's over forever

Although it might not seem possible to change a woman's mind when she's saying things like, "I want nothing to do with you now," accepting her decision and giving up and walking away is the worst thing a guy can do who wants to get his ex back.

Here's the thing

Even when a woman hates a guy, if he interacts with her and sparks some respect and attraction inside of her (e.g. by showing her that he's truly changed and improved in some of the ways that matter to her, making her feel like a feminine woman in his presence, making her laugh and smile and feel good to be around him again), her feelings will automatically begin to change.

She might not want them to, but she won't have any control over them (i.e. because when you display traits that women naturally find attractive, she will feel attracted automatically, whether she wants to or not).

However, if you give up at the first sign of resistance from her (i.e. when she says that she wants nothing to do with you now), you may lose your chance of getting her back.

So, you have to be ready to maintain your confidence, no matter what she says or does to push you away from her for good.

Then, you need to spark her feelings of respect and attraction for the new and improved you every chance you get.

When that happens, even though she may have once said that she wants nothing to do with you, her guard will naturally come down and she will open back up to the idea of being with you again.

Another common mistake that guys make is

2. Getting angry at her

Sometimes, a guy might feel so frustrated with his ex for rejecting him, that he may begin to get angry with her.

In his mind he might be thinking things like, "How can she say that she doesn't want anything to do with me now, after everything we had together? If she really loved me, she would at least be willing to give me one more chance. She's just being selfish, or she never really loved me at all!"

He may then lash out at his ex.

Essentially, he's likely hoping to shake her up and make her see things from his perspective and then give him one more chance.

Yet, getting angry with an ex woman is usually the worst thing a guy can do.

Rather than make her change her mind, it usually only makes her think something like, â€œWho does he think he is anyway? Iâ€™m not his property! This just proves to me that heâ€™s not the guy I want to be with.â€

She then closes herself off from him even more and it becomes even more difficult for him to interact with her so that he can spark her feelings and get her back.

Another common mistake that guys make isâ€¦

3. Continuing to try to convince her to change her mind

In some cases, a guy will use every interaction he has with his ex (e.g. via text, social media, on the phone or in person) to try and convince her to change her mind.

For example: He might say things like, â€œIf you ever loved me, please just give me one more chance. Iâ€™ll do whatever it takes to make things right between us. I promise our relationship will be better this time. I will be the man you want me to be.â€

Yet, that rarely (if ever) works, unless the guy has actually sparked a womanâ€™s sexual and romantic feelings for him first.

If he has, her defenses will be down and she will likely be thinking that if she doesnâ€™t give him another chance, she may end up regretting it later on.

However, if he hasnâ€™t, sheâ€™ll see no reason to change her mind and will then focus on moving on as quickly as possible with a new man so that she can then say to her ex, â€œSorry, but itâ€™s too late. I told you that I want nothing to do with you and now I have a new boyfriend. So, please stop trying to convince me to change my mind, because itâ€™s too late. Iâ€™ve moved on and you need to do the same. Bye.â€

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend and I Are Having a Break and She Admitted That She Has a New Crush

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If she has a new crush, here are 5 things you should do right now to ensure that you don't lose her:

1. Understand that it almost certainly means she is intending on dating him during your break if she can

[image: She is intending on dating him during your break if she can]

Being on break means that your girlfriend is free to explore and do what she wants.

If she can get her crush to like her and make a move on her, she may decide to date him to fully explore her feelings for him.

If he then makes her feel attracted in ways that you don't, or haven't been able to do for a long time (e.g. he's more attentive and loving towards her, makes her feel like a feminine woman when she's with him rather than like a friend, is more confident than you, behaves in a more manly way than you), she will naturally start to feel more drawn to him than she does to you.

She might then begin thinking things like, "I know I'm currently on a break with my boyfriend, but I'm beginning to think that I don't want to get back together again. I just don't feel the same way about him anymore. My new crush has opened my eyes to what I've been missing out on and I like how I feel when I'm with him (e.g. excited, turned on, sexy and desirable). On the other hand, when I'm with my boyfriend, everything feels drab, boring and old. I think it's time for us to admit that our relationship has gone stale and it's time that we both move on and make a fresh start with someone else."

When that happens, it's only a matter of time before she says something along the lines of, "Look, I'm really sorry, but I've decided to make our break up permanent. I really do care for you, but I'm no longer in love with you in a boyfriend-girlfriend kind of way. I think our relationship has run its course and it's better if we both just accept being friends, move on and find someone else."

So, if you don't want that to happen to you, you need to take action now, rather than wait around and hope your girlfriend won't act out on her feelings for her new crush.

You need to

2. Interact with her and make her feel attracted in different ways than you usually do

The main thing that you have in your favor that your girlfriend's new crush doesn't have at this moment, is that you know her better than he does.

This means that even though she feels drawn to him right now, you can still interact with her every chance you get over the phone and particularly in person and say and do the things that you know for sure she loves and feels most attracted to you for (e.g. you're loving and attentive, you're ambitious and determined to succeed, you are trustworthy and reliable).

However, you also have to start attracting her in new ways as well.

Remember: The things that your girlfriend finds attractive about her new crush, are likely the things she feels were lacking in her relationship with you.

For example: Her new crush might be a bit of a bad boy who doesn't let her get away with bad behavior (e.g. when she's being disrespectful towards him, throwing tantrums when she doesn't get her way).

Instead, he playfully puts her back in her place and lets her see that he is the man and she needs to respect him because of it, rather than being a pain in the butt around him.

If you're the kind of guy who assumes that letting a woman always get her way is the best approach to take, you may think, "How can she put up with that kind of treatment from him? When we were together I always let her have her way. I'm sure she won't stay attracted to him for very long. Surely she will realize that I treated her better and she will then want me back, right?"

Yet, what you might not realize is that although a woman likes to be with a man who is good to her, if you hand over all your power to her and submit to everything she wants, it becomes very difficult for her to respect you.

If she can't respect you, she also can't feel real attraction for you and as a result, she feels more drawn to her new crush instead, because she can't dominate him emotionally.

This is why, if you want to re-attract your girlfriend and make her choose you over her new crush, you need to make sure that your approach to attraction is new and different from now on (i.e. if you've always been extra nice and submissive towards her, start being more ballsy while still being a good guy to her).

Only when she feels attracted to you in new ways, will she stop feeling more attracted to her new crush and other guys and open back up to you again.

She won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and then, the idea of losing you will start to worry her.

She will then naturally want to talk to you and see you in person more often to see how she feels.

This is why, the next thing you need to do is

3. Start fixing the subtle things about you that turned her off

Of course, it won't matter that you're re-attracting your girlfriend in new and exiting ways if she realizes that deep down you're still the same guy as before.

So, to successfully reactivate her feelings for you and make her want to get back together again, you first need to understand her real, more subtle reasons for breaking up with you and start fixing those things about yourself.

Then, when you interact with her, she will be able to see that not only are you able to give her a new and improved attraction experience, you've also gone deeper than that and have improved on the more subtle things about you that have been turning her off.

That causes her to feel drawn to you and intrigued by her new, interesting feelings for you and makes her want to focus on fixing things with you, rather than exploring her feelings for her new crush.

For example: Some of the more subtle things that might turn a woman off and make her want to take a break from her guy area!

- His inability to lead in the relationship and instead expecting her to make all the decisions.
- Being unable to cope with her moods (e.g. when she's sulking, throwing a tantrum, being argumentative), taking everything personally and getting overly emotional about it (e.g. he gets angry, annoyed, upset, sucks up to her).
- He doesn't put in any effort to get on with her family or friends and instead avoids them and expects her to go to get-togethers without him.
- He takes everything too seriously and never seems to relax and just have fun.
- He expects her to agree with him on everything (e.g. politics, sports), or even when he's wrong or out of line.
- He spends more time playing video games with his friends than he does with her, so she feels excluded and like she's in second place.
- He isn't overly affectionate towards her (e.g. doesn't like to hold hands or kiss) so she feels insecure about her attractiveness to him.

By improving the subtle things about yourself, you make your girlfriend feel heard and understood. This automatically sparks her feelings of respect and attraction for you and she then feels happy to work on the relationship and get back together again.

On the other hand, if you avoid this important step, you will only be able to re-attract her for as long as it takes for her to realize you're still stuck at the same level you were at before.

She will then feel even more attracted to her new crush and she will either continue saying things like, "I'm not ready to get back together yet. I need more space," in the hope that you and her will eventually drift apart, or she will simply say, "Sorry, but this break has made me realize that we're not right for each other. I think it's best for both of us if we break up and move on."

So, don't let it get to that point.

At the same time, you need to also!

4. Start enjoying your life without her

This is hard for most guys to do and some may even wonder things like, "If she notices that I'm having fun without her, won't it make her angry and push her into her new crushes arms to get revenge on me?"

Yet, here's the thing!

Even though getting on with your life might feel a bit scary to you right now, it's important for helping you stop being so attached to your girlfriend.

It also reminds you that you are your own man and even though you definitely do care about her and want her back, you don't need her back to feel good about yourself and to be able to have a good life.

At the same time, it causes her to feel like she is losing you and because you've been re-attracting her all along (i.e. by interacting with her and showing her that you've changed and improved in some of the ways that are important to her), it worries her.

By the way!

If you're unsure of how to go about having fun without your girlfriend, here are a few ideas to help you!

- Spend some time pursuing your own personal dreams and goals.
- Join a meet up group in your area that does something you enjoy doing (e.g. gaming, debating, discussing politics/philosophy/science, dancing, hiking, photography).
- Take up a new group hobby or sport where you will be able to meet and socialize with other people on a regular basis (e.g. martial arts, basketball, water polo).
- Get in touch and hang out with old friends that you may have lost contact with because of your relationship with your girlfriend and begin having fun in social situations with them, or doing outdoor activities with them again.

When you take your mind off your girlfriend and what she's up to now that you and her are on a break and start living a good life without her, you automatically become more attractive to her (and to other women as well).

As a result, she wants to be around you more and more and before long, she may say something like, "I've had enough of this break. I don't want to be apart anymore. Let's get back together again."

You can then guide her back into a relationship with you that will naturally be 100% better than it was before, because you're now a new and improved man.

The final thing you can do to end the break and get her back quickly is!

5. Get her to hook up with you sexually one last time and blow her mind

[image: Get her to hook up with you sexually one last time and blow her mind]

The next time you're at a meet up with your girlfriend, just focus on making her feel a strong rush of romantic and sexual attraction for you (e.g. by flirting with her to create sexual tension between you and her, using ballsy humor to bring down her defenses and make her feel turned on by your confidence, showing her via your actions and behavior that you've transformed yourself into a new man).

Then, if she seems to be open and is giving you signs that she's sexually attracted to you (e.g. touching you repeatedly on the hand/arm/leg, licking her lips, playing with her hair/throat/necklace) just lean in and give her a quick kiss on the lips.

If she doesn't pull away, deepen the kiss and keep turning her on.

From there, if she's still open to it, hook up with her sexually at your place or hers and blow her mind.

The more you make her feel attracted to you in ways that you never have before, the more confused she will be about what she wants to do.

From there, you just need to continue showing her that you've transformed yourself into the kind of man that she can now look up to, respect and feel attracted to.

She will then likely begin thinking things like, "On the one hand, my boyfriend and I are taking a break and I'm now attracted to another guy, but on the other hand he's making me feel so turned on and attracted to him that all I can think about is how much I want to be with him again. I guess I have my answer. Sure, a new crush is exciting, but it just doesn't compare to the depth of feelings I experience when I'm with my guy.

When she realizes that you're actually the man she wants, she will likely forget all about her new crush and come running back to you.

What to Avoid When On a Break With a Girlfriend Who Has a New Crush

You can end the break with your girlfriend and get her back right now if you want to.

However, you have to approach it in the right way.

This is why, you need to make sure you avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Not changing your approach to attraction and expecting her to be interested

Sometimes a guy will think to himself, "I need to do something quickly to re-attract her before she falls for her new crush and I lose her forever."

He may then recall how happy she used to get when he sent her flowers, bought her gifts or wrote her love poems, so he naturally does the same thing again.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that he's using an old approach that doesn't work the same way on a woman who has been in a relationship with a guy.

- Sure, she may feel happy if her new crush tries to attract her in that way (i.e. because she doesn't know that much about him yet and his gestures seem charming to her), but not her old boyfriend (i.e. because she likely takes it as a sign that that is all he knows how to do, but can't attract her in other ways).
- So, if you want to get back with your girlfriend, it's vitally important that you don't use the same old approach to attraction that you used in the past and expect her to be excited about it.
- You've got to try something new.

If you don't, she'll feel more excited by what her new crush is doing and she may then pick him.

The next mistake to avoid is

2. Patiently waiting around while she secretly moves on

If you sit around waiting for your girlfriend to get over her new crush and come back to you, you may be shocked when she tells you something along the lines of, "I know we were only taking a break, but I've fallen for the guy I told you about. I'm sorry. I didn't plan for it to work out that way, but it happened. I will always care for you, but I think it's better if we make the break permanent and move on."

The fact is, if you want to keep your girlfriend rather than lose her, then don't wait for her to decide what she wants.

The more time away from you she has where youâ€¦ are not reactivating her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you, the more likely it is she will feel attracted to her new crush, who probably is sparking her feelings for him.

Thatâ€¦s how it works.

So, if your girlfriend has a new crush, donâ€¦t wait for him to take your girl from you for real.

You need to use any interactions that you have with her to reawaken her feelings for you and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

3. Becoming insecure about the other guy

So what if your girlfriend has a new crush?

If you start doubting yourself and your attractiveness and value to her, youâ€¦ll just be making the other guy seem more attractive to her.

Remember: Women are naturally attracted to men who are confident, self-assured and believe in themselves no matter what.

So, if you act all insecure and unsure of yourself with your girlfriend, even if her new crush is a jerk, he will seem more attractive to her than you.

This is why, you need to make sure that you believe in yourself when you interact with her.

Youâ€¦ve got to know that you are a better man than her crush.

Heâ€¦s nothing compared to you.

Just relax and know that you are better than him.

She will pick up on it by how you talk, behave and react to her while you interact.

When that happens, she stops thinking about anything else other than being back with you, hugging, kissing, having sex and being in love.

So, believe that youâ€¦re the right man for her and so will she.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Sending an Anonymous Gift to Your Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reactions she will have when she receives an anonymous gift:

1. She knows it's from you, but doesn't value it because the feelings aren't mutual

[image: She knows it's from you, but doesn't value it because the feelings aren't mutual]

Sometimes a guy will try to do all sorts of things to make an ex woman reconsider her decision to break up with him.

For example: He mightâ€¦

- Beg and plead with her to change her mind.
- Promise her that he will do whatever she wants if she gives him one more chance.
- Be extra nice to her and do whatever she says to please her.
- Pour his heart out to her in a card or love letter.

However, if none of those things convince his ex to change her mind or if he doesn't want to try those approaches, he may decide to send her an anonymous gift instead.

Secretly, he will be hoping that she will know that itâ€¦s from him, feel flattered by his gesture and think something along the lines of, â€œHeâ€¦s being so sweet. Maybe Iâ€¦ve been too hard on him. After all, a guy who is so romantic canâ€¦t be all bad. In fact, guys like him are hard to find and if I let him go, I may end up regretting it later on. I think Iâ€¦m going to give him another chance.â€œ

They can then get back together again and everything can go back to the way it was.

Yet, thatâ€¦s not how it works.

Instead, when a woman who has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, receives an anonymous gift that she knows is from him, rather than feel flattered by his token of affection, she usually feels even more turned off by him.

She might then think something along the lines of, â€œDoes he honestly believe I wouldnâ€¦t know this is from him after everything else heâ€¦s done to make me change my mind about breaking up with him? Not only am I not impressed by his anonymous gift, it actually makes me see him as a desperate, childish guy who doesnâ€¦t have a clue about what I really want from a man. Instead, heâ€¦s hoping that he can just buy me off with a gift. Well, heâ€¦s in for a shock because Iâ€¦m not even going to mention that I received it. I wonder what he will do then. I just wish heâ€¦d get the message and leave me alone. Iâ€¦m tired of having to deal with him. I just want to move on and find a man who knows how to spark my feelings for him.â€œ

If she doesnâ€¦t mention the gift to him, her ex might decide to confess that it was from him to see if sheâ€¦ll open up to him again, only to feel crushed if she then says something like, â€œYes, I knew it was from you all along, but I donâ€¦t really care. In actual fact, Iâ€¦ve already thrown it away,â€œ because sheâ€¦s hoping to discourage him from pursuing her anymore.

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦

Sending an anonymous gift to your ex before you have reactivated her feelings of respect and attraction for you is unlikely to get the response youâ€™re hoping for (i.e. to impress her so that she will give you another chance).

So, donâ€™t waste your time trying to impress your ex with superficial things like gifts.

Instead, focus on using interactions with her on the phone and in person to re-spark her feelings for you.

The more respect and attraction for you she starts to feel again, the more open she will become to the idea of giving you another chance.

Then, if you want to, you can give her a gift in person and she will appreciate it, because she feels drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

However, if your plan is to send an anonymous gift to your ex as a way of getting her back without doing anything else to change her feelings for you, you will just be wasting your time.

Another possible reaction your ex might have to the anonymous gift isâ€¦!

2. She knows it's from you, is flattered and excited and then contacts you

[image: She knows it's from you, is flattered and excited and then contacts you]

In some cases, a woman might still have some feelings for her ex and she may even secretly be hoping that he will try to get her back.

So, if she receives an anonymous gift in the post of something that she recognizes only he knows she likes, she will naturally guess that the gift is from him.

She will also be flattered that he still remembers the little things that please her and she may then contact him to say thank you, in the hope that they can work things out so they can get back together again.

Naturally this is what the guy was hoping will happen when he sent her the gift in the first place.

However, even though the woman is contacting him and is even open to interacting with him, it doesnâ€™t mean that he will automatically get her back from there.

Why not?

If the woman contacts him and he then turns her off (i.e. by making the same attraction mistakes he made before), she will likely feel disappointed and she may think something along the lines of, â€œI really thought we could work things out between us, but I see now that itâ€™s not possible. Although heâ€™s a nice guy and I canâ€™t deny that I still care for him in some ways, Iâ€™m also aware that he is unable to change and improve. Instead, heâ€™s still stuck at the same level he was at when we broke up and I simply wonâ€™t be able to overlook that for very long. Eventually Iâ€™m going to get so fed up with it that I may end up hating him. I donâ€™t want that. I think itâ€™s better if I let him go now while we can still be friends.â€

She might then say something like, â€œThanks for the gift. It was really sweet of you to send it. However, it doesnâ€™t change what happened between us. We broke up for a reason and I think weâ€™re better off just being friends, rather than a couple. I hope you can accept that.â€

So, donâ€™t let that happen to you.

If you do send your ex an anonymous gift and she contacts you, you need to be ready to show her that you haven't been wasting the time apart.

Instead, you've changed and improved and become a better man.

For example:

- You're more confident and self-assured now, rather than doubting yourself and your attractiveness to her.
- You're more emotionally independent now, rather than needing her to prop you up and make you feel good about yourself.
- You're more emotionally masculine now and make her feel feminine and girly as a result, rather than making her feel neutral or even turned off around you.
- You're more ballsy now and stand up to her in a loving way, rather than being wimpy and timid and letting her dominate you with her strong personality.

When your ex experiences those kinds of changes in you, she naturally feels happy that she contacted you.

She then drops her guard and opens up to being with you romantically and sexually again.

However, if you continue to think, act, behave and interact with her in all the same ways as before, she will regret her decision to contact you and she will then likely make an excuse to get away from you as quickly as possible.

When that happens, it becomes even more difficult to get her back.

Another possible reaction your ex might have to the anonymous gift isâ

3. She knows it's from you and is glad that she finally has an excuse to text you

[image: She knows it's from you and is glad she finally has an excuse to text you]

Sometimes a woman may be waiting and hoping that her ex will make a move to get her back.

So, if she suddenly receives an anonymous gift and she realizes that itâs from her ex (e.g. because itâs something special that only he would know about), she feels excited and possibly even a bit relieved that heâs reached out to her, albeit indirectly.

She then feels more confident about contacting him, because she now has an excuse.

For example: She might text him something like, âThank you for the gift. I know it was from you and I appreciate it.â

Of course, itâs then up to the guy to take the lead and begin the ex back process for real.

He needs to call her on the phone and begin reactivating her feelings of respect and attraction for him right away, so he can get her back for real.

A mistake that a lot of guys make when their ex contacts them, is to play it safe by texting back and forth with her for a while.

A guy like that will often think something like, âI don't really know if she's interested in getting back with me again, or if she's just being nice because of the gift I sent her. So, rather than ask her to meet up with me and risk getting rejected, or even worse, scaring her away because she feels I'm coming on too strong, I'm just going to play it cool for a while until I'm more certain that she's keen to see me again.â

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that his ex has likely given him all the signs he's going to get from her (i.e. texting him).

From there, she's going to wait to see what he does to get her back (e.g. because she doesn't want to come across as being too easy, she wants to make sure he has the confidence to lead the ex back process).

However, if he doesn't make a move and just continues to text her about random things, she may begin thinking something like, "I guess I misunderstood his intentions when he sent me that anonymous gift. I thought it was a sign that he still had feelings for me, but seeing as he's not actually doing anything to get me back, maybe he only just wants to be friends now."

She then focuses on getting over her feelings for him and moving on.

He's then shocked when she one day texts him something along the lines of, "Hey, I wanted you to be the first to know that I've met someone else. He's really so great and I think I'm falling in love with him. Maybe we can arrange for you to meet him sometime. It would be nice if you and him can be friends too, just like we are."

So, don't make that mistake.

If you decide to send your ex an anonymous gift and she texts you, get her on a call with you right away, make her laugh and smile and feel happy to be talking to you and then arrange a meet up.

At the meet up, fully reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you, hug, kiss, have sex and guide her back into a relationship with you.

That's how it's done.

Another possible reaction your ex might have to the anonymous gift is!

4. She doesn't know who it's from and is too afraid to contact you to ask

[image: She doesn't know who it's from and is too afraid to contact you and ask]

Don't always assume that your ex will guess that the gift is from you, even if you send her something you believe will point to you.

Quite often, a woman might receive an anonymous parcel and wonder something like, "I wonder who this is from. It is possible that my ex sent it to me, but I'm just not sure. What if he didn't send it and I reach out to him and he's moved on already and I look foolish for assuming it was him. Alternatively what if I text him to ask if it was from him and he is cold and rejects me? That would really hurt. I guess I just need to ignore it and wait to see if the sender will reveal himself to me."

She then doesn't contact her ex and she also doesn't do anything to give him a sign that she's open to interacting with him.

He may then think to himself something like, "She must have guessed by now that the gift was from me, but she hasn't even sent me a text to say thank you. I suppose she's letting me know that she's just not interested in me anymore. I need to accept that and try to forget about her, even though I still have feelings for her and want her back."

He may then give up on the idea of getting her back, even though that's not what he wants and likely, not what she wants either.

Here's the thing!

If you want your ex back, don't miss out on the opportunity of making that happen, just because you didn't have the courage to contact your ex.

All it takes is one phone call where you make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again to reawaken some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Then, when you suggest a meet up, she's more willing to say "Yes," because you've begun to replace her negative thoughts about you with positive feelings.

Then, at the meet up you can build on her feelings for you, show her that you're a new and improved man now and then get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

On the other hand, it will really suck if you wait for her to give you a sign, which she doesn't do because she's afraid of being rejected by you and you both end up losing out on being with the love of your life.

Another possible reaction your ex might have to the anonymous gift is

5. She doesn't care who it's from because she has a new boyfriend and is happy

[image: She doesn't care who it's from because she has a new boyfriend and is happy]

In some cases, a woman moves on pretty quickly after a break up and finds herself a new man right away.

So, if she then gets an anonymous gift, rather than sit around trying to figure out who it's from, she usually puts it out of her mind, because she's too happy in her new relationship to care.

Even if she does guess that it's from her ex, it no longer matters to her, so she forgets about it.

So, if you're hoping that sending your ex an anonymous gift is the key to getting her back, be prepared to be disappointed.

Here's the thing

The fastest and easiest way to get an ex back is to be active and direct about it, rather than being secretive and passive.

This means, you stand a better chance of re-attracting her, even if she does already have a new boyfriend, if you contact her over the phone or in person, and begin re-sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. by using humor to break down her defenses, being ballsy enough to flirt with her and create some sexual tension between you and her, by showing her that you're a new and improved man now).

However, if you just sit back and wait for your anonymous gift to re-attract her, don't be surprised if she ignores you and continues to be happy with her new man.

Get Her Back Faster By Avoiding These 3 Mistakes

If your aim is to get your ex back, focus on saying and doing the types of things that will make that happen, rather than making mistakes that will reduce your chances with her even more.

For example: 3 mistakes to avoid making are

1. Hiding behind anonymous gifts, texts or e-mails

One of the most attractive qualities to a woman is when a man has the balls to go after what he wants in life regardless of how difficult it may seem or how impossible the odds.

This is why, when a man doesn't have the courage to talk to his ex in person, or over the phone and instead sends her anonymous gifts, texts, or e-mails in the hope that she will figure out that it's him and make the first move, it usually turns her off in a big way.

She usually sees it as something an emotionally weak, wimpy guy would do and she doesn't want to be in a relationship with a guy like that.

As a result, his sweet gesture has the opposite effect to getting her back and instead convinces her that she made the right decision to break up with him.

So, if you want to get back with your ex, show her that you're an emotionally strong, ballsy man by taking control of the ex back process, calling her on the phone or meeting up with her in person, re-sparking her feelings for you and making it happen.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Not knowing that there is a much more simple, more effective way to get a woman back

Maybe you think you need to hide behind anonymous gifts because your ex has said things like, "I never want to see you again," or "Don't try to text me or call me because I won't reply to you."

Maybe you've convinced yourself that there's no other way to reach out to her and let her know, albeit anonymously, that you still have feelings for her.

Yet, here's the thing

There is another way.

The truth is, just because your ex is being closed off to you right now, it doesn't mean she will feel the same way a week from now after you've reactivated her feelings of respect and sexual attraction.

So, don't give up.

You really can change how she feels and get her back, if you want to.

You can take control of the ex back process by focusing on actively re-attracting her, rather than hiding in the background and hoping she will eventually change her mind about you.

When she can see for herself that you're the kind of man she always wanted you to be (e.g. confident, persistent, motivated, emotionally strong), her walls will naturally start to crumble and then getting back together becomes something she wants too.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Thinking that a gift will win a woman over

Although your ex might realize that the gift is from you and even appreciate your thoughtful gesture, it's probably not going to make her think something along the lines of, "Wow, this is so sweet of my ex. Maybe he deserves another chance."

Why?

A woman isn't going to be in a relationship with the gift.

It is him that she needs to feel attracted to and in love with, not a gift.

So, if all she gets is a thoughtful gift, but he doesn't follow up with a call and then a meet up to fully reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for him, she'll likely just forget about it and move on with her life.

The only way you're truly going to get your ex back is if you face her and make her feel strong surges of respect, attraction and love for the new you.

So, what are you waiting for?

She's waiting for you!

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Should I Even Try to Get My Ex Wife Back Because She's Just Not Interested?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, but you will need to change your approach to her, otherwise she will continue not having any interest in getting back with you.

Here are 5 tips to help you get her back:

1. Use new attraction techniques on her

[image: Use new attraction techniques on her]

One of the nice things about being married to a woman is that you get to know all her likes and dislikes and can then use that knowledge to turn her on, please her and make her happy.

For example: A woman might love it when her husband buys her flowers or thoughtful gifts.

Alternatively, she might respond well when he writes her a love letter.

In other instances a woman might appreciate it when her man is attentive and listens to her.

However, sometimes, the problem with knowing a woman's likes and dislikes is that a guy can become complacent and stop looking for new ways to spark her feelings of attraction.

Essentially, the guy believes that these are the things that worked in attracting her in the first place and kept her attracted for a while during the relationship, so naturally, it should also work in getting her back.

Yet, that's not how it works.

The truth is, if your ex wife is not interested in getting back together again, it's probably because your approach to attraction isn't sparking her feelings anymore.

This is why, if you want to get her back, you need to try a new approach.

For example: If your way of attracting her before was to send her flowers, buy her gifts, be nice and understanding towards her or write her a love letter/poem/card, then this time around she's unlikely to fall for it.

Instead, she's probably going to think something along the lines of, "Is this the best he can do? Does he honestly believe that flowers, gifts, love letters and sucking up to me is going to make me want to give our marriage another chance? Well, he's in for a big surprise, because I know him too well by now and his usual tactics don't impress me anymore. If he wants me back, he's going to have to show me a new side to himself that I can actually feel interested in."

So, if you want your ex wife back, you need to begin attracting her in new and exciting ways, so that she can start feeling respect and attraction for you again.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is by:

- Maintaining your confidence around her regardless of how difficult she's being, rather than turning her off by being self-doubting and insecure.
- Making her feel feminine and girly by being emotionally masculine around her, rather than allowing her to dominate you because you let her lead the dynamic between you and her.

- Making her laugh and smile when you interact with her, rather than making her feel tense, annoyed or bored.
- Laughing at her (in a loving way) when she brings up your past mistakes and blames you for everything, rather than putting yourself down and becoming submissive and obedient around her?
- Showing her that youâ€¢ve changed and improved some of ways that are important to her, rather than making the same mistakes and hoping she will just accept it.

These are the types of actions and behaviors that will convince your ex wife that you are different now and make her become interested in being a couple again.

So focus on that.

Another tip to help you get your ex wife back isâ€¢

2. Don't aim for a relationship right away

[image: Don't aim for a relationship right away]

When a woman is at a point where sheâ€¢s disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a man, the last thing sheâ€¢s going to be interested in is getting back together again.

This is doubly true of a woman who has divorced a man.

So, if every time you interact with your ex wife, you steer every conversation towards you and her getting back together again, sheâ€¢s most likely just going to feel uncomfortable, pressured and as though she is being forced into something that she doesnâ€¢t want.

As a result, she will likely be thinking things like,â€¢Even though Iâ€¢ve made it clear to him that Iâ€¢m not interested in getting back together again, he still continues to talk about us having a relationship. Why canâ€¢t he accept that weâ€¢re divorced now and stop stressing me out every time he interacts with me? He doesnâ€¢t get it that I donâ€¢t have any feelings for him anymore, so why would I want to get back with him? I donâ€¢t know what I have to do to show him that Iâ€¢m not interested in a relationship with him anymore.â€¢

She then begins to close herself off from him even more (e.g. by making excuses not to talk to him over the phone, or see him in person) to avoid having to deal with him pushing for a relationship with her.

Then, the more time she spends away from him, the more she begins to get over him and wants to move on and in some cases, she may even hook up with a new guy.

This is why, if you want to make your ex feel interested in getting back together again, focus on building up her sexual and romantic feelings for you during interactions, rather than pushing for a relationship with her right away.

One of the best ways to do that is by just focusing on having fun and enjoying each otherâ€¢s company.

Use humor to ease the tension between you and her and make her smile and laugh and feel more at ease around you.

The more relaxed and happy she feels when sheâ€¢s with you, the more her defenses will begin to slip down.

She then becomes open to seeing the possibility of being with you again in a sexual and romantic way, because she feels drawn to you.

However, if you make her feel stressed out, miserable and annoyed during interactions, sheâs going to continue saying, âNo. Iâve already told you. Iâm just not interested.â

Another tip to help you get your ex wife back isâ|

3. Build up sexual tension between you and her

[image: Build up sexual tension between you and her]

One of the quickest ways to make your ex wife want you back is by building up the sexual tension between you and her, to the point where she wants to release that pressure with touching, kissing and sex.

Then, when sex happens, she becomes a lot more open to working things out so that you and her can get back together again, or at least interacting with you more often to see how she feels.

By the wayâ|

Sexual tension happens when you and your ex wife feel sexual desire for each other, but donât, or canât immediately release it (e.g. because youâre divorced and she is still nervous about going that route with you, youâre talking over the phone, youâre out in a public place).

Basically, the sexual tension builds up, but the release doesnât happen right away.

As a result, she wants to be alone with you, even though she initially resisted the idea.

So, from now on, use interactions with your ex wife to make her feel so attracted and drawn to you again that she feels like she just has to have you.

Here is an example of how you can do thatâ|

Imagine that you and your ex wife are in a coffee shop together and are just catching up on what each of you has been up to since you and her last spoke.

Basically, youâre having a normal conversation, while at the same time adding in some humor to lighten the mood and make her feel more at ease in your presence.

Then, when she seems to be relaxed and even enjoying herself, you can say something along the lines of,âBy the wayâ|is that a new dress/shirt/skirt/pair of jeans youâre wearing? Mmmmâ| It looks very sexy on you.â|

Then, just relax and switch back into ordinary conversation as if nothing happened.

Continue doing this (i.e. flirting with her in between stages of normal conversation) several times throughout the meet up, to build up the sexual tension between you and her.

She will be feeling attracted to you, even if she tries to deny it or hide it from you.

BTW: In case you didnât know, women love to be complimented and told that they look sexy, even ex wives.

Then when your ex wife is feeling turned on and open, the next tip to help you get her back isâ|

4. Release the sexual tension with a kiss

Once youâve sparked your ex wifeâs feelings of sexual attraction, look out for signs that sheâs open to you again.

For example: She mightâ€¦|

- Touch your hand, arm or thigh more often during the course of the conversation.
- Laugh at all your jokes, especially after she was cold, unfriendly and offish towards you at the start of your interaction.
- Lick her lips often.
- Play with her hair or a necklace.
- Appear to be aroused or turned on (e.g. her face is flushed, her pupils are dilated).
- She smiles and stretches her body due to the built up, positive tension she is feeling when around you.

[image: Build up sexual tension between you and her]

When that happens, itâ€¦s up to you to be the man and take the lead by releasing the built up sexual tension between you and her by giving her a hug and then following through with a kiss.

Note: Donâ€¦t wait for her to make it obvious to you by saying something like, â€¦I want you to kiss me,â€¦ or â€¦Letâ€¦s go back to my place now!â€¦ because sheâ€¦s not likely going to do that and youâ€¦re going to miss your chance.

Just be the man and do it.

If that goes well (e.g. she doesnâ€¦t pull away, she leans in even more and deepens the kiss), you can then suggest going back to your place, or hers and then hook up with her sexually.

Remember: No matter how great things might be going between you and your ex wife (e.g. sheâ€¦s more open towards you, she seems happy to be around you again), she wonâ€¦t be interested in being a couple again until you and her have had sex.

Sex gets rid of the uncertainty of how she feels about you and opens the door to discussing giving your marriage another chance.

Another tip to help you get your ex wife back isâ€¦|

5. Let her want you back for her own reasons, rather than trying to push her to commit again for your reasons

[image: Let her want you back for her own reasons]

Right now thereâ€¦s likely no doubt in your mind that you want to be with your wife again (e.g. because you still love her, youâ€¦ve realized that your life sucks without her in it, youâ€¦re now a better man and you know you could do better as a husband if she gave you a chance).

Yet, your reasons donâ€¦t matter.

Why?

When a woman disconnects from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy to the point where she breaks up with him, or even divorces him, the last thing she will care about are his feelings, wants or desires.

Instead, she will focus on taking care of her own personal happiness and well being, rather than concerning herself about his reasons for wanting her back.

So, if you truly want to convince your ex wife to give you another chance, donâ€¦t make it all about how much you love her and want her back.

Instead, make her want the relationship for her own reasons.

For example:

- She feels attracted to you in new and exciting ways.
- She can see that you've changed and improved some of the things that caused her to want a divorce in the first place.
- She feels that if she gets back with you again you will be able to build a future together.
- She wants to be your wife again and live the rest of her life with you.
- She wants to have your children (if you don't have any), or she wants you to be there for your children on a daily basis (if you do have kids already).

What's really cool is that when you approach the ex back process in that way, she begins to feel a new type of respect, attraction and love for you.

As a result, getting her back becomes easy because she wants it too.

However, if you try to convince her to give you another chance based on how you feel and what you want, she will almost certainly remain bottled up and continue saying things like, "I'm sorry, but I'm just not interested. We gave it a shot and it didn't work out. You need to let it go now. It's over between us."

Mistakes That Can Slow the Ex Back Process Down When You're Trying to Get Your Wife Back

If you want to get your ex wife back, you have to make sure that everything you think, say and do from this point onwards is taking you towards achieving that goal.

Basically, you can't think negative thoughts or make mistakes that turn her off even more.

So, be prepared by avoiding the following mistakes:

1. Waiting too long to make a move

The longer you remain hesitant and unsure of whether you should even bother trying to get your ex wife back, the more time you're giving her to fully get over you, meet a new man and move on.

The truth is, even though she may be saying that she's not interested in getting back with you right now, it doesn't mean that her decision is set in stone.

When you interact with her and make her feel strong surges of respect and attraction for you, her mind changes all by itself, without you having to force it.

She then becomes open to seeing you more often to see how she feels.

If that sounds good to you, don't waste another day wondering if you should even try to get her back and just get her back!

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Using a neutral approach and expecting a sexual or romantic reaction from her

If every time you talk to your ex wife over the phone, or see her in person you focus on being on your best behavior with her and pretend that youâ€¢re no longer interested in getting her back and only want to be her friend now, then thatâ€¢s what youâ€¢ll likely get.

Rather than feel attracted to you again and begin to doubt her decision to divorce you, she now only has neutral, non-sexual feelings for you.

So, if you donâ€¢t want that to happen, make sure that you actively spark her feelings for you, rather than pretending that youâ€¢re not interested in her in a sexual and romantic way anymore.

Of course, itâ€¢s totally fine to be a good guy to her who is also friendly.

However, donâ€¢t pretend that you only want to be her friend and that youâ€¢re not interested in being her husband and lover again.

Make her want you again sexually and romantically and when you do, the relationship will naturally unfold from there pretty quickly.

Finally, another mistake to avoid isâ€¢

3. Not improving your ability to attract her in the ways that will make the difference

Where many ex-husbands go wrong is that even though they want to get their wife back, they make the mistake of using the same old approach to re-attract her that they used before getting married to her (e.g. being really nice to her, buying her flowers, chocolates and other gifts, being friendly and available to her 24/7).

Yet, that approach rarely works to get a woman back.

In fact, in some cases a woman might even see his gestures as a sign that heâ€¢s not taking what happened between them seriously.

So, while sheâ€¢s feeling battered and bruised because of the divorce, heâ€¢s trying to make light of it by sending her flowers or being nice and sweet to her.

Of course thatâ€¢s not what heâ€¢s trying to do.

However, thatâ€¢s usually how a woman will see it when he hasnâ€¢t reactivated her feelings for him first.

So, if you want your wife to take you seriously and come back into your life, you have to begin attracting her in different ways than before (e.g. rather than buying her flowers, show her that youâ€¢ve changed some of the things that were turning her off before, rather than being nice and sweet make her feel feminine and girly by being more emotionally masculine around her, rather than giving in to her every time she throws a tantrum stand up to her in a loving but assertive way).

The more you re-attract her in new and exciting ways, the more likely it is that she will say something like, 'Iâ€¢ve missed you, you know? Seeing you again has made me realize why I agreed to marry you in the first place. Maybe our marriage deserves a second chance after all.'

You can then build up her feelings for you and show her that things really are different now.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me Because of Her Family

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 things you need to ask yourself:

1. Why does her family disapprove of you?

[image: Why does her family disapprove of you?]

If your girlfriend's family disapproves of you, it's not always going to be your fault (e.g. they might be the kind of people who disapprove of everyone, they feel that their daughter is too young to get into a serious relationship and prefer that she focuses on her studies for now, they struggle to get along with people who are different than they are).

However, sometimes a woman's family might have good reasons to feel concerned about their daughter's man.

The question you need to ask yourself is, Are there certain aspects of my thinking and behavior that makes me seem like a bad choice to my girlfriend's parents?

For example:

Do they see you as having no potential in life?

Examples of this could be:

- You're drifting through life with no clear purpose or direction.
- You have no goals or big dreams that you're working on and you're not really interested in getting any.
- You have goals and dreams, but you're not making any progress and have just been wasting time.
- You're stuck in a job that has no prospects of advancement and even if there is, you're happier to stay where you are than to change and improve so that you can progress further.
- You have no ambition and are happy to do as little as possible.

Do they worry that their daughter might get pregnant to you and then struggle?

Examples of this could be:

- They see you as being financially unable to take care of a family (e.g. because you're stuck in a dead-end job, you are uneducated, you're unemployed). (inserted this to round off the thought)
- They see you as irresponsible or reckless.
- They see you as being selfish and always put your own needs and wants before anyone else's.
- They see you as being lazy and believe that you do as little as possible just to get by.

Were you unable to get along with her family because you're from a different social class and didn't fit in?

Examples of this could be:

- They are more, or less, educated than you.

- They are financially better, or worse, off than you.
- They are from a different racial/religious/cultural background to you.
- They are more conservative or radical than you in their thinking or style (e.g. you like to dress in leathers and have piercing and tattoos while they are more conventional and old-fashioned or visa versa, they have strong political views that are different to yours).

Do they feel that you treat their daughter badly?

Examples of this could be:

- You take her for granted (e.g. you expect her to wait on you hand and foot, she does all the housework and chores while you sit around doing nothing, you are not there for her when she needs you).
- You disrespect her or belittle her in front of them and other people (e.g. you make fun of her views and opinions, you insult her and call her Stupid, or Silly).
- You cheated on her.

Do you and your girlfriend always fight and argue with each other?

Examples of this could be:

- You and your girlfriend don't agree with each other on important matters which causes you to constantly disagree with each other.
- You are always breaking up and making up.
- Your relationship is volatile and unstable.

Do they see that their daughter will have to take care of you?

Examples of this could be:

- She has to work to support you financially because you don't have a job and you are not doing anything about it.
- She has to support you and encourage you emotionally because you are needy, clingy and insecure.

Depending on your answers to these questions, you may discover that your girlfriend's family had some good reasons to disapprove of you and want you out of her life.

However, that doesn't mean that because they were right about certain things, you can't change and improve and show them that you are a good man and worthy of their daughter.

Another question to ask yourself is:

2. Can you make some quick changes to prove her parents wrong?

Regardless of how bad an impression a guy made on his woman's family, it doesn't mean he can't change and improve and become a better man.

Then, when they see that he has manned up and taken control of his life and has changed the things about him that they disapproved of, they will naturally begin to feel respect for him for being an emotionally mature man.

When they respect him, it then becomes easier for them to accept him.

So, if you want to get back with your girlfriend, you need to show her family that you definitely are the right man for her and that means changing certain aspects of your thinking, behavior, attitude and maybe even your style.

For example:

- If a guy doesn't have a job, or is stuck in a job where he's going nowhere, he needs to find one, put in for a promotion, or quit and look for a job where he has better prospects for the future.
- If he doesn't dress well (e.g. he's a bit of a slob), he can give himself a makeover.
- If he talks about himself too much during conversation, he can change that by allowing other people to talk about themselves.
- If he doesn't take an interest or listen when talking to her family members, he can quickly learn to be a better listener and show that he cares and values what they have to say.
- If he tries to turn his girlfriend against her family members, he can become more supportive and tolerant, even if he doesn't always agree with them.

When you can show your girlfriend's parents that you are continually taking steps to become a better man in ways that you've been lacking up to this point, they won't be able to stay stuck in their negative opinion of you.

Of course, it might not be easy to change their mind about you (especially if you've really screwed things up with them), but as long as you treat them with respect regardless of what they say and do and you continue to change and improve and become a better man, they will likely begin to see you in a more positive light.

At the same time, your girlfriend will also feel more attracted to you for being emotionally mature enough to take action and improve yourself so that you can make things easier for her with her family.

She then automatically feels drawn to you again and wants to be with you, regardless of what her family says, because she can see that you're a man worth fighting for.

Another question to ask yourself isâ€¦!

3. Are her parents worried about her safety?

In some cases, a woman's family has good reasons for pushing her to break up with her guy.

For example: If a guy is very jealous or controlling, has a temper, uses a lot of drugs, or hangs around with people they see as being bad, it's only natural that her family will be worried about what might happen to her.

They might even think things like, "His jealousy is stopping her from enjoying her life. Instead she's just become a robot who is always saying and doing things to please him. She's just too young to be stuck with a guy who controls her like that," or "He's just too volatile. He's always getting angry about something; even irrelevant things. What happens if he loses it one day and decides to hit her?" or, "He's out of control and can't function without the help of drugs. What if he ends up hurting our daughter?" or "He might not be too bad, but the people he hangs out with are and I fear for my daughter's safety when she's around them."

As a result, they pressure her to break up with the guy as a way of keeping her safe.

So, if you did make any of these mistakes when in the relationship with your girlfriend, you can recover from it and get her family to forgive you.

How?

Start by telling her and them that you understand what you did was wrong and it was stupid and immature.

Then, show them via your actions, behavior and the steps you take to change and improve (e.g. go to therapy for your anger issues/jealousy/controlling behavior, go for drug rehabilitation, cut off contact with all the people who have a negative influence on you) that you're serious about becoming a better man and getting her back.

When they can see for themselves that your intentions are sincere, they will naturally open back up to giving you another chance to show them that you deserve to be with their daughter.

Another question to ask yourself isâ€¦!

4. Are you 100% sure that her family is the real reason why she is breaking up with you?

[image: Are you sure that her family is the real reason for the break up?]

It may have sounded convincing when your girlfriend said something along the lines of, â€œI just can't be with you anymore because of my family. Please understand that even though I care for you, I can't handle the stress anymore. Maybe sometime in the future when things have calmed down we can try again, but for now, I think it's better if we break up,â€ but the fact is that most women often give guys an alternative reason for the break up to avoid having to be honest and say, â€œI don't feel attracted to you anymoreâ€ or, â€œI want to be single again.â€

Basically a woman will do that because she doesn't want to have to deal with her guy's reaction where he tries to talk her out of her decision, keeps asking her why and promising to change whatever she wants him to, begs and pleads with her to give him one more chance, or in extreme cases, he becomes angry and violent towards her.

Instead, she wants to make a clean break so she can move on quickly with as little drama as possible.

This is why, it's quite possible that when your girlfriend broke up with you blaming her family as being the cause, she was actually hiding her real reasons from you to avoid a confrontation.

So, if you want to get her back, not only do you have to change and improve in ways that will earn her family's respect, you also have to uncover the secret reasons why she broke up with you, so that you can reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you too.

If you don't do that, it won't make any difference how much you change to impress her family, because she will likely just continue making excuses like, â€œI know you've put in a lot of effort to change so that you can win my family over, but let's not push the situation just yet. Maybe in a year or two we can try again, but for now, it's best if we take some time apart and let things calm down.â€

Then she will focus on moving on so that the next time you try to get the relationship back together again she can say something like, â€œSorry, but it's too late for us. I've met someone else and my family loves him. So, let's just accept that it wasn't meant to be and move on.

You really are a great guy, just not for me. Iâ€™m sure a lucky girl will snap you up in no time at all.

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

You need to know the real, hidden reasons your girlfriend broke up with you, so that you can offer her what she really wants in a relationship with you.

By the way!

If youâ€™re unsure of what to look for, here are some questions to ask yourself to help you figure it out:

- Were you confident and emotionally independent around her, or were you insecure, needy and clingy?
- Did she feel like a feminine, attractive, desirable woman in your presence, or did she feel more like a neutral friend, or one of the guys?
- Did you take the lead in the relationship with her (i.e. by being the more emotionally dominant one), or did she wear the pants and make you jump to her every command?
- Were you a bit of a challenge to her (i.e. she was afraid of losing you), or did she feel as though you needed her more than she needed you?
- Could she look up to you and depend on you as her man, or did she feel like she had to be the emotionally stronger one in the relationship and take care of the both of you?
- Did she feel loved and appreciated, or did she feel like you were taking her for granted?
- Did you have a strong life purpose outside of your relationship with her, or did you make her your sole reason for living and as a result you became jealous, over protective, controlling or need and clingy?

When you fully understand where you went wrong with her, you can then change the things she really wants you to change and re-attract her.

Then, no matter how her family feels about you, she will put up a good fight to be with you, because she wonâ€™t want to lose you.

Where Guys Go Wrong With an Ex Girlfriend Who Broke Up With Them Because of Her Family

Sometimes a guy might struggle to deal with being dumped because his girlfriendâ€™s family doesnâ€™t like him.

He might then end up saying and doing things that actually turn her off and make her think something along the lines of, â€œMaybe my family had a point after all. Heâ€™s just being so emotionally sensitive and immature, that I feel turned off by him.

She then tries to move on, rather than give him another chance.

So, donâ€™t make that mistake with your girlfriend.

Here are 4 ways that guys go wrong in a situation like yours:

1. Saying bad things about family members that she loves and cares about

As tempting as it might be for a guy to want to say things like, *â€œWho cares what your family thinks about us? Itâ€™s how we feel about each other that is important. Theyâ€™re just being jerks and trying to ruin what we have. Why should we let them do that? We should just tell them to butt out and mind their own business,*â€œ saying bad things about a womanâ€™s family is not the best way to make her change her mind about breaking up with him.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

If a woman values and loves her family, she wonâ€™t appreciate it if her ex disrespects them to her; even if they did cause the break up between them.

So, even though he may feel justified in saying bad things about them (e.g. because he is frustrated or annoyed), she might take it the wrong way and begin thinking things like, *â€œMaybe my folks have a point about not wanting me to date him. Heâ€™s being so disrespectful to my family and itâ€™s making me see a side to him that I donâ€™t like. Heâ€™s just so bitchy and mean. What if thatâ€™s who he really is deep down and if we ever got married and he became annoyed with me he would end up being that way with me? Maybe Iâ€™m better off without him after all.*â€œ

This is why, regardless of how frustrated you feel about your break up with your girlfriend, donâ€™t say anything bad about her family to her and cause her to lose respect for you for being emotionally immature and childish.

Instead, just interact with her and re-spark her feelings for you and show her by your attitude and actions that her parents are wrong about you.

When that happens, she may end up ignoring their wishes because she knows youâ€™re the man for her and she doesnâ€™t want to lose you.

Another way that guys go wrong in a situation like yours isâ€¦!

2. Begging and pleading with her

A guy might say things like, *â€œPlease donâ€™t allow your family to destroy what we have. I promise Iâ€™ll do anything to win them over. Just tell me what they want from me and Iâ€™ll do it. Please just give me a chance to prove to them that Iâ€™m the right man for you. I promise you wonâ€™t regret it!*â€œ

However, rather than make a woman think, *â€œHe must really love me if heâ€™s willing to do anything to win my family over! This is amazing! He must be the one!*â€œ sheâ€™s likely just going to pull away from him even more.

Why?

A womanâ€™s attraction to a guy is based mostly on his ability to make her feel like she can look up to him and respect him as a man.

So, when a guy is begging and pleading and being emotionally weak, wimpy and desperate, heâ€™s actually making her feel the opposite of the way he needs to make her feel to get her back.

Basically, heâ€™s turning her off and making her see him in a new, more negative light, when what he should be doing is quickly re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for him again, so she naturally becomes unsure about her decision to break up with him.

By the wayâ€¦!

If you've already tried begging and pleading with your ex girlfriend to make her change her mind about breaking up with you, don't worry about it.

As long as you learn from the experience and focus on showing her from now on that you're an emotionally strong and mature man, she will gradually begin to reconnect with her feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

You can then build up those feelings inside of her and make her see that being with you is really what she wants.

Another way that guys go wrong in a situation like yours is

3. Writing her long letters or e-mails to express his undying love for her

As romantic as it may seem for a guy to write a love letter (or e-mail) to his ex girlfriend to tell her how much he still loves her and wants her back, it's unlikely to make her change her mind.

Why?

Basically, because it doesn't get to the core of the problem (i.e. that she doesn't want to be with him because of her family).

Instead, he's just pouring his heart out to her and talking about his feelings, but he's not taking her or her family's feelings into consideration.

He's not addressing the issues that are causing her family to want him out of their daughter's life, but is instead just trying to convince her to ignore them based on his feelings for her.

Unfortunately, a woman usually doesn't want to do that (e.g. because she still cares what her family thinks about her man, she will still have to deal with the stress of arguing with her family if she gets back with him).

So, if you want to re-attract your girlfriend, don't be sweet and romantic by declaring your undying love for her in a letter or e-mail and focus instead on addressing the issues that caused the break up in the first place.

When you fix those, you can win her and her family over.

Another way that guys go wrong in a situation like yours is

4. Promising to wait for her for as long as it takes

Sometimes a guy thinks that if he gives his ex girlfriend enough space and time, things will calm down and eventually she will choose to be with him again, regardless of what her family thinks (i.e. because she's overwhelmed by his devotion and willingness to wait for her).

This is especially true if the woman is quite young and her family wants her to focus on her studies, or mature a bit more emotionally.

The guy might then say to himself, They're only against me because they think she's too young to date right now. However, if I wait, both her and her family will know that my intentions are pure and then I will get another chance with her.

Yet, it rarely works out that way.

In most cases, while the guy is sitting around waiting and putting his life on hold, his ex ends up meeting another guy who she finds interesting and attractive and whom her family like more, so she starts a new relationship with him and moves on.

Then, by the time her ex figures out that heâ€™s lost her, itâ€™s already too late because sheâ€™s in love and not interested in working things out with him anymore.

So, donâ€™t let that happen to you.

If you want your girlfriend back, you need to interact with her (on the phone and especially in person) and spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love, so she wants to stand up to her family for you, regardless of what they say.

Donâ€™t waste anymore time waiting for her to get permission to come back to you.

If you do, you may be shocked to discover that sheâ€™s moved on.

If you want her back, make it happen now.

She is waiting for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get My Ex to Consider the Possibility of Us Getting Back Together

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 things that you can do to get your ex to consider the possibility of you and her getting back together again:

1. Make her feel rushes of sexual and romantic attraction for you

[image: Make her feel rushes of sexual and romantic attraction for you]

Right now, your ex is likely feeling a lot of negative emotions related to you and the relationship.

For example: She may beâ€¦

- Sad or angry that things didnâ€™t work out the way she hoped they would (i.e. that you and her would eventually settle down, get married, start a family).
- Annoyed with you for not being the man she initially thought you were (e.g. she believed you were more confident and emotionally strong than you really were, she thought you were more loving than you showed her in the relationship).
- Disillusioned with men, love and relationships in general (e.g. she may be thinking things like, â€œI donâ€™t believe that true love really exists. Itâ€™s just a myth,â€ or â€œMen canâ€™t be trusted,â€ or â€œRelationships just donâ€™t workâ€).
- Disappointed with the way things ended and with you for letting her down.
- Disconnected from her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

So, if you try to convince her to give you another chance by begging and pleading with her, promising her that you will change, telling her how much you still love her and need her, or any other similar approaches, sheâ€™s more than likely just going to push you away and say things like, â€œForget it! Iâ€™m not interested. The sooner you accept that, the sooner we can both get on with our lives.â€

So, if you donâ€™t want that to happen, you need to make sure that your approach makes her feel rushes of sexual and romantic attraction for you, rather than turn her off even more and convince her she made the right decision to break up with you.

How can you do that?

By displaying some of the characteristics and personality traits that women are instinctively attracted to.

For example:

- Being confident, relaxed and sure of yourself when youâ€™re interacting with her, regardless of what she says or does to make you feel nervous, unsure of yourself and like you donâ€™t stand a chance of getting her back (e.g. sheâ€™s cold, detached and uncommunicative around you, she blames you for what happened, she tells you sheâ€™s not interested in getting back together again and possibly even mentions that sheâ€™s interested in someone else to see how you will respond).

- Using humor to make her laugh and smile during conversation and to ease the tension between you and her, rather than being too nice or formal with her and making her feel tense, stressed out and like she can't get away from you fast enough.
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension and make her want to release that tension with kissing and sex, rather than treating her like a neutral friend and making her feel like she needs to find another man to give her the attraction experience she really wants.
- Responding differently to the way she's used to or expects you to (e.g. if in the past you used to bend to her will and allowed her to have her way no matter how unreasonable, you now stand up to her in a loving way, if you used to get jealous and feel insecure when she talked about other guys, you now laugh and make a joke about it with her and show her that you're so much more confident and self-assured now).

When you start making her feel attracted in the ways that she always wanted, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again, even if just a little bit.

When that happens, her defenses come down and she becomes open to getting back together again.

However, if you try to get her back without first reactivating some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you, she's just going to keep pushing you away and saying things like, "I'm sorry but you need to accept that it's over between us."

Another thing you can do to get your ex to consider the possibility of you and her getting back together again is

2. Be more of a challenge when you talk to her

[image: Be more of a challenge when you talk to her]

When a guy wants to get back together with his ex, he usually makes the mistake of being on his best behavior around her and saying and doing whatever he thinks she wants to see and hear.

For example: When she asks him for a favor, he always says "Yes," even if it's unreasonable or inconvenient for him.

If she asks him a question about something random (e.g. "What did you do this weekend?") he gives her a full explanation of what he was doing and who he was with.

If she asks him if he misses her, he responds with something along the lines of, "Yes. You're all I can think about. My life feels so empty without you."

Essentially, he's hoping that she will be impressed by his openness and she will then be more willing to give him another chance.

Yet, what a guy like that doesn't realize is that a woman doesn't want to feel as though he's being a good little boy to impress her.

Instead, she wants him to make her feel as though she needs to be on her best behavior around him and try to please him, rather than him being no challenge for her at all.

She doesn't want to feel like she is the one who is emotionally more powerful and like she can push him around and treat him like dirt without him standing up to her.

This is why, if you want to get your ex to consider the possibility of you and her getting back together again, you need to make sure you're not being a good little boy who is always on his best behavior around her and never says or does anything to upset her or challenge her.

How can you do that?

Using the examples aboveâ€¦

If your ex asks you for a favor, rather than always saying â€œYes,â€ to her, you can use it as an opportunity to spark some of her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you instead.

For instance, you might say in a joking way something like, â€œSure, Iâ€™ll be happy to do that for you. However, itâ€™s going to cost you.â€

If she then responds with something along the lines of, â€œWhat do you mean?â€ or â€œAre you seriously going to charge me for doing me a favor?â€ you can laugh and say, â€œYep! My price is that you just have to buy me coffee sometime this week.â€

She will likely laugh and say something like, â€œOh, okay, I guess I can do that.â€

At the same time, she will be feeling surges of attraction and respect for you for having the balls to tease her in this way, rather than rolling over and doing whatever she wants.

Alternatively, if she asks you a random question like what you were doing over the weekend, rather than give her a detailed report of your whereabouts, you might say something like, â€œI ate out at an Italian restaurant with some friends. I had lasagna. It was good, but Iâ€™m still convinced that you make the best lasagna Iâ€™ve ever tasted. So, how about you cook me some tonight?â€

Again, she will most likely laugh and smile and feel drawn to you for being confident enough to joke around with her in this way, even though youâ€™re broken up.

If she asks you if you miss her, rather than saying â€œYes,â€ right away, you might laugh and say something like, â€œSure I do, because I havenâ€™t been able to figure out how to use the washing machine yet!â€ and have a laugh with her about that.

When youâ€™re more of a challenge to her, rather than always saying and doing whatever she wants, she starts to feel attracted to you again in a way that feels good to her.

As a result her guard comes down and she becomes open to interacting with you more and more to see where things go from there.

Another thing you can do to get your ex to consider the possibility of you and her getting back together again isâ€¦

3. Stop projecting a vibe of, â€œI need you to commit to a relationshipâ€

[image: Stop projecting the vibe of, "I need you to commit to a relationship."]

Although you may still have strong feelings for your ex and really want her back, itâ€™s very likely that right now, she doesnâ€™t feel the same way about you and the relationship.

So, if every time you interact with her you end up saying things like, â€œI just want you to know that my feelings for you havenâ€™t changed and I promise Iâ€™ll do whatever it takes to make things right between us,â€ or â€œIâ€™m so sorry for hurting you. I give you my word that Iâ€™ll never do that again. Instead, I will treat you the way you deserve and show you that my feelings for you are real,â€ rather than feel happy and relieved that youâ€™re putting in the effort to be a better man to her, sheâ€™s likely just going to pull away and close herself off even more.

She will probably also think something along the lines of, â€œWhy isnâ€™t he listening to me? He keeps talking as though he expects us to get back together again, even though Iâ€™ve clearly told him that Iâ€™m not interested. I donâ€™t know what to do to get through to him. Maybe I should *just cut him off completely, rather than continue to talk to him and give him the impression that I would ever want to be in a relationship with him again.*â□□

She may then refuse to answer her phone, or respond to your messages or texts as a way of making her feelings clear to you (i.e. that sheâ□□s not ready to commit to the idea of getting back together again).

It then becomes so much more difficult for you to get her back.

So, donâ□□t get to that point with your ex.

Remember: For a woman to commit to the idea of being in a relationship with a guy, the feelings have to be mutual (or at least close to mutual).

It canâ□□t just be about what you feel and what you want (i.e. for her to consider getting back together with you).

Instead, she has to feel that if she doesnâ□□t give you another chance, she will end up regretting it for the rest of her life.

So, how can you make her feel that way?

By using every interaction you have with her to make her feel strong surges of sexual and romantic attraction for you again.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ□!

- Being a confident and emotionally strong man around her (even when sheâ□□s being cold, aloof or even bitchy towards you), rather than feeling insecure, nervous and unsure of yourself and your chances with her.
- Making her laugh and smile in your presence, rather than making her feel bored, annoyed or stressed out by being too nice, neutral or needy around her.
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension, rather than turning her off by being too polite and reserved or coming across as desperate.
- Showing her via your attitude, action, behavior and conversation style that youâ□□re a new and improved man now, rather than saying and doing the same things you did before and convincing her that she made the right decision by breaking up with you.
- Avoiding pointless texting conversations with her and getting her on a call and then to a meet up with you so that you can fully reactivate her feelings for you.

When she can see for herself that youâ□□ve become the kind of man she always wanted you to be, her reasons for not wanting to be in a relationship with you automatically start to fade away.

Suddenly the idea of being your girl again starts to feel good to her.

As a result, her guard comes down and she naturally begins to consider the possibility of you and her getting back together more and more.

4 Common Problems You Might Experience When Trying to Convince Your Ex to Get Back With You

Although you might be ready to get back together with your ex, she may not currently feel the same way.

As a result, your attempts to make her consider the possibility of you and her getting back together again might end up being blocked by her.

For example: Some of the problems you might encounter includeâ€¦!

1. She considers the possibility of having a relationship, but it just doesn't feel right to her

Sometimes a guy will go overboard trying to convince his ex to give him another chance.

For example: He mightâ€¦!

- Beg and plead with her.
- Send her flowers or gifts.
- Offer to do anything she asks.
- Promise to change.
- Send her long, emotional love letters, e-mails or text messages to tell her about his feelings for her.

Initially she might feel overwhelmed by his devotion to her and she may even say something like, â€œOkay, I promise to consider the possibility of us getting back together again. Just let me think about it for a while.â€

However, once things calm down and she gets a chance to think, she realizes that all the things heâ€™s being doing to get her back is a sign of desperation.

This makes her feel even less respect and attraction for him and therefore, the idea of getting back together again doesnâ€™t feel right to her.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

A woman doesnâ€™t want to be with a guy who seems desperate.

She wants to be with a guy who makes her feel so much respect, attraction and love based on how he thinks, acts, behaves, talks to her and interacts with her, not based on what he buys for her or how much he flatters her.

That is what really matters to her.

As a result, she may then say to him, â€œYouâ€™re a really a nice guy and I can clearly see that you care about me. However, Iâ€™ve thought about us getting back together again and I honestly believe weâ€™re not right for each other. Iâ€™m sure thereâ€™s a really lucky woman out there who would do anything to be with a man like you, but Iâ€™m not that woman. Please accept my decision and stop trying to get me to consider being in a relationship with you again.â€

Another problem you might encounter isâ€¦!

2. You don't really change what has been turning her off, so she remains closed off to you

In some cases, a guy will focus more on how to get his ex back than on her reasons for breaking up with him in the first place.

So, rather than change and improve and show her that heâ€™s a better man, he just chases after her.

Then, when she interacts with him over the phone and in person and she notices that heâ€™s still stuck at the same level he was at when they broke up (e.g. heâ€™s still insecure and needy, he still doesnâ€™t know how to spark feelings of sexual desire inside of her and instead makes her feel neutral or even turned off when sheâ€™s with him, heâ€™s still drifting through life without a clear goal or purpose), she feels even more turned off by his lack of improvement.

She will then likely close herself off from him even more and possibly even block his number on her phone or unfriend him on social media in an attempt to avoid him.

So, donâ€™t try to convince your ex to get back together again without first showing her that youâ€™re serious about being a better man for her (i.e. by changing and improving some of the things that caused her to break up with you in the first place).

If you do, sheâ€™s just going to keep pushing you away and saying things like, â€œNo. Iâ€™m sorry but Iâ€™m just not interested in a relationship with you anymore.â€

Another problem you might encounter isâ€¦

3. Trying to get her to consider giving you another chance via text messages

One of the most annoying things to a woman, is when her ex tries to convince her to give him another chance via text.

Why?

Firstly, she takes it as a sign that he doesnâ€™t have the confidence to call her on the phone and ask her what he wants to ask.

Instead, he hides behind texting like a little boy, which is unattractive to her.

Secondly, it makes her feel like sheâ€™s not important enough for him to even bother picking up the phone and talking to her in person when trying to get her back.

As a result, she feels insulted of annoyed and she then puts up her defenses even more.

Finally, because she has disconnected from her feelings for him, she naturally judges him based on her most recent experiences with him (e.g. the last fight they had, the way he behaved leading up to, during and after the break up).

So, if she currently thinks of her ex in a negative way, sheâ€™s going to look at his texts in a negative way too.

This is why, if you are serious about getting your ex back, donâ€™t ask her for another chance via text.

That should be done in person and only after you have first re-sparked her feelings of respect and attraction for you on a phone call, or in person.

Another problem you might encounter isâ€¦

4. Giving her a false sense of power and leadership over the relationship

Sometimes, a guy mistakenly thinks that if he lets his ex woman control everything and be in charge of the reconciliation process, she will be happy and want him back.

He might then say to her something along the line of, â€œLook, I promise Iâ€™m not going to put any pressure on you. All I want is for you to consider the possibility of us getting back together again. Itâ€™s up to you. You can call all the shots and tell me exactly how you want to do this. Iâ€™ll do everything you ask for.

Essentially, he's hoping that she will feel more relaxed and open to the idea of getting back with him, because she's the one in control.

Yet, rather than make her think, I like that he's letting me call all the shots. It makes me feel more willing to give him another chance because he's being so sweet and submissive with me, it actually causes her to lose respect for him as a man for not having the balls to go after what he really wants (i.e. her) without her approval or say so.

So, if your aim is truly to get back with your ex, don't do things that will ruin her feelings for you even more.

Remember: If you allow a woman to control you, she won't be able to respect you.

If she can't respect you, she won't be able to feel sexually attracted to you and then the idea of getting back together again simply won't appeal to her.

This is why, if you want her, be man enough to take the lead in the ex back process and go get her, rather than wasting time hoping she will eventually consider the possibility of you and her getting back together.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get My Ex to Call Me More Often

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 things you can do to make your ex call you more often:

1. Don't ask for a relationship or give the impression that you want one when you talk to her on the phone

[image: Don't ask for a relationship over the phone]

If every time a woman calls her ex on the phone he turns the conversation into a long discussion about the relationship, what he did wrong and how great it would be if they can work things out and get back together again, rather than make her want to call him more often, he's more likely going to make her not want to call him at all.

Why?

To begin with, he's making talking to him feel stressful.

So, rather than relax and enjoy the conversation, she ends up having to keep up her guard to stop him from pressuring her into a relationship that she may not be ready for yet.

She may then begin thinking things like, "Every time I call him he wants to talk about us getting back together again. However, I'm not interested in that right now and talking to him is becoming more frustrating and exhausting than fun."

She then naturally stops calling him very often to avoid having to deal with him trying to get her back.

This is why, if you want to get your ex to call you more often, you have to make conversations with you feel relaxing, enjoyable and entertaining, rather than stressful, annoying or tense.

Essentially, if you're attracting your ex on the phone (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you, by flirting with her) and not pushing for a relationship, it creates the exciting feeling of sexual tension.

She actually wants to talk to you more often, because when she does, she feels good.

As a result, her guard starts to slip down and she then becomes open to seeing you in person too.

You can then meet up with her and continue to build up the tension between you and her and get her to the point where she wants you make a move to hug her, kiss her and then release that tension with sex.

When that happens, getting back into a relationship with her becomes easy, because she wants it too for her own reasons (e.g. she feels sexually and romantically attracted to you again, she can see you're a new and improved man now).

Another thing you can do to get your ex to call you more often is

2. Let her see how fun your life is without her via social media

[image: Let her see how fun your life is without her via social media]

Sometimes a guy makes the mistake of thinking that if he just sits around and waits for his ex to call him, she will be impressed that heâsâ not moving on without her.

She will then realize that he really does love her and she will begin to call him more often, giving him the opportunity to convince her to give him another chance.

Yet, in most cases, when a woman realizes that her ex doesnât have a life without her, it only assures her that she made the right decision to break up with him.

Then, if sheâs been calling him to see how he is, she may begin making those calls less and less frequently, in the hope that she can slowly fade out of his life without him noticing.

Hereâs the thingâ!

The majority of women are attracted to men who are confident, happy and forward moving in life with or without their woman.

So, when a woman sees that her ex man is content and getting on with his life without her, it actually makes her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

This is why, if you want to make your ex feel open to talking to you on the phone more often, donât be afraid to let her see via social media that youâre actually getting on with and enjoying your life without her.

If she isnât currently following you on social media, just make sure that the photos are set to public so she can see them from the outside.

Why does this work?

When you post photos of yourself having fun with other people, it actually makes your ex feel curious and want to interact with you again.

All of a sudden, you seem more attractive, appealing and likeable to her and she may begin to think things like, âHe seems so happy and confident all of a sudden. I wonder what made him change so much.â

She then wants to call you more often, because she wants to be a part of your fun life again.

Another thing you can do to get your ex to call you more often isâ!

3. Make her laugh and smile whenever she talks to you

[image: Make her laugh and smile whenever she talks to you]

Imagine youâre on a call with someone and they spend the entire time being serious and trying not to say anything wrong in case it upsets you.

Would you want to keep talking to this person, or would you want to hang up?

Yes, you would likely try to get off the call as quickly as possible, because talking to this person makes you feel tense and stressed out.

Now imagine that the person youâre talking to is light-hearted, relaxed and uses humor to make you laugh and smile.

How would you feel about talking them?

Chances are high, you would enjoy it very much and you would likely think something along the lines of, âThis is so much fun. I really like talking to him/her. It makes me want to interact with him/her more and more.â

With this in mind, when you make your ex laugh and smile every time sheâs on a call with you from now on, youâ€™re almost guaranteeing that she will want to call you more often, because youâ€™re making her feel good to be talking to you.

At the same time, by making every call between you and her happy and enjoyable, youâ€™re actively sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you and making the negatives of your relationship seem less important to her.

When that happens, she naturally feels drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

So, donâ€™t be afraid of using humor to lighten the mood between you and your ex when youâ€™re on a call with her.

Of course this doesnâ€™t mean you should be cracking jokes and acting like a clown with her, because that will actually have the opposite effect (e.g. annoy her and turn her off).

Instead, you need to be courageous enough to use ballsy humor to turn any awkwardness into smiling, laughter and love.

For example: If your ex asks you about your day, rather than respond in the usual way by saying something like, â€œFine,â€ or â€œBoring,â€ or â€œBusy,â€ you can use humor and make her think things like, â€œThis is so much fun. I donâ€™t want to hang up the phone.â€

For instance you might say, â€œOh not much. I was craving noodles so I went out to get something to eat.â€

She will most likely continue the conversation by asking something like, â€œOh, where did you go? Anywhere nice?â€

You can then respond in a joking way, â€œTo your house of course! Youâ€™re the only one who makes noodles just the way I like them. So, hurry up and open the door. Iâ€™m hungry!â€

She will likely be a bit shocked and she may say something along the lines of, â€œWhat? Are you serious? Are you really here?â€

You can then laugh and say, â€œLol...of course not. Yet, I would like some of those noodles if you are in the mood to cook them. Up for some noodles? :â€

She will most likely have a laugh with you about it and as a result, she will feel surges of respect and attraction for you for having the confidence to make her laugh and smile, even though you and her are no longer a couple.

She then begins to feel drawn to you in a way that feels good to her and she wants to call you more often to experience those feelings even more.

Another thing you can do to get your ex to call you more often isâ€

4. Attract her in new ways

[image: Attract her in new ways]

If you donâ€™t make the attraction experience youâ€™re giving your ex different and more interesting than what sheâ€™s had with you before, sheâ€™s not going to feel motivated to call you more often.

Instead, sheâ€™s likely going to focus on finding herself a new man who can make her feel excited, attracted and turned on in ways that you canâ€™t.

So, donâ€™t bore your ex by saying and doing the same things youâ€™ve always done and expect her to want to spend more time on the phone (or in person) with you.

Instead, start attracting her in new and interesting ways so she wants to talk to you more often and also wants to meet up with you to experience the new you face-to-face.

Here are some examples of how you can do that!|

- If you are always being nice and neutral with her, it's now time to be more challenging and ballsy.
- If you've only been pretending to want to be friends with her when talking on the phone, you now need to flirt with her to create some sexual tension and show her that what you really want is for her to be your girl again.
- If you feel nervous and unsure of yourself when talking to her, focus on being more confident and self-assured.
- If she tends to call the shots during conversation, laugh at her (in a loving way) and show her that she can't dominate you with her confident personality.
- If you've been putting yourself down and thinking that she'll never want to get back with you, it's now time to realize and accept that you are good enough for her and that she will be lucky to have you as her man.

The more you begin to attract her in ways that she doesn't expect, the more she will want to interact with you on the phone and in person to experience it.

It's then pretty easy for you to fully reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and get her back.

Another thing you can do to get your ex to call you more often is!

5. End the conversation before she does

[image: End the conversation before she does]

Many guys keep talking and talking when they're on a call with their ex until she eventually says, âOkay, I'd better get going,â just to end the call.

She may then say to herself, âPhew! He just kept going on and on. I didn't know if he was ever going to stop talking. In the end I was feeling so stressed out and overwhelmed. Maybe I should keep my calls to him to a minimum, because he's just not fun to talk to.â

Then, instead of calling him more often, she instead calls him less and less.

So, to avoid that from happening to you, make sure that you're the one who ends the conversation with her and usually the best time is right at the point where she seems to be enjoying herself the most.

For example: Imagine that you're on a call with your ex and you focus on bringing down her guard by making her laugh, smile and feel happy to be talking to you.

The more she enjoys herself during the conversation, the more likely it is that she will begin thinking something along the lines of, âHe seems so different from the guy I broke up with. I'm actually enjoying talking to him now. It makes me want to call him more often and even meet up with him in person. I'm curious to see if he'll have the same effect on me when we're face-to-face. I do hope so.â

Then, when you can sense that she's feeling relaxed and attracted and is really into the conversation with you, you can say something like, Well, anyway it's been really great talking to you again, but I've got to get going now, but let's do this again soon, okay? Bye, and then hang up the call when she acknowledges that the call is ending (e.g. she says, Okay, bye talk to you later).

Not only will that make her feel surges of respect and attraction for you, but it will also ensure that she wants to call you again soon.

From there, rather than stick to phone conversations with her, go ahead and get her to meet up with you instead where you can fully reactivate her feelings for you (i.e. by showing her that you really are a new and improved man now) and guide her gently back into a relationship with you.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex to Call Them More Often

Talking to an ex over the phone is a great way to start re-attracting her so that you can get her back. However, some guys ruin their chances of that happening because they make the following mistakes:

1. Hoping that she guides him back into a relationship, so he doesn't have to risk rejection

Sometimes a guy will think to himself, Well at least my ex is calling me. That must mean she has some feelings left for me. I just need to play it cool and wait for her to give me a sign that she's open to us getting back together again. What I don't want to do is come on too strong too soon and cause her to feel turned off because she thinks I'm being pushy and she then stops calling me altogether.

He may then just stick to talking to her over the phone whenever she feels the urge to call him, without ever making a move himself.

Instead, he may secretly be hoping that if he's patient with her she will eventually say something along the lines of, I'm tired of talking over the phone. I miss you and I want to see you in person. Let's meet up.

Yet, that rarely happens.

Yes, some women will do that, but only if the feelings are mutual.

If the feelings aren't mutual, a woman won't feel motivated to guide her ex back into a relationship with her.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't waste time waiting for her to make it happen.

Instead, be emotionally courageous enough to take the lead by calling her rather than waiting for her to call you and begin reawakening her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Then, when she's feeling drawn to you again and likely wondering, When is he going to make a move? get her to a meet up with you so that you can fully re-attract her and get her back.

Don't wait for her to make it easy for you.

Women don't respect or feel attracted to guys who need women to guide them along and make things easy for them.

So, just be emotionally courageous and get her back.

Another mistake that guys make isâ€¦!

2. Playing too many mind games and ending up losing her in the process

Sometimes, a woman might decide to stay in contact with her ex to see if itâ€™s possible for them to work things out before she makes up her mind about moving on without him.

Yet, if the guy then ends up playing mind games with her (e.g. he pretends that he only wants to be friends with her now and isnâ€™t interested in anything else, he plays a bit hard to get to make himself appear valuable in her eyes so she will give him another chance), she may decide that sheâ€™s wasting her time and decide to cut her losses and move on.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Even if a woman does still have some feelings for her ex and is hopeful about getting back with him, she will rarely chase after him.

Instead, she may give him an opening to get her back (e.g. she calls him on the phone) and then waits for him to make the next move.

However, if he just messes her around by playing mind games with her and doesnâ€™t take control of the ex back process, she will get fed up with him.

She will then likely close herself off from him and focus on getting over him and finding herself a new man.

So, if you truly want to work things out and get back together again with your ex, donâ€™t mess her around by playing unnecessary mind games.

Instead, just focus on doing what needs to be done to reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction, so you can bring down her defenses and get her back (i.e. call her, spark her feelings, meet up with her and get her back).

Another mistake that guys make isâ€¦!

3. Not following through on a simple ex back process and just getting her back for real

Regardless of how often your ex calls you, nothing will happen until you meet up with her in person and re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you for real.

A lot of guys remain stuck talking with their ex over the phone for weeks or even months, without ever plucking up the courage to get to a meet up with her.

Essentially, a guy like that is hoping that the more often they talk over the phone, the more likely it is that they will drift back into a relationship with each other.

Yet, in most cases, the woman gets bored of waiting for her ex to make a move and eventually her interest begins to fade; especially if she interacts with other guys and they make her feel more attracted than her ex does.

Then, by the time he builds up the courage to ask her to meet up, she will likely say something like, â€œSorry, but Iâ€™ve actually met someone else and I want to focus on building my relationship with him. I hope you understand and that we can still be friends. I promise I will still call you from time to time to say hi.â

Heâs then left feeling rejected and wondering what he did wrong.

The answer is that he waited too long.

He didnât follow through on the ex back process and get her back.

So, if you donât want that to happen to you, then make sure that you take control of the ex back process immediately.

Call you ex right away, get her to meet up with you, hook up with her and get her back for real.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Does She Miss Me After No Contact?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends:

1. Sometimes a woman will miss her ex after no contact if she can't seem to move on

[image: Sometimes a woman will miss her ex after no contact, if she can't seem to move on without him]

Sometimes, when a guy cuts off all contact with his ex (i.e. he uses No Contact to make her miss him) after a break, she may initially think something along the lines of, "This is for the best. I know the right man for me is out there and now I can focus on finding him, rather than being stuck in a miserable relationship."

She may then focus on moving on and finding herself a replacement man as quickly as possible.

For example: She might

- Go out to clubs, bars and parties with her single friends.
- Join an online dating site or go on an app like Tinder.
- Join a meet up group in her area so that she can connect with like-minded people, especially men.
- Make it clear on social media that she's now single, in the hope that any guys who might be interested in her will make a move.

However, as the days and possibly even weeks go by, she may notice that nothing is really happening and that she's not moving on as quickly as she had originally hoped.

When that happens, she might find herself thinking about her ex more and more.

However, rather than remember all the negative things about him that used to turn her off (e.g. he was insecure and that made him clingy and needy, he was unreliable, he was boring and she felt more like his friend than his lover), like she used to do when they first broke up, she instead starts thinking about all the nice things about him that she misses (e.g. his sense of humor, how he always treated her well, his adventurous spirit).

She'll then likely begin thinking things like, "I miss him so much. Why isn't he calling me anymore? I hope he hasn't already forgotten about me and moved on. Maybe I should contact him to see what he's been up to."

She might then text him, send him a message via social media or call him to say hi and see what happens from there.

When that happens, as long as the guy has been using the time apart to change and improve some of the things that turned her off in the relationship, he can easily reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for him and get her back.

Of course, if the guy has just been using No Contact to get her back, but hasn't done anything else in that time to change and improve some of his issues, she will pick up on it right away and she will then tell herself something like, "Even though I've been struggling to move on and find another man, I'm still better off without him. He's still stuck at the same level he was at"

when we broke up and it doesn't look like he's ever going to change, or even know what or how to change. I need to accept that what we had is 100% over and forget about him. I will just have to wait for as long as it takes to find a new man.

She then cuts herself off from him and continues to try and move on.

This is why, if you are using No Contact to get your ex back, make sure that you're ready if she decides to reach out to you.

You need to prepare to give her an upgraded attraction experience.

For example: Some examples of how to do that are:

- Show her by way of your behavior, conversation style and actions that you have already fixed some of the issues that were turning her off before (e.g. if you were insecure and self-doubting before you're now more confident and self-assured, if you weren't ballsy enough with her and you allowed her to dominate you in the relationship with her confident personality you now stand up to her and put her in her place in a loving but assertive manner).
- React differently to what she says and does (e.g. if she previously made you feel angry when she created unnecessary drama, you now relax and lovingly laugh at her attempts to get to you).
- Make her feel feminine and girly in your presence by thinking, talking, behaving, feeling and acting like a masculine man, rather than being extra nice or neutral around her.

When she experiences the new you for herself, she naturally opens back up to you and you can then easily and effortlessly make her your girl again.

Another reaction to No Contact is:

2. Some women don't care the minute they break up with a guy, so No Contact doesn't have much, or any effect

[image: Some women don't care the minute the break up with a guy]

In quite a lot of cases, by the time a woman reaches the point where she breaks up with a guy, she has fully disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, when the break up finally happens, it's more of a relief to her to be out of the relationship, than a disaster and she's likely just focusing on moving on, getting on with her life and finding a new man as quickly as possible.

Of course, she might also be worried that her ex will try to get her back and she may be thinking things like, I just want this relationship to be behind me so that I can get on with my life. I really hope he's not going to make it difficult for me by chasing after me and begging and pleading with me to give him another chance, because I just don't have any desire to deal with that.

This is why, if the guy then chooses No Contact as his preferred method of getting her back, rather than make her miss him, she instead only feels a lot of relief that her fears about him trying to get her back didn't come true.

[image: Some women don't care the minute the break up with a guy]

She then promptly forgets all about him as she continues to move forward in her life without him.

If he then contacts her after a few weeks or even months to see if he can get her back, she has usually already moved on and she may then say something like, Wow, why are you calling me after all this time? I thought youâ€¦ moved on when I didnâ€¦ hear from you and I did the same. What we had is over, so please donâ€¦ call me again. Bye.â€¦

He is then left feeling dejected and wondering why No Contact didnâ€¦ make her miss him.

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

If you want your ex to miss you and give you another chance, the best approach to take is to actively make her have feelings for you again by interacting with her and re-attracting her.

In most ex back cases, you canâ€¦ just sit back and hope that by ignoring her for a few weeks or months, sheâ€¦s going to miraculously develop strong sexual and romantic feelings for you again. It rarely, if ever happens.

In almost cases, the woman just moves on.

So, without being needy or pushy, you should interact with your ex via text, social media, on the phone or in person, so you can re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Then, if you want to, you can give her a week of space (not longer than that) to really miss you and want you back.

However, that will only happen if youâ€¦ve re-sparked her feelings first.

If you havenâ€¦t, she simply wonâ€¦t care and she will continue to move on.

Another reaction to No Contact isâ€¦!

3. Some women wait for a while for their ex to start the ex back process, but then move on when he takes too long to make a move

[image: Some women wait, but then move on if their ex takes too long to make a move]

There are times when a woman will break up with a guy, but at the back of her mind she still hopes they will work things out and get back together again.

Essentially, sheâ€¦s likely hoping that after a few days, he will call her and they can then work things out between them.

However, even a woman who is secretly waiting for her ex to start the ex back process with her, him cutting off communication with her actually helps her get over him.

Hereâ€¦s whyâ€¦!

Imagine a woman is sitting at home after a break up and missing her ex.

Although she might be feeling some pain, anger and disappointment about the break up, sheâ€¦s also feeling hopeful about working things out with him.

Yet, rather than him call her up after a few days and actively begin reactivating some of her feelings of respect and attraction for him again, he instead chooses to use the No Contact Rule to make her miss him.

He then cuts off all communication with her (i.e. he stops texting, calling or even messaging her on social media) for weeks and maybe even months.

When this happens, she starts to doubt his feelings for her and she begins to wonder things like, â€¦Why is he ignoring me? Doesnâ€¦t he care about me at all? I thought that heâ€¦d at least just text or phone to check if Iâ€¦m okay, but I havenâ€¦t heard from him even once since we broke up. What a fool Iâ€¦ve been, sitting her and hoping that he might also want us to get back together again, like I do. Heâ€™s obviously already over me and moving on with his life. Maybe he didnâ€™t even love me at all. What a jerk! Well, Iâ€™m not going to waste another second waiting for him and missing him. If he can forget about me so easily, then I can do the same. In fact, Iâ€™m going to call my friends right now and organize a girls night out where I can meet new guys and even get laid if I want to.â€™

She then puts all her effort into completely switching off her feelings for him (e.g. by focusing on the anger she feels towards him for ignoring her, by actively moving on with or hooking up with another guy).

If the guy then contacts her after 30 or 60 days of no contact to get her back, she will likely say something like, â€™I canâ€™t believe you have the nerve to call me after all this time. Well, hereâ€™s a news flash for youâ€™! when we broke up I really did care for you and I thought that you felt the same way about me too. I spent weeks waiting for you to even just text me once to see how I was doing, but that never happened. So, I gave up and moved on. Now after all this time you call me out of the blue and Iâ€™m not sure what you were hoping to achieve with that, but before you say anything, let me tell you that Iâ€™ve met someone else and Iâ€™m happy now. So, please leave me alone and donâ€™t call me again. Bye.â€™

Heâ€™s then left feeling devastated and wondering what went wrong.

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

Remember: To get an ex back, you have to be active about it rather than inactive.

That means, you canâ€™t ignore her and hope that her feelings for you will grow.

So, if you want your ex to miss you, you can give her a few days of space.

However, anything longer than a week is a waste of time and it only helps her get over you faster and move on.

Another reaction to No Contact isâ€™!

4. Some women are so turned off by the time they eventually break up that they quickly move on with a new guy to feel better

[image: She moves on right away]

Sometimes, a woman has lost so much respect, attraction and love for her guy that her main focus after the break up is to find a new man as quickly as possible to get revenge on her ex for what happened in the relationship with him.

She may even think things like, â€™Iâ€™ll show him that I donâ€™t need him in my life. In fact, I can get any man I want and I donâ€™t have to settle for a jerk like him anymore!â€™

She then opens herself up to meeting and hooking up with single, available men.

Remember: Most women are perfectly capable of finding a new guy who wants to have sex with her, date her and get into a relationship with her.

So, if her ex then uses No Contact as a way of getting her back, rather than think, â€™I feel so sad and hurt that my ex isnâ€™t calling me up. I miss him so much,â€™ she will more than likely be thinking, â€™Itâ€™s such a relief to be out of that relationship and not have to hear from him anymore. I can finally move on with my life and enjoy a happy, healthy relationship with a new man now.â€™

This is why, if you want your ex to miss you, you have to reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you and you can't do that if you're ignoring her.

You need to call her on the phone or meet up with her in person and show her that you're a new and improved man now.

When she can see for herself that you no longer turn her off in the ways you used to before (e.g. you're more confident and self-assured rather than insecure and needy, you're more ballsy rather than a push over with her, you more emotionally masculine which makes her feel feminine and girly when she's with you), she will naturally feel more open to reconnecting with her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

When that happens, getting her back becomes easy.

However, if you just ignore her and hope that will change how she feels, don't be shocked when you find her in a new relationship when you contact her after 30 or 60 days of No Contact.

Common Problems Guys Experience When Using No Contact to Get an Ex Back

Although No Contact can work in some situations (e.g. when a woman is still in love with her guy and really wants to get back with him, she is really struggling to find a replacement guy and decides to get back with him rather than be single while still secretly looking for another guy), most of the time it backfires and is the cause of a guy losing his ex for real.

For example: Some of the common problems guys experience when using No Contact are!

1. She doesn't contact him and then doesn't reply when he contacts her

Regardless of how a woman feels about her ex after a break (e.g. she no longer feels respect, attraction or love for him, she still cares for him and wants him back, she's open to being friends with him), when he cuts off all contact with her as a way of getting her back, it can potentially lead to her!

- Getting over the pain of the break up and realizing that she's actually fine without him in her life.
- Feeling attracted to other guys (and liking it).
- Getting annoyed with him for not having the balls to get her back and make the relationship better this time around.
- Believing that he doesn't care about her anymore.

This may cause her to think things like, Well, if this is how it has to end between us, so be it. I'm better off without him anyway, and she then puts even more effort into moving on as quickly as possible.

Then, when her ex finally contacts her after 30 or 60 days, rather than respond immediately and say something along the lines of, I'm so happy to hear from you. I've really missed you! Can we meet up so that we can catch up, she instead just ignores him.

He may then wonder things like, What happened? Isn't ignoring a woman supposed to make her miss me and want me back? Why hasn't that happened with my ex? Why isn't she replying to my texts/e-mails/calls/social media messages?

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that No Contact is not the easiest, fastest or most efficient way to get an ex back.

What is?

Calling her on the phone or meeting up with her in person and actively making her have feelings for him again.

When she experiences the new him and begins to like him again, it's a lot easier for her to stop focusing on how he behaved near the end of the relationship and shortly after the break up.

On the other hand, if he ignores her, she will only have his past and current behavior to gauge him on (i.e. that he stuffed up in the relationship and that he's now ignoring her) and that will usually only convince her that she's better off without him.

So, if you're serious about getting your ex back, forget about using No Contact to make her miss you and focus instead on actively replacing her negative thoughts and memories about you (e.g. anger, resentment, indifference), with new, positive feelings (e.g. respect, attraction, joy).

She then naturally drops her guard and opens back up to giving you another chance.

Another common problem guys experience when using No Contact is

2. Not understanding that the No Contact Rule works better for women to get a man back

If a woman ignores her ex after a break up, chances are high that he will come back to her. Why?

Some of the reasons are

If a man can't get any action, he will usually go back to his ex to get some.

Alternatively, if a man dumps a woman and she accepts it and doesn't ever contact him, he will often want to get her back with her just to feel like he has that power over her.

On the other hand, when a man uses No Contact as his main method of getting her back, it rarely works out. Why?

To begin with, when a woman has disconnected from her sexual and romantic feelings for a guy, not hearing from him is what she wants, because it gives her the chance to move on.

Also, most women are attractive enough to easily find a new man, so when a woman's ex ignores her after the break up, she will usually have plenty of guys chasing after her and making her feel attractive, wanted and desirable.

She may then hook up with one of them, rather than chase after an ex that she assumes is no longer interested in her.

Finally, even if a woman does miss her ex, when she doesn't hear from him for a long time, rather than risk contacting him and being rejected by him, she instead tries to get over him and move on.

So, as you can see, using No Contact to make your ex miss you is not the best idea.

However, if you call her right away and start reactivating her feelings for you, she could be back in your arms sooner rather than later.

Doesn't that sound better than waiting for her to come back to you and risking losing her to another guy?

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Do Love Avoidants Come Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends on the following:

1. Are you now able to make her feel the kind of love that she always really wanted to feel with you?

Sometimes a guy will offer a love experience that just doesn't hit a woman at her core.

For example: He's too nice, gentle and sweet.

However, although she appreciates that, he lacks the masculine edge that would make the relationship more exciting and balanced for her.

As a result, she stops feeling motivated to stay in the relationship with him and decides to just break up with him, move on and find the kind of guy who has a more well-rounded approach to attraction.

Another example is where the guy is too clingy and emotionally dependent on her (i.e. he doesn't have friends, hobbies, interests or a purpose outside of his relationship with her).

Once again, although she appreciates his devotion to her, too much of it makes her feel smothered and like she can't maintain any of her own independence (e.g. her own friends, interests or hobbies), because he constantly needs her support, approval and presence in his life to be able to cope and feel good about himself.

This causes her to lose respect for him as a man.

When she stops respecting him, she also starts to feel less and less attracted to him and eventually, there's nothing left for her to want to stick around for.

When that happens, her ex may end up thinking things like, "I know what we had was perfect. Her problem is that she's a love avoidant. As soon as things get too good in a relationship, she runs away."

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that he simply wasn't making her feel the way she wanted to feel when she was in a relationship with him.

So, if you want your love avoidant ex to come back, you need to make sure that you give her the attraction experience she really wants from you, not what you think she wants.

For example: Some of the ways to make a woman feel the kind of love she wants to feel in a relationship are:

- Being a good man to her and being attentive and loving, while at the same time maintaining your emotional independence. She is the most important person in your life, but your purpose is the most important thing.
- Being grateful to have such a good woman as her in your life, while at the same time feeling confident in yourself and in your value to her. You know that even though she's an amazing woman, you're a remarkable man and she's lucky to have you.
- Being a good, reliable friend to her in the relationship, while at the same time not being a neutral friend and instead making her feel like a sexy, desirable woman. You understand that without the spark of sexual attraction what you have is a friendship, not a relationship.

- Being masculine around her (i.e. in the way you talk to her, the tone of voice you use, how you touch her, how you behave), so she can feel feminine.

[image: Are you able to give her the love experience she wants?]

When your love avoidant ex experiences those kinds of changes in you, she can't stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

Suddenly she feels surges of sexual and romantic attraction for you again and then the idea of being your girl once more starts to feel good to her.

When that happens, it becomes pretty easy to get her back.

Another question to ask yourself is

2. Are you willing to interact with her and re-attract her?

Sometimes, when a guy gets broken up with by his woman, he will sit around feeling dejected and wondering, Do love avoidants come back?

So, rather than interacting with her and actively re-sparking her feelings for him, he instead pulls back and just waits for her to hopefully change her mind.

Essentially, he's hoping that she will eventually miss him enough to make the first move (e.g. text or call him to say hi, send him a message on social media or suggest a meet up to say hello in person).

He then sits around for weeks, months and in some cases even years, waiting for her to contact him, only to be devastated when he realizes that she's not coming back and is already dating someone else.

He may then try to make himself feel better by thinking something along the lines of, It's not my fault. She's a love avoidant. That's just the way she is.

Yet, here's the thing

A woman will rarely chase after a guy; especially if she's the one running away from love.

Instead, she will focus on moving on as quickly as possible.

So, if you don't interact with your ex and actively focus on re-attracting her, you're just going to be playing into her hands.

Don't lose out on getting her back because you're waiting for her to come back to you on her own, because that will probably never happen.

You need to be courageous enough to make the first move and get the ex back process started with her.

How can you do that?

Start by calling her on the phone and re-attracting her a little bit (e.g. by using humor to make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again, showing her by what you say and the way you respond to her that you've changed in some of the ways that are important to her, maintaining your confidence regardless of how she treats you or what she says to put you off).

Then, get her to meet up with you in person so that you can fully re-attract her by showing her that you are now the man she always wanted you to be (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more charismatic, more emotionally mature, no longer clingy and needy).

The more she experiences and enjoys the new you, the less she will be able to avoid experiencing surges of respect, attraction and love for you.

As a result, she starts to look at you with different eyes and she may begin thinking things like, â€œAs much as I try to fight it, I can't stop myself from feeling love for him. He's turned my world upside down and made me believe that being in a happy, loving relationship with one man is possible.â€

She then wants to spend more and more time with you to see what happens.

On the other hand, if you don't interact with her because you're hoping she will come back to you on her own, she will most likely move on and forget about you.

Another question to ask yourself isâ€

3. Is she going to be able to easily meet another guy who makes her feel more attraction?

[image: Is she going to be able to easily meet a new guy who makes her feel more attraction?]

When a woman decides to break up with a guy, it's usually because her wants and desires in the relationship don't match what she's actually getting from him (e.g. she wants a confident, self-assured man but he's insecure and needy, she wants a man who is emotionally more dominant than her but he is a wimpy and emotionally sensitive, she wants him to make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman, but he instead makes her feel like a friend or big sister).

As a result, her feelings of respect, attraction and love begin to fade over time.

However, if she feels confident in herself and in her attractiveness to men, rather than cling to the relationship and try to make it work because she's afraid of being alone, she instead breaks up with the guy and focuses on finding herself a new man right away.

For example: All she has to do is start going to clubs, bars or parties with her friends and flirt with the men there until she picks one up to have sex with and see where that leads.

She can put out the word that she's single again and wait for all the men who have already shown interest in her to come flocking to her.

She can also join online dating sites or go on Tinder and find a new man there pretty quickly.

She can then have her pick of men for dates, sex or a relationship, without ever having to worry about her ex and what was missing in the relationship with him.

Of course, her ex might assume that this happened because she's avoiding love which is why she jumps from relationship to relationship.

Yet, in most cases, it may simply be that she hasn't found the man who can make her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with him, so she just keeps looking.

So, if you want your ex to come back to you, you need to be able to attract her in the ways that she wants.

Then and only then will she want to be with you again for real.

By the wayâ€

If you're not quite sure what your ex might have been looking for in the relationship with you, here are some questions to ask yourself to gain clarityâ€¦

- Were you emotionally strong and independent in the relationship, or did you become too clingy, jealous, possessive or needy?
- Were you emotionally masculine in a way that made her feel feminine and girly with you, or were you too emotionally sensitive and wimpy causing her to feel like she had to take care of you?
- Did you stand up to her in an assertive yet loving way when she behaved badly (e.g. threw a tantrum over something irrelevant, was moody, was rude to you), or did you let her get away with being childish and disrespectful?
- Were you a bit of a challenge to her (e.g. by not being available to her 24/7, pursuing your own interests, hobbies and goals, walking away when she didnâ€™t behave herself with you), or were you always nice and sweet and did everything she wanted you to do?
- Were you the kind of man she could depend on to be emotionally strong and confident all the time, or did you often lose your cool, become emotional and doubt yourself?

Depending on your answers to these questions, you will likely begin to have a better idea of what you need to change and improve to be able to re-attract your ex.

When she experiences the new you (i.e. you are now behaving and responding in a completely different way to the way you were before), her guard will naturally come down and she will naturally start feeling drawn to you again.

She will want to explore her new, fascinating feelings of attraction for you because you are now the man sheâ€™s been looking for all along and she no longer has to run and avoid love.

4. Was she really avoiding love with you, or just not feeling it?

Sometimes a woman might get into a relationship with a guy sheâ€™s not fully attracted to.

For example: She might say to herself, â€œI know heâ€™s not exactly my type, but heâ€™s a nice guy and he really treats me well. Maybe if I give him a chance, he will eventually change in some of the ways that are important to me and we can then be happy together.â€

However, if over time she notices that her guy is stuck at the same level he was at when they first got together and that he still doesnâ€™t have a clue how to make her feel attracted in the ways that she wants (e.g. becoming more ballsy, stop being so insecure, stop being too nice and not being able to spark her feelings of sexual desire), itâ€™s relatively easy for her to move on, because she never really got to the point where she was fully into him.

He may then perceive her as being a love avoidant, but what he doesnâ€™t realize is that she was only avoiding love with him, because he wasnâ€™t making her connect to those feelings (i.e. because he was turning her off with his attitude, thinking, actions, behavior and the way he responded to her).

The good news however, is that even if this was the case between you and your ex, you can still change how she feels. How?

If you use every interaction you have with her from now on to spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. by making her smile and laugh, making her feel like a desirable, sexy woman, showing her that youâ€™ve really changed and improved in some of the ways that matter to her), she will naturally start to feel drawn to you again.

She may then begin thinking things like, “This is so weird. I really thought I didn’t have feelings for him, but all of a sudden I can’t get him out of my mind. I seem to be thinking about him all the time. Is it possible that I’ve actually fallen in love with him without even realizing it? Maybe I made a mistake by breaking up with him. Maybe he’s the right guy for me after all. Why don’t I just give him another chance and see what happens?”

She then becomes open to coming back to you.

This is why you shouldn’t waste any more time thinking that your ex is a love avoidant and that getting her back will be difficult.

If you focus on re-attracting her instead, sooner rather than later you may be surprised to find that she’s head over heels on love with you and never wants to let you go.

So, call her on the phone or meet up with her in person and spark her feelings for you by showing her that you’re a new and improved man.

Then guide her back into a relationship with you that’s 100% better than it was before, because she is now fully committed to being your girl rather than looking for a way out.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Attracted to a Love Avoidant Ex

It’s quite possible that your ex is a love avoidant.

However, that doesn’t mean you can’t get her back.

Just make sure that you don’t make the mistakes that most guys make when in a situation like yours:

1. Assuming that no man could ever cause her to stop avoiding love

Sometimes a guy might say to himself, “It’s not my fault that she left me. I’ve noticed that she does this with every guy that she dates. I think she’s just a love avoidant and she will never be able to settle down and be happy with a guy.”

However, if he then finds out that she’s in love with a guy and maybe even moving in with him, getting engaged or married to him, or planning to start a family with him, his confidence will take a huge blow, because she’s not fitting into the love avoidant mould he’s put her in.

Here’s the thing:

A woman will only avoid love for as long as it takes for her to find a guy who can make her feel the way she wants to feel when she’s with her guy (e.g. excited, turned on, respectful, lucky to be with him, desirable, sexy, adored).

When that happens, she will quickly change her avoiding ways and hold on to him as firmly as she can, because she doesn’t want to lose him.

She will then be a loving, devoted woman to him who treats him well.

That man can be you.

All it takes is for you to spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you and make her see that she’ll be losing out if she doesn’t come back to you.

Another mistake that guys make when in a situation like yours isâ€¦!

2. Offering the same thing that other guys have offered her in the past, which led to them getting dumped by her

[image: Offering the same thing that other guys have offered her in the past, which led to them getting dumped by her]

The likely reason why a woman will get into relationship after relationship without settling down is often because sheâ€™s looking for a guy who is different to every other guy she has dated.

In most cases, she will meet a guy and feel drawn to him because he displays certain personality traits and behaviors that are instinctively attractive to her (e.g. heâ€™s confident and emotionally strong, he makes her feel sexy and desirable, heâ€™s emotionally more dominant than her).

However, once the initial thrill of being together wears off, she may begin to notice that the things that attracted her to him initially have started to fade away.

For example: If the guy was confident before, he is now more insecure and needy.

If he made her feel strong surges of sexual attraction for him before, he now makes her feel neutral feelings for him.

If he was more emotionally dominant before, heâ€™s now too submissive around her.

She then naturally feels turned off and so she breaks up with him and moves on to the next guy in the hope the he will be different.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

If you want your ex to come back, you need to make sure that you donâ€™t give her what sheâ€™s been getting from every guy in her life so far.

So, donâ€™t take her avoidance of love seriously and try to suck up to her and show her that youâ€™re different and would never hurt her.

Be more of a challenge and donâ€™t get dragged into her tests.

When she sees for herself that you really are the man sheâ€™s been looking for all along, sheâ€™ll be the one asking you for a relationship again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Said She Has Moved On, But Still Texts Me Whenever She Wants

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 possible reasons why your ex still texts you, even though she has moved on:

1. She enjoys the power she has over you

[image: She enjoys the power she has over you]

It's only natural that when a guy still has feelings for his ex and is hoping they can work things out and get back together again, he's going to feel a bit confused when she continues to text him whenever she wants, even though she has moved on.

However, he might also feel excited that she's still in contact with him and begin thinking things like, Maybe she still has feelings for me and it's her way of letting me know. This could be my one chance to get her back.

He may then respond to her in what he assumes is a cool, or neutral way and wait around hoping that she will make her feelings obvious to him.

Yet, rather than his ex woman coming out and saying something like, I think I made a mistake. Will you give me another chance? she gets a thrill out of knowing that she can still control her ex and make him panic, worry and try hard to impress her whenever she wants.

Here's the thing though!

If you respond to every text your ex sends you, are always available to her or are always super nice and sweet to her, then she knows that you are very excited to get a text from her, even though you might try to act cool or as though you don't really care either way.

You gave her that power and if you continue to text in a way that suggests she still has the power, the she will enjoy messing with your head whenever she wants.

Yet, it won't necessarily make her want to be with you though.

Why?

In a relationship, if you hand your power over to a woman, she won't be able to respect you anymore.

If she can't respect you, she won't be able to feel sexually attracted to you and without those two things in place, seeing you as a better option to her new guy simply won't happen.

So, don't give your ex power over you and allow her to manipulate you by texting you whenever she wants even though she says she's moved on.

You need to take your power back and show her (in a loving, but dominant way) that you're not going to let her push you around anymore.

For example: You can do that by putting an end to texting back and forth with her whenever it suits her and just call her on the phone and re-attract her (e.g. by using humor to change the vibe between you and her, flirting with her to create some sexual tension, showing her that you're a new, more confident and emotionally strong man that she can't push around).

Then, even if she initially pretends to be annoyed with you and says something along the lines of, â€œYou shouldn't be calling me. I told you I've moved on,â€ you just need to maintain your confidence with her and not let her call the shots.

In other words, take control of the situation in an assertive manner, but still be a good guy about it.

Then, reawaken some of her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. by using humor to lighten the mood, making her feel excited to be talking to you again, making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine vibe) and get her to meet up with you in person so that you can get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex said that she has moved on but still texts you whenever she wants isâ€

2. She misses you from time to time and texts you to see what will happen

[image: She misses you from time to time and texts you to see what will happen]

Sometimes, a woman will continue to miss her ex and wonder about what could have been if she hadn't broken up with him, even after she's moved on.

For example: She might think to herself, â€œI really do miss so many things about him. He was a good guy in so many ways. Maybe if I stay in touch with him, I can find out if he's changed and is now able to make me feel attracted in the way I really want, or if he's still the same as before.â€

She may then text him from time to time to see how he responds and what happens from there.

Unfortunately, in most cases, the guy will simply feel confused and think something like, â€œShe said she has moved on but she still texts me whenever she wants. What does that mean? Is it a sign that she still has feelings for me, or is she just doing it to mess with my head?â€

He will then usually do nothing to reactivate his ex's feelings of respect and sexual attraction for him and show her that he truly has changed and become a better man since the break up (e.g. more confident and emotionally courageous, more assertive and ballsy, more relaxed and easy-going) and will instead wait for her to make her feelings clear to him first.

Yet, that rarely (if ever) happens.

Instead, she will start to realize that she's just wasting her time with him and that he's still stuck at the same level he was at when they broke up and she will then focus on truly getting over him and moving on for real.

So, if you don't want that to happen to you, don't waste time wondering why your ex is still texting you.

Instead, take it as a positive sign that she still has feelings for you and take action to get her back.

Get her on a call, or meet up with her in person and show her that she didn't make a mistake by continuing to text you whenever she wants.

Start re-attracting her in the ways that she always wanted you to, so that her guard comes down and she opens back up to kissing, sex and a relationship with you once again.

Another possible reason why your ex said that she has moved on but still texts you whenever she wants isâ€

3. She wants to keep you around as a back up plan in case her new relationship ends soon

There are some women who don't like the idea of being single for very long.

So even though she may have moved on quickly after a break up (i.e. to avoid being alone) and has a new man in her life, she might also like the idea of keeping her ex on a string in case her new relationship doesn't work out.

In that way, not only does she get to experience the thrill of being in an exciting, new relationship, she also has an ex who is available to her if she ever needs him.

That may sound cruel to you, but that's the way some women are.

This is why, you need to take action right now and decide what you really want.

For example: Ask yourself, â€œDo I want to get back with my ex, or do I want to let her go and move on?â€

If you decide that you want to move on without her, stop allowing her to manipulate you by texting you whenever she wants.

You can do that by sending her a text saying something like, â€œHey, you said you've moved on, so I think it's time for us to accept what we had is over and go our separate ways. I wish you only the best. Bye,â€ and just stop responding to her texts from then on and focus on moving on too.

On the other hand, if you decide that you really do want your ex back, then don't allow her to mess you around by treating you as her back up plan.

Instead, shake things up by calling her on the phone or meeting up with her in person and begin sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

Make her want you more than she wants her new man.

You can do that by making her laugh and smile, by standing up to her in a dominant (yet loving) way and by flirting with her and making her feel girly and feminine in comparison to your masculine vibe and approach to conversations and interactions.

The more you do that, the less she will push you away because she will naturally feel drawn to you more than she does to her new man.

It's then up to you to guide her through the final steps of the ex back process and make her your girl once again.

Another possible reason why your ex said that she has moved on but still texts you whenever she wants isâ€

4. Her new guy is boring, so she texts you for some feelings of excitement

There are many reasons why a woman will move on really quickly after a break up.

For example:

- She dislikes the idea of being without a man in her life, so she gets into a new relationship as quickly as possible.
- She got lucky and found a guy who made her feel good about herself at a time when her confidence had taken a dent (i.e. because her relationship failed).

- She fears that her ex will move on first, so she hooks up with the first man who shows interest in her to make sure that sheâ€™s not the one left behind.

Then, if she also happens to meet a guy (e.g. at work, university, in the neighborhood, through friends) who gives her the feelings that she is craving (i.e. love, attraction, respect), she will quickly hook up with him.

However, just because a woman moves on, it doesnâ€™t mean the new man in her life is the perfect guy for her.

In fact, in some instances, the guy is actually just a rebound relationship to her while she figures out what she really wants.

Then over time, once the initial excitement of being with someone new wears off, she might begin to notice things about him that turn her off (e.g. heâ€™s boring and predictable, isnâ€™t ballsy enough, is a push over).

As a result, she begins to lose interest in him.

At the same time, she begins thinking about her ex and how he used to make her feel when things were still good between (e.g. how he was unpredictable and fun to be around, how he always made her laugh, how he had was always up for a new adventure) and she begins to miss that about him.

When that happens, she may decide to text him to hopefully spark some excitement in her and spice up her life; even if itâ€™s only briefly.

The good news is, if this is the case with your ex, you can use that to your advantage and reactivate her feelings for you so that you can get her back.

How can you do that?

You need to interact with your ex over the phone and in person and actively make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you.

The more you reawaken those feelings inside of her, the faster she will reconnect with her original feelings of love for you and want you back.

Then, dumping her new guy and getting back with you will happen very quickly and easily.

3 Ways You Can Go Wrong With an Ex Who Keeps Texting You Whenever She Wants Even Though Sheâ€™s Moved On

Right now, your ex seems to have all the power.

Basically, sheâ€™s the one who texts you whenever she wants, while youâ€™re the one who is left feeling confused and unsure of what to do.

You need to change that.

You need to take the lead so that she can begin respecting you as a man again.

When she respects you, she will automatically start to feel sexually attracted to you.

You can then build on those feelings and make her fall in love with you all over again.

However, that wonâ€™t happen if you make the following mistakes:

1. Being really nice or very neutral via text

If you suck up to your ex and pretend that youâ€”re only interested in being her nice, neutral friend by being on your best behavior when she texts you, rather than make her think, *â€”I never realized this about him before, but heâ€”s such a sweet guy. Heâ€”s so sensitive and patient and nice. Even though I told him that Iâ€”ve moved on, he still treats me so well, while never putting any pressure on me to dump my new guy and get back with him. Thatâ€”s just so attractive to me. Maybe I should give him another chance,*â€” she will likely just continue to mess with your head (i.e. by texting you whenever she wants) while she continues to enjoy the benefits of her new relationship.

So, donâ€”t do that to yourself.

If you want to get your ex back, make your intentions clear to her.

Of course that doesnâ€”t mean you should be rude to her, or come on too strong and throw yourself at her.

Instead, you need to make sure that youâ€”re using every interaction you have with her (via text and especially on the phone and in person) to actively make her feel sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

Donâ€”t pretend that youâ€”re not interested in getting her back.

If you only focus on making her feel unremarkable, friendly feelings for you (i.e. by being nice or neutral towards her), she probably wonâ€”t see any reason why she shouldnâ€”t stay with her new man instead.

So, if you donâ€”t want that to happen, make sure that you flirt with her and make her feel attracted, rather than acting like youâ€”re just a friend now.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€”|

2. Asking her why she does that to you

A guy might sometimes go on and on about how confused he feels when his ex continues to text him whenever she wants, even though sheâ€”s moved on and how badly it hurts him knowing that sheâ€”s with another guy.

In some ways he may be hoping that she will feel sorry for him and then let slip that she still has feelings for him.

She will then dump her new guy and they can get back together again.

Yet, that almost never happens.

Instead, asking a woman why she still texts you whenever she wants even though sheâ€”s moved on only inflates her ego and gives her a stronger sense of power over you.

She might enjoy hurting you in that way, but it doesn't make her feel attracted.

So, donâ€”t try to get pity out of her, or even worse, a confession of undying love.

Thatâ€”s not going to happen unless you actively reawaken the respect, attraction and love inside of her first.

So, focus on that.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€”|

3. Not making her feel the pain of losing you

Just because your ex keeps texting you whenever she wants, it doesn't mean you have to respond to her right away.

Right now you're just too available to her, so it seems like you're just sitting around waiting for her to change her mind and come back to you.

Don't you realize that giving off that impression is unattractive when a woman isn't attracted?

If a woman is attracted and a guy is waiting for her, then it's intriguing.

However, if she's already moved on and she gets a sense that her ex is accessible to her 24/7, she won't feel very turned on by what she perceives as his desperation.

So, if you want to reawaken some of your ex's feelings for you again, make sure you don't let her get away with texting you whenever she wants.

Instead, focus on having some fun without her and only responding to her when you're not busy.

The more she senses that you're not sitting around like a puppy dog waiting for some scraps from her, the more attracted she will start to feel to you again.

Suddenly the idea of losing you for real starts to bother her and she then opens up to talking on the phone and meeting up in person.

You can then fully reactivate her feelings for you and make her your girl once more.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Clear Things Up With My Girlfriend and Get Her Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 tips to help you clear things up with your girlfriend, so you can get her back into a relationship:

1. Don't try to get her to work on the relationship if the feelings aren't mutual right now

Right now, your girlfriend has chosen to break up with you and as a result, has probably disconnected from her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

She may also have a list of reasons why she doesn't want to get back with you again (e.g. she no longer feels respect, attraction and love for you, she feels turned off by certain aspects of your thinking and behavior).

When a woman is in that state of mind, she will rarely want to work on the relationship.

So, if her ex guy contacts her and say things like, â€œLet's try and clear things up between us so that we can get back together again,â€ or â€œPlease give our relationship another chance. I promise to do whatever it takes to make things right between us,â€ rather than think, â€œThis is great! I'm excited that he wants to clear things up with me so that we can get back together again,â€ she will close herself off even more than she already has.

Why?

He's asking for a relationship before making her have feelings for him again.

He feels attracted to her, he loves her and he wants to be with her.

Yet, she doesn't feel the same way.

It's one-sided now.

As a result, she may then think, â€œAs far as I'm concerned, being in a relationship with him isn't something that I'm interested in. I just don't have feelings for him anymore. Maybe we're just not meant to be together. I have to move on.â€

She might then go to extreme measures to cut him out of her life so she can make a fresh start (e.g. block his number on her phone, unfriend him on social media, stop hanging out at the places she knows she could bump into him), making it so much more difficult for him to get her back.

This is why you need to approach the ex back process with your ex girlfriend in a way that will open her up and make her want to talk to you and be around you more, rather than less.

In other words, you need to make the feelings between you and her mutual, or at least close to mutual.

How can you do that?

You need to use every interaction you have with your ex girlfriend (e.g. via social media, text, over the phone and especially in person), to re-spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you again, so that she feels motivated to clear things up with you and get back together again for her own reasons.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that areâ€¦

- Use humor to ease the tension between you and her and make her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with you again.
Stay confident, calm and emotionally strong around her, even if she's being cold, aloof or saying things like, "I'm not interested in getting back together again," or "I would never give you another chance. What we had is over and nothing will make me change my mind."
- Show her, via your conversations style, attitude, actions and behavior that you've changed and improved some of the things that caused her to break up with you in the first place (e.g. if you were too submissive around her before show her that you're more assertive now, if you treated her more like a neutral friend before make her feel like a sexy woman around you now, if you were too emotionally sensitive before show her that you've become more emotionally strong and masculine now).
- Flirt with her to create some sexual tension between you and her rather than being on your best behavior and making her feel only platonic or neutral feelings for you.
- Want her back but don't put your life on hold while you go about getting her back. Show her that you don't need her to be a great man, by being happy, confident and fulfilled with or without her.
- Believe in yourself and in your value to her, rather than doubting yourself and then making her feel turned off by being insecure, needy or unsure of yourself with her.
- Be a good man to her, but also stand up to her in a loving way when she tries to control you with her confident personality (e.g. by calling the shots in the ex back process and expecting you to do whatever she says).

The more you re-spark her feelings for you, the more she will naturally start to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She then becomes curious about her new feelings for you and is more eager to interact with you to explore them, rather than cutting you off and then potentially regretting it later.

She then becomes open to talking to you, hanging out with you and seeing what happens from there.

Another thing you should do to help clear things up with your girlfriend and get her back is

2. Don't make it all about your feelings, wants and needs

[image: Don't make it all about your feelings, wants and needs]

It's only natural that right now you may be feeling sad, upset, dejected and like you're stuck in a position you don't want to be in (i.e. broken up with your girlfriend).

You might also want to express these feelings to her, so that she can see for herself just how much she really means to you.

This is why you may be tempted to say things to her like, "Even though we've broken up, I want you to know that my feelings for you haven't changed one bit. You still mean the world to me and even though you currently don't want anything to do with me, I'm not ready to give up on us. I need you so much and nothing in my life feels right without you in it. Please don't give up on me yet. I honestly believe we can fix the situation between us and get back together again. I'm prepared to do whatever it takes to make you happy and show you that things will be different this time. Please just give me one more chance."

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and sexual attraction for a guy, expressing his feelings to her in this way doesnât matter to her.

So, instead of getting the response heâs hoping for (i.e. she feels flattered by his strong feelings for her and then wants to clear things up with him and get back together again), she instead feels turned off by what she perceives as his selfishness.

She may then think something along the lines of, âI canât believe that heâs making this break up all about him and what he feels, wants and needs. Even now, he hasnât stopped to consider what I feel, want and need. Itâs like he doesnât even care as long as he gets what he wants. Iâm so fed up with his selfish, self-absorbed behavior. He just doesnât get me and by the look of things,â he hasnât even bothered to try. Well, this time Iâm putting myself and what I want first and Iâm not falling for his needy, desperate attempts to convince me to give him another chance just so that he can feel better. If he canât make me feel the way I want to feel in a relationship with him, Iâm going to simply move on and find a guy who can. Iâm not going to give him another chance based on his feelings for me. From now on, itâs my own feelings that Iâm looking out for.â

This is why, if you want to clear things up with your girlfriend and get her back, you need to understand that it canât all be about your feelings for her and how much you care for her, or how much you need her back in your life, because she wonât care about that.

What she cares about now is her own feelings, wants and needs, not yours.

So, your approach to getting her back needs to be about how you make her feel when you interact with her over the phone and especially in person (e.g. happy, respectful, excited, turned on).

When she begins to experience positive emotions with you again, her defenses will naturally slip down.

When that happens, she stops feeling so angry and resentful towards you and begins to feel happy that you still have strong feelings for her and are willing to clear things up with her so that you can get back together again.

Another thing you should do to help clear things up with your girlfriend and get her back isâ!

3. Donât make the problems between you and her out to be worse than they really are Sometimes a guy is so focused on clearing things up with his girlfriend so that he can get her back, that he turns every interaction he has with her (especially over the phone and in person) into a long discussion about the problems they had in their relationship.

In his mind heâs likely thinking things like, âThe more we go over what went wrong between us, the more likely it is that weâll be able to clear things up. Iâll be able to see things from her point of view and understand what caused her to want to break up with me and sheâll be able to see things from my perspective and understand why I did what I did. When we understand each other better, we can fix things between us so we can get back together again.â

However, even though his intentions are good, if the problem is talked about again and again, without using a solution, it becomes a burden and can make his girlfriend feel like a relationship with him is too stressful.

As a result, she may then decide that she made the right decision to break up with him and become closed off and disinterested in interacting with him anymore.

The truth is that most relationship problems are easily fixed when the right approach is used.

There is always an easy, step by step approach that you can use to get the result you want.

So, even though discussing the relationship problems is an important part of working things out with your ex girlfriend, it shouldn't be the main thing you do every time you interact with her.

If you stick to discussing, you will be stuck at that step.

Instead, just talk about the relationship briefly if she brings it up, but try to keep it short, easy-going and relaxed, while also adding in some humor once in a while to take away the seriousness of the situation.

Of course that doesn't mean you should joke around and not take the situation seriously.

Not at all.

However, don't make such a big deal of it either that your ex begins thinking things like, "This is just too much to work through. It's just not worth it. I'm better off moving on and finding myself a new man to start over with, rather than having to deal with all this baggage."

Another thing you should do to help clear things up with your girlfriend and get her back is

4. Let her see that you've learned from the experience and become a better man

When your ex girlfriend can see for herself that you've truly changed and improved some of the things that turned her off in the relationship with you, her guard will naturally come down and she then becomes open to clearing things up with you so that you can get back together again.

So, go ahead and show her that you're a new and improved man.

For example:

- You're more confident and emotionally independent now, rather than feeling insecure, needy and clingy.
- You're more emotionally strong now and can stand up to her in a loving way when she's being out of line, rather than handing all your power over to her and letting her get away with treating you badly.
- You're more confident in yourself and your value and attractiveness to her, so you no longer feel like she's too good for you.
- You're more emotionally masculine now and can make her feel sexy and desirable in your presence, rather than making her feel neutral or like a friend.
- You're more emotionally mature now, so she feels like she can look up to you and respect you as her man, rather than feeling like she has to take care of you and guide you.

When she experiences those kinds of changes in you, her defenses naturally come down and she opens up to being with you romantically and sexually.

By the way

Don't tell her that you've changed.

Show it to her through your actions, behavior, conversation, attitude and the way you respond to her and don't worry that she might not notice it.

A woman can pick up the changes in a guy without him having to spell it out to her.

Of course, you can mention some things if they come up naturally in conversation (e.g. if you were shy and reserved before and she asks you what you've been up to since the break up, you can tell her that you've joined a meet up group in your area and are now getting out more and doing things you enjoy).

However, keep it brief.

She's not your therapist or cheerleader at this point.

She's your ex girlfriend and will only want you back if you make her have feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction.

So, focus on that.

Another thing you should do to help clear things up with your girlfriend and get her back is

5. Focus on attraction, rather than explanations

[image: Focus on attraction, rather than explanations]

One of the most common reactions that guys have when they get broken up with is to try and explain to their ex why they should try and work things out between them.

For example: A guy might say something along the lines of, "After everything we shared, we owe it to ourselves to clear things up and give our relationship another shot. Please don't give up on us. Please just give me one more chance to show you that we can make our relationship work."

Alternatively, a guy might try to explain why he stuffed up and say things like, "I know I made silly mistakes, but I was under a lot of stress at work/university. However, I'm over that now and I promise I won't let things get in the way of our relationship again. I love you more than anything and I give you my word that I will handle things differently if you give me one more chance."

Yet, a woman rarely becomes convinced to change her mind based on explanations or excuses.

This is especially true, if she senses that the guy is panicking and is desperately saying whatever he can think of to make her change her mind.

So, what should you do instead?

You need to start saying and doing the types of things that will reactivate your ex girlfriend's sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. being more confident and emotionally strong rather than insecure and wimpy, treating her like a desirable woman rather than like a neutral friend, being more ballsy and standing up to her when she's being out of line rather than being super nice and handing your power to her), so that the idea of getting back with you again starts to feel good to her.

Remember: It has to be about how she feels, not about what you want or why you think she should want it too.

So, don't bother wasting time trying to convince your ex girlfriend to give you another chance with mere words.

Instead, focus on rebuilding her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you by showing her that you are a new man now (e.g. by making her laugh and smile during interactions, making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine vibe, being a confident and emotionally strong man she can depend on rather than feeling more emotionally dominant than you).

The more respect and attraction she feels for you, the more she will be convinced that giving you another chance is actually a good idea and will be fun, compelling and pleasing for her.

That's how to clear things up with your girlfriend and get her back for real.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Percentage of Break Ups That Get Back Together

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Over the years, there have been several studies conducted on couples who break up and get back together.

Contrary to what a lot of people out there assume, many couples do get back together.

Yet, how often it happens and how long the relationship will last the next time around, depends on the age of the couple and on the seriousness of the relationship.

For example:

1. Boyfriend/girlfriend relationships

[image: Boyfriend/girlfriend relationships]

In 2012, researchers Sarah Halpern-Meekin, Wendy Manning, Peggy Giordano and Monica Longmore conducted a study on 792 daters (i.e. boyfriends/girlfriends) and cohabiters (i.e. couples living together) ages 17 to 24 years old, to determine the percentage of break ups and reconciliations between them.

They discovered that approximately 44% of these couples had experienced at least one reconciliation with an ex romantic partner.

With the age group of 17-24 year olds, they also discovered that 53% of those who got back together with an ex, also reported having sex with their ex.

According to a 2010 study at Texas State University, San Marcos, 60% of teenagers will break up and get back together again with an ex and in the majority of cases, they will do this two times or more (source: Crook).

So, as you can see, getting back with a girlfriend after a break up is not as impossible as you may have originally thought.

In fact, you have an approximately 50/50 chance of it happening, if you play your cards right.

Not only that, this time around, you and her can have a better chance of that relationship lasting, because you've learned from your past mistakes and have taken action to change and improve and become a better man as a result (and visa versa).

2. Marriages

[image: Percentage of marriages that get back together]

The percentage of married couples who break up and get back together varies depending on the study.

For instance, in 2013 study conducted by Amber Vennum (an assistant professor of family studies and human services at Kansas State University) found that approximately 37% of couples living together, and 23% of married couples have broken up and then gotten back together again.

These statistics seem to be in line with earlier studies conducted on married couples (Kitson, 1985; Wineberg & McCarthy, 1994) that found that between 10-17% of married couples separated and then got back together again, and about 40% of separated married couples attempted a reconciliation (Bumpass, Castro Martin, & Sweet, 1991; Wineberg, 1996a).

Of these couples, 15% were still together 3-4 years later.

In a sample of 329 divorcing couples, Doherty, Willoughby, and Peterson (2011) found that both partners in 1 in 9 couples believed the marriage could be saved and both partners in 1 in 10 couples expressed interest in getting back together again.

In a global study of 1001 reunited couples from across 42 countries conducted by Nancy Kalish, professor emeritus at California State University in Sacramento, it was discovered that about only 6% of these couples said they married, divorced and remarried the same person.

However, on a more positive note, 72% of those who got back together again stayed together, particularly if their separations occurred at a young age.

In the United Kingdom, married couples who divorce and get back together again are now being called Yo-Yo Couples, meaning that the relationship keeps ending, only to begin again.

According to new research from the Co-Op Legal Services, a quarter of divorcees in the UK have considered reconciliation with their ex, with 12% of those actually getting back together again.

The bottom line is that even couples who divorce each other are uncertain about their decision and open to getting back together again and when they do, the chances of the marriage working out the second time around are so much higher.

Of course, if you want the highest chance of getting an ex wife or ex girlfriend back, then watch this:

3. College or university relationships

[image: Percentage of college or university relationships that get back together]

In 2009, Renée Dailey from the Department of Communication Studies at the University of Texas found that approximately 65% of U.S. college students had broken up and then gotten back together again.

In a similar study conducted by Kansas State professor Amber Vennum, she found that about 40% of the college-aged subjects studied were in a relationship with a former ex.

4. Short term relationships

There haven't been a lot of studies on short term relationships, however, some studies have found that couples in less committed relationships are less likely to get back together again compared to couples who have been living together or were married.

Yet, regardless of what these studies say, they're not entirely accurate.

Why?

Small, Independent Studies Don't Reveal What is Happening On a Wider Scale Online

All of the studies out there have been conducted on a small scale (i.e. between 300 to 1000 people).

Yet, the fact is that there are millions more couples who get back together by following expert advice they find online and they never report it to anyone, or approach the universities or social scientists who do the studies.

Instead, they just get on with their relationship without the people who are doing the studies ever knowing about it.

The Modern Man Gets 100s of New Success Stories Every Month

Here at The Modern Man, we hear from new guys every day, who've gotten their ex woman back and are now enjoying a new, improved relationship with her.

Yet, none of that is included in the survey statistics of the small studies that are sometimes reported in the news.

Only we are aware of it.

Now you are aware of it too.

You are aware that, even if the percentage of break ups that get back together seems a little low from the small studies, it doesn't reflect what is actually going on with men from all over the world who are learning a proven, step-by-step method to get their ex woman back.

Men get women back every day, all over the world and it's happening in increasing numbers every month.

So, to help you get started on the quick and easy process to getting your ex woman back, here are...

4 Tips to Help You Get Back Together With Your Ex

[image: 4 tips to help you get back together with your ex]

If you want to get your ex back for real, then we recommend that you don't spend anymore time looking at ex back percentages from small studies and then losing hope when the numbers don't look good.

Instead, take action and do what has worked for men all over the world who have successfully gotten their woman back.

Here's how you can do it!

1. Understand what aspects of your thinking and behavior turned her off in the first place and take action to change those things about yourself

If your ex is currently pushing you away and refusing to give you another chance, it may be because you keep thinking and behaving in the ways you did before.

So, rather than want to give you another chance, she's likely thinking something along the lines of, "Why would I want to get back with him when nothing about him has changed or improved. He's still the same guy I broke up with and if I did get back with him, we would only break up again immediately. I can't put myself through that again. I'm better off moving on and finding myself a new man who already has the qualities I want, rather than trying to fix my ex."

This is why it's very important that before you try to get your ex back, you first figure out her real reasons for leaving, rather than wasting time on irrelevant things.

If you're not sure where to start, here are some questions that will help you uncover the thinking and behaviors that caused your ex to disconnect from her feelings for you!

- Did your ex like that you were an emotionally strong, confident and independent man, or did she complain about you being clingy, needy, insecure and too emotionally sensitive?
- Did she like that you took the lead in the relationship and allowed her to relax into thinking, acting and behaving like a feminine woman around you, or did she feel that she had to be the strong one and make all the decisions for the both of you?
- Did she feel sexy and desirable with you, or did she feel more like a neutral friend, or even worse, a big sister to you?
- Did she enjoy the feeling of being loved, appreciated or taken care of, or did she feel a bit taken for granted or neglected.
- Did she feel safe knowing that you and her were headed in the same direction in life (i.e. you wanted the same things for the future), or did she feel insecure and like you and her weren't in sync with each other?
- Did she like the idea of you rising through the levels of life and achieving your goals, or did she feel annoyed by your lack of drive and ambition?

When you understand what really turned your ex off about you, you can take action on improving those things about yourself right now.

Then, the next time you interact with her, you will be able to give her the type of attraction experience that she really wants in a relationship by showing her that you're now the man she always wanted you to be (e.g. you make her feel understood, you're more confident and self-assured, more emotionally independent, more focused and determined, more emotionally masculine in your thinking, attitude and behavior).

When that happens she automatically begins to reconnect with her feelings of respect and attraction for you and she then becomes open to talking to you over the phone, meeting up with you in person and allowing a new relationship with you to gently unfold from there.

When you feel ready, you need to!

2. Reactivate some of her feelings for you on a phone call

Once you've made some attractive changes to your thinking and behavior (which should only take a few days and up to a week at the most), the next step is to interact with your ex on a phone call, so that she can experience the new you for herself.

One of the best ways to do that is by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

For example: Imagine you call your ex a few days after the break up and she says something like, "What do you want?" or "Why are you calling me? I thought I made it clear to you that I don't want you in my life anymore."

Rather than let that upset you and make you think things like, "This is hopeless. She doesn't want me anymore. I'm just wasting my time with her. she's never going to give me another" chance with her,â€‹ turn her coldness into something you can laugh about together.

For instance, you can say something along the lines of, â€‹*I just won the lottery and I wanted to share my winnings with you, but since youâ€™re not interested, Iâ€™ll keep it all for myself.*â€‹

She will likely respond with something like, â€‹*What? You won the lottery?*â€‹ or, â€‹*Are you serious?*â€‹

You can then say in a joking voice, â€‹*Yes I did, but since youâ€™re so mean to me, Iâ€™m keeping all $20! Haha.*â€‹

At this point she will probably laugh, or at least smile and secretly she may begin to wonder things like, â€‹*What is going on? Why is he so different all of a sudden? He seems so confident and self assured. Even though Iâ€™m being so cold to him, heâ€™s not letting it get to him like I thought it would. Itâ€™s actually fun talking to him again. Maybe heâ€™s changed after all.*â€‹

She then becomes more open to the idea of talking to you over the phone again and even meeting up with you in person, because sheâ€™s feeling drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

Remember: When you make a woman laugh and smile, you are helping her to get over the pain, anger and resentment that she feels towards you.

Even if she tries to fight it, she canâ€™t help but relax and want to interact with you more.

From there, you need toâ€‹

3. Get her to agree to meet up with you in person, but do so in an easy-going manner

Regardless of how often you make your ex laugh and smile on the phone with you, the relationship isnâ€™t going to move beyond that point unless you meet up with her and fully reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you in person.

So, make sure you donâ€™t continue calling her on the phone indefinitely without actually getting to the point where you arrange to meet up with her in person.

For example: Imagine youâ€™re talking to your ex on the phone once again and this time sheâ€™s naturally laughing, smiling and sounding happy to be talking to you, because you have already broken down some of her defenses.

Then, after a few minutes of easy-going conversation, simply say, â€‹*Hey, I still owe you half of my winnings on that lottery ticket. So, how about we meet up for a cup of coffee or a quick bite to eat sometime this week so that I can give you your share?*â€‹

If youâ€™ve been making her feel attracted, she may laugh and say â€‹*Yes,*â€‹ right away and you can then go ahead and make the arrangements with her.

Of course, in some cases the woman may just say â€‹*No,*â€‹ because she doesnâ€™t want to come across as being too easy or too eager.

Alternatively, she may want to test the guyâ€™s reaction to see if he really has changed.

If he gets upset, throws a tantrum and starts saying things like, â€‹*Why are you being like this? I thought we were getting along again. Why wonâ€™t you just meet me up for some coffee? Itâ€™s not like Iâ€™m asking you for a kidney or something! Why canâ€™t you at least try to be nice for a change, rather than always being such a bitch to me?*â€‹ she will know that he has only been putting on an act with her and that heâ€™s still at the same level he was at when she broke up with him.

She will then cut him off again, only this time she will make it even more difficult for him to get her back (e.g. by blocking his number on her phone, unfriending him on social media, ignoring him or avoiding him in person).

So, don't let that happen to you.

The key is to maintain your confidence with her if she says â€œNo,â€ and show her that you really are a new man.

Just laugh and say in an easy-going manner, â€œHey, all Iâ€™m asking for is a quick meet up over a cup of coffee. I promise Iâ€™m not going to take it as a sign that you weâ€™re going to get back together again. Itâ€™s no big deal, itâ€™s just coffee. Besides, exâ€™s do that all the time without any strings attached and if, after we meet up you never want to see me again, Iâ€™ll respect your wishes and never call you again. Okay?â€

In most instances, when a woman sees that her ex is remaining emotionally strong and confident even though she initially rejected him, she will naturally relax her guard and say something like, â€œOh, okay, as long as itâ€™s only coffeeâ€ or, â€œSure, I guess I can spare 10 minutes.â€

Then, just go ahead and make plans to meet her at a time that suits you both.

From thereâ€¦

4. Meet up with her in person, hug, kiss and then hook up with her sexually and get her back

[image: Kiss her at the meet up]

At the meet up, continue focusing on making her feel sexual and romantic attraction for the new you.

Show her via your attitude, thinking, actions, behavior and the way you respond to her that youâ€™ve changed in some of the ways that matter to her (e.g. youâ€™re more confident now rather than insecure and unsure of yourself, youâ€™re more ballsy rather than being a push over, youâ€™re more assertive rather than being timid, youâ€™re more emotionally masculine rather than being too nice and soft).

At the same time, build some sexual tension between you and her by flirting with her.

Once she is feeling strong surges of respect and sexual attraction for you again, you can then progress to giving her a hug (e.g. you might say something like, â€œHey, itâ€™s really cool to see we can still be friends even though weâ€™ve broken up. We should give each other a hug for being so mature about it. Come over here, you,â€ and then reach over and hug her).

[image: Kiss her to reignite the spark]

If she doesn't pull away, you can then go ahead and give her a kiss as well.

Then, if she's open, you can go to your place or hers and hook up with her sexually.

From there, you just need to continue building on her feelings for you (i.e. by showing her that youâ€™ve transformed yourself into the kind of man that she can now look up to, respect and feel sexually attracted to).

As you do that, she will naturally begin to reconnect with her feelings of love for you too.

You and her can then get back together in a relationship that is 100% better than before and become one of those secret couples that the studies don't know about.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Should I Accidentally Text My Ex?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes and no.

Yes, you should send your ex a text, but as a man, no you shouldn't pretend to have accidentally texted her.

It's fine for women to make that kind of move on a man, but not fine if it's the other way around.

Why?

Women feel turned off by men who don't have the confidence to go after what they want (i.e. in this case, her) and as a result, have to resort to pretending, faking or accidentally doing things.

Pretending to text your ex by accident will almost certainly result in her feeling turned off by how you think she could fall for such an obvious trick.

If you don't feel very confident about texting her, here's what you can do instead:

1. Send out a feeler text

[image: Send out a feeler text]

Feeler texts are essentially where you test the waters.

That can be as simple as texting her something like, â€œHeyâ€ or, â€œHey, how's things?â€ or, â€œHey, long time no speak. How are you?â€ and then you see what happens.

For example:

- Does she reply or does she ignore you?
- Does she seem interested or is she cold and aloof?
- Is she being open and friendly or is she closed off and maybe even a little bit bitchy towards you?

Then, depending on her response, you will have a better idea of how to proceed.

For instance, if your ex replies back right away with something along the lines of, â€œHey, long time no speak. How are you?â€ it's most likely a sign that she's been missing you.

You can then just pick up the phone and give her a call, because chances are high that she will answer.

Then on the call you can re-spark some of her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again) and get her to agree to meet up with you in person where you can fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

On the other hand, if your ex responds in a cold, off-handed manner with something along the lines of, â€œWhat do you want?â€ your approach will have to be different.

In a case like that, you will have to break down her defenses a little bit first, before she will be open to answering your call.

One of the ways you can do that is by using humor.

For example: If your ex responds to a feeler text from you with something like, â€œWhat do you want?â€‹ you can respond with something along the lines of, â€‹Itâ€‹s Tuesday, so that means itâ€‹s car wash day for you. I just wanted to say Iâ€‹ll be over in 15 minutes so that you can wash my car too. Hahaâ€‹ and then add a smiley face emoji with the tongue sticking out ð€‹

She will likely smile or laugh at your response and she will be wondering something along the lines of,â€‹ I thought my response would put him off and make him leave me alone, or even worse, suck up to me, but instead heâ€‹s being funny. This is so unlike him. What has gotten into him?â€‹

[image: Use humor to get her to open back up to you]

She then becomes more open to texting back and forth to see if you really have changed or if your confident, bold reply was just an act.

By the wayâ€‹!

If your ex doesnâ€‹t wash her car, you obviously canâ€‹t say that to her.

Instead, you just need to adapt what youâ€‹re saying to your situation.

However, the point is to be funny and get her laughing and smiling so she wants to talk to you over the phone and meet up with you in person.

Finally, just because your ex doesnâ€‹t reply to you, it doesnâ€‹t mean sheâ€‹s not interested anymore and that you should give up and forget about her.

Instead, you need to realize that sometimes a woman doesnâ€‹t want to reply to her exâ€‹s initial feeler text.

Why?

Some of her reasons might beâ€‹!

- She doesnâ€‹t want to come across as being too excited to hear from him.
- She doesnâ€‹t want to make it too easy for him to get her back.
- She is testing to see if he is confident enough to pursue her even though sheâ€‹s ignoring him and acting like sheâ€‹s no longer interested.

This is why you canâ€‹t give up at the first sign of resistance from your ex.

If you do, you may end up missing out on your chance of getting her back into a relationship with you and all because you didnâ€‹t believe in yourself and in your value to her.

Donâ€‹t make the mistake of giving up too soon.

Another thing you can do isâ€‹!

2. Send her a Straight-to-the-Heart text

[image: Send her a straight to heart text]

For example: You might simply text her something along the lines of, â€‹Miss youâ€‹ or â€‹Love you.â€‹

If your ex has been missing you and you send her a text like that, it will hit her directly and she will feel a rush of love and excitement straight to the heart.

She will then likely respond with something like, â€‹Miss you too,â€‹ or â€‹Hey, how have you been?â€‹ as a way of letting you know that sheâ€‹s happy to hear from you.

From there, just call her so that she can start experiencing the new and improved you over the phone and then in person (i.e. when you get her to meet up with you).

Remember: Just because your ex sounds happy to hear from you, it doesn't mean she will stay that way if you continue to text her for weeks and months without getting to a phone call and then to a meet up so that she can see how she feels when she's around you again.

So, don't hide behind texts and end up losing her.

You've got to have the balls to call her, re-spark some of her feelings for you and then meet up with her so that you can fully re-attract her and get her back.

That's how a real man gets his woman back.

However, it all starts with the courage to send her a Straight-to-the-Heart text and then getting her on a phone call with you.

By the way!

Just like in the previous point, if your ex doesn't open back up to you right away, it doesn't mean she's not secretly sitting at home grinning from ear to ear and thinking things like, â€œIâ€™m so happy to be hearing from him and to see that heâ€™s missing me as much as I miss him. I hope heâ€™s going to call me, because Iâ€™m dying to hear his voice again. However, I had better play it cool so that he doesn't get the impression that Iâ€™m desperate and that Iâ€™ve just been sitting here missing him and waiting for him to get in touch with me again.â€

So, don't give up if things don't unfold in exactly the way you're hoping.

You can get her back.

Another thing you can do is!

3. Take a deep breath and call her

So many guys get their ex back right away by just having the courage to hit call on their phone and talk to her, rather than hiding behind texts.

The truth is, talking to your ex over the phone will get you much quicker results than if you just stick to texting her. Why?

On a phone call, a woman can sense whether you've changed based on the tonality of your voice and how you are now talking to her, responding to her and reacting to what she says.

For example: If a guy was insecure in his relationship with a woman and would get clingy, needy and jealous, his ex might tell him that she's been having a lot of fun without him, or that there are many guys interested in dating her now that she's broken up, just to test how he would react.

If he then gets upset, becomes jealous and maybe says things like, â€œWell, good for you,â€ or â€œI see you didn't waste any time moving on already. I guess I didn't mean that much to you after all,â€ she will instantly know that he's the same guy she broke up with and she will then feel motivated to cut off all contact with him and move on.

On the other hand, if he maintains his confidence regardless of what she says to get a reaction out of him she will automatically feel some respect and attraction for him again and then she becomes more open to meeting up with him in person where he can fully re-attract her and get her back.

However, displaying confidence and emotional strength is not something a guy can properly show a woman via a text message.

So, instead of thinking insecure,Â scheming things like, â€œShould I accidentally text my ex?â€ be confident and emotionally strong enough to call her instead, where she can sense that you've changed and become a better man.

Remember: Texting your ex after breaking up can only open the lines of communications with her. After that, you need to be able to re-attract her on a phone call and then in person if you want to get her back.

By the way!

If you call your ex and she doesn't answer, text her this!

Hey! I accept that we've broken up, but I want to ask you something quick over the phone. Don't worry, it's nothing serious though. I'll just call you again in 15 minutes.

Then, give her a call 15 minutes later.

If she still doesn't answer, don't keep calling again and again.

Just leave it for a day or two.

She may then text you to ask you what you want, or if she doesn't, simply call her again at a convenient time for her (i.e. when you know she's most likely to be at home and not busy with work/studies or out with friends).

If she still doesn't answer, text her this!

Look, I know you're probably busy, but what I need to ask you is best done over the phone. I'll call you in 5 minutes. After that, if you decide that you don't ever want to talk to me again, I promise to respect that and leave you alone.

That almost always makes a woman agree, because she can see that if she doesn't want to talk to you again, she will have a way to achieve that.

However, if she responds by texting you something like, What do you want? or, Just ask what you want via text and be done with it, don't text her back.

Just call her in a couple of minutes, rather than waiting the 5 minutes.

Regardless of how initially reluctant she may be to talk to you over the phone, when she notices that you're not fighting with her via text, she will naturally be curious to find out what you want to ask her, so she will eventually answer your call.

When that happens, use some humor to break down her defenses right away and make her feel open to talking to you even more.

Then, build on her feelings for you (e.g. by maintaining your confidence with her regardless of how cold or unfriendly she's being towards you, making her laugh and feel good to be talking to you even more, showing her via your conversation and your response to her that you've become a better man) and get her to agree to see you in person.

At the meet up focus on saying and doing the type of things that reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Her guard then naturally comes down and she becomes open to seeing you more to see if you and her can rebuild your relationship again.

3 Common Problems You May Experience When Texting Your Ex

By the way!

If you decide to text your ex as a way of opening the lines of communication with her so that you can get her back, make sure you don't make the following mistakes that guys make when in a similar situation to you.

1. She doesn't show obvious interest via text, so you then lose confidence or hope

It's only natural that if a guy sends his ex woman a feeler text to say hi and see how she's been since the break up and she doesn't reply, or responds with something like, "I'm fine" or, "What do you want?" he's going to feel a bit put off and like she's not interested in getting back with him.

He might then think to himself, "Well, I guess I gave it a shot, but it didn't turn out the way I was hoping. She's clearly no longer interested in me, so I should just accept that it's over and try to forget her and move on, even though I really don't want to."

Yet, thinking like that only causes him to lose confidence in himself and in his value and attractiveness to her, which isn't going to help him get her back (or get another woman if he wants to).

Here's the thing!

Just because your ex doesn't respond enthusiastically the first time you text her, it doesn't mean she's totally closed off to the idea of giving you another chance.

Instead, she may be smiling and thinking things like, "Yes! He's finally gotten in touch with me."

Of course she may also be thinking, "Why is that jerk contacting me? Doesn't he know that I never want to talk to him ever again?"

Either option is possible, but you'll never know if you lose confidence in yourself and give up right away.

So, don't make that mistake and end up missing out on your chance of getting back with your ex because you didn't have confidence in yourself in that moment.

You've got to believe in yourself and in your value to her first, before she will see you as being good enough for her too.

Even if she doesn't make it super easy for you right away, don't give up.

Remain confident, reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. She shows interest in texting you initially, but then loses interest after a while

Most women are polite, even when it comes to an ex guy.

So, it's quite possible that your ex will respond to you if you text her.

However, if you just continue to text back and forth with her about irrelevant things and never do anything to spark her feelings and begin re-attracting her, she will likely begin thinking things like, *â€œWhat does he want? Why is he wasting my time with all this pointless texting? I think Iâ€™ve indulged him long enough. From now on, Iâ€™m just going to ignore him.*â€

Why does she do that?

Essentially because heâ€™s not doing anything to make her feel attracted.

Heâ€™s not calling her on the phone.

Heâ€™s not meeting up with her in person.

Heâ€™s just texting her and hoping that something will come of that.

Yet, thatâ€™s not how a womanâ€™s attraction works.

Instead she needs to be able to hear the tonality of his voice, observe his body language and experience his confidence so that she can begin feeling drawn to him.

So, donâ€™t waste a lot of time texting your ex in the hopes that sheâ€™ll give you a clear sign that she is open to getting back together again.

The point of sending any text to your ex should be to get her on a phone call, where you can actively re-spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction and get her to a meet up with you so that you can get her back for real.

If you donâ€™t do that, she will likely just get bored or annoyed with you and then getting her to open back up again will be a lot more difficult for you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€

3. She's hoping that you call her and actually get her back, but when you just keep texting, she goes cold

Once again, a woman doesnâ€™t want to randomly text back and forth with her ex if itâ€™s not going to lead to a phone call or a meet up.

So, after a while, if the guy doesnâ€™t call her, a woman might stop texting him, respond to him in an offish manner or take really long to reply to him.

In some cases, a woman like that may be hoping that her attitude towards him will show her ex that she doesn't want to text and wants him to call her instead.

However, if he doesnâ€™t do that and instead interprets her coldness as disinterest, he may end up giving up on the idea of getting her back and as a result, lose her forever.

Hereâ€™s the thing thoughâ€

It's always hard to tell exactly how a woman is feeling and what she is thinking by reading her text, which is why it's always better to call and just get the job done.

So, donâ€™t waste time texting your ex, accidentally or on purpose and just pick up the phone, re-attract her, meet up with her and get her back for real.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Fianc   Called Off Wedding After Her Bachelorette Party

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are the 4 most common reasons why a woman will do that:

1. She cheated on you at her bachelorette party

[image: She cheated on you at her bachelorette party]

This is probably the last thing a guy wants to believe about his fianc  , but it   can sometimes happen when alcohol is involved.

A woman might get carried away during her bachelorette party (i.e. because she  s had too much to drink and her inhibitions are down, the environment is open to flirting, sex and wildness, there are male strippers who are making moves on her to make her girlfriends cheer) and before she knows it, she  s cheating on her fianc   with one of the strippers or entertainers.

Then, the next morning when she realizes what she did, she may decide to call off her wedding.

For example: Some of her reasons for doing that might be  

- She feels guilty for cheating on her fianc   right before the wedding.
- She  s disgusted with herself and is punishing herself for what she did by losing the man she loves.
- She sees it as a sign that her fianc   is not the right guy for her after all.
- She  s had her doubts about her feelings for her fianc   and now she has proof that she doesn  t really love him enough to want to spend the rest of her life with him.
- She realized she felt more attracted to the guy she had sex with at her bachelorette party than her fianc  .

Here  s the thing though  

If your fianc   cheated on you at her bachelorette party, it doesn  t really matter why she did it, only that she did it.

The fact is, in a relationship, a man and a woman must be able to fully trust each other, or else it will lead to arguments and fights and eventually the love will erode too much for the relationship to stay together.

So, right now, you need to decide if your fianc   is worth getting back with, or if you  re just going to cut your losses and find yourself another, more loyal and trustworthy woman than her.

However, if you decide that you  re willing to forgive your fianc   for cheating on you at her bachelorette party and get her back , you need to be sure of two very important things.

Firstly, you need to ensure that your reasons for wanting her back are because you know she  s the one for you and not for other reasons (e.g. you secretly fear that you won  t be able to find yourself another, even better and more attractive woman than her, you feel embarrassed about telling everyone that it  s over at this late stage, you don  t want to disappoint your family).

If you are only trying to get her back because you feel insecure about yourself and your chances of finding another woman, or because you don  t want to let anyone down, you  re going to end up hurting yourself more somewhere down the line if you find yourself married to this woman, you have children with her and she cheats on you again.

Secondly, if you agree to take her back after she cheated on you, you have to be able to fully forgive her so you can both move forward with a clean slate.

If you get back with her and can't fully trust her so you become clingy, needy, jealous or controlling, the relationship isn't going to last.

So, make sure that you're truly ready to put what happened behind you and make your relationship work if you get back with your fiancé.

If you're not, let her go and find yourself a woman who deserves to be with a great guy like you. Another common reason why a woman will call off her wedding after her bachelorette party is

2. She's always had her doubts and doesn't want to keep pretending that everything is okay

[image: She doesn't want to keep pretending that everything is okay]

Most couples will experience some doubts before their big day where they wonder things like, Is he/she really the one for me? or, Am I really ready to settle down with just one man/woman for the rest of my life?

In most cases, those doubts are fleeting and go away pretty quickly when the other person makes them feel loved, appreciated and wanted.

However, in some instances, the doubts will continue to eat away at a woman (or man) and she may begin to feel confused, depressed, uneasy and even trapped.

However, by this stage the wedding plans and other arrangements will likely have already been made (e.g. the invitations have been sent out, everything has been ordered/booked/paid for, guests from afar have started to arrive), so she might suppress her doubts by telling herself things like, It's just pre-wedding jitters. I will feel better once all the stress of organizing everything is over. Besides, he's a great guy and I could do a lot worse than him. I'm just being silly.

Yet, those feelings never truly go away.

Then, if she finds herself at her bachelorette party and realizes that this is her last chance to back out if she wants to, she may finally pluck up the courage to listen to her instincts and call off the wedding before it's too late.

In your case, if your fiancé felt unsure about her feelings for you (e.g. because you treat her more like a friend than the woman you love and want to spend the rest of your life with, you don't have much ambition and aren't really moving forward in life, you're insecure about your value to her so you behave in needy, jealous or controlling ways, you lack the balls to stand up to her or other people when they're taking advantage of you), then it's only natural that when the time came for her to settle down with you for real, she would have panicked.

So, to prevent herself from making a big mistake and regretting it later on when things between you and her had gotten more complicated (e.g. you now have children to think about, divorces are expensive and emotionally messy), your ex may have decided to call off the wedding before it became too late.

This is why, if you decide that she's truly the woman for you and that you want her back, you need to address the underlying issues that caused her to call off the wedding in the first place.

You can't brush everything under the carpet and assume that bunches of flowers or gifts, or you begging her to give you another chance will change how she currently feels.

Instead, you need to be prepared to figure out exactly what caused her to doubt her feelings for you and then quickly make some attractive changes and improvements to yourself to re-attract her and make her regret her decision to call off the wedding.

You have to show her over time (i.e. over the next few days and weeks), that you really are the right man for her, so she wants to be your wife.

When she gets confronted with the man she always dreamed of being with all along, her doubts will naturally drift away and she won't be able to resist the idea of giving your relationship another chance.

Another common reason why a woman will call off her wedding after her bachelorette party is

3. She realized that she just can't let go of the single life and wants to party with her girlfriends again

[image: She can't let go of the single lifeShe can't let go of the single life]

In some cases, a woman might feel some social pressure to get into a relationship with a guy and settle down (e.g. because her friends are doing it, her family is nagging her, she's worried that she might miss out if she doesn't do it soon).

So, if she finds a nice guy that she enjoys being with, she may convince herself that he's the one for her and that she's ready to give up the single life to be with him.

However, at the back of her mind she may always be thinking things like, "I really miss being able to do whatever I want without having to answer to anyone else. Sometimes I feel like I'm suppressing my true self just to please my fiancé/my family. I wish I could just let down my hair and party without worrying about what anyone else will say or think."

So, when she finds herself at her bachelorette party and suddenly for the first time in a long time she starts having a fun and enjoying herself (e.g. drinking, dancing, flirting), it might finally be the thing that convinces her that she's not ready to give all that up to settle down with one man for life.

As a result, she calls off the wedding so she can experience all the things she feels that she's missing out on.

Yet, here's the thing

If a woman is happy in her relationship with her man, nothing about the single life would be able to make her feel tempted to give up what she's got.

She won't want to be single again because what she has now is way better than anything else she might experience on her own.

This is why, if your ex called off the wedding after her bachelorette party because she was feeling more drawn to the single life than to you at this time, you need to show her that being with you will be so much better.

How can you do that?

By actively sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you again every time you interact with her on a phone call or in person (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel like a sexy and desirable woman in your presence, being more ballsy, showing her that you're a new man).

When she feels more attracted to you than she ever has before (i.e. because you are now making her feel attracted in new and exciting ways), she will quickly regret her decision to call off the wedding. Suddenly being single doesn't seem so appealing to her anymore and she wants to be your wife more than anything else.

Another common reason why a woman will call off her wedding after her bachelorette party is

4. She's bored of the relationship and worries that a marriage will be even worse

[image: She's bored of the relationship and worries that a marriage would be even worse]

Sometimes a woman might notice that her relationship with her guy isn't as exciting or fun as that of her friends and acquaintances and she may often find herself worrying about it and thinking things like, "Is this normal? Maybe I'm just expecting too much. Different people have different relationships. Ours just happens to be more routine and ordinary. There's nothing wrong with that, is there? So what if there's no spark anymore. Most couples lose that after they've been with each other for a while, right?"

Of course, in most cases the woman will quickly push those thoughts out of her mind by telling herself something along the lines of, "You're being selfish and ungrateful. He's a nice guy and you're lucky to have him."

She may then distract herself with the excitement of planning the wedding.

However, at her bachelorette party the reality of what she's about to do (i.e. settle down with him for life) suddenly dawns on her and she may begin to panic and think things like, "If I'm already feeling bored, what will being married to him for 10, 20 or 30 years feel like? I don't want my marriage to feel like a prison sentence and I don't want to be the woman who sits around being jealous of all the other couples who are living happy and exciting lives. I don't think I can go through with this."

As a result, she calls off the wedding and then focuses on moving on and finding a new man who can make her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with him.

Here's the thing

Gone are the days where a woman would go through with a wedding, or stay in a relationship regardless of how unhappy she felt, simply because it was expected of her (i.e. for the sake of her family and because it was frowned upon socially).

In today's world, a woman can walk away from her relationship, even on the eve of her wedding, if her guy can't give her the attraction experience she really wants.

So, if your fiancée called off your wedding because she was bored in the relationship, to get her back you need to re-spark her feelings for you by showing her that you're no longer the same guy she broke up with (i.e. via your attitude, actions, behavior and the way you respond to her from now on).

When you make her feel respect, excitement and attraction every time you interact with her, the more she will begin to regret her decision to call off the wedding.

She will want to hang out with you more to experience the new and exciting you for herself.

As she is doing that, she will naturally convince herself that she wants to hug you again, kiss you and have sex with you.

When that happens, the relationship automatically gets back together.

She will then only want to be together in a committed relationship, because that's when she feels the happiest, most fulfilled and most excited.

Get Your Fiancée Back By Avoiding These 3 Mistakes

Even though right now things might look bleak, it's not difficult to get your fiancée back.

When you approach the ex back process in the right way, you can be walking down the aisle sooner than you may have thought possible.

However, if you approach it the wrong way, you can turn her off even more and then getting her back becomes really difficult for you.

So, if you want to get to that wedding on time (i.e. get her back and get married), make sure you avoid the following mistakes:

1. Pleading with her to change her mind, rather than accepting it and giving her a week of space

As much as you probably want to talk your fiancée out of her decision, begging and pleading with her and saying things like, "Baby, please don't walk away from what we have together! You're the love of my life and if I can't marry you like we planned for so long, it will destroy me. Just tell me what you want me to do to make you want to be my wife again. I will do anything! I only want to be with you. Please, reconsider your decision," in the heat of the moment, it will usually only make her want to run away even more.

Why?

To justify her decision to herself and others, she's already made up a list of reasons why she had to call off the wedding (e.g. you're too clingy and needy, you're jealous and controlling, you've been taking her for granted).

So, if you now start begging and pleading with her to change her mind, rather than make her reconsider her decision, she will likely add insecure and emotionally weak to the list too.

You don't want to give her more reasons not to come back to you, you want to make her miss you and realize that she made a huge mistake.

This is why, the best approach is to simply accept her decision in a calm, confident way and then give her a week of space where you don't contact her at all.

She will either begin to miss you right away and contact you herself, or if she doesn't, just call her after a week and begin re-sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, flirting with her to create attraction).

Just don't push her to get back with you.

Let her come to that conclusion on her own, by making her feel so much love, respect and attraction for you again, that the idea of losing you makes her feel terrified.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

2. Not improving your ability to give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants

If you try to make your fiancÃ© recommit to the same kind of relationship that she just left, sheâ€™s going to keep saying things like, â€œIâ€™m sorry, but Iâ€™ve made up my mind. I just donâ€™t want to marry you anymore.â€

This is why itâ€™s very important that when you try to get your ex back, you offer her a new and improved attraction experience.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that areâ€¦|

Instead of putting up with her bad behavior like you used to (e.g. when she sulks or throws a tantrum, when she demands that you do things her way), you stand up to her and put her back in her place in a loving, but firm manner.

Instead of putting her above yourself in terms of value like you used to, you now realize that not only are you good enough for her, sheâ€™s actually the one who is lucky to have a guy like you.

Instead of being a nice and sweet and predictable all the time, youâ€™re now more of a challenge.

Instead of being the perfect gentleman who doesnâ€™t say or do anything thatâ€™s out of line, you now flirt with her and use ballsy humor to make her feel strong surges of sexual desire for you.

The more that you give her the kind of attraction experience she always wanted from you, but never got, the more she feels like she just has to get back with you, or else she might end up regretting it for the rest of her life.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Not making her feel like she can choose what she wants

Itâ€™s only natural that youâ€™re going to be feeling a bit shocked right now and youâ€™re likely going to want to understand why this happened.

However, if you insist on having long, drawn out discussions with your ex fiancÃ© about why she did this and then try to convince her to change her mind, you may end up getting the opposite result (i.e. she sticks to her decision).

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦|

A woman doesnâ€™t want to be made to feel like she canâ€™t choose what she wants, even if that means calling off her wedding at the last minute.

She wants to feel free to think, act, behave and choose whatever she wants and that her man supports her in her decisions, even if he doesnâ€™t always like them.

So, if you want to get to the point where your ex fiancÃ© becomes your wife, you need to make her feel that itâ€™s what she really wants to do.

However, donâ€™t try to do it by through words, because sheâ€™s not going to listen to you.

Instead, just focus on interacting with her and using flirting and humor to reactivate her feelings for you and make her realize, on her own, that losing you is something she doesnâ€™t want to do.

When she gets to that point by herself, everything falls back into place.

You can then finally walk down the aisle and make her your wife, knowing youâ€”ve both been through a big test of your love for each other and you passed with flying colors!

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

6 Examples of Using Your Ex as Motivation to Become a Better Man

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Rather than sitting around feeling sad, dejected and missing your ex, you can use the break up as motivation to become a better man.

The break up can literally be the thing that causes your life to spring into action and be what you've always wanted it to be.

Here are 6 examples of how you can use your ex as motivation to become a better man:

1. Improve your attraction skills so much that you not only re-attract her and get another chance with her, but become extremely attractive to other women as well

[image: Improve your attraction skills]

To begin with, don't make the mistake that a lot of guys make and assume that in order to improve your attraction skills, you need to change your physical appearance (e.g. get a makeover, buy new clothes and shoes, go to the gym and build some muscle, change your hairstyle), in the hope that your ex (and other women) will feel more attracted to you from now on.

The truth is that although a man's physical appearance is one aspect of what attracts a woman, the most powerful attraction skill of all is his ability to make her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with him (e.g. respectful, desirable, sexually attracted, happy).

This is why, if you want to be desirable to your ex again, as well as to other women, you need to be able to attract her in the ways that she wants.

For example: Ask yourself!

- Do you make her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine vibe and approach, or does she feel friendly feelings, or even worse, nothing at all when she's with you?
- Do you maintain your confidence with her, especially when she tries to test you by being cold, throwing a tantrum or pretending not to be interested in you anymore, or do you crumble and become wimpy and insecure?
- Do you believe in yourself and in your value to her, or do you feel that she's out of your league so you put her on a pedestal and allow her to dominate you?
- Do you make her feel safe and protected because you're rising through the levels of life like a real man, or does she feel like she has to take care of you because you're afraid to live up to your true potential as a man?
- Are you emotionally independent and have your own goals, dreams, interests and hobbies, or are you clingy, needy and insecure?
- Does she look up to you and respect you, or does she look down on you a little bit and feel like she has to be your teacher in life on how to be the kind of man that she needs you to be?

These are the kinds of attraction skills that a woman looks for and finds most attractive in a man.

So, if you want to make your ex (and women in general) weak at the knees, focus on improving your ability to attract her based on who you are when you interact with her.

When she experiences the new and improved you (e.g. you're more confident and self-assured, you're more emotionally masculine so she feels more feminine with you as a result, you're more emotionally dominant so she can relax and think, act and feel like a real woman with you) she will naturally begin to feel surges of respect and sexual attraction for you again.

When that happens, it becomes easier for her to imagine herself being in a relationship with you again.

However, if you continue offering her the same attraction experience as you did before (e.g. you're nice and submissive around her, you let her take the lead during interactions, you treat her like a friend rather than a desirable woman), not only won't she be interested in giving you another chance, but these are not the qualities that will attract other quality women either.

Another example of using your ex as motivation to become a better man isâ€¦!

2. Fix the remaining issues you have been carrying around with you, so you finally become a complete man

[image: Fix your remaining issues to become a complete man]

Sometimes a guy will allow his issues to hold him back from achieving his full potential as a man (e.g. he doesn't believe he's good enough for her so he becomes insecure and self-doubting, he's afraid of losing her so he becomes clingy and needy, he's too timid and unsure of himself so he avoids making progress in his life, he's insecure in the bedroom so he avoids sex and treats her like a friend).

This may cause a woman to think things like, â€œI'm tired of trying to make a relationship work with a guy who doesn't yet understand how to be the man that I need. I just want to be in love and relax in the relationship rather than always feeling like I have to be on guard around my man in case he says or does something that will turn me off. So, although he's a nice person, he's got too many issues for me. I just want a man who is complete, not a guy who still hasn't figured out how to be a real man,â€ so she decides to break up with him.

The guy might then assume that if he waits long enough, everything will work itself out between him and his ex.

He then just sits around passing the time with irrelevant things (e.g. he distracts himself with hobbies/work/video games) and he doesn't do anything to improve his ability to attract her if she decides to come back.

If his ex then happens to miss him and decides to contact him to say hi and see what happens from there, he makes it easy for her to permanently walk away because he's still the same guy she broke up with.

Essentially, nothing about him has changed or improved.

He's stuck at the same level he was at when they broke up, which makes her lose even more respect and attraction for him.

If he then says something like, â€œI'm so glad you got in touch with me. I've missed you so much. Let's put everything behind us and give our relationship another shot,â€ she will likely respond with something along the lines of, â€œI'm sorry, but I really don't feel that way about you anymore. I wish you the best and I hope you find the right woman for you, but that's not me. Take care. Bye.

This is why it's so important that you don't waste the time you have after a break up.

Not only will that prevent you from getting your ex back if that's what you want, it will also make it more difficult for you to attract another, quality woman.

So, use your ex as motivation to fix any remaining issues you might have that you're still carrying around with you so that you can get her back.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by

- Becoming more confident and self-assured about your attractiveness and value to her (and to other women), rather than feeling insecure and doubtful and accepting any crumbs of attention she's willing to throw at you.
- Being more manly in how you think, talk, act and behave, rather than being wimpy and submissive around her and allowing her to dominate you emotionally.
- Improving your ability to make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman when she interacts with you, rather than making her feel like a neutral friend, nothing at all or even turned off.
- Becoming more emotionally independent and living a happy, successful and fulfilling life with or without her.
- Stopping tiptoeing around her and trying to please her all the time and just taking the lead during interactions like an emotionally strong man would.

Then, when you do interact with your ex and she sees that you really have changed and improved and dealt with your issues, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling surges of respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, her guard comes down and she opens herself up to being your girl again for real.

It's then up to you to lead her through the final stages of the ex back process and get her back into a relationship with you.

On the other hand, if you decide that you don't want your ex back, you can easily move on and find another more beautiful woman than her because you are a complete man now and you can.

Another example of using your ex as motivation to become a better man is

3. Become a man of purpose and start making real progress

Sometimes a guy will put all of his attention and focus on his woman at the expense of other important areas in his life (e.g. he gives up on pursuing his big goals and dreams, he quits his hobbies and interests, he cuts off his friends).

In his mind he's likely thinking that he's doing the right thing and that his woman will feel flattered and happy that he's made her his main purpose for living.

Yet, in most cases, rather than make a woman happy, it turns her off and makes her feel frustrated.

Here's the thing

A woman doesn't want to feel responsible for a man's emotional state in a relationship (e.g. he's only happy when he's with her, he's only confident when she encourages him), or to be his main reason for living.

A woman wants her man to be happy, confident and forward moving in life with, or without her support or reassurance.

So, when she finds herself in a relationship with a guy who doesn't have much purpose or direction in life outside of his relationship with her (i.e. he's not making any progress on achieving any of his goals, dreams and ambitions), it may lead to her losing too much respect and attraction for him, so she breaks up with him.

Is this something that may have happened to you in your relationship with your ex?

If so, now is the time to use your ex as motivation to become a man of purpose and start making progress in your life.

Essentially, what this means is that you need to reach the point where you are

- Happy and fulfilled with or without your ex.
- Confident, self-assured and believe in your value as a man, with or without her (or another person's) approval.
- Actively working towards achieving your big purpose in life, regardless of whether she (or anyone else) approves or not.
- Forward moving in life with or without her.

Of course, that doesn't mean you don't want her back.

The big difference is that you get to the point where you feel like you don't need her back to have a good, productive and successful life.

You want her back, but don't need her back.

When you focus on becoming a man of purpose and feeling happy and content in your own life, not only does that stop you from staying stuck after your break up, it also automatically makes you more attractive to your ex as well.

Suddenly, she starts to see you as being more of a catch than you were before.

She stops looking at you as her needy, emotionally dependent ex who caused her to disconnect from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him and she starts to feel attracted to the new man you have become now.

It then becomes easy for you to fully re-attract her and get her back.

Another example of using your ex as motivation to become a better man is

4. Use her as a stepping stone to even hotter women

Hot women like men who have experience with women and will be able to handle them in a relationship, without becoming insecure.

So, in addition to learning how to attract hot women, you can also use the lessons from your relationship with your ex to become more attractive to hot, beautiful women.

For example: Imagine that the relationship with your ex was a really bad one.

Imagine that she was always creating drama, throwing tantrums and behaving like a brat to see how you would react.

It doesn't matter if she wasn't like that.

Just imagine it.

Now, imagine how you would react to that kind of behavior if you were in the relationship right now.

For instanceâ€¦!

- Will you put up with her bad behavior because youâ€™re too insecure about your value to her and are afraid of losing her, or will you be assertive enough to stand up to her?
- Will you lose control of your emotions and become angry, annoyed, upset or agitated with her, or will you remain calm, relaxed and in control of your emotions and of the situation as a whole?
- Will you continue to be nice and sweet and a pushover regardless of how badly she behaves, or will just laugh at her (in a loving way) for behaving like a brat?

At the time, you always seemed to fail her tests and ended up feeling insecure and unsure of how to handle her.

However, after the break up, you realized that being nice and sweet and submissive around a woman is one of the fastest ways to lose her respect and attraction for you.

As a result, you became more assertive, emotionally masculine and confident in your ability to handle a woman if you ever found yourself in a similar situation.

You now have the experience to handle a woman who likes to create fake drama with a man and this makes you very attractive to other women.

This means you have become a better man thanks to your ex and you can now use that to find yourself a better, hotter, more devoted woman than her.

Not only that, you now also have the right approach to be able to keep her attracted to you and make her want to be a good woman to you.

At the same time, you also become more desirable to your ex, because youâ€™re now the man she wanted you to be all along.

Itâ€™s then up to you to decide if you want to give her another chance with you, or just move on with whichever hot woman you prefer to choose.

Another example of using your ex as motivation to become a better man isâ€¦!

5. Show her your awesome new life via social media

After a break up, most women feel curious about their ex, so itâ€™s not uncommon for a woman to check up on social media to see what her ex guy is up to.

So, go ahead and post photos of yourself having fun with other people (e.g. at parties, on the beach, at a ball game), doing exciting or interesting things (e.g. bungee jumping, traveling to an exotic location) and generally having fun and living a good life.

Make sure that you post your photos as â€œpublicâ€œ so she can see them from the outside if you're not friends on social media.

Let her see what she is missing out on and that youâ€™re not sitting around feeling sad, hopeless and despondent without her.

Instead, show her that the break up has motivated you to become a better man and live a better life.

Remember: Women are attracted to and respect men who are confident, happy and forward moving in life with or without their woman.

This is why, even just seeing a few photos of you enjoying your life without her is enough for most women to drop their guard and open up to communicating with you (e.g. sending you a private message or texting you to say hi and see what happens from there).

Of course, if your real aim is to get your ex back, don't spend too much time trying to make her feel like she's missing out by not being with you anymore, without following through to get a meet up.

When she is face-to-face with the new man you've become, she will automatically feel herself respecting you again.

When she respects you, she will also begin to feel surges of sexual attraction for you and she may then want to hug, kiss and have sex to see how she feels about getting back with you.

Another example of using your ex as motivation to become a better man is

6. Make your daydreams become a reality

[image: Make your daydreams become a reality]

Do you often daydream of you and your ex getting back together again?

Do you sometimes spend a lot of time thinking about her before you go to sleep at night?

Do you imagine that if she met up with you now, she might fall back in love with you and get back with you?

Well, if you want that to happen, use her as motivation to do what it takes to get her back.

When you focus on making her reconnect with her sexual and romantic feelings for you, she will naturally begin to think about you and look at you in a completely new way.

She will begin to see that there is still hope for you and her because she feels a spark with you again.

[image: Make your daydreams become a reality]

As a result, her defenses come down and she opens back up to being a couple again.

The truth is, men get women back all the time.

You can do it too.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Wants to Get Back Together, But Take it Slow

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why she is willing to get back with you, but wants to take it slow:

1. She wants to see if you will remain confident under that kind of pressure

[image: She wants to see if you will remain confident under that kind of pressure]

One of the most important qualities that a woman looks for in a man is his ability to stay confident and emotionally strong when heâs in a stressful or difficult situation.

So, in a case where a woman agrees to get back with her ex, but she also insists that they take it slow, it may be her way of testing to see if he has the kind of confidence she wants in a man.

This is especially true if one of the reasons she broke up with him in the first place was that he was too insecure about himself, which caused him to be needy and clingy towards her.

So, to make sure that heâs changed, she might slow down the ex back process and wait to see how he reacts.

For example:

- Will he become insecure?
- Will he start overanalyzing her words and behavior?
- Will he give her too much power?
- Will he panic and start behaving in unattractive ways (e.g. beg and plead with her to take things faster, ask her why sheâs messing him around, look for pity at how sheâs hurting him by not getting back with him right away).

If he can maintain his confidence with her regardless of what she says or does to make him feel uncertain, she will naturally start to feel strong surges of respect for him again.

When she respects him, her feelings of sexual attraction will also awaken and then she will be the one pushing for the relationship to get back together again right away for her own reasons (e.g. she doesnât want him to get tired of waiting for her so he finds himself another woman, she wants to be 100% his girl again rather than taking things slow and missing out on the joy of being with him).

Another possible reason why your ex wants to get back together but take it slow isâ

2. She's not sure if it's going to work out, so she doesn't want to commit too heavily just yet

[image: She's not sure if it will work out]

Even though your ex wants to get back together again, at the back of her mind there may be a little voice telling her things like, âYes, you want him back because you still love him, but you have no guarantee that things will be better this time around. You need to take it slow and see what happens. Donât rush back into a relationship with him and then end up getting hurt all over again. You have to protect yourself.â

So, rather than getting back with you right away, she first wants to see if you have truly changed and improved the things that caused her to break up with you in the first place (e.g. you had lost your confidence and had become insecure and needy, you weren't ballsy enough for her and she felt more emotionally dominant than you, she no longer felt very attracted to you sexually because you treated her too much like a friend), or if you have just been putting on an act to get her back and will soon go back to being the same guy that was turning her off before.

For example: A guy might be jealous and controlling in a relationship with a woman, so after she breaks up with him, to get her back he might try to show her that he's more easy-going, relaxed and secure in himself.

Yet, once she commits to being in a relationship with him again, he may then slowly start falling back into his old ways (e.g. insisting on knowing her every move, checking up on who she's texting/e-mailing or chatting with on social media, getting upset if she wants to go out and do something independently of him, getting angry or sulking every time she talks to another guy when they are out together, interrogating her about her male coworkers).

She will then know that he hasn't really changed and was only putting on an act to get her to agree to get back together again.

She then has to go through the emotional trauma of breaking up with him and dealing with the pain, disappointment and regret all over again.

A woman doesn't want to do that.

So, rather than risk it, she will usually say something along the lines of, "I want to get back with you, but we need to take it slow," and wait to see what happens over the weeks or even months (i.e. will he continue to remain calm and secure, or will he begin getting jealous and being controlling all over again?).

Then when she feels confident that he has truly changed the things about himself that turned her off and isn't just pretending so that he can get her back, she will relax her guard and open back up to fully being his girl again.

Of course, if you want to speed things up with your ex and get her back sooner, you just need to keep showing her (via your attitude, communication style, actions, behavior and the way you respond to her), that you really have changed.

When she can see that no matter what she says or does, you now respond in a totally different, more emotionally mature way, she will naturally want to commit to the relationship 100%.

Another possible reason why your ex wants to get back together but take it slow is

3. She is keeping you around as a back up plan, in case she can't find a replacement guy

[image: She is keeping you around as a back up plan]

In some cases, a woman hates the idea of being single and not having a man desiring her, so rather than risk it, she might decide to string her ex along by saying that she wants to get back together but take it slow, while she secretly looks for a new man.

Then, by the time he gets frustrated and says something along the lines of, "Hey, you've been putting off fully getting back together again for such a long time. When are you going to commit to the relationship so that we can move forward as a couple?" she will have found herself a replacement guy.

She may then say something like, â€œIâ€™m sorry. I know I said I wanted to get back together again, but Iâ€™ve changed my mind. I donâ€™t think it will work out between us after all. I didnâ€™t mean to hurt you, but thatâ€™s just how I feel.â€

She can then freely move on with her new guy, without having had to deal with being single.

The truth is, your ex may currently be actively looking for a replacement, even though she would never admit it if you asked.

In fact, if you decide to ask her about it (e.g. you say something like, â€œI hope youâ€™re not just stringing me along until you find another guy and then dump me again,â€) she may even use it as a weapon against you by responding with something along the lines of, â€œHow could you ask me something like that? This is exactly why I said we should take it slow! I just donâ€™t know if I can fully trust you again.â€

You might then become all apologetic and feel guilty for not trusting her, dropping your guard around her as a result.

This leaves her free to continue looking for a new man without worrying about you finding out before it happens and dumping her before sheâ€™s settled in a new relationship.

Donâ€™t let her put you through that.

Take control of the situation by fully re-sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you and making her fall back in love with you, before she starts moving on.

When you do that, the idea of being with another guy will disappear from her mind, because she can see that no one else can make her feel the way you do.

Another possible reason why your ex wants to get back together but take it slow isâ€¦|

4. You have put her in the position of power, so she is being a typical woman

Sometimes a guy is so grateful that his ex has agreed to get back together again, albeit slowly, that heâ€™s more than happy to hand all his power over to her and allow her to call the shots.

In his mind he may be thinking things like, â€œIf she wants to take it slow, Iâ€™m not going to do anything to pressure her or cause her to feel uncomfortable and make her change her mind about us getting back together again. So, whatever she wants from me, Iâ€™m going to make sure she gets it. Iâ€™m playing this by the book so I can show her that Iâ€™m serious about making things work between us.â€

Yet, even though his intentions are good, rather than make a woman feel more attracted and want to be together with him even more, him being a good little boy and doing whatever she says only makes her lose respect for him.

If she canâ€™t respect him, she wonâ€™t be able to feel sexually attracted to him and without those two all-important feelings, thereâ€™s no reason for her to want to stick to her decision to get back together again.

So, if you have been allowing your ex to lead you around in circles based on her ever-changing emotions, you need to be emotionally strong enough to take back your power right now.

Remember: It's not the woman's role to lead the relationship; itâ€™s yours.

However, if you aren't strong enough to lead and hand your power over to your ex, you will get lost in her changing emotions, moods and behavior and none of it will make any sense to you.

You may then end up feeling like you're not actually getting anywhere with her (i.e. the relationship is not progressing at all), and that you're actually stuck at that place between being a couple and being broken up.

This is why you need to have the balls to start calling the shots.

That doesn't mean you should bully her and say things like, I'm tired of taking things slow with you. We're going to be a couple again starting right now and I'm not going to hear another word from you about it!

Instead, you need to stand up to her in a loving, but respectful way when she tries to take control of the ex back process.

From there, you need to just focus on using interactions with her to fully reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you so she can't stop herself from wanting more (i.e. to kiss, have sex and get back together again for real).

Another possible reason why your ex wants to get back together but take it slow is

5. She's trying to give you the hint that she doesn't want you pushing for a relationship and thinking that it will seal the deal

Sometimes a guy gets so excited when his ex agrees to give him another chance, that he assumes everything that happened in the past is now over and they can go back to being the way they were before.

Yet, a woman doesn't want that.

She wants to know that if she fully commits to being in a relationship with him again, this time will be different.

This is why she will say that she wants to take it slow.

As far as she's concerned, agreeing to be in a relationship with him isn't a guarantee that she will stick with that decision.

The only thing that will make her want to stay with him is if he is able to make her feel the kind of respect, attraction and love she wants in a relationship.

So, if you want your ex to stop holding back, you need to create a relationship dynamic that causes her to want to be in a deep and loving relationship with you, because not only does it feel good to her, she's also worried that if she doesn't commit to you, you will get tired or bored of waiting for her and move on with another woman.

When you make her feel so much respect, sexual attraction and love, the idea of taking it slow seems silly to her.

She begins to only want to be with you in a committed relationship because that's when she feels the best, most fulfilled, most loved and happiest.

Get Her Back Quicker By Avoiding These 2 Mistakes

Just because your ex wants to take things slow, it doesn't mean you have to sit around helplessly waiting for her to tell you what to do.

In fact, the more you do that, the more you're delaying fully getting her back, because by doing that, you're actually handing your power over to her and losing her respect in the process.

This is why you need to ensure that you're not making the following mistakes:

1. Taking the whole "take it slow" thing too seriously

A woman will often say that she wants to take things slow as a way of maintaining control (e.g. she doesn't want to make it too easy for him to get her back, she wants to test his confidence, she wants to see if he'll put up with it which then makes her doubt whether he's the right guy for her after all).

This is why, it's very important that you don't take it so seriously every time she says something along the lines of, "I do want us to be together again, but I'm still nervous about what happened before. I don't want to rush it. Let's take it slow and see what happens, okay?"

How can you do that?

It's best to just laugh and make light of it.

For example: You might say in a joking way, "Okay, let's talk at a really slllllllow pace now" and have a laugh with her about that.

Remember: The important thing is that you use it as an opportunity to create attraction and reclaim the position of leadership.

If you take control of the situation in a confident, manly and emotionally mature way, she will be able to respect you again.

When she respects you again, she will also begin to feel sexually attracted to you and with those two things in place, reconnecting with her original feelings of love for you then becomes possible.

However, if she gets the sense that she has power over you and that you'll continue being soft and submissive around her because you're desperate to get her back into the relationship with you, she's likely going to drag the process on and on because she's not feeling attracted to you.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Putting up with her unreasonable demands

For example: She might say things like, "I want us to take this slow. So, let's agree that we'll only go out once a week for now and I only want you to text or call me once a day. We can then see how it goes."

If you agree to her demands and say something along the lines of, "Okay baby. You know I'll do anything you want, just as long as we're getting back together again," she will lose respect for you.

She will feel turned off by what she perceives as your emotional weakness and lack of balls for putting up with her unreasonable demands.

She may then begin doubting her decision to get back together again.

So, if you don't want that to happen, make sure that you don't lose your ex's respect by handing over your power to her and putting up with her unreasonable requests.

BTW: Not putting up with her demands is not about sulking, complaining in an angry way or seeking pity for how she is making you feel.

Instead, it's about using everything she throws at you as a way of re-sparking her feelings for you and making her want the relationship even more than you do.

The more she feels drawn to you in new and exciting ways, the less she will want to postpone getting back together again.

She will then likely say something like, “I know I said that I want to take things slow, but I’ve changed my mind. I want to be your girl again right away.”

So, stand your ground with her and make it happen.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Miss Her, But She Doesn't Want Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 possible reasons why she doesn't feel the same way at the moment:

1. You've been trying to get her back via text

It's only natural that after a break up, a guy is going to miss his ex.

He's going to be thinking about her and remembering all the good times they had together and how he felt around her.

As a result, and he's going to want to fix things with her so that he can get her back and not lose access to those enjoyable feelings.

Yet, he might also be feeling a bit worried that she won't want to talk to him on the phone.

So, he may think something like, "If I call her and tell her that I miss her, she could take it as a sign that I'm trying to push her into a relationship. She might then close herself off from me and I will lose whatever chance I still have with her. On the other hand, if I text her, she will appreciate the fact that I'm not being a pushy ex boyfriend. It will also give her time to process her feelings for me and hopefully realize that she misses me and wants me back too. She will then be more open to working things out with me."

As a result, he will stick to texting her.

She may reply to some texts, but she will eventually go cold and lose interest.

Why?

Well, here's the thing!

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she's disconnected from her sexual and romantic feelings for him.

So, when she gets an "I miss you" text from him, rather than think, "It feels good to hear that he misses me. I can now admit to myself that I miss him too and if we both feel the same way, maybe there's a chance we can work things out between us after all," she instead thinks things like, "What is he expecting me to do? Does he now want me to pick up the phone and call him and say 'I'm so glad you told me, because I miss you too?'" If this is his idea of trying to get me back, he's in for a big surprise! Doesn't he realize that it's going to take a lot more than telling me that he misses me to make me forgive him and open back up to the idea of being with him again? I'm not just going to fall for him again based on the fact that he's missing me. For all I know, he's just saying that because he misses the way I used to pick up after him/my cooking/the idea of having a woman available for sex any time he wanted. However, I'm not his maid/cook/sex toy and it's going to take a lot more than an "I miss you" text to convince me that he's changed and is willing to be the kind of man I want him to be and right now, I'm not convinced at all! Instead, all I see is a man who doesn't even have the balls to call me on the phone or talk to me in person. Instead, he's just hiding behind text messages and hoping I will make it easy for him by telling him that I miss him too. Well that's not going to happen! If he wants another chance with me, he's going to have to show me that he's the man I want and so far, the only thing he's accomplished is to convince me that I made the right decision by breaking up with him.

She then responds to him in a negative way and tells him that she doesn't want him.

So, if your ex is saying something like that to you, it may be because you're trying to get her back via text.

However, not only won't that work if she's lost touch with her feelings for you (i.e. because she'll automatically perceive it in a negative light), she will likely also feel annoyed that you don't care enough about her make the effort to at least talk to her on the phone.

Remember: You can't properly re-attract an ex woman (who doesn't want you) via text.

Texts can help, but you should never use them as your main way of getting her back.

If you're serious about getting your ex back, you need to start reactivating her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

The best way to do that is by calling her on the phone and then following through with a meet up, where you can re-attract her, face-to-face.

When she can see for herself that you really are a new and improved man now, it becomes a lot easier for her to want you back, because she can see that she's not getting back with the same man that she broke up with.

You are different now, so it's like she's getting a new kind of man (i.e. one that she feels a lot more respectful towards and attracted to).

So, remember: If you try to achieve it all via text, don't be surprised if she keeps pushing you away and saying things like, "Sorry, but I don't want you anymore. You need to accept it and stop bothering me."

Another possible reason why your ex doesn't want you is

2. She can see that you haven't changed

[image: She can see that you haven't changed]

Sometimes, a guy might think that telling his ex that he misses her is the way to go about getting her back.

Essentially, he's hoping she will think something along the lines of, "I miss him too! I know we have some stuff we need to work out, but the pain of being without him is much worse than what we need to fix. Now that I know he still cares for me too, we can forget about the break up and give our relationship another try," and then come rushing back to him.

Yet, it rarely works out that way.

Why?

Even if a woman does miss her ex, the first thing she's going to look out for when he interacts with her (e.g. via text, social media and especially over the phone and in person), is whether he has understood some of her subtle, deeper reasons for breaking up with him and what he's done to change and improve based on his new-found understanding.

For example: Some of the things she will look out for might include

- The way he talks to her and treats her both in private and in front of other people (e.g. like sheâ€¢s stupid or a child).

- The way he struggles to make decisions without her approval or say-so.
- The way heâ€¢s too afraid to stand up to her when sheâ€¢s being unreasonable or a drama queen.
- How he tends to get overly emotional and act like a woman (e.g. cry, create drama) when things donâ€¢t go his way.
- How he gets annoyed or angry over insignificant things when theyâ€¢re out together and embarrasses her by causing a scene (e.g. shouts at waiters, gets road rage while driving, is argumentative with sales staff in stores).
- The way he lacks presence as a man (e.g. he goes in on himself in social situations and tends to come across as anti-social).
- How he seems so focused and driven when playing video games, but when it comes to his career, heâ€¢s unable to accomplish anything significant.
- How he is too emotionally dependent on her which makes her feel smothered and like she has to stifle her independence to take care of him.

So, if she talks to him over the phone or meets up with him in person and she sees that he still thinks, acts and behaves in exactly the same way that he did before, sheâ€¢s going to be disappointed.

She may then think something along the lines of, â€¢All this time Iâ€¢ve been missing him and wondering if he would be able to change so we could work things out. I now see that thereâ€¢s really nothing for me to miss anymore. What I thought I was missing isn't him, but the feeling of being in love with a man who makes me feel like a real woman. In reality though, heâ€¢s not that guy and I can see that now. He probably won't ever be able to be like that either. I guess I now know for sure that I made the right decision to break up with him and I should just focus on moving on and finding myself a new man who does have the qualities Iâ€¢m looking for.â€¢

She will then push him away and say something like, â€¢Iâ€¢m sorry that you still miss me, but I donâ€¢t want you in my life anymore. I need to move on and make a fresh start with someone else, so please accept it and stop trying to make me change my mind.â€¢

The guy is then left feeling devastated and wondering why she wonâ€¢t give him another chance.

This is why, if you want your ex to care that you miss her and miss you back, you need to first show her that you understand her reasons for breaking up with you, by quickly making some changes to yourself to attract her in the ways that are important to her (e.g. youâ€¢re so much more confident and emotionally independent now, youâ€¢re more focused on your goals and are taking steps to accomplish them, youâ€¢re more emotionally strong and no longer lose it when things donâ€¢t go your way).

Remember: You donâ€¢t have to become perfect to get her to open back up to you again, just better than you were before.

Then, when she sees for herself that youâ€¢ve made the effort to become a better man, she naturally drops her guard and opens up to the idea of giving you another chance, rather than pushing you away.

Another possible reason why your ex doesnâ€¢t want you isâ€¢!

3. She knows that you still have no idea what kind of attraction experience she really wants, or how to give it to her

[image: She knows that you still have no idea what kind of attraction experience she really wants]

For a woman to feel motivated to be in a relationship with a guy, treat him well and be a good woman to him, she expects him to be able to make her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with him (e.g. respectful, attracted, excited).

So when a guy fails to understand that about her and keeps giving her things she doesn't want, she will naturally stop wanting to be with him.

Is it possible that you have been giving your ex the wrong attraction experience and are still doing it now that you've broken up?

For example: Imagine a woman is in a relationship with a guy.

She needs him to be ballsy, not get flustered or emotional when she creates fake drama and can put her back in her place in a loving, but dominant way.

However, instead of that, she gets a guy who is too emotionally sensitive, is always nice to her no matter how badly she treats him and who allows her to walk all over him.

In his mind he thinks that he's being a good guy and that she will love him even more for always letting her get her way.

Yet, except for a few insecure, needy women who like to dominate their man, most women will secretly feel disappointed at how they ended up with such a wimpy guy.

Of course, a woman usually won't break up with her guy because of that right away and may instead misbehave even more to see if he'll get fed up with her and man up.

However, if he doesn't she will eventually lose too much respect and attraction for him and she will then break up with him.

If he then tries to get her back, she may act cold, aloof and bitchy towards him to test if he's really changed, or if he still has no idea how to give her the attraction experience she's been looking for all along.

For example: She might say something like, "I don't know if I want you back. Call me again in a week while I think about it."

If the guy agrees to her ridiculous request and continues to be nice and sweet to her in the hope that she will give him another chance, she will know that he's still doesn't have a clue about what she wants from him.

She will then likely cut him out of her life and focus on moving on and finding herself a new man.

On the other hand, if he laughs at her in a loving, yet assertive way when she says that and then turns it into something they can laugh about together, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling surges of respect and attraction for him again, even if she initially tries to hide it.

When that happens, her guard comes down and she becomes open to giving him another chance.

With this in mind, ask yourself, "Do I know the attraction experience my ex wants from me and how to give it to her, or do I still have no idea?"

If you do know what she wants, then you're a lot closer to re-attracting her and making her want you back again.

However, if you still have no idea, it's very important that you get to the core reasons for the break up and begin to fix those things (e.g. if you were too insecure and became too clingy and needy you now become more confident and self-assured, if you lacked the masculine edge she needed to feel like a feminine woman with you, you now think, act, behave and respond to her like an emotionally masculine man).

When you do that, you will easily be able to reactivate your ex's feelings of respect and attraction for you again and get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex doesn't want you is

4. You're trying to get her to want a relationship, even though you haven't reawakened her feelings

[image: Trying to get her to want a relationship before reawakening her feelings]

For a woman to want to give her ex another chance, she needs to reconnect with her sexual and romantic feelings for him first.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't know that, so when they try to get an ex back, the first thing they do is push her to commit to the idea of a relationship right away.

A guy like that will likely be thinking things like, "I miss her and I want her back," so it makes perfect sense to him that the next step is to convince his ex to want to get back together again too.

So, rather than re-attract her, which will almost certainly work, he instead tries to convince her in ways that she doesn't care about (e.g. promising her to change anything she wants, begging and pleading with her, sending her long love letters/e-mails/texts and pouring his heart out to her, buying her flowers and gifts).

Yet, in most cases, rather than make her want him, she instead just keeps rejecting his attempts to get her back.

Why?

Simple.

A relationship is the last step of the ex back process, not the first one.

He is attracted to her, wants her back and is willing to do anything to make it happen, but the one thing he hasn't done is make her feel the same way about him.

Therefore, she doesn't want to commit to a relationship.

So, if you want your ex woman to stop rejecting your attempts to get her back, you have to focus on making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you first.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are

- Using humor to bring down her defenses and make her smile and laugh with you again.
- Maintaining your confidence around her, no matter what she says or does to put you off (e.g. she is being distant and unfriendly towards you and saying that just doesn't want you in her life anymore).
- Being assertive (in a loving way) and showing her that you're more emotionally dominant than ever before and that you're not intimidated by her recent rejections of you.
- Flirting with her to build up sexual tension between you and her.

When you focus on re-attracting your ex and take the pressure off her to give the relationship another chance, what you wanted from her all along actually starts to happen.

She stops pushing you away and saying hurtful things like, “What will it take for you to accept that we’re never, ever going to get back together again? Can’t you understand that I just don’t want you anymore?” and she opens back up to interacting with you more on the phone and in person to see what happens from there.

3 Common Problems You Could Experience When Trying to Get an Ex Back Who Doesn’t Want You

By the way!

When you try to get your ex back, don’t be surprised if she behaves in any of the following ways:

1. She is cold or distant

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy and then breaks up with him, she changes the way she thinks about him and looks at him.

Basically, she closes herself off and no longer allows herself to see any of his good qualities and she instead focuses on all the negative things about him that turn her off (e.g. he’s insecure and needy, he doesn’t have the balls to stand up to her, he is too emotionally sensitive).

So, if her ex then starts texting her and calling her in the hope of getting her back, she will naturally respond to him by being cold and distant, because she has only been connecting to her negative feelings about him and doesn’t have any positive feelings to balance out how she feels.

This is why, before you put any pressure on your ex to get back with you, you need to change her negative feelings into positive ones by thinking, acting, behaving and responding to her in ways that are attractive to her (e.g. being confident and self-assured, being emotionally masculine, using humor to ease the tension between you).

When you make her feel good every time you interact with her, she won’t be able to stop herself from warming back up to you.

Another problem you might encounter when trying to get an ex back who doesn’t want you is!

2. She is being stubborn about not changing her mind

In most cases, a woman will only be stubborn because the guy is going about the ex back process backwards.

Basically, he’s pushing her to give him another chance, but he hasn’t fully reactivated her sexual and romantic feelings for him yet.

So, if you want your ex to want you again, don’t waste time telling her how you feel about her and that you miss her.

What matters to her is how she feels and if you haven’t reactivated her feelings for you yet, what she feels is negative emotions like anger, disappointment or indifference.

This is why you need to focus on changing those feelings inside of her first.

When she starts to reconnect to her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again, her stubbornness will disappear too.

Another problem you might encounter when trying to get an ex back who doesn't want you is

3. She doesn't seem to care about losing you

Most of the time, for a woman to get to the point where she wants to break up with a guy, it means she has already disconnected with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

This means, the idea of never seeing him again seems very appealing to her.

In fact, she may even be thinking things like, "I'm so glad to be single again. Now I'm free to live my life and find myself another man who can give me what I truly want in a relationship, rather than be stuck with a guy who just doesn't get me at all."

She just doesn't care anymore so losing him isn't a problem to her.

This is why, if your ex doesn't have strong feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you, losing you isn't really going to matter to her.

On the other hand, if you interact with her every chance you get (via text, social media and especially over the phone and in person) and you reawaken her feelings for you, the idea of losing you will send her into a panic.

She will begin to wonder if letting you go is a mistake she will regret for the rest of her life and when that happens, her defenses come down and she opens back up to the idea of giving you another chance.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why is My Ex Rubbing Things in My Face?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 common reasons why a woman will do that to an ex:

1. She enjoys hurting an ex's by showing how happy she is after a break up

Some women are just mean and vindictive and enjoy rubbing things in an ex's face just to make themselves feel better by hurting him.

Essentially, a woman like that is hoping that when her ex sees how happy she is without him, he will regret breaking up with her and think something along the lines of, "I was such an idiot for letting her go. Now I see that she's truly the woman I want, but it's too late because she's happy and moving on without me."

It then gives her a false sense of power and makes her feel more valuable and wanted.

In some cases, a woman might rub things in her ex's face because of how she was raised as a child (e.g. her mother used to do that to the men in her life, she never had a strong female role model so she doesn't know how to behave after a break up), or because of some experiences she had with previous relationships (e.g. she was badly hurt by a guy and struggled to get over him so she promised herself she would never let that happen again and that she will be the one moving on first after a break up).

So, even though your ex is currently rubbing things in your face, it's not necessarily about you.

Instead, she may simply be reacting the only way she knows how.

So, don't let her actions cause you to lose confidence in yourself and in your value to her.

Instead, the next time she does something like that, rather than get upset about it or feel hurt, use it as an opportunity to spark her feelings for you.

How can you do that?

By using some humor to take the bite off the situation and show her that you're not affected by her bitchiness.

For example: Imagine you're talking to your ex over the phone or in person and she says something like, "I can't believe how great it is to be single! I've been out with my friends every night this week. I'm having an amazing time. If I'd known how great my life would be without you, I'd have dumped you ages ago!"

Basically she's hoping you will get upset and possibly even say something like, "Why are you being so mean to me? I know I stuffed up, but I really did try to be a good guy to you. Can't you at least be a bit nicer to me now rather than rubbing how much fun you're having without me in my face?"

She can then feel good about herself.

However, you're not going to react like that.

Instead, you're going to laugh (in a confident yet loving way) and you're going to respond by saying something like, "You always were a bit of a bore when we were together, so it's nice to see you having fun for a change. I'm happy for you. Keep it up. You're so much more" *interesting to talk to now.*â€œ

She's likely going to be a bit shocked that you have the balls to call her a bore and she's also going to be surprised that you're not getting upset by what she's saying.

However, she's also going to be feeling surges of respect and attraction for you for having the courage to joke with her when she's clearly trying to annoy you by rubbing her new-found happiness in your face.

She will then naturally drop her guard a little bit and open up to interacting with you more (i.e. to check if you really have changed and become more confident and self-assured, or if it was only a once off thing).

You can then show her that you really are a new man now, fully re-attract her and get her back.

Another common reason why a woman will do that is

2. She is trying to get revenge for how you made her feel during the relationship

[image: She is trying to get revenge for how you made her feel during the relationship]

For a woman to be happy in a relationship with a man and want to stick with him and be good to him, she needs to feel like she can look up to him and respect him for being a real man (i.e. loyal, dependable, caring, trustworthy).

So, when a guy fails to put in enough effort in the relationship and instead does things that make her feel unloved, unappreciated and possibly even betrayed (e.g. he takes her for granted, cheats on her, is controlling, belittles her and doesn't support her dreams), it's only natural that a woman will feel resentful towards him after they break up.

She may then rub things in his face to get revenge on him for everything he put her through when they were together.

So, as nasty as that may sound to you, the fact is, even a nice, sweet woman can turn mean when she feels like she's been manipulated, lied to or treated badly by a guy.

This has a lot to do with a woman's natural instincts of wanting to find one man, get him to fall in love with her and stick with him for life.

Most women don't want to have to break up with a guy because their natural instinct is to try to make the relationship work.

So, when a guy stuffs up really badly and makes a woman feel like she made the wrong decision by choosing him, she gets really nasty because he has been wasting her time (i.e. a woman wants to know that her relationship with a guy will eventually lead to more serious things like moving in together, getting married, having children).

This is why, if you want your ex to stop rubbing things in your face and get her back, you need to fix and improve some of your issues and become the man you know you should be.

When she can see for herself that you are a new and improved man already and that if she gets back with you, you're not going to go back to making the same attraction mistakes and treating her the way you did before, she'll be able to start trusting you again.

When that happens, her defenses will come down and she will open back up to talking to you and hanging out with you again to see where things go.

Another common reason why a woman will do that isâ€¦

3. She's trying to get you to see that she's not interested in getting back with you

Every woman is different.

Some women just come right out and say, â€œI don't have feelings for you anymore. I don't want to see you ever again,â€ whereas others resort to all sorts of weird ways of expressing the same thing.

For example: A woman mightâ€¦

- Flirt in front of her ex with other guys to show him that sheâ€™s moving on.
- Say things like, â€œIâ€™ve never been happier than I have since we broke up,â€ â€œI love being single,â€ or â€œThere are so many guys out there that are better than you in so many ways and they want to date me,â€ just to put him off.
- Talk about a new guy sheâ€™s into with her ex.
- Talk about her dates and how the guys spoiled her (e.g. took her to an expensive restaurant, bought her flowers).

Essentially, sheâ€™s hoping that her ex will feel unwelcome to try and get her back and will leave her alone, without her having to come out and say that to him directly.

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Even if your ex is rubbing things in your face as a way of showing you that sheâ€™s not interested, it doesnâ€™t mean you canâ€™t change how she feels and get her back.

To make your ex change her mind and make her want you back, you have to make her feel the way she really wants to feel when sheâ€™s around you (i.e. respectful, sexually and romantically attracted, happy, excited).

Getting her back is not about telling her how much you love her and need her, how you promise to change or how youâ€™ll never hurt her again.

She doesnâ€™t care about all that.

She broke up with you because you didnâ€™t make her feel the way that she really wanted to feel around a man (e.g. because you might have been too insecure, lacked balls around her, treated her more like a neutral friend than a desirable woman).

So, if you want her back, you need to reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

Only when she feels rushes of respect and attraction for you will she stop rubbing your face in things and open back up to the idea of being your girl.

However, if you donâ€™t do anything to spark her feelings and just try to convince her to give you another chance based on your feelings for her, she will simply keep doing more and more things to put you off so that you can leave her alone.

Another common reason why a woman will do that isâ€¦

4. She never really loved you, or never truly committed to the relationship

[image: She never truly loved you or committed to the relationship]

Sometimes a woman will get into a relationship with a guy sheâ€™s not 100% attracted to, or compatible with (e.g. because itâ€™s a rebound relationship, sheâ€™s afraid of being single so she settles for him, she was never interested in him but he pursued her so much that she gave in and agreed to date him).

That doesnâ€™t mean she doesnâ€™t care for the guy at all and she may even be hoping that over time, he will be able to create a relationship dynamic that will make her want to treat him well, be attentive and fall deeply in love with him.

Yet, that just doesnâ€™t happen, because he has no idea how to grow her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, rather than giving her the attraction experience she really wants (e.g. to be with a confident, emotionally strong man who is a bit of challenge and doesnâ€™t fall for her drama), he instead gives her what he thinks she wants (e.g. heâ€™s extra nice and sweet to her regardless of how badly she treats him, heâ€™s clingy and needy and constantly says things like, â€œYou are my world,â€ or â€œI donâ€™t know what Iâ€™d do if you ever broke up with meâ€).

In his mind heâ€™s being a loving, devoted boyfriend.

However, in her mind heâ€™s giving her the kind of attraction experience she doesnâ€™t want.

Of course she doesnâ€™t admit that to him and eventually she just decides to break up with him and move on, which is easy for her, because she never felt the kind of attraction and love for him that would cause her to struggle to get over him.

If the guy then tries to get her back by behaving in ways that turn her off even more (e.g. he begs and pleads with her for another chance, he cries to her, he sends her long, emotional letters/e-mails/text messages declaring his undying love for her), rather than feel bad for hurting him, she may actually rub things in his face to discourage him from pursuing her.

The good news though, is that even when a woman is being mean and rubbing things in her exâ€™s face, it doesnâ€™t mean her feelings are set in stone and canâ€™t change.

In fact, if you interact with your ex and begin giving her the attraction experience she always wanted from you (e.g. being ballsy and emotionally masculine with her, maintaining your confidence regardless of how cold or even bitchy sheâ€™s being, being more of a challenge to her rather than being too nice or a push over), she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling surges of respect for you.

When she begins to respect you again, she will also start to feel attracted to you and you can then build on those feelings and make her truly fall in love with you this time.

So, donâ€™t let it bother you that your ex is rubbing things in your face at the moment.

Just interact with her, reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you and all of that will change.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making With an Ex Who Keeps Rubbing Things in Your Face

If you want to get your ex back, itâ€™s important that you approach the ex back process in the right frame of mind.

If you donâ€™t, youâ€™ll end up making mistakes that will diminish your chances.

For example: 3 mistakes to avoid areâ€¦!

1. Misinterpreting her happiness as her wanting to rub it in your face

Itâ€™s never a nice experience to feel like youâ€™re being left behind and watching the woman you love move on and being happy without you.

Yet, that doesnâ€™t mean sheâ€™s trying to rub her happiness in your face to make you miserable.

Instead, it could be possible that youâ€™re looking at her in a negative light.

In your mind you may be thinking things like, â€œSheâ€™s selfish for breaking up with me,â€ or â€œWhy wonâ€™t she just give me one more chance to show her that things can be different now? Sheâ€™s just being stubborn,â€ or â€œI canâ€™t believe how heartless sheâ€™s being. Even though she knows that I still care for her and want her back, sheâ€™s rubbing her happiness in my face.â€

Although itâ€™ may temporarily make you feel a little better toâ€™ see your ex as the evil villain in your relationship story, itâ€™s possible that sheâ€™s just making the best of a difficult situation.

Maybe sheâ€™s hurting too.

However, rather than sitting around wallowing in misery and becoming more and more depressed,â€™ she has made the conscious decision to be happy, with or without you.

Now itâ€™s your turn to feel happy, with or without her.

This does not mean you have to be with new women.

Instead, it means that you should simply stop obsessing about what sheâ€™s doing and focus on living a happy, fulfilling life without her.

When you do, something amazing happens.

She starts to feel attracted to you again.

Suddenly, she starts to see you as being more of a catch than you were before.

She notices that you are a new man now and she likes it.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

2. Seeking pity from her

In some cases, if the guy canâ€™t cope with how his ex is treating him, he may decide to make her feel sorry for him and feel guilty about the pain he is experiencing, by saying things like, â€œHow could you do this to me? Weâ€™ve only recently broken up and look at how youâ€™re behaving. Did you ever really love me or was it all an act? I canâ€™t imagine treating you this way. It would break my heart to cause you pain, even if we are broken up. The question is, do you have a heart? Iâ€™m not so sure. I just donâ€™t know who you are anymore!â€

Yet, rather than make a woman think, â€œDamn, he has a point. I really am being a bit of a bitch to him. He doesnâ€™t deserve that. Heâ€™s always been so good to me. I was lucky to have him love me as much as he did and he clearly still cares so much for me. Maybe Iâ€™ve been too hard on him after all. Maybe he deserves another chance,â€ she will likely just feel annoyed that he is trying to make her feel guilty for being happy without her.

As a result, she will lose even more respect for him and she may even rub things in his face even more to get back at him.

So, if you don't want to push your ex away from you and get her back, using the pity card is not the correct approach for that to happen.

What is?

Re-sparking her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, so she naturally feels drawn to you and becomes open to giving the relationship another chance, for her own reasons.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Giving up on getting her back because she seems happy without him

Sometimes, when a guy sees that his ex has moved on, he may think to himself something like, “Well, I guess it's too late then. I don't stand a chance anymore. She seems so happy without me.”

As a result, he gives up and never makes a move to get her back.

Yet, here's the thing

Even if a woman has fully gotten over her ex and moved on, it doesn't mean he can't get her back.

In fact, a man can get a woman to break up with her new guy, if he successfully reactivates her feelings for him again and then follows through on the rest of the ex back process.

He has to get her on a phone call with him and regardless of how offish and unwelcoming she might sound at first (e.g. she says things like, “What do you want? I've moved on and I now have a boyfriend, so we have nothing to talk about”), he needs to maintain his confidence with her and then use ballsy humor to break down her defenses and ease the negative tension between them.

The more he makes her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to him again, the more respect and attraction she will feel for him.

It then becomes difficult for her to stick to her decision to be broken up with him, because he is reawakening all the positive feelings she associates with him that have been dormant inside of her (e.g. respect, attraction, love).

She then becomes open to meeting up with him in person to see how she feels.

On the other hand, if a guy just gives up and walks away, he may end up spending the rest of his life wondering, “What if she was the one for me,” and never being able to truly settle down and be happy with another woman.

Don't let that guy be you.

Be courageous enough to get your ex back.

Then, if you decide that she's not the right woman for you, you can walk away knowing you didn't lose her because you were too worried about her reaction to try.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Still Asks About Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 common reasons why an ex will do that:

1. She wants to find out if you're moving on faster than her

After breaking up with a guy, a woman might start to worry that he will find a replacement woman and move on before sheâs had a chance to hook up with a new guy first.

So, she will try to find out what heâs is up to by casually asking mutual friends about him and in some cases, she may even check his posts on Facebook and other social media for clues.

Essentially, sheâs hoping that by following his moves, she will stay one step ahead of him and find a new man first, before heâs had a chance to move on.

She can then feel good about herself knowing that she was able to move on first.

However, if she discovers that her ex is the one who is moving on first, she will feel hurt and like he is leaving her behind.

This is a good thing.

It makes her feel drawn to him again, which causes her to drop her guard and open back up to interacting with him over the phone and in person.

He can then reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for him (e.g. by using humor to break down the walls between them, showing her that heâs changed and improved some of the things that were turning her off before, giving her a new and exciting attraction experience) and get her back.

This is why itâs so important for you not to be sitting around feeling sad and dejected about your break up.

If you are stuck missing your ex and not doing anything to move on, not only will she feel relieved that she still has a chance of hooking up with another guy before you find another woman, she also feels reassured that she made the right decision to break up with you, because youâre not an emotionally strong man.

So, if you want to get your exâs attention and re-attract her, you must show her that even though you and her have broken up, youâre not sitting around feeling sorry for yourself.

Youâre living your life and having fun without her.

Of course that doesnât mean you donât want her back, it simply means you donât need her back.

Then, the next time she asks about you and finds out that youâre already happy, confident and forward moving in life without her, she wonât be able stop thinking about you in a more positive way.

All of a sudden, she starts thinking things like, *âWhy is he moving on so quickly without me? Why isnât he falling apart? Heâs just so confident and emotionally mature now and thatâs so attractive to me. Maybe I should call him to say hi and see what happens.*â

When that happens, she opens back up to talking to you and seeing you in person and you can easily reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex still asks about you isâ€¦!

2. She misses you and likes to hear about you from others

[image: She likes to hear about you from others]

Not all women who break up with a guy feel so much anger and hostility towards him that when they think about him itâ€¦s only to curse him or remember the bad things about him.

In most cases, a woman will still have some positive feelings for her ex and she will continue to miss him from time to time, even though she wonâ€¦t openly admit it to him.

For example: She might think to herself, â€œI miss having a boyfriend and how it felt to have someone to come home to at night/call on the phone. I wonder what heâ€¦s up to now and if he misses me too.â€

If she then talks to a mutual friend when sheâ€¦s feeling that way about him, itâ€¦s only natural that she will then ask things like, â€œHow is he doing?â€ or, â€œWhat has he been up to since we broke up?â€ or, â€œIs he dating anyone else yet?â€

Secretly she may be hoping that she will discover that he misses her too and if he then finds out that she has been asking about him, he will contact her to say hello and see where things go from there.

So, thereâ€¦s a good chance that your ex is missing you if sheâ€¦s asking about you.

This is why you need to take control of the situation, rather than waiting and hoping that she does it for you.

Just pick up the phone and begin re-attracting her by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

Then get her to meet up with you in person, so that you can fully reactivate her feelings for you (i.e. by showing her that youâ€¦re now a new and improved man) and guide her back into a relationship with you.

Remember: In most cases, a woman will wait and hope that her ex has the courage and skill to get her back, but if he doesnâ€¦t, she will just focus on getting over him and moving on.

Another possible reason why your ex still asks about you isâ€¦!

3. She's hoping that it gets back to you for either good or bad reasons

[image: She's hoping that it gets back to you for either good or bad reasons]

Depending on your exâ€¦s feelings for you at the moment, she may be hoping that you will find out that sheâ€¦s asking about you to get a desired response out of you.

For example: If your ex still has some feelings for you, she may be hoping that by asking about you, it will get back to you and you will get the hint, contact her, reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

In a case like this, you just need to be courageous enough to make a move by calling her, reawakening some of her feelings for you, meeting up with her and getting her back.

On the other hand, if your ex is currently feeling a lot of anger and resentment towards you (e.g. because of the way things ended between you and her, you really stuffed up in the relationship and caused her a lot of pain), she may want to get revenge on you by messing with your head by making people tell you that she's asking about you.

Essentially, she's hoping that you will begin feeling hopeful that she might be interested in getting back together again.

Then, if you contact her, she can reject you by saying something along the lines of, "Before you say anything, let me tell you right now, I'm not interested. Nothing you can say will change how I feel about you and that is plain and utter disgust! You are a jerk and I regret ever going out with you. If you were the last man on earth I wouldn't get back with you, so go away and leave me alone!"

She can then get the satisfaction of hurting you the way she feels you hurt her.

However, it doesn't have to work out that way.

In fact, if you contact her and maintain your confidence regardless of what she says to you and then use ballsy humor to make her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with you, even if she tries to fight it, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some respect for you again.

When she respects you, she also starts to feel attracted to you and then all it takes is for you to show her that you really are a different man now and she won't be able to stop herself from opening back up to you.

Another possible reason why your ex still asks about you is

4. She's not interested in getting back with you at this point and is simply making conversation with mutual friends

Sometimes a woman will be happy with her decision to end her relationship with a guy and she may be coping really well with the break up.

So, if she finds herself in the company of mutual friends, it won't be that much of a big deal to her to talk about her ex with them.

She might then ask things like, "How is he doing?" or, "Is he okay?" just to make conversation with them.

If the friends then pass her interest on to her ex, he might start wondering if she's still interested in him.

If he then contacts her to try and get her back, he may feel hurt when she says something like, "It's really nice to hear from you again, but I'm really not interested in us getting back together again. I just don't have feelings for you anymore. I hope you can accept that and move on. I really do want you to be happy."

Here's the thing though

It may be true that your ex isn't interested in getting back with you right now, but it doesn't mean she will feel the same way after you re-spark some of her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

So, don't waste anymore time waiting for her to want you back on her own and then give you a sign, before you make a move.

You need to take action and begin re-attracting her right away.

How can you do that?

Start by interacting with her on a phone call or in person and make her feel strong, positive emotions such as respect, sexual attraction, excitement and joy.

The more she enjoys interacting with you again, the more her interest in you will begin to grow.

She will then likely begin thinking things like, “I really wasn’t interested in getting back together with him, but he’s really making it difficult for me to stick to that decision. Instead, he’s making me want to talk to him over the phone and see him in person more and more. This is crazy, but I feel like I’m falling for him again. Maybe I need to give him another chance after all.”

She then opens back up to you and you can get her back, even though she was recently telling herself that she wasn’t interested in getting back with you.

Another possible reason why your ex still asks about you is

5. She’s concerned about your well-being, or is simply curious to know what you’re up to

[image: She is concerned or curious]

Sometimes a woman is just a nice, sweet person and it’s in her nature to want to make sure that her ex is doing okay and isn’t struggling to cope after their break up.

Alternatively, she might just be curious about what he’s doing now that they’re no longer together.

However, to avoid giving him false hope by calling him or texting him herself, she instead just checks up on him by asking mutual friends about his wellbeing.

Of course, if a guy is still in love with her and is secretly wishing they will get back together again, he may be hoping that it’s a sign that she still has feelings for him too.

If he then attempts to get her back (e.g. he sends her a text, e-mail or social media message pouring his heart out to her), he feels shocked when she rejects him and he may think things like, “I don’t understand why this happened. Why was she asking about me if she wasn’t interested in me?”

The answer is that he didn’t reactivate her feelings for him first.

He just assumed that she would want to give him another chance, but he didn’t do anything to make her want to do it.

Here’s the thing

Regardless of your ex’s reasons for asking about you (e.g. she’s a nice person, she’s curious) and currently isn’t interested in getting back together again, it doesn’t mean you can’t change how she feels.

You can.

When you reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by staying confident regardless of what she says or does to put you off, using humor to make her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again on the phone or in person, showing her that you’ve changed and improved and are now a better man than before, making her feel attracted in new and exciting ways) she won’t be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

When that happens, her defenses start to come down and she becomes open to interacting with you more to see what happens.

This is something that happens naturally and automatically, even if she didn't feel that way before and even if she was convinced that she was over you and ready to forget about you and move on.

2 Mistakes to Avoid When Your Ex is Still Asking About You

You can take your ex asking about you as a good sign that she's open to getting back together again, or you can waste a lot of time trying to understand what she means and lose your chance with her.

The best approach is to take it as a good sign and then to ensure that you don't make the following 2 mistakes and turn her off:

1. Overanalyzing certain things she has said to others

For example: She might be talking to mutual friends and when the subject of you comes up she may say something along the lines of, Of course I miss him. We had a good thing going for a while.

Alternatively, she might say something like, I knew he wouldn't get a new girlfriend.

If a guy begins to overanalyze why she said what she said and tries to assess her state of mind and her intentions, he will almost definitely drive himself crazy.

Not only that, he will not get any closer to finding out the truth, because he's only guessing at what she was feeling based on how confident or insecure he feels about himself and his value to her.

So, make sure you don't do that to yourself.

Instead, understand that when getting a woman back, a man needs to focus on what he is doing, not on what she is doing.

He is the one who needs to lead the process.

It's not about following her.

If he tries to follow her, she will almost certainly lead him around in circles (e.g. by giving mixed signals, asking for more time, saying that she misses him, but couldn't be in a relationship with him again) like a typical woman will do.

A woman doesn't want to be the leader of the ex back process.

This is why, you need to have the confidence to make it happen without her help.

So, forget about trying to figure out why your ex is still asking about you and what she's saying and focus instead on reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you over the phone or in person and get her back.

The second mistake is

2. Being afraid to call her and say hi

Many guys say, My ex prefers text, or, She'd get annoyed with me if I just called her.

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

You have to take charge and make it happen anyway.

Yes, your ex may initially not like it if you call her.

However, she will like it if youâre making her smile and laugh on the phone, then making her feel attracted in person and from there, making her feel very aroused and excited during sex.

However, you have to lead the way.

If you donât and instead wait for her to give you a sign that itâs okay to call her, you might eventually discover that sheâs moved on and is now in a relationship with a new man.

Donât let that happen to you.

If you want her back, you have to have the balls to take the actions required to get her back for real.

Donât be afraid to call her and say hi.

Do whatever has to be done to get her back.

You're not needy or weak for wanting to get her back.

Couples get back together all the time.

Do it.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

What Should I Say If My Ex Says That She Doesn't Want to Get Back Together?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 responses that work:

1. Agree not to get back together, re-attract her and then give her a week of space

[image: Agree not to get back together, re-attract her and then give her a week of space]

For example: Imagine you're at a meet up with your ex and she's saying things like, â€œForget it. I just don't want to get back together again. Please just accept it and stop trying to change my mind.â€

You can then respond with something along the lines of, â€œOkay, if that's how you really feel, I won't push you. Sure I still care for you and want us to get back together again, but I respect your decision. I wish you the best of luck and I hope you will be happy.â€

Of course, just by saying that to her, you're automatically making her feel bursts of respect for you again for being an emotionally strong and mature man and not reacting like she was afraid you would (e.g. get upset and cause a scene, beg and plead with her to change her mind, try to talk her out of her decision).

When she feels respect for you, she will also start to feel some attraction for you too.

You can then build on those feelings by making her laugh, smile and feel good around you, so that you can plant seeds of doubt in her mind that she's making the wrong decision by not wanting to get back together with you.

For example: You can joke with her by saying something like, â€œI bet you thought I was going to start begging you to change your mind, didn't you? Okay, I hate to disappoint you, so here goesâ€ and pretend to throw a tantrum (e.g. pretend to cry, be upset) for a few seconds before having a light chuckle to let her see that you're only kidding.

She will most likely laugh and she will begin to wonder something like, â€œWhat's gotten into him? He's so different now. He's being so confident and self-assured. I know I said that I don't want to get back together with him, but all of a sudden I feel so confused.â€

Note: It's very important that you continue making her laugh and smile and sparking her feelings throughout the interaction with you.

Then, once she's totally relaxed and having a good time, you need to wrap things up with her (i.e. finish up what you're doing), then say something like, â€œOkay, I guess this is goodbye then. Take care of yourself. Byeâ€ and leave.

Then, don't contact her at all (not even one text) for a week.

If you've properly sparked feelings of romantic and sexual attraction inside of her before giving her the week of space, she will be thinking about you and wondering if she's made the right decision.

If she hasn't contacted you after a week, contact her to say hi and then guide her through the ex back process.

Another way you can respond if your ex says that she doesn't want to get back together isâ€

2. Agree with her decision and get her to be open to a friendship

[image: Agree with her decision and get her to be open to a friendship]

For example: You might say something like, “If that’s how you feel, I totally respect your decision. However, that doesn’t mean we can’t still be friends. We’re both mature adults and we can still enjoy each other’s company from time to time with no strings attached, right? So, let’s try that for a while. Then if you decide you don’t even want to be friends, I promise I’ll back off and leave you alone.”

In most cases, a woman will likely respond with something like, “Oh, okay. I guess we can still be friends.”

Alternatively, if she wants to get rid of you, she might agree in the hope that she can eventually take you up on your promise to leave her alone.

Of course, that’s not going to happen, because you’re going to use the friendship to re-attract her.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by:

- Maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what she says or does to make you feel inadequate or like she’s not interested in you anymore.
- Being a good man, but also being confident and assertive when talking to her, so she can see that she can’t dominate you during conversations.
- Believing in yourself and in your value and attractiveness to her, rather than doubting yourself and making her feel like she needs to find herself a better man than you as a result.
- Making her smile and laugh and feel relaxed to be around you again, rather than trying to convince her to get back together again.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension, rather than being too nice or neutral and giving her the impression that you’re not interested in her anymore.
- Showing her that you’re now at a new level as a man and that she can truly look up to you, respect you, feel attracted to you and love you, rather than continuing to make the same old attraction mistakes as before.

The more you continue saying and doing the types of things that build on her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, the more she stops seeing you as just a friend.

She then naturally begins to fall back in love with you and want you back for herself.

Important: Don’t make the mistake of hanging around her and pretending that you only want to be her nice, neutral friend and that you’re not sexually interested in her anymore, because if you do that she may take it as a sign that you’re not interested in her anymore.

If she thinks that, she will then hook up with other guys to move on without you.

Another way you can respond if your ex says that she doesn’t want to get back together is:

3. Pretend to get angry about it and then laugh and say that it’s fine

[image: Pretend to be angry about it and then laugh and say that it's fine]

For example: You might frown, seem annoyed and say something along the lines of, “I don’t accept that you don’t want to get back together again! You can forget about it if you think

Iâm ever going to let you walk out on what we had. You are going to be my girl again whether you want to or not and thatâs final!

At this point your ex will likely look shocked and she may even say something like, What? or Are you crazy?

You can then burst out laughing and say, Okay, stop looking so angry and stressed out. I was just kidding with you. I promise Iâm not going to kidnap you, lock you in my basement and force you to be my girl for the rest of your life. Haha! You should have seen your face when I said that to you.

She will then likely laugh with you and maybe feel a bit embarrassed for getting caught out by you in that way.

She will also feel some attraction for you for having the balls to say and do that, rather than being so cautious and afraid to say something wrong.

Why?

Being on his best behavior around a woman makes a guy seem emotionally weak, wimpy and that turns her off.

A woman doesn't want to feel as though her guy needs her reassurance, love, attention and approval to feel confident and sure of himself.

She also doesn't want to feel as though she is the one in control of the relationship.

She wants him to be assertive and take control, but still be a loving, good man while he's doing it.

It's not about being rude to her, insulting her or disrespecting her.

Instead, it's about having the emotional strength to not take what she is saying so personally and just bring the interaction back to laughter and fun.

Think about it this way!

When you and your ex are both laughing and joking together, it makes it very difficult for her to hold on to her negative emotions about you (e.g. anger, disappointment, regret).

She then starts to feel good around you, even if she initially doesn't want to admit that to you, or even to herself.

When that happens, her guard starts to slip down and she begins to open back up to wanting to give the relationship another chance.

That makes her more willing to interact with you on the phone and in person, which means you have more chances to fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another way you can respond if your ex says that she doesn't want to get back together is!

4. Get her to agree to at least remain friends on Facebook

If your ex is being closed off towards you and saying things like, I don't think it's a good idea to keep seeing each other or even talking over the phone. We need to make a clean break so that we can both heal and move on, rather than accept that and then potentially lose all contact with her (which makes it more difficult for you to be able to re-attract her and get her back), you can say something along the lines of, Okay, I accept that you don't want to see me or talk to me over the phone, but at least let's stay friends on Facebook. We will then be able to get in touch with each other from time to time to say hi without any pressure. We can do that, right? It's not that big of a deal.

Chances are high that your ex will agree to that, because she won't feel pressured by you to get back together again.

You can then use Facebook to re-attract her and make her miss you.

How?

By posting photos of yourself having fun with other people (e.g. going to parties, events, festivals), so she can see you're happy and getting on with your life without her, rather than sitting around all day moping and worrying about how to get her back.

Instead, you are emotionally independent and feel good about yourself and your life without her.

A woman won't admit that she wants you to feel that way without her, but secretly she will like it and she will feel drawn to you again in a way that feels good.

She may then start to miss you and begin to wonder if she made the right decision to cut you out of her life by refusing to talk to you over the phone or see you in person.

You can then message her to have a chat and then transition to a phone call and then meet up because she will be more open to that by then.

When she experiences the new and improved you for herself (e.g. you're more confident and self-assured now, you're more emotionally independent, you're more ballsy and assertive), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling respect for you again.

When she starts respecting you again, she then also begins to feel sexually attracted to you again.

When those two emotions are reactivated, it becomes difficult for her to continue being closed off towards you.

She feels drawn to you and realizes that there is clearly still a spark between you and her and she felt it when she interacted with you.

When that happens, her defenses come down and she then becomes open to interacting with you even more to see where things go from there.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making With an Ex Who Says That She Doesn't Want to Get Back Together

If you approach the ex back process in the correct way, you can easily get your ex back.

However, if you don't, you may end up turning her off even more.

This is why, you need to be sure that you're not making these mistakes with your ex right now:

1. Thinking that the way to get an ex back is to ask for another chance at the relationship

A lot of guys make the mistake of thinking that the only way to get an ex back is by asking her to give them another chance.

For example: A guy might call his ex on the phone and say something like, I'm really sorry for what happened. I know that I made mistakes and I hurt you, but I really do care for you deeply *and I want to try and work things out. Please will you consider getting back together again?*â€œ

From there, his ex can then say â€œYesâ€œ or, â€œNoâ€œ and in his mind, he then has to live with whatever decision she makes.

Yet, thatâ€™s not the way to get an ex back at all!

Hereâ€™s the thing!

If you give your ex control of the ex back process, sheâ€™s going to feel more emotionally dominant than you, which is a turn off to her.

Sheâ€™s then likely just going to say â€œNo,â€œ because you havenâ€™t done anything to spark her feelings for you.

On the other hand, if you take control the ex back process and focus on making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again, sheâ€™s going to want to get back together again, without you even needing to bring it up.

It will just happen, because itâ€™s what she wants for her own reasons (e.g. she feels attracted to you, sheâ€™s realized that youâ€™re the man for her and she doesnâ€™t want to lose you).

So, donâ€™t make the mistake of thinking that the way to get your ex back is to ask for another chance at a relationship with her and wait for her to decide.

If you want her back, you have to be ballsy enough to take the lead, reactivate her feelings for you and make it happen.

Another mistake to avoid is!

2. Trying to get her to agree to a relationship when the feelings aren't even mutual yet

When a guy gets broken up with and he realizes that heâ€™s losing the woman he loves, he might begin to panic.

He may then think to himself, â€œI canâ€™t let this happen. I have to do whatever it takes to convince her to give us another shot.â€œ

He might then repeatedly text, send messages via social media, e-mail and call his ex on the phone and saying things like, â€œPlease give me just one more chance! I promise that this time I will do whatever it takes to make it work between us. Please!â€œ

Essentially heâ€™s hoping that when she sees how committed he is to getting her back, she will be impressed and she will then give him another chance.

Yet, even though heâ€™s being sincere, thatâ€™s not what makes a woman want to get back with her ex.

Hereâ€™s the thing!

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy and then breaks up with him, rather than feeling flattered that heâ€™s putting in so much effort to get her back, she will more-likely feel annoyed by his constant pestering.

She doesnâ€™t have feelings for him anymore, so the idea of being in a relationship with him just doesnâ€™t appeal to her.

She may then want to distance herself from him (e.g. block his number on her phone, unfriend him on social media, avoid him if they happen to be in the same place at the same time), which makes getting her back a lot more difficult for him.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend to want to get back together again, you have to stop pushing her for a relationship and start making her feel strong surges of respect, attraction and love for you based on your new and improved behavior.

The more drawn to you she feels, the more the idea of being your girl again starts to appeal to her.

On the other hand, if you keep pushing her to give you another chance without sparking her feelings for you, she will continue to push you away and say, “No! I’m just not interested.”

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Giving up too easily if she doesn’t initially show a lot of interest

Sometimes a woman won’t be very enthusiastic the first time her ex reaches out to her after a break up.

In some cases, she may even be cold, aloof or even bitchy and say things like, “What do you want? Why don’t you just accept that it’s over between us and leave me alone?”

Naturally, when a guy hears something like that, rather than just take it for what it is (i.e. that she’s not fully re-attracted to him yet and that he can change that pretty quickly by re-activating her feelings for him), he instead starts to doubt himself and his chances with her.

He might then simply give up and walk away.

As a result, he loses out on getting her back.

Don’t let that happen to you.

If your ex doesn’t seem to be very enthusiastic about interacting with you again right away, it doesn’t mean she won’t be interested after you’ve sparked her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

So, just stay confident in yourself and in your attractiveness and value to her and continue to interact with her every chance you get.

During the interactions focus on making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

Before long, she will drop her guard and open back up to you again.

You can then guide her back into a relationship with you and enjoy the great times ahead.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex Left Me For a Rich Guy. How Can I Get Her Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 tips to help you get her back now that she's found herself a guy with money:

1. Accept the truth that money is NOT what makes a relationship last for life

If money was the answer, no rich guy would ever get rejected, dumped or divorced.

Obviously, that's not what happens out there.

[image: Money is not what makes a relationship last for life]

Men with money do get rejected, dumped and divorced, even though they could probably offer a better 'lifestyle' to a woman than a guy who had little money.

Of course, it's true that money makes it easier to buy things and go places.

However, just because your ex left you for a rich guy, it doesn't mean that she will thoroughly enjoy herself with him, or will totally cherish the gifts he gives her.

If he causes her to lose respect and attraction for who he is as a person (i.e. by becoming insecure, controlling, emotionally selfish), then what he can offer her financially will quickly lose value and importance.

Here's the thing!

Although a man with money can initially attract a woman's attention (especially if she feels she's in a relationship with a guy who has no ambition and is going nowhere in his life), at the end of the day, what really attracts her and makes her want to stay with a guy is his ability to make her feel emotionally attracted as he talks to her and spends time with her.

In the same way, your ex will only stay with her new guy if he can make her feel attracted emotionally to him in other ways besides just buying her things or spoiling her with a luxury lifestyle.

This is why, it's very important that you don't fade into the shadows and instead maintain contact with her, so that you can re-attract her and get her back, by making her feel attracted to you again (e.g. by making her laugh and smile when talking to you, flirting with her to create some sexual tension, showing her that you really are different now).

The more respect and attraction she feels for you again, the less impressed she will be by her new man's money.

Suddenly, she will begin to notice his flaws more and more and when that happens, she becomes open to giving you another chance.

Another tip to help you get an ex back who left you for a rich guy is!

2. Get clear on the reasons (other than money) why she left you

[image: Reasons why she left you other than money]

Right now, you're likely feeling hurt and angry with your ex and you may even be thinking things like, 'I can't believe she's so shallow! I never noticed this about her before, but she's clearly a gold digger!'

However, by assuming that the only reason she left you is because you didn't have as much money as her new guy can be a big mistake. Why?

A woman will rarely break up with a guy for only one reason.

In most cases, a woman will have several, secret reasons why she no longer feels respect, attraction and love for her guy.

So, even though to you it might seem crystal clear that what your ex wanted was a guy who is richer than you, the reality might be that there are actually several other reasons why she picked him over you.

This is why, if you want to get her back, you first need to understand her other, more subtle reasons for breaking up with you.

If you don't, you will likely end up offering her things that she doesn't want (e.g. You might go out of your way to get a better job so that you can offer her more material things, but what she really felt turned off by was your lack of emotional masculinity when you and her were together. She never truly felt like a desirable woman with you and instead felt more like your friend).

This is why you need to know exactly why she broke up with you.

Of course, you can't just go and ask her to tell you her reasons.

If you do, you may end up turning her off even more, because you will look like a confused guy who still hasn't fully grown up and become a man.

As a result, she will automatically feel more attracted to her new guy and believe she made the right decision to leave you for him.

So, you do need to figure out your ex's reasons for leaving you without her help.

However, that doesn't mean you're on your own.

If you're unsure of where to begin, ask yourself the following questions:

- What aspects of my thinking and behavior attracted her to me initially (e.g. my confidence and emotional strength, my independent spirit, my great sense of humor, my emotional masculinity), and did I maintain those things throughout our relationship, or did I slowly slip into behaving in unattractive ways (e.g. needy, clingy, insecure, emotionally immature and unfocused, wimpy)?
- Did I always treat her well (i.e. with love and respect), or did I slip into a habit of taking her for granted, or even treating her badly (e.g. by being too jealous and controlling, being aggressive or moody, being selfish and putting her last in your life)?
- Did I keep my promises to her, or did I often go back on my word (e.g. forget to call, was unavailable when she needed me)?
- Was I the kind of man she could look up to, respect and feel proud of, or did I do things to make her feel embarrassed of me (e.g. behaved in childish and immature ways)?
- Did I have goals and a purpose for my life, or was I just drifting from one thing to the next?
- Did we want the same things in the relationship or did we want different things (e.g. to settle down, buy a house together, get married and start a family vs. being carefree, traveling around, partying, having fun and not being tied down)?

Depending on your answers, you will likely already have a clearer picture of why your ex left you for a rich guy.

Then, once you know where you went wrong, you can take action to change and improve some of the things that were turning her off.

When your ex experiences the new you (i.e. via your attitude, behavior, actions and conversation style), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

Suddenly her new man doesn't seem as perfect to her anymore, because she's experiencing new, fascinating feelings of attraction for you.

Her guard will then naturally come down and she will open herself up to interacting with you more and more to see how she feels about you.

Another tip to help you get an ex back who left you for a rich guy is

3. Interact with her and make her feel rushes of attraction for the new you

The best way to make an ex woman begin seeing you as better than her new guy and want you back for real, is to interact with her and actively make her feel sparks of sexual attraction for you.

This will take you using some ballsy humor and stepping outside of your comfort zone.

For example: Imagine you're on a phone call with your ex and she starts telling you how happy she is with her new guy.

The old you would likely get upset and start thinking negative things like, I don't stand a chance with her, or It's just too late. She's crazy about this guy and there's nothing I can do. Besides, I have nothing to offer her compared to him.

This would then cause you to feel unsure of yourself and possibly even make you stumble over your words.

As a result, your ex would feel turned off by what she perceives as your emotional weakness and she would feel even more convinced that she is now with the right man.

However, that's not how the new you reacts.

In fact, the new you uses what she says to spark her feelings and make her feel strong surges of attraction for you again.

For instance, you might respond to her by playfully saying (in person or on a phone call) something like, This is such excellent news! I was worried that no other guy would take you off my hands if he found out how bad your cooking/singing/snoring is, but now I can relax knowing some other guy has to put up with it instead of me. What a relief! and then have a laugh with her about that.

She will most likely laugh because of the way that you're playfully teasing her.

She may also be a bit shocked that you're not getting upset, begging her to change her mind like she was expecting you to or feeling insecure that he has a lot of money.

Reacting like that makes her realize that you're not the same guy she broke up with.

You have already leveled up as a man.

As a result, she starts to feel rushes of respect and attraction for you and she will then either be impressed with the new you and find it difficult to stop thinking about you, or she will test your newfound confidence by acting like it's not having an effect on her.

Regardless of her reaction, it's up to you to maintain your confidence with her and continue to say and do the kind of things that will build up her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Note: Don't try to do it all via text.

The majority of the ex back process has to be done on a phone call or in person.

If you try to do it all via text, she can simply ignore your texts or play hard to get or worse.

Additionally, she can easily misinterpret your texts as being needy, insecure or rude, even when you're being confident, relaxed and easy-going.

This is why, if you really do want her back for real, you should aim to complete the majority of the ex back process on a phone call and then in person.

On a phone call, she can sense your confidence and in person, she can see it.

Yet, via text, she can mistakenly assume that you're being insecure, needy or desperate.

The more she experiences the new you on a phone call or in person, the more confused she will begin to feel about her feelings for her new guy.

At that point, you just have to maintain your cool, make her feel even more attracted to you and then get a hug, a kiss and even sex.

After that, you and her will naturally get back together if you play your cards right.

Another tip to help you get an ex back who left you for a rich guy is

4. Use it as motivation to become a more ambitious guy

If you haven't been reaching your true potential financially (e.g. you've been stuck at the same level in your job for ages and haven't been motivated to ask for a raise or look for something that pays better, you've been delaying taking action on making your dreams of starting your own business a reality, you've been avoiding improving your level of education/qualifications so that you can apply and get a promotion at work), now is the time to start.

You don't have to make a lot of money immediately, or become hugely successful overnight.

Just use her reason for leaving you to start making progress in a more profitable direction in life.

This will make you feel better.

You obviously won't be as rich as your ex's new boyfriend next week and you don't need to be.

Women are very attracted to men with ambition who follow through on their goals.

So, when your ex sees that you're making progress and are rising through the levels of your career or succeeding in your chosen business or profession, she will automatically begin to feel respect for you again for being man enough to take control of your financial life and make your goals and dreams a reality.

When she starts to respect you, she will naturally begin to see you in a more positive light and she may then begin to remember some of the other things about you that she found attractive (e.g. your sense of humor, your playfulness, the way you always came through for her when she needed you).

As a result, she will also start to feel attracted to you again (especially if her new man is lacking in those areas), without her even realizing that it's happening to her.

She then becomes open to talking to you over the phone and even seeing you in person, which then gives you the opportunity to fully reawaken her feelings for you and get her back.

Important: Make sure that you don't use your progress or newfound ambition as a way to sell yourself to her.

If you do, she will almost certainly see that as desperate and she will likely think things like, â€œWhy couldn't he be like that when we were together? He's just doing that because he's jealous of my new guy and wants to show me that he can be successful too even though he wasn't before. That's just so desperate and it's actually so off putting to me.â€

That's not what you want.

So, just use it as motivation to accomplish great things for yourself and as a bonus, you may also re-attract your ex back too.

Another tip to help you get an ex back who left you for a rich guy isâ€|

5. Get her to meet up with you just as friends, so you can interrupt the process of her moving on

[image: Meet up with her and interrupt the process of her moving on]

For example: You might call her on the phone and say something along the lines of, â€œHey, I accept that you've moved on with someone else now. I'm totally fine with that and I hope you'll be very happy. However, that doesn't mean we can't still be friends anymore, does it? We're both mature adults and there's nothing wrong with meeting up for a quick cup of coffee now and then to catch up and say hi as friends. So, let's do that sometime this week and cement our new friendship with one of those cinnamon rolls you love so much. I'm free on Wednesday or Thursday afternoon. Which day suits you best?â€

She may either say â€œYes,â€ right away and you can arrange to meet up with her at a suitable place and time.

Alternatively and this is more likely, she may play a bit hard to get and say something along the lines of, â€œI don't think that's a good idea,â€ or â€œI'm not sure my boyfriend will approve of that.â€

The important thing is that you don't give up at that point and lose your chance of re-attracting her.

So, in a confident, easy-going voice say, â€œOh, don't be like that. It's just a quick catch up between friends. We can do that. It's no big deal. Besides, if after we meet up you decide that you never want to see me again, I'll respect your wishes and disappear out of your life forever. So, which day suits you best?â€

She will then likely agree and say something like, â€œOkay, just this once,â€ or â€œIf you promise to back off afterwards.â€

Then, just go ahead and make plans to meet up with her.

At the meet up, make sure that you build up the sexual tension between you and her (e.g. by using ballsy humor to make her feel attracted, flirting with her to create a spark between you).

If you can get her to cheat on her new guy with you, it can potentially ruin their relationship and make her come back to you.

However, even if she doesn't want to hook up with you sexually, don't worry about it.

The main thing that you need to focus on changing and improving and becoming a better man, while also using every interaction you have with her from now on to spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you over and over again.

The more you do that, the more doubts she'll begin to have about her decision to leave you for a another guy and then you are in the process of breaking up her new relationship, whether she realizes it or not.

3 Mistakes to Avoid When Trying to Get an Ex Back Who Left You For a Rich Guy

Even when a woman has a new man, it's not impossible to get her back if you approach it right (i.e. interact with her, reactivate her feelings, show her that you've changed and improved and get her back).

On the other hand, if you approach it in the wrong way, you can easily turn her off even more and convince her that she made the right decision by leaving you for her new man.

This is why, you need to make sure you don't make the following mistakes:

1. Thinking that money is the only main reason she left

It's highly possible that your ex was attracted to her new man because he has more money than you, especially if you and her were struggling to make ends meet.

However, it would be a big mistake for you to assume that that was her only reason for leaving you.

The truth is, when a man builds on his woman's feelings of love, respect and attraction in the relationship with him (e.g. by being confident and emotionally strong, making her feel like a sexy and desirable woman, being emotionally masculine, being ballsy and maintaining his power in the relationship with her), she will put up with not having all the material things she wants, because she has him.

However, if he continuously turns her off in other ways (e.g. he's insecure and needy, he depends on her to take care of him and make all the decisions, he's childish and immature), then the money problems they're experiencing will start to look huge to her.

If she then meets a man who can take care of her financially and also happens to fill in some of the other gaps that were missing in her relationship with her guy, she will quickly dump him and move on.

Here's the thing!

If you want to get your ex back, you have to make sure you're offering her what she really wants, not what you think she wants.

It would be a shame if you just focused on making more money, only to realize that that is not really what she wanted in the relationship with you after all.

So, make sure you understand her deeper, secret reasons for breaking up with you, so that you can offer her what she wants and win her back.

Another mistake to avoid is!

2. Calling her a gold digger and hoping it will make her feel ashamed

When a guy is feeling betrayed and angry for being dumped by his woman for a rich guy, he may be tempted to say hurtful things like, â€œI never realized that youâ€™re such a gold digger. It makes me sick to think that I trusted you, gave you all my love and imagined that you loved me back too, when in fact youâ€™re nothing but a shallow, user who only cares about herself.â€

Secretly he may be hoping that she will feel ashamed and possibly even think, â€œHeâ€™s right. I really did act like a gold digger. However, thatâ€™s not who I really am deep down inside. Iâ€™m a good person and so is he and we belong together after all.â€

She may then dump her new man and come running back to him.

Unfortunately, it doesnâ€™t work out that way.

Rather than make her feel ashamed, it usually has the opposite effect.

She sees his behavior as stemming from feeling inferior and like heâ€™s not good enough for her.

Basically, heâ€™s trying to make her feel guilty about something she doesnâ€™t need to feel guilty about.

As a result, she feels even more turned off by him and that pushes her deeper into the arms of her new man.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€

3. Giving up because you assume the rich guy must be giving her everything she really needs

No one is perfect; not even your exâ€™s new rich boyfriend.

So, even though she might seem really happy and content with him right now, chances are high that over time she will begin to notice things about him that are turning her off (e.g. he spoils her with gifts and romantic gestures but heâ€™s emotionally closed off to her, or he looks down on her and belittles her).

She may then begin to see him in a new, more negative light and think things like, â€œI really thought what I wanted was a rich guy to buy me all the things I desire and make me feel like a princess. However, now that I have all those things, I realize that what I got from my ex (i.e. love, attention, respect) was so much more valuable. I miss that. In fact, I miss him. I think I made a big mistake by breaking up with him.â€

When that happens, she opens up to the idea of interacting with you more.

However, if youâ€™ve already given up and have stopped interacting with her because you thought it was a lost cause, you will likely miss out on getting her back.

She will try to get over you and either make things work with her new guy, or dump him and look for another man who is more like you to hook up with.

So, donâ€™t let that happen to you.

Stick around (even if only as her friend) and build on her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

The more you do that, the faster she will reconnect with her feelings of love for you and reconsider getting back together again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get Your Girlfriend Back After Being a Jerk to Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 simple things you need to do to get her back:

1. Stop looking at yourself as the jerk ex boyfriend

Although you may have been a jerk to your girlfriend and caused her to break up with you, sitting around thinking things like, “I am such an idiot! I had the perfect woman and I lost her out of pure stupidity. Now I have to live with the knowledge that I am the one responsible for destroying what we had, because she will probably never forgive me for being such a jerk to her and give me another chance.” is actually the worst thing you can do.

By making yourself out to be the bad guy, you’re just wallowing in the past and not allowing yourself to move forward and become a better man.

Right now, you’re the man who has learned from the experience, not the jerk who behaved in that way during the relationship.

If you look at yourself as the jerk ex boyfriend, so will she.

So, don’t do that to yourself.

Instead, you need to realize that we all live and learn and make mistakes sometimes.

As long as you’ve learned your lesson and have become a better person, there’s no reason for you to continue punishing yourself for what happened.

Put it behind you and start with a clean slate based on the man that you are now.

The most important thing is that you move forward and replace the negative feelings that your girlfriend experienced (e.g. anger, betrayal, heartbreak) with renewed, positive feelings of trust, respect and attraction.

When you reactivate those feelings inside of her, everything changes.

Her guard comes down and she opens herself up to getting back together again because being around you feels good again.

However, if you continue to look at yourself as the jerk who ruined everything, it will come across in your actions and behavior when you interact with your ex and she will most likely push you away and say things like, “Forget it! I can never forgive you for what you did to me.”

Another thing you should do to get your girlfriend back after being a jerk to her is

2. Apologize briefly and sincerely if you haven’t done so already

Apologizing to your girlfriend for your behavior is definitely something you should do, if you haven’t already done so.

However, it’s very important that you don’t go on and on about all the mistakes you made, or try to make her feel sorry for you by apologizing over and over and telling her how bad you feel.

A brief, yet sincere apology is all that is needed to make your point without coming across as desperate, or making your ex feel like she has a lot of power over you, which she doesn’t want.

For example: Imagine you're on a call, or at a meet up with your ex.

You might then say something along the lines of, “Before you say anything, I just want to apologize to you for being such a jerk. I know that I really stuffed up and caused you a lot of pain and for that, I’m truly sorry. However, I do want you to know that I’m not that guy anymore. I’ve learned from my mistakes and I’ve become a better, more emotionally mature man as a result. Of course, I don’t expect you to believe me or forgive me just because I’m apologizing to you, but I hope we can at least go forward without taking all the baggage from the past with us. Although I do still care about you, I accept that we’re broken up now. I’m not asking you to take me back, I just want you to forgive me so that we can start over with a clean slate and at least be friends again.”

By calmly apologizing to your ex girlfriend, while being confident and emotionally mature enough to admit your mistake, you're showing her that you're no longer the jerk she broke up with. You have learned your lesson and are taking positive steps to become a better man than before. This is attractive to her.

It automatically re-sparks some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you and she then allows herself to stop focusing on how badly you stuffed up, which makes it easier for her to truly forgive you.

As a result, she drops her guard a little bit and begins to feel more comfortable about talking to you over the phone and seeing you in person again.

Then when she experiences the new you for real, she naturally opens back up to hugging you, kissing you, having sex and getting back together again.

Another thing you should do to get your girlfriend back after being a jerk to her is!

3. Remember what attracted her to you for so long

Sometimes, when a guy gets dumped for being a jerk, he might make the mistake of thinking that to get his girlfriend back, he needs to be on his very best behavior around her (e.g. by being extra nice to her even when she is being bitchy towards him, letting her call the shots by telling him when he's allowed to text, phone or see her, accepting all the blame for what happened between them).

Essentially, he's hoping that if she sees that he's willing to do anything to make her happy, she will believe that he's turned over a new leaf and give him another chance.

Yet, here's what a guy like that doesn't understand!

If she's the sort of woman who put up with him being a jerk, then she most likely prefers a guy who doesn't suck up to her 24/7.

The same probably applies to you and your ex girlfriend.

So, don't turn into Mr. Nice Guy now and expect her to want that.

A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy who submits to her and allows her to walk all over him, just so he can get her back.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend to give you another chance, make sure you don't lose the qualities about you that she still finds attractive (e.g. your emotional strength, your emotional masculinity).

Interact with her and make her feel attracted to who you are now, but also show her that you're still the man she fell in love with too.

Thatâs the secret to re-attracting her and getting her back.

Another thing you should do to get your girlfriend back after being a jerk to her isâ!

4. Don't try to sell her the new you by explaining how much you've changed

[image: Don't try to sell her the new you, by explaining how much you have changed]

A guy will sometimes try to get another chance with his ex by telling her that he has changed.

For example: He might say things like, âI know I was a jerk, but Iâm really not like that anymore. Iâm a different man now, I promise. I donât react the same way I used to. Iâm so much calmer and more in control of my emotions now and if you just give me one more chance I will prove it to you.â

Yet, chances are high his girlfriend is just going to say something along the lines of, âDo you really expect me to believe you after everything youâve put me through? Besides, Iâve lost count of all the times before now that youâve promised me that you will change, only to go back to being the same jerk you were before. So why should this time be any different? Forget it! Iâm not interested in your empty words! I donât trust you anymore and itâs going to take a lot more than you telling me that youâve changed to make me change my mind about us.â

So, if you donât want that kind of reaction from your girlfriend, donât tell her how youâve changed.

Instead, let her experience the new and improved you in person.

She will pick up on the changes without you having to oversell yourself to her.

It will naturally come through in how you talk to her, what you say and how you respond to her and react to what she says and does (e.g. when she tries to get a rise out of you and make you go back to behaving the way you used to by being cold, bitchy or indifferent towards you).

So, donât worry about trying to prove to your girlfriend that youâve changed by explaining to her how you did it.

Just be the new, improved, more emotionally mature version of yourself when you interact with her and she will pick up on it automatically.

Then, when she sees for herself that you really are a changed man now, something really amazing happensâ!

She canât stop herself from feeling respect for you again.

When she respects you, she also feels attracted to you and then the idea of spending more time with you becomes something sheâs willing to do.

You can then show her that you really are a new man now and get her back.

However, if you try to sell yourself to her and convince her with words, sheâs likely just going to continue pushing you away and saying things like, âForget it! I just donât believe you anymore. You stuffed up one time too many and now I just want to put it all behind me and move on. If you really do care for me like you say you do, then youâll stop explaining how much youâve changed and just accept that itâs over between us.â

Avoid the Following 3 Problems to Get Her Back Easier and Faster

If you want to get your girlfriend back, you have to make sure that from this point onwards, every thought you think and every conversation and interaction you have with her, is showing her that you're a changed man.

If you try to get her back, but are still thinking and behaving in unattractive ways, she's going to lose even more respect and attraction for you and she's likely going to say things like, "I wouldn't give you another chance if you were the last man on earth after how you treated me. Go away and leave me alone! I never want to see you again, and I mean it this time. Don't ever contact me again!"

That would really suck.

So, don't let it happen.

This is why, you need to make sure you're not making the following mistakes:

1. Feeling unworthy of her because of how badly you treated her

When a man feels like he's to blame for the break up with his girlfriend, he might fall into the trap of thinking of her as having been perfect compared to him and never did anything wrong.

He may then put himself down by thinking things like, "It's all my fault our relationship is ruined. I was the jerk who destroyed it. Even though she put up with my crap over and over again, I never learned my lesson. Instead I kept on and on stuffing up until she got tired of me and left. Even if she wanted me back now (which she doesn't), the truth is, I don't deserve a woman like her. She's just too good for me."

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that feeling unworthy of his ex girlfriend's love, respect and attraction only makes him seem less attractive to her (and to other women).

Why?

A woman likes the idea of being in a relationship with a man who is always confident and believes in himself no matter what happens (even if he behaved badly and ruined her feelings for him).

The more emotionally strong he is, the more she is able to respect him, feel attracted to him, love him and feel proud to be with him.

So, when a guy is feeling sorry for himself and putting himself down, rather than make her feel happy that he's suffering for the way he treated her, she instead feels turned off by his lack of confidence.

She then has one more reason not to want to be with him anymore.

Here's the thing though!

Everyone makes mistakes.

So, yes, you stuffed up.

That's a fact.

However, if you're a better guy now, then that's who you are.

The past is the past and thereâs nothing you can do about it.

However, if you can make your girlfriend feel so much more loved, appreciated and respected now, then getting back together will be great for both of you.

So, forget what happened and focus on what you can do right now.

Another mistake to avoid isâ|

2. Apologizing in detail via text or e-mail

A guy might sometimes send his ex walls of text saying things like, âIâm so sorry for being a jerk to you! I know I stuffed up badly and I canât express to you how much I regret what I put you through. If I could take it all back, I would, but since thatâs not possible, the only thing I can do is tell you how very, very sorry I am as many times as it will take for you to believe me.â

That can work if a woman is still madly in love with her ex.

However, if sheâs currently over it and isnât interested in trying to make things work, she will likely just feel annoyed with him. Why?

Even though heâs being sincere and he genuinely is sorry for how he treated her, she will likely take him apologizing to her via text as a sign that heâs once again being a jerk to her.

Heâs saying sorry to her but he doesnât even have the balls to do it face-to-face or at least over the phone.

Instead, heâs hiding behind texts where she canât really see his body language or hear the tonality of his voice.

So, in her mind, rather than picture a man who genuinely regrets how he treated her, sheâs imagining him laughing and snickering at her and thinking things like, âSheâs so gullible. I bet sheâs going to fall for my apology hook line and sinker.â

Of course thatâs not the truth, but because he was a jerk to her before and she doesnât have any evidence to prove that heâs changed, sheâs usually just going to assume the worst of him.

This is why, if you intend to apologize to your girlfriend, make sure you do it over the phone or in person.

Yes, sheâs probably not going to make it easy for you (e.g. she may refuse to answer your call), but you need to man up and figure out how to pass that test of your confidence and resolve.

When you do and you then sincerely apologize to her over the phone, or even better, in person, she wonât be able to stop herself from feeling respect for you for being man enough to admit your mistakes and take responsibility for your actions.

When she respects you, she will also begin to feel attracted to you again and then getting her back becomes easier because sheâs not thinking about you in a negative way anymore.

Another mistake to avoid isâ|

3. Not changing much or anything about yourself. She then senses it and keeps her guard up

[image: Make real changes so she has a reason to bring her guard down]

One of the biggest mistakes some guys make after being dumped by their girl for being a jerk, is to try and get her back without changing and improving any of the things that turned her off.

Instead, a guy like that will usually focus all his effort on chasing after her and saying and doing whatever he thinks will make her forgive him and give him another chance (e.g. apologizing, making promises that he really has changed, sending her flowers, buying her gifts, writing her long, soppy love letters telling her how much he loves her).

Initially, she might feel sorry for him and decide to at least meet up with him one more time to see if heâs improved since the break up.

However, if she meets up with him and realizes that he hasnât changed (e.g. heâs still jealous and controlling, is immature and childish, has a wandering eye), then she will close herself off from him even more.

If he then tries to convince her to give him another chance, rather than get the results heâs hoping for, heâs shocked when she says something along the lines of, âI was hoping that this time would be different, but once again, nothing about you has really changed. Youâre still the same jerk I broke up with and Iâm not falling for your empty promises anymore. I donât believe that you can change, or even that you want to change. Youâre a lost cause and Iâm done with you for real this time. Please donât contact me again or try to convince me to change my mind with your flowers, gifts or love letters. I will not be falling for that again. Bye.â

So, if you want your ex girlfriend to give you another chance, the first step is to make some changes to yourself to attract her in the ways that are important to her (e.g. youâre so much more emotionally mature and focused now, youâre more supportive of her dreams and ambitions, youâre more emotionally masculine and as a result, she feels feminine and girly around you rather than feeling neutral or even turned off).

When she experiences the changes in you first hand (i.e. on a phone call or in person), she naturally opens up to forgiving you for being a jerk to her.

When she forgives you, her guard comes down and you can then build on her feelings of respect and attraction for you and make her reconnect with the love that is currently lying dormant in the background.

Then, youâve just got to be confident and guide her back into a relationship with you.

Donât give up.

Donât feel like itâs impossible.

You can do it.

Guys all over the world get their women back every day, and you can do it too.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 Examples of How to Tell an Ex You Still Love Her Via Text

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

1. Use humor to get her smiling and laughing first. Then, tell her

Regardless of how bad things are between you and your ex, a little bit of humor will usually take the bite out of the negative feelings she is holding onto about you and allow her to open up enough so that you can re-attract her and get her back.

This is why, if you think that your ex is currently closed off to you and not feeling much (or any) respect, attraction and love for you, using some humor when you text her is one of the easiest ways to bring down her guard and make her feel some sparks of love for you again.

So, don't be afraid to joke with her to diffuse the tension between you and her and make her feel happy to be hearing from you again.

Then, once you've made her laugh and smile a little bit, you can get to the part where you tell her you love her.

For example: You can finish your text conversation with her by texting something like, â Anyway, I have to get going now. Heading out to meet with a couple of friends. Love you, Dan.â

By writing your name after â Love youâ it actually makes her read it out as saying, â Love you Dan.â

In other words, it's like she is saying that she loves you.

It echoes in her mind.

She feels it in that moment.

It's a neurolinguistic programming trick that works every time.

She might then begin to think things like, â This is interesting. I've actually been enjoying texting with him. I even feel like I miss him. Maybe I do still love him. Maybe I should talk to him again on the phone or in person to see if I really still have feelings for him, or if I'm just attracted to him because he made me laugh.â

She then becomes more open to the idea of talking to you on the phone and seeing you in person, which is exactly what you want.

On a phone call and in person, you can easily re-attract her by allowing her to experience the new and improved man that you've become and get her back.

Another example of how to tell an ex you still love her via text isâ

2. Just say it

[image: Just say it]

In some cases, a woman might break up with a guy, but still have some feelings for him.

At the back of her mind she may even be thinking things like, â I thought that breaking up was what I wanted, but now I really miss him. So, even though it was bad near the end of our relationship and we were always fighting and arguing with each other, I don't like how it feels without him. I realize now that I still have some feelings for him, but I don't know if he still has any feelings for *me. I wish he would give me a sign that he still cares too. Then, we could get back together again and try to make our relationship work this time.*â€œ

In a situation like this, getting a simple two word text of, â€œLove you,â€œ from her ex is all she needs to open back up to him.

So, if you sense that your ex is secretly missing you (e.g. because sheâ€™s still open to interacting with you, she always responds to your texts or messages in a friendly, open way, sheâ€™s nice to you even though youâ€™ve broken up), then sending her a simple, â€œLove you,â€œ text may be exactly what sheâ€™s hoping for.

She might then respond with something like, â€œLove you too,â€œ or â€œYou too.â€œ

Itâ€™s then up to you to take the next step (i.e. call her and arrange to see her in person), so that you can fully re-attract her and get her back.

Remember: Text on a little screen doesnâ€™t have the same impact as words spoken over the phone and more importantly, as words said to her in person where she can see your body language and evaluate whether youâ€™ve changed, how youâ€™re feeling and how youâ€™re responding to her.

For example:

- Are you confident and relaxed, or are you tense and nervous?
- Are you a new and improved man, or are you still making the same attraction mistakes you made before you and her broke up (e.g. being too timid and allowing her to walk all over you, treating her more like a neutral friend than like an attractive, desirable woman, giving your power to her, or being more emotionally masculine than her)?
- Do you believe in your attractiveness to her, or do you feel like sheâ€™s too good for you?
- Do you laugh at her (in a loving way) when sheâ€™s being cold, distant or even bitchy towards you during interactions, or do you become needy and desperate and seek pity from her for behaving like that by saying things like, â€œWhy are you doing this to me? I still care for you and youâ€™re not even trying. Please baby, donâ€™t do this. I really want to make things work between us and youâ€™re not giving us a chance.â€œ

When she can see for herself that you really have changed and improved, her guard naturally comes down and sheâ€™s happy to give the relationship another try, because it feels good to her.

However, if you stick to texting, she may begin thinking things like, â€œI guess he said he loves me because heâ€™s needy and desperate and canâ€™t cope without me, not because heâ€™s changed and is a better, more emotionally strong man now and wants to work things out with me. He doesnâ€™t even have the balls to get on a phone call with me. I suppose I need to accept that heâ€™s not the man I want him to be and work on getting over him so that I can move on.â€œ

So, while itâ€™s fine to tell your ex that you still love her via text, donâ€™t get stuck at that level of communication with her.

If you want her back, make a move.

Another example of how to tell an ex you still love her via text isâ€œ!

3. Send her a ballsy, funny text with real feeling

One of the biggest mistakes that a guy can make when texting an ex, is to be too serious with her (e.g. heâ€™s very polite or formal and doesnâ€™t say anything that might be misinterpreted by her as sexual or challenging, he is overly respectful and considerate towards her).

Essentially, heâs hoping that when she sees how nice he is being, her walls will begin to break down and she will eventually reveal her feelings for him, so he can then tell her that he still loves her. Yet, life doesnât work that way.

Most women donât open up to and reveal their feelings to a guy who is afraid of them.

Women respect balls.

One of the ways to show a woman that you have balls, is to use ballsy humor when you text her.

Rather than texting something along the lines of, âHey, Iâve been worried about you since we broke up. How are you doing?â in the hope that she will respond with something like, âIâm miserable without you. I really miss you! Do you miss me too?â have the emotional courage to just say what you really want to say to her and let her respond to that.

For example: Just go ahead and text, âHey ex girlfriend, just wanted to say that I love you.â

Even if she doesnât instantly show it, your ex will be impressed with you for having the confidence to say that to her, rather than playing games with her (e.g. sending her feeler texts in the hope that she will make it easy for you by telling you how she feels first).

She then begins to feel a renewed sense of respect for you for being an emotionally strong, ballsy man.

When she respects you, she also canât stop feeling attracted to you again and she then becomes more open to taking to you over the phone and meeting up with you in person to see how things evolve from there.

Common Problems Guys Experience When Saying âI Love Youâ Via Text

In todayâs world, texting has become a major form of communication between people, so itâs only natural that a guy might want to tell his ex that he loves her via text.

However, even though there are benefits to that, there are also some problems that might crop up.

So, if youâre looking to tell your ex that you still love her via text, here are some common problems guys experience when doing that.

1. She doesn't seem overly excited to hear from him, so he loses confidence

[image: She didn't seem excited to hear from me. Is it over forever? Have I completely lost her?]

Regardless of how a woman feels about her ex (e.g. she currently hates him and never wants to see him again, she feels nothing for him, she still has feelings for him and secretly wants to get back with him), in most cases, she wonât act like sheâs happy to hear from him when he contacts her.

Instead, she will likely act cold, aloof and even bitchy towards him and even say things like, âWhy are you texting me? What we had is over and I donât care how you feel about me. I donât feel the same way about you and I donât want anything to do with you.â

Naturally, when a guy opens himself up to his ex and is rejected, he may begin to doubt himself and his attractiveness to her.

Yet, thatâs the worst thing he can do. Why?

The more he loses confidence in himself and doubts himself and his attractiveness and value to her, the more unattractive he becomes to her.

Hereâs the thingâ!

If a woman senses that a guy needs her to be nice to him so he can feel good enough about himself and then be able to follow through and get her back, it will actually turn her off him even more.

Women are attracted to men who are confident in themselves and in their attractiveness to a woman, without needing her approval, niceness or support to make them feel that way.

In other words, a woman wants a man who feels confident and good about himself, with or without her.

So, if a guy loses confidence in himself at the first sign of resistance from his ex, she wonât be able to reconnect with her feelings of respect and attraction for him.

She may then text him something along the lines of, âLook, Iâm sorry that youâre struggling to get over me, but I donât have feelings for you anymore. So, please accept that weâre broken up and that weâre not going to get back together again.â

This is why itâs very important that you maintain your confidence, no matter what your ex says or does to rattle you.

When she can see that no matter what she throws at you, you remain confident and emotionally strong, she wonât be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again.

She then drops her guard and opens up to interacting with you more and more (i.e. over the phone and in person) and you can then use those interactions to fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another common problem guys experience when trying to get an ex back isâ!

2. Waiting for her to make it completely clear via text that she wants a relationship, before he pushes for a meet up

Sometimes a woman will willingly respond to texts from her ex and even engage in a texting conversation with him.

However, the more he tries to gauge how she feels about getting back together with him, the less sure he feels.

He may then think something to himself like, âMaybe sheâs interested in getting back together again since sheâs open to texting back and forth, but I donât feel sure enough to push her for a meet up yet. I think the best thing for me to do is to wait a bit longer for her to give me an obvious sign that she wants a relationship. Then, I will definitely ask her to meet up with me so that we can get back together again.â

He then just sits around waiting for his ex to make it completely clear that sheâs open to seeing him in person again, only to be shocked when he finds out that sheâs been moving on without him.

Hereâs the thingâ!

If you want your ex back, you canât wait for her to make it easy for you.

If sheâs texting you back, thatâs as much of a sign as youâre likely going to get from her. After that, itâs up to you to take the lead, reactivate her feelings for you and get her back. Stop texting and get her on a call with you where you can spark some of her feelings for you and then arrange a meet up with her, where you can fully reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

The more sexual and romantic feelings you spark inside of her, the more she will open up to the idea of being your girl again.

On the other hand, if you stay stuck texting her without making a move, donât be surprised if one day soon she says something along the lines of, âLook, itâs been nice texting you, but I have a new boyfriend now and he doesnât want me texting you anymore. I hope you can accept that and not contact me again. I wish you all the best though and I hope youâll find someone else too. Bye.â

Another common problem guys experience when trying to get an ex back isâ

3. Trying to explain his feelings for her in detail via text

Many guys try to explain their feeling and what went wrong in the relationship with their ex, in a series of text messages.

A guy like that often hopes that when his ex reads his explanation she will think something along the lines of, âThatâs so sweet. I finally understand why our relationship failed. However, Iâm so thrilled to see that he still cares for me so much. Itâs actually quite romantic that heâs telling me all this via text. Maybe I should call him and tell him that Iâm ready to give our relationship another chance.â

Yet, hereâs the thingâ

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, anything that he says to her via text will generally not matter to her very much, because she doesnât have feelings for him.

A woman only appreciates and loves it when a guy expresses his love for her if she has feelings for him.

If he has turned her off and caused her to lose respect for him, sheâs going to feel closed off and maybe even defensive when he tries to explain his feelings to her.

At the same time, she sees it as a sign that he canât gain control of his emotions and handle the situation like a man (i.e. get her on a call or to a meet up, reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love and guide her back into a relationship).

Instead, he just wants to hide behind safe text messages and explain all his feelings to her.

Unfortunately, that just doesnât cut it.

The fact is, even though text messages have been around for a few decades now, people still feel the most respect and attraction when talking to each other face-to-face (or at least over the phone).

So, if you want to tell your ex that you love her and how much she means to you, youâre more likely to get the results you want (i.e. to get her back) if you do it in person and only after youâve sparked some of her feelings for you first.

Another common problem guys experience when trying to get an ex back isâ

4. Being afraid to just take a risk and send her a ballsy text

A mistake that a lot of guys make is assuming that being nice and sweet to a woman is the key to getting her back.

Yet, here's something they likely don't know!

Although a woman might appreciate it when a guy is being nice to her, it's not what causes her to have ongoing sexual and romantic feelings for him.

So, when a guy only sends her nice, sweet texts telling her that he still loves her, even if she does think it's sweet, it still doesn't do anything to change how she feels about him.

It isn't enough because there's no sexual spark between them.

So, if you want to reawaken your ex's sexual and romantic feelings for you, don't be afraid to take a risk and send her a ballsy text (e.g. use cheeky humor to make her drop her guard and open up to wanting to talk to you over the phone and see you in person), rather than just being nice and sweet all the time.

Another common problem guys experience when trying to get an ex back is!

5. Worrying that saying, "I love you" will give her all the power

It will give her the power if you say "I love you" in a needy, desperate way (i.e. letting her sense that you need her back to feel good about yourself again and that you're lost or lonely without her).

However, if you remain emotionally strong and confident regardless of her response (e.g. she ignores you, she says something like, "I don't care," she tries to use your love for her to manipulate you), not only won't she have power over you, she will also begin to feel surges of respect and attraction for you again, which is what you want.

She then becomes open to seeing you in person, because she's feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

That gives you the opportunity to fully reactivate her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel like a desirable woman with you, showing her that you're a new man now) and get her back into a relationship with you.

You've just got to be confident and make it happen.

Other guys do that every day all over the world and so can you.

You can do it.

Get her back!

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Surprising Your Ex Girlfriend With a Romantic Gesture to Win Her Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Will it work?

Will she be impressed by the romantic gesture and want you back?

It all depends on the following:

1. How she views romantic gestures

[image: How she views romantic gestures]

Sometimes, a guy will have noticed that women on TV shows or in movies have responded positively to romantic gestures (e.g. when receiving a big bouquet of flowers, a special gift, a teddy bear, a bunch of balloons with a card attached).

Based on his sweet, romantic gesture, the woman will forgive the guy for his mistakes and they will get back together again.

So, when a guy sees that enough times on TV or in movies, he might then think to himself, â€œIf itâ€™s in the movies all the time, it must mean that women respond well to romantic gestures in real life too. Everything Iâ€™ve tried to do to convince my ex girlfriend to give me another chance hasnâ€™t worked, but maybe if I do something romantic, she will have a change of heart and I can then win her back.â€

Yet, what a guy like that usually doesnâ€™t understand is that not all women respond the same way. Additionally, many modern women hate romantic gestures and see them as being lame, corny and outdated.

So, a woman like that who has been feeling turned off by her ex guy, will feel even more turned off if he gives her flowers or a gift.

She may then begin thinking something along the lines of, â€œI canâ€™t believe that he assumes what happened between us can be resolved with soppy, romantic gestures. What he doesnâ€™t know is that see it as a sign that heâ€™s not in touch with how relationships work now. Women donâ€™t need flowers or romantic gestures like they did in the past. Women need to feel attraction and love based on the guy and his behavior, not on what he can buy or do for her. If I had any doubts about breaking up with him before, I know made the right decision now. Itâ€™s over. Iâ€™ve got to find myself a man who understands how relationships work in todayâ€™s world, or else Iâ€™ll be stuck with my ex who is lagging behind the times.â€

She will then close herself off from her ex, leaving him feeling confused and wondering things like, â€œI donâ€™t get it. Why is she being so cold and mean towards me? Why didnâ€™t my romantic gesture make her drop her guard and open back up to getting back together again?â€

On the other hand, some women are flattered by romantic gestures and see them as important, special and meaningful.

A woman like that might then open back up to her ex and agree to give him another chance.

However, if she then gets back with him and realizes that all he has going for him is romance, but deep down he still hasn't leveled up as a man and is making the same attraction mistakes as before, she will naturally break up with him again.

Then, if the guy tries the same stunt again to win her back (i.e. surprising her with a romantic gesture), she will likely think something like, "Once bitten twice shy. I'm not falling for that again. All he knows how to do is sweet talk me and surprise me with pretty things. Yet, when we're together he reverts back to thinking, acting and behaving like a jerk. He just doesn't understand that even though I appreciate and enjoy the romance, I need more than that to make me want to stay with him. What use are romantic gestures to me if he continues to display the kind of characteristics and personality traits that turn me off (e.g. he's insecure and needy, takes me for granted, is emotionally immature and childish and expects me to take care of him, doesn't know how to make me feel like a desirable, attractive woman when I'm with him)?"

Here's the thing!

If you want to win your ex girlfriend back, you're going to have to do it by focusing on making her feel respect and sexual attraction for you again, rather than by trying to impress her with a romantic gesture.

You can do that by behaving and talking in ways that display confidence, masculinity, charisma and wit and by showing her that you've changed and improved some of the things that matter to her (e.g. you're more confident and emotionally independent now, you have purpose and direction in your life, you're more ballsy and can stand up to her when she's out of line).

That's what really works to win a woman back.

Another thing to consider before surprising your ex with a romantic gesture to win her back is!

2. How confident you are when you interact with her

In some cases, a woman will initially be impressed with her ex's romantic gesture.

However, if she then interacts with him (over the phone or in person) and notices that he's doubting himself and worrying if what he's surprising her with is good enough, she will feel turned off by what she perceives as his emotional weakness.

She may then say something like, "Thank you for your romantic gesture. It was really sweet of you to do something nice for me even though we're broken up, but I hope you don't think it's going to change things between us. I'm just not interested in getting back together again. Of course I'm happy to be friends if you want, but that's it."

So, if you don't want that to happen to you, you need to make sure that you have the confidence to back up your romantic gesture, or else it will be a waste of time.

Here's the thing!

Women don't like to reward emotional weakness with love, respect, sex and affection.

Women are instinctively looking to be with a confident man who can remain confident and emotionally strong under any circumstances.

So, if your ex girlfriend notices that you're nervous and unsure of yourself around her, it simply serves as another reason why she wants to remain broken up.

This is why it's important for you to feel confident and believe in yourself and in your value to her, before you surprise her with a romantic gesture to win her back.

By the way!

One of the ways you can prepare yourself, is by focusing on only having confident thoughts about yourself and about how your ex girlfriend will respond when you surprise her.

For example: You might say to yourself!

- Not only is she going to love my surprise, she's also going to feel attracted to me for being so confident and self-assured.
Regardless of what she says or does to test me (e.g. is cold and indifferent towards me, pretends that she doesn't like my surprise), I'm not going to doubt myself and my value to her. She will like the new me.
- When she sees that I've changed and improved in the ways she always wanted me to, she will automatically feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for me again.
- I feel confident now and I will continue to feel confident when I interact with her because I know that I am good enough for her.

The more you think confident thoughts about yourself, the more confident you will act and feel.

Then, when you interact with your ex girlfriend, it will come through in the tonality of your voice, your body language and in the way you behave and respond to her.

When she sees for herself that you are now a much more emotionally attractive man (e.g. confident, self-assured, calm and relaxed under pressure), she will naturally start to feel respect and attraction for you again.

She will also be impressed by your romantic gesture.

As a result, her guard will come down and she will then open back up to the idea of getting back together again.

Another thing to consider before surprising your ex with a romantic gesture to win her back is!

3. How serious her reasons were for breaking up with you

[image: How serious her reasons for breaking up with you were]

There are some women who will break up with a guy at the drop of a hat (e.g. he said or did something to upset her, she's under a lot of stress at work or university and doesn't know how to cope with her relationship ups and downs).

However, she regrets her actions immediately because she knows that deep down she still cares for her guy and doesn't really want to be broken up with him.

In a case like that, a romantic gesture will often be the trigger she needs to get back together with him.

However, those cases are rare and in most instances, when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's because she's lost too much respect, attraction and love for him to want to stay in the relationship any longer.

In a serious situation like that, she isn't going to be won over by surprising, romantic gestures such as buying her flowers, a gift, getting a message written in the sky by plane, or sending a singagram to her home or workplace.

Instead, she may even feel annoyed by his gesture and think something along the lines of, "This is just more proof that he doesn't get me. He thinks he can wipe away what happened and earn my respect and love by surprising me with romantic gestures. He doesn't even understand what he did wrong, or how to change those things about himself. He's just hoping I'll be so impressed that I'll forget about all the things that were turning me off and run back into his arms. Well, not only is that not going to happen, I'm also certain that he's not the right man for me.

She might then become even more distant and unapproachable (e.g. she blocks his number on her phone, unfriends him on social media, avoids all interactions with him).

This is why, it's more important that you first understand your ex girlfriend's real reasons for breaking up with you, before you do anything else.

You can then quickly make some attractive changes to yourself, so that when you interact with her on the phone or in person, she will be able to pick it up via your attitude, behavior and conversations style.

This will naturally spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

Then, if you surprise her with a romantic gesture, it then feels natural and normal for her to drop her guard and open up to her feelings for you again, because she feels drawn to you at a deeper, emotional level, rather than a superficial one.

By the way!

If you have no idea how to figure out her real reasons for breaking up with you, here are some questions to ask yourself:

- Were you confident and emotionally strong around her, or did you become clingy, needy and insecure?
- Were you able to make her feel like a desirable woman in your presence, or did she feel more like one of your buddies?
- Were you ballsy enough to stand up to her when she became demanding or threw a tantrum, or did you just give in to her to keep the peace?
Did you maintain your emotional independence (e.g. continued to follow through on your goals and dreams, kept in touch with your own friends, pursued hobbies or interests independent of her), or did you make her your main reason for living?
- Did she feel loved and appreciated, or did she feel taken for granted?

By understanding where you went wrong with your ex girlfriend, you can then change the things she really wants you to change and easily win her back.

3 Mistakes to Avoid When Trying to Win Your Ex Back

When you interact with your ex in a way that sparks her feelings of respect and attraction for you, her defenses naturally come down and she becomes open to giving you another chance with her.

On the other hand, if she senses that you're still stuck at the same level you were at when she broke up with you, she will likely just keep pushing you away and saying things like, "Why won't you accept that it's over between us? I really don't have feelings for you anymore and nothing is going to change that. So, if you really do care about me like you say you do, then youâ€¢ll accept my decision and move on.â€¢

So, if you donâ€¢t want that type of response, make sure you avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Hoping that the surprise romantic gesture will make her forget about the real reasons she broke up with you

Sometimes a romantic gesture can work if the woman responds well to displays of romance, no matter who is sending it her way.

However, in most cases, she will see it for what it isâ€¢!

An attempt to â€¢buyâ€¢ back her affections.

Then, rather than feel flattered by the gesture and want her ex back, she may actually get annoyed and even think something along the lines of, â€¢I canâ€¢t believe he thinks he can manipulate my feelings for him by being romantic and sweet. Doesnâ€¢t he realize that my reasons for breaking up with him are deep and for me to give him another chance, I need to see that he gets it and can give me what I want on an emotional level rather than on a superficial one (i.e. by giving me the attraction experience Iâ€¢ve always wanted from him and never got, rather than surprising me with romantic gestures)?â€¢

Remember: Romance is only enjoyable to an ex woman if she feels heard and understood and as a result, begins to open back up to you emotionally.

However, if she gets a sense that her ex is just trying to distract her from focusing on the real issues that caused the break up between them, she will lose even more respect for him as a man.

So, rather than trying to use an approach (romantic gestures) that works when a woman is in love, youâ€¢ve got to use an approach that will work on your ex.

In other words, you need to show her that youâ€¢ve understood her real, secret reasons for breaking up with you (e.g. you were too timid and a pushover with her, you didnâ€¢t mature as quickly as she did, you didnâ€¢t know how to make her feel like a sexy woman with you and treated her more like a neutral friend instead) and have already take action to change and improve some of those things about yourself.

When she experiences the new you for herself, she will automatically begin to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for who you are now.

When that happens, her defenses come down and you can get her back.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¢!

2. Not improving your ability to attract her during interactions

Sometimes a guy might actually surprise his ex girlfriend with a romantic gesture and get a positive response from her (e.g. she texts or calls him to say thank you, she agrees to meet up with him for a quick cup of coffee).

However, she then quickly loses interest when she notices that sheâ€™s not feeling a spark for him.

Yes, she appreciates the gesture, but sheâ€™s just not feeling him, so she disconnects from him once again.

Only this time, she most-likely becomes immune to his gestures, because in her mind she may be thinking things like, â€¢Thatâ€¢s all he really knows how to do, but thatâ€¢s just not enough for me. I simply don't feel a spark when I'm with him anymore, so it's basically a waste of time to keep opening up to him now that I'm almost 100% sure he's not the right guy for me. It's probably kinder if I just cut him off completely so that he can get the message and accept that it's over between us. Then, we can both move on and find someone else.

This is why it's vitally important that when you interact with your ex girlfriend from this point onwards, you make her feel strong surges of sexual and romantic attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, maintaining your confidence regardless of how cold or aloof she's being towards you, flirting with her to create some sexual tension).

When you do that, she then has a reason to get back with you, or at least want to interact with you more, to explore her newfound feelings for you.

So, don't go around thinking that the romantic gesture is the key to winning her back and not improving your ability to attract her as well, because you will end up disappointed when she says something like, "Thanks for the gesture. It is very sweet of you, but it doesn't change how I feel about you. I'm not the girl for you. I hope you find someone else soon. I wish you all the best. Goodbye."

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Hoping that she openly talks about wanting a relationship now

Although it would be nice if a woman just came out and said something along the lines of, "I think I'm ready to get back into a relationship with you again," the truth is, most women don't make it that obvious or easy.

A woman wants to see that a man has the confidence to make the reconciliation happen.

She wants to know that he's man enough to take responsibility for the ex back process and lead them both back into a relationship.

If he can't do that without her help, she will perceive him as being too insecure and emotionally weak and this will turn her off.

However, if he takes charge and does what he needs to do to get her back, she will automatically feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

When she respects him and feels attracted to him, reconnecting with her feelings of love becomes that much easier for her.

So, if you want to win your ex girlfriend back, don't wait for her to make it easy for you by giving you hints about what she wants.

Instead, be courageous enough and just take the lead in the ex back process.

Call her or meet up with her, reactivate her feelings for you (e.g. by showing her that you're a new and improved man) and get her back.

That's how it's done.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Is My Ex Trying to Get Back at Me For How Much I Hurt Her During the Relationship?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It definitely does happen.

How can you know if your ex is trying to get emotional revenge on you for how you made her feel during the relationship?

Here are 4 common signs that reveal it:

1. She's boasting on social media about how happy she is now that you've broken up

For example: She might be posting lots of photos of herself having fun with friends (e.g. at clubs, parties, festivals) and saying things like, "So happy to be hanging out with my girlfriends again. #singlelife #girlsnight #fun" or "Single life is so much fun. I finally feel free!" or "It feels like a weight has been lifted off my shoulders and that I have my life back. Loving life!"

Naturally, seeing that can make you feel upset and it's only normal that you may be wondering, "Is my ex trying to get back at me for how I hurt her during the relationship?"

The answer is: It depends.

On the one hand, it's a possible sign that she is really trying hard to rub it in your face that she's fine without you.

Of course, if that's the case, it may seem impossible for you to get her back and you might start thinking, "I guess it's truly over between us. She hates me now and nothing I can do will change how she feels. It's hopeless! I've lost her forever!"

Yet, the truth is, it's not over.

Even if it seems totally hopeless, there is always a chance to get an ex back.

Why?

Feelings aren't set in stone.

You can literally change how a woman feels about you.

Just like she went from feeling indifferent towards you (i.e. when you and her first met), to liking you, to loving you and then to hating you (i.e. after your break up), she can just as easily go back to loving you again when you reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

So, even though your ex may be trying to get back at you for how you hurt her during the relationship, it doesn't mean she will stay stuck in those negative feelings.

It's up to you to interact with her and reawaken more positive feelings inside of her (e.g. respect, love, desire, excitement, happiness), so she stops wanting to hurt you and starts wanting to be your girl again.

Of course, there's also the possibility that your ex might actually just be happy and not be worried about how it affects you.

If that is the case, then it's even easier for you to get her back if you want her back.

All it takes is for you to interact with her, re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you and her guard will then automatically start to come down.

You can then guide her back into a relationship with you and show her that this time itâ€™s so much better than before.

Another possible sign that your ex is trying to get back at you for how you hurt her during the relationship isâ€¦

2. She's showing off her new relationship on social media and making sure that you see it

[image: She is showing off her new relationship on social media and making sure you see it]

Sometimes a woman will feel so angry with her ex for how he treated her in the relationship, that she will try to get back at him by showing him that sheâ€™s found a new (better) man than him.

Of course, if sheâ€™s not talking to him, she might decide to flaunt her new relationship on social media, knowing that he will most likely check up on her and see that sheâ€™s moved on with someone else.

For example: She mightâ€¦

- Update her status from single to in a relationship.
- Post photos of herself laughing, smiling and looking happy in the arms of her new man.
- Talking about him in her posts and saying things like, â€œItâ€™s so wonderful to be in love again,â€ or â€œMy new boyfriend surprised me with a romantic dinner last night. Wow! What a man,â€ or â€œTony – where have you been all my life? Lol!â€
- Get her friends to comment on her posts/photos with things like, â€œYou guys make such a beautiful couple,â€ or â€œYou look so happy again. Congrats! I'm happy for you two.â€

Then, when her ex sees how happy she is without him, he will feel guilty for how he hurt her and also the pain of losing out on a great woman like her.

Another possible sign that your ex is trying to get back at you for how you hurt her during the relationship isâ€¦

3. She's moving on as quickly as possible to make it seem like you meant nothing to her

If a woman feels like her guy has hurt her in the relationship (e.g. because he takes her for granted, he cheated on her, he is too jealous and controlling, he doesnâ€™t treat her with respect and appreciation), then when the break up happens, rather than waste a lot of time trying to deal with the pain and disillusionment of what happened, she may just focus on getting over him as quickly as possible and moving on.

For example: She mightâ€¦

- Start going out more often with her single friends and doing fun things together (e.g. going to parties, hanging out at the beach, going away on weekends together and opening herself up to hooking up with guys for fun).
- Open herself up to meeting new men (e.g. by going to bars or clubs, flirting with guys she knows have been interested in her, joining a dating site).

- Focus more on her studies, work or hobbies, while at the same time making it obvious to the guys around her that she's now single.
- Get on Tinder and start accepting dates with random guys, which may lead to kissing and sex.

Essentially, she may be hoping that when her ex finds out that she's already moved on and not sitting at home feeling sad or missing him, he will begin thinking things like, "I can't believe she's moving on so quickly after our break up. I guess she never really loved me after all. I meant nothing to her."

She can then get back at him for hurting her during the relationship.

However, just because your ex is moving on quickly to make you think that you meant nothing to her, it doesn't mean that that is the truth.

Instead, it might simply be a ploy to stop herself from missing you.

Alternatively, she may be hoping that you will be emotionally strong and confident enough to believe in your value to her to try and get her back, regardless of whether she's moving on or not.

This is why, regardless of what your ex is saying and doing right now to make you feel like you don't stand a chance with her, you need to be bold enough to take action (i.e. start re-attracting her during interactions).

When you can do that, her defenses will begin to crumble whether she likes it or not.

She may act like you're not having an affect on her initially, but she won't be able to hide her feelings for you for very long.

All of a sudden, she will text you, call you or just be much more open to replying to your texts, answering your calls and meeting up with you in person.

You can then build up her feelings for you and get her back.

Another possible sign that your ex is trying to get back at you for how you hurt her during the relationship is that

4. She's being cold, mean or rude to you to get revenge for how you made her feel during the relationship

In some cases, a woman will become a completely different person than she was during the relationship (e.g. if she was sweet, nice and loving she may become mean, bitchy and spiteful), in an attempt to get revenge on her ex for hurting her during the relationship.

For example: She might

- Get angry with him every time he interacts with her and say things like, "I don't know why I'm even bothering to talk to you. You're just wasting my time. There's nothing you can say or do that will change how much I despise you right now!"
- Blame him for the break up (e.g. by saying things like, "I never want you to forget that we're broken up because of you," or "You're the one who ruined our relationship so don't try to sweet talk me into forgiving you, because that will never happen").
- Refuse to talk to him over the phone or meet up with him in person.

- Say that she never felt anything for him, that the relationship meant nothing to her and that she was only sticking with him until someone better came along.
- Tell him that he was a bad lover and that she faked her orgasms.
- Talk badly about him to mutual friends, family, coworkers or even to his boss.
- Post on social media about what a bastard he was.

Naturally, if your ex is being intentionally mean towards you and is going out of her way to be hurtful, it's difficult to imagine ever being able to get her back.

Yet, funnily enough, in most cases, all it usually takes is a spark of respect and attraction to make her drop her guard a little bit and open back up to the possibility of forgiving you and giving you another chance.

Then, if you continue to say and do the types of things that build on her feelings for you (e.g. maintain your confidence with her regardless of how cold, mean or bitchy she's being, use humor to ease the tension between you and make her laugh and smile, show her via your attitude, actions and behavior that you've changed and improved some of the things that turned her off during the relationship with you), she will then go from being mean and bitchy and wanting to get back at you, to thinking something like, "Maybe I've been too hard on him. He really does seem different now. Maybe I should ease up on him a little bit to see what happens."

You can then build on her feelings for you and get her back again.

3 Mistakes That Can Slow the Ex Back Process Down When You're Trying to Get an Ex Back That You Hurt

When you reactivate a woman's feelings of respect and attraction for you, regardless of how angry or hurt she was before, she will be able to let go of that, because she's feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

However, if you stop focusing on that (i.e. re-sparking her feelings for you) and instead say, do or think things that make you lose confidence and turn her off, getting her back becomes a lot more difficult, if not impossible.

So, to avoid that from happening, make sure that you don't make the following mistakes:

1. Falling into her trap and showing signs of feeling self-pity, rejection and sadness about her actions

Sometimes, a guy might feel so shocked that his ex is trying to get back at him, that he may complain about it to mutual friends, so that they can tell her and make her feel bad.

Alternatively, he may send her a letter or a text saying something along the lines of, "How can you do this to me? I admit that I stuffed up pretty badly and that I hurt you during the relationship, but I never stopped loving you. You always meant the world to me and it was never my intention to hurt you. You on the other hand are going out of your way to do that. I'm so shocked to see you behave this way. I just never imagined you could be so cold and calculating. I truly thought you were a better person than this, but I guess I was wrong. I hope you're satisfied though, because if revenge is what you were after, you sure got your wish. Congratulations! You can now feel proud of *yourself for hurting me too.*â€œ

By saying something like that to her heâ€™s likely hoping to spark her feelings of pity and guilt and cause her to start being nice to him again, which will then give him a chance to get her back.

Yet, rather than make a woman feel pity or guilt for the pain that heâ€™s experiencing, it usually only turns her off even more, because she doesnâ€™t want to be responsible for his emotional wellbeing.

At the same time, if she is truly trying to get him back for hurting her, she then likely just doubles her efforts because she can see that itâ€™s working.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

You will have a lot more success in getting your ex to stop trying to get you back for hurting her and even open back up to being a couple again when you portray some of the qualities and personality traits that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, emotional strength, self-belief, manliness), rather than by trying to make her feel sorry for you.

So, if youâ€™re tempted to adopt a â€œPoor meâ€ attitude to make your ex stop treating you the way she is, just forget about it and focus instead on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for the confident, emotionally strong you.

When you approach getting her back from a position of strength rather than weakness, she feels drawn to you again in a good way and she then automatically wants to be nicer to you.

Another mistake isâ€¦

2. Focusing on what she is doing, rather than focusing on what you need to do to get her back

[image: She keeps posting on social media and seems happy. What does it mean for me?]

Sometimes a guy will sit around over-analyzing his exâ€™s every move and interpreting her intentions.

For example: She if she post photos of herself on social media laughing and having fun at a party, club or bar, he might think to himself, *â€œSheâ€™s just doing that to rub it in my face that sheâ€™s happy without me now.*â€œ

Alternatively, if he accidentally sees her when heâ€™s out (e.g. at the mall, at a familiar restaurant or coffee shop, at the movies) he might then go home and analyze her every action, look and gesture and wonder things like, â€œWas she intentionally giving me the cold shoulder to get back at me for hurting her, or did she simply not see me?â€ or, â€œWhat did it mean when she looked at me?â€ or *â€œWhy was she laughing like that? I wonder if it was at me.*â€œ

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

If you focus all your attention on what your ex is doing and what her intentions are for doing it, you will end up driving yourself crazy.

The truth is, it doesnâ€™t matter what sheâ€™s doing.

What matters is what you are doing.

This is why, you need to forget about what sheâ€™s up to and focus instead on actively making her feel respect and attraction for you again.

If youâre not doing much (or anything at all) to actively get her back and are simply hoping she will somehow make it clear that sheâs not really trying to get back at you for hurting her after all, so you can then make a move, then you might be waiting for a long time and she may just move on without you.

On the other hand, if you call her on the phone or meet up with her in person, spark some of her feelings for you by making her laugh and smile and then getting her to forgive you, youâll be well on your way to getting what you actually want (i.e. to get her back).

So focus on that and forget about everything else.

Another mistake isâ!

3. Feeling like youâve lost your chance with her now because sheâs behaving in that way

Even though your situation might seem hopeless to you right now (e.g. because your ex is refusing to talk to you, sheâs doing things to get back at you), when you spark new sexual and romantic feelings inside her, anything becomes possible.

Even after a break up, it doesnât mean the love between you and your ex is completely dead.

Right now itâs just buried under a lot of anger and emotional pain.

However, you can make her reconnect to that love again by interacting with her and showing her that you truly are a better man now.

When she sees for herself that the man she broke up with isnât who you are anymore, she wonât be able to stop herself from feeling some respect for you again.

When that happens, she naturally also starts to feel some attraction for you again and she then becomes open to hanging out with you some more to see what happens.

So, donât sit around feeling hopeless and believing youâve lost any chance you might have had of getting her back.

The truth is, millions of couples reunite with each other every year.

You and her can be one of those couples.

You can do it.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Do Get Your Ex Back Programs Work?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends on what advice is included in the program.

Not all programs are the same.

This is why, before choosing the right program for you, it's important that you get clear on what will work for you and your relationship.

Here are important 4 questions to ask yourself to determine what will work for your situation:

1. Will your ex come running back if you cut off contact?

[image: Will she come running back if you cut off contact?]

The No Contact Rule (i.e. cutting off all contact with an ex for 30 to 60 days), is a very common method that guys use to get an ex back.

However, itâs also one of those methods that rarely work.

Why?

To begin with, when a woman breaks up with a guy, itâs usually because she has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him over time.

So, when he then stops interacting with her after the break up and just vanishes out of her life (i.e. he stops texting, e-mailing, calling and doesnât see her in person), rather than think, âOh no! I canât believe heâs truly gone. Now that the reality of not seeing him or talking to him anymore has sunk in, I realize that I made a big mistake by breaking up with him. I donât want to lose him. I need to do something right away to get him back before itâs too late and he moves on with some other woman,â and run back to him, she instead thinks something along the lines of, âWhen I broke up with him I thought I would have to deal with him trying to get me back. Instead, things turned out so much better than I expected. Heâs totally vanished from my life and I donât have to deal with him trying to convince me to give him another chance. This is so cool! I can now focus on moving on and finding myself a new man, without also having to deal with a needy ex guy. I couldnât be happier.â

She then does exactly that and moves on as quickly as possible.

Then, by the time the 30 or 60 days are up and the guy contacts her again (while secretly hoping she will be thrilled to hear from him again), heâs shocked to discover that not only doesnât she care that heâs texting/calling her again, sheâs actually also moved on and possibly even dating a new man.

He then ends up losing out on getting his ex back.

Of course there are some cases when the No Contact Rule does work.

What are those cases? (See video below for examples)

If a woman is still secretly in love with a guy and is hoping that they will get back together again, then not hearing from him might force her into going back to him.

Might.

However, what often happens in situations like this is that the woman contacts the guy, gets back with him and then realizes that he's still stuck at the same level he was at before, so she then breaks up with him again (this time for real).

She also then tries to hook up with new men as quickly as possible, to avoid going back to her ex.

Yet, in some cases, even if a woman does still care for her ex and misses him a little, she won't contact him when he's ignoring her because she will fear that he's no longer interested in her and that he'd probably reject her if she called.

So, once again, he loses out on getting her back.

This is why, if you want to use the No Contact Rule as your way of getting your ex back, you need to answer the following questions:

- Does your ex still have feelings for you, or does she no longer feel much (or any) respect, attraction and love for you?
- Will your ex miss you if you ignore her for 30 or 60 days, or will she be happy to be rid of you?
- Is she the type of woman who will come running back to you (e.g. because she's done it before), or will she just move on (e.g. because she can easily attract a new man)?
- Is she confident enough to come back to you if she still has some feelings for you, or will she feel insecure about your interest in her and decide that she doesn't want you to reject her?

Depending on your answers above, you should already know if No Contact is the best ex back program for you or not.

Another question to ask yourself is

2. Will your ex want you back if you don't change your approach to attraction and simply offer her the same experience as before?

In some cases, a guy will try to get his ex back by repeating all the things he did to attract her in the first place.

For example: He might

- Buy her flowers and thoughtful gifts.
- Write her long love letters.
- Send her romantic cards or write her a love poem.
- Be extra nice and sweet to her regardless of how badly she treats him.
- Make himself available to her 24/7, offer to run errands for her and possibly even give her money for rent/bills.

Although this approach does work in getting some women back (usually only for a short while), most women will reject a guy if he doesn't change and give her a new and improved attraction experience.

Here's why

Even though most women like to be spoiled and romanced, as a relationship matures, it's the deeper, more subtle, long-lasting things that matter to them.

For example: Some of the things a woman will look for in her man are

Does he know how to confidently lead the way in the relationship by naturally taking charge and thereby allowing her to relax into feeling totally feminine around him, or is he too emotionally weak, wimpy and unsure of himself which forces her to be the boss around him?

Does he treat her like a sexy, desirable woman, or does he treat her more like a buddy or roommate?

Does he have a clear purpose and direction in life that he's working towards achieving thus making her feel protected and safe in the relationship with him, or is he irresponsible and simply drifting through life?

Does he believe in himself and in his value to her (and other women), or does he feel insecure and believes that she's too good for him, making him act like a needy, clingy, controlling or jealous guy with her?

Does he pull his weight in the relationship (e.g. help with the household work, clean up after himself), or does he take her for granted?

These are the types of things that attract a woman to a man, make her want to be a good, loving woman to him and keep her in a relationship with him.

This is why, when a woman breaks up with a guy and he tries to get her back by giving her superficial things like flowers, gifts or love letters all over again instead of showing her that he's understood and changed the deeper more subtle things about himself that were turning her off, she's not going to be impressed and she's likely just going to say things like, â€œSorry, but I'm not interested in getting back with you,â€ or â€œI just don't have any feelings for you anymore,â€ or â€œPlease accept that what we had is over and leave me alone.â€

Right now you need to ask yourself: Are you willing to change and improve your ability to make your ex feel attracted in new and more interesting ways (e.g. by being more emotionally masculine so she feels feminine and girly in your presence, maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what she says or does to make you feel insecure around her, by standing up to her in a dominant yet loving way when she tries to dominate you emotionally), or do you want to remain the same while still expecting her to give you another chance?

Your answer will determine whether this approach is for you or not.

Another question to ask yourself isâ€

3. Will your ex be able to find a new guy easily, or will she struggle to move on?

If a woman feels confident in herself and in her attractiveness to men, chances are high that she will be able to move on and find a replacement man pretty quickly after her break up.

In a case like that, ex back programs like using the No Contact Rule, or trying to text her back will almost certainly not work, because while her ex is wasting 30 or 60 days ignoring her, or he's texting back and forth with her, she's usually busy going out and finding herself a new man to take his place.

Essentially she knows that finding a new guy will be easy for her, so she barely notices what her ex is doing.

Of course, if she's the kind of woman who is going to struggle to find a new man, then these programs might work on her.

However, they might also backfire, because she feels rejected by him and like he doesn't care enough to call her and meet up with her, so she forces herself to get over him.

Then by the time he plucks up the courage to call her (e.g. after ignoring her for a few weeks or months, after texting her for a long time), she no longer has feelings for him and it becomes a lot more difficult for him to reactivate her feelings and get her back.

On the other hand, an ex back program that will work on any woman (i.e. one that can easily find a new man or one that is struggling to move on) is the one that encourages the guy to interact with his ex as often as possible and actively re-spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

The more drawn to him she feels in a way that feels good to her, the less interested she will be in moving on.

Even if she knows that she can get another guy if she wants to, she simply doesn't care, because her ex is making her feel the way she wants to feel.

As you can see, there are some ex back programs that do work.

You just have to make sure you use the right one to get your ex back.

Another question to ask yourself isâ€¦!

4. Will your ex fall back in love with you via text?

After a particularly difficult break up, a guy might be afraid to come on too strong with his ex, so he is drawn to the type of ex back program that encourages him to get her back via text.

For example: He might think to himself, â€œSheâ€™s not going to want to talk to me on the phone or in person right now. So, rather than make her put up her guard with me even more by calling her, Iâ€™ll just try this and let things play out from there. Sheâ€™ll probably appreciate it that Iâ€™m not being pushy and she will then open up to me again so that we can work things out.â€

Yet, while texting is fine initially in most cases, a woman will rarely fall back in love with a guy if his texts don't lead to a phone call and then a meet up.

This may sometimes work if a woman is really shy and doesn't like to talk much, or at all, over the phone.

However, even a woman like that will eventually begin to see that as a half-assed effort to get her back, which makes her feel insulted and like he doesn't even care enough about her to call her.

In almost all other cases, the longer a guy takes to progress from texting, to a phone call and then to a meet up, the more he's reducing his chances of successfully re-attracting his ex, making her fall in love with him and getting her back.

So, if you've been considering using texting as your preferred method of getting your ex back, be aware that this may actually turn her off even more and cause her to think things like, â€œWhat does he want? Is he just going to continue texting me forever, or is there actually a point to this? Iâ€™m really getting bored and fed up with this. Maybe itâ€™s time I stop responding to him and wasting my time.â€

If you truly want to get your ex back, a few texts must lead to a phone call and then to a meet up.

So, don't hide behind texts thinking that it's the best way to get your ex back.

Instead, start reactivating her feelings of respect and attraction for you on a phone call and then follow through with a meet up, where she can see for herself that you really are a new and improved man now.

That's the fastest, most effective ex back approach and it really works! You can learn how to do that in Get Your Ex Back Super System

If you're not ready to begin learning the method to get her back, at least learn what mistakes you should avoid when choosing the right ex back program for you...

4 Mistakes to Avoid Making When Deciding on the Best Program to Help You Get Your Ex Back

Before you make a decision on how you intend to get your ex back, make sure you're not making mistakes that will actually turn her off even more.

For example:

1. Assuming that "No Contact" will work on any woman

Sometimes, if a woman is still in love with her ex and is secretly hoping they will eventually work things out and get back together again, him ignoring her for 30 to 60 days, may cause her to miss him and reach out to him.

However, she may also feel hurt by his treatment of her and decide that if he doesn't want her back, she won't waste her time waiting for him either.

She may then force herself to go out, meet new men and accept dates with them so that she can get over her ex and move on.

In a case where a woman is angry, turned off and disconnected from her feelings for her ex, him using No Contact to get her back is usually a big mistake.

Rather than make her miss him and want him back, it actually just gives her the time to move on and hook up with a new man.

The thing is, every woman is different, so you shouldn't just use No Contact and assume that it will work on your ex.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Buying a whole bunch of programs and then getting confused with the conflicting advice

When a guy is desperate to get his ex back, he might end up buying a different range of ex back programs to make it happen.

However, a lot of the time, the advice in the programs is so conflicting that he ends up not knowing what to do.

For example: One program might say he must ignore her for 30 or even 60 days to make her come running back to him, while another program says call her right away and re-attract her.

Some other program might say he should text her to re-attract her, while yet another program suggests writing her a long love letter and telling her that he has changed.

As a result, he stays stuck and doesn't do anything to get his ex back.

Alternatively, he might try using bits from every program, which is not only confusing to him, but also makes his ex wonder why he's messing her around.

She then closes herself off from him even more, causing him to try even more ex back programs to get her back.

Eventually, this will almost always lead to the woman telling him she's moved on with someone else, leaving him feeling angry, dejected and thinking things like, â€œGet your ex back programs suck! They simply don't work.â€

Don't let that happen to you.

Just remember: What does work for pretty much every ex back case, is where a man actively re-attracts his ex woman, so she actually wants to get back with him again.

So focus on that.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Not trusting your gut instinct and going with the program that you think will help you the most

Some guys decide on which ex back program to buy based on the cheaper price and regret it later when they lose their ex.

Here's the thing

You probably already know which program will work best for you.

Hint: Usually the one that has worked for almost every other guy as well.

So, trust your instincts.

You won't regret it.

Another mistake to avoid is

4. Waiting too long to start and she then moves on without you

If you spend days, weeks or even months looking around for the perfect ex back program to help you get your ex back, by the time you make your decision it may already be too late.

Here's the thing

After a break up, if a woman's ex doesn't do anything right away to try and get her back, she will usually just use the time to get over him and move on with another guy.

That's how it works in most cases, which is why if you want your ex back for real, stop wasting time asking things like, â€œDo get your ex back programs work?â€ and focus instead on interacting with your ex and actively reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

When she is feeling respect and attraction for you again, getting her back becomes easy, because it's something she wants too.

On the other hand, if you wait longer than a week, you may end up regretting it when you find out that she has already started to move on without you and is possibly dating, or even falling in love with another man.

So, if you want her back, don't wait too long.

Make a move and get her back with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Really Liked My Ex, But She Didn't Feel the Same Way

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 possible reasons why she didn't feel the same way.

Which do you think applies to her and your relationship with her the most?

1. Your approach to the relationship didn't make her feel the all-important, sexual spark that is needed to keep it together

Most guys are good guys, so it's only natural that they will want to treat their woman very well when in a relationship with her.

Yet, where a lot of guys go wrong, is by putting in way more effort than their woman into the relationship than the woman does, to hopefully get her to love him and treat him well in return.

For example: A guy might focus on being extra nice to his girl and letting her have her way all the time (e.g. he always does what she likes to do, he lets her make most of the decisions in the relationship, doesn't stand up to her when she's being unreasonable, puts her needs ahead of his own, tries to make her life as easy as possible).

He may think, "I really like her and want her to see that via my actions. If I treat her better than other guys have, she will realize how much I care, know that she has found the one and will then love me and feel like she needs me."

Yet, that's not how love and attraction works in a relationship.

Although most women do like a man who is good to them, they don't like the idea of being more emotionally dominant than him to the point where he becomes soft around her.

So, if a woman gets a sense that she can boss her guy around and he won't do anything about it, she immediately stops respecting him as a man.

When she can't respect him, she also stops feeling sexually attracted to him and then the idea of remaining in a relationship with him starts to feel wrong to her.

She will usually then break up with him and focus on finding herself a guy who can create the kind of spark between them that she's looking for (i.e. where she feels feminine in comparison to his masculine approach, she looks up to him and respects him, feels like his girl rather than feeling like his mother or big sister).

Here's the thing!

Even though you might have good intentions and be a great guy, without that all important sexual spark, it just doesn't work.

If a woman can't fully respect you and feel sexually attracted to you, everything else starts to fall apart.

Essentially, you end up in the friend zone with her!

It's only when you can make her feel the all-important, sexual spark for you that she will feel motivated to get back with you.

It doesn't matter how much you like her.

She doesn't care about that.

Itâ€™s just not enough to keep a relationship together.

Another possible reason why your ex didnâ€™t feel the same way as you isâ€¦

2. You made her feel like you needed her way more than she needed you

A woman definitely wants to be loved, appreciated and even a little bit needed by her man when in a relationship.

Yet, in most cases, a woman doesnâ€™t want to be her manâ€™s main reason for living, or main source of happiness to the point where he becomes needy (i.e. he regularly needs to get her reassurance that she loves him, he needs to be around her to feel okay about himself, he is always worried about what she is thinking or feeling).

So, if a woman gets a sense that her man has become needy, rather than think, â€œThatâ€™s so sweet. I feel so flattered that he needs me so much and that he canâ€™t do anything without my input or say so,â€ she instead feels turned off by what she perceives as his emotional weakness.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Even though a woman does want to be with a guy who is loving, caring and devoted to her, she also needs him to be his own man (i.e. be emotionally independent).

Unless a woman is unattractive and wants to keep a needy, emotionally dependent guy around, being emotionally needy just doesnâ€™t work.

Youâ€™ve got to be emotionally independent, so she can see that you donâ€™t need her pat on the back or encouragement to feel good about yourself.

You donâ€™t need her to be really nice to you, show you love all the time and reassure you of her commitment to you to feel confident.

Instead, you know that she is attracted to you, know that she loves you and know that she wouldnâ€™t want to lose you.

As a result, she naturally feels attracted to you and loves you, which results in her showing you love all the time, being nicer, more attentive and affectionate.

Yet, when a woman realizes that her man needs her more than she needs him, she will feel like pulling away, being closed off and treating him with less and less respect over time, which then causes him to become even more needy and insecure.

This turns her off even more, which inevitably leads to her breaking up with him.

So, if you want to get your ex back, you must show her that even though you still care about her and want her back, you donâ€™t actually need her back to feel okay about yourself again.

Of course, you shouldnâ€™t tell her that via text, on a phone call or in person.

Instead, you need to show it to her by living a happy life without her and making progress on goals and ambitions that are important to you.

Let her see that youâ€™re confident and moving forward in life now and you donâ€™t need her to feel emotionally fulfilled.

That doesnâ€™t mean you donâ€™t want her back.

You do and that is fine.

However, the big difference is that you donâ€™t need her back to feel good about yourself again.

You already feel good about yourself and your life (i.e. you are emotionally independent), which is attractive to her.

When your ex notices that about you (e.g. during conversations), she won't be able stop thinking about you in a more positive way, because you're now behaving like the kind of man she can truly look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love.

All of a sudden, she feels drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her and you can get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex didn't feel the same way as you is

3. You weren't enough of a challenge for her

[image: You weren't enough of a challenge for her]

Sometimes, a guy will do everything he can think of to make his woman feel happy in the relationship with him.

For example: He might

- Always be nice and sweet to her, regardless of the way she treats him (e.g. she's closed off, tells lies, disrespects him, couldn't care less about his life, always talks about herself and doesn't listen when he talks).
- Allow her to lead and make most or all the decisions for the both of them (e.g. she picks where they go and what they do, she gives or denies him permission to go out with friends).
- Shower her with attention.
- Spoil her with gifts.
- Never stand up to her, or disagree with her because he fears annoying her and then getting dumped.

In his mind, he's being the perfect boyfriend.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that just being nice, obliging and compliant isn't the secret to maintaining a woman's respect, attraction and love in a relationship.

Why?

Even though a woman might appreciate it when a guy is being nice to her and when she gets her way from time to time, she doesn't want to feel like she is the boss, the leader, or the most dominant one in the relationship.

Instead, she wants him to make her feel as though she needs to do her best to keep him happy and interested in her, rather than feeling as though she doesn't have to put in any effort in the relationship because he will put up with anything just to be with her.

In other words, she wants him to be more of a challenge.

If he can't offer her the challenge she secretly wants in a relationship, then she will naturally begin to feel bored and indifferent towards him.

When that happens, she will stop feeling respect and attraction for him and without those two feelings, her motivation to stick with the relationship will begin to fade away.

She will then break up with him (even though he's treating her really well) and find herself a man who is more of a challenge.

So, if you want to make your ex like you as much as you like her, you need to focus on approaching her in a completely new way that is going to be more attractive and appealing to her.

This new way involves you creating a relationship dynamic where you're good to your ex and treat her with love and respect, but you also make her feel motivated to be good to you, treat you well and make you feel loved.

When she begins to feel that losing you will be something she will end up regretting (i.e. you will be the one that got away), she will naturally open back up to being your girl again, or at least hooking up with you sexually to see how she feels afterwards.

Another possible reason why your ex didn't feel the same way as you is

4. She hoped that you would transform when in a relationship with her, but you didn't

Sometimes a woman will get into a relationship with a guy that she's not 100% attracted to.

Yet, because the guy is really nice at the start, which she initially sees as being cute and romantic, she feels flattered and she tells herself something along the lines of, He's a really nice guy and I could definitely do a lot worse than him. I should at least give him a chance with me. Who knows what might happen.

She hopes that he will be able to switch a lot of the mushy, Mr. Nice Guy stuff off in a relationship and start showing her more of his masculine side (i.e. being more ballsy, making her feel feminine in comparison to his masculine approach, making her want to be submissive around him at times).

When he doesn't transform or begin to show that side of himself, the relationship starts to feel boring to her.

When that happens, she might initially try to push the guy into changing in some of the ways she wants (e.g. by telling him that she wants to take the lead sometimes, or be more confident and assertive with her or around other people).

If he doesn't get it and continues to act, think and behave in the same old ways as before, she will gradually get fed up with it and decide to end the relationship.

So, if your ex broke up with you because you weren't able to transform and become the kind of man she wanted you to be, to get her back, you need to quickly make some changes and improvements to yourself and then let her experience those changes every time you interact with her.

The more she can see that you're not the same guy she broke up with (e.g. you're no longer always on your best behavior around her, hesitant, insecure, boring, predictable), her curiosity will get the better of her.

She will want to interact with you more, over the phone and in person to experience the new and improved you for herself.

She will want to see how it feels to hug you, kiss you and have sex with you now that you've become more manly.

If that feels good, her defenses automatically come down and she opens back up to the idea of giving the relationship another chance.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Back Who Didn't Feel the Same Way

You really like your ex, right?

It would be awesome if you got her back, right?

Well, the good news is that you can.

However, there's a catch!

To get her back you need to start behaving in the ways that will turn her on (e.g. being confident regardless of what she says to put you off, taking the lead in the ex back process rather than waiting for her to give you crystal clear signs, being emotionally masculine in a way that makes her feel feminine and girly around you), and stop saying and doing the types of things that turn her off.

For example: Some of the things that turn an ex woman off when she wasn't very attracted to you in the relationship, are!

1. Telling her how much she means to you in a letter or e-mail

Sometimes a guy doesn't know how to properly express himself when he's interacting with his ex woman, so he will make the mistake of unloading on her in a long letter or e-mail.

Essentially, he pours his heart out and tells her how much he cares for her, how he doesn't want to lose her and how he's willing to do whatever it takes to get her back.

So romantic, right?

Nah, not really.

In fact, in most cases, rather than making a woman feel happy that he's so devoted to her and the relationship, she feels annoyed that he's not seeing things from her point of view (i.e. that she doesn't have sexual or romantic feelings for him).

As a result, she feels as though he's pressuring her to overlook her feelings, wants and needs and to instead give him another chance based on what he wants.

It's like her feelings and what she has been experiencing with him doesn't matter.

All that matters to him is getting her back.

Of course, that's not how the guy means to come across, but because he's only focusing on his feelings for her and not actively doing anything to change her sexual feelings for him, that's the impression she gets.

She sees his letter or email as him trying to manipulate her into giving him another chance with cleverly written, romantic lines and attempts to make her feel pity for him, or feel guilty for leaving him.

As a result, she closes herself off even more.

She feels like she needs to go and find a new man, have amazing sex and fall in love with him, so she can justify to herself that she was right to break up with her ex.

So, whatever you do, don't make the mistake of trying to convince your ex to give you another chance in a letter or e-mail.

Another thing that turns an ex woman off who wasn't very attracted to her guy in the relationship, is that

2. Looking at her as being out of his league

Sometimes a guy will get into a relationship with a woman who is a lot more beautiful, interesting and intelligent than any other woman he has ever dated.

As a result, he might think, She's so perfect. I can't believe my luck that a woman like her would even consider being with a guy like me. I just hope that I will be enough for her and that she won't realize I'm not good enough for her.

Then, when he gets broken up with, it only reinforces what he always believed about himself (i.e. he wasn't good enough for her and she was out of his league).

Here's the thing though

She's not out of his league.

He is good enough for her, but his approach to attraction wasn't effective (i.e. he gave her the impression that she was too good for him and that he was lucky to be with her, which gave her a false sense of superiority over him).

She would have loved him and stayed with him for life, but he made her feel like she was trading down by being with him, even though she wasn't.

This is why you have to believe in yourself and your value to your ex, so you can then sincerely project the kind of confidence that will re-attract her and make her want to be your girl again.

You've got to get to the point where you honestly believe that you are good enough for her and then interact with her, re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you and get her back.

You can do it, but you have to believe that you can.

Another thing that turns a woman off is that

3. Hoping that she will come to her senses one day and realize that she lost a good guy who really loved her

Although most women appreciate it when a man is a good guy, goodness isn't what makes a woman crave a man sexually and romantically.

Attraction is.

She has to feel sexually and romantically attracted to you.

It doesn't matter how good of a guy you are.

What matters is that warm, fuzzy feeling she gets down there when she thinks of you.

If she feels that, she will want to be with you.

If she doesn't, she won't.

It's as simple as that, even though some guys don't want it to be.

Some guys want it to be about sweetness, niceness, loyalty, generosity and so on.

Women only care about that kind of behavior from a guy that makes them feel that warm, fuzzy feeling downstairs.

Without that, her primal instincts tell her not to get involved with a man sexually and romantically.

It's as simple as that.

So, don't sit around hoping that your ex will one day say to herself, "I think I made a mistake. He was such a nice, sweet guy and he always made me feel like a princess. Who cares that I didn't feel attracted to him. That doesn't matter. As long as he is nice and sweet and devoted to me, I don't need to feel like a desirable, sexy woman around him. I don't need to feel attracted. All that matters is that he is a good guy" because she probably won't.

Instead, she will hook up with another guy (sometimes even with someone that seems to be a bit of a bad boy), so she can feel the all-important feeling of sexual attraction.

This is why, if you want your ex to really like you in the same way you like her, you've got to ignite her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction first.

When she interacts with you and feels sparks of excitement surging through her body, she will also appreciate the fact that you're a good guy and want to get back with you.

She will know that you are one of the rare, good men who also knows how to make a woman feel that warm, fuzzy feeling down in her little, love pocket.

She will begin to imagine you sliding inside of her again and her loving it.

Before you get to that though, let's look at the final example of what can turn a woman off when her ex is trying to get her back!

4. Being unwilling to use a different approach on her

If your original approach didn't work on her, don't keep using it.

You're a smart guy, right?

If so, then use your high level of intelligence to realize that a new approach to her is needed.

You can't use the same old approach to attraction that you used in the past and expect her to be excited about it.

You've got to try something new.

It's the only way.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Didn't Make Her Feel Loved

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will say that you didn't make her feel loved in a relationship:

1. You were showing her love in ways that didn't matter much to her

In other words, your way of showing love to your ex wasn't what she wanted from you.

For example: A guy might have always been nice to his woman, bought her gifts and taken her places.

Yet, he never told her how much you loved her and why.

Alternatively, he may have told her how much you loved her, but she didn't feel that come through when they were having sex.

It was like he was always holding back and afraid to express his love to her.

He didn't want to put himself out there too much and instead, played it cool and acted like he wasn't really that into her.

Sure, he enjoyed the sex and she could see that, but he was distant during it and as a result, she never really felt like he was truly in love with her.

This may have caused her to think things like, He just doesn't seem to be into me as much as I am into him. It's like I keep hoping that he will love me the way I want to be loved, but it never happens. Will I ever feel safe in my relationship with him, or will I always be hoping for more than he can give me? I don't know if I want to be in a relationship like this for life. I mean, what if he just gets bored one day and cheats on me, or leaves me? Then what? I have given him my full heart and he's always been giving me half his heart, or less than that, so he can walk away without worrying about it. Maybe I need to take care of myself and end things before he does.

As a result, she then decides to break up with him by saying something along the lines of, I am sorry, but I just can't do this anymore. I really do care for you, but you don't make me feel loved. I am like something extra in your life that you have there, but don't really need or care about.

If the guy really did love her, but just wasn't very good at expressing it in the way she needed, he may then think, I don't understand what she's talking about. I did everything I could think of to make her feel loved and appreciated in the relationship with me. After all, didn't I always spoil her with special gifts and romantic dinners? or, How can she say that to me when I told her I loved her all the time. What more did she want me to say to prove to her that my feelings for her were real? or, Doesn't spending time with show her that I love her? If I didn't love her, I would waste my time with her. I could have been with other women, but I was with her. What else does she want? Why does she have to be so needy like this? I was just being myself. If she doesn't like that, then I don't know what else I could do.

He then tries to reason with her and tell her that he does love her and was trying to make her feel loved in the only way he knows (i.e. spending time with her, buying her gifts, spending less time with friends).

Yet, as you may have realized by now, it doesn't matter if you showed your ex that you loved her in the ways you thought were important.

What matters to her, is that you didn't show her that you loved her in the ways that mattered to her.

She didn't feel loved.

You might think she is wrong, or you might agree with her.

Yet, that isn't going to fix the problem.

What will?

You first need to get her to forgive you!

You then need to make her regret leaving you!

That is what works.

So, if you want to get her back, don't make the mistake of chasing after her and offering her more of what you did in the past.

That won't work.

For example: If your way of expressing love to your ex was to shower her with gifts and attention, don't keep doing that.

Instead, focus on interacting with her and making her feel rushes of sexual and romantic attraction for you based on the way you now talk, behave and act around her.

Then, when you've fully reactivated her feelings and she's open to talking to you and seeing you more and more, you can then say, I love you and she will feel great about it.

Why?

Women are most excited to hear the words, I love you when they respect you, feel attracted to you and love you.

So, make sure that you reactivate her feelings first, rather than rushing to say, I love you before then and hoping that it impresses her.

Another possible reason why your ex said you didn't make her feel loved is!

2. She has issues with love that stem from her childhood

[image: She has issues that stem from her childhood]

In some cases, a woman not feeling loved in her relationship with a guy, has less to do with him and how he has been treating her and more to do with her childhood and upbringing.

For example: She may have had a difficult childhood (e.g. her parents didn't make her feel loved, she was abandoned, overlooked or ignored when she was young, loved less than her siblings were) and now, as an adult, she is needy for obvious displays of love from men.

As a result, everything that her guy says or does never seems to be enough for her.

No matter how much love he gives her, it never cancels out the pain she carries around from her childhood.

Not realizing her issue, she may begin to blame it on her guy and think, I know that he spoils me, but maybe it's because he thinks that's what a guy is supposed to do in a relationship with a woman and not really because he actually loves me. Maybe heâs just going through the motions with me and doing what he thinks I want. Maybe he doesnât even love me. Maybe he just wants to be with me for a while and will dump me when he is ready to do soâ or, âI know he said that he loves me, but maybe heâs just saying that to please me, but he doesnât really mean it. He could be lying.â

If you think your ex fits into that kind of category, you need to be able to let her realize that you do love her and honestly want to be with her.

Of course, donât try to convey that to her in a desperate, âPlease believe me!â A kind of way.

Instead, just maintain your cool and let her pick up on it naturally (even though it will be difficult for her and it may take some time for her to fully believe it).

For example: Some of the ways that you can get her to see that you really do love her and want to be with her, are byâ|

- Using humor to break through her doubts, insecurities and hang-ups and make her feel good to be around you (e.g. âOf course I love you and want to be with you. I mean, youâre a horrible girlfriend, but I still love youâ and have a laugh with her about that and then say, âJust kidding. I love you because I think you are beautiful and I love you because of who you are as a person. Iâve always felt that way about you. Maybe I havenât shown it enough, but thatâs the way Iâve always feltâ).
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension and make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman in your presence.
- Being more emotionally dominant than her during a conversation to make her feel like a feminine woman around you, which then makes her feel sparks of respect, attraction and love for you. As a result, she is much more motivated to want to believe that you love her, so she can continue to experience the respect, attraction and love that she feels for you.
- Maintaining your confidence with her when sheâs saying things like, âYou never made me feel loved,â and turning her emotional outbursts into something that you can laugh about together (e.g. âYeah, I knowâ|and you never cooked me enough roast chicken. You know that youâre great at making a Sunday roast, but where were they? You only ever made me that twice. Youâre a horrible girlfriend. I feel so underfedâ).

The more that you build on her feelings for you during interactions, the more her doubts about your feelings for her will begin to fade.

She will see that you are putting in effort to get her back, but you arenât being desperate about it, which will be attractive to her.

Suddenly, she can then begin to think things like, âWell, maybe he does love me after all. If he didnât, why would he waste all this time sticking around after weâve broken up? He hasnât just walked away from me. He is still here and I still feel attracted to him. Maybe we should give the relationship another try.â

When that happens, her doubts will begin to fade and she opens back up to the idea of being your girl again, before another woman comes along and takes you.

Another possible reason why your ex said you didnât make her feel loved isâ|

3. Her gut instinct was telling her that you were just with her until something better came along

Most people experience moments in a relationship where they wonder things like, “Will he/she dump me if someone better comes along?”

In most cases, those doubts are fleeting and go away when the other person makes them feel loved, appreciated and wanted.

Yet, if they aren't being made to feel loved and appreciated, then chances are high that no matter what the other person does to convince them that they are loved, the doubt will always be there.

In your case, if your ex felt as though the value gap between you and her was too wide (e.g. because you're more physically attractive than her, you're better educated, you're more popular than her, you're cooler than her, you have more friends than her), then it's only natural that she might have felt a bit insecure about her place in your life.

Over time, those insecurities may have built up inside of her and caused her to think things like, “There's no way a guy like him will stay with a woman like me for life. He will dump me as soon as a better looking/smarter/more popular woman comes along.”

So, to prevent herself from being heartbroken, your ex would have decided to break up with you before you broke up with her.

She will most likely still want to be with you, but she will be more focused on trying to protect her emotional health at this point (i.e. she doesn't want to get back into a relationship and then get dumped by you in a few weeks or months, so you can walk away as the dumper).

This is why, the thing you need to ask yourself right now is:

“Was she right about me only being with her until a better woman came along, or did I genuinely love her and want to be with her?”

If you decide that you truly love her and want her back, then focus on showing her via your actions and the way you treat her and respond to her, that she's the woman for you and that no other woman can take her place in your heart.

However, you can't convince her of that by just saying it to her, because she's probably not going to believe you (especially if she's feeling insecure about her attractiveness and value to you).

You have to show her over time (i.e. over the next few days and weeks), so she can calm down and begin to trust that you really do love her, no matter what.

Whatever you do though, don't try to show her how much you love her by being desperate about it (i.e. proclaiming your undying love to her, writing her a long letter expressing all of your feelings, showing up at her house with flowers, gifts and a soppy romantic approach).

Instead, be calm, confident and easy-going and just focus on sparking her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you every time you talk to her over the phone or in person from now on.

When she can see for herself that no matter what she says to test your interest level in her, you stick around and be an emotionally strong, masculine, loving man to her, she won't be able to resist the idea of giving you another chance.

Another possible reason why your ex said you didn't make her feel loved is:

4. She noticed how you seemed to find other women more attractive than her, without caring how it made her feel

There is nothing wrong with a man feeling attracted to other women when he is in a relationship with a woman.

It's completely natural and normal, just like it's perfectly natural and normal for a woman to look at a guy (or guys) that she finds attractive.

Problems arise however, when a woman begins to notice that her guy can't stop looking at other women when around her.

He seems to focus on them and get lost in his thoughts while looking at them, which makes her feel insecure.

In some cases, he might even flirt with them and won't care if she sees him doing it, or feels insecure about it.

Naturally, this will cause her to feel hurt, betrayed and as though she can't trust him to be faithful.

As a result, she may then begin to wonder, "Why am I staying with him when he treats me like this? He's not even trying to hide his wandering eye from me. Clearly, he doesn't love me the way I want him to. So, maybe it's best if I just break things off with him and focus on finding a guy who does find me attractive enough for him to not want to stare at other women and seem to secretly want them."

She will then break up with him and say something along the lines of, "I'm clearly not the right woman for you. You don't make me feel loved and I've had enough of putting up with it, so I think it's better if you and I go our separate ways."

Another possible reason why your ex said you didn't make her feel loved is that

5. She felt like you took more from the relationship than you gave

For a relationship to develop properly, there needs to be a balance between giving and taking.

So, if a woman starts to feel that she is always compromising and putting his needs ahead of her own, while he always seems to be the one taking, she will naturally begin to feel resentful, taken for granted and unloved.

She might then try to shake him up a little (e.g. by sulking or throwing a tantrum), so that he will start treating her in a more balanced way.

If he doesn't pay attention and either writes it off to her being an emotional woman, or simply assumes that because she loves him she will put up with it, she will slowly begin to disconnect from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

Eventually, she will get to the point where she has had enough and will go through with a break up.

If that applies to your situation with your ex, then you need to show her (via the way you now think, act and behave) that you have learned from your mistakes and have become a better man as a result.

Of course, don't go into a big speech about all things you've learned and how sorry you are.

Just be brief about those kinds of things and then get back on with making her smile, laugh and feel attracted and in love with the new you.

That is what works.

On the other hand, here are someâ€¦!

Common Problems Guys Experience When Trying to Get an Ex Back Who Didnâ€™t Feel Loved

Chances are pretty high that your ex isnâ€™t going to make it easy for you right away, so be prepared to face some of the following challengesâ€¦!

1. She is reluctant to try again because she doesn't believe anything will change

Most break ups between a man and a woman donâ€™t just happen without at least a few disagreements or fights first.

In some cases, there may even have been a â€œminiâ€œ break up or two along the way (e.g. she stops taking his calls for a few hours or days, she goes to her family or friends for a weekend to cool off).

However, by the time the â€œbigâ€œ break up happens (e.g. she moves out or kicks him out), a woman will have usually realized that her guy is not going to change and improve, based on all of her past experiences with him.

Basically, every time they have fought in the past, he promises to change or makes it out to be her fault (i.e. sheâ€™s too needy, expects too much of him, is being overly dramatic about nothing).

She would then forgive him and give him another chance, only to realize that he had no intention of following through on his promise to improve (e.g. because he didnâ€™t know how to change, or was unwilling to change), or that he never changed because he still believed he wasnâ€™t doing anything wrong.

Eventually, she realizes that sheâ€™s going to have to go through with an actual break up and then stick to it, because heâ€™s just not going to change.

This is why, if you want your ex to let down her guard and open back up to being with you, you need to show her via your actions, behavior and the way you talk and interact with her that youâ€™ve already changed and improved on some of the things that matter to her.

When she can see for herself that you are a new and improved man already and that if she gets back with you, youâ€™re not going to go back to making the same attraction mistakes as before, sheâ€™ll be able to start trusting you again.

When that happens, her defenses will come down and she will open back up to talking to you and being with you.

Another challenge you might be faced with when getting her back isâ€¦!

2. She becomes turned off when you start pouring your heart out or expressing your feelings

If she fell in love with the fact that you were a fairly emotionally unavailable guy and werenâ€™t a sappy romantic, then sheâ€™s not going to fall back in love with you if you start behaving like a sappy romantic.

Itâ€™s just not her thing.

Unfortunately, sometimes a guy in that situation believes that if he pours his heart out to his ex in a romantic way, she will finally believe that he really does love her and give him another chance.

Yet, it just turns her off and makes her feel as though he has lost the confidence and swagger that she originally fell in love with.

This is why, if you pour your heart out to your ex in an overly romantic way, rather than make her think, â€œWow! This is what I was hoping for all along. At last heâ€™s making me feel loved! I always wanted him to be a soft, romantic, nice guyâ€ sheâ€™s just going to wonder why youâ€™ve become so desperate and needy all of a sudden.

It will turn her off and make her feel happy with her decision to break up with you.

So, if your intention is to make your ex feel loved, donâ€™t do it by turning into an emotional, desperate, romantic wuss.

Instead, just focus on reactivating her feelings for you during interactions (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, flirting with her to create a sexual vibe, being confident and self-assured).

When she can sense your feelings based on the way you behave around her, the way you talk to her and the way you treat her in private and in public, she will then realize that she has to give you another chance, or will end up regretting it and missing you.

Another challenge you might be faced with isâ€™

3. You try to explain how you feel in a long letter, e-mail or message and she gets annoyed

So many romance novels and movies make itâ€™ seem like a woman will jump for joy, or at least be overcome with emotion when she gets a love letter from her ex.

She will realize that he really does love her, forgive him right away and they will get back together and live happily ever after.

Unfortunately, thatâ€™s not how it works in the real world.

In reality, when a woman gets a love letter/e-mail/message from her ex, after she broke up with him for not making her loved, her first thought will usually be, â€œEven now, he still doesnâ€™t care enough about me to say these things in person, or at least over the phone. Instead, heâ€™s just written/typed a bunch of words down and is hoping Iâ€™ll suddenly feel loved and appreciated. What a selfish, self-centered jerk. If he thinks that just sending me that will do the trick, then heâ€™s mistaken.â€

She then closes herself off even more and makes it more difficult for him to interact with her and get her back.

This is why itâ€™s never a good idea to hide behind letters, e-mails or texts with an ex woman.

If you want to tell her how you feel and have her believe you, itâ€™s best to do that in person and in a relaxed, confident, masculine way.

Only then will it feel sincere to her and get the response that you want (i.e. she opens up to the idea of getting back together again).

Another challenge you might be faced with isâ€™

4. You don't know what else to do to get her back, so you give up and lose her

Sometimes a guy will try to convince his ex that he really does love her by saying and doing the kinds of things he's read about online, in magazines or seen in romantic movies.

For example: He might

- Beg and plead with her for another chance and say things like, I really do love you. You're the woman for me. I promise you that what I'm saying is true. Just give me one more chance and I'll prove it to you. You mean the world to me. Without you, my life is meaningless. I realize that now. Please, give me a chance to show you over and over again.
- Offer to do anything she wants him to do (no matter how ridiculous or unreasonable it is), to prove his love for her.
- Shower her with bouquets of flowers, or expensive gifts.
- Send her sappy cards or poems.

When none of that works and his ex continues saying things like, I'm sorry. I just don't believe you he might begin to think, Well, I guess I tried everything to convince her to give me another chance and it didn't work. So, I suppose I just have to accept that it's truly over and that I will never get her back. I screwed up and can't get her back.

As a result, he gives up and tries to move on without her, even though he still has strong feelings for her.

Yet, here's the thing

Just because you've already tried to get your ex back and have failed, it doesn't mean she isn't interested in getting back with you, or that there isn't another approach you can use that will actually work.

Instead, in almost all cases, it simply means that the approach you have used so far hasn't hit the mark for her.

If you change your approach to one that causes her to feel rushes of respect, attraction and love for you, then her feelings about the relationship will change.

She will go from thinking about you in a negative way to wondering if she made a mistake by ending things with you.

She will worry that if she doesn't give you another chance, another woman will happily take her place.

Then, she will be left behind feeling rejected and as though she has been dumped.

As a result, she will be motivated to give you another chance and you will get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex Girlfriend Has Agreed to Talk

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 things you can do to ensure that the talk goes well:

1. Don't focus on talking about your romantic feelings before you fully reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings

A woman only cares about a man's romantic feelings for her, if she has sexual and romantic feelings for him.

This fundamental rule applies to picking up a woman, being on a date with her, being in a relationship with her and getting her back if you break up.

It's always a case of attraction first and everything else after that.

Unfortunately, some guys aren't aware of that fact and make the mistake of discussing how much they feel about her and want a relationship before they've fully reawakened her feelings.

So, if you want your ex to care how you feel about her, you need to make sure that you reactivate her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you first.

It's all about her feelings for you, rather than the other way around.

Your feelings do matter to you, but not to her.

[image: Don't focus on talking about your romantic feelings before you gave fully awoken her feelings]

She already knows how you feel.

That's not the point and it's not the reason why a woman will get back with a guy.

It's all about how she feels now and whether or not she feels enough to give you another chance, because you're the one who wants her back.

If you don't properly reactivate her feelings for you first, hearing you talk about your romantic feelings for her may cause her say things like, "Look, what we had before it over. Just because I agreed to talk, it doesn't mean I'm going to take you back. I don't feel the same way about you anymore and nothing you say will change that. So, you're going to need to accept that and let me get on with my life."

She then feels as though she made the wrong decision by agreeing to talk.

She walks away thinking that she originally hoped there would be a spark, but there wasn't.

All you did was confirm for her that you feel more for her than she does for you, so she feels right about her decision to break up with you.

She then tries to move on as quickly as she can (i.e. by hooking up with a new guy), so she doesn't begin to miss you and open back up to being with you.

So, just focus on making her feel rushes of respect, attraction and love for you when you talk in person and she will naturally begin to want to get back together.

You can then seal the deal with a kiss and sex if that happens too.

Once you and her have had sex again and are laying in bed hugging and feeling good, the topic of getting back together will naturally begin to come up.

Yet, I still recommend that you let her be the one who brings it up.

Donâ€™t chase a relationship with her.

Make her fall back in love with you and have sex with you, but donâ€™t chase her commitment to you.

Let her be the one who wants to make things official again.

The next thing you can do when talking to your ex girlfriend isâ€¦!

2. Apologize sincerely and briefly

When you talk to her in person, itâ€™s important that you sincerely apologize about what happened.

Important: This doesnâ€™t mean that you should go on and on about all the mistakes you made or try to seek pity from her by apologizing over and over.

A sincere, direct apology is all that is needed to make your point without coming across as desperate, or making your ex feel like she has a lot of power over you, which she doesn't want.

For example: You might say something along the lines of, â€œBefore you say anything, I just want to apologize to you for what happened. I know that I stuffed up, which caused you a lot of pain and would have been very disappointing for you. For that, I am truly sorry. Of course, I donâ€™t expect you to forget about it or forgive me just because Iâ€™m apologizing to you. However, I do want you to know that Iâ€™m not that guy anymore. It was a hard lesson for me to learn, but I have learned from my mistakes and Iâ€™ve become a better man as a result. Iâ€™m not saying that you have to be with this better version of me. Iâ€™m just saying that life events like this happen for a reason. Sometimes, you learn things and want to change to become a better version of yourself. Anyway, Iâ€™m sorry for what I put you through.â€

The cool thing about asking an ex to forgive you like this is that she suddenly stops looking at you in such a negative way.

She stops focusing on your past mistakes and she starts feeling impressed by what she perceives as your new level of emotional maturity.

As a result, she drops her guard a bit and begins to feel comfortable about interacting with you again.

Then, when she continues to experience the new you every time she talks to you on the phone, or meets up with you in person, it becomes that much more difficult for her to keep stopping herself from feeling attracted to you, or feeling respectful towards you.

You and her then naturally begin to hug, kiss, have sex and fall in love with each other again.

The next thing you can do when talking to your ex girlfriend isâ€¦!

3. Don't let her make the problems between you and her out to be bigger than they are

Some women love to create drama after a break up.

For example: A woman might shout or begin to cry when talking to her ex to make the situation become more emotional than it is.

She might cry, sob and say things like, â€œI canâ€™t believe Iâ€™m even talking to you after the way you treated me. I hope you don't think you're going to talk me into giving you another chance because our issues are just too big to be able to work out. It's totally impossible for me to be able to overlook everything that happened. I simply don't trust you to anymore. You have ruined my life! I hate you!

Naturally, when a guy is on the receiving end of that kind of behavior, his first reaction might be to try and calm his ex down by apologizing to her even more and maybe even accepting the blame for everything that happened between them.

Yet, here's the thing!

Allowing your ex girlfriend to blow what happened between you and her out of proportion is the worst thing you can do.

Not only are you allowing her to create fake drama (by exaggerating what went wrong between you and her), but she will lose respect for you for not being able to stand up to her (in a loving, but assertive way) when you know she's acting like a drama queen.

So, rather than letting it get to you when your ex girlfriend starts making a big deal out of what happened, just use it as an opportunity to spark some of her feelings for you instead.

How?

By maintaining your confidence around her and using humor to break through her defenses and make her laugh and smile.

For example: You might say in a joking, teasing way, I agree with you. Our problems are huge, enormous and unlike any other relationship out there. There's no way we could ever work things out between us, so why even bother? You're right! The best course of action is to just give up and hate each other instead. We can walk away saying, I hate you and you hate me. There, that sounds like a good solution, right? and have a laugh with her about that.

Initially, she might be shocked that you're not taking her fake drama seriously and might say something like, Hey, I'm being serious! If you're going to make fun of me like that I'm not going to talk to you anymore, to see if you'll panic and try to calm her down by agreeing with her.

Yet, deep down, she will be feeling rushes of respect for you for not buying into the fake drama that she's creating.

She will realize that you have manned up and are now the sort of man who can handle a woman like her.

If she has struggled to find a guy who can handle her level of confidence, then she will naturally feel attracted to you and worried about losing you.

She will know that other women struggle to find a guy who doesn't buckle under their fake pressure and if one of those women meets you, she will naturally feel attracted to you.

If that woman happens to be prettier than her, you might just decide to get with her instead, which will leave your ex feeling rejected and left behind.

As a result, she wants to hold onto what is hers, so she opens up to keeping the relationship going and seeing what happens.

The next thing you can do when talking to your ex girlfriend is!

4. Create a fun, easy-going vibe between you and her

[image: Create a fun, easy-going vibe between you and her]

After a break up, a couple that used to be in love and treat each other well can suddenly begin to feel like total strangers around each other.

In the past, you and her would laugh, hug, kiss and spend as much time as possible around each other.

You were lovers, but you also felt like best friends at times, or maybe all of the time.

You were so great together.

Yet, now, she treats you like someone she used to know.

Thereâs a distance between you.

You feel disconnected now.

So, what should you do?

Itâs absolutely essential that donât get sucked into feeling like a stranger around her, just because she is acting that way towards you.

As a man, you always have to be more emotionally strong than the woman and create a dynamic based on what you want to have happen, rather than following her lead.

In the case of talking to your ex girlfriend again, this means creating a fun, easy-going vibe between you and her, rather than suddenly being very polite, reserved, uptight and unsure of yourself around her.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ

- Making her laugh, smile and feel good to be in interacting with you again over the phone and face-to-face.
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you, rather than pretending youâre over her now and just want to be her neutral friend.
- Showing her your confidence and emotional strength, especially if sheâs trying to make you feel nervous or insecure about yourself by saying that sheâs not interested in you anymore.
- Being more emotionally masculine in the way you think, talk, behave and react when interacting with her, rather than giving her too much power over you (e.g. by being too nice, doing everything she tells you to do).

The more relaxed and happy she feels around you, the more respect and attraction she will feel for you.

She will then realize that you really are a new and improved man now and that she actually does feel differently about you now.

When that happens, she will then become curious and intrigued about her new feelings for you and want to explore them, rather than cutting you off and then potentially regretting it later on (i.e. seeing you with a new woman who she might see as being prettier than her, or her getting with a guy who turns out to be boring and never makes her feel the way you did).

From there, you need toâ

5. Get to a kiss and then sex if possible

If you've successfully built up your ex's sexual and romantic feelings for you during the interaction, getting her to give you a hug really shouldn't be too difficult.

So, don't avoid it out of fear of her rejecting you.

Do it.

As long as you maintain your confidence and say something along the lines of, Anyway, it's good to see that after everything we've been through together, we can still hang out as friends. I'm proud of us for being so mature about it and not behaving like those exes you hear about who can't be in the same room with each other without getting into a huge fight. Don't you think we deserve a hug for being so cool with each other? I do. Come here. Come here and give me a hug.

Then, move towards her with your arms out and initiate the hug.

Note: Even though you say something like, Come here and give me a hug to a woman, it doesn't mean that you sit there waiting for her to come over.

That works on women who are really attracted to you and excited to be around you, but on an ex who is feeling attracted again, but doesn't want to seem too easy, it won't work.

This is why you have to move in about 80-90% of the way to initiate the hug and then let her move in for the rest of the distance.

If you've been reactivating her feelings for you throughout the interaction, she will almost certainly be more than happy to give you a hug.

Then, just go ahead and confidently take her in your arms and give her a gentle, but firm squeeze for about 5-10 seconds.

If she seems open to continuing the hug (e.g. she remains in your arms longer than necessary, she nuzzles into your neck, she looks up at you and smiles), then just lean back a little while continuing to hold her and give her a kiss on the lips.

If she doesn't pull away, go ahead and deepen the kiss and make it a passionate one that lasts 10-15 seconds or so (i.e. if you're at her home or your home, or if you and her are fine about kissing in public).

From there, if you're out in public, you can suggest going to your place or hers to hang out and then hook up with her sexually.

By the way!

If she pulls away from you when you try to kiss her, or she doesn't want to go to your place or hers, don't let it bother you.

Instead, just maintain your confidence and don't worry about it or try to push for it.

Continue showing her that you've transformed yourself into the kind of man that she can now look up to, respect and feel attracted to in every interaction you have with you.

The more you do that, the more doubts she will begin to have about breaking up with you and will naturally want to kiss you and have sex with you to see how she feels afterwards.

Where Guys Go Wrong With an Ex Girlfriend Who Has Agreed to Talk After a Break Up

So, your ex girlfriend agreed to talk.

That's the good news.

Congrats and well done.

The bad news however, is that if you don't approach the interaction in the right way, you may end up turning her off further and ruining your efforts to get her back.

This is why you need to avoid making any of these mistakes!

1. Turning it into an exhausting, deep and meaningful conversation

The time will definitely come when you and your ex girlfriend will get into a deep, meaningful conversation about the relationship.

However, the first time you meet up with her to talk usually isn't that time.

It can be, if you approach it in a light-hearted, easy-going way after she has become sexually and romantically attracted to you again, but you have to be careful with how much time you spend on the topic and how draining it feels for her to be talking about.

So, if you don't want your ex girlfriend to feel too pressured to the point where the conversation becomes draining and exhausting, don't be too serious about everything.

Instead, focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you again.

The better she feels when she's around you, the less negative her perception of you becomes.

She then begins to relax and open back up to you and the possibility of being a relationship again.

If the topic of the relationship comes up, be totally fine to talk about it, but light-hearted and easy-going about it.

Don't make it feel like a huge problem, or make her feel drained by going on and on about your feelings for her, or your journey to become a better man and all things you've learned.

Just be attractive to her by making her smile, laugh and feel good and relaxed to be around you again.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Coming across as needing her way more than she needs you

Although it's probably a relief to you that your ex girlfriend has agreed to talk, giving her the impression that you've been lost, lonely and unable to move forward with your life without her is a big no, no.

Here's the thing!

Even though a woman does want to be with a guy who is loving, caring and committed to her, she also needs him to be his own man (i.e. emotionally independent, making progress towards his biggest goals in life regardless of whether she is with him or not).

So, if a woman gets a sense that her ex guy needs her back to feel happy and fulfilled in life again, rather than feeling flattered that he's so emotionally dependent on her, she feels more turned off by him.

She doesn't want to be responsible for supporting him emotionally and making him feel worthy, confident and happy in his life.

She wants him to have those things on his own and to do them for his own reasons, rather than needing her support and encouragement to be able to feel that way.

This is why, you need to show your ex girlfriend that even though you truly care for her and want her back, you are perfectly happy without her.

Basically, you want her back, but you don't need her back.

Don't rub that in her face though.

Just let her sense that you don't need her back, but that you do love her and are open to getting back with her.

Of course, only let her get that sense after you have made her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

Remember what I said earlier: Attraction first and everything else after that.

It's a simple, easy-to-remember and always applicable and effective rule when it comes to relationships with women.

Always focus on making the woman feel attracted to you first, before you get to anything else in the interaction.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Playing too hard to get, which then makes her feel insecure and close up around you

Sometimes, a woman will agree to talk to her ex to see if it's possible for them to work things out before she decides to fully move on without him.

Yet, the guy then decides to play hard to get by acting like he doesn't care about her at all, which then causes her to feel insecure and close up around him.

He wants to hurt her a little bit for breaking up with him in the way she did.

Alternatively, he wants to make himself appear valuable in her eyes so she will give him another chance.

Alternatively, he is hurting bad and wants to put on an act of bravado around her to show that he doesn't care, when he really does.

Unfortunately, playing too hard to get with an ex woman almost always backfires.

The woman usually walks away, blocks his number and unfriends him on social media so he can't easily get in touch with her again.

She doesn't want him rubbing her face in the mud and making her feel bad about the break up anymore, so she focuses on hooking up with a new guy as quickly as possible to get over her ex and move on.

So, if you truly want to talk with your ex so that you can work things out and get back together again, don't mess her around by playing unnecessary mind games.

Instead, just focus on reawakening her feelings of respect and attraction, so you can bring down her defenses and get her back.

It's a simple, straightforward process and it works.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

4 Examples of How to Respond to Blunt Texts From an Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

To begin with, just reply withâ€¦!

1. Lolâ€¦!

This shows her that you see her fake, annoyed or disinterested behavior in a funny way.

Youâ€¦â€¦re not worried or taking her too seriously.

Instead, you still feel confident about yourself, even though she is being blunt and trying to put you off or make you feel uncertain about where you stand with her.

Remember: Women are naturally attracted to confidence in men, so when you project a confident, self-assured energy, she will naturally look at you in a more positive light, even if she pretends not to.

Donâ€¦â€¦t be afraid to show her that youâ€¦â€¦re not intimidated by her bluntness.

Let her see that, even though you still have feelings for her and want her back, you donâ€¦â€¦t actually need her back, or even need her to be nice to you, to feel confident about yourself and your value to her.

You donâ€¦â€¦t need her to send nice, sweet, friendly texts to feel good about yourself.

You already feel good about yourself.

The more she notices that youâ€¦â€¦re not falling for her bad behavior (i.e. because youâ€¦â€¦re not getting upset and asking her why sheâ€¦â€¦s being so blunt towards you), the more she will begin to feel rushes of respect for you again.

Even though she probably wonâ€¦â€¦t openly admit it to you, she will be impressed that youâ€¦â€¦re being an emotionally strong, independent man who is handling her bluntness in a confident way.

As she begins to respect you, she will also start to feel some sexual and romantic attraction and that is the opening you need to begin getting her back.

Another example of how to respond to blunt texts from your ex isâ€¦!

2. Use humor to bring her guard down

[image: Use humor to bring her guard down]

Humor is a very effective way to make a woman stop putting up walls every time she gets a text from you.

Humor via text, even though she probably wonâ€¦â€¦t admit it to you, will make her smile, laugh and feel happy to be hearing from you.

When she is laughing and smiling, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to be blunt or bitchy towards you.

So, donâ€¦â€¦t be afraid to use humor to diffuse the tension between you and her and make her look forward to your texts.

For example: Imagine that you send your ex a text to say hi and she responds with something along the lines of, â€œWhat do you want?â€œ

She will likely be expecting you to get upset and possibly even respond with something like, â€œWhy are you being so blunt with me? I contacted you to say hi because really wanted to know if youâ€™re okay. Iâ€™ve already told you that Iâ€™m sorry for what happened. Canâ€™t we at least try to be civil to each other?â€

Instead of reacting to her bluntness in a negative way, you can shock her (in a good way) by being emotionally strong and taking the risk to joke with her.

So, when she texts you something blunt like, â€œWhat do you want?â€ you might reply with something like, â€œI want me to cook me that noodle dish you used to make. Iâ€™m hungry, so get in the kitchen. Iâ€™ll come overâ€ and then add a smiley face emoji with the tongue sticking out ð€œ

She will likely smile or laugh at your response and she will be wondering, â€œI thought he would respond by trying to suck up to me, but instead heâ€™s being funny. This is so unlike him. What has gotten into him?â€

She then becomes more open to texting back and forth to see if you really have changed or if your confident, fearless reply was just an act.

By the wayâ€

She will likely continue being blunt to you for a little while longer to make sure that your confidence wasnâ€™t just a front.

So, be prepared for that.

She may even act (yes, act) like she is angry.

Donâ€™t take it seriously.

If you joke around with someone, you have not done anything wrong.

If they get angry about it, they know that theyâ€™re being ridiculous.

So, donâ€™t ever worry if a woman youâ€™re in a relationship with, or an ex woman gets angry over a joke.

That is her issue, not yours.

Of course, not all women who have been sending blunt texts to their ex guy react in the same way.

Some will send a rolling eyes emoji to act unimpressed by the joke, some will send an angry face, some will send a smiley face with a tongue sticking out and some will send nothing.

This is why, by the way, you shouldnâ€™t try to get your ex back just via text.

Sometimes, you just need to have the balls to call her, even if you think she doesnâ€™t want to hear from youâ€

Get her on a call so she can sense the new and more confident, emotionally stronger version of you is for real.

When she notices that you really have changed, her guard will come down and she will become more open to meeting up with you in person to see how she feels.

Another example of how to respond to blunt texts from your ex isâ€

3. Stop trying to get her to want a relationship via text

This is one of the main reasons why a woman will be blunt when texting her ex.

The romantic feelings aren't mutual and the guy is either asking for another chance, or hinting at it. As a result, she keeps her guard up and thinks something along the lines of, â€œHe still hasn't realized that we have broken up for a reason. He thinks that all he has to do is say that he's sorry and then I will magically want to be his woman again. What he doesn't get, is that I don't have romantic feelings for him anymore. He hasn't even awoken my feelings yet. He wants me back, but I still don't even want him back. So, even though he's going on and on about how much he cares for me and how he thinks we can work things out, all I feel like want to do is to get on with my life.â€

As a result, she then responds to his texts in a blunt way, in the hope that he will give up and leave her alone.

Here's the thing|

Getting back into a relationship is the last step of the ex back process, not the first, second or third.

The first step is to reactivate your ex's feelings of respect, attraction and love for you in person, so that she wants to get back together again.

That's how it works.

Attraction first, relationship last.

So, don't push for a relationship if you haven't re-sparked her feelings for you, because she won't respond favorably to you.

Another example of how to respond to blunt texts from your ex is|

4. Make sure that you're not being super nice, or sucking up to her via text

After a break up, a guy might make the mistake of being on his very best behavior when texting his ex, in the hope that she will then forgive him and open up to giving him another chance because of how good he is being to her.

Yet, in most cases, sucking up to a woman has the opposite effect when it comes to romantic relationships.

Here's the thing|

If a woman smells desperation from a guy, she gets turned off because she perceives the guy as being too emotionally weak and wimpy for her.

It also gives her a false sense of superiority over him, which makes her end up thinking that she is more valuable than him, even though she isn't.

Then, rather than think, â€œAwww, he's really such a sweet guy to me, even when I'm being a bitch to him. That must mean he really loves me. Maybe I should lighten up and give him another chance,â€ she instead thinks things like, â€œIt's so annoying to see a grown man act like a total wuss because he thinks that sucking up to me is the key to getting me back. The funny thing is that if I had any doubts before, him being such a doormat after the break up has convinced me that I made the right decision to end things with him. I can now move on without any regrets. He's not the one for me. He's not man enough for a woman like me.â€

A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy that submits to her and allows her to walk all over him, just so that he can get her back.

So, if you want to stop getting blunt texts from your ex, make sure that she doesn't perceive you as being desperate.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should be mean to her, treat her with disdain or disrespect or act like you don't care about her.

Instead, focus on interacting with her in a confident, self-assured way, where you are being good to her, but aren't letting her walk all over you.

When she can see for herself that you're not bothered by her bluntness and are turning the tables on her by making her laugh and smile, she will automatically feel respect and attraction for you.

She will then become open to talking on the phone and meeting up in person, making it so much easier for you to fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Where Guys Go Wrong With an Ex Who is Being Blunt Via Text

Now that you have a better idea of how to respond to blunt texts from an ex, here are a few mistakes to avoid making:

1. Thinking that text is the only way to get her back

Sometimes a guy assumes that because his ex said things like, "Don't bother calling me, because I won't answer" when they originally broke up, the only way to get in touch with her is via text.

By only texting her, he might also be secretly hoping that she will be impressed about the fact that he is following her instructions (i.e. not calling her).

He may also think, "I will tell her how I feel via text and she can have time to think about it. Maybe that will make her react in a better way, rather than rejecting me on a phone call."

Yet, in almost all ex back cases, the opposite is actually true. Why?

If a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her ex guy, getting a text from him where he trying to get her back only turns her off even more.

Why?

She realizes that he has romantic feelings for her, but she doesn't feel the same way about him.

Think about how that plays out when guys are trying to pick up women or get a woman out on a date.

When the romantic feelings aren't mutual, the woman doesn't react well to offers that seem as though the guy is after a relationship.

The same applies to the ex back process.

So, if a guy is trying to get his ex back purely via text and is trying to convey his feelings or work things out with her (so he can get a relationship), her guard will remain up.

Then, instead of opening up to the idea of talking to him over the phone and meeting up with him in person, she instinctively feels turned off and doesn't like the idea of texting with him.

Additionally, because she can't see his body language, hear the tonality of his voice, or judge his actions and behavior in person or on a phone call, she will almost certainly assume that he is hiding behind texts because he hasn't really changed or improved anything about himself and is too afraid to face her in person, where she will be able to see it for herself.

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

Although texting an ex to break the ice is perfectly fine (especially if sheâ€¦s not answering her phone), itâ€¦s not very effective in making her want to have a relationship again.

Instead, when she realizes that her ex doesnâ€¦t have the courage or motivation to call or meet up with her and instead he just wants to hide behind the safety of text messages, she will almost certainly feel annoyed and turned off by him and what heâ€¦s trying to achieve with her.

She will then respond to his texts as bluntly as possible in the hope that he will get the message (i.e. that sheâ€¦s not interested) and leave her alone.

At the same time, she will focus even more on moving on by finding herself a replacement man.

Then, if or when her ex finally plucks up the courage to call her sometime in the future, she can then say to him, â€¦Sorry, but itâ€¦s too late. Iâ€¦m in a relationship now and it would be disrespectful towards him to continue speaking with you, so please donâ€¦t call me or text me again. I donâ€¦t want to ruin what I have with him. Youâ€¦ve done enough damage in my life. Just accept that itâ€¦s over. Goodbye.â€¦

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

2. Thinking that she would be annoyed or would never answer if you called her

Maybe she would, maybe she wonâ€¦t.

However, isnâ€¦t it worth the risk?

At least if you do call her and she reacts by seeming a bit annoyed, you can use that as an opportunity to spark her feelings for you by using humor to turn her bad mood around by getting her laughing and smiling.

On the other hand, if you only stick to texting, she will probably stop replying to you sooner rather than later and then what will you do?

Text her more?

It almost certainly wonâ€¦t work.

I hear from guys all the time whoâ€¦ve been blocked by their ex woman for doing it.

So, donâ€¦t be afraid of the dreaded phone call, even if you think she might not like it initially or she prefers text.

It doesnâ€¦t matter what she prefers.

What matters is what works.

Just get her laughing, smiling and enjoying talking with you on a phone call and you will be so much more likely to get her happily agreeing to meet up with you and then actually turning up to see you.

Then, you wonâ€¦t have to waste the next few months of your life trying to have a text conversation with her that leads to nowhere.

She goes from replying in a blunt way, to not replying at all.

Meanwhile, she has been moving on without you and just doesnâ€¦t care anymore.

Donâ€¦t put yourself through that kind of heartache.

Just text her and then call her.

Attract her on the call by getting her smiling, laughing and feeling good to be talking to you again. Then, meet up with her in person, build on her attraction and get to a hug, kiss and possibly even sex if both you and her are up for it.

If you approach it that way, you are so much more likely to get her back and fast.

Yet, if you stick to texts, you're probably going to end up being left behind by a woman who would've gotten back together with you if you approached the ex back process in another way.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Giving up on calling her if she doesn't answer the first time he tries

[image: Don't give up on her if she doesn't answer your call the first time]

Most women won't make it easy for a guy to get them back the first time he tries.

So, in many cases, a woman will initially ignore her ex's calls to see if he's going to give up right away, or if he will remain confident enough to keep trying.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should bombard your ex with call after call until she picks up the phone.

Instead, it simply means you shouldn't always give up at the first sign of resistance.

If your ex doesn't answer her phone right away, just try again the next day, or the next time she's texting back and forth you.

If she still doesn't answer your call, here's an example of what to do to make sure that you will finally get through to her:

- Try to call her at a time when you know she's most likely to be available to take your call (i.e. don't call her when she's at work or university, or on a Friday or Saturday night when she might be busy or pretend to be busy).
- If she doesn't answer, send her this text: Â â€œHey, I'm trying to get in touch with you to ask you something, but I haven't been able to reach you. It's not serious, but I do need to talk to you on the phone quickly. I'll give you a call tonight at about 6PM so that we can talk. It'll only take a minute.â€œ
- She might then reply with something along the lines of, Â â€œI'm really busy, what do you want to ask me?â€œ or, Â â€œI've got plans for tonight. Tell me now.â€œ
- Regardless of how she responds, don't make the mistake of texting back and forth with her. Instead, just say that you'll tell her when you call her tonight, or just call her right away.

In most cases, a woman will be curious to find out what you want to talk about, so she will answer the phone.

You can then call her, make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again and arrange to meet up with her in person so you can then fully reactivate her feelings and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

4. Taking her bluntness so seriously that you allow it to kill your confidence

Sometimes a guy might fall into the trap of taking every blunt text his ex woman sends to in a negative way.

As a result, he may end up thinking things like, What does she mean by that? or She sounds like she hates me right now or, Does that mean she is completely over me? or, Why did she use an exclamation mark (!)? Why does she seem so blunt? Does it mean that she has finally decided that she wants nothing to do with me?

He's taking her texted words too seriously and putting a negative slant on them, even though she might be missing him and just playing hard to get.

He can't know that of course, because it's just text, which is why I always recommend that men grow a pair of balls and call their ex woman.

If a guy doesn't do that and instead, continues to hide behind the 'safety' of text messages, then he will usually get nowhere with his ex woman.

She will continue to be blunt and he will naturally lose more and more confidence in himself and in his ability to re-attract her and get her back.

In many cases, what the guy doesn't realize is that the more he doubts himself and his attractiveness and value to her, the more unattractive he is becoming to her.

Here's the thing!

If a woman senses that a guy needs her to be nice to him via text (or in person) so he can feel better about himself and feel worthy enough to follow through and get her back, it will actually turn her off him even more.

Women are attracted to men who are confident in their attractiveness to a woman, without needing a woman's constant approval or niceness to feel that way about themselves.

In other words, the guy is independently confident.

His confidence isn't dependent on her being supportive, encouraging and nice.

He knows that he is good enough for her and as a result, it comes through in how he talks, behaves and takes action and she then naturally feels attracted to him.

So, if a guy loses confidence in himself at the first sign of resistance from his ex woman, she won't be able to fully respect him and feel attracted to him.

She will feel disappointed by his lack of emotional strength and will become even more motivated to move on and find a replacement guy fast.

This is why it's very important that you maintain your confidence, no matter what your ex says or does to test you.

When she can see that no matter what she throws at you to test your confidence, you remain emotionally strong, then she won't be able to stop feeling rushes of respect and attraction for you again.

She will then drop her guard and then, getting her back becomes a matter of you taking the lead and making it happen.

Another mistake to avoid is!

5. Slowly turning her off or annoying her via text until she stops replying

In some cases, a guy will be receiving blunt replies from his ex woman because he has been unknowingly annoying her, by:

- Texting her too often (sometimes even multiple times a day).
- Being too nice and sucking up to her.
- Trying to discuss the relationship and asking her what he needs to do to make her give him another chance. (You should never try to have discussions via text with an ex. Get on a call, make her smile and laugh and then arrange to talk to her in person).
- Appearing insecure and nervous.
- Asking her too many questions.
- Trying to have an in-depth conversation via text when she's busy.

She then ends up thinking things like, “This is so annoying. Why is he bothering me like this? What do I have to do to make him understand that I’m not interested in texting back and forth with him? I mean, I’ve already tried being blunt and he still won’t stop bothering me. If I wasn’t convinced about the break up before, I am now. He’s just proven to me that the only thing he knows how to do is make me feel annoyed and turned off. I don’t feel good with him. I want a man that I feel good with. This relationship isn’t fun. He doesn’t get that. He’s annoying me.”

She then stops responding to him altogether, or she blocks his number on her phone so she doesn’t have to deal with him anymore.

Then, getting her back becomes much more difficult for him.

So, if you don’t want to end up annoying your ex girlfriend and turning her off more than you probably have already, just stop texting her and get her on a call with you right away, so you can then re-attract her and get her to meet up with you in person.

On a phone call, it’s so much easier for her to see that you’ve changed and improved since the break up.

As she listens to you talk and notices that you are making her smile and laugh, she realizes that she’s feeling some respect and attraction for you again.

She then allows some of her defenses to come down and becomes more open to seeing you in person and exploring her new feelings for you.

In person, you can then show her that you really are a new man now and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Break Up Etiquette: 4 Examples of What Not to Do

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

1. Don't try to get her back just via text

Trying to text an ex back is probably one of the biggest mistakes guys make after a break up.

A guy will assume, â€œShe's not going to want to talk to me on the phone or in person right now. So, rather than annoy her by calling her, I'll just text her and let things play out from there. She'll probably appreciate it that I'm not being pushy and she will then open up to me again so that we can work things out.â€

Yet, while that is fine initially, it's not fine if it turns into a huge, ongoing conversation via text.

A few texts that then lead to a phone call are ideal, but just don't try to get her back via text.

You've got to have the balls to call when the moment is right!

Some women are okay with a few initial texts, but some women just hate that their ex is trying to get them back by messaging and expecting decent replies from her.

Why?

Firstly, getting texts from an ex that she doesn't have feelings for anymore is usually quite annoying to a woman, because it's time consuming for her (i.e. she keeps having to stop doing whatever doing to respond to a guy that she no longer fully respects, feels attracted to or loves), so it can easily turn her off and make her want to block her ex and free herself up to move on in peace.

Secondly, most women feel turned off when a guy is putting way too much effort into typing long, detailed texts and trying to work through relationship problems via messages.

Even young women who prefer texts see that as a half-assed effort to get her back, which makes her feel irritated and insulted.

So, rather than think, â€œHe's being so sweet. I love that he's trying to work things out with me via text first before he calls me on the phone or meets up with me in person!â€ she instead thinks things like, â€œIf this is his idea of re-attracting me and getting me back, he's in for a big surprise! Doesn't he realize that it's going to take a lot more than a bunch of words on a screen to convince me that he's changed? Nothing about his little texts are giving me confidence that things would be different this time around. Instead, all I can sense is a guy who doesn't have the balls or the confidence to pick up the phone and talk to me like a man, or call me and arrange to catch up and say hello in person. Instead, he's just hiding behind text messages and waiting for me to make it easy for him by telling him that I want him back. Well that's not going to happen. I'm not going to make this easy for him if he's just texting me and doesn't have the balls to call and face me. I'm also not going to waste any more time texting back and forth with him. I'm done with him! He'll see that when I start moving on and posting photos on social media. He'll get it then.â€

She then either blocks his number, stops responding to him altogether, or strings him along for a bit longer, while she actively focuses on finding herself a replacement guy or tries to go out and post photos of herself having fun with friends and guys.

So, if you don't want that to happen to you, don't hide behind texts thinking that it's good break up etiquette in today's world, or the best way to get an ex woman back.

Instead, start reactivating your ex's feelings of respect and attraction for you on a phone call and then follow through with a meet up, where she can see for herself that you really are a new and improved man now.

That's the real, fast, manly way to get a woman back, regardless of how young or old she is.

When you make her have feelings for you again in person and she feels rushes of love and attraction for you, she naturally wants to get back with you.

Yet, when you hide behind texts, even if you're great at texting it just doesn't make a woman feel the same kind of way that she'd feel on a phone call or in person.

The next break up etiquette example of what not to do is

2. Don't leave it too long until you start the ex back process

[image: Don't leave it too long until you start the ex back process]

Some guys wait 30 or 60 days before they make a move to get their ex back.

This is referred to as the No Contact Rule and what most guys don't realize is that it rarely works on women.

Many times, a guy will hope that the longer he waits, the more his ex woman will miss him.

Then, when she just can't stand not hearing from him anymore, she will give him a sign that she's open to working things out and they can get back together again.

Unfortunately though, it almost never works out that way.

Why?

To begin with, when a woman breaks up with a guy, she's usually disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him and is instead filled with negative emotions such as anger, annoyance and indifference.

So, when her ex guy doesn't do anything to get her back, or even worse, he ignores her for weeks or months, it usually just helps her get over him faster and move on.

Alternatively, a woman might be waiting around and hoping that her ex will do something to re-spark her feelings for him, so that they can work things out.

Yet, the longer she waits for him to eventually call and make a move, the more disappointed she feels that he's not following through with getting her back.

She may then begin thinking things like, "I guess he never loved me after all. He's not even trying to get me back. Instead, he's playing it cool and ignoring me. Well, I'm done waiting about for him. There are so many guys who find me attractive and want to go out with me and I'm not going to discourage them any longer. I'm going to move on and find myself a new man who does want to be with me, rather than wait around for him. It's over. It's time to move on."

She then focuses on fully getting over him and moving on, by having sex with a new man or a number of new men.

Then, by the time her ex realizes that she's not chasing after him, it's usually too late because she will have hooked up with someone else and possibly even have fallen in love with him as well.

So, if your intention is to get your ex back, don't waste time playing mind games with her and hoping she will come running back to you one day, if you just give her enough time.

Instead, interact with her and actively reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so she naturally wants to give your relationship another try now.

The more you spark her feelings for you now, the more she wants to hug you, kiss you, have sex with you and get back together now.

The next break up etiquette example of what not to do is

3. Don't try to get her back if you're offering her the same attraction experience

Sometimes when a guy gets broken up with, he gets so caught up thinking about how badly he wants his ex back, that he forgets to prepare himself to re-attract her sexually and romantically.

So, rather than quickly learning from his mistakes and making some attractive changes to his thinking, behavior and the way he interacts and responds to what his ex says and does, he basically just remains the same.

He might think back to what attracted her the first time around (e.g. he sent her flowers, wrote her long sappy love letters, bought her thoughtful gifts, was extra nice and sweet to her and agreed with whatever she decided) and assume that his original approach worked, so it will work on her again.

Yet, she rejects him when he does that because it's now an ex back situation, not a new, dating relationship where she is romantically interested in him and therefore, appreciative of things like flowers or sweet behavior.

So, if her ex tries to use old, outdated approaches to re-attract her, it makes her realize that he has absolutely no idea what is attractive to a woman when in a relationship and when considering getting back with an ex.

As a result, she will continue to reject him by saying things like, "Sorry, but I'm not interested. You need to accept that. I mean, why won't you stop bothering me? I thought I made myself clear when I said I don't want to be with you anymore. What do I have to say or do to convince you that it's over between us and that nothing is going to change my mind? It's over!"

This is why it's very important that when you try to get your ex back, you offer her a new and improved attraction experience.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are

- Instead of putting up with her bad behavior like you used to (e.g. when she sulks or throws a tantrum, when she demands that you do things her way), you stand up to her and put her back in her place in a loving, but assertive manner.
- Instead of being needy and clingy in the way that you think, behave and talk, you start being a truly confident man around her who loves her and wants her, but who doesn't need her.
- Instead of copying her way of being (e.g. being too emotional and wanting to discuss your feelings with her all the time), you start being more emotionally masculine.
- Instead of feeling insecure and unsure of yourself around her, you are now more confident and self-assured.
- Instead of being a nice guy who doesn't do anything without her say-so, you start being more assertive, in a loving, respectful manner.

- Instead of just talking to her in a neutral way like a friend, you now flirt with her and make her feel like a sexy desirable woman.

The more that you give her the kind of attraction experience she always wanted from you, but never got, the more she feels like she just has to give you another chance, or else she might end up regretting it and missing you.

When make her feel that way, her sexual and romantic feelings for you begin flooding back and you can then get her back and enjoy a new relationship.

The next break up etiquette example of what not to do isâ€¦!

4. Don't promise that things will be better this time if she gives you a chance

As tempting as it might be to say something along the lines of, â€œI know I stuffed up, but I promise you that this time things will be better. I won't make the same mistakes again. I give you my word,â€ your ex probably won't believe you, because she's likely heard it or something similar from you at least once or twice before.

So, what should you do instead?

Let her pick up on the changes in you when she interacts with you.

Let her decide for herself if you have changed.

Don't tell her.

Let her pick up on it.

Women are very good at noticing the subtle changes in the behavior of men, which indicate a man's confidence, emotional masculinity and self-esteem.

When you're talking to her on the phone or in person, she will be able to sense that you're now a different man to the one she broke up with (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more emotionally masculine, more ballsy).

It will naturally come through in how you talk to her, what you say and how you react to what she says and does, without you having to say anything to her about it.

So, don't bother making promises to your ex about how things will be different this time, or try to detail all the little things you've changed about yourself to hopefully hear her say, â€œOkay, good boy. You can have another chance now.â€

Instead, just be the new, improved, more confident and emotionally strong version of yourself when you talk to her and she will pick up on it.

However, even when she gets to the point where she can see that you really have changed, you shouldn't be asking her for a relationship or commitment.

Always remember: A relationship is the final step of the ex back process, not the first or second.

That means, before even getting to the point where you suggest having a relationship again, you have to first re-attract her and get to a kiss or sex.

Focus on getting to kissing and sex again and a relationship will naturally begin to be discussed or considered after that.

By the wayâ€¦!

If you're not sure how to go about re-attracting her, here are a few examples to help you get started:

- Make sure that you believe in yourself and in your value to her, rather than feeling as though you're not good enough for her, which she will pick up on and feel turned off about.
- Be aware that she's going to test you (e.g. by being cold, mean or catty towards you), so make sure that you maintain your confidence with her, rather than needing her to be nice, gentle and friendly in order for you to feel confident.
- Use humor to snap her out of her defensive shell and make her smile, laugh and feel relaxed to be around you again, rather than stressing her out by getting into deep, emotional, drawn out discussions about the relationship.
- Don't be afraid to flirt with her and create some sexual tension between you, rather acting like just a friend.
- Show her (via your actions, behavior and conversation style) that you're now a new and improved man that she can truly look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, rather than continuing to make the same old attraction mistakes as you did before.

Once you've reawakened her feelings of respect and attraction for you again, you can then progress to hugging, kissing, sex and a new and improved relationship.

3 Common Problems You Might Experience Now That You and Her Have Broken Up Getting an ex back is easier than most guys think it is.

It's all about the approach you take.

Say and do things that are attractive to your ex (e.g. be ballsy, make her laugh and smile) and her defenses will naturally come down.

On the other hand, say and do things that are unattractive to her and she will close up further and possibly double her efforts to get over you and move on.

So, to make sure that things go smoothly for you and you are able to interact with her in an attractive way, it's important that you are aware of the following common problems that guys experience after a break up with a woman!

1. She makes all sorts of unreasonable demands and you accept it

Sometimes, a woman will try to get rid of her ex by giving him unreasonable demands in the hope that he will eventually get fed up and leave her alone.

Example: She might tell him not to call her for 30 days because she needs time to figure out how she really feels about him.

Alternatively, she might say something like, "You can only reply if I text you, but I don't want you to initiate contact with me first, or I will get annoyed and stop responding to you altogether."

Another example is when a woman tells her ex that he can only call her on a specific day of the week at a pre-arranged time, or she won't answer his call.

However, if he just does what she tells him and never stands up to her in a loving, but assertive way or laughs at her for being so silly and unreasonable, then she will perceive him as being too emotionally weak and wimpy for her and will feel convinced that she has made the right decision to break up with him.

So, whatever you do, don't become a doormat to your ex, just because you want her back.

Contrary to what you might believe, she actually wants you to stand up to her, as long as you do it in a loving, but assertive manner.

If you don't stand up to her in moments like that, she will feel more emotionally dominant than you and won't be able to respect you.

If she doesn't respect you, she won't be able to feel sexually attracted to you and without those two all-important feelings, she won't be motivated to give you another chance.

Another problem you might experience when trying to get your ex back is that

2. You feel unwelcome to get her back because she seemed so certain of her decision when she left you

Some guys make the mistake of thinking that because a woman said, "My feelings for you are dead and nothing will ever change that," it really means that is final.

He then worries that if he tries to get her back, she will get angry, close herself off even more and then he won't even be able to keep her in his life as a friend.

So, rather than risking losing her as a potential friend, he does nothing.

Yet, here's the thing!

If you don't actively re-attract your ex, it's highly unlikely that she will change how she feels on her own and want you back.

Instead, she will almost certainly end up feeling nothing for you or not much, which will cause her to move on by finding herself a man who makes her feel attracted and in love.

Don't let that happen to you.

If you want to get your ex back, it's best to actively make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again by interacting with her.

So, don't be afraid to call her on the phone and meet up with her in person and do whatever it takes to reawaken her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you (e.g. flirt with her, make her laugh and smile, show her that you're a new man now).

When you make her feel attracted to you again in a way that feels good to her, she naturally drops her guard and no longer feels sure about her decision to break up with you.

As a result, it becomes so much easier for you to get her back, or at least sleep with her again (and do a great job of it) to make her feel even more unsure about her decision to leave you.

Another problem you might experience when trying to get your ex back is that

3. You don't understand the power of attraction

After a breakup, a guy will usually do all sorts of things to try and convince his ex to give him another chance.

For example: He mightâ€¦

- Beg and plead with her.
- Promise to change.
- Write a long letter, e-mail or series of text messages to tell her how he feels.
- Send her flowers.
- Buy her special gifts.
- Remind her of all the good times they had together.
- Be extra nice and sweet to her and do whatever she asks him to do.
- Use the No Contact Rule (i.e. ignore her for 30 or 60 days) to make her miss him.

Yet, in almost all cases, none of those things make a woman change her mind about being broken up.

So, what will?

Attraction.

Sexual and romantic attraction.

When you can make your ex feel strong surges of sexual and romantic attraction for you again, she will automatically begin to feel drawn to you once more for her own reasons.

Focus on that and you will easily get her back.

That is what really works with women.

On the other hand, if you continue to do random things that she doesn't care about (e.g. send her texts as a friend, go to the gym for months to try and build some muscle, wear new clothes), you'll likely end up feeling frustrated and hopeless about your chances of getting her back because you will see that she just doesn't care.

Don't let that happen to you.

If you want her back, focus on sexual and romantic attraction and make her feel that by interacting with her.

When she feels attracted again, her thoughts, behavior and actions will naturally change.

She will open back up to you and want to be with you again, even if just temporarily to see how she feels.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Dog Misses My Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 ways you can use the fact that your dog misses your ex, to help get her back into a relationship with you:

1. Re-attract her on a phone call and then suggest that she catch up to say hi to your dog

Your dog missing your ex is a great reason to call her, because you can use that fact to make her laugh and smile and bring out the sentimental, feel-good feelings she associates with the dog and by association, with you (e.g. she remembers all the fun times the three of you had together, she laughs about all the cute things your dog used to do).

She then naturally drops her guard and becomes a lot more open to meeting up with you (even if itâs under the pretense that sheâs only coming to see your dog), giving you the opportunity to fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Remember: Don't suggest meeting up before re-attracting her.

Attraction first, everything else after that.

So, focus on maintaining your confidence with her, even if sheâs initially a bit cool towards you and then use humor to break down her defenses and spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

The more you make her smile, laugh and feel happy to be talking to you again, the more she will be thinking things like, *âWhatâs going on here? Heâs making me laugh and smile and it really feels good talking to him again. He really sounds so differentâ| more confident, self-assured and in control than before. I like it. Maybe seeing him in person wonât be that bad after all. It could be fun and besides, I miss the dog too.*â

So, hereâs an example of how you can use your dog missing your ex to re-attract her and make her want to see you again.

Imagine that youâve just called your ex and she asks, *âSo, what have you been up to lately?*â

Rather than reply with something mundane like, *âOh, Iâve been busy with work/studies mostly. How about you?*â which will only make the conversation between you and her seem strained and awkward, you can instead say something along the lines of, *âOh you wonât believe it! Iâve had my hands full with Max. He just hasnât been his old self.*â

She will likely respond with something like, *âOh no! Whatâs wrong with him? Is he sick?*â and you can then say in a joking way something like, *âYeah, itâs terrible! Heâs been heartbroken since you left. He wonât eat. He wonât sleep. He doesnât want to go to the park anymore. All he does all day long is sit and stare with sad eyes at your old chair listening to sad songs on the TV. Iâve tried everything to cheer him up like cooking him a steak and playing with his favorite toy, but he just wonât snap out of it,*â and then have a laugh with her about it.

She will laugh, her guard will come down and rather than feeling tense about talking to you again, she will feel like you and her are picking up from where you left off when things were good between you.

You can then say, â€œOkay itâ€™s not all that bad, he did devour the steak in 3 seconds flat and then napped for about 3 hours after that, but he really does miss you,â€ and then change the conversation and talk about something else for a while.

Then, after a few minutes more of casual conversation, you can say something like, â€œAnyway, I think it would be nice if we got together sometime this week for you to say hi to Max. I know he would appreciate it and it would make him feel so much better. However, he has appointments on Monday and Friday, but will be available on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. So, which of those days suit you best?â€

If youâ€™ve been making her laugh and relax, sheâ€™s almost certainly going to agree because she will sense that catching up with you (and the dog) would feel good, rather than awkward or weird.

Then, when you meet up with her make sure that youâ€™re ready to say and do the things that will spark her feelings for you (e.g. being confident and self-assured rather than doubtful and insecure, flirting with her and making her feel attracted rather than being neutral or friendly, using humor to create a relaxed vibe rather than being too serious) and open her back up to flirting with you and seeing where it goes.

Another way to use your dog missing your ex to get her back isâ€

2. Text her in a joking way to let her know that your dog misses her

Texting is a good way to break the ice if you havenâ€™t been in contact with your ex since you and her split up.

For example: You might send her something along the lines of, â€œHey, Max misses you.â€

Then, add a photo of your dog looking sadly up to the camera.

Add in, â€œLol...look how sad he looks. He misses you Anne! :)â€

Then, when she replies, text back and forth a little bit and then get on a phone call with her so that you can begin reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, showing her via the tonality of your voice and the way you respond to her that youâ€™re more confident and emotionally strong now, flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you).

Important: Itâ€™s very difficult to reawaken a womanâ€™s feelings of respect, attraction and love without actually talking to her (preferably face-to-face), where she can hear the sincerity in your voice and see your confidence and composure coming through via your body language.

So, if your goal is to get your ex back, donâ€™t lose your chance with her by getting caught up texting for too long and not getting her on a call with you, so that you can arrange to meet up with her in person.

Youâ€™ve got to make a move.

If you donâ€™t strike while the iron is hot (i.e. while sheâ€™s still smiling and experiencing warm feelings towards your dog and possibly even you) and some other guy comes along and sparks her feelings for him, she will hook up with him, while youâ€™re obviously texting back and forth with her.

Then, when you pluck up the courage to make the call, usually after a few weeks, or even months of texting back and forth, sheâs likely going to be unavailable to you.

She will then probably say something along the lines of, âI hope Max feels better soon. Maybe my new boyfriend and I can take him to the park sometime to cheer him up,â leaving you feeling like she punched you in the gut.

Donât let that happen to you.

Spark some of her feelings via text and then get her on a call with you and then to a meet up as quickly as possible, so that you can fully reawaken her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you so that you can get her back for real.

Another way to use your dog missing your ex to get her back isâ|

3. Post up photos on social media of you having fun with friends in a park with your dog

[image: Make your ex miss your dog and miss you]

Now is the time to use social media to your advantage to help re-attract your ex.

So, go ahead and post up some really fun, interesting, humorous photos of you, your dog and some friends having fun playing in a park together.

Important: Make sure though that you don't post up photos of you alone with your dog, because it will not have the same effect as photos of you enjoying yourself with others. Why?

When she sees you and your dog having fun with others, she will feel attracted to you because you're not sitting around feeling lonely and lost without her.

She will then feel like she is missing out on having fun times with the dog (especially if she really liked him and misses him too).

She may then like the photo or even send you a message saying something like, âMax looks like heâs having fun.â

You can then use that as an opening to engage her in conversation, get her on a call and then get her to meet up with you.

For example: If she sends you a message like, âMax looks like heâs having fun,â you can respond with something along the lines of, âYeah. It was a nice day out for him, because heâs been moping since you left. He really misses you, so itâs nice to see him happy and enjoying life again,â and add a smiley face with the tongue sticking out.

She will likely respond with a smiley face of her own and you can then just call her to have a quick chat (and obviously spark some of her feelings for you so that she agrees to see you in person).

By the wayâ|

If your ex has unfriended you on social media, just set your photos to public so she can see them from the outside, because itâs almost certain that she will stop by from time to time to check on you.

Then, she wonât be able to resist at least pressing like when she sees how cute your dog looks in the photos and you can then initiate a chat with her and take it from there.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Using the "My Dog Misses You" Excuse to Get an Ex Back

If your dog misses your ex, chances are high that your ex misses your dog too.

That gives you a ready-made excuse to contact her, re-attract her and get her back.

However, if you don't approach the ex back process correctly, you might actually turn her off even more.

She will then likely close herself off, making it very difficult for you to get her back.

So, if you don't want that to happen, make sure you avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Writing a serious e-mail, letter or text to say that you think the dog is missing her and asking if she could visit you

For example: A guy might write something along the lines of, "Hi, Anne. I just wanted to let you know that Max is really missing you. He just looks so sad all the time and I don't know what to do to help him feel better. Anyway, I was wondering if you would be able to come over sometime this weekend to visit him and cheer him up a little bit. I would really appreciate it. Thanks."

Yet, rather than make a woman think, "Oh, it's so sweet that the dog is missing me. I should definitely go see him this weekend," she will likely just see right through his plan to get her to his house again so that he can try and convince her to give him another chance and she will think something along the lines of, "I can't believe he tried to trick me into seeing him again by using the dog. He's such a jerk!"

Alternatively, she feels turned off by how overly emotional he is being about the dog.

She may then begin to think about all the other times he was too sensitive and emotional while they were together and she concludes that she made the right decision by breaking up with him, because he's too emotionally weak as a man for her.

She then either doesn't respond to his e-mail, text or social media message, or she sends him a cold reply like, "I'm sorry that Max is missing me, but you'll have to deal with it on your own, because I'm not going to come to your house ever again. We are through as a couple and the sooner you accept that, the better for you and for Max. Please don't contact me about this again. Bye."

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Not preparing to re-attract her when you next interact with her

If your ex decides to come visit your dog, will you be ready to re-attract her?

Most guys are not and they end up using the same old approach to attraction that their ex fell out of love with.

As a result, the woman ends up rejecting her ex, because she feels that since nothing about him has really changed or improved, if she gave him another chance, it would just end up in a break up once again.

So, if you don't want that to happen to you, make sure that you're ready to re-attract your ex when you next interact with her (i.e. if she comes to visit your dog).

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦|

Making her laugh, smile and feel good to be hanging out with you (and the dog) again, so that at the back of her mind she begins thinking things like, â€œIâ€™ve really missed this. I canâ€™t believe Iâ€™m even thinking it, but weâ€™re like a little family together.â€

She then wants to see you again and experience more of those positive feelings with you.

Showing her that youâ€™re confident in yourself and in your value to her (especially if sheâ€™s pretending not to be interested in you anymore and is trying to make you feel nervous or insecure about yourself).

Flirting with her to create a sexual vibe between you and her, rather than just talking to her like a neutral friend.

Not giving her too much power over you (e.g. by being too nice, agreeing with everything she says) and instead, letting her see that you are now even more emotionally masculine in the way you think, talk, behave and react when interacting with her.

When you re-attract your ex in new and exciting ways, she canâ€™t stop herself from feeling respect for you again.

When she respects you, she also feels attracted to you and then she becomes curious and intrigued about her new feelings for you and wants to explore them.

However, if youâ€™re not prepared, she wonâ€™t feel motivated to give you another chance and she will likely just walk away and never look back.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Trying to use the dog's feelings as a way of guiltting her into giving him another chance

Sometimes, a guy will use the dog missing his ex as a ploy to make her feel bad and guilt her into spending more time with him again, in the hope that this will eventually lead to them getting back together again.

Yet, that plan almost always backfires.

Why?

A woman doesnâ€™t want to be manipulated into spending more time with her ex, or giving her ex another chance, simply because he canâ€™t deal with the idea of being losing her.

As a result, she loses even more respect and attraction for him and even begins to feel angry and annoyed with him to boot, making her want to move on from him as quickly as possible.

Additionally, when a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her ex, she stops caring about how he feels or what he wants.

What he wants just doesnâ€™t matter to her so much anymore.

So, donâ€™t bother trying to make your ex feel guilty over how much your dog misses her and focus instead on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

That will get her back a lot faster and easier than trying to guilt her back into your life.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

4. Not focusing on her feelings

You and your dog may both truly be missing your ex right now, but as terrible as it may sound to you, your feelings don't really matter.

What matters is whether your ex is missing you (and your dog) or not.

So, if you want to get your ex back, you have to stop focusing on what you want and start giving her what she wants (i.e. to feel respect, attraction and love for you based on the changes and improvements you've made yourself).

It can't be all about how much you love her and miss her and it can't even be about your dog missing her either.

It has to be about her feeling attracted and drawn to you for her reasons (i.e. she likes how confident you are now and how you make her laugh and smile and that it feels good to be around you again, she likes how you still want her back but don't need her back to feel good about yourself and have a good life, she likes how you are able to make her feel butterflies in her stomach again when she's around you, rather than feeling like a neutral friend).

Focus on that and you will naturally get her back without her even realizing that she's forgiven you for your past mistakes and has fallen in love with you all over again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Rebuilding Yourself After a Break Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 tips to help you rebuild yourself fast:

1. Don't focus on the superficial things that women don't really care that much about anyway

After a break up a guy might start thinking things like, *â€œShe said that she didn't have feelings for me anymore. Maybe that happened when I picked up / lost a bit of weight. She lost her attraction for me and things went downhill from there. However, if I go to the gym and lose weight / put on some muscle and maybe even change my wardrobe and hairstyle, the next time she sees me, she will feel attracted to me again because I look so good. She will then want to give me another chance and we can get back together again.*â€œ

Yet, hereâ€™s the thing that guys like that don't understand!

Making your ex feel attracted to you again has almost nothing to do with your physical appearance.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should be a slob and not give a damn about how you look, however, itâ€™s not the main thing that will make your ex want to be with you again.

Instead, a womanâ€™s attraction to a guy is mostly based on how he makes her feel when sheâ€™s interacting with him.

So, go ahead and get a new gym membership, buy new clothes and get a new haircut if itâ€™s something you want to do for yourself (e.g. because youâ€™re ready for a change, you want to take back control of your body, itâ€™s important to your physical and mental health), but don't do it to impress your ex.

If sheâ€™s like most women, she won't really care about those things.

Sure, she might say, *â€œWow, you're looking great,*â€œ when she sees you, but deep down sheâ€™ll be thinking things like, *â€œI wonder if he's put as much attention into changing himself on the inside as he has on changing the outside. I hope he doesn't think that just because he's lost / picked up weight and gotten himself new clothes I'm going to suddenly forget about how he behaved in the relationship? He's going to have to do a lot more than change his physical appearance to convince me to give him another chance.*â€œ

So, don't make the mistake of thinking that you need to get a physical makeover to re-attract your ex.

It's fine to pay some attention to those things, but 80% of your time and energy should be focused on what really matters to women (i.e. attracting her emotionally).

By the way!

If youâ€™re not sure where to start, here are some questions that will help you get a clearer picture on how to re-attract your ex in the ways that are important to her:

- Are you a confident, emotionally strong man who believes in himself and in his value to his ex (and women in general), or do you feel insecure and believe that youâ€™re not good enough for her, or for the women you really want?

- When you interact with your ex, do you make her feel feminine and girly in your presence, or does she feel more like a neutral friend or worse, like a big sister to you who always needs to hold your hand and guide you?
- Are you emotionally independent and feel happy, content and excited about your life even though she's not with you anymore, or do you feel lost without her and like you need her back to be able to function?
- Are you more emotionally dominant than your ex, or does she easily walk all over you, get her way and control you?
- Are you living up to your true potential as a man, or have you been happy to just â€‹go with the flow and see where life takes you, even though you were aware that this attitude made your ex feel stressed out and uncertain about her future with you?

When you understand what your ex really wants in a relationship with you, you can quickly make some changes and improvements to yourself and then let her experience the new you during interactions.

Don't tell her that you've changed.

Instead, just let her sense it and see it based on how you now talk, behave and act around her and in life.

When she can see that you now understand what she really wants, her guard starts to come down and she naturally opens back up to you.

On the other hand, if you only change superficial things about yourself (e.g. your physical appearance) and expect her to want you back, don't be shocked when she says something along the lines of, â€‹Sorry. I know you mean well, but it doesn't change how I feel about you. Please accept that what we had is over and move on.

Another tip to help you rebuild yourself after a break up is

2. Focus on how you will make her feel attracted, so she has a reason to give you another chance

If you read the first point, you will already be aware that attraction is the most important thing to focus on if you want to get your ex back.

When you can make her feel sexually and romantically drawn to you again, her walls naturally crumble down and she opens back up to you.

So, you have to focus on that.

When you interact with your ex from now on, over the phone or in person, whatever you're saying and doing is either going to be turning her on and making her think things like, â€‹This is so unexpected, but I'm really feeling so good talking to him again. Maybe he really has changed after all. Maybe it's not too late to work things out between us, or turning her off and convincing her that you definitely are not the man for her.

By the way

If you're unsure of what will spark your ex's feelings for you, here are some examples to help you out the next time you're interacting with her on a call or at a meet up:

- Show her by the way you now think, talk, behave and respond to what she says and does, that you've changed and improved in some of the ways that are important to her and are now at a new level as a man.

- Use humor to take the awkwardness out of the situation and make her feel relaxed, happy and attracted to you again.
- Maintain your confidence around her regardless of what she says or does to make you feel insecure and doubtful about your chances with her (e.g. she says things like, "I will never be able to trust you again," or "Nothing you can do will change the fact that I don't love you anymore," she's cold, mean or critical towards you).
- Make her feel like a sexy desirable woman in your presence by being emotionally masculine around her, rather than being too nice, sweet or neutral and making her feel like a friend, roommate or big sister.
- Stand up to her in a loving way when she tries to dominate you during conversation, rather than letting her get her way to make her happy and turn her off instead, because she perceives you as being too emotionally weak and wimpy.

When you interact with your ex in some of those ways, she can't stop herself from feeling attracted to you again, even if she initially doesn't want to.

She then naturally drops her guard and opens back up to interacting with you more, so that she can explore her new, exciting feelings for you.

Another tip to help you rebuild yourself after a break up is:

3. Do new things with new people

Although it's likely that your friends will be there for you during this difficult time and you shouldn't neglect them, getting out and making new friends is a good way to help you rebuild yourself after a break up.

Here's the thing:

When you only go out with old friends, you will end up feeling the same old way.

On the other hand, doing new things with new people will make you feel new emotions, get new experiences and gain new knowledge.

In every town and city, there are situations you can place yourself in where you will immediately be surrounded by new people who will welcome you.

For example a great resource you might want to look at is Meetup.com.

It's available in most areas and it caters to people of diverse cultures, interests and tastes.

Regardless of where you are in the world, there is most likely a meet up happening near you today, tomorrow or this weekend.

For example: Some of the activities and groups you might find on this website include:

- Gaming clubs.
- Tech groups.
- Outdoors and adventure groups.
- Health and fitness groups.
- Book clubs.
- Photography clubs.

- Sci-fi clubs.
- Dance groups.
- Boxing class.
- Mixed martial arts class.

Of course if there are no meet up groups in your area, or if you don't want to go that route, there are still many places you can go to, to meet new people in your city or town (e.g. your local community centre, gym, or even a charity group).

It all depends on you and what you're interested in.

Whatever you're into, chances are there are other people around you who are into it too.

By the way!

If you're not particularly interested in anything specific, pick something that appeals to you the most and go give it a shot.

You might be surprised to discover a whole new hobby that you never even imagined you would be interested in.

At the same time, you'll make new friends, learn new things and without even realizing you'll also change and develop as a person.

Not only will that help rebuild your confidence and sense of worth after your break up, it will also make you more attractive to your ex when you interact with her again.

Rather than sitting around feeling sorry for yourself and staying stuck at the same level you were at when she broke up with you, you've taken action to become a better man.

That's attractive to her.

As a result she begins to reconnect with her feelings of respect and attraction for you and becomes open to the idea of giving you another chance.

Another tip to help you rebuild yourself after a break up is!

4. Experiment with new attraction methods that are outside your comfort zone

If you try to get your ex back by using the same approach you used on her the first time around (e.g. sending her flowers, being really sweet and nice to her, wooing her like she's a princess and you're a gallant knight who never challenges her), she will most likely keep pushing you away.

Why?

She'll take your approach as a sign that nothing else about you has changed either.

She may then think to herself something along the lines of, "I can see that he's still stuck at the same level he was at when we broke up. He never changes or improves. I'm sure that will be enough for some other woman, but it isn't enough for me. I need a guy who can change and evolve and make me feel excited to be around him."

This is why it's so important for you to use a different approach with your ex and experiment with attraction methods that you've never tried before.

For example:

- If you've always been quite serious in the past, try some playful, arrogant humor for a change.

- If you've been really easy-going to the point where people, and especially your ex, walked all over you, give being more ballsy a shot.
- If you've allowed your ex to always get her way when she's with you, try putting her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way. Stand up for yourself when she tries to dominate you with her forceful personality, while still being a good guy to her.
- If you've always treated your ex like a good friend, go ahead and flirt with her now to create sparks of sexual tension between you and make her feel feminine and girly around you.

The more unpredictable you become (in a good way) when you interact with your ex, the more drawn to you she will feel.

She'll begin thinking things like, "What's going on here? Who is this guy? I'm sure this isn't the guy I broke up with. He's so different now. I actually like the new him. I want to stick around and see what he has in store for me next. It's so exciting."

When she starts thinking that way about you, her feelings of attraction will begin flooding back and she will begin to feel sparks of love for you again.

It's then up to you to guide her through the final steps of attraction and get her back.

This is why it's so important that you're fully prepared to re-attract her in new and exciting ways.

If you don't, there will be no motivation for her to want to give you another chance, because she will feel that she's getting back the very thing she tried to get away from in the first place (i.e. the same old attraction experience), and she doesn't want that.

4 Common Mistakes to Avoid When Rebuilding Yourself After a Break Up

Rebuilding yourself after a break up and getting your ex back can happen pretty quickly if you follow the right steps (i.e. change and improve some of the things that caused her to split up with you, reactivate her feelings for you during interactions, get her back).

However, if you miss out any of the steps, or make other mistakes, it will take so much longer for you to accomplish what you want.

So, be prepared and avoid making any of these mistakes:

1. Taking so long to rebuild that she moves on without you

Although preparing yourself to re-attract your ex is a vital step to getting her back (i.e. because if you try to get her back without changing she will sense it and push you away), it can't be something you do indefinitely.

Remember: The longer you take, the more time your ex has to fully get over you, move on and find herself a new man.

Then, by the time you get around to re-attracting her, she may be in love with someone else and then it will be very difficult to get her back.

So, what should you do instead?

You need to take a few days (no more than 7) to rebuild yourself.

For example: Some of the ways to do that areâ€¦

- Focus on calming down and regaining control of your emotions.
- Come up with a clear list of reasons why your ex broke up with you.
- Start working on improving those things about yourself.
- Start learning how to re-attract her.
- Stay confident knowing that you are preparing to successfully get her back.

Then, when you feel ready, get your ex on a call with you and re-spark some of her feelings for you.

The next step is to get her to meet up with you in person and get her back for real.

Get her back now or this week, rather than thinking that you need to spend weeks, months or even years rebuilding yourself before you can do that.

The longer you wait, the more you delay your happiness and hers.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

2. Telling her about how you are rebuilding yourself

Sometimes a guy thinks that telling his ex that heâ€™s working on his issues and rebuilding himself, she will be impressed and decide to give him another chance.

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Women don't care to hear about that.

A woman just wants a man to figure out whatever it is that he needs to figure out and then get on with being the kind of man that she can feel respect, attraction and love for.

She doesn't want to be expected to say, â€œOh, good for you. I'm so proud of you for putting in the effort to become a better man, Well done!â€ especially after a break up.

So, if youâ€™re rebuilding yourself thereâ€™s not need to share that with her.

Instead, continue changing and improving yourself and then let your ex experience the new you for herself during interactions.

When she sees that youâ€™re now at a different level than when you and her broke up and you didn't even ask for her help, or tell her about your process, she will naturally feel impressed with you for being such an emotionally strong, independent man.

She then opens up to you again to see how she feels and you can begin guiding her back into a relationship.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

3. Assuming that you have to become perfect to then start the ex back process

A lot of guys never get around to re-attracting their ex, because they think that they have to change every single little thing that was turning her off about them.

Yet, thatâ€™s not actually true.

A woman doesn't need her ex to be perfect to give him another chance.

Instead, she wants to see that he's understood her concerns and he's putting in the effort to become better.

She will then respect him for that and forgive him the little mistakes that he makes, because she knows that no-one is perfect, not even her.

So, don't waste time trying to rebuild yourself into the perfect man for your ex.

Just change the things you know are important to her.

Then interact with her on the phone and more importantly in person, show her that you've improved the things that matter to her and watch how her feelings of respect and attraction for you come rushing back.

Her walls begin to crumble and then the idea of being your girl again starts to feel good to her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me and Said, "I'm Sorry For Doing This, But I Have to Do it For Myself"

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 common reasons why a woman will say that when breaking up with a guy:

1. She's tired of pretending to feel attracted to your approach

Based on a man's approach, a woman will either feel motivated to contribute to the relationship and be a good, loving, devoted woman to him, or she will gradually lose respect and attraction for him and begin pulling away.

For example: A guy might think that a woman should be happy with his friendly, neutral approach because they get along so well and he cares so much about her.

Yet, he lacks the masculine edge that she looks for in a guy and that maintains a woman's attraction and respect.

It's just too neutral because of his approach.

As a result, she stops feeling the way she wants to feel in the relationship with him, so she decides to break up with him and find another guy who can give her the attraction experience she really wants.

Here's the thing:

Without sparks of sexual and romantic attraction, a relationship slowly starts to feel more like a friendship.

Yet, that's not what a woman wants.

She wants a sexually attracted, romantic relationship.

In other words, she wants to be in love in a romantic way with her man, rather than feeling like she's his partner or best friend.

So, even though the guy might be a really good guy and thinking things like, "We are so good together. We have the perfect relationship. I'm such a lucky guy to be with a wonderful girl like her," she's likely thinking something along the lines of, "This relationship has become so dull and boring lately. I don't feel like I'm in a romantic relationship anymore. Instead, I feel like I'm living in a dorm room with my best friend whom I don't want to date or have sex with. There's just no spark between us anymore. I don't feel sexy around him, but he doesn't even seem to notice or care. He's just happy for us to trudge along this way forever. However, I'm not. I don't want a buddy, I want to be passionately in love with my man and feel like neither of us can keep our hands off each other. I can't take it anymore. I hate the idea of hurting him, but I have to break up with him for my sake."

So, although you may have thought that you and your ex had an ideal relationship, it's quite possible that she didn't feel the same way about it as you.

Instead, although she appreciated that you are a good guy who treated her well, she may have also needed you to be more emotionally masculine and make her feel like a feminine woman around you.

This is why, if you want to get your girlfriend back, you have to change your approach and give her what she really wants, not what you think she should be happy with (i.e. romance and attraction rather than friendship and predictability).

You need to use every interaction that you have with her from now on to reawaken her sexual feelings for you by making her feel the way she always wanted to feel with you, but didn't.

When she stops feeling bland, boring, friendly emotions and begins feeling excited and turned on again, she'll naturally start to think about you in a more positive (i.e. sexual and romantic) way.

She will then want to talk to you on the phone and hang out with you more to see if you can maintain this approach and continue making her feel attracted, or if she needs to move on for real.

Another common reason why a woman will say that is!

2. She tired of trying to make the relationship work

[image: She is tired of trying to make the relationship work]

If a woman gets a sense that she's always having to turn a blind eye to her guy's mistakes (e.g. she forgives him over and over again for breaking his promises to her, she always picks up after him while he sits around watching TV or playing video games, she makes excuses for him to her friends and family because he refuses to make an effort to spend time with them, he's unreliable and lets her down when she needs him the most), she will eventually feel that sticking with him is just too much work.

She may then begin thinking things like, Why am I always trying to make this relationship work, while he just messes me around? Why am I letting him do this to me? Where is my self respect?

When a woman reaches that point in her relationship with a guy, she will almost always break up with him to focus more on herself and her needs, rather than continue to deal with the stress of trying to make the relationship work.

This is why, if you want your girlfriend to open back up to the idea of giving you another chance, you need to get clear about what you need to start saying and doing to properly re-attract her.

For example: Ask yourself!

- What aspects of my thinking and behavior made her feel stressed out, annoyed or like I didn't care (e.g. you took her for granted, you didn't pull your weight, you were too immature and childish compared to her)?
- What is it about me that initially attracted her to me (e.g. your confidence, your ability to make her laugh, that you made her feel like a feminine woman around you) and did I maintain those things over time?
- Did I try to get her to accept things about me that just aren't attractive to her (e.g. you wanted her to lead in the relationship, you displayed annoying habits that she clearly didn't like)?
- Did I give this relationship the attention it deserved, or was I distracted by other things (e.g. work, hanging out with your friends, your family)?

When you can honestly answer those questions for yourself, you will have a much better idea of what it will take to get your girlfriend back.

Another common reason why a woman will say that is!

3. She has matured a lot faster than you and doesn't want to keep lifting you up to her level

Sometimes, at the beginning of their relationship, a man and a woman will start off being at the same level of maturity.

However, over time, one of them, most often the woman, slowly begins to surpass her guy and grow up, while he stays stuck thinking, talking, acting and behaving in an emotionally immature way.

When this happens, she naturally begins to feel uncomfortable and unfulfilled in the relationship, until eventually she breaks up with him.

The guy might then feel hurt and confused and wonder, âWhat happened? I thought everything was great between us. I thought we were on the same page (i.e. enjoyed the same things, we had the same interests). I just don't get it.â

Yet, here's the thing!

For a relationship to last past the initial stages and grow and evolve into something deeper and longer lasting, there needs to be more than just a superficial attraction between the man and woman.

Instead, they need to be able to grow and mature together and begin wanting the same things (e.g. to pursue a career, to go traveling together, to get married and settle down, pursue common dreams and goals, feel like life is getting better rather than worse).

So, when a woman discovers that she is maturing a lot faster than her boyfriend (e.g. she's ready to stop partying and focus more on her career, but he isn't, she wants to take the relationship to the next level like move in together, get married, or have a baby but he doesn't want to), then she may start feeling like he's no longer the right man for her.

Initially, she might stay in the relationship for a while longer in the hope that her guy will catch up to her in maturity, but if he doesn't, she will eventually lose too much respect and attraction for him to want to stay in the relationship.

At that point, she will break up with him and say, âI'm sorry for doing this, but I have to do it for myself.â

Another common reason why a woman will say that is!

4. She doesn't feel like it's necessary to have a relationship anymore because the feelings just aren't mutual

A woman will sometimes date a guy even though she doesn't have strong sexual or romantic feelings towards him, simply because he's a nice guy.

In her mind she might justify her choice by thinking something along the lines of, âHe's so good to me and I'm tired of dating jerks. He's loving and kind and even though there isn't a big spark between us, I'm sure that over time my feelings for him will get stronger.â

However, rather than feel stronger respect, attraction and love for him over time, she discovers that his thinking, actions and behavior are actually turning her off even more (e.g. he's so nice to her that she ends up walking all over him, during sex he's always too sweet and thoughtful and treats her like a friend rather than throwing her on the bed and ravishing her like she's a desirable woman, he's often insecure about his value to her and he keeps needing her to reassure him that she still loves him).

As a result, she starts to feel unsatisfied in her relationship with him and like if she doesn't break up with him, she will end up ruining her chances of finding a man who can make her feel the passion and excitement she craves.

So, even though the guy is in love with her and feels like they are meant for each other, the feelings aren't mutual so she can't see the point of staying in the relationship with him anymore.

Here's the thing though!

Just because your ex girlfriend might not have strong sexual and romantic feelings for you right now, it doesn't mean you can't change how she feels and make her really want you (even if she never felt strong attraction or love for you before).

In fact, when you interact with her and spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you, flirting with her to make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman, maintaining your confidence with her when she's being aloof or even bitchy towards you), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

Even though she may have convinced herself that you're not the right guy for her and that she just doesn't have any feelings for you, she will suddenly start imagining what it would be like to be your girl for the long term.

She will realize that you have leveled up as a man and have now become what she always wanted you to be (e.g. more confident, emotionally masculine, emotionally strong) and she will want to experience the new you.

She will then drop her guard and open back up to interacting with you to see how she feels.

Then, the more you ignite her feelings of passion and desire for you, the more she will begin to regret her decision to break up with you.

4 Mistakes to Avoid Now That She Has Broken Up With You

The good news is that you can easily get your girlfriend back if you want to.

When you improve the way you talk, act, behave and respond to her during conversation and make her feel surges of respect and attraction for you, it actually becomes something she wants to do too.

However, if you approach the ex back process in the wrong way, you can just as easily turn her off even more and convince her she made the right decision.

So, to avoid that happening, make sure you don't make these mistakes:

1. Promising to change if she gives you a chance

It's only natural that when a woman says, "I'm sorry for doing this, but I have to do it for myself," a guy's first reaction may be to start making promises to change.

For example: He might say something along the lines of, "Please don't do this. I swear I will do whatever it takes to become a better man for you. Just give me one more chance before you make up your mind. You'll see! Things will be different this time. I promise!"

Yet, that rarely makes a woman change her mind. Why?

By the time the guy starts promising to change, his woman has already disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, his words don't really mean anything to her, because she's already been preparing herself mentally to break up with him and his promises just come across as "too little, too late."

Also, in most cases, a guy will have likely promised to change at least once or twice before (usually more), but every time he's improved for a little while, only to revert back to his old patterns of thinking and behavior.

As a result, she doesn't trust him to keep his promise, so she says, "No, not to giving him another chance."

This is why, if you want your girlfriend to change her mind about breaking up with you, you need to show her that you've changed some of the things that are important to her, rather than promise her that it will happen.

Remember: Actions speak louder than words.

When she can see for herself that you really are different now, she will be a lot more open to the idea of giving you another chance.

The next mistake is

2. Asking her what you could change to make her reconsider

This is one of the worst approaches a guy can take when trying to change a woman's mind about breaking up. Why?

Most women don't want to be responsible for shaping their guy into the man that he needs to become to make her happy.

So, if he asks her to tell him what he needs to do, rather than feel flattered or pleased that he needs her help to become a better man, his woman usually feels turned off by his lack of understanding as to what makes a woman tick.

If she has to tell him how to be the man she needs, she will lose respect for him because he's not his own man.

He is simply following her instructions, which takes the romance out of being with him, because he's not a real man to her anymore, but rather a confused guy who needs a woman to hold his hand and teach him how to think, act and behave to make her feel attracted to him.

A woman doesn't want to do that.

This is why, if you want to make your girlfriend change her mind, you have to figure out how to re-attract her without asking her for instructions.

Then, go ahead and do that and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Trying to discuss the relationship or work things out via text

When it comes to discussing your relationship with your ex, doing it via text is a bad idea. Why?

This only annoys her even more, because she has to put so much time and energy into physically replying to your long texts.

She sees it as you being selfish and expecting more out of her than she should be willing to give after a break up.

Hereâs the thingâ

Long discussions about your relationship should only happen in person and only after youâve reactivated her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Only then will she be open to talking to you about it and willing to work things out with you.

On the other hand, if you try to engage her in conversation via text before she has feelings for you again, she will almost certainly close up and possibly even block your number on her phone.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

4. Trying to make her feel sorry for you

Itâs only natural that your girlfriendâs approach has upset you, hurt you and left you feeling lost and confused.

However, playing the pity card and saying things like, *âHow could you do this to me? After everything we had together, youâre just willing to walk away without even an explanation. All I ever did was love you with all my heart. Why wasnât that enough for you? Why are you being so selfish?*â will actually make things worse rather than better.

Why?

Firstly, at this point, your ex girlfriend doesn't really care how bad youâre feeling, because sheâs disconnected from her feelings for you and is looking to move on.

Additionally, your emotional weakness (i.e. not being able to cope with being broken up) is a turn off to her and it only convinces her even more that she made the right decision.

So, regardless of how hurt and disappointed you might be feeling right now, forget about trying to make her feel sorry for you as a way of getting her back and focus instead on what works.

You need to interact with her over the phone and especially in person and reactivate her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again, showing her via your actions and conversation that youâve changed and improved, flirting with her to create a sexual vibe), so that she wants to get back with you.

Thatâs the easiest and most effective way to get an ex back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why is Getting Dumped By a Girlfriend So Painful For a Guy?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 reasons why getting dumped by a girlfriend can be so damn painful:

1. You're experiencing a whole bunch of painful emotions at once

One minute a guy is in relationship and feeling positive emotions like joy, contentment, optimism about the future and then the next minute he's dumped and all those emotions disappear in an instant.

Suddenly he's bombarded by a sudden and constant onslaught of negative, painful emotions that don't go away unless he can get his woman back, or he finally gets over her after weeks, months or years.

For example: 15 of the most common emotions a guy might be feeling after being dumped are:

1. Rejection: He gave his ex girlfriend his all and she threw his love in his face and walked away.
2. Regret: He wishes he could have done something to prevent what happened.
3. Worry: What if he can't make her change her mind? Will he end up losing the love of his life?
4. Panic: What is he going to do without her?
5. Confusion: Why did this happen? What did he do wrong to make her fall out of love with him?
6. Anger: How could she do this to him after everything he did for her? She doesn't deserve a guy like him.
7. Denial: This can't be happening to him. Maybe she's just going through a phase and she'll soon realize her mistake and come running back to him.
8. Betrayal: She said she would love him forever, but she didn't mean it. She broke his trust.
9. Anxiety: What if he never finds another woman to love him again? What if she was his soulmate and now she's gone?
10. Neediness: He can't seem to function without her (e.g. he doesn't remember at which dry cleaner she dropped off his suits, he can't find his car keys without her, the dog is sick and he doesn't know what to do because she always took care of it).
11. Insecurity: Wondering what's wrong with him as a man and whether he will ever be able to attract another woman.
12. Loss: Him and her shared a special connection and now she's gone.
13. Desperation: He wants to get her back, but his attempts so far (e.g. begging and pleading with her, promising to change, pouring his heart out to her in a letter, series of text messages or e-mail) have failed.
14. Loneliness: She was a big part of his life and he misses her.
15. Hopelessness: He doesn't believe that it's possible to get her back because she said something along the lines of, "Please don't try to change my mind about this. What we had is over and you need to accept that and let me go."

As you can see, it's only natural that you will be feeling pain right now.

However, here's the catch:

If you allow these negative emotions to take over your mind, you will actually be doing the one thing that will prevent you from getting your ex girlfriend back (i.e. becoming the kind of man that can attract her back).

Then, when you next interact with your ex on a phone call or in person and she senses that you're falling apart without her, she will feel turned off by what she perceives as your emotional weakness.

She will see your inability to cope as a sign that you're not an emotionally strong, persistent, strong-minded man who she can depend on in a crisis and she may then decide that she made the right decision to dump you after all.

On the other hand, if you can feel the pain of the break up and still manage to pick yourself up quickly and get on with your life, she will feel drawn to you again for having the grit to handle a negative situation like being dumped and coming out of it even better and emotionally stronger than before.

She then becomes more open to interacting with you more (i.e. over the phone and in person) and you can then build on her feelings and make her open up to the idea of getting back together again.

This is why, it's very important that from this point onwards, you stop focusing on how painful it is to be dumped by your girlfriend and only focus on what you need to do to get her back.

Another reason why getting dumped by a girlfriend is so painful is that

2. You felt like you and her had become one by being together

[image: You felt like you and her had become one by being together]

It's only natural that the longer a couple is together, the more in sync they become with each other.

For example: They might

- Finish each other's sentences.
- Have the same interests and hobbies.
- Like the same things (e.g. music, food, books).
- Complement each other (e.g. she cleans while he takes care of the car or the garden, he prepares and she cooks, she likes to bath while he likes to shower).
- Think in the same kind way.
- Believe in the same kinds of things together.
- Want the same kind of future.

As a result, when a break up happens, it may feel as though one half of a whole person is missing and that can be extremely painful.

However, something you need to understand is that even though it might have felt that you and your girlfriend had become one person, you and her were always individuals.

Yes, you and her shared many things in common and were in tune with each other's needs and desires, yet, you were still two separate people.

She has her own identity, will, thoughts, beliefs and life to live and so do you.

The same applies to everyone else's relationships.

This is why, if you sit around thinking things like, "I can't function without my girlfriend. We were one and now I feel like half of me is missing," you will only be prolonging the pain you feel.

Also by thinking that way about your relationship with your ex, you may end up feeling very disappointed and dejected when you notice that she isn't very interested in getting back with you based on how broken you feel without her, how much you love her, care about her, need her or want her back.

Remember: If the feelings aren't mutual, then the idea of being "one" together doesn't really mean that much to her.

This is why, you need to stop focusing on how you and her were so connected with each other and how painful it is to be without her and focus on reactivating her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, so she wants to be your one and only girl again.

If you can't do that, she's just not going to care that you felt like you and her had become one by being together.

Another reason why getting dumped by a girlfriend is so painful is that

3. The relationship had become a big part of your purpose in life, or your main purpose

Some guys mistakenly believe that to maintain a woman's love, he needs to make her the center of his world.

As a result, a guy like that might stop focusing on his goals and dreams and instead, devote all of his attention and time to his relationship.

He may also give up his interests and hobbies and possibly even stop hanging out with his friends, because he believes that his relationship has to come first above anyone or anything else.

Eventually, his relationship with his girl becomes the main purpose in his life and his main reason for living.

Yet, here's the thing

It's fine for your relationship to be a part of your purpose, but not your main purpose.

If a man does that, a woman will pull the rug out from under his feet. Why?

A woman doesn't want to feel that her man's biggest achievement in life is his relationship with her.

That place should be reserved for his biggest dreams, goals and aspirations in life.

So, if he puts their relationship in that place, she feels turned off, because he comes across as too sappy and sentimental, rather than being emotionally strong and determined to achieve what he wants in life, with or without a relationship.

This is why, if you made your relationship with your girlfriend your main purpose in life, it's understandable that right now you will be experiencing a lot of pain.

Your purpose is gone and you feel empty.

However, you can't go on thinking like that.

Not only because you will end up staying stuck in a pit of misery and despair, but also because your girlfriend will pick up on your neediness for her and she will continue to feel turned off by you.

So, what should you do instead?

You need to find your real purpose in life (i.e. something big you want to achieve) and actively go about making it happen.

By doing that, you will automatically be more confident, have higher self-esteem and will be the kind of man your ex can look up to and feel proud to be associated with.

Then, when you interact with her on a phone call, or in person and she realizes that you're getting on with your life and are happy and content without her, she will automatically feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you again.

You can then build on those feelings and get her back into a better, more balanced relationship with you, where she becomes the most important person in your life, but not the most important thing.

Another reason why getting dumped by a girlfriend is so painful isâ€¦!

4. You worry that you won't ever be able to experience that kind of love again

A big part of being in love with a specific woman is based on how she makes you feel (e.g. confident, loved, appreciated, manly, proud to be her man).

So, when that gets taken away (i.e. because she dumps him), he might get it into his head that he will never experience that kind of love with another woman again.

Yet, thatâ€¦s not true.

In reality, if you open yourself up to love, you will realize that there are many (literally millions) of women out there that are perfect for you and that you can experience an amazing love with if you want to.

Of course, you can also get your ex back if you want that.

However, the secret to both of those things is believing in yourself and in your value and attractiveness as a man.

When you realize that you are worthy of your girlfriend and any other woman you might want, you will naturally begin to feel more confident.

When you feel confident enough, you can then take action to re-attract your ex and get her back, or find yourself an even better, more beautiful woman than her if you want to.

The choice is yours.

However, you have to believe that itâ€¦s possible first.

If you keep putting yourself down and thinking things like, â€œI will never experience the kind of love I had with her with another woman,â€œ you may end up being stuck in your painful emotions and never doing what needs to be done to get your girlfriend back, or move on.

So, stop filling your head with negative thoughts and start believing in yourself and in your value to women.

The sooner you do that, the sooner the pain will begin to fade away and you can then focus on reactivating your girlfriendâ€¦s feelings for you and getting her back.

Another reason why getting dumped by a girlfriend is so painful isâ€¦!

5. You don't know that there is a real way to get her back

One of the main reasons why many guys struggle to recover after getting dumped is because they don't really know that it's possible to get their ex back.

A guy like that might want his ex back and he may even try different things to make it happen (e.g. beg and plead with her to give him one more chance, promise her that he will do anything she wants him to do, send her flowers or cards, write her long love letters expressing his feelings for her).

Yet, in almost all cases, none of those things work and he ends up thinking something along the lines of, "It's hopeless. She just won't change her mind. I know that I need to accept that I will never get her back, but I just can't do it. The pain is unbearable! I feel so defeated."

Don't let that happen to you.

You don't need to try random things to get your ex back.

Instead, you need to focus on doing what really works.

So, make a decision today that you are going to actively change how your girlfriend feels about you, by interacting with her on the phone and more importantly, in person, and making her feel good to be around you again (e.g. by using ballsy humor to break down her defenses, flirting with her to create a sexual spark between you, showing her that you're a new man now).

When you do that, you go from being the ex she's trying to forget, to someone who is making her feel strong surges of sexual and romantic attraction again.

She will then be open to interacting with you more and more to see how she feels and you can then easily guide her back into a relationship with you.

Common Problems Guys Experience After Getting Dumped

There is no denying that getting dumped by a girlfriend is a very painful experience, especially if a guy believes that he's lost the woman he loves forever.

Yet, it doesn't have to be that way.

In fact, being dumped can be one of the most transformative experiences a guy can have, because not only can he change and improve and become a better man as a result, he can also make his ex fall back into a relationship that is 100% better than it was before.

So, even though right now you might be feeling a lot of pain, think about how well things can turn out for you when you quickly transform yourself into a better man and re-attract your ex.

This is why, you need to make sure that you approach the ex back process in the correct way, so that you can reactivate your girlfriend's feelings for you and get her back, rather than turn her off even more.

For example: Some mistakes that you should avoid making are:

1. Letting the painful emotions ruin his confidence and feelings of self worth

It's very easy for a guy to let the painful emotions of a break up make him begin doubting his attractiveness and value as a man.

For example: A guy might say to himself, "If she dumped me, it must mean I'm not good enough, not only for her, but for any other woman as well. After all, if she said she loved me and then couldn't stand to be with me, what chance do I stand with another woman who doesn't even know me. I'm such a loser. I just need to accept that I'm going to stay single and alone for the rest of my life, because no woman wants me.

He then spirals into a cycle of negative, insecure thinking, which eats away at whatever remaining confidence he has in himself.

If he then tries to get his ex back (or try to meet other women), he will usually get rejected because they will all sense that he feels unworthy of them and feel turned off by it.

Here's the thing!

Women are attracted to confident men who believe in themselves, no matter what happens in their life or what anyone else says about them.

Likewise, women are turned off by insecure men who depend on a woman, or other people to make them feel good about themselves.

This is why, if you've allowed your break up with your girlfriend to get to you and make you doubt yourself as a man, you need to first build your confidence back up if you want to re-attract her.

When you believe in yourself and in your value to your ex girlfriend and other women, not only will you be able to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, you will also be able to attract other beautiful women if you want to.

Your ex will sense the change in you and she will feel attracted to it, even if she doesn't want to admit it (even to herself).

You can then build on those feelings and get her back.

However, if you try to get her back while you're still feeling insecure and unworthy of her love, she will pick up in that and reject you even more.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Trying to get her back when at the peak of pain

If you try to get your ex back while you're still feeling intense pain over what happened, you may end up turning her off even more.

Here's the thing!

Women naturally look for emotionally strong men who can handle the challenges of life head on.

Of course a woman is fine with her ex feeling sad and disappointed for getting dumped temporarily, but she then expects him to get over it and focus on fixing the situation and acting on it like a man.

So, if she notices that he is stuck feeling sad, upset and disappointed for too long, she will think that he's not man enough for her and she will then focus on moving on and finding a new man right away.

This is why, you need to get over the pain of the break up first before you try to get your ex back.

When she sees that you've picked yourself up and become a better man, despite how painful the break up was for you, she will automatically feel respect for you again.

You can then build on her feelings, make her feel attracted again and get her back.

However, you can't do that when you're still dwelling in your feelings of loss and pain.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

3. Letting her see how lost, desperate or hurt you are without her

Sometimes a guy hopes that if his ex sees how badly heâ€™s hurting, she will feel sorry for him and give him another chance.

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

A woman is not attracted to the kind of guy who makes her feel as though she has to take care of him emotionally, because heâ€™s unable to cope with what millions of people around the world go through every day (i.e. being broken up with).

So, rather than want to give him another chance, she instead finds him too emotionally unattractive for her and she feels happy with her decision to dump him.

She then focuses on distancing herself from him even more (e.g. she blocks his number on her phone so he canâ€™t text or call her, unfriends him on social media, avoids going to places where she might bump into him) and focuses on moving on without him.

This is why, if you want to re-attract your ex, donâ€™t try to do it by showing her that youâ€™re still struggling with your feelings of pain and loss.

Remember: A woman is attracted to the kind of guy she can look up to, respect and be proud to call her man (i.e. because regardless how painful it was for him to get dumped by her, he has maintained belief in himself and in his value to her and has already taken steps to become even better than he was before).

When your girlfriend can see that youâ€™re happy, content and moving forward with your life without her, she will automatically feel respect for you again.

When she respects you, she also begins to feel attracted to you and with those two emotions back, reconnecting with her feelings of love is only a step away.

So make it happen.

You can do it.

When you do, you will immediately stop feeling the pain youâ€™ve been feeling and you will feel amazing once again.

She will love you again.

She will really want to be with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

What Does a Dumper Feel After a Break Up?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends because each woman is different.

For example:

1. Some women feel nothing and move on easily

This usually happens when a guy has ruined a woman's feelings for him so much (i.e. by repeatedly acting, thinking and behaving in unattractive ways), that she no longer feels any respect, attraction or love for him.

So, rather than feel bad or possibly even a little sad that the relationship has ended so badly, she instead feels relieved to be rid of him.

She also feels excited at the prospect of finding a new man who can finally ignite positive feelings inside of her (e.g. desire, enthusiasm, passion) rather than only bring out the worst in her (e.g. she's always angry, nagging, annoyed, turned off).

However, something to bear in mind is that even when a woman feels nothing for her ex, it doesn't mean he can't change that and make her want him again.

If he quickly transforms himself into the man she always wanted him to be (e.g. more confident, less needy, more emotionally masculine in the way he thinks, acts and behaves), even if she initially said something along the lines of, "There is no way I would ever give him another chance. My feelings for him are dead and I know nothing will change how I feel," she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to him again in a way that feels good.

She might try to fight it by telling herself things like, "A leopard never changes its spots. I've already given him plenty of chances to change and every time he improves for a little while and then when I relax my guard and open my heart back up to him, he just reverts back to being a jerk once again. I simply can't trust him to change for real. Besides, I've dumped him now and there is no going back," but her heart won't let her move on.

It's then up to the guy to interact with her as often as possible on the phone and in person (without coming across as being needy or desperate) and show her that he really is a new man now.

Of course, she will initially try to test him (e.g. by being cold and aloof, telling him he doesn't stand a chance of getting her back, pretending to be interested one minute and pushing him away the next), to see if he will revert back to his old self as soon as the pressure gets too much for him.

However, as long as he maintains his confidence and continues to think, act and behave in some of the ways that are attractive to her (and women in general), she won't be able to resist him for long.

Her walls will begin to crumble and she will most likely open back up to hanging out with him more often to see where things go from there.

So, if your ex has dumped you and is currently saying that nothing on Earth would make her give you another chance, don't believe her.

Newfound respect, attraction and love will.

Focus on making her feel those three emotions for you again and sheâll be back in your arms before she even knows it.

Another outcome is thatâ|

2. Some women feel regret and struggle to get over their ex and move on

Sometimes a woman will break up with a guy, only to realize that she made a big mistake.

For example: Some of the reasons why woman will break up with a guy and then end up regretting it areâ|

- She dumps him in the heat of the moment during an argument, even though she still has feelings for him.
- She is inexperienced with relationships and doesn't know how to handle relationship problems without threatening to break up, or breaking up.
- She feels bored in the relationship so decides to dump her guy and find someone new, only to regret it later on when she canât find a replacement guy, or she dates other guys and realizes that her ex was the right guy for her after all.
- She was dealing with other issues in her life that were stressing her out (e.g. at work or university) and she couldnât handle the demands of a relationship as well, so she dumped her man only to realize it was the wrong move.
- She felt attracted to a new guy so she dumped her man, only to lose interest in the new guy and then regret her actions.
- She felt insecure about her attractiveness to her guy, so she dumped him to see if he would chase after her and beg her for another chance to make herself feel more valuable (Btw. If the guy does run after her, she will actually lose respect and attraction for him for being desperate and she will then choose to remain broken up).

As you can see, itâs quite possible that your ex may at this very moment be sitting at home thinking things like, âI was such a fool to break up with him! I canât believe I made such a stupid mistake.â

At this point, many guys might be asking, âWell, if she regrets dumping me, why isnât she coming back to me?â

The answer is quite simple: A woman will rarely put herself at risk of being rejected by a guy, especially if she dumped him.

At the back of her mind she will likely be thinking things like, âIf I contact him and tell him Iâm sorry for breaking up with him, he might laugh at me and tell me I deserve it. So, even though Iâm really struggling to forget him and move on, I wonât take the risk of being humiliated by him for my stupid mistake.â

As a result, she does nothing and if the guy then does nothing too, they end up losing falling back in love again and having a new and improved relationship with each other.

So, if you donât want that to happen to you, you need to be bold enough to make the first move.

However, donât expect your ex to jump at the chance to get back with you right away, even if she does regret dumping you.

Instead, sheâs going to play a bit hard to get and wait to see if youâre serious about getting her back.

All you need to do is relax, maintain your confidence regardless of what she says and does to put you off and reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Before you know it, you and her will be kissing, having sex and starting a new relationship with each other.

Another outcome is thatâ€¦!

3. Some women feel disappointed and lose faith in relationships with men, so they remain single for a while

In some cases, a woman might become quite bitter after she breaks up with a guy (e.g. because he cheated on her, he took her for granted, he was abusive towards her, he belittled her and made her feel bad about herself).

She may then start thinking things like, â€œAll men are jerks! Iâ€™m never going to let another guy hurt me the way he did. Men are just not worth it. I donâ€™t care what anyone says, Iâ€™m going to stick to being single. Relationships are just not for me.â€

She then focuses all her attention on other areas of her life (e.g. her work or career, her studies, doing charity work, going traveling) as a way of avoiding getting into another relationship with a guy.

Another outcome is thatâ€¦!

4. Some women worry that they might miss their ex and run back to him, so they hook up with a new guy instead

If a woman is inexperienced with relationships and break ups, she might not know how to handle the emotions that naturally occur once the dust has settled after she dumps her man (e.g. she misses him, feels sad and lonely from time to time, wonders what it would be like to see him again).

So, to stop herself from running back to her ex, she may decide to make herself available to hooking up with other guys pretty quickly (i.e. she accepts dates from guys who have been interested in her while she was in a relationship, she goes to bars or clubs and opens herself up to kissing and sex with the men she meets there, she joins online dating sites or dating apps).

As a result, her ex might discover that sheâ€™s moved on with another guy within a very short period of time (sometimes even after a week or two).

So, if you want to prevent your ex from hooking up with a new man to stop herself from missing you, you need to quickly begin renewing her feelings of respect and attraction for you, before she has a chance to do that.

You actually want to make her miss you and think about you all the time, but not because sheâ€™s not hearing from you.

Instead, you make her miss you by interacting with her, making her feel sparks of attraction for you again and then not contacting her for a day or two.

Then, call her again, spark some more of her feelings for you and get her to meet up with you so that you can get her back.

At the meet upâ€¦!

- Be prepared to show her that you've changed and improved in some of the ways that matter to her (e.g. you're more assertive now and you no longer back down when she's being stubborn or unreasonable, you want her back but you don't need her back to feel happy and content, you feel confident about your value and attractiveness to her rather than feeling insecure).
- Make her laugh, smile and feel good to be in your company again.
- Flirt with her to create sparks of sexual tension between you.

Once you've fully reactivated her feelings of respect and attraction for you again, you can then progress to giving her a hug and if she doesn't pull away, give her a kiss as well.

From there, if she's open, you can go to your place or hers and hook up with her sexually.

By that stage, she will likely begin falling back in love with you again and you can then guide her back into a relationship with you.

Another outcome is that

5. Some women feel like they've made the right decision and then try to move on with their life

In most relationships, a woman won't dump a guy the very first time he makes a mistake or behaves in a way that's unattractive to her.

Instead, she will usually forgive him and give him another chance (in most cases multiple chances) to change and improve.

She might also give him hints, suggestions or even come out and say what is bothering her, in order to help him understand where she's coming from and what is bothering her.

However, many guys end up ignoring these warning signs from their woman until it's too late.

For example: Sometimes, a guy might say to himself, I know that she's mad at me right now, but she'll eventually get over it. She always does because she loves me and she knows that I love her, even though I stuffed up.

However, he doesn't make any effort to change, so his woman stops feeling motivated to contribute to the relationship and be good a woman to him.

Instead, she begins pulling away, being closed off and treating him with less and less respect over time, until eventually she gets fed up with waiting for him to take her seriously, so she dumps him.

However, even though it may hurt for a little while (e.g. because she still has some feelings for him), she doesn't regret her decision, because she knows from experience that he's not going to change and become the man she wants him to be.

She then puts all her effort into fully getting over him, moving on and finding herself a man who can give her what she wants.

Is it possible that this is what happened between you and your ex?

If so, to make her change her mind about being broken up with you, the first thing you need to do before you even contact her, is to quickly make some attractive changes to yourself, so that you can attract her in the ways that are important to her (e.g. you're less insecure and self-doubting now, which means you don't doubt your value to her anymore, you're more emotionally independent, which means that you don't need her to be happy or feel good about yourself, youâre more emotionally masculine now, which means that you donât let her walk all over you with her confident personality).

Then, you need to interact with her on a phone call and in person and let her experience the new you for herself.

When she sees that this time you really have changed, she wonât be able to stop her guard from slipping down (even if only a little bit).

You can then build on her feelings for you and show her that falling in love with each other again will be the most rewarding experience of her life so far.

Where Guys Go Wrong After Getting Dumped

By the wayâ!

If your ex dumped you and you want to get her back, make sure you donât make the following mistakes that guys make in a similar situation to yours.

1. Hoping that she will come to her senses and realize how good of a guy he is, even though he hasnât shown her that during their new interactions

Sometimes a guy wants to know how a dumper feels after a break up, because heâs secretly hoping that his ex will be feeling sad, missing him and thinking things like, âNow that Iâve had the time to think about what I did, I realize what a great guy he really is. He was always so nice and sweet and loving towards me and I was just a bitch back to him. I donât know what made me break up with him like that. I must have been out of my mind. Maybe I should call him to see if he can forgive me. However, knowing him Iâm almost certain that he will forgive me and give me another chance, even though I treated him so badly. Thatâs how wonderful he is.â

She will then contact him and they can get back together again.

Although thatâs a great plot for a romantic movie or novel, in real life a woman rarely thinks that way about an ex guy if he doesnât reactivate her feelings for him first.

This is why, if you want your ex back, you need to show her via your actions, behavior, conversation style and the way you respond to her during interactions that youâre the guy for her.

When you spark her feelings and are also a good guy to her, she wonât be able to stop feeling regret for breaking up with you.

As a result, her heart begins to thaw and she allows herself to feel respect and attraction for you again.

Itâs then up to you to continue building on those feelings inside of her (by interacting with her more and more and showing her that youâre a new man now) and before long, you and her will be a couple again.

Another mistake that guys make in a similar situation to yours isâ!

2. Hoping that she will meet guys who aren't as good as him and come running back

This sometimes does happen.

However, in many cases, a woman will simply move on quickly, even if itâs by getting into a rebound relationship until she can find a guy who can truly give her what she wants in a relationship with him.

Alternatively, she might move on from a break up slowly and deal with the pain privately, rather than hooking up with random guys.

In the meantime, her ex might sit in the background waiting for her to go running back to him, which never happens.

Then, not only does he miss out on the chance of getting her back (i.e. because heâs not doing anything to make it happen), by waiting around and hoping that she comes running back, he ends up losing confidence in his attractiveness to women.

As a result, he ends up hanging on to the idea of getting his ex coming back to him even more and thinking things like, “I donât want another woman. I want her. Iâm going to prove my love to her by waiting for her to realize Iâm the right man for her.”

This causes him to avoid interacting with his ex to re-attract her, but also avoid interacting with other women to attract and start dating them.

Then after many months and possibly even years have passed by, he comes to the realization that his ex is not coming back to him and by that stage, heâs too insecure and self-doubting to do anything about getting her back, or finding himself a new woman.

Another mistake that guys make in a similar situation to yours isâ

3. Assuming that getting back together is pretty much up to her and out of his control

Just because a woman dumped a guy, it doesnât mean she is the one who dictates whether they can get back together again or not.

In fact, what a lot of guys donât realize is that a man actually has control over the ex back process if he focuses on making his ex woman have sexual and romantic feelings for him for again.

When a woman begins to feel surges of respect and desire for him once more, she naturally begins to want him back, because she feels good to be around him again, rather than always feeling annoyed, turned off or disappointed.

As a result her defenses come down and she becomes open to hanging out, kissing and hooking up sexually to see where things go from there.

So, donât make the mistake of thinking that because your ex dumped you, itâs all up to her whether you get back together.

If you want her to give you another chance, you have to be courageous enough to take the lead and make it happen.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Dumped For Being Too Much of a Jealous Guy

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Don't worry – you can still get her back.

Many guys who have been much more jealous than you have been able to get their ex woman to forgive them and give them another chance.

To help you understand how to get her to forgive you and want to give you another chance, you first need to clearly understand why being too jealous will often lead to a break up and what to do instead.

Here are 5 reasons why being too jealous will often lead to a break up:

1. It gives her power over you that she doesn't want

A man can create a relationship dynamic with his woman that makes her want to be a good woman to him and do things to please him, or make her lose so much respect for him that she ends up looking down on him and not caring about his feelings.

In a case where a guy becomes too jealous in a relationship, it's usually a sign that he doesn't have a lot (or any) confidence in himself and in his value to his woman.

So, although initially a woman might feel a bit flattered that her guy values her so much that he gets jealous when other guys talk to her or show interest in her, over time, his jealousy will begin to annoy her.

She will sense that it stems from his insecurities about himself and his value and attractiveness to her and she will begin to wonder things like, “Maybe he's not man enough for me after all.”

Maybe I can do better for myself.”

Then, to test him, she might go out of her way to flirt with other guys in front of him to see how he will react.

If he maintains his composure and even laughs at her for being a silly girl, she will automatically feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him for being a confident, emotionally strong man.

However, if he loses command of himself and gets into a jealous rage, she will know that she can control him with her behavior (i.e. make him feel insecure and doubt his attractiveness to her).

She may then do more and more things to spark his jealousy, because she now knows that she has power over him (e.g. if he does something to annoy her, she might make him jealous to get revenge, or if she wants him to bend to her will she will behave herself to get her way).

Of course, just because she can control him with her behavior, it doesn't mean she wants to.

Here's the thing:

A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy she can control and manipulate with her behavior (i.e. make him jealous), because he doesn't believe in himself enough to trust her to be loyal to him.

So, if you want to re-attract your ex and get her back, you need to show her that you've changed.

That doesn't mean you say something like, “I know I was jealous before, but I've changed all that and I'm better now. Just give me another chance and I'll prove it to you,” because she will probably not believe you.

Also by saying that to her, you're giving her power over you again by asking for another chance. What should you do instead?

Firstly, you need to get to the point where you truly believe in yourself and in your value to your ex and to other women.

When you become confident and self-assured, you stop thinking that another guy will steal your woman, because you know that she won't find a better man than you.

You are a catch and she would be crazy to let you go and even if she did, you will easily find yourself another, even more beautiful woman than her, while she will be the one regretting her actions.

Secondly, you need to respond differently to your ex during interactions.

For example: Imagine you're on a phone call or at a meet up with her and she says something along the lines of, What have you been up to since we broke up? I've been having so much fun. I've even been on a few dates, to make you jealous.

Although the old you would have probably gotten upset and even angry with her, the new you simply laughs and says something along the lines of, Good for you! You're an attractive woman, so I would be surprised if you weren't dating.

In other words, take control of the situation in an assertive manner and show her that you're not going to lose control or feel insecure like you used to.

When she sees for herself that she no longer has power over you, the more respect and sexual attraction she will begin to feel for you again.

Her walls will begin to crumble and then the process of getting her back becomes easier because she is feeling open to you.

Another reason why a woman will break up with a guy for being jealous is

2. It makes her feel like she has to take care of you emotionally

For a woman to maintain respect and sexual attraction for a guy, she has to feel as though he is the man and she is his girl.

So, when a guy becomes jealous and controlling in the relationship with her and she then has to continually say things like, Why are you behaving like this? Why don't you trust me? I chose you and I'm here with you. You know that I love you and that I would never do anything to hurt you. You have nothing to be jealous about. You're my guy and I want to be with you and only you. I promise there's no one else in my life or my heart, to calm him down, she will get very tired of always having to reassure him and take care of him emotionally.

Here's what you need to remember

It's a man's emotional strength that attracts a woman and allows her to relax and be the feminine woman that she really wants to be in a relationship (even though most women don't openly admit that).

So, if her guy is always losing control of his emotions (i.e. by getting jealous) and needs her to reassure him and make him feel safe in the relationship with her, she won't be able to relax and fully be herself with him.

Instead, she will always be on guard around him and worry that something she says or does might set him off again.

She won't be able to look up to him as her emotionally strong, confident man and instead will look at him as a guy that she needs to take care of and support emotionally.

Women hate that.

As a result, her feelings of attraction and love will begin to fade away and she will want to get out of the relationship and away from her jealous guy.

So, if your ex currently thinks you are too emotionally immature for her, what you need to do is reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you again by showing her (via the way that you talk, think and behave) that you're no longer the same guy she broke up with.

When she can see for herself that you really are different now (e.g. more confident, emotionally strong and emotionally mature), it becomes more difficult for her to keep pushing you away, because you're not the guy that she remembers.

She then opens up to talking to you more on the phone and seeing you in person to see how she feels. Another reason why a woman will break up with a guy for being jealous is

3. It makes her worry about how you might behave in the future

Although having a jealous boyfriend might be flattering to a woman in the beginning of a relationship (e.g. because it shows her that he really does like her), over time, she may begin to worry what will happen if they stay together in the long term.

For example: She might think something like, "In the beginning, he got a bit jealous of other guys looking or talking to me. However, over time, he's gotten worse and he's now checking my phone, social media accounts and e-mail messages. We're fighting more frequently and I'm always afraid to talk to other guys, even colleagues at work, in case he gets mad and then I have to deal with another argument or him sulking. I'm tired of always having to defend myself to him, even though I haven't done anything wrong. Not only that, I worry that eventually he might become violent towards me. I really do care for him, but I can't deal with his jealousy anymore. It's just too stressful being in a relationship with him."

As a result, she decides to break up with him and move on.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, you need to first fix the real cause of your jealousy.

You need to realize that jealousy is something that comes from an insecure way of thinking.

Fortunately though, insecure thoughts are self-created, which means that you can change your way of thinking (e.g. "She's going to cheat on me" or "She's a beautiful woman and other guys want to steal her from me") and create confidence instead.

When you think in a confident way (e.g. "Yes, she is a beautiful woman, but I'm a great guy and she's lucky to have me"), you naturally become a confident man and you eventually get to the point where you no longer experience jealousy, because you know you are good enough for her.

As a result, you begin to think, act, behave and respond differently when you interact with your ex.

She picks up on your confidence and self-belief and she naturally starts to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you again.

You can then easily get her back, because that's what a confident, emotionally strong man believes he can do.

Another reason why a woman will break up with a guy for being jealous isâ€¦!

4. It makes other guys seem more attractive if they are more confident than you

[image: It makes other guys seem more attractive, if they are more confident than you]

Most women like the idea of being with a man they can look up to, respect and feel proud to be with. So, if a guy is always getting jealous and as a result, throwing tantrums, sulking, or trying to control what she wears, who she talks to and where she goes, she will start to feel stressed and unhappy in the relationship with him.

Then, if other guys that she interacts with (e.g. at work or university) happen to be relaxed, easy-going and confident around her, she will naturally begin to feel drawn to them in a way that feels good to her.

She may then begin to think things like, â€œWhy am I wasting my time trying to make things work with a guy who is so jealous and controlling, when I can easily find myself a more emotionally mature man who won't lose it every time I happen to mention another guy's name? I don't have to put up with this. I can do better for myself.â€

Then, rather than put up with his jealousy, she will simply break up with him and say, â€œI'm sorry, but you're too much of a jealous guy for me. I just can't handle your issues anymore.â€

She will then open herself to meeting, hooking up with and dating other guys who can attract her by being confident and emotionally mature when they're with her.

Another reason why a woman will break up with a guy for being jealous isâ€¦!

5. It makes her feel like she has become your purpose in life, which she doesn't want

Sometimes, a guy becomes jealous in his relationship with a woman, because he's made her the centre of his world.

For example: He mightâ€¦!

- Stop focusing on his goals and dreams and say to himself something like, â€œI'll get back to those things someday, but right now my relationship comes first. My woman is more important than anything else.â€ Alternatively, if he doesn't have any big goals that he's working towards achieving in his life, he may think, â€œI don't need anything more than my woman. She's the best thing that's ever happened to me and everything else is a distraction from her. Besides, when you're a couple, you can't have your own goals and dreams, instead you must both want the same things.â€
- Give up his hobbies or interests to spend even more time with her.
- Stop hanging out with his friends, unless his girl can come too.
- Get upset when she wants to go out with her friends without him, or pursue a hobby or interest without including him.
- Feel like he can't be happy and fulfilled in his life without her.

Yet, that's where he's wrong.

Contrary to what he believes (i.e. that a woman wants to be her man's main focus in life), his woman will usually feel smothered and turned off by his needy, clingy, insecure and controlling behavior.

She will then naturally begin to lose respect and attraction for him as a man.

Here's the thing:

A woman wants to be with a man who is happy, confident and moving forward in his life with or without her.

She doesn't want to feel as though she has to continue reassuring him and propping him up, while at the same time holding herself back (i.e. not enjoying her life, avoiding her friends, giving up on her hobbies and interests) to keep him happy, confident and forward moving.

This is why, if you got dumped for being too much of a jealous guy in your relationship, to convince your ex that you've changed and get her back, you have to show her that you're an emotionally independent, emotionally strong and emotionally masculine man now.

You need to focus on becoming genuinely happy and independent in your own life first.

When you get to the point where you can genuinely say to yourself, "Yes, I want my ex back, but I don't need her back to feel good about myself and my life," you will know that you're now ready to re-attract her.

Then, when you interact with her, she will see that you're not the same guy she broke up with and have become more emotionally controlled and balanced.

This will make her begin to feel some respect and attraction for you again and then getting back together again becomes something she opens back up to.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Getting Dumped for Being Too Jealous

So, you got dumped for being too much of a jealous guy.

That was then, but this is now.

You're not that guy anymore, which means you can get your ex back based on the man you have become.

You can re-attract her, make her feel respect and sexual attraction for who you are now and get her back.

This is why, not making any of the following mistakes is a crucial step to getting your ex to believe that you're no longer the jealous guy she dumped and reactivating her feelings for you:

1. Hoping that apologizing over and over will make her forgive you and want you back

Of course you should apologize to your ex if you haven't already done so.

However, saying, "I'm sorry. I'm sorry. I'm sorry. Please forgive me," over and over again isn't going to change how she feels about you and want you back.

Why?

Even though you obviously regret how you behaved and your apology is genuine, apologizing over and over doesn't actually prove anything to her (i.e. that you really have changed).

Instead, as far as your ex can tell, it's just a bunch of words designed to make her forgive you, even though you haven't really gotten to the core of the problem (i.e. your jealousy).

As far as she's concerned you're still stuck at the same level you were at when she dumped you and until she can see obvious changes in you (e.g. you remain calm and composed when she talks about other guys or even flirts with them in front of you), your apology will mean nothing to her.

So, don't bother apologizing to your ex woman again and again.

Instead, give her one brief, sincere apology in a calm, confident manner and then focus on showing her via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to her from now on, that you truly are a new and improved man.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Promising that you won't be a jealous guy anymore, even though she can sense that you haven't really changed

As the saying goes, actions speak louder than words.

So, you saying that you won't be jealous anymore will mean nothing to your ex (i.e. because you've likely said that to her many times before), unless she can see for herself that you've changed.

If she interacts with you and tests you (e.g. she talks about how much fun she's having going to clubs and bars and meeting new guys now that you've broken up, mentions that there's a guy at work/university that's asked her out on a date, flirts with the waiter/barman in front of you) and she notices that you're getting upset or annoyed but you're trying to hide it from her by pretending that you don't care, she will instantly know that you haven't changed.

She will then close herself off from you even more and say something along the lines of, Look, I know you mean well, but you and I are wrong for one another. We seem to bring out the worst in each other and that's not how a relationship should be. We gave it a shot, but it didn't work out. Let's accept that and move on.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Feeling unwelcome to get her back because of how badly you behaved

Many guys make the mistake of becoming very jealous with their woman.

It's a common error and not something to be ashamed of.

Instead, it's something to learn from and something that can cause you to quickly become a more emotionally strong man and never make that mistake again.

However, don't expect your ex to care that you have learned from your mistake, because she won't.

At least not unless you first show her that you've changed via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to her and react when she's having fun without you, talking to other guys or doing things that used to set you off in the past and then sparked her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

When she can see that you've truly changed and she also feels respect and attraction for you, she will easily and naturally open back up to her feelings of love for you.

So, don't ruin your chances of getting your ex back by thinking that she won't be interested because you stuffed up before.

That was then.

This is now.

You're a new man.

When she can see that for herself, she'll be grateful that you kept your cool, didn't give up on your love and got her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Long Should You Wait to Talk to Your Ex After a Break Up?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends on the following:

1. How bad was the break up?

If your ex absolutely hates you, then you should give her a full week of space before talking to her. She might contact you before then and if she does, use the interaction to begin re-attracting her and start replacing her negative feelings and perceptions of you to positive ones.

However, if she doesn't contact you during that week, don't worry about it and don't start thinking negative thoughts like, "If she's not calling me it probably means she will never forgive me and give me another chance. She must hate me so much. It's hopeless. I will never be able to make her change her mind about me."

Instead, give her the full week to allow for things to calm down between you and her and allow her to start missing some of the good things about you (e.g. the way you used to make her smile, the way you treated her so well, that you were reliable), rather than talking to her too soon and then discovering that she's still too angry and resentful towards you, so she remains closed off and refuses to talk to you.

Then, use the week apart to quickly change and improve some of the things that caused your ex to break up with you in the first place (e.g. if you were jealous and controlling before, focus on becoming more confident and emotionally independent so you no longer need her to feel good about yourself, if you allowed her to dominate you during conversation focus on becoming more emotionally masculine and standing up for yourself more, if you were childish and immature before, focus on growing up a little bit and having more purpose and direction in your life).

After a week, call her on the phone (always better than texting because it's more difficult for her to ignore you that way and it also allows her to experience the new you) and begin re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you and make her open up to seeing you in person again.

As long as you get some face-to-face time with her and properly re-spark her feelings, she won't be able to stop herself from at least being curious after that to see if you really have changed for real.

When that happens, the next step is hugging, kissing, sex and getting the relationship back together. You'd be surprised at how often that happens.

On the other hand, if you and your ex parted on relatively good terms, then you can call her after a day or two to say hi and see how she's doing.

Don't make a big deal about it though, or give her the impression that you want her back right away.

Instead, begin re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you by making her smile and laugh and feel happy to be hearing from you again.

Then when she relaxes her guard a little bit, get her to agree to meet up for a cup of coffee to say hi as friends.

Initially she might be a bit resistant to the idea and she may say something along the lines of, â€œNo, I donâ€™t think we should see each other. Itâ€™s just too soon.â€

However, you canâ€™t let that upset you and cause you to start doubting yourself.

Just maintain your confidence and in a relaxed, easy-going tone of voice say something like, â€œHey, the sooner we start seeing each other as friends, the quicker we will heal. Then, we will both be able to move on without any negative thoughts or feelings about our relationship holding us back. I promise, this will be good for both of us. Besides, itâ€™s just coffee and then, if you decide you donâ€™t want to see me again, I will respect that and leave you alone, okay? Anyway, Iâ€™m free on Tuesday and Thursday, so which of those two days suits you the best?â€

She will then likely agree to see you, even itâ€™s only to give her an out the next time you ask her to meet up (i.e. because you promised her that you would leave her alone if she decides thatâ€™s what she wants).

You can then go ahead and arrange a suitable day and time.

Then, when you meet up with her, you need to focus on saying and doing the types of things that will spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. maintain your confidence with her when she says that itâ€™s over between you, use humor to bring down her guard, flirt with her to make her feel sexually attracted to you again) and convince her that she wants to see you more and more, rather than never again.

From there, use every interaction you have with her (i.e. over the phone and in person) to fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another thing to consider before you decide how long you should wait to talk to your ex after a break up isâ€

2. How long was your relationship?

Your approach will depend on the length of the relationship and the outcome you want.

If it was just a casual sex relationship that lasted for weeks, your exâ€™s reasons for breaking up with you will likely not be as complex as if you and her have been together for a year or longer.

For example: In a casual, short-term relationship some of the reasons why a woman might break up with a guy areâ€

- She wants the relationship to proceed to the next level (e.g. see each other exclusively, move in together) but he wants to keep things casual and continue just having sex without fully committing to each other.
- She wants to continue having an open, laid back sexual relationship, while he wants the relationship to become more serious.
- She initially felt some attraction for him and thought that those feelings would grow, but they didnâ€™t and she got bored.
- He initially portrayed characteristics that were attractive to her (e.g. confidence, emotional maturity, emotional masculinity), but he soon changed and became insecure, needy, clingy and immature which turned her off.

So, based on these reasons, your first decision is whether you are prepared to give her what she wants (e.g. a more serious relationship vs. casual sex, the attraction experience she wants from you).

Then, if you decide that you do want to give her what she wants, you don't need to wait around for days or weeks before you call.

Instead, a few days is enough time for you to make the necessary adjustments to your thinking, behavior and the way you respond to her.

You can then interact with her over the phone or in person, re-spark her feelings for you and get her back.

On the other hand, if it was a relationship that lasted more than a year, you should first get clear on some of your ex's deeper, secret reasons for breaking up with you, (e.g. the confidence she was attracted to initially when she fell in love with you has turned into insecurity, you spent too much time trying to please her rather than getting her to be a good woman for you, so she stopped respecting you, you became too boring and predictable and expected her to be happy to be stuck in a directionless relationship for the rest of her life).

Once you've figured out what really turned your ex off about you, take a few days (no more than 7) to quickly change and improve those things about yourself.

Then get her on a phone call and use some humor to make her feel happy and relaxed to be talking to you again.

Build on her feelings of respect and attraction as you talk to her and get her thinking things like, "I don't know what happened to him this past week, but he's really different now. This is the man I always wanted him to be and imagined being with for life. Maybe I made a mistake after all."

She then agrees to meet up with you, because she secretly wants to see for herself if you've truly changed, or if it was all an act to lure her back, or only something you can do on a phone call.

At the meet up make sure that you continue to say and do the things that will prove to her that you are now a new and improved man (e.g. maintain his confidence with her even if she's saying that she will never give you another chance with her or is being cold and aloof towards you, use humor to make her feel at ease and enjoy being around you, bring out her girly, feminine side by being emotionally masculine around her).

When she can see for herself that you really have changed in some of the ways that are important to her, she won't be able to stop feeling surges of respect and attraction for you again.

From there you just need to continue showing her that you really are a new man now and before long she will reconnect with her feelings of love too and open back up to being your girl once more.

Another thing to consider before you decide how long you should wait to talk to your ex after a break up is:

3. Is she going to be able to move on easily without you?

In some cases, a woman knows that she's attractive and desirable enough to quickly find herself a new man (e.g. because guys are always hitting on her even though she's in a relationship, there are guys who have shown interest in dating her at work/university/the gym).

Even if there's no one currently waiting in the wings for her, she knows that all she has to do is start going to bars or clubs, join an online dating site or get a dating app like Tinder, or put out the word that she's single again and she'll have a new man in no time at all.

In a case like that, it's better to get her back sooner, rather than later.

If you wait too long and possibly decide to use the No Contact Rule (i.e. ignore her for 30 or 60 days) to make her come running back to you, your plan might backfire and you may end up losing her to another guy.

Of course, if your ex is a bit shy, or she feels insecure about her attractiveness, it might take a bit longer for her to move on with another guy.

However, even in a case like that, waiting too long to talk to her after the break up might still cause you to lose her.

For example: She might take you ignoring her as a sign that you're not interested in her anymore and she may then hook up with any guy she can to make herself feel better.

Alternatively, she might get angry with you for ignoring her and refuse to talk to you when you try to get hold of her later on.

Here's the thing!

If your intention is to get your ex back, then why waste time ignoring her.

Anything longer than 3 to 7 days is a waste of time and just gives a woman more motivation to forget about you and move on.

So, give her a few days of space if you want to, but then get her on a call and begin reactivating her feelings for you so that you can get her back into a relationship with you where she belongs.

Another thing to consider before you decide how long you should wait to talk to your ex after a break up is!

4. Are you ready to attract her in a new way when you talk to her, or are you going to be offering her the same old attraction experience?

Sometimes a guy might wait weeks or even months before he talks to his ex after their break up, only for her to quickly cut him off and say something along the lines of, "Look, I know you mean well, but I haven't changed my mind about us these last few weeks/months that we've been apart. What we had is over for me and I'm not interested in trying again. Please accept it and move on."

Why does she respond like that?

Mainly because the guy has wasted all that time by not changing or improving himself in any way.

So, when he finally does interact with his ex on the phone or in person and she sees that he's still stuck at the same level he was at when they broke up, she instinctively pulls away because she can see that he's not the man she wants and he never will be.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, you need to use the time apart (i.e. the 3 to 7 days) to quickly transform yourself into the kind of man she wants you to be (e.g. more confident and emotionally independent, more assertive and bold, more emotionally masculine rather than neutral or friendly towards her).

You need to be able to attract her in the ways that she really wants.

Note: You don't have to become perfect to get her back, but you do need to give her a new and improved attraction experience if you want to convince her to give you another chance.

Then, interact with her on a phone call and more importantly in person and make her feel truly attracted to who you are now.

Donâ€¢t try to convince her by telling her how much youâ€¢ve changed.

Let her experience it for herself as she interacts with you.

She will automatically sense the changes in you by listening to how you talk and observing your body language and actions.

Her guard will then naturally begin to slip down and she begins to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the man you are now.

So, make sure you are ready to attract your ex when you talk to her again after the break up.

By the wayâ€¢!

It doesnâ€¢t have to take weeks or months for you to begin changing.

A few days is all it usually takes for a guy to start the process of improving himself.

So, focus on that for a few days, then take action and get her back.

Itâ€¢s actually easier than you might think.

Where Guys Go Wrong After a Break Up

If you want to get your ex back into a relationship with you, your approach is very important.

Not only does it matter how long you take to contact her after the break up, but also what you say and do when you do talk to her.

So, make sure you donâ€¢t make the following mistakes and reduce your chances of successfully re-attracting her and getting her back:

1. Not hearing from his ex, so he waits longer in the hope that she eventually reaches out to him

[image: Not hearing from her, so he waits and waits and waits...]

Sometimes a guy might decide to avoid contact with his ex and simply wait for her to finally get in touch with him.

He usually thinks something like, â€¢Things didnâ€¢t end off very well between us, so itâ€¢s probably a good idea to just back off for a while and let things cool down. Then, when sheâ€¢s feeling a bit better, she might get in touch with me and I can then apologize to her for what happened and try to convince her to give me another chance.â€¢

He might then wait and wait for some communication from her that doesnâ€¢t come and ends up feeling dejected and hurt and wondering what went wrong.

Hereâ€¢s the thingâ€¢!

Giving a woman more and more time after a break up rarely results in her coming back on her own.

Instead, she either feels relieved that she doesnâ€¢t have to deal with an ex who is trying to get her back and she uses the time to move on and find herself a replacement guy.

Alternatively, she takes it as a sign that he isnâ€¢t interested in getting her back, so she focuses on fully getting over him and moving on.

Don't let that happen to you.

You need to interact with your ex over the phone or in person, so you can begin reawakening her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you right away.

If you wait for her to come back to you without reactivating her feelings for you, she's almost certainly just going to move on without you.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Talking to her in a neutral way and hoping that she will be excited about that

If you finally do talk to your ex and you act friendly or neutral around her, it's almost certain that she will only have friendly, neutral, non-sexual feelings for you.

She may even begin seeing you as her good friend now and start telling you all about the guys she's having sex with or dating.

You probably don't want that, do you?

So, make sure that when you talk to your ex on the phone or in person, you actively spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you, rather than being nice, neutral and non-sexual around her.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should come on so strong that she feels uncomfortable and turned off, nor should you avoid being friendly towards her.

Instead, flirt with her to create some sexual tension between you, rather than pretending to be an innocent friend who isn't interested in her in a sexual or romantic way.

When you make her want you again sexually and romantically, the relationship will naturally get back together right away, or very quickly.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Trying to discuss the relationship and work things out, before he has re-attracted her

Sometimes a guy will make the mistake of thinking that the path to getting his ex back is by getting into long discussions about the relationship with her.

He assumes that if, when he contacts her after the break up, he quickly begins discussing what went wrong and ways they can fix that, his ex will be impressed that he's putting in the effort to fix himself and become a better man for her and she will then automatically want to give him another chance.

Yet, even though his intentions are good, discussing the relationship with a woman before you've at least sparked some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you first, only makes her close up and pull away even more, because it highlights to her all the reasons she broke up with him in the first place.

So, just leave what happened between you and your ex in the past and focus on re-attracting her instead, so she starts to want you for her own reasons (e.g. she feels respect and attraction for the new you, she likes the man you are now).

The more you reactivate her feelings for you, the more she will open back up to the idea of being in a relationship with you, without you needing to force her into it.

Then get her back and enjoy the good times ahead.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

4 Tips on How to Handle the FIRST Week After a Break Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The first week after a break up can be one of the hardest to get through, depending on how you approach it.

To help you get through it more easily and to help prepare you to attract her back, here are 4 tips that you need to read...

1. Understand that it is possible to get her back and that you will almost certainly achieve that Right now the pain of your break up is relatively fresh, so itâ€™s really easy for you to allow yourself to think negative thoughts like, â€œIâ€™ve lost my ideal woman and life feels hopeless without her. I just donâ€™t know how I will ever be able to move on without her. Everything I do feels so empty and pointless because sheâ€™s not here to share these moments with me, but she said she never wants to see me again, so I know itâ€™s futile to even think about getting her back. However, I still canâ€™t stop thinking about her all the time. What should I do?â€

The good news though is that all those negative thoughts about your chances of reconciling with your ex are false.

In reality, getting an ex back is not only possible, itâ€™s actually very likely when you approach the ex back process in the correct way.

So, donâ€™t let the shock of your break up cause you to start thinking, acting and behaving in ways that will turn your ex off when you interact with her (e.g. being sad, depressed, needy, unable to cope like a real man would).

Regardless of whether your ex is saying things like, â€œForget it! Nothing you say or do will make me change my mind about us being broken up,â€ you canâ€™t let it get to you and put you off.

Instead, you need to focus on saying and doing the types of things that will re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so she naturally and easily changes her mind without any pressure from you.

From now on, when you interact with her over the phone and in person, you need to let her experience the new and improved you for herself (e.g. youâ€™re more confident and self-assured, youâ€™re more emotionally independent now and even though you want her back you donâ€™t need her back to feel good about yourself, youâ€™re more emotionally masculine and know how to push her buttons to make her feel attracted again).

When your ex can see for herself that youâ€™re not going to pieces without her and that you donâ€™t lose your confidence around her despite the fact that she treats you with indifference, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling respect for you again.

When she starts respecting you again, she then also begins to feel sexually attracted to you again.

When those two emotions are reactivated, it becomes difficult for her to keep pushing you away and saying that she doesnâ€™t want to be your girl again.

She feels drawn to you in a good way and realizes that what you and her have isnâ€™t over after all.

As a result, she lets her defenses slip down a little bit to see what will happen next.

You can then build on her feelings for you during one or two more interactions and by then, she will want to get back together again as much as you.

It's actually easier than you might think.

So, believe that it is possible and do something about it (i.e. contact her right away and start re-attracting her rather than sitting around feeling miserable).

Another tip on how to handle the first week after a break up is

2. Get clear on which ex back approach you plan on using

There are many ways you can go about getting your ex back, but until you've decided which way is best for you, you may end up mixing everything up and trying random things.

That almost certainly won't work and as a result, it might cause you to become despondent and maybe even give up altogether.

So, what should you do instead?

Find out what your options are, choose one and do it properly.

For example: Here are 3 options

1. Give her space for 3 to 7 days to allow for things to calm down and make her start missing you.

- Then re-attract her (e.g. by making her laugh and smile during interactions, flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you) to make her want you back for her own reasons. For example: Some of her reasons might be
"She feels attracted to you now."
"She doesn't feel like the relationship is over."
"She feels like there is still something there between you and her and she wants to explore it or experience it."

2. Ignore her for 30 days and hope that she comes back on her own.

- This method usually backfires. Why?
"When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, not hearing from him at all after the break up is a relief to her, because she doesn't have to deal with him trying to get her back."
"She then uses the time to fully get over him and move on (usually by hooking up with a new man)."
"Then, by the time her ex gets in touch with her again after 30 days, she's no longer available and he's lost his chance of getting her back."
"Alternatively, even if a woman does still have feelings for her ex and secretly hopes they can work things out, when he starts ignoring her immediately after the break up, she usually takes it as a sign that he doesn't care for her anymore."
"Then, to heal her pain she puts in extra effort to move on and meet a new man."
"This is why it's always better to stay in touch with an ex after a break up and use the time to re-spark her feelings."

3. Try to build a relationship back up via text.

- This is usually something that guys do when they don't feel very confident in themselves and in their ability to re-attract their ex over the phone and in person.
"Unfortunately, texting an ex to re-attract her doesn't work in most cases."
"Instead, it ends up turning a woman off, because the guy can easily appear desperate and needy by putting way too much effort into his text" replies.ââAdditionally, if he doesnâ get to a phone call with her, the woman may feel that he doesnâ really care about her enough to move past texting.ââShe then closes herself off even more and focuses on moving on without him.

As you can see, you have many options you can take to get your ex back.

However, if you really want to be successful, the best option is to interact with her on a phone call, but more importantly, in person and actively reawaken her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

When you do, getting her back becomes really easy.

Another tip on how to handle the first week after a break up isâ|

3. Improve your ability to attract her and other women

You can sit around feeling despondent and missing your ex during the first week after your break up, or you can use that time to improve your ability to attract her so that you can get her back.

How can you do that?

Here is a quick lesson on how a woman's attraction really worksâ|

Unlike men who feel attracted to a woman based mostly on her physical appearance, women are predominantly attracted to a guy based on his ability to make her feel the way she wants to feel by the way he talks and interacts with her, his body language, his attitude and the way he responds to her.

Itâs about who he is when sheâs interacting with him.

For example:

- Is he confident or nervous?
- Is he too serious, or does he make her laugh and smile?
- Is he desperate or calm and relaxed?
- Does he make her feel feminine and girly around him, or does he make her feel neutral or even turned off?
- Is he the kind of man she can rely on to be a man all the time (e.g. during a crisis, when things donât go his way), or does he expect her to be the emotionally stronger one and take the lead?

That is what really matters to a woman in terms of attraction in a relationship.

This is why, if youâre serious about getting your ex back, you have to be able to attract her in the ways that matter to her.

If you try to get your ex back while making the same old attraction mistakes that you made before she broke up with you (e.g. feeling insecure about your attractiveness and value to her, giving her too much power over you, treating her more like a friend than a lover, lacking confidence around her and other people), she isnât going to feel motivated to get back with you.

So, if you want to re-attract her, youâve got to show her via the way you talk, think, act and behave that youâve become a better man (e.g. more confident and emotionally strong, more emotionally masculine, no longer insecure and needy).

Then, the more she experiences the new and improved you, the more emotionally attracted to you she will feel.

It then becomes easier for her to imagine herself being your woman once again.

However, if you try to re-attract her by offering her the types of things that don't matter to her (e.g. flowers, gifts, promises to do whatever she wants you to do), she's not going to be very interested and neither will any other women.

Another tip on how to handle the first week after a break up isâ€¦!

4. Know that getting her back will be an enjoyable experience for both you and her, not just you

Reunited love feels amazing.

It's one of the most incredible feelings a couple can experience together.

Look at it this wayâ€¦!

You and your ex had a relationship.

You used to feel great together, but then things went bad for a little while causing you to break up.

However, neither of you gave up on the love you felt for each other and instead, you put in the effort to change, improve and become better than before.

As a result, you got back together again and are now happy, more mature, more in love and more connected than ever before.

Looking back at what you've been through together as a couple only makes you love, respect and cherish each other even more.

Women love that feeling and so do men.

It's a really amazing experience to go through and literally millions of couples do it every year.

People break up and get back together again all the time.

The great thing is, you can be one of those men who gets his ex back into a relationship that's even better than it was before.

When you spark your ex's feelings of love, respect and attraction for you again and then build on that, she won't be able to stop herself from wanting to experience the joy of renewed love with you.

So, don't sit around thinking things like, â€œWhy would she want to get back with me?â€œ or, â€œJust because I want her back doesn't mean she will want me too,â€œ or â€œHow can I even convince her to give me another chance?â€œ

Remember: You will be doing your ex a favor by making her fall in love with you again and getting back together again.

It will be an amazing experience for her, just as much as for you.

So, go ahead and do it.

She's waiting for you.

Where Guys Go Wrong During the First Week After a Break Up

What you do in the first week after a break up is actually more important than you might think, because itâs either going to be something that will help you get your ex back, or something that will turn her off even more and convince her that youâre definitely not the right guy for her.

So, if you want to make sure youâre doing things to re-attract your ex, you need to avoid the following mistakes:

1. Spending the week obsessing about her and worrying about what she might be up to

Sometimes a guy feels really lucky to have attracted his woman, because she is the most beautiful, interesting and exciting woman he has ever dated.

So, when the relationship ends, he might end up thinking things like, *âShe was way out of my league. I bet there are dozens of guys already lining up to get a date with her or hook up with her sexually. Yet, the thought of her with some other guy is driving me crazy! Not only canât I stand thinking about her being naked in another manâs arms, I also canât bear the idea that she might be comparing him to me and thinking of how much she prefers him. What do I do then? I wonât be able to compete with that, so I wonât stand a chance of getting her back.*â

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

When a guy thinks that way, he ends up losing confidence in himself and in his ability to re-attract his ex.

Then, when he interacts with her over the phone or in person and she picks up on his low self-esteem, she feels turned off even more.

She then decides that heâs not the right guy for her, so she rejects his attempts to get her back.

So, if you want to re-attract your ex, make sure you donât do things that will make you doubt your value to her (e.g. obsess about what sheâs doing).

Instead, focus on regaining control of your emotions and getting rid of any feelings of neediness and desperation that you might be feeling, by knowing that you are good enough for her and therefore you can re-attract her and get her back.

You can then relax and confidently get her back over the next few days to a week.

Another mistake to avoid isâ!

2. Preparing a huge e-mail or letter to send her about his feelings

It can sometimes be difficult for a guy to express his feelings directly to his ex (e.g. because heâs nervous of how she will respond, he gets too emotional).

So, he may decide that the best way to let her know how he feels is via an e-mail or letter.

He might then pour his heart out to her and tell her things like how much he still loves her, how lost he feels without her and how he desperately wants them to get back together again.

Heâs secretly hoping that when his ex reads it, she will feel overwhelmed and flattered that he cares so much for her and she will then change her mind about being broken up.

Yet, it rarely works out that way.

Instead, when a woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy, him writing to her to express his feelings for her doesn't impress her at all.

Rather than make her think, “That’s just so romantic. I never realized he cared so much. That changes everything. He deserves another chance with me after all,” she just feels turned off by what she perceives as his selfish behavior, because he’s only thinking about himself and what he wants and not about her.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't make everything about what you feel and what you want.

How she feels is what matters to her, so focus on making her feel respect, attraction and love for you again.

When you change how she feels about you, you'll get what you want too (i.e. her back into a relationship with you).

Focus on your feelings only and she push you away and try to move on.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Focusing on improving superficial things about yourself (you're your haircut, clothes), rather than improving what really matters

Although a woman may appreciate it if her ex gives himself a bit of a makeover (especially if he'd become a slob during their relationship).

However, that's not the main thing that will make her want to give him another chance.

Instead, she's going to look out for his ability to attract her emotionally during interactions.

If he can make her feel respect and attraction for him based on the way he thinks, acts, behaves and responds to her, she will either feel drawn to him again and want to give him a chance, or she will feel turned off and want to move on.

This is why you need to use the first week after your break up to improve some of the things that will truly matter to your ex (e.g. becoming more confident, emotionally masculine, assertive), rather than focusing on superficial things and then coming across as the ex who just doesn't get her, so she moves on.

Focus on what really matters to her and will truly make her feel sparks of attraction for you again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Said She Feels as Though We Are Just Friends Now

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why:

1. You haven't done anything to sexually re-attract her yet (even though you might think you have)

Quite often, when a guy gets broken up with, but still has feelings for his ex, his main course of action to get her back is to stick around in her life and act like a nice, neutral friend with her.

He may even justify his decision by thinking things like, "If we can stay friends, I will be able to stick around in her life. Then, over time, she will hopefully realize that she misses what we had and we can then get back together again. However, I have to make sure that I stay on my best behavior and not flirt or let her know what my intentions with her actually are (i.e. to get her back), because if she finds out before she's ready, she might decide to cut me out of her life completely."

He might then make himself available to his ex's every beck and call, help her out with whatever she needs (e.g. run errands for her, lend her money, fix things around her house) and maybe even become her shoulder to cry on when she gets dumped by another guy.

Secretly though he's likely hoping that she will soon come to her senses and realize that the man for her is actually him.

After all, that's how it works in Hollywood movies, right?

Wrong.

In real life, if a guy isn't actively making his ex feel sexually and romantically attracted to him again, she's probably never going to look at him and think, "I can't believe how nice and sweet he is. How could I have missed that when we were together? I don't need all that sexual desire and romantic passion stuff. I just need a sweet guy who will do anything I ask him to."

It just doesn't work that way.

Instead, she will likely give her ex a nice, neutral hug and say something along the lines of, "You're a really great guy and I feel so lucky to still have you in my life. However, we're just friends now."

The guy might then feel hurt and confused and wonder why things didn't work out the way he hoped.

The answer is, because he didn't do anything to re-attract her.

Here's the thing:

Although a woman might appreciate it when a guy is being nice to her, it's not what causes her to have ongoing sexual and romantic feelings for him.

She might like him and care about him as a person, but without that extra spark of sexual attraction, the relationship will remain firmly in the friend zone.

So, if you want your ex to see you as being more than just a friend, you need to make sure that you act like youâ€”re more than just a friend.

In other words, you need to use your interactions with her to spark her feelings of respect and sexual desire for you.

How can you do that?

By using humor to bring down her guard and make her feel good around you again, by flirting with her to create sexual tension and by displaying some of the traits and behaviors that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, emotional masculinity, maturity, determination).

The more she experiences this side to you, the more difficult it will become for her to keep feeling as though you and her are just friends.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend said she feels as though you and her are just friends now isâ€”!

2. She can see that you still don't have the masculine edge she wants in a guy

Sometimes a guy gets into a relationship with a woman and because heâ€”s a nice guy he subconsciously decides that his woman will be happiest if she gets her way all the time in the relationship.

As a result, he steps back and lets her take on the leading role where she makes all the decisions and he is in the background being a nice, sweet and supportive boyfriend.

If she then tries to push him into taking the lead, he will usually say something like, â€”I donâ€”t mind. Itâ€”s your decision. You know I will go with whatever you wantâ€” or, â€”Baby, whatever makes you happy is fine with me.â€”

Yet, what a guy like that may not realize is that even though modern women are independent and have their own jobs, earn their own money and are perfectly capable of looking after themselves, they are still instinctively attracted to and respect a man who has a masculine edge and can take the lead in a relationship with them.

Of course, that doesnâ€”t mean that a woman wants a man who is controlling, bosses her around, disrespects her or her opinions and ideas, or makes all the decisions every time.

It simply means that the man is the emotionally stronger, more masculine one, which then makes a woman feel feminine and girly in his presence.

She can then relax and be the feminine woman who gets emotional and cries, laughs and even throws tantrums, knowing that she is safe in her relationship and that her guy wonâ€”t crumble or fall apart. She can then focus on loving him and being a good woman to him, rather than feeling like she needs to take care of him and the relationship.

So, when a woman doesnâ€”t have that in a relationship she will gradually disconnect from her feelings of respect and attraction for a guy and she may begin seeing him as more of a friend or a big brother than a boyfriend/lover.

When that happens, she will usually break up with him and try to find herself a guy who has more of a masculine edge than her ex.

If he then tries to get her back by being a nice, sweet guy and offering to do whatever she wants him to do she will likely think something along the lines of, â€”He still doesnâ€”t get it. He thinks that what I want is to be in charge, but what I really want is for him to take the lead and sweep me off my feet with his masculinity. I know this isn't a romantic novel or Hollywood movie, but I still want to feel like he's the man and I'm the woman, rather than like I'm his mother or big sister.

She will then gently, but firmly push him away by saying something like, I really do care for you, but I feel as though we're just friends now. So, let's focus on that and not try to go back to what we had before.

This is why, if you want to change how your ex girlfriend currently feels and get her back, you need to show her that you now have the ability to be masculine in a way that makes her feel feminine.

She needs to be able to see that she can relax and trust that you really are the man now.

When she experiences this side to you during interactions, she will naturally begin to feel surges of respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, she stops seeing you as just a friend and she begins feeling drawn to you in ways that feel good to her.

She wants to talk to you more and she also wants to see you in person and you can then fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend said she feels as though you and her are just friends now is

3. She is tired of waiting for you to change and become the kind of man she wants

For a woman to break up with a guy, she usually needs to get to the point where she doesn't have any hope of him changing and improving in the ways that are important to her (e.g. she wants him to stop being so clingy and needy of her and stand up on his own two feet for a change, she wants him to stop being so irresponsible and unmotivated in his life and start thinking about his and her future, she wants him to put in more effort to get to know her family rather than being anti-social and making her feel uncomfortable when she has to lie for him to them).

Then, after the break up, if her ex tries to get her back, the first thing she's going to look out for, is his ability to change and improve.

However, if she gets a sense that he's not going to change and become the guy she really needs him to be and that he doesn't even know what, or how, to change, she will keep him at arms length by telling him that she only sees him as a friend now.

In the meantime, she will focus on fully getting over him, moving on and finding herself a replacement man as quickly as possible.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend back, you have to make sure that you change and improve in some of the ways that are important to her (e.g. become more emotionally independent, find your purpose in life and go after it, become more confident and self-assured) and let her experience it during interactions.

You need to show her via the way you think, talk, behave, interact with her and respond to what she says and does, that you really have changed this time.

Remember: You don't have to become perfect to regain her respect, attraction and love for you, but you do have to become better than before.

Then, when you interact with her and she encounters a very different guy to the one she broke up with, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

However, if you try to get her back without making some improvements to the things that really matter to her, she's just going to say, "Sorry, but I feel as though we are just friends now."

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend said she feels as though you and her are just friends now is

4. She hasn't felt a spark with you for some time now

Most relationships start off with the man being charming, attentive and passionate towards the woman.

He will usually compliment her on her appearance, take her out for romantic dinners and send her flirty texts to make her feel desirable and even more attracted to him.

Unfortunately though, in most cases, all the romance and flirting starts to fade away once the relationship becomes more comfortable.

Of course that doesn't mean that the guy becomes a jerk and stops treating his woman well.

Instead, he just falls into the habit of treating her more like his friend, or a roommate than anything else.

As a result, the spark of sexual attraction that the woman once felt for her man will gradually start to fade away.

She might still have sex with him and even love him, but it just isn't the same as being romantically attracted to and in love with him.

When that happens, she may begin thinking things like, "Our relationship feels so dull and uninteresting. There's just no spark between us anymore. All we ever do these days is watch TV or go out with friends. He doesn't even notice me. I'm tired of feeling like his buddy. I want to feel like a real woman again. I want to feel sexy and noticed," and start to pull away, be more closed off and stop having sex with him over time.

If the guy picks up on her unhappiness and begins giving her the attention that she is craving, she will then quickly settle back into being a loving and attentive woman to him.

However, if he remains oblivious to her and her needs, she will eventually get to the point where she feels unfilled in her relationship with him, so she breaks up with him.

He might then try to get her back by begging and pleading with her and telling her how much he still loves her, but that won't make her change her mind.

Instead, she will usually tell him something along the lines of, "You're a great guy and I really do still care about you, but I don't see you as being anything more than a friend. Please accept that and let's be friends from now on."

So, if you want your ex girlfriend back, make sure that you reactivate the spark of sexual attraction inside of her first.

When she begins to feel like a desirable, sexy woman around you again, her feelings for you will automatically begin to change.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend said she feels as though you and her are just friends now is

5. She loves you as a person, but isn't in love with you in a sexual, romantic way

When a relationship becomes boring and stagnant (e.g. because the guy has stopped building on his woman's feelings of respect, attraction and love for him and has become too predictable and dull), a woman might start thinking things like, "I'm confused. I still love him, but I'm not sure if it's the kind of love I want to be experiencing. I just don't feel excited when I'm around him anymore. In fact, I feel kind of numb and detached. Maybe I should take some time away from him to see if I will miss him."

She might then break up with him to see how she feels.

However, as the time passes, she may discover that she doesn't miss him at all and that although she does love him, that love is platonic rather than sexual and romantic.

Right now, that might be exactly how your ex girlfriend is thinking and feeling about you.

The good news though, is that you can actually change her feelings for you and make her want you sexually and romantically again.

How can you do that?

For example: You might

Focus on becoming more emotionally independent (e.g. by making progress on your own goals and ambitions, going out and having fun with other people, taking up a new hobby or interests). When she can see that even though you still want her back, you don't need her back to feel confident and happy in your life, she will automatically start to feel drawn to you again.

Use interactions with her to flirt with her during conversations to create some sexual tension between you and her and make her stop seeing you as a neutral friend. In other words, make sure you create a new spark with her.

Stop being a "Yes, a man" around her and take the lead in the ex back process.

Be more emotionally dominant around her so that she can relax into thinking, talking and behaving like a feminine woman when she's with you.

Use ballsy humor to make her laugh and smile and feel good every time she is talking to you.

The more you make her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you, the more she will start to think things like, "I guess breaking up was exactly what I needed to show me that he really is the man I want to be with after all. I don't want to be friends anymore, I want to be his woman. I want him to hold me and kiss me and make love to me."

As a result, she drops her guard and opens back up to the idea of being a couple again.

Common Problems Guys Experience When Trying to Get an Ex Back Who Only Sees Him as a Friend

You can get your ex girlfriend back, even though she says that she only sees you as a friend now.

However, make sure you don't give up at the first sign of resistance from her, or blow it by making common mistakes that guys make when in a similar situation to yours.

For example: Some of the problems or mistakes you might encounter are

1. She says that she's open to being friends, but then changes her mind

When a guy still has strong feelings for his ex girlfriend and wants to get back with her as quickly as possible, he may decide to use her openness to being friends as a way of convincing her to give him another chance (e.g. by always hanging around her and being nice and helpful, bringing up all the good times they had together as a couple during conversations with her, telling her how much he still cares for her).

Yet, rather than make her think, “I don't know what I was thinking by breaking up with him. He's so loving towards me that I would be stupid to let him go. Maybe we should get back together again after all, even though I don't feel sexually attracted to him. That's not so important, is it? As long as he loves me and takes care of me, what more do I really need?” she instead starts to regret her decision to stay friends with him.

Why?

She can tell that he's only being her friend because he's trying to get a relationship with her again.

However, she doesn't want that, because he hasn't changed his approach to attraction, so she still doesn't feel drawn to him in a way that feels good to her.

She may then begin to avoid him (e.g. talk to him less and less over the phone, make excuses not to see him in person, stop responding to his texts or social media messages), in the hope of slowly drifting out of his life without him noticing.

She might also put in extra effort to meet a new man, so that she can then say, “Hey, guess what? I've met someone and we're dating now,” in the hope that he will give up and leave her alone.

This is why, if you want to get your ex girlfriend back for real, focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, rather than pushing for a relationship.

The next problem or mistake you might encounter is

2. You accept a friendship, act like a neutral friend and she then loses interest

By all means accept a friendship with your ex girlfriend if that is all she's offering you right now.

However, don't make the mistake of being her nice, innocent non-flirtatious friend who's in the friend zone.

If that's how you behave around her, her feelings for you simply won't change and you may even be shocked when you realize she's busy moving on without you, having sex and going out on dates with other guys.

This is why you need to make sure that you use your friendship with your ex to spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, every chance you get.

You're not going to just act like a friend and wait in the friend zone and hope that she gives you another chance.

You're going to actively make her feel attracted to you again.

The more you do that, the more she will stop looking at you as just a friend or as her ex who she doesn't have any feelings for.

She will feel good when she interacts with you and will become more open to giving the relationship another chance or have sex with you again to see how she feels about you now.

The next problem or mistake you might encounter isâ€¦

3. You arenâ€™t willing to step up and be a more emotionally strong and emotionally masculine man for her

Sometimes a guy might think to himself, â€œThis is who I am. This is the guy she originally fell in love with. I donâ€™t understand why thatâ€™s not enough for her anymore?â€

As a result, he doesnâ€™t change anything about himself, but secretly he still hopes that his ex will wake up one day and realize she made a mistake by breaking up with him.

Yet, that almost never happens.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Women are attracted to strong men who have the confidence, self-belief and emotional strength needed to make her feel like a real woman (e.g. feminine, girly, desirable).

So, when a man is being too emotional and sensitive and refuses to take the lead in the ex back process, she instinctively starts to lose even more respect and attraction for him.

She feels turned off by his emotional weakness and lack of masculinity and just canâ€™t seem to work up the desire to want to even stay friends with him anymore.

She then cuts herself off from him and tries to move on without him in her life.

So, if you donâ€™t want that to happen to you, you need to make sure that you quickly change and improve and then interact with your ex girlfriend and let her experience your emotional strength and masculinity via the way you talk, behave, interact with her and respond to what she says.

She will then automatically begin to feel drawn to you again in a sexual and romantic way.

When that happens, you can then easily get her back into a relationship with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Should I Ask My Ex to Go to the Movies With Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, but only if you are ready to re-attract her in person when you see her.

If you're going to be nervous and unsure of yourself, it will make her put her guard up and feel turned off.

So, make sure that if you ask her to go to the movies, you are fully ready to make her want you again.

By the way...

Here are 3 common reactions that women have when their ex guy asks them to go to the movies:

1. She says, "Yes" because she has been missing him and hoping that he'd do something to get her back

Sometimes, when a woman loses touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy (e.g. because he has become too distant lately and she feels neglected, he treats her more like a neutral friend than an attractive woman, he feels unsure of his value to her so he is too jealous and suspicious of her every move causing her to feel smothered), she may decide to break up with him.

However, after a few days apart, she might begin missing him and she then starts to think things like, "I never thought I'd feel so sad and lonely without him. Suddenly I realize that he wasn't such a bad guy after all and that deep down he really did care for me. Maybe I was too quick to break up with him. Maybe we could have worked things out if I'd stuck around for a while longer."

She then begins hoping he will do something to get her back.

So, if her ex is confident enough to ask her to go to the movies with him, she will usually jump at the chance, because it's exactly what she's been wanting all along.

Of course, even though your ex might want you back and agrees to go to the movies with you, it doesn't mean she's going to do all the work for you.

Instead, she's going to go out with you and look to see if you've managed to change and improve (e.g. she'll be looking at your body language, listening to the tone of your voice, watching to see how you respond and react to her when she's been cold and aloof towards you), before she allows herself to fully open up to getting back together again.

This is why you need to make sure that you approach the situation in such a way that will reactivate her feelings for you and make her want to see you again and again.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by:

- Feeling confident and self-assured when you're with her, rather than allowing negative thoughts like, "What if she doesn't enjoy herself?" or, "What if she decides she never wants to see me again after this?" make you feel insecure and unsure of yourself.
- Being a good man, but also being confident and assertive when talking to her, so she can see that she can't dominate you during conversations.
- Making her laugh, smile and feel relaxed and happy to be around you again, rather than trying to get into intense, deep discussions about the relationship.

- Flirting with her to create sexual tension, rather than being too nice and neutral and giving her the impression that you're no longer interested in a romantic, sexual relationship with her so she decides to move on.

The more you continue to show her via your behavior and conversation style that you've reshaped yourself into the kind of man that she can now look up to, respect and feel attracted to (e.g. confident, self-assured, emotionally masculine) the more her defenses will come down.

She will naturally begin to open up and you can then progress to giving her a hug, a kiss and then hook up with her sexually.

Note: She might not be ready to have sex with you the first time you and her go out together, so don't worry about it.

Instead, just continue to interact with her over the phone and especially in person over the next few days, and build on her initial feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you until she's ready to get back together again, or at least opens up to having sex with you to see how she feels afterwards.

Another possible outcome if a guy asks his ex to go to the movies with him is

2. She says, "No" because she no longer feels attracted to him

[image: She says no because she no longer feels attracted to him]

When a woman stops feeling sexually and romantically attracted to a guy, him asking her to go to the movies with him, is the last thing on her mind.

Instead, she will want to distance herself from him as much as possible and begin doing things that will help her fully get over him, move on and meet someone else (e.g. hang out with her single friends in clubs and bars, join meet up groups, register on online dating sites or go on Tinder).

She will then likely reject him by saying, "No," and possibly leaving him feeling dejected and like he no longer stands a chance with her.

Yet, here's the thing

For a woman to want to interact with you again (i.e. talk to you over the phone, go to the movies with you, meet up for coffee), you have to make it feel appealing to her and that means, you need to reactivate her feelings for you first.

For example: One of the most effective ways to make a woman reconnect with her feelings of respect and attraction for you is by making her smile, laugh and feel happy to be interacting with you again.

When she is laughing and smiling, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to continue thinking about you in a negative way and she instead begins to see a new, more positive side to you.

Here's an example of how to use humor to diffuse a potentially difficult situation between you and your ex and make her open up to wanting to go to a movie with you.

Imagine that you're talking to your ex on the phone and she says something like, "What do you want? Why do you insist on calling me when you know I'm not your girlfriend anymore?"

She will likely be expecting you to get upset and possibly even react by begging and pleading with her for another chance, telling her how much you still love her, or possibly even getting angry with her.

Instead, you can shock her (in a good way) by maintaining your confidence and using some humor to take the sting out of her words by saying something like, â€œYouâ€™re not my girlfriend anymore! I must have been off sick the day that happened. Why didnâ€™t anyone tell me?â€™ and have a laugh with her about it.

Sheâ€™s telling you that sheâ€™s not your girlfriend anymore and youâ€™re playfully teasing her about it, as though sheâ€™s not that important and you didnâ€™t notice she was gone.

You can then say, â€œIâ€™m only joking. Of course I noticed that youâ€™re not my girlfriend anymore because my arm doesnâ€™t look as pretty anymore, without you holding it,â€™ and have a laugh with her about that.

By using humor to make her smile and laugh and ease the tension between you and then giving her a bit of a compliment by calling her pretty, she canâ€™t stop herself from feeling some surges of attraction for you again for having the balls to joke around with her in a moment that may have previously made you feel insecure and nervous.

When she senses your confidence and notices that youâ€™re also being a good guy (i.e. youâ€™re not being mean to her with your jokes), she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again.

Her guard will come down and she will then become more open to going to the movies with you to see if you really are a new man now.

You can then use that opportunity to fully re-attract her and get her back.

Another possible outcome if a guy asks his ex to go to the movies with him isâ€”

3. She says, â€œMaybeâ€ because she isn't sure whether she should give him another chance

Most relationships experience a few ups and downs where a couple will get into an argument or fight and the woman says things like, â€œIâ€™m sick and tired of putting up with all of this! Youâ€™re such a jerk and thereâ€™s just no hope of you ever changing. I think itâ€™s better if we break up.â€™

The guy will then usually try to calm her down and make her change her mind by saying things like, â€œI really care about you so much and I donâ€™t want to lose you. Please give me just one more chance to prove to you that I can be the man you want me to be. I know Iâ€™ve said this before, but I promise you that this time I really will put in the effort to change.â€™

She may then forgive him and give him one more chance to prove to her that he can change.

However, if time after time she forgives him, only for him to revert back to being the same after things have calmed down, she may eventually give up and go through with the break up.

So, if he then asks her to go to the movies with him, she will feel unsure of whether to risk saying â€œYes,â€™ and then feel hurt and betrayed when she discovers that heâ€™s still the same as before, or just say â€œNo,â€™ and spare herself any heartache, so she says, â€œMaybe,â€™ instead to stall for time while she decides.

This is why you need to show her right away, via your actions, behavior and conversation style, that youâ€™ve already started to change and improve in some of the ways that matter to her.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is byâ€”

- Maintaining your confidence regardless of how she responds to you when you ask her to go to the movies with you.
- Laughing at her (in a loving way) when she acts like she's unsure of whether to give you the benefit of the doubt and showing her that she doesn't have power over you.
- Responding differently to the way she's expecting you to (e.g. if she thinks you're going to get upset, beg and plead or sulk about her saying â€œMaybe,â€ you instead laugh, remain calm and tease her for being an indecisive woman).

The more she can see for herself that you really are a new man now, the easier it becomes for her to make up her mind and say, â€œYes.â€

You can then use further interactions you have with her to fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Asking an Ex Out

When you decide to ask your ex to go to the movies with you, make sure that you don't make any of the following mistakes that will cause her to say â€œNo,â€ instead of â€œYes.â€

1. Asking her via text

Texting is easy (and safe) to do, but it's not a very effective way of getting what you want from an ex.

Basically, because she's not hearing your voice (or looking you in the eye), it's a lot easier for her to brush you off and say, â€œNo.â€

Via text, she can't see your body language or hear the tonality of your voice, so she will think things like, â€œWhy should I even bother to go to the movies with him when he doesn't even have the balls to call me and ask me over the phone. This is just another indication of the type of person he really is inside (i.e. insecure, unsure of himself, timid). If I say yes, I will just be wasting my time because nothing about his behavior is convincing me that it's worth my while giving him a second chance. I'll just be giving him false hope, when in reality I'm just not interested in him anymore.â€

She then declines your invitation and possibly even stops responding to your texts altogether.

So, if you don't want that kind of response, make sure that you ask your ex to the movies on a phone call, or in person if you still see her from time to time and only after you've sparked some of her feelings for you first.

When you do it that way, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to reject you.

The next mistake to avoid is

2. Acting like just a friend and expecting her to want to be your girlfriend again

Sometimes a guy might use asking his ex to go to the movies with him as an excuse to get her back.

Essentially he's hoping that if they start doing fun things together again, they will eventually fall back into a relationship without too much effort on his part.

So, he asks her to go to the movies with him just as friends and spends the entire time pretending that heâ□□s not sexually or romantically interested in her anymore.

For example:

- He only talks to her in a nice, polite, neutral way.
- He doesnâ□□t flirt with her to build up sexual tension.
- He only makes â□□safeâ□□ jokes that he feels wonâ□□t offend her, rather than using ballsy humor to spice things up and make her feel turned on.

Naturally, this causes a woman to remain closed off, because thereâ□□s no sexual attraction and respect to make her feel motivated to want to be his girl again.

If he then says something along the lines of, *â□□Look how well we get on with each other. Itâ□□s like weâ□□re two peas in a pod. We still have so much fun together. Why donâ□□t we just forget about this break and get back together?*â□□ she will likely feel shocked and say something like, *â□□What are you talking about? Why would you even say that? Weâ□□re just friends now!*â□□

He may then feel disappointed and possibly even give up on the idea of getting her back at all.

Yet, what he doesnâ□□t realize is that his approach was wrong.

Hereâ□□s the thingâ□□!

If you want a relationship with your ex, you need to make sure that you donâ□□t pretend that you donâ□□t.

If you do, you will likely get the same results.

However, if you ignite sexual and romantic feelings inside of her (e.g. by flirting with her, making her laugh and smile and feel good to be interacting with you again), then you wonâ□□t even need to ask for a relationship again, because it will happen naturally all by itself.

Note: There is nothing wrong with suggesting going to the movies just as friends. In fact, that is what recommend you say.

However, make sure that when you meet up with her, you don't just act like a friend.

Big difference.

In person, re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship with you.

Watch the video above by Dan Bacon, founder of this website.

3. Talking about going to the movies as though it's a date

In some cases, a guy will ask his ex to go to the movies with him and if she says â□□Yes,â□□ he might respond by saying, *â□□Great! Well, it's a date then.*â□□

She might then instantly put up her guard and wonder, *â□□Why is he calling it a date? I thought this was just a movie, but now heâ□□s making a big deal about it like I just agreed to get back with him or something. Iâ□□m not ready for that. I donâ□□t want him getting the wrong idea. Maybe I should just cancel on him to be on the safe side.*â□□

Hereâ□□s the thingâ□□!

If your ex has broken up with you, she wonâ□□t like the idea of going out on a date with you, because that will imply that sheâ□□s open to giving your relationship another chance when right now, sheâ□□s not.

So, to stop her from canceling on you, you need to make sure that you don't refer to going to the movies with her as a date.

Instead, just say that you'll be hanging out as friends.

When you approach it in that way, it takes the pressure off her and she can relax because she's not feeling like you're trying to push her into something she's not ready for yet.

Then, when you go to the movies with her, make sure that you say and do the types of things that will spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you, rather than making the types of mistakes that will turn her off (e.g. being confident and self-assured rather than nervous and insecure around her, maintaining your dominance rather than letting her have power over you, being emotionally masculine rather than too nice and well-behaved).

As long as you focus on re-attracting her properly, going to the movies with your ex will actually turn into a date after all, even if you don't call it that.

Then, before you know it, you'll be going on dates and calling yourselves a couple again.

The next mistake to avoid is!

4. Giving up too easily if she initially says, No or, I'm not sure

Most women won't be willing to go to the movies with an ex the first time he asks her.

However, that doesn't mean she's not interested and that he should give up and walk away.

Instead, it's a woman's natural instinct not to make it easy for an ex guy to get her back. Why?

Firstly, she doesn't want to come across as desperate and like she's been waiting around for him to ask her to the movies because she doesn't have anyone else interested in her.

Secondly, she wants to be sure that he's not just asking her so that when she says Yes, he can reject her by saying something like, I knew you still had feelings for me. I was just checking, but now that I know for sure, I don't really want to go to the movies with you. Ha! Ha!

Finally, she wants to make sure that he's confident enough to handle her initial rejection without giving up.

If he can handle her No, I'm not sure or Iâ'm not sure without falling apart, she will know that he's now emotionally stronger than before and she will then be more willing to accept his invitation.

So, make sure you don't give up if your ex doesn't agree to go to the movies with you right away.

Just maintain your confidence with her and in a friendly, easy-going way say, Hey, I get it. I understand why you feel the way you do right now and the last thing I want to do is pressure you into doing anything that you don't feel comfortable with. However, all Iâ'm asking for is for you to catch a movie with me as friends. It's not a big deal, right. We can do that, because we're mature adults. So, let's prove it and go watch a movie together, with no strings attached.

By taking the pressure off her to make a decision about getting back together again, she will feel more comfortable about saying Yes, to going to the movies with you.

Then, when you meet up with her, make sure you reactivate her feelings for you and make her want to be in a relationship again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

If She Dumped You, Leave Her Alone. True or False?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

False.

Here are the 3 main reasons why:

1. Most women don't come back on their own

It's only natural that when a guy gets dumped by his girl and she says something along the lines of, "I'm sorry, but what we had is over. I don't have feelings for you anymore and it's best if we go our separate ways. So please accept that I'm not going to change my mind and just move on," he's going to feel hurt and a little desperate.

He might then begin thinking things like, "I can't accept that! She's the woman for me, but she sounds so definite when she says she will never change her mind. What can I do? Should I leave her alone and wait for her to maybe start missing me and then call me when she's ready, or should I stick around anyway, even though she said she doesn't want to see me anymore? I don't know what the right approach is. I feel so confused."

He may then read about the No Contact Rule online (i.e. ignoring an ex for 30 to 60 days to make her come back) and decide that he's going to use that approach.

Yet, here's the thing!

Most women simply do not respond to that approach in a favorable way. Why?

Firstly, when a woman dumps a guy, it's usually because she has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, when he leaves her alone after the break up, rather than think, "Why isn't he contacting me? Doesn't he miss me at all? Could he already be moving on with another woman? Now that he's no longer around, the thought of losing him fills me with dread. I suddenly realize that I don't really want to be broken up with him anymore," she instead thinks something like, "I really thought he was going to make it difficult for me to move on, but instead he's actually leaving me alone and I don't have to deal with him trying to get me back, or convince me to give him another chance. I can now just focus on moving on with my life and finding the right guy for me."

Why does she react in that way?

Unless a woman still has feelings for her ex and is secretly hoping that he will try to get her back, or she's really struggling to find herself a replacement guy, leaving her alone isn't going to matter that much to her.

This is why she has to be re-attracted first (rather than avoided), so she has a reason to come back.

Here's what you need to remember!

If a woman is beautiful, or even just attractive, it will usually be quite easy for her to find another guy who wants to have a relationship with her

For example: There will be guys at work/university/the gym that will have their eye on her again now that she can now start dating.

Alternatively, she can join an online dating site or use a dating app and she will have 100s of guys eagerly lining up to meet her for a date.

It's really that easy for a woman to find a new man (i.e. because guys are mostly attracted to a woman's appearance and will date her based on that and then see how things evolve from there).

So, if you just leave your ex alone after the break up and wait to see if she'll come back to you rather than actively re-attracting her, you are setting yourself up for even more heartache.

Remember: The more time you give your ex to get over you, the harder it becomes to get her back (e.g. because she moves on and hooks up with another guy, she realizes that she enjoys being single again, she starts to doubt your feelings for her and becomes annoyed with you for not having the balls to get her back when you had the chance).

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, then the last thing you should be doing right now is leaving her alone.

Give her a few days of space if she needs it just to let things calm down, but more than 7 days is just a waste of time.

You need to contact her, preferably by calling her on the phone or seeing her in person and you need to actively begin reawakening her sexual and romantic feelings for you again (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, showing her that you're at a different level now than when she dumped you, flirting with her to create a sexual vibe).

When she experiences the new you and likes you again, it becomes more difficult for her to continue thinking about you in a negative way.

Her negative thoughts and memories about you (e.g. anger, resentment, disappointment) get replaced with new, positive feelings (e.g. respect, attraction, excitement) and she then becomes open to the idea of getting back together again.

However, if you leave her alone, she will quickly get over you, move on and forget you were ever a part of her life.

Another reason why you shouldn't leave your ex alone if she dumped you is

2. Leaving her alone doesn't fix the things about you that will turn her off if you interact with her again

Sometimes a guy can avoid his ex for weeks or even months.

Yet, when he finally does interact with her (e.g. he calls her to say hi, he bumps into her somewhere, she calls him to see how he's been), she realizes that rather than have changed and improved, even just a little bit, he's instead stuck at the same level he was at when she dumped him.

She then usually makes up some kind of excuse why she can't talk to him anymore (e.g. she says something like, Anyway, it's nice hearing from you/talking to you again, but I'm seeing someone else now and he's a bit of jealous type, so I can't talk to you anymore. Good luck with your life, I hope everything works out for you. Bye) even if it's a lie, simply to get rid of him.

So, if you don't want that to happen to you, you've got to get clear on the real reasons why your ex dumped you and make some quick changes.

By the way

What most guys need to change about themselves is almost never something big like heâs abusive towards her, heâs too much of an irresponsible bad boy, or heâs addicted to alcohol or drugs. Instead, it's usually very subtle things like how much power she seems to have over him during conversations, the difference in how emotionally mature one of them is compared to the other, how she always seems to get irritated at him during conversations these days because he doesnât listen to her and instead jokes around and acts frivolous.

In the same way, there are almost certainly some small subtle things about your thinking and behavior that turned your ex off enough for her to want to dump you and leaving her alone wonât fix that.

Only you can do that, by first understanding what those things are for you and then taking action to change them.

Note: That doesnât mean you have to become perfect to be able to re-attract your ex, only better.

So, if youâre unsure of what secret, subtle things about you caused your ex to dump you, here is a list of some of the common things that turn women off about their men:

- His inability to take the lead in the relationship so she can relax into thinking, talking and acting like a feminine woman around him. Instead she has to be the one wearing the pants and making all the decisions, which makes her feel more like a man than an attractive, feminine woman.
- Being hesitant and timid around her or in social situations.
- Putting more emphasis on what she considers the unimportant things in life (e.g. playing video games, spending all his time on social media, watching sports with his friends), rather than on the important things (e.g. his goals and dreams, his career, preparing for their future together by investing some money).
- Not putting in much effort to get to know her family and friends even though sheâs told him that they are an important part of her life.
- Not being very supportive of her dreams and maybe even being a bit condescending of her (e.g. she says she wants to advance in her career and he laughs and says something like, âWhat youâre doing is fine for now, but if we get married all that will change, because you will have me and out children to take care of.â)
- Heâs too needy and clingy and doesnât have any hobbies, interests or friends apart from her.

When your ex can see for herself that youâve put in the effort to change and improve, she will naturally feel respect for you again for being the kind of man who takes action, rather than expecting things to change all by themselves.

When she starts respecting you again, she will also begin to feel surges of attraction for you and with those two emotions back in place, loving you becomes something she opens back up to.

On the other hand if you leave her alone and do nothing and then after a few weeks or months try to get her back, she will likely push you away, because she can see that it will be more of the same, or even worse than before.

Another reason why you shouldnât leave your ex alone if she dumped you isâ!

3. Leaving her alone will often make her feel motivated to move on quickly to avoid feeling rejected by you

[image: Leaving her alone will often motivate a woman to move on quickly to avoid feeling rejected by you]

When a woman dumps a guy and he then immediately disappears from her life, rather than sit around feeling hurt and having to deal with the pain of the break up and the fact that heâ€¢s not even trying to get her back, she usually moves on and makes herself feel fulfilled with another guy.

Even if a woman doesnâ€¢t really want to date again so soon after her break up, she usually doesnâ€¢t want to experience pain and rejection even more.

So, she will go out and hook up with the first available guy, to begin getting over her ex.

Even if a woman still has some feelings for her ex and is possibly regretting dumping him, or she only dumped him to shock him into becoming a better man, him leaving her alone actually motivates her get over him.

Hereâ€¢s whyâ€¢

Imagine a woman is sitting at home after a break up and missing her ex.

Although she might be feeling some pain, anger and disappointment about the way things turned out between them, she also feels a bit hopeful that the shock of the break up will have shaken her ex up and caused him to change and improve a little bit and they can then work things out and get back together again.

Yet, when she doesnâ€¢t hear from him again for days, then weeks, then months, she takes it as a sign that he didnâ€¢t really care enough about her to change or even call her to see how she is.

She may then think something along the lines of, â€¢What a fool Iâ€¢ve been. I really believed he cared about me and that he would do something to make things right between us. I guess the joke is on me, because Iâ€¢ve been the one missing him and hoping we can fix our relationship, while he hasnâ€¢t felt the need to even text me once to check how Iâ€¢m feeling. Well, itâ€¢s over now. This is the last second Iâ€¢m wasting thinking about him. From this moment onwards Iâ€¢m going to do whatever it takes to move on and find myself a real man who will treat me the way I deserve!â€¢

She then focuses on fully getting over him (e.g. by going out to clubs, bars and parties with her single friends and making herself available to the guys she meets there, hooks up with guys sexually).

If her ex then happens to contact her after ignoring her for a while, she says something like, â€¢What do you want after all this time? What we had is over. You need to accept that and move on. I have. Iâ€¢m with someone else now and Iâ€¢m happy, so please donâ€¢t call me again.â€¢

However, that can easily be avoided if you make sure that you donâ€¢t leave your ex alone after she dumped you and instead focus on using every interaction you have with her as an opportunity to make her feel sparks of respect and attraction for you again.

The more she enjoys interacting with you again, the more her defenses will come down,

She then becomes open to the idea of getting back together again.

On the other hand, if you leave her alone, the more time she has to get over you and find herself another guy who makes her feel strong surges of sexual and romantic attraction for him.

Common Problems Guys Experience When They Get Dumped

Before you decide whether you want to leave your ex alone or not now that you and her have broken up, make sure you're prepared to deal with the following problems:

1. Leaving her alone, but constantly thinking about her and becoming an emotional wreck as a result

It's fine if a guy wants to leave his ex alone if she dumped him and move on without her and find himself another, even better woman than her.

However, in most cases, that's not what happens.

Instead, the guy stops interacting with his ex (e.g. because he thinks she won't want to hear from him, he hopes it will make her miss him and change her mind about being broken up), only to find himself constantly thinking about her and missing her.

He might then go around feeling sad, depressed, hopeless and like he can't move on and live a happy, fulfilling life without her.

As a result, he becomes the exact opposite of what he should become if he wants to have a chance with his ex again (e.g. wimpy, needy, desperate vs. confident, emotionally independent, emotionally masculine).

Then, if he happens to interact with his ex again and she picks up on the fact that he's an emotional wreck without her, rather than think, "I never realized how much I mean to him."

He's totally lost without me. That's just so sweet. Maybe I should give him another chance," she instead thinks, "Now I know I made the right decision by dumping him. He really isn't the right man for me. I need someone who is emotionally strong enough to handle a woman like me and my ex clearly isn't that guy."

She then happily moves on without him (if she hasn't already done that), without feeling any regrets whatsoever.

So, if you're planning to leave your ex alone, make sure it's not to sit at home wallowing in misery.

Instead, use the time to become emotionally independent of her (e.g. by pursuing your own goals, dreams, hobbies and interests).

When you get to the point where you can be happy with or without your ex in your life, two interesting things happen:

Firstly, you find yourself not missing her that much anymore.

Sure you want her back, but you're not feeling lost without her.

Secondly, you automatically become more attractive to your ex (and to other women) because you are now an emotionally strong, independent man she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love.

As a result, getting her back becomes easy, because you're now the kind of man she always wanted you to be.

The next problem you might encounter isâ€¦!

2. She doesn't ever contact you, so you eventually contact her to tell her how you feel

Most of the time, when a woman dumps a guy, itâ€¦s mostly because she has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, when he backs off and leaves her alone, rather than contact him, she usually just assumes that heâ€¦s moving on and then she focuses on doing the same thing too.

If he then realizes that sheâ€¦s not going to come running back to him, so he contacts her instead (e.g. via text, e-mail, on a phone call) and starts saying things like, â€œI really tried to leave you alone and get on with my life, but I simply canâ€¦t do it. I still love you too much and my life feels empty without you,â€ heâ€¦s shocked to discover that she doesnâ€¦t really care how he feels. Why?

In most cases, the woman has either moved on by that point, she says that it's too little too late, or she ignores him because the feelings aren't mutual.

So, donâ€¦t let that happen to you.

Donâ€¦t leave your ex alone if you actually want to get her back.

If you donâ€¦t interact with her and actively stop her process of moving on and reactivate her feelings for you, you will almost certainly end up losing her.

The next problem you might encounter isâ€¦!

3. You try to get her back by discussing the relationship or trying to work things out between youâ€¦“â€¦That doesn't work unless the feelings are made mutual first

If you donâ€¦t properly re-attract your ex and make her feel some sparks of respect and attraction for you again, hearing you talk about the relationship and getting back together again may cause her to say things like, “Are you crazy? Why are you talking about getting back together again? I broke up with you for a reason and that hasnâ€¦t changed. Iâ€¦m sorry if you canâ€¦t accept that, but I donâ€¦t want to get back together in a relationship with you. What we had is over and itâ€¦s time that we just acknowledge that weâ€¦re not right for each other and move on. Please just accept that and let me get on with my life.â€

This is why, if you want your ex to be interested in giving you another chance, you have to focus on making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

You need to make her want to get back with you for her own reasons (e.g. it makes her feel good, she feels like you and her are right for each other, she can see that you and her have a future together, she feels respect, attraction and love for you), rather than for your reasons (e.g. you miss her and canâ€¦t live without her, you want her back to feel good about yourself).

When you do that, she automatically stops putting up walls every time you interact with her, which then allows her to explore her feelings for you and for the idea of giving you another chance.

However, if you try to get her back before reactivating her feelings first, she will keep saying, “No,â€ and you will struggle to convince her.

Here at The Modern Man, we recommend a much easier, faster way of getting an ex woman back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Do Exes Get Back Together After Years?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, but it depends on the following:

1. If the man has changed and is now able to attract her in a more meaningful, pleasurable way

Nothing is more convincing to a woman that giving a relationship another try after years apart is what she wants, than seeing that her ex is now at a completely different level to the one he was at when they broke up.

Not only has he understood her deep, secret reasons for breaking up with him, he has also changed and improved and become a better man as a result.

So, if you want to get back together with your ex after years of separation, you need to make sure that you can give her the attraction experience she always wanted from you but never got.

For example:

- You're more confident and self-assured now, which means you don't react by getting jealous and feeling unworthy of her when you see her having fun without you and talking to other men.
- You're more emotionally masculine now, which means she can relax into thinking, talking, feeling and acting like a feminine woman around you, rather than being the dominant one all the time.
- You're more emotionally independent, which means you're happy and fulfilled in your life.
- You're pursuing your goals and dreams and you're enjoying hanging out with your friends rather than being clingy and suffocating because you have anything going on in your life.
- You're more emotionally mature now, which means you're not wasting your life away by playing video games/watching TV/getting drunk.
- You now have so much more purpose and direction in life.

When she experiences those kinds of changes in you, she won't be able to stop herself from wondering what it would be like to be your girl this time around.

She then drops her guard and opens up to being with you romantically and sexually.

On the other hand, if she can see nothing about you has changed and improved and that you're still the same guy you were all those years ago, she won't be interested in going down that road with you again.

Another thing it depends on is

2. If the man has the balls to contact her and arrange a meet up

One of the quickest ways to get an ex back (whether it's after a week or many years), is by calling her on the phone, re-sparking some of her feelings and then meeting up with her.

However, where a lot of guys go wrong, is by wasting too much time worrying about what she might say, or if she will reject him and not taking action at all.

She then moves on and he misses out on potentially being with the love of his life.

So, if you haven't been interacting with your ex for many years, now is the time to stop.

You need to pick up your phone and call her right away and make her smile and laugh when she's talking to you.

She then stops remembering the man you used to be before that turned her off and she starts focusing on the new you that makes her feel good.

When that happens, her guard comes down and she becomes open to meeting up with you to see what happens.

At the meet up, you need to keep saying and doing the types of things that will make her see that you're a new man now and convince her to give you another chance.

When she sees that you're being a confident, charismatic, emotionally masculine man around her, she won't be able to stop her defenses from coming down.

She will begin imagining what it would be like if you and her got back together again after all these years and then, it's up to you to open her eyes to the fact that falling back in love with each other will be even better than it was the first time.

Another thing it depends on is

3. If the woman is able to forgive him for his mistakes and focus on the new version of him

For you and your ex to be able to get back together after many years, she has to be able to forgive you for your past mistakes.

Forgiveness makes a woman drop her guard and open herself back up to the idea of being with you again.

So, if your ex seems a bit reluctant to give you another chance and is possibly saying things like, "No, I don't think we can get back together after so many years. What we had is water under the bridge now. Besides, I still remember how you hurt me and I don't want to experience that again," you can say something along the lines of, "I know I stuffed things up between us and I'm truly sorry for hurting you. I was a real jerk back then and I ruined what we had. However, I'm not that guy anymore. I've grown up a lot since then and I know I've become a better person. In a way, I have you to thank, because you dumping me was the wake up call I needed to pull myself together. I don't expect you to believe me, but I really have changed and I would appreciate it if you'd forgive me, so we can both finally put all that behind us and move forward without feeling negative and bitter about the past. You will feel better and of course, so will I and we can then move forward as friends."

If you can get her to the point where she genuinely does forgive you, it makes her drop her guard and she feels comfortable to be interacting with you again.

She no longer stops herself from feeling sexually and romantically attracted to you.

Then, the more she interacts with you and experiences the new you, the more she will like the idea of being your girl again.

Suddenly the idea of getting back together doesn't seem as unlikely as it did before and it then happens easily and effortlessly.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Back After Many Years Apart

Not only is it possible for exes to get back together after years, it can actually be one of the most amazing experiences a couple can undergo in life.

However, it can also turn into a disaster, if the guy doesn't approach the ex back process with the correct mindset.

So, if you want to get your ex back after years apart, make sure you don't make any of the following mistakes:

1. Looking for crystal clear signals from her that she wants a relationship again

Sometimes, a guy can waste a lot of time looking for direct, clear-cut, signs from his ex that she's open to getting back together again, even though they've been apart for years, before he feels confident enough to make a move and begin the ex back process.

This might be via texts, online messages or in person interactions.

Essentially he's looking for her to come out and say something along the lines of, "You know, I can't believe I'm admitting this to you, but I haven't been able to stop thinking about you all this time. I really have missed you. How would you feel about giving our relationship another go?"

He can then say, "Yes, that's wonderful! That's exactly what I was hoping you would say," and they can then get back together and live happily ever after.

Unfortunately though, real life is not a romance novel or Hollywood movie and women usually don't go about giving exes clear signals when they're open to getting back together again.

Why?

Firstly, a woman doesn't want to come across as being too easy and like she's desperate to get back with her ex.

So, rather than give him a sign and help him along, she may even act like she's not interested at all and then wait for him to make a move.

Which brings up the second reason why a woman won't give any signs of interest to an ex: She wants to make sure that he's confident and emotionally strong enough not to give up at the first sign of resistance from her.

This is why, if you're waiting for your ex to make it easy for you before you make a move, you may end up waiting for a long time and possibly even lose your chance with her (e.g. because she gets fed up with waiting for you to take action and decides to hook up with another guy instead).

Regardless of the amount of interest that your ex is currently showing towards you, it's up to you to be emotionally strong enough to take the lead and reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

Remember: Women respond positively to the emotional strength in men (e.g. confidence, determination, perseverance, going after what he wants without giving up when things get difficult), and feel turned off by the emotional weakness (e.g. insecurity, self doubt, giving up when things get tough).

So, stop waiting for signs from your ex to begin getting her back.

You need to be emotionally courageous and just take the plunge and make it happen.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ□|

2. Only acting like a friend and failing to create a spark

Sometimes a guy will interact with his ex after many years apart and pretend that heâ□□s really happy to be her friend now.

For example: He might say something along the lines of, â□□Itâ□□s great to reconnect with you after all this time! I think it will be fun to hang out as friends, donâ□□t you agree?â□□

He will then proceed to talk to her in a nice, polite way and not flirt with her at all.

Naturally, this causes a woman to remain closed off and distant because thereâ□□s no spark between them.

Even if she is interested in getting back together again, because heâ□□s pretending that heâ□□s not, she will likely think something like, â□□I guess itâ□□s too late for us to reconnect romantically after all these years. Heâ□□s clearly over me now and all he wants is to be friends. Pity though, because I was really hoping we could make our relationship work this time.â□□

She then disconnects from her feelings for him and focuses on finding herself a new man who does want to be in a relationship with her.

The guy then feels hurt that heâ□□s lost her again and tells himself that it was just too late to get her back, because she had gotten over him so many years ago.

Yet, what he doesnâ□□t realize is that his approach was wrong.

Hereâ□□s the thingâ□|

If you interact with your ex and pretend that you only have nice, friendly or neutral feelings for her, sheâ□□s going to respond by being your friend, not your lover.

On the other hand, if you interact with her and make her feel strong surges of respect and attraction for you (e.g. because you flirt with her to create sexual tension between you, you use ballsy humor to make her feel attracted, youâ□□re emotionally masculine in a way that makes her feel feminine and girly around you), then sheâ□□s almost certainly going to respond in the way that you want (i.e. she becomes open to the idea of being your girl again).

So, if your desire is to get your ex back, then donâ□□t pretend that youâ□□re just her innocent friend who isnâ□□t interested in her in a sexual or romantic way.

Of course itâ□□s perfectly fine to be her friend, as long as youâ□□re making her feel attracted too.

If you donâ□□t do that, you will end up in the friend zone and then getting her back becomes difficult, if not impossible, because she just isnâ□□t interested.

So, make the feelings sexual, initiate a kiss and then enjoy the great times ahead with her.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ□|

3. Not feeling welcome to try

When a man and a woman have been broken up for many years, the guy might assume that it's just too late to get her back.

He may think, What we had was just too long ago. She's likely moved on already and even if she's not with someone else right now, I'm almost certain that she wouldn't want to get back with me. She will probably not like it if I made a move.

He then doesn't do anything to re-attract his ex and misses out on the opportunity to get her back. Yet, here's the thing!

If you don't interact with your ex (over the phone and most importantly, in person and actively make her have feelings for you again, she probably will move on eventually and forget all about you.

So, if you want to get her back, stop trying to imagine what she might want or not want and just focus on using every interaction you have with her to re-spark her feelings for you.

The more respect and sexual attraction she feels as you interact with her, the more she will feel drawn to the idea of giving you another chance.

On the other hand, if you feel unwelcome to even try because you're afraid she might not be interested, then you will probably waste a lot of time waiting around for her to maybe give you a sign, only to discover one day that she has moved on and is happy in a new relationship with some other guy.

Another mistake to avoid is!

4. Not knowing that there is a process you can follow to get her back

Sometimes, a guy might really want to get back together with an ex after years apart, but he simply doesn't know how to re-attract her sexually and romantically.

As a result, tries all sorts of random things and gets lost along the way when she doesn't show clear interest in having a relationship.

For example: He might!

- Text her to say hi and waits to see if her response is enthusiastic or offish before he will make another move.
- Call her on the phone and when she doesn't answer right away, he takes that as a negative sign.
- Find out where she likes to go (e.g. a club, coffee shop) and shows up unexpectedly in the hope that she will invite him to join her, but she doesn't.
- Send her flowers or thoughtful gifts as a way of making her open up to him, but all she does is text or message him a simple, Thanks.

If this has been your approach too, then chances are high that you haven't gotten very far with your ex, right?

If so, don't worry about it.

The important thing is that from this point onwards, you change your approach to one that will help you get your ex back for real.

For example:

Rather than texting her to say hi, you need to call her and make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you.

Rather than give up when she doesn't answer your call the first time, call again later at a more convenient time. If she still doesn't answer, just text her this: â€œHey, I tried calling you earlier, but you must have been busy. Iâ€™ll try again in half an hour, because thereâ€™s something quick I need to ask you.â€

In most cases, she will answer the next time, even if itâ€™s only because sheâ€™s curious to find out what you want to ask her.

Rather than crash her â€œpartyâ€ (i.e. show up where sheâ€™s having fun with her friends), invite her out for coffee.

If she seems reluctant, just say, â€œHey, itâ€™s only a cup of coffee between two old friends. We can do that now, right? Besides we have so much to catch up on.â€

She will likely say yes and then you can use the meet up to reactivate her feelings for you.

Rather than give her flowers or gifts to make her want you again, flirt with her instead during interactions to create sexual tension between you.

The more you do that, the more she will want to release that tension with kissing and sex.

From there, getting a relationship becomes easy.

When you do that, youâ€™ll be amazed by how quickly her feelings for you change.

Suddenly, she wants to be around you more and more and then getting her back becomes a forgone conclusion.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€|

5. Not re-attracting her before telling her that you still love her and have missed her from time to time

Although the expression, â€œStrike while the iron is hot,â€ is usually good advice when it comes to getting an ex back (i.e. rather than ignore a woman to get her back a guy should take action instead), itâ€™s not the right tactic when it comes to expressing your feelings to her. Why?

If you rush into telling your ex that you still love her and that youâ€™ve been thinking about her all these years before you reactivate her feelings for you, she will likely start thinking something along the lines of, â€œThat just sounds so creepy. Itâ€™s like heâ€™s been stuck in limbo waiting to get me back. What has he been doing all this time with his life? Has he even dated other women, or has he just been obsessing over me?â€

She may then pull away and refuse to interact with you anymore.

On the other hand, if you focus on making her feel respect and sexual attraction for the new, improved version of you, every time you interact with her, then by the time you tell her that you still love her, it will be the best news she ever heard.

She will feel happy, relieved and even flattered that a great guy like you never forgot her and she will want to get back together again as quickly as possible, before some other woman comes along and takes you away from her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 Examples of When to See a Therapist After a Break Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

3 times when it's okay to see a therapist after a break up:

1. If you can't get any help online

If you want to get over your ex and move on, then maybe seeing a therapist is a good idea for you. However, what most guys generally want is advice on how to make their ex forgive them and give them another chance and they can usually find the help they need to deal with a break up online.

Watch the video above and Dan Bacon, an ex back expert (and founder of this website here) will help you understand what you need to do to get her back.

Important: Most therapists out there are not dedicated to helping a guy get his ex woman back.

Instead, they will try to help him get over her, because they don't know how to teach him how re-attract her.

So, if your intention is not to get over your ex and move on without her, seeing a therapist will likely not be in your best interests.

Instead, you'll end up wasting a lot of time where you're trying to fix your issues to hopefully prove to your ex that you're serious about being a better man to her, only to discover that she hasn't been waiting around for that to happen.

So, while you've been working hard with your therapist to improve yourself, she's been moving on without you and possibly even hooking up, dating and falling in love with someone else.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, find the help you need to achieve that (if you're reading this article then you're in the right place), rather than going to a therapist in the hope that your ex will be so flattered that you're so willing to improve yourself for her, that she will say something along the lines of, "Well done. I'm so impressed that you went to see a therapist. That's all the proof I need to convince me that you're going to be an amazing boyfriend/fiancé/husband from now on. Okay, now we can get back together again."

Yet, here's the thing!

If your ex has lost respect and attraction for you, she's not going to really care that you're seeing a therapist.

Instead, if she currently perceives you in a negative light (e.g. she believes that you're insecure and lack the kind of confidence she wants in a man) she's likely just going to think that you're desperately trying to impress her and she will feel turned off by you even more.

She may then say something like, "Well good for you, for seeing a therapist. However, I don't really care one way or another. We're not a couple anymore, so I don't have to live with your stuff ups. It just doesn't matter to me what you do now."

So, rather than try to impress your ex by seeing a therapist, why not focus on re-attracting her instead.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are!

- Understand what turned her off about you before and make some attractive changes and improvements to yourself based on that (Remember: You don't have to be perfect, only better than before).

- Interact with her over the phone, but mostly in person and show her that you're much more confident and sure of yourself than you used to be.
- Use humor to bring down her guard and make her laugh, smile and feel good to be seeing you again (especially if she's initially being closed off, distant or even a little bit bitchy towards you).
- Flirt with her to create some sexual tension between you and her.
- Turn her negative feelings about the break up into something you can both look back at as a lesson learned and then laugh about together.

The more she can see for herself that you're truly a different, better man now, the less she will be able to hold on to her decision to remain broken up.

She won't be able to stop herself from dropping her guard a little bit and allowing herself to imagine what it would feel like if you and her were a couple again.

She will then likely want to be around you more and more and from there getting her back becomes easy and effortless.

Another example of when to see a therapist after a break up isâ

2. You are seriously contemplating going through with a suicide

Sometimes, the shock of a break up can make a guy spiral into a deep depression, where the only way he can think of to escape the pain and despair he's feeling is to actually kill himself.

Now matter how often he tells himself, âGet a grip man! or, âStop being such a wuss! he can't seem to snap out of these negative, harmful thoughts.

In a case like that, it's probably a good idea for the guy to get some help right away and go see a therapist.

Note: Almost everyone has briefly considered suicide at some point in their life.

The difference is when you really feel like you are going to do it for sure and need someone to talk you out of it.

However, in almost all other instances, a guy doesn't really need to see a therapist after a break up, because making mistakes and dealing with the consequences of those mistakes (i.e. being broken up with) is part of life.

Yes, there will almost certainly be heartache and bouts of depression and moments where the guy is thinking negative things like, âI can't believe she's gone. I feel so lost without her.

It's like my life is over and I will never be able to feel happy and fulfilled again. My life sucks and I don't know if I'll ever be able to feel better and move on.

However, most of the time, he gets past this stage of grief pretty quickly and before long he's feeling a lot more optimistic about his future.

He might then decide that he's perfectly fine without his ex and that he doesn't really miss her all that much after all.

He will then make himself available to meeting, hooking up and dating other women, until he finds himself another woman who makes him feel happy and fulfilled when in a relationship with her.

Alternatively, the guy might decide that heâs not going to give up on getting his ex back.

In a case like that, he will focus on quickly changing and improving himself in some of the ways he knows are important to his ex.

He then calls her on the phone, re-sparks some of her feelings of respect and attraction for him (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, by flirting with her to create some sexual tension between them again, by not responding to her in the ways that used to turn her off), and gets her to agree to meet up with him.

At the meet up, he shows her that heâs truly changed and improved and is now a better man than before (e.g. more confident, more emotionally masculine, more assertive and able to stand his ground with her and with other people).

When she sees that heâs now able to give her the attraction experience she always wanted from him but never got, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to continue looking at him in a negative way.

Her defenses come down and she then opens up to the idea of being his girl again.

So, right now, you need to honestly decide how you really feel after your break up.

If youâre at a point where you canât seem to find your way out of your negative thoughts and feel totally hopeless and like you donât want to go on living, then by all means get the help you need to pull you out.

Then, when you feel better, you might even decide that you want to get your ex back and go about making it happen.

On the other hand, if youâre just going through the normal stages of grief after your break up (i.e. shock, denial, anger, bargaining, depression, testing, acceptance), then you probably do not need to see a therapist.

Instead, just focus on regaining control of your emotions and then decide what you want to do (i.e. move on and find yourself an even better, more attractive woman than your ex, or re-attract her and get her back into a relationship with you thatâs 100% better than before).

The choice is yours.

By the wayâ!

There are some guys who say theyâre going to kill themselves, but thatâs only because they want to make their ex feel sorry for them and then hopefully give them another chance.

However, theyâre not really serious about committing suicide and they probably wouldnât really want to see a therapist either because he/she would catch them out in their ploy (i.e. that theyâre only faking wanting to kill themselves to trick their ex into a relationship again).

Another example of when to see a therapist after a break up isâ!

3. You can no longer function properly as a person, even though the break up was weeks ago

Sometimes, a break up can really dent a manâs confidence to the point where everything in his life starts falling apart.

For example: He mightâ!

- Get into trouble at work (e.g. being late, handing in sloppy work, missing important deadlines, being rude to customers or clients, disrespecting his boss).
- Get into fights or arguments with anyone or everyone (e.g. with his friends or family, every time he goes out to a bar or club, his co-workers).
- Not be eating or sleeping properly anymore.
- Start becoming more and more dependent on external stimulants to cope (e.g. alcohol, prescription pills, drugs).

In a case like this, the guy will probably benefit from seeing a therapist to help him calm down and figure out the best way to move forward.

However, if he's coping fairly well and is simply going through the natural grief most people experience after a break up, then chances are high that he doesn't need to see a therapist.

By the way!

If you're currently feeling lost and panicked without your ex woman and possibly even thinking things like, "I don't know what to do without her. She was my reason for living and everything seems dull and pointless without her. Everyone keeps telling me to forget about her and move on, or that there are plenty fish in the sea, but I don't want to get over her! I just want things to go back to the way they used to be at the beginning of our relationship where we were so in love and happy. Maybe I should see a therapist to help me get over her?" don't despair.

There's no reason to see a therapist if what you really want is to get your ex back.

However, you can't do that from a place of weakness and desperation, because when you interact with her (over the phone and in person) she will automatically pick up on your hopelessness and despair and she will feel even more turned off by you, which is not what you want.

So, what should you do?

To begin with, you have to get to the point where you believe and accept that you don't need her in your life to be happy and fulfilled.

Of course, you really want her back, but you don't need her back.

Sure, you miss her and feel sad without her, but you will not die without her.

Yes, your life will be great with her in it, but if that doesn't happen, you will survive and you will be able to live a happy life without her.

When you start thinking that way, you will discover that not only do you stop feeling so emotionally dependent on her for your emotional well being, you also start to feel better about yourself and your future, even if she's not in it.

When your mindset changes in that way, something amazing happens!

You instantly begin to become more emotionally attractive to your ex, because you're now more confident, emotionally independent and emotionally masculine.

Then, whenever you interact with her on a phone call, or in person and she notices that you are now emotionally strong and happy in your life without her, she begins to see you in a different way.

Suddenly, her sexual and romantic feelings for you that she pushed into the background get woken up, and she feels drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

She then becomes open to hanging out with you more and more to see how she feels.

This is why it's so important that you get to the point where you want her back, but you don't need her.

You can do that within days and you do not need to see a therapist to achieve it.

Where Many Guys Go Wrong After a Break Up

Although there are definitely certain times when a guy should talk to a therapist, it can also become a crutch for a guy who doesn't know how to cope with his emotions and either move forward with his life (i.e. find a new woman), or get his ex back.

So, before you decide whether you should see a therapist, consider the following mistakes that guys make in a situation like yours:

1. Making the pain worse by talking about it with a therapist who is willing to listen because he/she gets paid by the hour

A therapist's main function is to help a patient clarify his feelings in order to solve the problems he is facing.

This can take weeks of appointments and cost a lot of money, with you never really getting a solution on how to get your ex girl back.

A therapist will listen, but they won't always be able to fix the problem.

Although there might be some benefits in expressing your feelings to a therapist, the truth is that talking about it isn't going to change what happened between you and her.

Only taking action will.

By the way!

According to the founder of the International Center for Clinical Excellence (an international consortium of clinicians, researchers, and educators dedicated to promoting excellence in behavioral health services), studies have actually proven that therapy is actually not very effective at all.

In fact, 5-10% of patients actually get worse after therapy and 35-40% of patients experience no benefit whatsoever.

So, if you want to get your ex back, you're better off focusing on interacting with her and re-attracting her, rather than seeing a therapist and repeatedly expressing your grief week after week without really making any progress.

Another mistake that guys make in a situation like yours is!

2. Not knowing that there is an easier way to get a woman back

Sometimes a guy simply doesn't know how to cope with a break up.

All he does know is that he feels bad and he wants her back, but he doesn't know how to make that happen.

As a result, he might think to himself, "If I go see a therapist, maybe my ex will take it as a sign that I'm making an effort to be a better man for her. She will then be more willing to give me another chance, because I'm actually dealing with my issues this time."

Yet, what he doesn't understand is that a woman doesn't want to hear about a guy's struggle to become a better man by seeing a therapist.

Instead, she just wants him to get on with fixing his issues, without needing her approval for getting the job done.

The truth is, there's a much quicker and easier way to get an ex woman back, other than getting therapy.

You need to get her on a call or to a meet up with you right away and begin sparking some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

The more you awaken those feelings inside of her, the more open she becomes to giving you another chance.

Remember: What matters to a woman is how you make her feel when she's with you (e.g. attracted, excited, turned on, in love vs. bored, annoyed, turned off, disappointed).

So, focus on that and you will be amazed by her response.

Another mistake that guys make in a situation like yours is

3. Feeling sorry for himself, rather than regaining control of his emotions and getting her back

Feeling some pain and despair after a break up is perfectly normal.

However, wallowing in misery and feeling sorry for yourself isn't going to help you accomplish anything.

If anything, it's going to make your ex feel justified in her decision to break up with you, because in her eyes, you being unable to get control of your emotions is a sign of an emotionally weak and wimpy man.

Here's the thing

When a woman sees a man falling apart after a break up, her natural instincts kick in and she starts thinking things like, "I see now that he's definitely not the man for me. He's so much more emotionally weak and sensitive than I imagined. He can't even cope with a break up. That makes me wonder what would happen if he was faced with something really challenging in his life. He'd probably crumble and expect me to hold his hand and take care of him. No thanks! I need a real man that I can depend on to take care of me, not the other way around."

So, if you want to re-attract your ex, make sure that you don't turn her off by feeling sorry for yourself.

A better approach is to quickly get control of your emotions and then show her (during interactions) that you're a confident and emotionally strong man.

She will then automatically feel respect for you for coping so well.

She will also start to feel attracted to you again and from there you can build up her feelings for you and make her want to be your girl once more.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Dumped Me After Being Together For Years

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 tips to help you get her back:

1. Understand that she knows you well, so your usual tactics won't work so well on her anymore

Chances are high that even though your ex just dumped you for real after so many years together, she probably threatened to do it at least once (but likely many times) before.

For example: After a particularly big argument, she may have said things like, â€œIâ€™m fed up with you! Youâ€™re driving me crazy and I donâ€™t even know why I put up with all your crap. Iâ€™d be better off dumping you and moving on with my life.â€

In some instances she may even have moved out for a few days (if you and her were living together), or ignored you, if you didnâ€™t.

However, every time that happened, you probably did everything in your power to convince her to change her mind (e.g. you promised her that you would change, you sent her messages or e-mails telling her how much you love her and how sorry you were for hurting you, you bought her flowers or gifts).

Of course, because she loved you too, she allowed herself to be talked into giving you another chance, while in all likelihood secretly hoping that this time you would really change and become the man she was hoping you would be.

Yet, if every time that happened you reverted back to being the same guy as before, itâ€™s understandable that she finally got fed up and dumped you for real.

The good news though, is that you can get her back again, even if she is saying things like, â€œThis time itâ€™s final! I will never get back with you. Just accept that itâ€™s over between us and leave me alone!â€

However, you canâ€™t do it the same way youâ€™ve been doing it up to now, because she knows all your tactics and she will likely push you away and say something like, â€œDonâ€™t try to sweet talk me into giving you another chance, because this time your tricks wonâ€™t work. I mean what I say. Itâ€™s over between us for real this time!â€

This is why, you need to use a new approach and change the way you communicate with her, the style of conversation you have, the vibe you project and the expectations you place on her.

For example: Rather than push her to get back with you, you can tell her that you accept her decision.

Then, you need to use telephone calls and meet ups to re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you again, by showing her that youâ€™ve already taken action to become a better man (e.g. if you were too laid back and unmotivated before, youâ€™re now more focused and driven, if you treated her like one of your buddies before, you now flirt with her to create a sexual spark between you, if you were allowed her to call all the shots before making her feel more emotionally dominant than you, you now stand your ground and donâ€™t let her walk all over you).

When you do that, youâ€™ll be amazed by how quickly her attitude changes.

Suddenly, she wants to interact with you more and more.

When she opens back up like that, you can then fully re-attract her and get her back.

Another tip to help you get her back isâ€¦!

2. Get clear on what parts of the attraction experience were lacking

Right now, you probably feel quite shocked that your girl dumped you after being together for years and you may even be thinking things like, â€œI just donâ€™t understand what happened. I know we had our ups and downs, but isnâ€™t that how all relationships are? No one is happy all the time. As far as Iâ€™m concerned, what we had was stronger than our problems. However, seeing as she dumped me after all these years, she clearly didnâ€™t feel the same way as me.â€

If so, youâ€™re not alone.

Many guys who get dumped by their woman donâ€™t really understand why it happened.

However, if youâ€™re going to successfully regain her respect, attraction and love for you, youâ€™re going to have to get to the point where you can see things from her perspective.

When you start to understand what she was seeing/feeling/experiencing in the relationship with you, you can quickly make some attractive changes to your thinking, communication style and behavior and re-attract her.

By the wayâ€¦!

If youâ€™re not quite sure what parts of the attraction experience were lacking in your relationship with your ex, here are some questions to ask yourself to gain clarity:

Did you remain emotionally strong and independent in the relationship, or did you end up becoming too clingy, needy, possessive or jealous?

Did you always treat her with love and respect regardless of how much she annoyed you, or did you unconsciously slip into a habit of treating her badly (e.g. you became too emotional/aggressive/abusive/controlling/selfish)?

Were you able to maintain her feelings of attraction by treating her like a sexy desirable woman, or did you start treating her more like your friend or roommate?

Did you maintain the important qualities that originally attracted her to you (e.g. your confidence, drive and ambition, charm and charisma), or did you slowly slip into thinking that because she loved you, you didnâ€™t have to put in the effort to be that man for her anymore?

Did you keep your promises to her to be a man that she could rely on, or did you often go back on your word (e.g. forget to call, unavailable when she needed you)?

When you understand where you went wrong, you can change and improve those things about yourself and then let your ex experience the new you during interactions.

The more she can see that youâ€™re now at a new level as a man and that if she gives you another chance you wonâ€™t be slipping back like you may have done before, the more open she becomes to the possibility of getting back together again.

Another tip to help you get her back isâ€¦!

3. Don't try to get her to want a relationship before you've properly re-attracted her and hooked up sexually at least once

For the time being, your ex is convinced that she doesn't want to be in a relationship with you anymore.

So, if you then start pressuring her by saying things like, â€œI miss you so much! I hate that weâ€™ve broken up. Canâ€™t we just work things out and get back together again? Let us at least try. After all, weâ€™ve put so many years into our relationship, isnâ€™t it worth saving?â€ chances are sheâ€™ll close herself off from you even more and possibly even block your number/unfriend you on social media so that you canâ€™t easily communicate with her.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

If you donâ€™t first reactivate some of your exâ€™s sexual and romantic feelings for you, suggesting that you just get back together again because you and her were together for years will likely just make her think something like, â€œHe just doesnâ€™t get it. He expects me to overlook all the problems we have simply because weâ€™ve been together for years. Heâ€™s so selfish! He only cares about what he wants, without even bothering to see things from my perspective. I have to do whatever it takes to make it clear to him that itâ€™s over, so he wonâ€™t pressure me anymore, even if that means hooking up with another guy as soon as possible.â€

So, if you donâ€™t want that type of response, donâ€™t put that kind of pressure on her.

Instead, just focus on using every interaction you have with her to spark some of her feelings for you (e.g. by using humor to break down her defenses, by flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you, by showing her that youâ€™ve already started to transform into the kind of man she always wanted you to be).

Once she starts feeling respect and attraction for you again, you can then progress to giving her a hug (i.e. after a catch up) and if she doesnâ€™t pull away, give her a kiss as well.

From there, if sheâ€™s open, you can go to your place or hers and hook up with her sexually.

When you re-attract her and then have sex with her, it becomes easier for her to fall back in love with you, because it feels good, different and exciting.

You and her can then get back together in a relationship that is far more mature, loving and deeper than the last one.

Another tip to help you get her back isâ€¦

4. Give her space if she needs it, but continue to re-attract her and make her feel like she is missing out on being with the new you

Sometimes a woman is undecided about how to interact with her ex.

Part of her likely misses him (after all they were together for years) and wants to hear his voice on the phone or see him in person and the other part of her wants to cut off all contact with him so that she can heal and move on.

This is why, your ex might not be as open to interacting with you as you might like.

However, donâ€™t let that stop you from interacting with her and give her too much space (e.g. 30 or 60 days), because if you do, you may end up giving her the time she needs to fully get over you and possibly even find a new man.

Of course that doesn't mean you should become a pesky, desperate ex boyfriend who won't leave her alone for a minute either.

Instead, you should give her a few days of space if she needs it (up to 7) and then you need to get her on a call with you and spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is by

- Using humor to break down her defenses and make her feel happy to be hearing from you again, rather than wishing you hadn't called her.
- Being confident and self-assured on the call with her (even when she's being cold or distant), rather than sounding insecure, nervous or unsure of yourself and turning her off as a result.
- Responding to what she says differently so that she can see that you've changed and improved since the break up (e.g. if she tries to dominate you during conversation, rather than give in to her like you used to do in the past, you now stand up to her in a firm, yet loving way).
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you and her and make her feel like a feminine woman in your presence, rather than being too nice, sweet or neutral with her so she feels nothing.

Then, once you've reactivated some of her feelings for you again, cut off contact with her for a few more days (again nothing longer than 7 days, but preferably less than that), so that she can begin to miss you.

She will then likely start to think things like, "I really thought it was over between us, but I can't seem to get over him after all. I realize now that he's changed and I like who he has become. After all the years of being together, I want to be the woman who gets to enjoy the new version of him. I don't want to lose him now that he's become the man I always wanted him to be."

Then, when you get in touch with her again a few days later, she will be happy to hear from you.

Her guard will be down and you can then meet up with her and show her that she really will be missing out if she doesn't give you another chance.

From there, continue to build on her sexual and romantic feelings for you and then get to a hug, a kiss, sex and into a new relationship with you.

Where Guys Go Wrong After Being Dumped By a Long Term Girlfriend

There's no denying that it sucks to get dumped by the woman you love after being together of years and you may even be feeling a bit hopeless at the moment.

However, the good news is that when you change your approach and begin making your ex feel sparks of attraction and respect for you every time she interacts with you, the more open she will become to getting back together.

Of course, the opposite applies too.

If you continue turning her off every time you interact with her, she'll feel even more convinced that she made the right decision to dump you and she will then double her efforts to get over you and move on.

So, to prevent that from happening, make sure you avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Expecting her to want to continue the relationship after all you've been through

No matter how long you and your ex were together, how many hurdles you have overcome as couple, or how madly in love with each other you used to be at one time, it's all in the past now.

So, if you try to convince her to give you another chance based on that, she's likely not going to fall for it, because what matters to her is how she feels now and how she feels now is that she doesn't want to be with you anymore.

So, if you want to change that, how you make her feel now is what is most important and what will work to get her back.

Here's the thing:

Unlike in the past where a woman was expected to stay with her man for life, despite how she felt about him, these days, if a woman isn't feeling the way she wants to feel in a relationship, she can break up with her boyfriend (fiancé or husband) and move on regardless of how long they've been together or what they've been through.

This is why, if you want your ex back, don't bother trying to convince her based on what you and her have been through in the past.

She needs to feel respect and attraction for you right now based on experiencing the new and improved version of you.

How you make her feel now is what counts.

So, focus on that.

Another mistake is â

2. Offering her the same kind of attraction experience, which then makes other guys seem more appealing

Some guys miss out on getting their ex woman back because they keep giving her the same attraction experience that worked on her the first time around (e.g. being really nice and passive, buying her gifts, listening more, letting her call the shots).

Yet, if that approach was as effective, she wouldn't be an ex.

So, if your ex is not opening up to you, it's probably because your approach to attraction isn't very attractive to her anymore.

This is why you need to change your approach and begin giving her a new attraction experience, so she feels motivated to get back together again (e.g. if you've always been submissive around her, start being more ballsy, while still being a good guy, if you've been treating her like she's your best friend, start treating her more like she's a sexy, desirable woman).

Only when she feels attracted to you in new ways, will she be happy to try and work things out with you.

However, if you keep giving her the same attraction experience over and over again, she'll naturally feel drawn to other men who make her feel more excited, turned on and desirable than you. Another mistake is â

3. Trying to discuss the relationship or work things out via text

Although texting might seem like your only option of staying in touch with your ex if sheâs being distant and offish towards you, using it as your preferred method of working things out is a big no, no.

Why?

First of all, it will likely make your ex feel like you donât even care enough about her to talk to her over the phone or in person.

She may then think things like, âAfter all the years we spent together as a couple, all Iâm worth to him is a half-hearted text message trying to convince me to change my mind. He doesnât even care enough to call me and talk to me in person.â

As a result, she closes up even more and possibly even blocks your number on her phone so that she doesnât have to see your texts to her.

Secondly, when a woman has a lot of time to look at and analyze your words, she can easily start reading things into what youâre saying that you never intended.

For example: You might say something like, âAfter so many years together I think we owe it to ourselves to try and fix things,â but she then interprets it as you saying, âI miss all the chores you used to do around here and I think you owe it to me to come back and do those things for me.â

Of course thatâs not what youâre saying at all.

However, because sheâs angry and annoyed and she canât hear the tonality of your voice and see your body language which will prove to her that youâre a new man and that youâre being sincere about wanting her back, she will usually interpret everything you say to her via text based on her feelings for you (i.e. in a negative way).

This is why, if you want to get your ex back for real, you need to leave discussions about your relationship for when youâre talking to her face-to-face at a meet up and then, only after youâve re-sparked her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Approach things in the correct way and you will easily melt her defenses and get her back.

On the other hand, approach things the wrong way (i.e. try to get her back via text) and she will continue saying things like, âIâm sorry. I know we were together for years, but itâs over now. You need to put what we had together behind you and move on.â

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex is Dating a Coworker. Will it Last?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends on the following:

1. Is he a complete man, without any flaws?

Right now, your ex's new man might seem like he's ideal for her (e.g. because you perceive him as being better looking than you, he has more money than you, she seems so much happier now), because you're likely only focusing on his positives, or don't know much about him, other than the superficial things you can see from afar.

However, in reality he might have a horrible track record with relationships and have been dumped every time, or he might be just using her for a while and then he will dump her.

Here's the thing:

When a woman starts dating a new man after a break up, she will often look for a guy who is very different to her ex in the areas that she felt were most lacking in her relationship with him.

For example: If her ex was too controlling and jealous (i.e. because he wasn't very confident in his attractiveness to her and feared losing her), her new man will likely be very confident and easy-going with her.

Another example is if her ex was too closed off and struggled to express his emotions to her, so she felt unloved and unappreciated.

In a case like that, her new man will probably be more emotional and open about his feelings.

However, just because the new guy is filling in the gaps that were missing in her relationship with her ex, it doesn't mean he's perfect, or that the thing she started dating him for doesn't eventually begin to get on her nerves over time.

For example, an emotional man might be nice when a woman is coming from a relationship where her ex didn't show any emotions at all, but over time, it will usually start to irritate her when her new guy is always gushing about his feelings.

So, even though your ex's coworker might seem like he's making her happy right now, it doesn't mean it will last over the long-term.

The main thing is for you to not give up hope and do nothing.

You can still get your ex back if you want to. How?

By making some changes and improvements to the way you think, act and behave.

Then, the next time you interact with your ex (e.g. on a phone call or in person), you can start giving her the attraction experience she always wanted from you, but never got.

For example: When interacting with her, ask yourself:

- Am I making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to me, or does she seem closed off, uninterested and aloof because I'm being too serious?
- Am I sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for me by being confident and emotionally masculine, or does she see me more as a platonic friend because I'm being too nice or neutral with her?

- Can she pick up from my conversation and vibe that even though I want her back, I don't need her back to feel happy or fulfilled in my life (e.g. because I'm actively pursuing my own goals, hobbies and interests), or does she sense that I need her to feel good about myself?
- Does she feel respect and sexual attraction for me based on how I interact with her and talk to her, or does she still feel that she's getting a better attraction experience from her new guy?

If you are doing those things right, she will inevitably begin comparing you to her new man and she may then start to see that there are glaring gaps in his attractiveness to her too (e.g. he might not be jealous or controlling, but he also doesn't show much interest in getting to know her family and friends, he might tell her that he cares for her, but he doesn't like to make decisions or lead in the relationship either).

The more she notices his faults compared to how much you've changed and improved, the less she will be able to stop herself from wondering if she made the right decision by breaking up with you and dating him.

When this begins to happen, her guard comes down and she becomes open to interacting with you even more to see who she really wants to be with.

Another thing that might determine whether your ex's new relationship with her coworker will last is

2. Did he grow on her over time?

Sometimes a guy will see a woman that he likes and because he doesn't really know how to attract her, he becomes her friend instead.

He might then be nice to her, do things for her and generally make himself available to being there when she needs him.

From time to time, he might ask her, "Why don't we go out on a date?" or, "Will you go out with me?" only to have her reject him by saying something along the lines of, "That's really sweet of you to ask, but you know I don't feel that way about you. Besides, dating might ruin our friendship and I would hate to lose you."

He will then usually give up for a little while, only to try again a few weeks or months later.

Then one day, he gets the shock of his life when she says, "Yes."

Yet, in most cases like that, the reason for her agreeing to date him after all the times she said no, is not because she has suddenly realized what a catch he is and has fallen head over heels in love with him, but rather because he has grown on her over time.

Add to that the possibility that she's also just broken up with a guy and she may think something like, "He's a sweet guy and at least he's better than my ex. I know I don't feel much attraction for him, but maybe that will come with time once we're in a relationship together."

So, if your ex only started dating her coworker because he grew on her over time, chances are high that he's not going to be able to maintain her attraction in the relationship.

He's going to be the kind of guy who doesn't understand what really makes a woman feel attracted, so his friendly approach will become boring to her sooner rather than later.

Of course that doesn't mean you should sit around waiting for that to happen, because there's no guarantee that if your ex's relationship with her coworker doesn't last, she's going to come running back to you.

Instead, you need to take action by staying in her life (e.g. by calling her on the phone and catching up with her in person) and actively reawaken her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel good when she interacts with you, by being more emotionally masculine than her and making her feel like a sexy, desirable woman, by flirting with her to create sexual tension between you and her).

The more she can see that her new guy doesn't generate the kind of feelings inside of her that you do (i.e. attraction, excitement, respect), the more doubtful she will become about staying with him.

When she starts thinking like that, the doors open for you to get her back for real.

Another thing that might determine whether your ex's new relationship with her coworker will last is

3. Are you ready and willing to interact with her and re-attract her, to interrupt the process of her moving on?

A mistake that a lot of guys make when they discover that their ex is dating a new man, is to take a back seat and wait for her to either break up with the new guy so they can make a move, or simply ignore her in the hope that this will upset her and make her come back on her own.

Yet, that's the worst approach to getting an ex back, especially one who is dating a new man.

In almost all cases, rather than go back to her ex, a woman will usually focus on moving forward, if not with her coworker, then with someone else.

This is why, if you actually do want your ex back, you can't sit on the sidelines and hope she will magically appear back in your life one day.

You need to take action to make it happen.

You need to interact with her and actively re-attract her and make her see you as better than her new man.

How can you do that?

When you talk to her on the phone or in person you need to Turn her negative feelings about what happened between you and her into something you can both laugh about together, rather than taking the blame for everything and putting yourself down to her in the hope that she will feel sorry for you.

Maintain your confidence around her regardless of what she is saying or doing to put you off.

Flirt with her to create some sexual tension between you and show her that you still find her desirable, rather than pretending that you're over her or only want to be her friend.

Maintain your emotional masculinity during conversation, rather than sucking up to her when she tries to push you around and dominate you.

The more she can see that you're being a confident, emotionally mature man who believes in himself and in his value to her, the more confused she will feel about her feelings for her coworker.

From there, you just need to continue showing her that you've transformed yourself into the kind of man that she always wanted you to be.

As you do that, she will naturally begin to fall for you all over again and she will likely drop her new guy so she can be with you.

Another thing that might determine whether your ex's new relationship with her coworker will last is

4. Do you know what really turned her off about you?

Right now, you might be wondering why it's important for you to know your ex's real reasons for breaking up with you.

The answer is actually pretty simple: If you don't know her deep, secret reasons, you will never be able to offer her what she really wants when she's in a relationship with you.

As a result, she will either stick with her coworker, or dump him and look for another guy who actually understands her.

So, why not be that guy instead?

When you know what really turned your ex off about you, you can quickly change and improve and give her the attraction experience she always wanted from you but never got.

As an added bonus, you will also be offering her the things about you that she really liked, making you pretty irresistible to her all of a sudden.

By the way

If you're unsure what may have caused your ex to feel turned off by you in the relationship, here are some questions to help you come up with some ideas that relate to your situation:

Were you confident and self-assured when she first met you, but as the relationship progressed, you began to feel insecure about your attractiveness to her, causing you to become needy, clingy and emotionally dependent on her?

If so, she would have felt turned off by what she perceived as your insecurity and emotional weakness.

Was she initially attracted to you because you're a nice guy, only for her to eventually discover that you struggle to take the lead and be the man in the relationship with her (e.g. because you couldn't stand up to her regardless of how out of line she was being, you couldn't make decisions without her say so)?

If so, she would have felt turned off by your lack of dominance and emotional masculinity.

Were you initially loving, attentive and considerate of her feelings and desires, only to slowly fall into the habit of taking her for granted and being a bit of an inconsiderate jerk towards her?

If so, she would have naturally felt like pulling away, being closed off and treating you with less and less respect over time.

Did you and her start off at the same level in terms of maturity, only for her to grow up faster than you.

If so, she would have felt turned off by how the relationship dynamic made her feel more like a mother figure or big sister in your life, rather than your girl.

By getting a better understanding of what turned your ex off, you can then easily make the right adjustments that will re-attract her and make her feel worried that she is in the wrong relationship (i.e. dating her coworker rather than you).

She may then open herself up to the idea of being seduced back into a relationship with you.

Note: No matter how she responds, don't push her for a relationship right away, because she will likely be feeling guilty for feeling attracted to you again even though she's now with someone else.

Instead, just maintain your confidence, knowing that even though she isn't saying it, she really wants you and then focus on building on her attraction for you.

She will naturally feel herself wanting to be your girl again and you can then make it happen by gently guiding her back into your arms and your life.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Their Ex Woman Starts Dating Another Man

If you want to ensure that your ex's new relationship with her coworker doesn't last, you need to focus on saying and doing the types of things that will pull her to you and away from him.

This is why you need to avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Watching on from the sidelines and becoming increasingly insecure because she seems happy.

Sometimes, when a guy notices that his ex is happily moving on with someone else, he might begin to lose confidence in himself and in his ability to ever get her back.

He may start to think, "Look at how happy she is now without me. All I ever did was make her get angry or cry. I am the one who pushed her into her coworkers arms by not measuring up as a boyfriend/fiancé/husband. I wish I could turn back the clock and do everything differently, but it's way too late for that. She's moved on and it's all my fault that it happened and now I have to face the reality of being without the love of my life forever, because she's in the arms of another man."

He may then become one of those guys who is always watching and pining for his ex from afar (e.g. he goes to her social media pages to see what she's doing, he hangs out at places where he knows he might get a glimpse of her).

As a result, he stops displaying the qualities that attracted his ex to him in the first place, like his confidence and emotional strength and becomes insecure and self-doubting instead.

Then, not only isn't he actively doing anything to reactivate his ex's feelings for him, if he does happen to interact with her (e.g. he bumps into her at the mall/a restaurant/on campus) and she picks up via his body language and conversation that he's now insecure and self-doubting, it just reaffirms to her she is with the right guy now.

So, if you don't want that to happen to you, you need to make sure that you believe in yourself and in your attractiveness to her.

Then you need to stop sitting in the sidelines and start interacting with her (over the phone and even better, in person) and begin sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

The more you do that, the more confused she will feel about her feelings for her coworker and she will naturally become open to the idea of interacting with you to see how she truly feels.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

2. Forgetting that she was once happy with you at the start of your relationship.

Right now, your ex might be trying to push you away (especially if youâ€™re trying to talk her out of dating her coworker and give you another chance), by saying things like, â€œIâ€™m happy now. Why canâ€™t you accept that and leave me alone?â€

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

There was a time where she felt happy with you too.

At the start of your relationship and probably for some time afterwards, the sight and sound of you made her smile and feel good.

However, no matter how idyllic everything was at the beginning, eventually things started to go wrong.

She began to notice things about you that made her lose respect, attraction and love for you over time and eventually she broke up with you.

In the same way, sheâ€™s at the start of a new relationship with her coworker and everything looks rosy and perfect.

However, eventually she will begin to see his flaws too.

What you need to do, is make her see those flaws sooner rather than later, by staying in her life and using every opportunity you get to spark some of her feelings for you.

When you become better in her eyes than her new man, she will automatically want to be your girl again and create new happy memories with you.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Using an ineffective strategy when attempting to get her back.

A lot of guys will try to get an ex back when sheâ€™s dating another guy and fail. Why?

They usually use an ineffective ex back strategy.

For example: A guy might decide that his ex will like him more than the other guy because he is nicer to her than he is.

Yet, what he doesnâ€™t realize is that niceness isnâ€™t what sparks a womanâ€™s feelings of sexual desire.

Instead, she feels neutral towards him and feels more drawn to the other guy who makes her feel attracted.

Alternatively, a guy may believe that his ex will come back if he just ignores her.

However, in most cases, this usually results in her either falling deeply in love with her new man and possibly even moving in with him, or she moves on and finds another guy to fall in love with.

On the other hand, a guy might decide to stay in touch with his ex as a friend via text, but ends up turning her off because it seems desperate and doesn't create a spark.

So, if you really want to make your ex dump her new man and come back to you, you need to do what works to get her back.

You need to interact with her and actively make her feel so much respect and attraction for you again, that she naturally wants to be with you.

She will then dump her coworker and come back to you, because she feels that if she doesn't give you another chance, she will regret it for the rest of her life.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get My Ex to Stop Blaming Me For Everything

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 things you can do to make your ex stop blaming you for everything:

1. Tell her that she gets one last apology from you and after that, you're just going to laugh when she blames you for everything

Some women thrive on creating endless drama in their lives and this gets worse when they break up with a guy.

In a case like that, a woman who is a drama queen might enjoy making a big show of how hurt and betrayed she feels, simply to see her ex squirm and feel bad.

Yet, in reality she's coping just fine and is even getting on with her life, going out with friends, meeting new guys and even enjoying herself.

Of course, that doesn't mean your ex isn't feeling any pain or anger at all about your break up, because she probably is and it's normal for her to feel that way.

It's also normal for her to want to bring it up during conversation with you.

However, sometimes a woman might get to a point where she's being unreasonable and is unfairly blaming her ex for everything that happened between them and saying things like, "It's all your fault we broke up. You're the jerk who stuffed what we had up. I can't believe I let you treat me that way for so long. I really thought I could trust you and that what we had would last, but you made a fool of me. You destroyed my love for you and I will never be able to forget that. I'm a shell of my former self and it's all because of you!"

Here's the thing though!

Even if everything she's saying about him is true, if a guy lets his ex talk to him like that and treat him like a naughty little boy who needs to be scolded for his bad behavior, it will only make her lose even more respect for him.

Why?

Mainly because he's allowing her to dominate him emotionally.

In the same way, if you let your ex get the upper hand with you by always blaming you for everything, you won't be able to move past that so that you can re-attract her and get her back.

This is why, the next time she starts to rant about how everything is all your fault, you need to put a stop to it right away.

For example: In a firm but gentle tone of voice you need to say to her something along the lines of, "Okay, I get it. I stuffed up and I'm truly sorry for the pain I caused. However, this is the last time I'm going to apologize to you. What's done is done and it serves neither of us to keep going on about what happened over and over again. In fact, it only prevents us from healing and moving forward. So, from now on, if you start blaming me for everything, I'm just going to laugh."

Of course your ex will probably be shocked when you say that to her and she may even act like she's pissed off at you, but don't let it get to you and cause you to crumble and start apologizing to her again.

Instead, maintain your confidence and understand that deep down, she will be feeling a spark of respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, her walls start to come down and then interactions become more pleasant and enjoyable.

You can then build on her feelings and get her back.

Another thing you can do to make your ex stop blaming you for everything isâ€¦|

2. Laugh at her when she is blaming you

Stop taking her blaming so seriously and turn it into something that you and her can laugh about.

For example: The next time youâ€¦re talking to your ex (over the phone or in person) and she says something along the lines of, *â€œI just canâ€¢t forget what you did to me! Itâ€¢s all your fault that my life is ruined! I donâ€¢t even know why Iâ€¢m still talking to you after the way you treated me. Youâ€¢re such a jerk!*â€¢ rather than allow feelings of guilt to make you become submissive around her, stay emotionally strong instead and turn her negativity into something you can both laugh about.

For instance, you can respond by saying something like, *â€œOh, weâ€¢re blaming me for everything again? Sure, I can take it. Iâ€¢ve been going to the gym lately so my shoulders are quite broad and muscular now, so I can take it. In fact, my shoulders are so big, you can also blame me for global warming and the economy too if you like. Everything is my fault!*â€¢ and then have a laugh with her about that.

When you respond in that way, not only are you showing her that youâ€¢re a confident and emotionally strong man, youâ€¢re also making her smile and laugh.

She then likely starts to feel a bit sheepish about the way sheâ€¢s been treating you, which means she naturally stops being so hostile and guarded around you.

She then becomes more open to talking to you, without always being so negative.

You can then easily reactivate her feelings for you (e.g. my making her laugh and smile some more, showing her via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to her that youâ€¢re a new and improved man).

When that happens, she canâ€¢t stop herself from thinking about you differently.

All of a sudden you seem more attractive to her and she just canâ€¢t stop herself from wanting to experience the new you again and again.

Before she knows it, sheâ€¢s no longer blaming you for everything and sheâ€¢s even thinking about the idea of giving you another chance.

Another thing you can do to make your ex stop blaming you for everything isâ€¦|

3. Focus on making her feel respect for the new, more emotionally strong and emotionally masculine version of you

One of the main reasons why a woman will continue to blame her ex for everything is because she still perceives him as being the same guy she broke up with.

In her mind sheâ€¢s likely playing all his actions and behaviors over and over again and seeing him the way he was before, during and directly after the break up (e.g. insecure and wimpy, emotionally immature, needy and clingy, oblivious to her needs).

As a result, she can't let go of her negative feelings for him and move on.

This is why, to get your ex to stop blaming you for everything, you need to make her see you in a new, more positive light.

To do that, you need to interact with her over the phone and in person and show her your confidence and emotional strength (e.g. by using humor to pass her tests) and change her perception of you.

The more you can remain calm (no matter how much she attacks you) and continue making her laugh and smile and feel good to be interacting with you, the more respect and attraction she will feel for the new and improved you.

She will then naturally stop blaming you for everything every time she sees you or talks to you on the phone, because her negative feelings for you will have faded away without her even realizing it.

Then, rather than looking for excuses to avoid you, she will likely be thinking things like, â€œOkay, I don't know how this happened, but I'm not angry with him anymore. In actual fact, I feel drawn to him again in a nice way. He's just so much more emotionally strong and masculine now and regardless of what I say or do to make him revert back to behaving in the ways that caused me to break up with him, he remains calm, relaxed and confident. I would never have believed it if I hadn't experienced it for myself, but he really has changed. He's now the kind of man I always wanted him to be. I'm actually starting to believe that we can work things out between us after all.â€

So stop asking, â€œHow can I get my ex to stop blaming me for everything,â€ and focus on regaining her respect and attraction for you by showing her that you're a new man now.

When she experiences your confidence, emotional strength and emotional masculinity first hand (i.e. on a phone call or in person), she just won't be able to hold on to her negative feelings and opinions of you.

Then, when her guard comes down, getting her to change her mind about being broken up becomes easy for you.

Another thing you can do to make your ex stop blaming you for everything isâ€¦!

4. Get her to agree to the fact that everyone, including her, makes mistakes in life and relationships

For example: The next time your ex starts blaming you for everything, you need to say something like, â€œYes, you're right, I did make a lot of mistakes in our relationship. I stuffed up many times and for that I'm truly sorry. However, you have to admit that everyone makes mistakes in life and in relationships, even you. I'm not perfect and neither are you and that's what makes us human. We stumble and we fall. Sometimes we even hurt the people we love the most. However, that doesn't make us bad people. It's just a mistake. The main thing is that we live, we learn and we become better people over time. Of course, not everyone does, but I can promise you that I have, because I've learned from my mistakes and I would never be that man again. By the way, I'm not just saying that so that we can get back together again. In fact, I accept that you don't want that and it's okay. The main thing though is that you realize I didn't intentionally go out to hurt you and destroy what we had. I made mistakes and so did you. It wasn't intentional and now we can put it behind us and move forward without all the anger and resentment, don't you agree?

Of course, saying that to her is unlikely to make her instantly forgive you and want to give the relationship another chance, but it will calm things down.

Then, to convince her, it's up to you to show her during interactions that you truly have changed and improved.

When she sees that your thinking and behavior is at a completely different level from the one you were at when she broke up with you, she will start to feel respect for you again.

When that happens, she also feels attracted to you and is then a lot more willing to open back up to the possibility of you and her getting back together again.

Mistakes to Avoid When She's Blaming You For Everything

[image: Mistakes to avoid when an ex is blaming you for everything]

If you want your ex to stop blaming and start wanting you back, it's vital that every time you interact with her from now on, you say and do the types of things that will reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

This is why, you need to avoid making any of the following mistakes and risk turning her off instead:

1. Trying to get her to commit to the idea of having a relationship, before you have even re-attracted her

Even though you may be 100% sure about your feelings for your ex and believe that you and her belong together, she probably doesn't feel the same way about you right now.

So, if you start pushing for another chance with her, she's probably going to feel annoyed and say something along the lines of, 'Are you nuts? How can you expect me to want to get back together again with you after everything you put me through before? Don't you understand that I don't love you anymore? I would never get back into a relationship with you. You're being so annoying. Just leave me alone. I don't want to discuss this with you anymore.'

So, if you don't want a response like that from her, you need to make sure that you reactivate her feelings for you first.

Remember: For a woman to commit to the idea of getting back together again, the feelings have to be mutual (or at least close to mutual).

It can't just be about you wanting her back.

She's got to want it too.

So, focus on making her feel attracted when she's with you and regardless of what she's saying now, her feelings for you will begin to change.

Then the idea of getting back together again will feel good to her, because she respects you and feels attracted to you again.

However, without that first, she's not going to be interested and she will also continue blaming you for everything.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

2. Failing her confidence tests by taking her blaming too seriously

Sometimes, a woman will blame her ex for everything to test how much of a man he is.

For example: Will he just take it and hand all his power to her, or will he have the confidence and emotional strength to stand up to her and even lovingly laugh at her for being such a drama queen?

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to, respect and feel proud of, not a guy who is too timid to put his foot down when he can see that sheâ€¦s being unreasonable.

Of course, she might pretend that she doesnâ€¦t like it when he stands up to her in that way.

However, deep down she will be feeling sparks of respect and attraction for him again.

On the other hand, if he just rolls over and allows her to dominate him, she will lose even more respect for him and then getting her back will become difficult.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Becoming emotional when she is blaming you

It can sometimes be difficult for a guy to understand why his ex is being so mean to him now that theyâ€¦ve broken up.

He might then become overly emotional (e.g. flustered, annoyed, upset, dejected, feeling pity for himself) and think things like, â€œWhy is she blaming me for everything? I know that I stuffed up, but she made mistakes too. I wasnâ€¦t all bad. I must have had some good points as well. I donâ€¦t know what to do to make her stop all the accusations and hostility.â€

Yet, what he doesnâ€¦t realize is that by losing control of his emotions in that way, he actually stops displaying the qualities that attracted his ex to him in the first place (e.g. his confidence and emotional strength, his ability to stand up for himself, his emotional masculinity) and is being an emotionally unattractive instead.

Then, when his ex notices that heâ€¦s going to pieces every time she blames him for the state of their relationship, she loses even more respect and attraction for what she perceives as his emotional weakness.

She then treats him more and more badly as a way of pushing him permanently out of her life.

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

You canâ€¦t let your ex get to you and make you lose control of your emotions like she would if the tables were turned.

Remember: Sheâ€¦s the woman, so itâ€¦s okay for her to do that.

In fact, you would probably feel bad if she became emotional because you were treating her badly and you would want to protect her and make her feel better.

On the other hand, youâ€¦re the man and itâ€¦s not okay for you to do that.

If you do, you lose credibility in your exâ€¦s eyes and she then feels justified in being a bitch towards you, because youâ€¦re not the kind of man who is confident and emotionally strong enough to face the challenges of life head on, without becoming flustered, insecure or falling apart.

So, if you want your ex to stop blaming you for everything and want you back, you need to believe in yourself and remain confident around her no matter what she says or does.

When you do that, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for you again and she then opens back up to being a couple once more.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Broke No Contact and Got No Response

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Don't worry – you can still get her back.

However, before doing that, it's important that you understand the 5 possible reasons why she hasn't responded yet:

1. You texted her in a neutral way

After using No Contact a guy might break his silence by sending his ex a feeler text to see how she will respond to him.

For example: He might text her something along the lines of, â€œHey, how have you been?â€ or even just a simple, â€œHey,â€ and then wait for her to get back to him.

Yet, in most cases, rather than get a response like, â€œOMG! Where have you been??? Iâ€™ve been thinking about you and wondering why I havenâ€™t heard from you for so long. What have you been up to? Are you okay? Letâ€™s get together sometime so that we can catch up,â€ the guy usually either gets a short, cold reply like, â€œWhat do you want?â€ or he gets ignored completely.

Why?

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy and he then ignores her for a few weeks, or even months and when he does contact her heâ€™s being all neutral and boring about it, rather than feel motivated to respond to him, she usually thinks something along the lines of, â€œWeird. I canâ€™t believe heâ€™s contacting me out of the blue after all this time to say hi. What does he expect me to doâ€ | run after him all of a sudden? Doesnâ€™t he realize that Iâ€™ve been moving on and Iâ€™m pretty much over him now?â€

She then likely puts him out of her mind and forgets all about his unimpressive text to her.

This is why, if you want to get a response from your ex, you need to make sure that you make an impression on her right away so she canâ€™t stop thinking about you.

How can you do that?

By using some humor to break down her defenses and get her thinking things like, â€œWhat has gotten into him all of a sudden? Heâ€™s so funny and cute. I wonder what heâ€™s been up to?â€

She then becomes open to talking to you over the phone and meeting up with you in person to see for herself what has changed about you.

Remember: What you want is to spark your exâ€™s sexual and romantic feelings for you and being neutral or nice just isnâ€™t going to accomplish that.

You have to be bold and make sure that when you interact with your ex, whether itâ€™s via text, on a phone call or in person, youâ€™re activating her feelings for you.

When that happens, her guard comes down and getting back together again becomes something that sheâ€™s open to.

Another possible reason why your ex didnâ€™t respond to you when you broke No Contact isâ€

2. She is annoyed that you didn't try to get her back the normal way

The normal way is to call her, meet up with her, re-attract her and reconcile.

Using No Contact is a mind game that only works on a very small percentage of women.

In almost all other cases, a woman will use the time apart to fully get over her ex and move on.

Here's something you might not be aware of!

Once a woman has calmed down after a break up, she might find herself thinking things like, "I can't believe we've broken up. It feels so weird to be without him. I wonder what he's up to? I wonder if he's going to call me to check how I'm coping. Maybe if he does we will be able to talk things through."

So naturally, if she doesn't hear from her ex at all (i.e. because he's using the No Contact Rule to try and get her back), she will begin to think that he's moving on.

She will then focus on closing her heart off completely and moving on with her life as well.

If her ex then contacts her unexpectedly after a few weeks (or months) of complete silence, she may end up feeling really annoyed with him and thinking things like, "Now? He contacts me now after all this time and expects me to respond to him? What a jerk! He had his chance with me weeks ago but he chose to ignore me instead. Well, whatever chance he had is now gone. He should have been man enough to call me when he had the chance. It's too late now."

She then ignores him back and refuses to respond to his attempts to contact her.

Of course, the good news is that you can still turn things around and get her back.

How?

You need to call her right away and do what she was likely hoping you would do weeks/months ago (i.e. start re-sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you).

By the way!

If your ex won't answer your calls either, you can text her this:

"Hey! I accept that we've broken up, but I just wanted to ask you something quick over the phone. Don't worry, it's not serious. I'll call you in 10 minutes."

Then, try to call her 10 minutes later.

If she still doesn't answer, leave it for a day or two and then call her again.

Chances are, she will be curious about what you want and she will answer this time.

If not, text her this: "Hey! I tried calling you yesterday to ask you something quick, but I assume you were too busy to answer. No problem. I might try to get hold of you some other time so I can ask you that question."

She might then text you back asking, "What do you want to ask me?"

Whatever her response, just make sure you call her, not text her back.

Then, when you get her on the phone with you, focus on maintaining your confidence with her regardless what she says or does to put you off (e.g. she's cold and aloof, she tells you that she doesn't want to talk to you again).

Use humor to break down her defenses and make her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again and get her to agree to meet up with you in person, so that you can fully reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you and begin getting her back.

Another possible reason why your ex didn't respond to you when you broke No Contact is

3. She is testing to see how you will react

In almost all ex back cases, a woman will rarely jump at the idea of getting back with her ex right away.

Instead, she will usually play a bit hard to get (e.g. by not responding to her ex when he contacts her), to see how he will react.

For example:

- Is he going to lose confidence in himself and start doubting his chances of getting her back just because she's not making it easy for him, or will he stay emotionally strong and sure of himself and continue to go after her?
- Will he start begging and pleading with her to respond to his texts, or will he just pick up the phone and call her instead?
- Will he find a way to get hold of her even though she's ignoring him, or will he walk away and give up on getting her back just because she's being a little mean?
- Will he try to suck up to her (e.g. send her flowers, write her soppy e-mails) in the hope that she will forgive him and open up to talking to him again, or will he maintain his emotional masculinity regardless of how she's behaving towards him?

If he fails to pass her test, it will prove to her that he's not really the man she wants to be in a relationship with.

She will then ignore him for real, because she is now convinced that she won't be giving him another chance with her.

However, if her ex passes her test by remaining confident regardless of how she treats him, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect for him as a man.

When she feels respect for him again, she will naturally start to feel some attraction for him too and when that happens, her defenses will come down and she will open herself up to talking to him on the phone and even meeting up with him in person to see what happens next.

Another possible reason why your ex didn't respond to you when you broke No Contact is

4. She wants you to pursue her more before she shows signs of interest

Sometimes, a woman is potentially worried that if she responds to her ex right away when he contacts her, she's opening herself up to the possibility of him pulling her back in and then rejecting her.

So, to avoid that from happening she may decide to wait and see what he does next (i.e. will he continue trying to get her back or will he just walk away and move on).

Alternatively, a woman might feel a bit hurt that her ex has been out of touch with her for so long and she may want to see how much he really cares about her before she shows interest.

In her mind she might be thinking things like, He never got in touch with me once after the break up, not even to see how I was coping. That made me feel like he didn't care about me at all. Now all of a sudden he's back in my life. Yet, I can't trust that his feelings for me are genuine. I think Iâll just wait and see what he does next. If he really does still have feelings for me, he will remain persistent, even if I donât respond to him right away. Then I will know that he does still care for me and I will feel more comfortable about opening up to interacting with him so that we can see how things progress from there.â

In either case, itâs up to you to put your ex at ease and show her (via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to her when sheâs being cold and aloof) that you are serious about getting her back.

Of course that doesnât mean you should chase after her in a needy or desperate way.

Instead, you just need to get her on a call with you and start dissolving her defenses by making her laugh and smile, flirting with her to create some sexual tension and showing her that youâre now a new and improved man.

When you do that, her resistance will automatically crumble and then the way opens up for you to get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex didnât respond to you when you broke No Contact isâ!

5. She has no evidence to show her that youâve changed the things about you that caused her to break up with you

Some guys hope that using No Contact will make their ex forget about all his mistakes and want him back.

Yet, although this can work sometimes (e.g. if a woman is struggling to find a new man, sheâs really young and inexperienced when it comes to break ups and canât handle the pain, sheâs still secretly in love with her ex), in most cases, a woman wonât fall for it.

Instead, when a guy doesnât contact his ex after the break up and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him, she ends up holding onto her negative memories of him, because she simply has no evidence to suggest that he would be able to do change and improve.

If he then breaks No Contact, rather than jump at the chance to interact with him, the woman usually thinks something along the lines of, âWhy should I even bother responding to him? So far, all his actions have indicated that heâs the same jerk he was when we broke up. It would just be a waste of my time.â

So, if you want to get your ex back, you first need to show her that youâve really changed and that means you need to do things differently to the way sheâs expecting you to.

For example: If you contact her and she doesnât respond, rather than chase after her in a desperate way, use the method mentioned above in Point#2 to get her on a call with you.

If sheâs being offish or even bitchy towards you over the phone, rather than get upset and start doubting your chances with her, use humor to ease the tension and make her feel more relaxed.

If she pretends that she doesnât want to see you in person, rather than feel insecure and start doubting your attractiveness to her, maintain your confidence with her.

The more she can see proof that youâre not the same guy she broke up with, the more open she will become to hanging out with you to see how she feels.

You can then easily build up her feelings for you again and get her back.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Breaking No Contact

If you're not getting a response from your ex, it could be because you're making some of the following mistakes:

1. Hiding behind texts, rather than calling and getting her to meet up in person

Sometimes a guy might decide to play it safe, by breaking No Contact with a text message to his ex, only to feel dejected if she doesn't respond.

Yet, here's the thing!

Imagine how that must come across to her.

She hasn't heard from him for a few weeks or months and suddenly a message from him pops up on her screen and he's acting like he's been around all this time and asking how she is.

In her mind, she's probably thinking something along the lines of, What the hell does he want? He's been ignoring me all this time and now he wants to say hi. Well whatever! I can't even be bothered to answer him.

The fact is, for your ex to want to respond to you, you need to reactivate her feelings for you first and you can't do that via text.

So, if you want her back, you need to be emotionally courageous enough to make the first move.

You need to get her on a phone call right away, where you can spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

Only then will she drop her guard and open back up to you.

Another mistake to avoid is!

2. Believing that she would be eternally annoyed if you called

Many guys make excuses why they don't want to call their ex on the phone.

For example: A guy might say things like, I don't want to put her in an awkward position by calling her. My approach is important if I'm going to have a chance with her again, or What if she gets annoyed with me for calling her and then makes it impossible for me to interact with her, which means I won't be able to get her back?

He then actually annoys her even more, by texting, e-mailing or sending her messages via social media instead.

Here's the thing!

It is possible that your ex will initially be annoyed when you call her, but she will relax and open up if you spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

So, don't make excuses not to call her and do what works to get her back.

In other words, you need to attract her on a phone call and in person and then get to a kiss, sex and then a relationship with her.

Another mistake to avoid is!

3. Assuming that her non response means that she's not interested

There are many reasons why a woman might not respond to an ex who has been ignoring her.

For example:

- She doesn't want to come across as too eager, so she's playing hard to get.
- She wants to see if he'll pursue her even if she doesn't jump at the chance to talk to him, or if he will just give up and walk away for real this time.
- She's afraid of showing interest and then being rejected by him.
- She's unsure of his motives for contacting her after ignoring her.
- She wants to take things slow and see if they are meant to be together.
- She knows about the No Contact Rule and she's angry with him for using it on her, so she's trying to get revenge on him by not responding to him.

As you can see, your ex may actually have a very good excuse for not responding to you that has nothing to do with not being interested.

However, if you allow yourself to assume the worst, you risk losing her for real because you were too afraid to take a chance on truly getting her back.

Don't make that mistake.

Believe in yourself and get her back, even if she doesn't initially make it obvious that she is open to getting back with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I'm Afraid to Move On From My Ex Because She Could Change Her Mind

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible ways that other men feel when in your situation.

See if you can relate to any of these 5 reasons as to why you're afraid to move on, in case she changes her mind...

1. Deep down, he believes that she's the one for him, so he doesn't want any other woman getting in the way

Sometimes the shock of a break up can make a guy realize that his woman really was the right one for him.

Of course, when that realization hits, a guy might begin to fear losing her for real, so he makes the decision to wait for her to change her mind about him.

In his mind he might justify his decision by thinking things like, "If I start dating other women, things will become complicated. Not only will I be sending my ex the wrong message (i.e. that I'm moving on without her), it will also stop her from realizing that I'm the one for her too. This is why I need to just sit and wait for her to miss me and recognize that we are meant to be together. Then we can renew our relationship and be happy together again."

He will then stay stuck in limbo where he's not moving on with new women, but he's also not actively doing anything to re-attract his ex so that he can get her back.

Instead, he just waits to see what happens, in the hope that his ex will somehow come to her senses and realize he's the man she wants to be with.

Unfortunately, in most of these cases, the woman just moves on and finds herself another guy who can spark her feelings for him.

How about you?

Are you afraid to move on from your ex because you believe she is the one for you?

If so, what are you doing about it?

Are you just sitting around waiting for her to wake up one day and think something along the lines of, "OMG!!! I just realized my ex is my soulmate! I need to contact him right away so that we can get back together again?"

If your answer is "Yes," then you're risking losing her to another man.

Here's the thing:

If you want your ex to change her mind and get back with you, you have to be the one who makes her do that.

You need to interact with her again every chance you get (e.g. over the phone and especially in person), and you need to reactivate her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you so that the idea of changing her mind starts to feel good to her.

Make her smile, laugh and feel relaxed and open during interactions with you, so when she's on her own, she thinks things like, “I know that I said I would never change my mind about getting back with him, but all of a sudden I don’t feel so convinced that it’s truly what I want. In fact, I’m actually starting to miss him and think about him when we’re apart. Maybe the break up happened for a reason. Maybe we needed that time apart for us to realize that we are meant to be together. What should I do? I can’t let things end this way. I have to do something to let him know that I’ve changed my mind after all.”

She then becomes more open to talking to you over the phone, seeing you in person and even to hugging, kissing and having sex.

When that happens, getting back together again becomes easy, because it’s something you both want to do.

So, don’t waste anymore time waiting for your ex to change her mind.

You need to call her right away, spark some of her feelings on the call (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again).

Then meet up with her, fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another possible reason why a guy might be afraid to move on from his ex is that

2. He doesn’t realize that all women (even those who say they don’t) find men much more attractive when other women are interested in them

Sometimes a guy makes the mistake of thinking that if he dates another woman, his ex will feel turned off by it and then she will never change her mind about giving him another chance.

Yet, in reality, the opposite is actually true.

A woman likes the idea of being with a man she feels will make other women envious of her.

She wants to be able to think things like, “Even though he can have any woman he wants, he wants me. That makes me feel so lucky and like it would be a big mistake to let him go. I need to give him another chance before it’s too late and some other woman grabs him from me.”

On the other hand, if a woman notices that he’s struggling to move on and find himself another woman, she usually feels turned off by him and begins thinking things like, “Why can’t he get another woman? What is really wrong with him? I know that we broke up because some of his thinking and behavior turned me off, but what else didn’t I see because I cared for him. I think I made the right decision to break up with him after all. He’s just not man enough for me. I know now that I won’t change my mind about him. I just have to move on and find a real man to be with.”

So, even though you might think you’re doing the right thing by avoiding going out with other women, this may actually be contributing to your ex’s decision to not give you another chance.

Of course, that doesn’t mean you should run out and start dating every woman you meet, because that’s not the key to making your ex change her mind either.

Instead, you simply need to get to the point where you begin to enjoy a fun life without her and that may include going out with another woman if you want to.

When you’re emotionally fulfilled and happy without your ex and you then let her experience that on a phone call (or in person), something amazing happens!

Suddenly, you seem more attractive to her and she begins to think, “This isn’t at all what I was expecting. I thought heâ€¦d be feeling sad and depressed, but instead heâ€¦s actually happy and even going out and having fun without me. Wow, I canâ€¦t believe he got over me so quickly. I actually feel a bit jealous that heâ€¦s out there enjoying himself again without me. I kind of want to be a part of the fun life heâ€¦s having now. Whatâ€¦s happening to me? Why am I feeling this way?â€¦

As a result, she drops her defenses and becomes open to the idea of interacting with you more to see if you and her can work things out after all.

So, if you want to make your ex change her mind, donâ€¦t make the mistake of thinking that being alone and lonely is the way to do it.

Believe it or not, seeing you having fun and flirting with other women may be the trigger she needs to make her want to give you another chance.

Another possible reason why a guy might be afraid to move on from his ex isâ€¦!

3. He doesn't realize that clinging onto her when the feelings aren't mutual, isn't attractive to her

Sometimes, a guy canâ€¦t accept that his ex doesnâ€¦t want to be in a relationship with him anymore.

In his mind he might think things like, â€¦Sheâ€¦s just feeling angry with me right now, but Iâ€¦m sure when she calms down she will realize that she made a mistake. She will see that no man cares for her the way I do and she will then want to change her mind because she will accept that we are meant to be together.â€¦

Unfortunately, the problem with thinking like that, is that it automatically begins to change his behavior and actions.

For example: All of a sudden, he canâ€¦t stop himself from bombarding her with texts to stay on her mind, or he keeps coming up with excuses to call her or even see her.

He also keeps asking her things like, â€¦Are you seeing anyone else yet?â€¦ or, â€¦Have you changed your mind about us yet?â€¦

However, even though in his mind he likely has good reasons for texting, calling or showing up at her place uninvited, the truth is this type of behavior makes a woman feel even more certain about her decision to break up with him.

Why?

Basically heâ€¦s behaving like a clingy, needy ex and those are not qualities that women find attractive in men.

Add to that the fact that she doesnâ€¦t have feelings for him anymore and all that simply makes her want to run away from him.

What he doesnâ€¦t realize is that for a woman to want to get back together again, the feelings have to be mutual or at least close to mutual.

It canâ€¦t just be about him loving her, wanting her back and waiting for her to change her mind.

If you want your ex to want to be your girl again, you need to focus on making her feel attracted to you again during interactions (e.g. over the phone and especially when seeing her in person) and then backing off and not pushing her for a relationship.

When she feels attracted to you again and notices that youâ€¢re not trying to get her back, she then naturally feels drawn to you again.

She may even begin to worry that if she doesnâ€¢t change her mind and give you another chance, you are going to move on without her and she may end up losing the love of her life.

At this point, she drops her guard and wants to hang out with you more and more so that things can develop from there.

Another possible reason why a guy might be afraid to move on from his ex isâ€¢

4. He's afraid to start new relationships because he feels like it would never be the same with another woman

Sometimes a guy will refuse to move on after a break up, because in his mind he keeps thinking things like, â€¢My ex was perfect in every way. She was beautiful, smart, funny, a good person and the bond we shared was totally unique and special. Iâ€¢m pretty certain that I will never be able to find that kind of connection with another woman. Itâ€¢s pointless to even try.â€¢

Yet, hereâ€¢s the thingâ€¢

Regardless of how amazing your ex is, comparing her to every other woman out there wonâ€¢t help you heal and either move on, or get her back.

So, even though everything you believe about your ex and the bond you and her shared might be true, it doesnâ€¢t mean there isnâ€¢t another woman out there (or even many women) that will be even better than her.

So, until youâ€¢ve dated and had a relationship with a new woman that youâ€¢re attracted to and have experienced loving moments with her, itâ€¢s almost guaranteed that youâ€¢re not going to feel the same way you did with your ex.

This is why itâ€¢s important for you to open yourself up to the possibility of being able to move on and be happy with another woman.

Of course that doesnâ€¢t mean you should give up on the idea of getting back with your ex.

Not at all.

It also doesnâ€¢t mean that you have to date another woman and fall in love with her.

Instead, you just need to understand that itâ€¢s only natural that a new woman isnâ€¢t going to make you feel the same way your ex did, because you havenâ€¢t had a relationship with her yet.

If you want to get your ex back, just understand that.

When you get to the point where you realize that even though you want your ex to change her mind and get back together with you, but you donâ€¢t need it to feel good about yourself and your life, something amazing will happen to you.

Not only will you stop hanging around thinking, â€¢Iâ€¢m afraid to move on from my ex because she could change her mind,â€¢ you will also automatically become more attractive to her because youâ€¢re not being a needy, desperate, sad ex boyfriend.

Instead, youâ€¢re moving on and feeling good and that is attractive to her.

She then wants to talk to you and see you.

When that happens, you can easily reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another possible reason why a guy might be afraid to move on from his ex isâ€¦|

5. He is worried that moving on will show her that he doesn't care

In some cases a guy might think, â€œIf I move on and start dating other women, my ex will assume that Iâ€™m not interested in getting her back. She will think that I donâ€™t care about her anymore and she will then give up on us for real. I donâ€™t want that to happen, so itâ€™s better if I just stay by myself. Then when she finds out Iâ€™m not moving on, she will finally believe that my feelings for her are real and she will open back up to giving me one more chance.â€

Yet, in most cases, the woman doesnâ€™t care that heâ€™s being loyal to her, long after sheâ€™s moved on.

Instead, she likely feels turned off by him for not being man enough to move on and attract a new woman.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦|

A woman likes the idea of being with a man that other women want.

It makes her feel special that even though her guy could have chosen any woman he wants, he picked her.

So, donâ€™t stop yourself from moving on and meeting other women just to impress your ex.

If you are single, lonely and stuck in a rut in your life without her, youâ€™re actually making yourself less attractive to her.

Women feel attracted to good, loving men who go after what they want in life, rather than emotionally sensitive guys who are afraid to live a happy life in case she doesnâ€™t like it.

So, if youâ€™ve been putting your life on hold in the hope that your ex is impressed by it and comes back to you, now is the time to stop.

When you focus on moving on and becoming genuinely happy and content in your own life, not only does that stop you from worrying what your ex might think about you, it actually also makes you attractive to her.

Suddenly, she starts to see you as being more of a catch than you were before.

She notices that you are a new man now and she likes it and then getting her back becomes easy for you to do.

Common Problems Guys Experience When Waiting For an Ex to Change Her Mind After a Break Up

If you want to get your ex back, youâ€™re going to have to be courageous enough to make it happen.

If you donâ€™t take action, you might end up with one of the following (unfavorable) results:

1. She does change her mind, but never contacts you to tell you because she's afraid of being rejected, or doesn't want to give you the satisfaction of you seeing her pursue you

Even though a woman might want to get back with her ex, she will very rarely make that obvious to him.

Instead she will wait to see if he's man enough to interact with her, reactivate her feelings for him and get her back.

If he makes a move, she will quickly open back up to him and be his girl again.

However, if he does nothing she will usually force herself to get over him and move on, rather than risk having him reject her, or say something to her like, â€œI knew you would come back to me.â€

So, if you want your ex back, just go ahead and make it happen.

She may be waiting for you right this minute and thinking that you don't care.

Another possible result isâ€

2. She doesn't change her mind, even after years of being apart

If your ex doesn't have feelings for you right now, how do you think she'll react to you waiting for her?

Will she think, â€œThat's so romantic.Â Him waiting around for me must mean that he's the one for me,â€ or will she not even notice that you're waiting?

Will she just start moving on?

Here's the thingâ€

If you're not actively sparking your ex's feelings for you and making her change her mind, she's likely getting over you day-by-day, until one day she wakes up and you're nothing but a distant memory to her.

So, if you want her back, you need to make it happen, before it's too late.

Another possible result isâ€

3. She hopes that you will contact her and re-attract her, but when you don't, she gets used to being without you and falls in love with a new guy instead

Sometimes, even though a woman breaks up with a guy, at the back of her mind she's secretly hoping that they will be able to work things out and get back together again.

She may then wait for him to make a move.

However, if he doesn't do that, rather than chase after him, she will take it as a sign that the relationship is truly over and she will then put in the effort to fully get over him and move on, usually by finding herself a new man.

The question you need to ask yourself is: How long are you prepared to wait for your ex to change her mind?

A week? A month? A year? Many years?

Additionally, what if she's waiting for you to get her back and because you're not taking the lead in the ex back process, she hooks up with another guy instead?

Is that what you really want?

If the answer is â€œNo,â€œ stop waiting for her to change her mind and get her on a call and then to a meet up with you right away, so that you can reactivate her feelings and get her back.

Sheâ€™s waiting for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get Her Back After a Complex Break Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 tips to help get your ex back after a complex break up...

1. Stop focusing on the complexity and understand the simplicity of it

The problems you experienced may have been complex, but the solution is simple.

You need to interact with your ex, re-spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, so she naturally wants to open up and give you another chance.

However, if you spend most of your time thinking, "I really miss her and want her back, but everything is so complicated. It's just so jumbled up and convoluted that I don't know if we can get past it so that we can work things out," then you're making the mistake of focusing too much on the negative, rather than on the positives of the situation.

The reality is that yes, your break up might have been complex, but if you waste time focusing on that, you're stopping yourself from moving forward and doing what needs to be done to get your ex back.

So, what should you be doing instead?

You should be focusing on saying and doing the kinds of things that will begin changing her negative perception of you to a more positive one.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by Maintaining your confidence when interacting with her, regardless of what she says or does to make you feel unsure of yourself (e.g. she's indifferent and wooden when talking to you, she says things like, "Why won't you just leave me alone? Things are just too complicated between us right now and I don't have the energy to fight with you anymore. Please just let it go and move on").

Not trying to get her back into a relationship with you and instead, just flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you.

Using humor to break down her walls and make her feel more relaxed and open when interacting with you.

Showing her that, since the break up, you've changed and improved in some of the ways that matter to her.

Laughing at her (in a loving way) when she's creating drama and blaming you for things being so complicated between you (e.g. laugh and say, "I never realized you were such a drama queen until now. You should get an award for that and I'll get the award for Worst Boyfriend in the World," and have a laugh with her about that).

Not sucking up to her by being extra nice because you're afraid of ruining your chances of getting her back and start being more emotionally masculine and ballsy around her (e.g. by being a good guy who isn't a pushover).

The more you can show your ex that you're the kind of man she always wanted you to be, the more drawn to you she will feel again.

Even if she tries to convince herself that she should move on by thinking things like, â€œIâ€™m just being silly. I shouldnâ€™t feel attracted to him again after we had such a complex break up,â€ she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from wanting to interact with you over the phone and in person.

When that happens, her defenses come down, which then opens up the door for you to fully re-attract her and make her fall back in love with you again.

Another tip to help you get your ex back after a complex break up isâ€

2. Don't look at what happened in the past as being what is now

Whatâ€™s happened between you and your ex is over and done with.

So, going on and on about it and focusing all your attention on that is a waste of time.

It doesnâ€™t take what happened away, but instead it makes you dwell on the negatives, therefore preventing you from making a clean start.

Thatâ€™s why you need to stop beating yourself up about what happened when you and your ex broke up and focus instead on how you interact with her from now on.

For example: Ask yourselfâ€

- Do I make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to me now, or does she feel tense, closed off, or even resistant to interacting with me?
- Do I feel confident and self-assured when Iâ€™m interacting with her, or do I feel unsure of myself and like sheâ€™ll cut me off if I say or do something she doesnâ€™t agree with?
- Do I flirt with her during interactions and make her feel sparks of sexual attraction, or do I treat her like a neutral friend?
- Can she look up to me and respect me as a man now, or does she still see me as being stuck at the same level I was at when we broke up?
- Have I changed and improved some of the things that were turning her off before, or am I still making the same mistakes?
- Am I giving her a new and exciting attraction experience when I interact with her now (e.g. being more ballsy, taking the lead), or am I doing the same things I did before and hoping she will feel attracted to me again (e.g. sending her flowers, pouring your heart out to her in a letter, e-mail or a series of text messages)?

Depending on your answers, you will have a better idea of how you need to think, act and behave from now on to regain your exâ€™s feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

When she can see for herself that you really have changed, she will automatically begin to feel respect for you again and what happened before will stop seeming so bad.

When that happens, it becomes a lot easier for her to reconnect with her feelings of attraction for you and she then opens up to the idea of interacting with you even more to see where it all leads to (i.e. if you and her can get back together again).

Another tip to help you get your ex back after a complex break up isâ€

3. Understand what she will really need to see from you to want to give the relationship another chance

If you want to get past all the complexities of your break up with your ex and get her back, you first need to understand her real reasons for breaking up with you, so you can then adjust and change in the ways that will actually matter to her.

For example:

- You're less insecure and self-doubting now, which means you don't need to put her on a pedestal and allow her to disrespect you. Instead, you stand up to her in an emotionally dominant, yet loving way, which sparks her feelings of respect and attraction for you.
- You're more emotionally independent, which means that you no longer need her back to feel good about yourself. Yes, you want her back, but you don't need her back to live a happy and fulfilled life.
- You're more emotionally masculine, which means you naturally make her feel more emotionally feminine and girly around you. She can now relax and be a real woman, rather than feel like a neutral friend with you.
- You're more relaxed and easy going, which mean you don't take her moods and sulks too seriously anymore. Instead, you use humor to make her calm down and smile and laugh.

When your ex experiences those kinds of changes in you, she naturally drops her guard and opens up to being with you romantically and sexually again.

However, if you try to get her back without first understanding the changes she needs to see in you, she will naturally keep her guard up and say things like, "I'm sorry, but I don't think we can make it work. Things are just too complicated between us. Please just accept that and move on."

Another tip to help you get your ex back after a complex break up is

4. Don't wait too long to make a move and start the ex back process

It's understandable that when a break up is complex, a guy might think to himself, "Maybe it's best if I wait a while before I make an attempt to work things out with her. Right now she's angry and annoyed and things between us are a bit strained, so taking it slow will allow for all those emotions to settle down and she might then be more open to getting back together again than if I bring it up to her now."

He may then back off from his ex and avoid interacting with her (i.e. because he's giving her space), or limit his interactions to a text now and then.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that he's actually giving his ex more time to get over him and move on.

Here's the thing

Even if your ex does still have some feelings for you, if you don't do anything to re-attract her, seduce her and get her back with you, she will in all likelihood take it as a sign that you're not interested in her anymore and then, she will make the effort to fully get over you and move on.

Likewise, if she's disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, it doesn't mean that she will want to get back with you when you finally make a move, if you haven't done anything to re-attract her up to that point.

This is why, it's very important that you don't sit around waiting for the right time before you begin the ex back process with your ex.

The right time is now.

If you don't make a move right away, you may end up regretting it when you realize that she's now in a relationship and happy with another guy.

The main thing to remember is that it doesn't matter what happened between you and your ex up to this point.

That's in the past.

What matters is what you do from now on.

Are you going to wait so long that you lose her, or are you going to interact with her every chance you get (e.g. via text, e-mail, social media, on the phone and in person), reactivate her feelings for you and get her back?

The answer is pretty obvious, isn't it?

Another tip to help you get your ex back after a complex break up is!

5. Use humor to change the dynamic between you and her from stressful to relaxing and easy-going from now on

Chances are, because your break up with your ex was complicated, every time you interact with her you're being too serious (e.g. you discuss the relationship and the mistakes you made, you agree with whatever she says because you don't want to upset her any further, you talk in a very polite or formal manner, you're overly respectful and considerate towards her).

You're probably thinking things like, I can't afford to upset her any more than she already is, because then she might decide to stop talking to me altogether. If I'm nice to her and show her that I'm being serious, she may open back up to me and give me another chance.

Yet, life rarely works out that way.

A woman will seldom make up her mind to get back with a guy based on how nice, polite or serious he's being to her.

Instead, she will make up her mind to give him another chance because he's successfully reactivated her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him, so the idea of getting back together again feels good to her for her own reasons.

This is why you need to focus on sparking your ex's feelings for you (rather than being a nice, obedient guy), and one of the best ways to do that is by making her laugh and smile.

Humor makes her relax and open up and begin seeing you with new eyes.

For example: Imagine you're on a call with your ex and she says something along the lines of, I'm sorry but things between us are just too complicated. I don't think we can work things out.

Although hearing that might be painful to you and you may then want to debate the pros and cons of getting back with her in a mature, reasonable way, her mind is too closed, so she won't be willing to see things from your point of view.

However, if you turn what she says into something you and her can laugh about together, her defenses will naturally come down and then she will be a lot more open to seeing the possibility of trying again.

So, if your ex says something like that to you, you can respond by saying in a joking tone of voice something like, “What a little drama queen you are! Did you know that there’s a competition where guys solve a rubik’s cube with their feet and the fastest guy wins? Now that is complicated. What we have is a walk in the park compared to that!” and have a laugh with her about that.

Of course she might pretend to be insulted and say something like, “How can you joke about our problems? You’re not taking this seriously enough.”

Whatever you do, don’t get nervous and start apologizing to her and saying, “I’m sorry. I didn’t mean to make light of our situation. You know I’m 100% committed to making things right between us,” because you will lose the edge that you have gained.

Instead, laugh at her (in a loving way) and say something like, “We don’t have to be so serious all the time do we? Sure things are complicated, but we can still laugh about it. It’s not like we lost our sense of humor along the way, unless of course you’re not telling me something. Did the Grinch get your smile? I sure hope not, because you do have a sexy smile and it would be such a loss if it’s gone.”

Chances are she will smile when you say that to her and maybe even laugh.

She will also be feeling unexpected surges of respect and attraction for you again for having the balls to joke with her, even though you and her had a complex break up.

She will then begin thinking something along the lines of, “This is not how I imagined things would be between us. I thought we would be tense and reserved with each other, but instead I’m laughing, smiling and enjoying talking to him again. I don’t know what has gotten into him all of a sudden, but he’s so different now. He’s so much more confident and relaxed. Maybe he really has changed. Maybe we can save our relationship after all.”

When that happens, her walls begin to crumble and she opens herself up to interacting with you more and more to see where things go from there.

You can then build on her feelings some more and make her fall back in love with you.

Common Problems Guys Experience After a Complex Break Up

Regardless of how complicated things might be between you and your ex, it is still possible to get her back when you re-attract her.

However, that doesn’t mean you won’t encounter any problems along the way, or make any mistakes.

Here are 2 examples of problems that you might be faced with when trying to get your ex back:

1. She is initially resistant because she's used to thinking about the situation as being too complex to fix

If you try to convince your ex to try again, she's likely just going to say things like, "Please stop asking me because it's impossible. Everything is upside down between us and there are just so many issues to deal with that getting back together again simply won't work."

She's going to be closed off and she's not going to want to face all the complications and deal with them just to get back with you.

However, if you take the pressure of getting back together again and you just focus on having fun together, things will change naturally all by themselves.

Rather than always focusing on how complex things are, she'll begin to see that there are positives too (e.g. she feels happy when she's with you, it feels good to just hang out without any pressure on her, she misses you when you're not around).

As a result, she drops her guard a little, so she can allow herself to feel and experience the new you, without thinking about the past.

From there, every time you interact with her, focus only on making her smile, laugh and feel at ease. The more you do that, the more she will be able to relax and reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

Then, getting back together will happen naturally because it feels good for the both of you. Another problem you might encounter is

2. You try to explain everything to her in a long letter, e-mail or series of text messages, which just makes it all seem even more complex and unfixable

Sometimes a guy will try to apologize and explain what went wrong in the relationship in a long letter, e-mail or series of text messages.

He hopes that if he explains himself to his ex, she will see things from his perspective and then everything will be okay.

Yet, it doesn't really work out that way.

Instead of thinking, "Oh, I get it now. I see why everything got so complicated between us. Well that's not so bad after all," and want to work things out, a woman usually thinks something like, "No, no, no! This is just too complex to sort out! I don't want to think about it anymore."

She then closes herself off even more and it becomes a lot harder for the guy to interact with her so that he can reactivate her feelings for him.

Here's the thing

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, anything that he says to her via letter, e-mail or text will generally be taken the wrong way.

Instead of seeing the bright side of the situation (i.e. that it's possible for them to work things out and have an even better relationship with each other this time around), she will usually assume the worst (e.g. that things are too complex to fix, that he's only saying what he thinks she wants to hear so that she will give him another chance, that he's still the same guy and would probably make the same mistakes).

So, if you want to make your ex open back up to being a couple again, it's essential that you talk to her on a phone call and in person, rather than making the mistake of hiding behind letters, e-mails or texts.

In person or on a phone call, you can more easily re-attract her and show her that things aren't really as complex as she imagines.

When she experiences the new you for herself and also begins to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she stops being so negative and starts wanting to see the positives of the situation.

She wants to work things out with you and you can then go ahead and make it happen.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

5 Ways to Distract Yourself While Using the No Contact Rule

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Before I give you the 5 ways to distract yourself while using the No Contact Rule, I want to point out that you can get your ex back without using the 30 Day No Contact Rule.

In most ex back cases, all that is required is 3 to 7 days of space before you begin the ex back process.

That said, if you are planning on going full No Contact for 30 days, here are 5 ways to distract yourself:

1. Join and attend meet up groups and activities in your area

This is a great way to distract yourself while using the No Contact Rule and as a bonus, it's something that you can do alone, without feeling out of place or like a third wheel (e.g. like you would if you went out with friends and their girls).

In fact, when you join a meet up group, people will welcome you because their main purpose is to bring like-minded people together to do, learn and explore the things that they feel passionate about.

For example: Some of the groups available to you include

- Group exercise.
- Salsa (or other) dance.
- Outdoors and adventure.
- Tech (e.g. for design or software developers).
- Photography.
- Book clubs.
- Sci-fi clubs.
- Video game meet ups.
- Outdoor activities.

Whatever you're into or whatever you're willing to do to get out of the house and forget about her for a while, chances are there are other people in your town or city who are into it or open to doing it.

Of course, most guys don't want to get out of the house because they aren't feeling up to it and they may even make excuses like, "I don't feel like going," or "Everything I'm interested in is too far out of my way," or "I don't really have the time for that sort of thing."

Yet, here's the thing

You will only feel up to it when you do it, not before.

Going there wakes you up and makes you feel better.

At the same time, it's a way for you to become more emotionally independent and as a result, appear more interesting, engaging and attractive to your ex when you interact with her again.

By getting out there and having some fun, you will automatically regain some of your ex's respect and attraction for you for being the kind of man who didn't sit around feeling sad and rejected during the break up.

Remember: Women are attracted to men who are emotionally strong and emotionally independent and can handle whatever life throws at them, without falling apart.

As a result, she will be more open to the idea of talking to you and interacting with you after you contact her again.

Another way to distract yourself while using the No Contact Rule isâ€¦!

2. Focus on improving your ability to attract women in general, as well as re-attract her

Although there is no one size fits all formula when it comes to what women find attractive in men, there are certain traits and behaviors that almost all women are drawn to in a guy.

For example: Most women will pickâ€¦!

- A confident and emotionally strong man over an insecure, self-doubting man.
- An emotionally masculine man over a wimpy man.
- An emotionally dominant man who is firm with her over a man who gives in to her every whim, regardless of how unreasonable or bratty sheâ€™s being.
- A man who makes her feel sexy and desirable over a man who treats her like a friend.
- A man who is loving and attentive, but at the same time emotionally independent, over a man who is clingy and needy.
- A man who has a purpose in life that heâ€™s actively working towards over a man who is drifting through life and being childish and irresponsible.

Of course there are some insecure and/or unattractive women who will pick an emotionally weak, wimpy, clingy guy because they know they can control him, but most women wonâ€™t want that.

So, while youâ€™re waiting for your No Contact period to end, use the time productively by focusing on becoming more of the kind of man that will attract women (as well as your ex) to you.

For example: Here are some questions that will help you understand how to do thatâ€¦!

- Do I believe in my value and attractiveness to women in general and my ex in particular, or do I think Iâ€™m not good enough for them?
- Am I the kind of guy that any woman and especially my ex can look up to and respect, or do I come across as the type of man who isnâ€™t living up to my full potential (e.g. because Iâ€™m lost and donâ€™t know what my purpose is, Iâ€™m too childish and immature)?
- Do I have the confidence to make women and my ex smile, laugh and enjoy being around me (especially when they test me by being cold and aloof towards me, being bitchy, or treating me with disrespect), or do I crumble and give up at the first sign of resistance from them?
- Do I make my women, as well as my ex, feel sexy and desirable when Iâ€™m around them, or do I make them feel neutral or turned off because Iâ€™m too nice and friendly and donâ€™t know how to create a spark between us?

The more you improve your ability to attract women, the more you will believe in yourself and your ability to re-attract your ex.

Then, not only will the time fly, when you do finally interact with her and she experiences the changes in you, her feelings will also begin to change.

Even if she tries to deny it, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again for being man enough to use the time apart to quickly learn from your mistakes and improve.

She then naturally becomes open to talking to you over the phone and meeting up with you in person to see if you and her can work things out.

Another way to distract yourself while using the No Contact Rule is

3. Play video games if you find that you just can't stop thinking about her

If you're into video games and you keep finding yourself brooding over how much you miss your ex and how you can't stop thinking about her, you can use the games as a way of taking your mind off of her for a little while.

However, there is a catch

Using video games to distract yourself will only work if you've been improving your ability to attract women.

If you remain the same and play video games, you won't be ready to re-attract her and may end up feeling worse (e.g. because your ex senses that you still think, act and behave the same way as before and she rejects you).

Also, if your video game playing was something you and your ex used to argue about and possibly even contributed to your break up (e.g. because she felt that you were too childish and immature, you focused more on the games than on her so she felt neglected), it will only keep you stuck at the same level you were at when you and your ex broke up.

So, make sure that when you're busy distracting yourself with video games while using the No Contact Rule, you're not preventing yourself from becoming a better man.

Changing and improving is key to getting your ex's respect and attraction for you back.

You don't have to become perfect to get her back, but you do need to show her that you haven't been wasting your time by playing games.

The more your ex can see that you've been working on improving yourself during your time apart, the more respect and sexual attraction she will feel for you.

It then becomes easier for her to imagine herself feeling happy in your arms once again.

However, if you just distract yourself but don't change and your ex senses that you'd probably make the same mistakes again if she gave you another chance, then she's not going to be very interested in giving you another chance.

Another way to distract yourself while using the No Contact Rule is

4. Go for a day trip or weekend road trip with some buddies

Weekends and days off can be the worst after a break up.

A guy can spend a lot of time sitting home alone and remembering all the things he used to do with his ex and how empty his life feels without her.

So, arranging weekends or days away with friends is a great way to distract yourself from thinking about how much you miss being a couple with your ex.

At the same time, it also serves to remind you that, although you really do miss your ex and want her back, you don't actually need her back to be happy and live a fun, interesting life.

The more emotionally independent you become, the more attractive you will be to her when you finally do interact with her again.

Why?

When you can get on with your life without your ex, it signals to her that it's less likely that you're needy, clingy and insecure (all traits that are instinctively unattractive to women).

In other words, you're not basing your whole identity on being in a relationship with her (or another woman).

Instead, you are a man with or without her.

That is very attractive to your ex and to other women as well.

She then becomes more willing to interact with you again and see where things go from there.

So, don't be afraid to get out and have some fun while you're waiting.

Another way to distract yourself while using the No Contact Rule is

5. Complete a challenging task that you've been putting off because you haven't had the time

Not only is this a great way to distract yourself while using No Contact, it's also something that will leave you a better man once you're done.

You start out feeling anxious, missing your ex and like your confidence has taken a dent because of the break up and end up tackling something challenging, accomplishing it and becoming truly confident in yourself.

When that happens, you realize that you can pretty much achieve or do anything in life, including getting your ex back into a relationship with you that's 100% better than it ever was before.

As a result, you start to exude a natural, fundamental type of confidence that can never be taken away or destroyed by the circumstances in your life (e.g. a stressful situation at work, a break up, money problems).

Then, when you interact with your ex and she picks up on your confidence based on how you talk, behave and act in general, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling impressed by the fact that you are being an emotionally strong, independent man who is handling the break up in such a mature way (i.e. you're getting on with your life and accomplishing impressive things to boot).

She then starts respecting you again.

When that happens, she will also start to feel some attraction and that is the opening you need to begin getting her back for real.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Using No Contact

By the way

If you intend to ignore your ex for the full 30 to 60 days, make sure you don't make the following mistakes that guys make when using No Contact:

1. Thinking that No Contact is what will get her back

Although using No Contact can sometimes make a woman miss her ex enough to want to get back with him, most of the time, it actually backfires and the guy ends up losing any chance he might have had with her.

Why?

To begin with, when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him over time.

So, unless she's still secretly in love with him and is hoping that they will be able to work things out, or if she's struggling to find herself a replacement guy, not hearing from her ex for weeks or even months won't really matter to her.

In fact, after a break up most women are hoping that their ex won't try to get them back.

So, if a guy disappears out of her life, rather than think, "Oh no! I feel so sad that he's not calling me," she's going to be relieved instead.

She's going to be happy about it and she's going to then focus on moving on.

So, if your ex doesn't have feelings for you right now, using No Contact to get her back may not be the best plan of action, because you will just be making it easier for her to get over you and move on.

If you don't want that to happen, you need to change your approach.

You need to do what actually works almost all the time and that is to interact with her and actively re-spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and guide her back into a relationship with you, before it's too late.

Another mistake that guys make when using No Contact is!

2. Continually talking with friends or family about her and the break up

It's only normal that a guy will want to talk about his break up with friends and family.

However, although getting things off his chest once off is fine, going on and on about it every chance he gets is not. Why?

By talking about it continually, it just reminds him of the pain he's been experiencing and how much he wants her back.

Also, friends and family don't always help and may even say things that will make it worse for him like, "Have you thought about what she's doing while you're using No Contact on her? What if she's hooking up with other guys, or even dating someone else already? What will you do then?" which then makes him worry during the 30-60 days that he waits.

Alternatively, a friend might say, "I once tried everything to get my girlfriend back when we broke up, even No Contact, but it didn't work. As far as I know, guys don't really get an ex back. You just have to move on. It's impossible. Don't worry though, you will get over her one day. You just have to focus on getting yourself a new girlfriend."

As a result, he begins to worry about his chances of getting his ex back and ends up feeling frustrated and confused, which doesn't help him feel the confidence that he needs to feel to re-attract her. Another mistake that guys make when using No Contact is

3. Mainly focusing on distracting himself, rather than improving what turns her off about him

Sometimes a guy will spend 30 or even 60 days avoiding all contact with his ex in the hope that this will make her come back to him.

Yet, rather than use that time to change and improve in some of the ways that matter to her, he instead tries to pass the time by doing random, meaningless things (e.g. playing video games, watching lots of TV, hanging out with friends and getting drunk to numb the pain).

Then, when he finally interacts with his ex after all that time and she senses that he's still the same man she broke up with, she loses even more respect and attraction for him.

It then becomes easy for her to permanently walk away because he's the same guy as before and that doesn't appeal to her.

So, if you want to re-attract your ex, don't waste the time apart.

Instead, use it to quickly improve your ability to attract her and make her feel respect, attraction and love for you again.

Then, contact her after a week (anything longer than that is a waste of time) and show her that you're a new and improved man (e.g. more confident and ballsy, more emotionally masculine, less needy and unsure of yourself).

When you can re-attract her in new and exciting ways, she wants to get back together again for her own reasons.

You can then start a new relationship with her and enjoy the adventure of a new relationship together.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

5 Interesting Signs That Reveal Your Ex Girlfriend is Not Over You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are the 5 signs to look out for that can reveal she is still into you and wants something to happen:

1. She contacts you

Sometimes, that is all a woman will do to show her interest in her ex.

It's just how women are.

Some other examples of this are when a woman likes a guy at a party, likes the guy that she's on a date with, or wants to have sex with a guy, but isn't being open about it.

For example: A woman who likes a guy at a party might...

- Keep looking at him.
- Move closer to where he's standing or dancing.
- Use sexy body language to get his attention (e.g. walk past him and swing her hips, lick her lips when he looks at her).
- Looks annoyed if he talks to other women.

Alternatively, a woman who likes the guy she's on a date with, or wants to have sex with, might:

- Hang on to his every word.
- Laugh at all or most of his jokes, even if they're corny or aren't that funny.
- Play with a necklace, her hair or stroke her neck.
- Touch him during conversation.
- Lick her lips.
- Allow him to make all the decisions (e.g. what to drink or eat, where to go, what to do next).
- Agree to go for nightcap at his place or her place.

As you can see, the signs are all there and all a guy has to do is to take action by approaching her (if they're at a party), interacting with her, sparking her feelings for him even more (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, being emotionally masculine and making her feel like a desirable woman) and then getting a kiss and then hooking up with her sexually, or at least getting her number or another date.

In the same way, if your ex is contacting you, it's up to you to make the next move.

You need to use the opening she is giving you and arrange to see her in person, where you can fully reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings and get her back.

On the other hand, if you just sit around doubting her feelings for you and thinking negative thoughts like, "Just because she contacted me first without me making a move, it doesn't mean she's not over me. She's a nice person, so she probably just wants to do the mature thing and not act like a bitchy ex girlfriend. It's probably better if I just play it safe and wait for her to tell me that she wants to get back together before I do anything. It's then it's possible that she will assume you don't want her back and she may then simply focus on moving on without you. So, the next time your ex contacts you without you contacting her, take it is a good sign that she isn't over you.

Then, pick up the phone and call her (don't text her), make her feel attracted, meet up with her in person and get her back.

Another interesting sign that reveals your ex girlfriend is not over you is!

2. She doesn't hate you or never want to see you again

In other words, she's still open to interacting with you via text, social media, over the phone and even in person.

This is a good thing for you, because you don't have to struggle to talk to her or get her to agree to meet up with you in person.

Instead, you can use her openness towards you to re-attract her and get her back.

For example: The next time you're on a call or at a meet up with your ex, you can begin re-sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you by!

- Being confident and self assured regardless of what she says or does to put you off (e.g. she pretends she's over you, she's being offish towards you, she talks about how she's dating again).
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension between you, rather than being too friendly or neutral towards her.
- Using ballsy humor to make her smile and laugh and feel relaxed to be interacting with you again, rather than being too serious or on your best behavior with her.
- Believing in yourself and in your value to her, rather than doubting yourself and turning her off as a result.
- Showing her that you're now a new and improved man that she can truly look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, rather than continuing to make the same old attraction mistakes as before.
- Making her feel feminine and girly by taking the lead during your interactions with her, rather than allowing her to call the shots and dominate you.

The more she experiences the new you for herself, the less convinced she will become that moving on is what she really wants.

You can then progress to giving her a hug, a kiss and then hook up with her sexually.

From there she will naturally begin to reconnect with her feelings of love for you and you can then get her back into a relationship with you that's 100% better than it was before.

Another interesting sign that reveals your ex girlfriend is not over you is!

3. She texts you about random things

For example: She sends you a text asking, Hey, what are you up to? or, I'm stuck in traffic. What a day! or, I got a call from (insert name of mutual friend) and he/she said to say hi to you.â€

These are all just excuses to contact you.

She is hoping that you have the confidence and courage to do what it takes to get her back.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€

Women want a man who has the balls to make a move, rather than needing her to make it really obvious to him that she still has feelings for him.

However, if a womanâ€™s ex doesnâ€™t have the courage to do that, she will try to get over him and move on.

So, if your ex is currently staying in touch with you via text, itâ€™s up to you to take control of the ex back process, rather than waiting for her to spell things out for you before you make a move.

If you donâ€™t act now, you might end up regretting it if she then moves on and hooks up with another guy.

Another interesting sign that reveals your ex girlfriend is not over you isâ€

4. Your gut instinct is telling you that she isn't over you

In almost every case, your gut instinct is going to be right, because it comes from an overall, instinctive evaluation of the available information and data.

It's like you are a computer and produce an answer based on the input you've been given.

If so many signs are leaning towards the fact that she isn't over you, it's almost certainly true.

Here's the really interesting part though.

Even if your ex girlfriend is over you, it's actually easy to change how she feels and make her feel attracted and in love with you again.

All it usually takes is to actively make her have feelings for you again by interacting with her, rather than leaving it in her hands and hoping that she misses you enough to come back.

When you spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you, everything changes.

Her guard comes down and she opens herself up to getting back together again because being around you feels good to her.

On the other hand, if you just sit around waiting for a sign from her before you feel confident enough to make a move, she will usually move on and hook up with another guy.

Alternatively, if you interact with her and continue saying and doing the same kinds of things that you used to do before she broke up with you (e.g. being insecure and needy, letting her dominate you emotionally, failing to make her feel feminine and girly in your presence), sheâ€™s just going to say something along the lines of, â€Sorry, but I just donâ€™t have feelings for you anymore. Please accept that and move on.â€

So, if you want your ex girlfriend back, donâ€™t waste a lot of time trying to decide if sheâ€™s over you or not.

Instead, just trust your gut instinct that she still has feelings for you and then interact with her and build on those feelings (e.g. by being confident rather than unsure of yourself, by making her laugh and smile rather than being too serious, by flirting with her and making her feel attracted rather than being too neutral or nice.)

When she feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, based on experiencing the new and improved version of who you are right now, getting back together again will happen naturally and easily.

Another interesting sign that reveals your ex girlfriend is not over you isâ€¦!

5. She can't be friends with you because it hurts her too much

If your ex girlfriend is saying things like, â€œPlease don't contact me. I just can't handle hearing from you right now. It hurts too much to get a text or hear your voice over the phone. I need some time to heal. Then, maybe we can interact again sometime in the future,â€ chances are that sheâ€s not fully over you.

This is why you need to interact with her more and make her feel good to be talking and seeing you again, rather than backing off and saying something like, â€œOkay, sure. I'll stop contacting you. Call me when you feel better,â€ and then pining for her while she gets over you and moves on.

So, if she says something like that to you, simply smile and jokingly say something like, â€œHey, stop being such a drama queen. We can be friends even though we've broken up. It's not like I'm holding a gun to your head and forcing you to get back together again. I'm just calling/texting to say hi and see how you are. I'm sure you can handle that. Why are you making such a big deal about it? Are you secretly still in love with me?â€ and then laugh to take the seriousness out of what you just said to her.

In most cases, a woman won't want to come across as being the immature one and she also won't want to admit that she isn't over you, so she will likely laugh with you and say something along the lines of, â€œOf course I'm not still in love with you! Fine, if you want to be friends, I agree to that.â€

You can then use your interactions with her to build on her feelings and then gently and easily guide her back into a new relationship with you.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Looking For Signs That Reveal an Ex Girlfriend's Feelings For Them

If you want your ex girlfriend, it's up to you to make it happen regardless of whether she is giving you obvious signs or not.

Where some guys go wrong and then end up losing their ex because she moves on or hooks up with another guy, is by making the following mistakes:

1. Waiting for her to say something clear and completely obvious like, â€œI want you backâ€ before he feels confident about trying to get her back

Even if a woman isn't over her ex and secretly wants to get back with him, sheâs won't always make it obvious to him.

In most cases, a woman doesn't want to tell him about her feelings for him, because she doesn't want to make it too easy for him to get her back.

Why?

She wants to know that he's man enough to take responsibility of the ex back process and guide both him and her into a relationship.

If he can do that, she will automatically feel a surge of respect and attraction for him.

She will see him as being an emotionally strong man who is confident enough in himself and in his value, to go after whatever he wants in life (in this instance, her), regardless of how difficult or impossible the situation might seem.

That takes balls and women are attracted to balls (i.e. confidence, courage, fearlessness).

On the other hand, if a guy just sits around waiting for a sign from his ex girl and remains stuck at the same level he was at when she broke up with him, she will usually decide to move on and look for someone who is man enough for a girl like her.

So, if you want to get your ex girlfriend back, you just have to make it happen without waiting for her to help you.

Be emotionally courageous enough to take the lead in the ex back process and get her back.

If you don't make the first move, chances are high that she will move on and it will then be even harder for you to get her back.

Another mistake that guys make is

2. Overanalyzing her signs to the point where he begins to doubt that she still wants him

Sometimes a guy will think about every text, call or even gesture that his ex makes in the hope that he will get some clue about her feelings for him.

For example: If he sends her a text and she takes too long to respond to him, he might wonder things like, What is taking her so long to get back to me? Could she be with someone else?

Alternatively, if she responds right away and adds a smiley face to her reply, he might think things like, It's like she was waiting for my text and she seems happy to hear from me. What does that mean?

Yet, here's the thing

Overanalyzing your ex's actions will probably end up making you feel more confused and unsure of what she really feels for you.

So, don't bother with that.

Instead, if you want her back, then just be bold enough to make it happen by re-attracting her on a phone call and then in person and getting to a hug, kiss, sex and then a relationship.

Another mistake that guys make is

3. Thinking that it's all up to her and he has no control over the situation

A lot of guys make the mistake of thinking that their ex holds all the power when it comes to getting back together again or not.

Essentially, she can say, Yes, I'm open to interacting with you and seeing where things go from there or, Sorry, but I'm no longer interested in you so please leave me alone, and then the guy has to do what she says.

Yet, here's what he doesn't understand!

A man actually has a lot of control over the ex back process if he focuses on making his ex woman have sexual and romantic feelings for him for again.

When he reactivates her feelings and she feels attracted to him again, she naturally begins to want him back for her own reasons (i.e. she doesn't want to risk not giving him another chance and then regretting it later on, she feels drawn to him in new and exiting ways and wants to explore that).

He can then get her back much more easily because she is open to being re-attracted and seeing where things go from there.

So, don't make the mistake of thinking it's all up to your ex girlfriend whether you get back together.

If you want her to give your relationship another try, you have to be courageous enough to take the lead and make it happen.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

If I Don't Respond to My Ex's Texts, Will She Move On?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends.

Here are 6 possible reactions from her, if you don't respond to her texts:

1. She gets annoyed by how you're now treating her and hooks up with a new guy to make herself feel better

Sometimes, when a woman breaks up with a guy, she doesn't necessarily believe that the break up is 100% final.

Instead, she may be open to getting back with him if he can re-attract her and make her feel respect, sexual attraction and love for him again.

So, when she opens the lines of communication with her ex by sending him a text (or even a few texts) and he just ignores her, she will naturally feel annoyed that he is trying to mess with her head by not responding to her.

She may then begin thinking to herself, "I can't believe he's treating me like this. Who does he think he is! I hope he doesn't think that ignoring me like this is going to make me beg him for another chance. If he does, he's in for a big surprise! I have better things to do than chase after a jerk like him! I'll show him! I'm going to find myself a new man and move on. Then, when he comes crawling back to me, I'll give him a piece of my mind!"

She will then focus on finding herself a new man as quickly as possible to hook up with (e.g. by going to bars and clubs, going out on dates with guys that are already interested in her, joining an online dating site, or using a dating app to get dates and start having sex).

If her ex then begins to wonder why she's not texting him anymore and decides to contact her, she will usually respond with something along the lines of, "What do you want now? When I was texting you, you didn't even have the decency to respond to me, yet, now you want to talk to me. Well, I don't want to talk to you. Do you honestly believe I've been sitting around crying and waiting desperately for you to contact me? That's a big joke! You're not that much of a big deal to me for me to react that way. Who cares that you never responded to my texts. I've moved on and I'm having a great time enjoying myself with so many great guys that actually do want me. Breaking up with you was the best decision of my life! The only mistake I made was to actually text you after we broke up because I thought we could work things out. We'll not anymore. I'm free of you and I would never give you another chance after the way you treated me. So, thanks for finally responding to my texts, but you can get lost now. I don't need or want you in my life! Bye."

So, if you're considering not responding to your ex's texts as a way of getting her back, the outcome may definitely turn out like the one mentioned above.

That is why, if you don't want that to happen, you shouldn't bother ignoring her texts.

A better approach is to actually respond to her, make her laugh and smile and then get her on a phone call and to a meet up as quickly as possible, where you can truly reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another possible reaction you can expect if you don't respond to your ex's texts is

2. She assumes that your interest in her wasn't ever genuine

When your ex broke up with you, it was clear that you didn't agree with the break up and that you wanted to stay together and work things out. (e.g. because you tried to convince her to change her mind, you promised her that you would change if she gave you one more chance, or you simply said something like, "I don't want to break up, but if this is what you want, I'll go with it for now").

However, now you aren't replying to her texts, so she assumes that you never really intended on staying with her anyway.

She then starts thinking things like, "I really thought that I mattered to him and that his desire to stay together was genuine, except now that I'm giving him a chance to get me back by opening the lines of communication between us again, he's just ignoring me. Clearly he didn't mean it when he said he wanted to stay together, because now that he's single again, he can't even be bothered to respond to my text and say hi as a friend. What a fool I've been all this time thinking that he actually cared about me."

She then uses the anger and disappointment she feels towards her ex to help her get over him and move on.

If he then tries to text her back after he's been ignoring her for a while, he is surprised when she doesn't respond to him.

He might then try to call her to find out why she's ignoring him, only to discover that she's blocked his number on her phone and he can't get hold of her anymore.

Another possible reaction you can expect if you don't respond to your ex's texts is

3. She is aware of the no contact rule and knows what you're most likely up to

What a lot of guys don't realize is that many women read the same articles online that they do.

This is why, it's very possible that a woman will be aware of the No Contact Rule and that guys use it as a secret weapon to get an ex back.

So, if your ex has read about the NCR (No Contact Rule) and notices that you're not responding to her texts, it's very likely that she will see it as a ploy on your part to make her come running back to you.

She may then decide to punish you for playing games with her by possibly sending you a text like, "Why aren't you responding to my texts? I really miss you and I want to give our relationship another try."

If you then take the bait and respond right away with something like, "I miss you too! Let's get together so that we can work things out," she will know for sure that you were using No Contact on her.

She may then string you along for a while and make you feel excited about getting her back.

Then, she can say something like, "Look, I know I said I wanted to get back together again, but I've changed my mind."

She might even be secretly annoyed at you for trying to make her chase you by using the NCR.

This can cause her to try to get revenge on you in other ways (e.g. stringing you along via text and then dumping you again, making you feel like you're getting her back and then telling you that she has met someone new and is in love with him).

Don't let that happen to you.

Get on her good side by being a real man about the ex back process from now on (i.e. by responding to her texts and actively re-attracting her so that she wants to get back with you).

Another possible reaction you can expect if you don't respond to your ex's texts is

4. She loses interest after trying to text with you and getting no response and decides to move on

In most cases, when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's because she's lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

Of course, she may still have some feelings for him, which is why she's likely texting him, to see if it's possible to reactivate those feelings inside of her so that they can get back together again.

However, if she doesn't get a response from him, rather than sit around feeling sad or rejected, she simply takes it as a sign that she needs to just move on.

Sure she may initially feel a bit hurt that he's ignoring her, but if she has had some experience with break ups, she will know that those painful feelings won't last forever.

She may then think to herself, Oh well, I gave it a shot, but he's clearly not interested in working things out. That's fine by me. I can now focus on moving on and finding myself a better man than him, and then focus on doing the kind of things that will help her get over him as quickly as possible (e.g. putting more effort into her work or studies, spending more time going out with her single friends, meeting and hooking up with new guys).

Then, by the time he contacts her, she will be completely over him and happy in her life without him.

Another possible reaction you can expect if you don't respond to your ex's texts is

5. She becomes desperate to get your attention and get you back, so she tries harder to make you want her

Sometimes, if a guy doesn't respond to his ex's texts, it makes her want him even more.

She may then begin thinking things like, Why is he ignoring me? Why isn't he doing something to get me back? I want him back!

As a result, she might start doing things to get his attention and make him want her back.

For example: She might

- Post really hot, sexy photos of herself on social media to make him feel attracted to her and then hopefully call her.
- Post photos of herself having fun and flirting with other guys to make him jealous.
- Show up unexpectedly somewhere where she knows he will be, wearing her sexiest outfit and then flirting with him to make him want her sexually.
- Call him on the phone to just talk as friends as a way of staying in his life.
- Show up at his house unexpectedly and make herself indispensable to him (e.g. by cooking or cleaning up, offering to run errands for him).

Naturally, because the guy still wants her back, this is exactly the response he was hoping for when he ignored her texts.

However, what often happens is that even though the guy successfully makes his ex chase after him and gets her back, because he hasn't really changed anything about himself, she soon begins to lose interest in him.

Before long she dumps him again and this time, it becomes a lot more difficult for him to trick her into wanting him back.

Here's the thing!

If you're going to use No Contact as a way of making your ex come back to you, make sure that you make some changes and improvements to yourself first.

Then, if she does come back, she will find a new and improved man and she will then want to stay with you, because that's when she feels the happiest and most fulfilled.

Another possible reaction you can expect if you don't respond to your ex's texts is

6. She blocks your number and moves on Another response that might result from not responding to your ex's texts, is that she cuts you out of her life completely.

She might block your number and even unfriend you and block you on social media to make sure you won't be able to get hold of her if you suddenly decide to respond to her at a later stage.

However, if she gets to this point where she goes out of her way to cut all your avenues of contact with her, it will then take some effort on your part to try and persuade her to unblock you (e.g. by asking a mutual friend to talk to her for you, showing up at her home or work to convince her in person), so that you can then interact with her, re-attract her and begin getting her back.

So, don't let it come to that.

If your ex has given you an opening by texting you, forget about playing games with her and do what needs to be done to get her back.

Text her back, or better yet, call her.

Make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again and get her to a meet up so that you can fully re-attract her and get her back.

Note: Make sure that when you meet up with her you're fully prepared to re-attract her.

If you get there and you turn her off by saying or doing the same things that turned her off before (e.g. being insecure and unsure of yourself, being too nice and letting her walk all over you, being afraid to flirt with her and create sparks of attraction), she may regret her decision to meet up with you after all.

So, make sure that you are prepared to make her feel attracted to the new you so that you can make her want you back as much as you want her.

Where Guys Go Wrong After a Break Up With a Woman They Love and Really Do Want Back

By the wayâ€¦!

Here are 2 mistakes that guys make with an ex woman that makes getting her back so much more difficult that it needs to be:

1. Thinking that texts or text tricks are the way to get her back

For a woman to text an ex it means sheâ€™s risking being rejected by him.

So, if he then starts to play mind games with her, like not responding to her texts, or only sticking to texting without taking things any further than that (i.e. usually because heâ€™s hoping to make her chase after him), she will feel turned off by it and begin to lose interest.

As a result, she will stop giving him the chance to mess with her anymore by ignoring him, or even blocking his number to teach him a lesson.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Most guys would do anything to be in a position where their ex is texting them without them having to chase after her.

So, if youâ€™re in that position, donâ€™t take advantage of her by playing games, because you will end up losing her for real.

Instead, use the opening she is giving you to get her on a call and then to a meet up where you can fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Thatâ€™s what you really want, so stop wasting time and make it happen!

The next mistake isâ€¦!

2. Being afraid to call and start the ex back process

Sometimes a guy will get texting back and forth with his ex in the hope that it will somehow lead to getting her back.

Yet, rather than that happening, his ex becomes bored and starts wondering things like, â€œWhy doesnâ€™t he just call me? Maybe I made a mistake by texting him first. By his response I guess heâ€™s not really interested in getting back together again after all.â€

He may then discover that sheâ€™s taking longer and longer to respond to him until eventually she stops altogether.

So, if you truly want to get your ex back, donâ€™t waste a lot of time texting back and forth.

A text or two can help to get her to smile and laugh a little, but after that, you need to focus on getting to talk to her over the phone or meet up with her in person, where you can fully re-attract her and get her back.

If you donâ€™t have the courage or motivation to get to that level with her and just want to hide behind texting, you will almost certainly lose out on getting her back.

So, quit playing games with her.

Call her, re-attract her and then meet up with her and get her back for real.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Said She Has Given Me Too Many Chances Already and Won't Give Me Another

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways to change her mind, so you can get another chance:

1. Stop asking for another chance and start making her feel attracted to the new you

Right now your girlfriend is likely feeling many negative emotions when she thinks about you and your relationship (e.g. anger, bitterness, disappointment).

So, if every time you interact with her all you do is say things like, "I'm really sorry! I know I stuffed up again and that you've given me so many chances already, but I promise you that this time will be different," rather than think, "Okay, maybe I'll give him one more chance, but this is the last time," she's usually going to be thinking things like, "No way! I've reached the end of my patience with him and nothing he says or does is going to make me change my mind. Besides, I've heard all his pretty promises many times before. He's always saying he's going to change and then when I give him another chance, he simply goes back to being the same jerk he was before. I'm not falling for that again. I just don't have any feelings left for him anymore. This time it's really over between us."

That's why, this time around, you need to change your approach.

You need to stop asking for another chance and instead make her want to give you another chance.

How can you do that?

By using every interaction you have with her from this moment onwards (e.g. via text, social media and especially over the phone and in person) to re-spark her feelings for you and make her feel good to be interacting with you.

So, the next time you're on a phone call or at a meet up with your girlfriend and she's being cold, closed off and even bitchy towards you, use that as an opportunity to reactivate some of her feelings or respect and attraction for you.

You can do that by:

- Using humor to lighten the mood and make her feel more relaxed to be talking to you again.
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you and her.
- Staying confident and positive, regardless of what she says or does (e.g. she tells you that it's 100% over between you).
- Behaving differently to the way she expects you to (e.g. she thinks you're going to ask her for another chance, so you talk about the things you're doing without her, she expects you to be on your best behavior with her, so you use ballsy humor instead, she expects you to be insecure and unsure of yourself around her, so you stay confident and self-assured instead).

The more you focus on making her feel attracted to the new you, the more open she will become to talking to you over the phone and seeing you in person.

Her feelings will then slowly begin to change, even if she initially believed that was impossible. You will then start to see that sparkle come back into her eyes when she looks at you with feelings of respect and attraction once again. You can then build on those feelings and get her back. Another way to change your girlfriend's mind is

2. Accept the break up and agree to be friends for now

One of the best ways to take the pressure off your girlfriend and make her feel okay to continue interacting with you, rather than cutting you completely out of her life, is to tell her that you accept the break up and that you're fine with being 'just friends' for now.

For example: You might say something along the lines of, "Hey, I get it. I know I've put you through a lot and it's hard for you to trust me again and give me another chance. However, I want you to know I accept that we're broken up and I promise not to pressure you into doing anything you don't want. We can just be friends now, okay?"

Of course, she might still respond by saying something like, "I don't know. I don't think I can be friends after everything you've put me through," or "I'm not sure that's a good idea."

Regardless of what she says, don't get upset or start thinking, "Oh no! This isn't working! It's hopeless. I can sense that she's not going to change her mind this time!"

Instead, just maintain your confidence around her and say in a joking way, "Hey, don't be so dramatic. We can be friends. We're mature enough to do that, right?"

In most cases, even if a woman is initially reluctant to agree to that, she will say something like, "Okay" or "Just for now" because she won't want her ex to be the one who is more mature than her in the situation.

You can then use your friendship with her to reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you (e.g. by showing her that you're a new and improved man, making her feel attracted in ways that you never have before) and then get her back into a relationship with you once more.

Another way to change your girlfriend's mind is

3. Give her 3 to 7 days of space

Sometimes a guy becomes too overwhelming after a break up.

For example: He might

- Text, call or send messages to his ex via social media all the time asking her to give him a chance to explain.
- Beg and plead with her for another chance.
- Bombard her with flowers, gifts and other tokens of his love for her as a way of apologizing for what happened.
- Show up unexpectedly at her house, workplace or university so that he can talk to her about their relationship.

Yet, in almost all cases, this kind of behavior only turns a woman off even more.

Rather than think, “He must really love me if he’s going to all this trouble to apologize and make things right between us,” she usually just feels smothered, overloaded and stressed by the constant attention and pressure he’s putting on her.

As a result, she closes herself off even more and she may then even unfriend him on social media, block his number on her phone and even enlist the help of a friend or co-worker to keep him away from her.

All in all, this makes reactivating her feelings and getting her back a lot more difficult for the guy. So, don’t make that mistake.

Instead, a better approach is to actually give your girlfriend a few days of space (i.e. 3 to 7), so that things can calm down between you and she can even begin to miss you a little bit.

So, if you haven’t done so already, stop all interactions with her for a few days.

During that time, she will have a chance to stop focusing on things about you that she doesn’t like and begin to remember and miss some of the things she actually does like about you (e.g. the way you always treat her like a princess, how you always supported her in achieving her goals and dreams, how you could always make her laugh or smile even when she was really sad or in a bad mood).

The more she focuses on the good things about you, the more her resolve to never give you another chance will begin to weaken.

Then, if you contact her again and focus on saying and doing the types of things that will reawaken her feelings for you again (e.g. making her laugh and smile, making her feel like a desirable woman, showing her that you’ve changed some of the things that matter to her), she won’t be able to stop herself from opening up to you again (even if it’s only a little bit).

By the way!

Don’t make the mistake of thinking that if 3 to 7 days of space will make her miss you, then giving her a few weeks or months will be even better.

No! No! No!

That only works if a woman is still secretly in love with her ex and is hoping they will get back together again.

In the majority of ex back cases, a woman is no longer in love with her ex and feels as though she made the right decision to break up with him.

So, if a guy then gives her too much space (i.e. a few weeks or months), she simply doesn’t care. Instead, she feels relieved not to have the pressure of dealing with him anymore and she then focuses on moving on and finding herself a new man.

This is why you shouldn’t give your ex any more than 3 to 7 days of space.

If you’ve been very annoying and needy, give her the full 7 days, then call her, reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another way to change your girlfriend’s mind is

4. Call her, re-attract her and then end the phone call

For example: Imagine that you’re on a call with your ex and she says something like, “What do you want? Why aren't you listening to me? I've given you too many chances already and I won't give you another one. You need to get that into your head and just leave me alone!

No matter how hurtful her words might feel, you need to maintain your confidence with her and stay calm, relaxed and open.

From there, use some humor to ease the tension and make her laugh, smile and drop her defenses a little bit.

The more you make her smile and laugh, the less she will be able to keep herself closed off.

She may then begin thinking things like, This isn't so bad after all. He's actually being really cool about the break up. I can't believe I'm thinking this, but I'm actually enjoying talking to him again.

Once you've made her feel attracted and caused her to relax and drop her guard, you can then say something along the lines of, Well, anyway, it's been great talking to you again, but I've got to get going now. Thanks for the chat though, we should do it again soon, okay? I'll call you sometime. Okay, bye, and then hang up the call after she responds (e.g. she says, Oh okay. Bye, or Talk to you later).

Not only will this leave her feeling good and thinking about in a more positive way (e.g. with respect and attraction), it also leaves her wanting more.

Then, the next time you call her, she will actually be happy to hear from you and she will be open to saying Yes, to meeting up with you in person to catch up (even if it's just out of curiosity to see the new you for herself).

Another way to change your girlfriend's mind is

5. Make her feel like you are moving on

That way, she feels like the one being left behind now.

You've re-attracted her, but you aren't trying to get her back.

Instead, you're actually happy and having a good life without her.

For example: Some of the ways you can make her feel like you are moving on are...

- You post photos of yourself having fun with other people, including women, on social media. (BTW: If she's unfriended you, then set your photos to 'public' where she will be able to see them anyway.).
- You don't always respond to her texts, messages or calls right away and when you do, say things like, Sorry I couldn't talk to you/reply to you earlier, but I was out with friends/away for the weekend.
- When you talk to her on the phone or meet up with her in person, make sure you sound happy, positive and like you're having fun without her, rather than like you're sitting at home feeling sad and missing her.
- You focus on your big goals in life and are making progress towards achieving them.
- You spend more time doing things that you neglected while in a relationship with her (e.g. play a sport, travel, pursue an old hobby).
- You don't respond to her every beck and call, especially if she tries to test you by saying that she misses you or that she thinks she wants to try again (i.e. if you run to her every time she calls, she will feel more emotionally dominant than you and she won't be able to respect you).

- You spend more time going out with your single friends (e.g. to clubs/bars/parties).

When she sees that you're happy, confident and enjoying life by hanging out with new people and doing new things, she will naturally feel drawn to you and want to talk to you and see you in person again.

She will realize that you might be worth fighting for after all and when that happens, her guard will come down and she begins to open up to the idea of giving you another chance.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get Another Chance With an Ex

If you want to soften your ex's resolve and open her up to the idea of giving you another chance, you really do need to approach the ex back process in a different way this time around.

This is why you can't afford to make any of the following attraction mistakes with her:

1. Pleading with her to change her mind

This approach might work once and sometimes even twice or three times.

However, eventually a woman will get fed up and begin thinking things like, "Does he think I'm a fool? I've listened to his pleading and begging so many times before and I've always given him the benefit of the doubt and a chance to prove to me that he will really change. However, he's abused my good nature one time too many and I now see through his act. He thinks he can plead with me to change my mind and promise me that things will be different. Then, when I give him another chance, he goes right back to being the same jerk he was before like nothing ever happened. Well this time I'm not falling for it! I've given him too many chances already and I won't give him another one."

She then becomes aloof, distant and uncommunicative, because she doesn't want to hear his pleas anymore.

So, if you're serious about getting another chance with your ex, you can't start pleading with her, because this is one of the tactics that worked before.

Whether you want to admit it to yourself or not, the truth is, it's not going to work again.

You need to change your approach so your ex can see that you genuinely are a different man this time.

When she can see for herself that you really have changed in some of the ways that matter to her, her defenses will come down a little bit and she will then open up to at least interacting with you to see how she feels about the new you.

However, if your plan to get her back is to plead with her, don't be surprised if she keeps pushing you away and saying, "Forget about it! I've given you too many chances already and I won't give you another one."

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Pouring your heart out to her to hopefully make her feel pity

Right now, your ex is not going to care how you feel about her, because she doesn't have feelings for you anymore.

So, even though you might be pouring your heart out to her and telling her how much you love her, how she's the one for you and how bad you feel for hurting her again, she's not going to care.

Here's the thing!

A woman doesn't like to feel like she's being manipulated for feeling the way she's currently feeling (i.e. unwilling to give him another chance), simply because you can't cope without her.

Instead, she's likely going to feel annoyed with you for trying to make her feel pity for you, when she's the one who is feeling hurt, betrayed and let down by you.

So, forget about making her feel sorry for you and focus instead on doing what really works, which is re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Another mistake to avoid is!

3. Using the same approach to getting her back as you did before

If you keep using the same approach to get your ex girlfriend back that you've used before (e.g. beg and plead with her, promise her that you really will change this time, apologize over and over again), she will most likely continue to reject you, because this time around, she's not going to believe it.

Her guard will stay up and she won't want to risk giving you another chance, because she can see that you haven't really changed.

This is why, you need to first make some attractive changes to yourself and the way you interact with your ex, before you attempt to get her back (e.g. become more emotionally mature, stand up to her more when she's being unreasonable or treating you badly, get clear on your goals in life and start working towards achieving them, treat her with respect, start pulling your weight).

You don't have to become perfect to get her to open back up to the idea of giving you one more chance, but you do need to show her that you've already started to make changes to the things that matter to her.

When she can see for herself that this time around you're 100% committed to being the man she needs you to be, she will naturally drop her guard and open up to interacting with you more to see where things go from there.

Another mistake to avoid is!

4. Not being able to give her a new attraction experience to pique her interest

This time around, to convince your ex to give you another chance, you need to make sure that you re-attract her in new and exciting ways.

If you try to get her back by saying and doing what you've always done before, she's probably just going to keep saying, â€œNo.â€

For example: Some of the ways you can show your ex that you really are a new man and pique her interest enough to want to open back up to you again are:

- Showing her by way of your behavior, conversation style and actions that you have already fixed some of the issues that were turning her off before (e.g. if you were immature and childish before, youâ€¢re now more emotionally mature and focused in your life. If you placed your needs ahead of hers and took her for granted, you now understand that itâ€¢s up to you to create the kind of relationship dynamic that will get you what you want, while also making your woman feel loved, appreciated and understood).
- Reacting differently to what she says and does, (e.g. if she previously made you feel angry and stressed out when she created unnecessary drama and that caused you to lose your temper with her, you now relax and lovingly laugh at her attempts to get under your skin).
- Making her feel feminine and girly in your presence by thinking, talking, behaving and acting like a masculine man, rather than being extra nice to her, or allowing her to dominate you emotionally.

When she experiences those kinds of changes in you, she naturally drops her guard and opens up to being with you romantically and sexually.

Even if she tries to deny it to your face, she wonâ€¢t be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again, for being man enough to change and improve so quickly and thatâ€¢s when everything changes for the better.

She stops saying, â€¢Iâ€¢ve given you too many chances already and I wonâ€¢t give you another one,â€¢ and she starts saying things like, â€¢Okay, maybe we can try one more time, but this is your last chance.â€¢

Fortunately, you wonâ€¢t need another, because this chance is the one that will last forever.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Dealing With Separation Anxiety After a Breakup

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways to calm down the anxiety and start feeling better right now:

1. Know that there is hope

Right now, the main reason you're feeling separation anxiety after your breakup is because you're likely thinking things like, "I'm all alone now. I've lost her forever and nothing I've said or done so far has made a dent in her resolve. She doesn't want anything to do with me. It's hopeless!"

Yet, just because things look bleak right now, it doesn't mean your situation is irreversible. You can get your ex woman back.

Most guys are able to get another chance with their woman by focusing on the simple art of re-attracting her.

Remember: In most cases, even when a woman has completely disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy, it doesn't mean those feelings are dead and will never return again.

Instead, they are buried under anger and emotional pain.

However, you can reawaken them and bring them back to life.

How can you do that?

By interacting with your ex (e.g. via text, social media and especially over the phone and in person) and making her feel attracted to the new and improved you.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by:

- Making her laugh, smile and feel good to be in your company again, or to be talking to you over the phone.
- Staying confident with her, even if she's saying that she's over you or is being offish towards you in an attempt to make you feel nervous or insecure about yourself.
- Flirting with her to create a sexual spark between you, rather than being too nice or neutral around her.
- Being more emotionally dominant with her, rather than letting her walk all over you with her confident personality.

The more she experiences the new you in ways that feel good to her, the more she will begin to reconnect with her feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, her defenses come down and she becomes open to talking to you, hanging out with you and seeing where things go from there.

As you can see, no matter how bad things might seem right now, there's always hope.

So, focus on that.

Another thing you need to know to help you deal with your separation anxiety after your breakup is:

2. Know that calming down your separation anxiety makes you attractive to her faster

If you allow yourself to wallow in your anxiety, then when you interact with your ex, you will likely say or do the kind of things around her that will actually turn her off even more (e.g. beg and plead with her for another chance or say things like, â€œI canâ€™t live without you!â€ and appear lost and depressed).

Then, rather than make her think things like, â€œMaybe I made a mistake by breaking up with him,â€ she instead thinks something along the lines of, â€œIâ€™m so relieved that are finished. I see now that heâ€™s just not man enough for a woman like me, because heâ€™s too emotionally weak and sensitive. I need a real man who can stand on his own two feet without my support and encouragement and can deal with whatever life throws at him without losing it and becoming helpless.â€

Thatâ€™s why, calming down and regaining control of your emotions is a very important step to re-attracting your ex and making her want you back.

Remember: Whatever you say and do from now on is either going to be attracting your ex back to you or turning her off even further.

Donâ€™t make the assumption of thinking that itâ€™s okay to stay stuck feeling separation anxiety after your breakup and that your ex wonâ€™t notice if you put on a brave front around her.

Women are very perceptive and can easily pick up when a guy is faking that heâ€™s coping without her.

On the other hand, if a woman interacts with her ex after a breakup and notices that heâ€™s being confident, emotionally strong and getting on with his life with or without her, she canâ€™t stop herself from feeling drawn to him again.

So, before you attempt to contact your ex again, make sure that you calm down and regain control of your emotions first.

You will be grateful to yourself that you did when you see how your ex responds to you (e.g. she opens up to you, is more willing to talk over the phone and see you in person).

Another thing you need to know to help you deal with your separation anxiety after your breakup isâ€¦!

3. Know that youâ€™ve always been an individual and still are

If you and your ex had an amazing connection (e.g. you enjoyed the same things, the sex was awesome, you finished each otherâ€™s sentences), itâ€™s only natural that you will now be feeling a void in your life.

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Even though you and her shared a unique bond, it doesnâ€™t mean that she is connected to you at the hip.

In other words, sheâ€™s not you and youâ€™re not her.

Youâ€™re an individual who has had his own interests, tastes and social networks in life before you met her and hopefully, you still do.

Of course, if you mistakenly thought that to make your woman feel loved and appreciated, you had to make her the centre of your world and gave up all your dreams, interests, hobbies and friends to spend more time with her, now is the time to quickly change that and become an individual once again.

Why?

Firstly, by being your own man and focusing on the things in your life that are important to you (i.e. your goals and dreams, your interests and hobbies, your friends), you will automatically stop feelings overwhelmed by the separation.

Secondly, when your ex notices that youâ€¢re not sitting around feeling sad, lonely and lost without her and are instead emotionally independent and feel good about yourself and your life without her, something amazing happens.

She automatically feels a surge of respect for you again, because youâ€¢re not being a needy, emotionally weak man.

Instead, you are confident in yourself with or without her approval or love and thatâ€¢s attractive to her.

As a result, she starts to feel drawn to you again, because women (including exâ€¢s) are attracted to good men who are confident, happy and forward moving in life, regardless of whether heâ€¢s in a relationship or not.

You can then easily build on her feelings of respect and attraction for you and get her back.

However, if you stay stuck in your feelings of separation anxiety and thinking things like, â€¢I canâ€¢t live without her, â€¢ your ex will pick up on that during interactions and feel even more turned off by what she perceives as your neediness and emotional dependence on her.

Another thing you need to know to help you deal with your separation anxiety after your breakup isâ€¢!

4. Know that life gets better when you take the right actions

Newton's third law of physics states: For every action, there is an equal and opposite reaction.

In other words, your actions determine your results.

For example: If you take a weak (i.e. wrong) action, you will get a weak result and if you take a strong (i.e. right) action, you will get a strong result.

How does this relate to you dealing with your separation anxiety after a breakup?

Essentially, if you take the right action, by quickly changing some of the things that caused your ex to break up with you and then interacting with her and actively re-spark her feelings for you, the reaction you will most likely receive is to get her back.

On the other hand, if you take the wrong action and sit around feeling sad, depressed and unsure of yourself and you avoid interacting with your ex, or when you do, you behave in ways that are unattractive to her, the results will most certainly be that you lose her forever.

Which is why, if you want to get your ex back, you need to change your approach (i.e. stop thinking negative things like, â€¢I canâ€¢t deal with the separation anxiety after my breakup) and do what actually works (i.e. actively making her have strong feelings for you again and then guiding her back into a relationship).

Donâ€¢t waste time focusing on the breakup and how itâ€¢s making you feel.

Thatâs not important now.

What is important is that you change your exâs perception of you so she thinks of you in a more positive way.

Only then can you get her back and get on with enjoying a great relationship together again.

Another thing you need to know to help you deal with your separation anxiety after your breakup isâ!

5. Know that anxiety is self created and therefore, can be self deleted

If you continue to think negative thoughts about yourself and how you feel now that you and your ex are broken up, itâs only natural that you will feel anxious and tense.

Anxiety and tension, like confidence, is self created.

Itâs based on how you think.

When you think things like, âI canât get over my ex. Iâm feeling so lost without her,â you will inevitably feel separation anxiety.

On the other hand, when you think confident, self-assured thoughts like, âI know it sucks to be broken up, but Iâm emotionally strong and I can have a happy, fulfilling life with or without her,â or âI know weâre currently broken up, but I can quickly get her back when I re-attract her in the ways that are important to her,â you will automatically start to feel less anxious and more in control of your life.

The more you think that way, the less the anxiety of the breakup can get to you.

In fact, it will totally be deleted and you will realize that you feel a lot more positive, optimistic and happier than ever before and as a bonus, you will automatically become more attractive to your ex too.

You can then quickly reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Except this time the relationship will be even better than before, because youâre now a more confident, emotionally strong and independent man than ever before.

Where Some Men Go Wrong When Trying to Deal With Separation Anxiety After a Breakup

If youâre serious about getting over your separation anxiety and getting your ex back, you need to make sure that you avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Focusing on the pain, rather than working towards a solution

If you spend most of your time thinking about how terrible your life is without your ex, itâs inevitable that you will struggle to move forward and get her back.

The fact is, when youâre thinking about your separation anxiety, youâre just focusing on the problem, rather than looking for a solution.

So, whatever energy youâve already invested in feeling anxious and stressed since you and your ex broke up, itâs now time to stop and you need to start focusing on what it will take to get her back.

For example: Some of the ways you can begin regaining your ex's respect and attraction for you are:

- Being confident and sure of yourself around her from now on, rather than sad, insecure and self-doubting.
- Using humor to lighten your interactions with her and make her feel good to be around you, rather than always being too serious and making her feel tense, closed off and strained.
- Focusing on having fun with her, rather than always trying to get her to commit to a relationship with you.
- Believing in your value to her, rather than thinking that she's too good for you.
- Making her feel feminine and girly in your presence, rather than treating her like a neutral friend.
- Standing up to her in a loving way when she's creating drama, rather than giving in to her and allowing her to feel more emotionally dominant than you.

When your ex can see for herself that you're handling the breakup in a confident, emotionally strong way (rather than being an emotional mess and drowning in separation anxiety), she will automatically start to feel some respect for you.

When that happens, she will also begin to feel attracted to you again and with those two things in place, her guard will naturally begin to come down.

She then opens herself up to interacting with you more over the phone and especially in person, which then opens up the door for you to fully re-attract her and make her fall back in love with you again.

Another mistake to avoid is:

2. Contacting her when in pain and turning her off even more

Sometimes a guy thinks that if he contacts his ex and shows her how lost and depressed he feels without her (e.g. he cries about how he can't function without her, begs her for another chance), she will feel flattered by his devotion and then give him another chance.

Yet, in almost all cases, when a woman sees that her ex is sad, dejected and emotionally broken without her, rather than make her think, "I never realized he loved me so much. It's so romantic to have a man who cannot live without me. I'd be crazy not to give him another chance," she instead feels turned off by his emotional neediness.

She then becomes even colder towards him and in some instances, even treats him with contempt and disdain (the opposite of what he was hoping for).

This is why, if you want your ex back, you have to make sure that you approach this properly.

So, the first thing you need to do is to take 3 to 7 days to calm down and regain control of your emotions.

Get rid of your feelings of neediness and desperation by knowing that you can re-attract her and get her back.

Then, when you do contact her, you will be feeling emotionally strong and confident, rather than anxious, needy and clingy and she will naturally feel drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

Her defenses come down and you can then gently and confidently get her back over the next few days to a week.

Another mistake not to make isâ€¦|

3. Avoiding the ex back process out of fear of being rejected by her

Sometimes a guy will get it in his head that getting his ex back is impossible, simply because she said so (i.e. when she broke up with him she said something like, â€œItâ€™s over between us and nothing you can do will make me change my mind and give you another chanceâ€).

So, rather than quickly make some changes and improvements to himself and then go ahead and get her back, the guy sits around dwelling on his feelings of separation anxiety because he fears being rejected by her.

Yet, what a guy like that doesnâ€™t realize is that the longer he waits to reactivate his exâ€™s feelings for him, the greater the risk of losing her completely.

So, while he debates with himself about his chances of getting her back, his ex is usually moving on (often by hooking up with another guy).

This is why, if you donâ€™t want to lose your ex, you need to make a move now.

Call her on the phone, spark some of her feelings for you and then get to a meet up with her where you can fully reactivate her feelings for you.

The truth is, more time isnâ€™t the answer to healing your separation anxiety.

Getting her back right now, or at least in the next week or two, is the answer.

That is possible for you.

All you have to do is begin to take the first step in the direction of getting her back and you are on your way to being back together with her again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex Wife Said We Grew Apart and Became Different People

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why she feels that way:

1. You and her seemed to have the same idea about what marriage was initially, but that changed over time

One of the most important aspects of a happy and successful relationship is that the man and the woman both have the same ideas about marriage.

For example: Imagine a guy proposes to his woman and they begin discussing their life together.

Seeing as the man was raised in a more traditional family where his father went out to work and provided for his family and his mother stayed home to take care of the household and the children, he may then expect the same dynamic to happen between him and his soon-to-be wife.

He might then say something like, “I’m quite well established in my job/business, while you’re still in a low level position at work. So, it makes better sense if I focus on my career, while you focus more on our home. Then, when we have children, it will be easy for you to quit your job and stay home to take care of them.”

At the back of her mind, she may be thinking something along the lines of, “That makes sense. His job is better than mine, so for now, I can take care of all the responsibilities at home like the cooking and cleaning. However, I am planning on moving up the levels in my career and when that happens, we can re-look our arrangement to suit both our needs.”

Naturally, because she is in love with him and is excited about getting married, she then agrees with his idea of how their marriage will be, without saying what’s on her mind.

Basically, she doesn’t think it will be that big of a deal and when things change (i.e. she starts to advance and earn as much, or even more than him), he will be happy to support her and share the responsibilities in the home and with any children they may have together.

As it turned out however, the guy never felt comfortable with changing the dynamic between him and his wife, even when she was the one with a better career and earning more money.

In his mind, he still expected her to be solely responsible for the household and the children.

This may then have led to arguments and disagreements where he said things like, “I thought we discussed this before we got married and agreed that you will be the one taking care of our family and home. Why are you being so stubborn now?” and she then responded with something like, “We agreed because you were the one who was more settled, but that’s changed. It’s only fair that the duties get shared equally now that I’m the one with the better job and earning more money. Why can’t you see that?”

Over time, this led to a total breakdown of the trust in the marriage and ultimately to divorce.

The guy might then struggle to understand why this happened and he may even ask his ex wife to explain what went wrong, only for her to say something like, “We grew apart and became different people.”

What a guy like that doesn’t realize is that even though him and his ex wife seemed to have the same idea about what marriage was initially, it doesn't mean those ideas are set in stone.

In most cases, for a marriage to last, both the man and the woman have to change and evolve based on what life throws at them.

That doesn't mean a guy (or woman) has to compromise on his fundamental beliefs about marriage (e.g. staying faithful to each other, treating each other with respect and consideration), but it does mean he needs to be flexible and open to change that can be beneficial to the both of them.

If he can change and evolve, his wife will naturally feel motivated to contribute to the relationship and be good woman to him.

However, if he stays stuck in his opinions and refuses to see things from her perspective, she will usually disconnect from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him and begin pulling away, being closed off and wanting a divorce.

Another possible reason why your ex wife said you and her grew apart and became different people is

2. One of you became increasingly mature emotionally, while the other remained the same or became more immature than before

The main thing that usually draws a couple together is that they are both on the same level as people.

For example: Both people in a couple might be

- Party animals that love to go out to clubs and have fun, drink and dance the night away. Their relationship is mainly about being carefree and enjoying being young and full of energy together.
- At university or college together and only focusing on graduating and finding suitable work before they make decisions about buying a house or starting a family together.
- Avid travelers who aren't interested in setting down roots in any one place and simply prefer to go from place to place and experience new people, cultures or environments together.

So, if one person matures a lot faster than the other, they will naturally start to grow apart and one, or both of them, will realize that they're no longer compatible.

If the woman is the one who matures faster than her man (e.g. she stops wanting to party all the time and wants to focus more on her studies or career instead, while he still prefers to stick to partying and being carefree. She graduates, gets a job and wants to buy a house and then have children, while he still drifts from job to job and doesn't want the responsibility of a mortgage or children. She gets tired of always being on the move and wants to settle down in one place, while he still wants to experience more places), she will eventually begin to feel that she is being forced to suppress her true feelings and desires for the sake of the marriage.

She will then likely start resenting her husband for not growing up and she slowly begins to disconnect from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him, until it leads to them getting a divorce.

Of course, it's not always the woman that matures faster than her man and it can also happen the other way around.

Either way though, when a couple is not in sync with each other, it will inevitably lead to misunderstandings and unhappiness.

When that happens, a woman will likely tell herself something along the lines of, “This doesn’t feel right anymore. I used to feel so good around him, but now it’s terrible. I just can’t be who I want to be anymore, because I’m always putting on an act to please him. It’s just not working between us anymore. We’ve grown apart and we’ve become different people.”

She then asks for a divorce, so that she can reconnect with the person she really wants to be, rather than suppressing her true self and being forced to be who her husband wants her to be.

Another possible reason why your ex wife said you and her grew apart and became different people is

3. After all the arguing and fighting, the marriage just didn’t feel the same anymore

Although arguments and disagreements are natural in any relationship, if it becomes something that happens all the time, it will inevitably change the man and his woman and the way they perceive each other.

Basically, it’s like they become different people.

At times they’re almost like enemies at war with each other and always trying to prove the other wrong, so they can then feel good as individuals.

In situations like that, a woman will eventually get tired of how much effort seems to be required to be in the marriage with her husband.

She may then begin thinking things like, “This is not what I signed up for. I hate that we’re always fighting and that I end up hating him when it’s over and hoping something bad will happen to him. I don’t like being that person. This marriage has become too stressful for me.”

So, rather than continuing to deal with the stress, she will look to get a divorce.

He might then feel hurt and disappointed with her and he may even say to himself, “Why did she give up so easily? Didn’t our vows mean anything to her? Sure, we had some problems, but she didn’t even try to make things work. Instead, she’s telling me that we grew apart and became different people. I just don’t understand.”

Here’s the thing though

Unlike in the past where a woman would stay in a marriage for life regardless of how bad she felt, in today’s world, a woman is free to leave any time she wants if she isn’t feeling the way she wants to feel (i.e. like she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love her man).

It’s just the way things are.

So, for a guy to get his wife back in a situation like this, he needs to change how he interacts with her, in a way that makes her feel respect and attraction for him again (e.g. he makes her smile and laugh, feel feminine and girly in his presence, understands her subtle, secret reasons for feeling turned off by him initially), then her feelings for him will also change.

However, if he continues to argue and fight with her about the same things, she will just keep saying things like, “Forget it. We’ve grown apart and are two different people now. Our marriage is *over and you need to accept that.*â□□

Another possible reason why your ex wife said you and her grew apart and became different people isâ□|

4. You weren't able to maintain her attraction and possibly even developed unattractive traits and behaviors that weren't there initially

For a woman to be happy and maintain respect and sexual attraction for her man, she needs him to think, act and behave in ways that are important to her (e.g. he is confident and emotionally strong and takes care of both of them, he thinks about their future together and takes the right actions to get them there, he is good to her which makes her feel motivated to be good to him, treat him well and make him feel loved as well).

So, if her husband starts to behave in ways that turn her off, she will naturally begin to disconnect from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

She will then usually stop feeling motivated to contribute to the relationship and be a good wife to him and will instead start pulling away.

When that happens, the sex will usually start to dry up, they begin to spend more and more time doing separate things (e.g. hanging out with their own friends, focusing more on work, participating in separate hobbies) and slowly grow apart.

Eventually, there is nothing keeping them together and they end up getting a divorce.

This is why, if you want to get your wife back, you need to get clear on what aspects of your thinking and behavior turned her off, so that you can make some attractive adjustments to yourself and easily re-attract her.

For example: Some of the unattractive traits and behaviors that a guy might develop after he gets married are:

- He starts feeling unsure of himself and his attractiveness to his wife, so he becomes needy, clingy, jealous or controlling.
- He struggles to cope with the stresses of life (e.g. the responsibilities of marriage, work, raising children), so he becomes irritable, snappy and easily annoyed or angry with her.
- He stays stuck at the same level in life and refuses to make any progress towards his goals or dreams.
- He gives up all his own friends, interests, hobbies and dreams in life so that he can spend all his time with his wife and he expects her to do the same thing too.
- He becomes too serious and responsible in the marriage and stops being fun to be around.
- He starts taking his wife for granted and begins to treat her more like a friend (i.e. he stops making her feel like a desirable woman).
- He loses the emotional masculinity that attracted her to him in the first place and becomes wimpy and emotionally weak by allowing her to dominate him.

When your ex wife can experience your new, attractive behavior for herself, she will naturally begin to feel more respect and attraction for you as a man.

She will then drop her guard and allow herself to open back up to the idea of being in a relationship with you again.

Another possible reason why your ex wife said you and her grew apart and became different people isâ€¦!

5. You let the stresses of life change you as a person

Every couple goes through stressful times or moments and experiences challenges and obstacles.

It's how they deal with them and react to them that makes all the difference.

Some couples are happy and totally in love despite their world crashing down around them, whereas some couples can't even deal with minor obstacles or bumps in the road.

The responsibility rests on the man's shoulders to be the strong one and guide himself and his woman out of the chaos and back into control.

When that happens, both him and his wife don't ever feel the need to break up.

They only want to be together with each other in a committed relationship, because that's when they feel the best, most fulfilled, most loved, safest and happiest.

On the other hand, if the man can't create a secure, happy dynamic in his relationship with his wife, they will inevitably grow apart and become different people.

Where Guys Go Wrong After Divorce

You can get your wife back if you want to.

However, if you go into the ex back process with the wrong mindset, it will become a lot more difficult than it needs to be.

So make sure you avoid making any of the following mistakes:

1. Not knowing that it's possible to re-attract her and get her back with a new approach

If you try to get your wife back by using the same old attraction methods you used before you and her got married (e.g. being really nice to her, buying her gifts, letting her have her way), rather than make her want to get back together again, she will likely just think something like, "This is my point exactly. He's still doing the same old things and expecting me to be impressed. Yet, I've changed. I'm not the same naïve young girl that fell in love with him the first time anymore. I'm a mature woman now and what I need is a real man who can make me feel like a real woman when I'm with him."

So, if you want to show your ex wife that you've changed and matured in the ways that matter to her, you need to make sure that your approach to attraction is new and different from now on.

When you begin attracting her in new ways (e.g. being more confident around her, being more ballsy and standing up to her when she disrespects you or creates drama, being more emotionally independent), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good.

She won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and then, the idea of getting back together again starts to seem appealing to her.

Another mistake isâ€¦!

2. Acting like a neutral friend to her and expecting her to feel sparks of romantic and sexual attraction

If you act like a neutral friend around your ex wife, she will probably only ever have friendly, neutral, non-sexual feelings for you.

She might even start turning to you for advice when she becomes interested in another guy or experiences guy problems because she now feels so comfortable with you.

So, if you don't want to find yourself in that position, make sure that every time you interact with her (on the phone or in person) you actively spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you, rather than pretending that you only want to be her friend.

Of course, it's perfectly fine to be friendly with her, but just make sure that you're not pretending to be an innocent friend who isn't interested in her in a sexual or romantic way.

If you do, you may end up regretting it when she calls you to tell you that she's in love with someone else.

Finally, another mistake to avoid is!

3. Giving up if she doesn't seem interested at the moment

In almost all ex back cases, a woman won't seem very enthusiastic at the idea of getting back with her ex.

Instead, she will remain neutral, or even cold and closed off and wait to see if he's really changed and improved before she lets down her walls and allows herself to have feelings for him again.

So, don't worry about it if your ex wife is currently acting like she's not interested in giving you another chance.

You can make her interested.

All it usually takes is for you to interact with her over the phone and especially in person and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new man you've become.

When she sees for herself that you really are the man she always wanted you to be, her reasons for wanting to be divorced will begin to fade away.

She then opens back up to seeing you more, to see where things go from there.

So, if you want her back, don't give up just yet.

Get her back and give your marriage one more try.

It's actually pretty damn easy to do.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex Girlfriend Has Daddy Issues

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 ways to help her overcome her daddy issues and be a good girl for you:

1. Stop thinking that her daddy issues are more powerful than you

If you think that she can't be fully committed or in love with you because of her daddy issues, then you're right.

Every other boyfriend she has dumped will have thought the same thing.

The only man that a woman like her will respect is one who sees past the superficial issues and games and loves her for who she is, flaws and all.

Here's the thing!

If a guy is confident in himself and in his attractiveness and value to his woman, he's usually not going to care whether she has daddy issues or not.

Instead he's going to simply focus on saying and doing the kind of things that will naturally grow her feelings of love, respect and attraction for him.

He's going to create a relationship dynamic that causes his woman to want to treat him well, be attentive, loving and affectionate, regardless of whether she has daddy issues or not.

Where so many guys go wrong in a relationship with a woman who has daddy issues is by putting in way more effort than her into the relationship, to hopefully get her to overcome her problems and love him and treat him well.

Yet, it rarely works out that way because women don't like to reward emotional weakness (i.e. a guy who can't see past her issues and games) with love, affection, sex and devotion.

So, if you want to get your ex girlfriend back, the best approach is to ignore her daddy issues and focus instead on making her feel so much respect, attraction and love for you as a man that she can't stop herself from wanting to be a good girlfriend to you and treat you well.

When she sees for herself that you're a much more emotionally attractive man now (e.g. confident, self-believing, calm and relaxed under pressure), she will naturally start to feel respect and attraction for you and want to be your girl once again.

Another way to help your ex girlfriend overcome her daddy issues and be a good girl for you is!

2. Don't try to pander to her issues

Many guys get dumped by women like this because they try to be better than her father.

For example: If she has daddy issues about being abandoned, treated badly or ignored, her guy might then try to be the opposite by being extra nice to her, giving her loads of attention and constantly reassuring her that he cares for her and that she's special to him.

Yet, rather than make the woman reward him with her love and devotion, she usually treats him even worse than before.

Why?

If you pander to a woman's issues, she will lose respect for you because your actions will seem desperate and misplaced.

After all, her daddy issues are only a superficial, changeable part of her personality.

Remember: Women hate it when a guy lacks the balls to handle her and her issues in a loving way.

It suggests to her that he's too emotionally weak and that she will then have to be the stronger one who takes the lead in the relationship, which is unappealing to her.

She then can't relax and be a feminine woman around him, because she has to take care of the both of them.

Here's the thing:

If a woman senses that you are unable to maintain your confidence with her and remain calm and in control regardless of what she's saying or doing, she will lose respect for you.

When she doesn't respect you, she will find it difficult to feel sexually attracted to you and without those two things, she will start to pull away from you.

On the other hand, if you stay calm, relaxed and confident around your woman regardless of how she's behaving and don't put up with her drama or bad behavior, then she won't be able to stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for you.

It might not make much sense to a guy who believes that being patient, extra nice and just taking whatever she throws at him is the key to overcoming a woman's daddy issues, but that's how it works with almost all women in this situation.

The nicer you are to her and the more you indulge her, the less attracted to you she feels.

The truth is, a woman like her will change and be a good girl to a man who is strong enough to see past all the BS and love her for who she is, without getting insecure when she is turning up the drama to test him.

So, if you want to get your ex girlfriend back, don't give her the sense that you're going to run after her and indulge her daddy issues because you're so desperate to have her in your life.

Sure you want her back, but you don't need her back to feel good about yourself.

[image: A woman with daddy issues will be a good girl for the right man]

When she can see for herself that she no longer has power over you because of her issues, she will naturally begin to look up to you and respect you as a man.

She will then become curious about her new feelings for you and she will open up to being in a relationship with you again and being a good woman to you from now on.

Another way to help your ex girlfriend overcome her daddy issues and be a good girl for you is:

3. Realize that most women didn't have a perfect relationship with their father

Some women did have a perfect relationship with their father and in cases like that, they often try to find a boyfriend or husband who is as good as their father.

For other women, she might initially feel attracted to men who are like her abusive, manipulative, angry, selfish father, but eventually that phase passes.

She might then accept (not select) a really nice guy who is sweet, loving and kind because she hopes that he will make her happy in a way that her father and all her subsequent equally horrible boyfriends couldn't.

Yet, she's not going to be happy with either extreme.

What she really needs and what pretty much every woman needs is a balanced, emotionally strong man who doesn't get flustered and insecure when she tests him.

He loves her for who she is and is strong no matter what, so in return, she feels respect, attraction and love for him and wants to be a good girl for him so she doesn't lose him.

She knows how hard it is to find a man like that.

So, rather than worry about your ex's daddy issues and allowing that to influence the way you interact with her (e.g. by being too nice and accommodating, letting her have her way, trying too hard to please her) and focus instead on being your own man.

If from now on you stop falling victim to her unnecessary emotional drama, she will naturally begin to look up to you and respect you again.

As a result, she will then begin to feel sparks of attraction and love for you again and will open herself back up to being with you, because you're now the kind of man she's been looking for all along (kind, loving, yet also emotionally strong and masculine).

Where Guys Go Wrong With an Ex Girlfriend Who Has Daddy Issues

It's quite likely that your ex girlfriend does suffer from daddy issues and that may then have caused your relationship to break up.

However, it's also possible that you misunderstood her and didn't know how to handle her when she was acting up.

For example: Ask yourself, are you making any of the following mistakes with your ex?

1. Diagnosing her as being totally messed up and beyond repair

Sometimes a guy might find himself in a relationship with a woman who is overly emotional and likes to throw tantrums or burst into tears about irrelevant things.

Yet, rather than see her behavior as being irrational and then laughing at her for being so silly, he instead becomes upset and begins to look for the underlying cause.

Knowing her personal history, he then self-diagnoses her as suffering from daddy issues and concludes that she's truly messed up.

He might then try to fix her, by doing things differently to what her father would.

For example: If a woman's father was cold and closed off towards her, her guy will then be overly emotional and smother her with attention.

Alternatively, if her father was emotionally or even physically abusive towards her, her guy will then be extra nice, sweet, gentle and agreeable towards her.

Yet, in almost all cases, when a guy is being too emotionally weak and wimpy with her, rather than make a woman get over her daddy issues, she instead becomes more aloof, disinterested and even disrespectful towards him (i.e. because she feels more emotionally dominant than him).

Naturally the guy might feel hurt that after all he's done for her she still can't get over her daddy issues and he may then say to himself, â€œThereâ€™s nothing I can do. Sheâ€™s just too messed up and beyond repair.â€

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

A woman doesnâ€™t need her guy to be the opposite of her father, she needs him to be the kind of man she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love.

When she can feel those emotions around him, her issues with her father wonâ€™t matter, because she will be too busy trying to be a good woman to her man, so that she doesnâ€™t lose him.

So, if you want to get your ex girlfriend back, stop trying to be her therapist and focus instead on being her man.

When she can depend on you to be confident, emotionally strong and emotionally dominant, no matter what she says and does, she will naturally begin to respect and feel attracted to you for being man enough to not get caught up in her drama.

As a result, she wants to be your girl again.

You can then easily get her back into a relationship that isnâ€™t clouded by her issues anymore.

Another mistake you might be making isâ€¦

2. Thinking that your nice guy approach is right and women should accept it

Women like her do want a good guy, but they just aren't happy with a guy who puts her first no matter what, gets emotional when she tests him and is constantly trying to change her.

She's not broken.

She's just testing guys to find one who can handle her without becoming insecure and losing touch with his masculinity.

Of course that doesnâ€™t mean you have to become a jerk, bully her or treat her badly to get her back.

Instead, you simply need to show her that youâ€™re now more confident, ballsy and assertive, while still being a good guy.

In other words, be a more balanced, well rounded man, rather than being too nice and gentle, or too hard and aggressive.

When you interact with her on the phone and especially in person and she sees for herself that you are now the type of man she always wanted you to be (e.g. emotionally strong, emotionally masculine, emotionally dominant), she will start feeling attracted to you in the ways that have always been secretly important to her.

Her guard then comes down and she wants to be around you more and more.

You can then build on her feelings for you and get her back into a relationship that is more balanced, where you donâ€™t let her daddy issues get in the way and neither does she.

Another mistake you might be making isâ€¦

3. Assuming that her need for attention from other men means she has daddy issues

Just because a woman acts a certain way, it doesnâ€™t mean itâ€™s because of only one reason.

For example: A womanâ€™s father made her feel like she wasn't pretty or wasn't important enough to pay attention to, so she then seeks attention and validation from other men.

Yes, that is one reason why a woman might behave in that way.

However, other reasons includeâ€¦!

- She is trying to attract herself a boyfriend or husband and that is her strategy to do it.
- She is insecure about her appearance like 95% of other women and has gotten used to using men's reactions to her as a way to boost her self esteem.
- She likes sex and isn't afraid to show it. Most women want sex just as much as men, but don't show it because of social expectations.
- She secretly hates men and likes to reel them in so that she can reject them to get revenge for how she feels.

As you can see, there could be many reasons why your ex girlfriend is the way she is and daddy issues is only one of the possible reasons.

However, the important thing for you to understand is that if you want to get your ex girlfriend back, itâ€¦s up to you to create the right relationship dynamic that will then make her want to be a good woman to you, treat you well, be affectionate, loving and faithful to you.

How can you do that?

By being a confident, emotionally strong and masculine man who doesnâ€¦t let her walk all over you, while at the same time treating her well and making her feel loved, desired and appreciated.

When she can see for herself that no matter where else she looks, she will never find a man quite as good as you, she will stop messing around and she will open back up to you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get My Ex to Admit Her Feelings For Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 examples of how to make that happen:

1. Reawaken her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction, on a phone call or when talking to her in person

One of the best ways to get your ex to admit her feelings for you is by making her feel so much respect and attraction for you during interactions (i.e. on phone calls or at meet ups), that she can't stop herself from saying something along the lines of, It feels nice to be talking to you like this again. I've really missed you.

For example: Some of the things that will reawaken her feelings for you are:

- Maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what she says or does to make you feel insecure, or unsure of yourself (e.g. she initially says something like, My feelings for you are dead, or she acts cold and aloof and like she's not interested in talking to you).
- Using humor to take the awkwardness out of your interactions with her and make her smile and laugh and feel good around you again.
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you, rather than being too nice and making her feel more emotionally powerful than you, or being neutral and making her feel like you're not interested in her anymore.
- Showing her that even though you still have feelings for her, you're not sitting around feeling lost and depressed without her. Instead, you're happy, fulfilled and are getting on with your life (e.g. actively pursuing your goals and dreams, doing the things you gave up on doing to be with her, reconnecting with your old friends).
- Showing her via your actions, conversation and behavior that you're a new and improved man (e.g. you're more ballsy, more confident and sure of yourself and your attractiveness to her and to other women, more emotionally independent).

When you make your ex feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, most or all of the negative, angry feelings she still has about you begin to fade away.

Her guard comes down and she begins to reconnect with her feelings of love, making it easier for her to admit her feelings for you, because it now feels like the right thing for her to do.

However, if you keep pushing her to tell you how she feels without first re-sparking some of her feelings for you, she will usually just keep pushing you away and saying things like, You're so full of yourself. You have these wild ideas about my feelings for you, but the truth is, I don't feel anything. What we had is over. You need to accept that and leave me alone.

Another example of how to get your ex to admit her feelings for you is to:

2. Build up so much sexual tension that she just has to say something about how she feels

[image: Build up so much sexual tension that she just has to say something about how she feels]

You can interact with your ex and act like a nice, neutral friend who isn't attracted to her anymore, but that's not going to make her open up and tell you how she feels.

Instead, she's likely going to be guarded and she's going to pretend that she's not interested in you.

This is why creating sexual tension between you and her is an absolute must.

The more sexually attracted to you she feels, the less she will be able to keep her walls up and pretend that you're not having an effect on her.

So, how can you build up the sexual tension between you and your ex?

By flirting with her and making her laugh and smile during interactions, while at the same time not pushing her to admit her feelings for you.

Flirting makes a woman feel attracted to you and the fact that you're not desperately trying to get her to spill her feelings to you so that you can get her back, creates a build up of desire from her side.

She then starts to wonder, â€œWhy am I feeling so drawn to him again? Why do I suddenly want to tell him that I still have feelings for him and that I miss him?â€

That's what you want.

So, don't be afraid to flirt with your ex and make her laugh when you're talking to her over the phone or meeting up with her in person.

Another example of how to get your ex to admit her feelings for you is toâ€

3. Playfully accuse her of missing you

By accusing your ex of missing you in a joking way, you're giving her the chance to admit the truth to you, without coming across as being too easy or desperate.

Basically, she can laugh and say, â€œOh, okay. Fine, I'll say it. I miss you!â€ and have a laugh with you about it.

You will then have your answer and you can build on that so that the next time she admits that she has feelings for you, it will be in a more serious way.

So, go ahead and playfully make her admit that she misses you.

By the wayâ€

This is best done in person, not via text.

For example: Imagine you're sitting in a coffee shop with your ex and you've been chatting for a little while.

You: Hey, so have you been missing me?

Her: No.

You: Yeah, right. Yes, you have. I can see it written all over your face. You give yourself away so easily. You'd be horrible at playing poker. You have no poker face at all.

Her: [Laughing] No, I haven't been missing you!

You: Yeah, okay...I believe you [Said in a sarcastic, playful way]

At this point she is probably going to be smiling and thinking about you in a positive way because you're just being a bit playful with her.

She may then say something like, â€œFine. I admit it. I missed you a little bit. Are you happy now?â€œ

You can then laugh and respond with something along the lines of, â€œYeah, Iâ€™m happy now.â€œ

However, you canâ€™t stop there.

Remember: Her saying that she misses you in a joking way is not an admission that she wants you back.

For her to want that, you have to fully reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love during one or more interactions (depending on how bad your break up with her was).

Only then will she truly open back up to you and admit her real feelings for you.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex to Admit Her Feelings Him

Sometimes a guy tries to make his ex admit how she feels about him by saying and doing certain things that he hopes will force her into it.

Yet that rarely, if ever works out and in most cases, the women becomes even more stubborn and closed off.

So donâ€™t let that happen to you.

Make sure that you donâ€™t make any of the following mistakes:

1. Telling her all about your feelings and hoping that she will reciprocate and talk about her feelings

According to social psychology, itâ€™s normal for a person to respond to a positive action with another positive action in turn.

So, based on that belief, a guy will sometimes decide to tell his ex that he still cares for her, in the hope that she will feel obligated to reciprocate by admitting her feelings for him too.

However, although that may work under normal social situations (e.g. between friends or co-workers), the same rules donâ€™t apply in relationships.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Although it would be nice if all you had to do was tell a woman how you feel and she would then pour her heart out to you, it just doesnâ€™t happen if the feelings aren't mutual.

If a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for a man, then him telling her about his feelings isnâ€™t going to make her suddenly feel the same way about him.

He has to properly re-attract her first.

So, if you want your ex to admit her feelings for you and want you back, donâ€™t waste time discussing your feelings with her.

Instead, focus on making her feel sexual and romantic feelings for you first, so that opening up to you happens because it feels like the right thing for her to do.

When you approach it that way, you donâ€™t have to try to force an answer out of her that she doesn't want to give.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Asking her how she feels before you've re-attracted her

Sometimes a guy might decide to go ahead and just ask his ex about her feelings for him.

This might be because he's following the advice of a friend or relative who tells him, "Why do you keep doing this to yourself? If you really want to know how your ex feels about you, just ask her. It's that simple. She will then tell you and you can stop obsessing about it all the time," or it may be because he doesn't know what else to do.

Either way, if you don't re-spark your ex's feelings for you first, asking her how she feels about you is a bad move. Why?

After a break up, a woman will rarely be honest with a guy and come out and say exactly what she's feeling (e.g. because she's afraid of how he'll react if she tells him she doesn't care, she doesn't want to give him a chance to try and convince her to change her mind, she doesn't want to make it easy for him to get her back by telling him how she feels).

So, rather than be honest with you, your ex might actually lie to you by saying things like, "I'm not sure how I feel. I just need some space to figure things out," when what she actually means is, "I'm over you and I want some space so that I can fully move on and hook up with another guy."

Alternatively, she might say something like, "I don't have any feelings for you anymore, so stop asking me. What we had is over, so accept it and leave me alone," to test your confidence and see if you're man enough to get her back without her helping you along.

So, rather than asking your ex how she feels about you, just focus on making her feel respect and attraction for the new you, every time you interact with her from now on.

When you reactivate her feelings for you, she naturally becomes more open to discussing her feelings with you.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Trying to make her feel some pity for how lost and confused you are due to her not expressing her feelings

As tempting as it might be for you to want to say to your ex, "Please stop being so stubborn and closed off. I just want to know where I stand with you. I need to know how you feel about me so that I can get on with my life, one way or another. Don't you care how you're making me feel? Do you realize that I care about you and want you back and you're just messing with my feelings when you refuse to admit your feelings for me? Please just be honest with me. That's all I'm asking!" it's usually a bad idea.

Here's the thing

When you try to make your ex feel pity for you, she feels turned off by what she perceives as your emotional weakness.

She sees that she's emotionally stronger than you and it makes her want to move on from you even more.

So, donâ€™t bother trying to make your ex feel pity for how lost and confused sheâ€™s making you feel by not admitting her feelings to you and focus instead on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

4. Apologizing over and over for his mistakes

Sometimes a guy might apologize to his ex over and over again for what happened and say things like, â€œIâ€™m so sorry for stuffing things up between us. I really blew it and I regret hurting you so much. If I could take it all back, I would. I would do anything to not put your through all that.â€

Essentially heâ€™s hoping she will then say, â€œItâ€™s okay. I forgive you. I care too much for you to hold a grudge. Letâ€™s forget what happened and try again.â€

Unfortunately, it rarely works out that way.

In most cases, a woman wonâ€™t admit her feelings for a guy just because heâ€™s apologizing to her.

Why?

To begin with, he hasnâ€™t really done anything to spark her feelings for him and prove to her that heâ€™s really changed.

Instead, all heâ€™s done is apologize and hope she will fall for that.

So, rather than open up to him and tell him that she still cares, she might actually reject his apology by saying something like, â€œGood! Iâ€™m glad you feel bad. You really hurt me.â€

So, if you want your ex to admit her feelings for you, apologizing to her repeatedly isnâ€™t the way to go about it.

A better approach would be to give her one brief, sincere apology in a calm, confident and sincere manner and then focus in showing her via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to her from now on, that youâ€™re a new and improved man.

When she can see for herself that you truly have changed in the ways that matter to her, she will naturally open back up to you and tell you that she cares.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

5. Trying to get her back by reminding her about all the good times they shared together

As nice as it would be to be able to make your ex have feelings for you by bringing up all the good times you and her shared together in the past, love just doesnâ€™t work that way.

The thing is, when a woman has disconnected with her sexual and romantic feelings for a guy, being reminded about how good things used to be between them will usually only highlight to her how bad things turned out.

So, if you want to get your ex to admit her feelings for you and get her back, you have to actively make her have feelings for you based on who you are right now.

Donâ€™t bother rehashing all the good times from the past.

How you make her feel right now and from now on is what really counts.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

4 Tips For Getting an Ex Back That You Met Online

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you've never had sex with her, then she's not categorized as an ex.

Instead, you were in the friendzone and still are. Here's how to get out of the friendzone if you never slept with her.

However, if you did have sex with her and also had a relationship along with it, then she is an ex.

In that case, here are 4 tips on how to get your ex back that you met online:

1. Make your online dating and social media profiles look more attractive

Women are attracted to men who are confident, happy and forward moving in life, with or without their woman.

This is why, if your ex sees that you're happy and getting on with your life without her, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

One of the best ways to do that (especially if your ex is currently ignoring you) is via social media. So, go ahead and update your profiles on social media with some new, attractive photos of yourself. Don't post up photos of you alone, of landscapes, your pets or your car.

Instead, post up photos of you having fun with other people, where you look confident and happy.

A woman feels attracted to that because it shows her that your confidence is not dependent on her, or on women in general.

Instead, you're confident in yourself and can get on with life and enjoy it, especially after a break up.

By the way!

Some guys worry that if his ex sees him being happy without her, she will think that he's not interested in getting her back.

Yet, the opposite is true, because even though a woman probably won't admit it, she will absolutely feel more attraction for a guy who gets on with enjoying his life, compared to a guy who sits around feeling sad, lonely and lost after a break up.

So, just know this: When you post photos of yourself having fun with other people, rather than make your ex feel angry or want to move on, it actually makes her feel curious about the new you.

She then wants to interact with you again.

She may then message or text you to say Hi, and you can then reactivate her feelings for you on a phone call and then fully get her back at a meet up.

Another tip for getting an ex back that you met online is!

2. Get clear on the top 5 things about you that turned her off

If you want your ex to get back with you, the first step is to make some changes to yourself to attract her in the ways that are important to her.

However, rather than try to change everything about you (which can be overwhelming and make you lose hope), just focus on only changing the 5 most important things that turned your ex off about you. For example:

1. You're less insecure and self-doubting now, which means you don't feel the need to get jealous or control her anymore.
2. You're more emotionally masculine, which means that you flirt with her and make her feel attracted, rather than treating her like a friend or pen pal.
3. You're more emotionally mature now, which means that you aren't being childish and immature when you interact with her and in your life (e.g. messaging or texting like a girl with too many smiley faces and emojis, not taking things that are important to her seriously, messing around in your life and not having a clear purpose or direction).
4. You're more emotionally independent, which means that you don't need to hear from her, or be with her, all the time to feel good and have fun.
5. You're more emotionally dominant, which means you're not seeking her pity or letting her walk all over you like she used to.

When she experiences those kinds of changes in you, she naturally drops her guard and opens back up to interacting with you more over the phone and in person, to see where things go from there.

So, just focus on improving those 5 things about yourself (i.e. the 5 things that are relevant to you and your ex).

Don't worry about anything else.

If you improve those 5 things about yourself, it will make her overlook any other minor things that may have turned her off or made her question her decision to be in a relationship with you.

Another tip for getting an ex back that you met online is!

3. Improve your understanding of what makes a woman feel attracted to a man when talking to him on the phone or in person

When trying to get an ex back, a lot of guys make the mistake of using the same old approach that they used before (e.g. being really nice and sweet to her, letting her call the shots during conversation, not standing up to her when she's being cold, bitchy or disrespectful towards him).

Yet, that approach rarely works to get a woman back.

Instead, it simply highlights to her that he's still the same guy she broke up with and that turns her off.

So, if you want to re-attract your ex and make her want to be in a relationship with you, it's very important that when you interact with her from now on, you give her a new and improved attraction experience.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by!

- Making her smile and laugh and feel relaxed to be interacting with you, rather than being too serious and trying to talk to her about getting back together again.
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you and her, rather than acting friendly, neutral or distant.
- Showing her via the way you think, talk, act, behave and respond to her, that you've truly changed and improved in the ways that are important to her, rather than hoping that she will just accept you because you shared some good times before.

- Believing in yourself and in your value and attractiveness to her, rather than feeling insecure and unsure of yourself and then making her feel turned off as a result.
- Being a good man to her, but also being confident and assertive enough to stand up to her when she steps out of line or treats you in a disrespectful way.
- Maintaining your confidence with her, regardless of what she says or does to make you feel nervous or uncertain of yourself around her.

Once she senses the changes in you by listening to how you talk and observing your body language and actions, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again.

Even if she tries to hide it or pretend that she's not feeling it, she will be feeling it.

You can then build on those feelings and get her back.

Another tip for getting an ex back that you met online is

4. Contact her and get her to meet up with you, so you can re-attract her and get her back

To show your ex that you really have changed and improved and are a different man now, you have to interact with her on a phone call or in person.

When you do, she will be able to hear the tonality of your voice (e.g. do you sound confident or nervous), assess your behavior (e.g. are you sure of yourself or anxious) and see for herself that you really have become a better man.

This is why you need to contact her and begin showing her the new version of you.

For example: You might call her on the phone and start off by putting her at ease with talking to you by using some humor to make her laugh and smile and feel good to be hearing from you.

Then, once she has dropped her guard a little and is feeling more relaxed and open towards you, say something along the lines of, Anyway, it's been great chatting with you again. It's nice to see that we can just talk as friends, without it being about us getting back together or anything like that, and let her say whatever she wants to add to that.

Then say, Let's catch up for a coffee sometime this week to say hi to each other as friends.

In a lot of cases, a woman won't immediately say, Yes because she won't want to come across as being too easy.

She may also be worried that her ex might take it the wrong way and assume that she wants to get back together again, even though at the moment she doesn't.

So, she might say something like, Look, it's nice of you to ask, but I don't think it's such a good idea. We're broken up now, so let's leave it at that.

Regardless of what she says, maintain your confidence and don't fall into the trap of doubting yourself and your ability to get her back.

Relax and confidently say something along the lines of, Hey, look! it's just a quick cup of coffee as friends. I'm not expecting you to fall in my arms and beg me to take you back although Iâ€¦ll be nice to you if you do (Btw. Laugh when you say that so she knows itâ€¦s a joke). Seriously though, I really do accept that weâ€¦ve broken up and Iâ€¦m not going to push you into anything youâ€¦re not ready for. Itâ€¦s just coffee between friends. So, letâ€¦s do it. Letâ€¦s catch up to say hi this week.â€¦

At that point she will probably agree and you can then go ahead and arrange a suitable day and time. Just remember: When you meet up with her, you must be ready to say and do the types of things that will reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you, rather than being nervous and unsure of yourself and turning her off again (e.g. maintain your confidence around her regardless of whether sheâ€¦s being nice or cold towards you, put her at ease by making her laugh and smile, let her see some of the changes in your behavior and attitude that were lacking in your relationship together). When she can see that you really are a new man, she will naturally begin to open up to the idea of getting back together again.

Common Mistakes Guys Make When Trying to Get an Ex Back That They Met Online

To get your ex back, you need to make sure that the approach you take from this moment onwards is going to be sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you and making her feel that if she doesnâ€¦t give you another chance, she will be losing out.

This is why you need to avoid making any of the following mistakes that some guys make in a situation like yours and giving her more reasons to stay broken up:

1. He sends her a message, she doesn't reply and he then loses confidence

Sometimes a guy will send his ex a feeler message on social media to just say hi and see what she will do from there.

If she responds to him, he will naturally be happy and take it as a sign that sheâ€¦s open to getting back together again.

However, if she doesnâ€¦t reply, he will likely feel a bit rejected and he may then begin to think things like, â€¦Well I guess I have my answer. Sheâ€¦s obviously not interested in me anymore if she doesnâ€¦t even want to reply to a simple message. I need to accept that I wonâ€¦t be getting her back, ever.â€¦

Yet, thinking like that only causes him to lose confidence in himself and in his value to her.

He stops believing that it is actually possible for him to re-attract her and gives up on the idea of getting her back.

What he doesnâ€¦t realize is that heâ€¦s the one giving up on getting her back, not her.

Yes, she might have ignored his message, but that doesnâ€¦t mean sheâ€¦s not interested in getting back together.

The truth is, there are many reasons why a woman might ignore a message from her ex.

For example: She mightâ€¦

- Not want to appear too desperate.

- Be testing him to see if he is truly confident enough to continue trying to get her back, even when sheâ€™s not making it easy for him.
- Be nervous that if she shows that sheâ€™s happy to hear from him he will then reject her to get revenge for her breaking up with him.

As you can see, your ex not replying to a message from you isnâ€™t a good enough reason for you to lose confidence and hope and give up on getting her back.

So, donâ€™t make that mistake.

Instead, just believe in yourself and focus on getting her back, regardless of what sheâ€™s doing or not doing to put you off.

Another mistake that guys make in a situation like this isâ€¦!

2. He contacts her to express his feelings about her

In some cases, a guy makes the mistake of thinking that if he tells his ex how he feels about her, she will suddenly start thinking, â€œOh, I never realized how much he cares for me. Well that changes everything! It makes me want to give him another chance right away!â€

Yet, that pretty much never happens. Why?

If a woman doesnâ€™t feel respect, sexual attraction and love for a man, then him pouring his heart out to her and telling her all about his feelings isnâ€™t going to matter to her.

Instead, she may even feel that heâ€™s being selfish, because all heâ€™s thinking about is how he feels and what he wants and not thinking at all about what she wants and how she feels.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Your ex will only care about your feelings when she has strong feelings for you.

So, if you want to get her back, donâ€™t waste time expressing your feelings to her and focus on sparking her feelings for you instead.

Just give her what she wants (i.e. to feel strong surges of romantic and sexual attraction for you) and you will get what you want (i.e. her in a relationship with you again).

Another mistake that guys make in a situation like this isâ€¦!

3. He updates his profiles and hopes that she makes the first move

Sometimes a guy thinks that if he makes himself available on social media (i.e. by constantly updating his profiles), his ex will begin to miss him when she sees it and she will then contact him.

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy, chances are, sheâ€™s not going to be spending a lot of time checking up on him on social media.

However, even if she does because sheâ€™s curious about what heâ€™s up to, sheâ€™s usually not going to do more than look at his profile.

The truth is, most women wonâ€™t contact an ex after a break up, even if they do still have feelings for him. Why?

Firstly, a woman doesnâ€™t want to come across as being desperate.

Secondly, she doesn't want to help him get her back by making things easy for him.

Instead, she wants to see if he has the confidence to make the first move, even if it seems as though she's not interested.

If he does, she will automatically feel surges of respect and attraction for him again for having the balls to go after what he wants in life (in this instance, getting her back) regardless of how difficult it may have seemed to him.

However, if he waits for her to come to him, he may be waiting for a long, long time.

Another mistake that guys make in a situation like this is!

4. He overanalyzes her posts or any changes she makes to her profiles

Making a big deal about your ex's every move on social media is the fastest way to make yourself start doubting your chances of getting her back.

For example: A woman might post something like, "Being single is the best! Check out the photos of me and my friends at a party this weekend."

Her ex might then wonder, "Did she post that to take a shot at me? Was she hinting that I don't stand a chance with her?"

On the other hand, she might post something along the lines of, "Feeling sad and lonely today," causing him to think things like, "Maybe she misses me after all."

Yet, here's the thing!

Not only will constantly trying to understand your ex's state of mind with every post that she makes drive you crazy, it will also not get her back.

So, a better approach is to forget about her social media habits and focus instead on actively making her feel respect and attraction for you again.

That's what really matters.

Another mistake that guys make in a situation like this is!

5. He makes the same or similar attraction mistakes when he contacts her or interacts with her, so she closes up and isn't interested in giving him another chance

If you keep trying to get your ex back by using the same approach with her that you always have (e.g. allowing her to call all the shots, treating her like a friend, putting her above yourself in terms of value), she will most likely continue to push you away.

So, if you want to make her want you again, you need to focus on making her feel respect, attraction and love for you again, by showing her via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to her, that you're a new and improved man now (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more emotionally independent, more emotionally masculine).

When you make her feel attracted in new and exciting ways, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

Her feelings of respect and attraction for you will naturally begin to resurface, whether she wants them to or not.

You can then build on those feelings and get her back, without her even realizing sheâ€™s falling in love with you all over again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Does the Dumper Feel About No Contact?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends on the woman.

Here are 5 possible reactions that a female dumper will have to the No Contact Rule being used on her:

1. She won't care because she's not even attracted to her ex

In most cases, by the time a woman gets to the point where she dumps a guy, she has already disconnected with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, if he decides to use No Contact on her to make her miss him and want him back, rather than think, â€œOh no! What have I done? I think I ruined my perfect relationship!â€œ she usually thinks something like, â€œThis turned out even better than Iâ€™d hoped for. I was worried that he would try to get me back and I would then have to be bitchy to get rid of him. However, he just walked away instead. I can now move on and find myself another guy, without the added stress of having to deal with a needy, clingy ex. Iâ€™m so relieved!â€œ

She then focuses on getting on with her life without her ex and doing all the things she wants, like going out with her single friends to bars and clubs, hooking up and dating new men and starting a new relationship.

In the meantime her ex is usually just sitting around missing her and mentally counting the days off his calendar to when he might expect to hear from her (i.e. heâ€™s waiting to see how long it will take for her to miss him and then contact him).

Yet, that call never happens, because she no longer has feelings for him, so sheâ€™s not missing him like heâ€™s expecting her to.

In fact, sheâ€™s happy not to be hearing from him and having to deal with an emotionally sensitive ex.

If he then tries to initiate contact after a few weeks or even months, she will almost certainly reject him, ignore him or reply and tell him that sheâ€™s in love with someone else now.

He is then left feeling confused, dejected and wondering, â€œI thought using No Contact on an ex is the key to making her come running back. So why didnâ€™t it work with me and my ex? What did I do wrong?â€œ

The answer is pretty simple: When a woman disconnects from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, him ignoring her for a long period of time doesnâ€™t create feelings of stress or panic in her.

Instead, it creates feelings of relief, calmness and even joy.

So, if youâ€™re currently wondering, â€œHow does the dumper feel about No Contact?â€œ because youâ€™re considering using it on your ex to make her miss you, the answer is: If youâ€™re not 100% sure that your ex still has strong feelings for you, then sheâ€™s not really going to care at all.

This is why, if you want her back, you need to do what works and what works is interacting with her and actively re-sparking her feelings for you.

When your ex starts to feel sparks of respect and attraction for you again, she will naturally start to drop her guard and start wanting to be your girl again.

However, if you ignore her when she doesn't care, you stand a much bigger chance of losing her to another man forever.

Another possible reaction that a woman might have to the No Contact Rule being used on her isâ

2. She will contact her ex to find out if he's still missing her

[image: The dumper will often contact her ex to confirm that he is missing her, so she can feel good about herself and continue to move on without him]

Sometimes, when a woman doesn't hear from her ex for a long time after she dumped him, she might become curious about why he's not calling her.

Event though she is the one who dumped him and is sure that she doesn't want him back, her ego feels a bit bruised that he's not chasing after her and trying to get her back.

As a result, she may then contact him to gauge how he's really feeling about her.

If he then says something like, âI'm so glad you called. I've missed you,â she can then feel better about herself knowing that he is missing her.

From there, she may decide to cut him out of her life for real and move on, or string him along by slotting him into the 'friendzone', with the knowledge that she still has control of his heart.

Another possible reaction that a woman might have to the No Contact Rule being used on her isâ

3. She will be upset about not hearing from her ex, but she won't contact him out of pride

In some cases, a woman will feel quite upset and annoyed that her ex is not contacting her after she dumps him.

In her mind she may be thinking things like, âI can't believe he's just letting me walk away like that without even trying to get me back. I would have thought that he would at least call me to apologize for stuffing up and try to make things right between us. Instead he's completely vanished.â

Yet, even though she might feel upset and may want to reach out to her ex to see why he's ignoring her, her pride simply won't let her do it.

Instead, she will likely say to herself, âWell, if that's how he wants to end things, then it's fine with me. However, he's mistaken if he thinks I'm going to chase after him. I won't ever do that! If he wants me, he will have to be the one that makes the first move.â

Then, to make herself feel better, she might go out and hook up with a new guy, just to take her mind off being ignored by her ex.

Another possible reaction that a woman might have to the No Contact Rule being used on her isâ

4. She will be upset about not hearing from her ex, but won't contact him out of fear of being rejected

Sometimes, even though a woman breaks up with a guy, it doesn't mean she's completely over him.

Instead, she may still have some feelings for him and she might even be hoping that by dumping him, she can shock him into being more of the man she wants him to be.

So, if he then uses the No Contact Rule and ignores her for weeks or months, it's only natural that she might begin to doubt his feelings for her.

She may ask herself, “Why isn't he contacting me? I really thought he would do something to get me back, but he's just ignoring me like I don't matter to him at all! Is it possible that he's already moved on and replaced me with another woman? Maybe I should phone him to find out. I really do want to know why he's ignoring me, but I'm worried that he will reject me and tell me that he's over me. Well, I guess I'm going to have to forget about him and try to move on instead.”

She then puts in a determined effort to fully get over him (often by quickly getting into a new relationship with a guy that has had a crush on her, or by hooking up with new guys until she finds a new relationship) and moving on.

Unfortunately, by the time her ex realizes that she's not calling him and gets in touch with her after the full No Contact period, it's usually way too late.

She then either refuses to answer his text/social media messages or calls, or if she does, she tells him something like, “Why are you calling me after all this time? Did you think I would wait around for you forever? Well I did wait, but when you didn't call, I realized you don't really care about me, so I decided to stop waiting around and moved on. I'm over you now, so please don't call me again. What we had is dead.”

Another possible reaction that a woman might have to the No Contact Rule being used on her is!

5. She will feel rejected or hurt and then seek to heal that pain by hooking up with a new guy

What a lot of guys don't realize is that a woman's confidence is very fragile.

In fact, according to a global survey conducted by Dove cosmetics, 96% of women don't consider themselves to be beautiful.

Added to that, women in the USA are reported to experience depression at twice the rate of men.

So, even though a guy's ex might have appeared to be very confident and self-assured, if she's like most women, she was probably quite insecure, anxious and prone to feelings of depression.

This is why, if the guy then decided to use No Contact on her to try and get her back, rather than her running back to him, she usually starts to feel hurt and rejected by him.

Then, to make herself feel better (i.e. prove to herself that she's still got it and is attractive enough to get another man), she goes out and actively hooks up with other men, until she finds one who she wants to have a relationship with.

By the time her ex gets in touch with her weeks or months later, she's already moved on and possibly in love with another guy.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Using No Contact After Being Dumped

As you may have realized, using No Contact on an ex who has dumped you, rarely, if ever works out in your favor.

So, if you want to get your ex back, you need to use an approach that works, rather than doing things that don't.

For example: 3 common mistakes that guys make are:

1. Thinking that women are all the same, so they will all fall for the No Contact trick

Every woman is different and will react differently to No Contact after a break up.

Only a very small percentage of women will come back to their ex because he uses No Contact.

In those cases, she will still have strong feelings for him and she will have secretly always wanted to get back with him anyway.

So, when he started ignoring her she started to panic about losing him and came back to him.

Yet, in almost every other case, a woman breaks up with a guy because she lost too much respect, attraction and love for him to want to stay with him.

As a result, she doesn't see any reason to want to get back with him, unless he reactivates her feelings for him during interactions.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, you need to do what works.

You need to interact with her every chance you can get and actively spark some of her feelings for you (e.g. by using humor to thaw her resistance towards you, by showing her that you're a confident and emotionally secure man even when she's being detached, unfeeling and offish towards you, by flirting with her to create some sexual tension).

When she begins to associate you with good feelings again (e.g. respect, attraction, love) rather than bad ones (e.g. anger, disappointment, stress), she will naturally stop pushing you away and open up to the idea of getting back together again.

Another common mistake that guys make is:

2. Sending out feeler texts after No Contact and giving up if she doesn't seem very interested

After a few weeks or months of ignoring his ex, a guy might send her a text saying something like, "Hey, how have you been?" in the hope that she will respond with something along the lines of, "Oh my gosh, it's you! I thought you'd forgotten me. I've missed you so much!"

They can then happily get back together and live happily ever after.

However, life is not a fairytale.

In the real world, a woman who has been ignored by her ex is probably not going to jump for joy the instant he gets in touch with her.

Instead, she will likely either ignore him right back, or she might simply respond to him in a cold, disinterested sort of way.

He may then take that as a sign that sheâs not interested in him anymore, give up and walk away feeling like heâs lost something important.

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

Put yourself in your exâs shoes.

How would you feel if she ignored you for a long time and then suddenly got in touch out of the blue?

Secretly you might be jumping for joy, but you probably wouldnât show that to her.

Instead, you would likely be guarded, play it cool and wait to see what she does before you allow her to see that you still have feelings for her.

Well, a woman would do the same.

She will be cold and aloof and she will wait to see if you can re-spark her feelings for you and make her want you back.

So, donât give up if your ex doesnât seem interested the first time you contact her, because itâs almost 100% certain that she wonât show her feelings to you even if she is.

The important thing is that you call her on the phone and meet up with her in person, reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another common mistake that guys make isâ!

3. Not understanding that in most cases, it takes confidence and balls to get a woman back

Break ups by their very nature generate awkwardness and tension between a man and a woman.

Basically, getting in touch with an ex woman after you and her have just split up is going to feel somewhat uncomfortable.

After all, yesterday you were a couple and today youâre not.

So itâs only natural that you might feel a bit uncomfortable about calling her on the phone to say âHi,â because itâs likely that sheâs going to be closed off and unfriendly towards you.

This is why, a lot of guys would rather use No Contact and ignore their ex for a few weeks or even months, in the hope that when they do call, she will be less annoyed and even missing him, and then the ex back process will be easier.

Yet, it almost never works out that way.

Hereâs the thingâ!

Chances are high, your ex will be offish towards you if you call her after the break up.

However, if you start sparking her feelings for you right away (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, being confident regardless of how she responds to you, flirting with her to make her feel sexually attracted), she wonât be able to stay closed off to you for very long.

Her resolve to leave you will naturally begin to slide and she will start to wonder if maybe she was too hasty in breaking up with you after all.

She then drops her guard and opens up to giving you another chance.

On the other hand, if you use No Contact, she will likely use the time to get over you and move on.

The truth is, there's no need for unnecessary mind games like No Contact, which usually backfire anyway.

Instead, just have the confidence to interact with your ex right away (on the phone and in person), reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

That's what really works.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

4 Examples of What to Do After the No Contact Period

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible options for you to choose from:

1. Pick up your phone, call her, re-attract her and get her to meet up with you

When a guy uses No Contact after a break up, it's usually because he wants to give his ex enough space to make her miss him, so that he can get her back.

So, one of the best things you can do after the No Contact period is to not waste any more time and just call your ex woman on the phone to get the ex back process started.

When you get her on a call with you, focus on getting rid of any awkward tension that might be there (i.e. because you and her haven't spoken in a few weeks or months) by using some humor to get her smiling, laughing and feeling good to finally be hearing from you again.

For example: Imagine she answers your call and says something along the lines of, "It's been ages since I last heard from you. What do you want?"

Rather than be put off by her cold and unfriendly manner, use it as an opportunity to make her feel some sparks of attraction for you instead.

You can do that by maintaining your confidence and saying something like, "I guess this isn't a good time to ask you for a favor then, is it?"

In most cases, the woman will be curious that her ex is calling her out of the blue to ask for a favor and she might ask something like, "What favor?" or "What do you want from me?"

You can then respond in a joking way and say something along the lines of, "Well I'm currently live on 'Who Wants to be a Millionaire' and I'm calling you as my 'Phone a friend' lifeline. There are currently hundreds of thousands of people watching and listening. However, if you don't want to help me out, that's cool. I'll just forfeit my millions."

She will likely be a bit shocked and say something like, "What?" or "Oh my goodness!" and you can then laugh and say, "Only joking! You know I'd suck at answering general knowledge questions live on TV."

At this point she will almost certainly laugh and feel a bit relieved not to actually be live on national TV and she may say something like, "I can't believe you tricked me like that!" or, "You're so crazy!"

More importantly, she's also going to feel a burst of respect and attraction for you for having the balls to joke with her in that way after so many days of No Contact.

You can then build on those initial feelings for a few more minutes and get her to agree to meet up with you in person, where you can fully reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you (i.e. by letting her experience the new and improved you in person) and get her back.

Another example of what to do after the No Contact period is to

2. Send out a feeler text to see what reaction you get Another option after the No Contact period is to send your ex a text to say "Hi" and see how she responds.

For example: In a best case scenario, she might text back with something like, â€œHey, where have you been? Iâ€™ve been thinking about you.â€

You can then call her, re-spark some of her feelings on the call and arrange a catch up with her.

Yet, things don't always play out as a best case scenario.

Sometimes the worst possible scenario happens in your situation.

Here's the thing...

The risk of basing your entire ex back process on your ex's response to a feeler text, is that if she doesn't reply to you, or if she says something like, â€œWhat do you want?â€ or, â€œWhy are you texting me? What we had ended ages ago and Iâ€™ve moved on,â€ you may lose hope and give up on getting her back.

Here's the thing!

Just because a woman doesn't seem excited to be hearing from you, it doesn't mean that she's not secretly happy to be hearing from you.

However, she's not necessarily going to show you that right away, especially when you've been ignoring her for a few weeks or months.

Instead, she's usually just going to be cold and aloof, or in some cases, she's even going to ignore you back by not replying to you, and she's going to wait and see if you maintain your confidence and continue to interact with her, or if you're going to give up and disappear out of her life permanently.

So, it's very important that if you do send your ex feeler texts after the No Contact period, you don't give up too quickly.

If you do, you'll never find out the truth about how she really feels about you.

Then you may end up missing out on your chance of getting her back, because you didn't believe enough in yourself and in your ability to re-attract her.

Don't make that mistake.

Believe in yourself, remain confident regardless of how she responds and get her back.

Another example of what to do after the No Contact period is to!

3. Wait longer and see if she contacts you

Although this is definitely an option you might take, it's usually the worst option. Why?

If your ex hasn't already contacted you during the No Contact period, chances are, more time isn't going to make much of a difference.

Instead, a few more days might be the final straw for her (i.e. if she's been waiting around and hoping you will get in touch with her).

She may then decide that you're definitely not interested in her anymore and she will then focus on fully getting over you and moving on, usually by hooking up with another guy.

If you then finally decide to call her after even more time (e.g. another few weeks or months), you may be disappointed to hear her say something along the lines of, â€œI waited and waited to hear from you after we broke up, but you never even called me once. So, I worked on getting over you and now Iâ€™m with another guy and Iâ€™m happy. Please donâ€™t contact me again, because what we had is over. Bye.

Another example of what to do after the No Contact period is toâ€¦

4. Get her smiling or laughing via text to bring down her guard before you call her

Texts are great when you send them to someone who likes you (i.e. a girlfriend, a friend or a family member).

In a case like that, you can say things like, â€œHi. How are you?â€ or, â€œIâ€™ve been thinking about you and I wanted to say hi,â€ and it will be okay, because the person on the other end will be happy to be hearing from you.

However, when someone doesnâ€™t like you (i.e. an ex girlfriend), texting unexpectedly just to say hi, is not a good idea. Why?

Texts can easily be misinterpreted in a negative light by an ex who has negative feelings towards you and she will almost always look at your texts as being annoying, stressful and unwanted.

So, if you want your ex woman to respond to your text after youâ€™ve been using No Contact on her, you need to make sure that you use humor to break the ice and make her smile, laugh and feel good to suddenly be hearing from you again.

She can then begin to think something like, â€œWow, he sounds different? Iâ€™m actually laughing and enjoying texting with him. I never thought Iâ€™d feel this way after he ignored me for so long, but now Iâ€™m curious about what heâ€™s been up to all this time and why heâ€™s changed so much. I wonder if itâ€™s real, or if itâ€™s just an act via text.â€

She then becomes more open to the idea of talking to you on the phone.

You can then call her, re-spark her feelings for you even more and get her to meet up with you so that you can get her back for real.

Where Guys Go Wrong After Using No Contact

Here are 7 mistakes you should avoid making after the No Contact period if you want to get another chance with your ex:

1. Sticking to text and never getting to a phone call and then meet up

Sometimes a guy feels really nervous about reconnecting with his ex after using No Contact.

So, to begin with, he sends her a feeler text to see how she will respond.

Unfortunately, if his ex then replies to him and sounds like sheâ€™s open to interacting with him, he makes the mistake of thinking that she will give him a sign when sheâ€™s ready to talk to him on the phone.

As a result, he sticks to texting her back and forth.

Of course, in almost all cases, a woman wonâ€™t give a guy the sign heâ€™s waiting for (i.e. that she wants him to call her), so when she realizes that all heâ€™s going to be doing is texting her, she begins to get bored.

In some instances, an ex woman will continue interacting with her ex while at the same time, she actively moves on and hooks up with other guys.

Alternatively, a woman might decide that keeping up a texting relationship with her ex is a waste of time and she may then eventually respond to him less and less, until one day he realizes sheâs not texting him at all anymore.

Hereâs the thingâ|

Texting an ex after No Contact should only be used as a way of getting her on a phone call to arrange a meet up.

Texting cannot be the main method of getting her back.

If you leave it too long to re-attract her in person, she will experience stronger in-person feelings with other guys that she meets and she will quickly become bored, annoyed or disinterested by your texts.

You may then lose her for real.

So, donât let that happen to you.

To get her back you have to call her on the phone and then meet up with her in person, where you can fully reactivate her feelings for you and make her want to give you another chance.

Another mistake isâ|

2. Overanalyzing her text replies in a negative way

