Making a big deal about your exâs every comment is the fastest way to plant seeds of doubt in your mind about your chances of getting her back.

You may then begin to say and do things that come across as needy or desperate to her and turn her off.

She might then pull away (e.g. stop responding to your texts), turning your doubts into reality.

So, stop driving yourself crazy by overanalyzing your exâs texts and just do what needs to be done to get her back.

Re-attract her on a phone call and then in person and from there, get to a hug, kiss, sex and a relationship.

Another mistake isâ|

3. Giving up if she doesn't seem keen to start a relationship again

Even when a woman has really missed her ex during the No Contact Period, chances are high that sheâs not going to make it obvious to him when he first contacts her again.

Instead, sheâs usually going to be neutral around him, or even offish and wait to see what her exâs next move is going to be (i.e. Is he going to re-spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love or is he going to continue turning her off in the same old ways as before?).

This is why you need to show her via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to her that youâre a new man now (e.g. more confident, more emotionally masculine, more assertive).

Then you need to interact with her and actively spark her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again, flirting with her to create sexual tension).

When you make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again, her guard comes down and she opens back up to you quickly and easily.

Another mistake isâ€¦!

4. Writing big, long texts about his feelings

Sometimes a guy wants to make it clear to his ex that even though he wasn't interacting with her for weeks or even months, he still has strong feelings for her.

So, he then sends her long texts saying things like, â€œAll this time I haven't been able to get you out of my mind or my heart. What we had together was special and I want to get that back.â€

Yet, rather than feel flattered that he values her so much, it almost always turns a woman off.

Why?

When a woman cannot see you in person and assess your non-verbal communication (e.g. your body language, tonality of your voice), she has to guess what you would be acting like if you said that type of thing to her in person.

If she currently doesn't have any feelings for you and instead sees you in a negative light and she then gets a long text where you are pouring your heart out to her in a soppy, romantic or sensitive way, she is going to imagine negative things about you.

For example: She's likely going to think!

- You were feeling insecure when you wrote it.
- You rewrote certain sections over and over again.
- You're too unsure of yourself to say that to her in person.
- You lack the confidence to call her or meet up with her.

She will then remain closed off, because in her mind she doesn't see any reason to give you another chance.

Another mistake isâ€¦!

5. Texting her to ask if she has changed her mind

If you ask your ex if she has changed her mind about being broken up via text, before you've actually re-attracted her on a phone call and in person, chances are high that she will answer you based on her current feelings for you (i.e. un-attracted, lacking in respect, no longer in love).

If she's a nice person (most women are), she might try to let you down easy by saying something like, â€œI really do care for you, but I'm not ready to be in a relationship right now. Let's just stay friends for now and who knows! maybe one day in the future we can try again.â€

However, in her mind she will know that she won't get back with you again until you're able to re-attract her in the ways that are important to her.

So, don't ask your ex if she's changed her mind.

Make her change her mind by re-sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you over the phone and most importantly, in person.

Only then will she want to give you another chance.

Another mistake isâ€¦!

6. Trying to discuss the relationship via text

Without re-attracting your ex first on a phone call or in person, discussing the relationship with her will be something she will want to avoid.

Then if you go one step further and try to do it via text, you will actually end up doing more harm than good.

Here's the thing!

When you keep bringing up the relationship and all your mistakes (without having reactivated her feelings for you again), it usually only highlights to your ex all the reasons why she broke up with you in the first place.

She then puts up her guard even more and refuses to get into it with you.

It then becomes a lot more difficult for you to convince her to meet up with you in person so that you can fully reactivate her feelings and get her back, because she's feeling closed off and defensive.

So, leave discussions about the relationship until after you've re-attracted her and then only when you're face-to-face with her.

Another mistake is!

7. Being too neutral, nice or cute via text and turning her off as a result

A guy might sometimes be too afraid to flirt with his ex via text, because he fears that she might get offended and then stop interacting with him.

As a result, he texts back and forth with her in a neutral, sweet, non-sexual way, in the hope that things will slowly evolve from there into a new relationship with her.

Yet, in most cases, when a guy is just being neutral with an ex, rather than feel drawn to him for being such a sweet gentleman and not pushing her for anything more, a woman begins to feel annoyed and starts thinking things like, "What does he want? What is the point of his texts? I just don't know what he's getting at. Does he want to be friends or does he want to get back with me? This is just such a waste of my time."

She may then start responding to him less and less until one day she ignores him altogether, leaving him wondering what he did wrong.

Here's the thing!

If you want to get your ex back after the No Contact Period, you need to make sure that all your interactions with her, whether via text, social media, on the phone or in person, are sparking her feelings of attraction for you.

That means you can't be nice, sweet or neutral.

Instead, you need to flirt with her and create some sexual tension between you and her.

The more attracted you make her feel in a way that feels good to her, the more she will want to see you in person to release these feelings with kissing, sex and a new relationship with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Dating an Ex After Years Apart

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways to make it work with her now:

1. Give her a new attraction experience

To get an ex back after years apart, you need to make sure that youâre not still stuck at the same level you were at back when you were first dating.

If you interact with her and she realizes that youâre still turning her off in the same ways that you did before, sheâs not going to want you back in her life.

To successfully get her back, you first need to understand her real, more subtle reasons for breaking up with you.

Then, when you interact with her again, you will be able to give her a new and improved attraction experience, which will naturally make her feel drawn to you again.

Start the process by figuring out what caused your break up with your ex all those years ago and make sure youâve changed those things about yourself (e.g. youâre more emotionally independent now, you are more confident and you believe in your attractiveness and value to her).

However, there are also more subtle things you might not be aware of that can cause a woman to feel turned off by a guy, so make sure youâve changed and improved in those areas too.

For example: Some of those things might beâ

- Heâs too nice all the time and he lets her get away with bad behavior so she doesnât respect him as a man.
- He struggles to make decisions without her approval or say-so.
- Heâs unsure of himself around her or in social situations.
- He treats her more like sheâs heâs nice, neutral friend than like an attractive, desirable woman that he feels sexually attracted to.
- Heâs only confident when things are familiar to him, but when faced with something unexpected, he becomes insecure and self-doubting.
- He lacks presence as a man (e.g. heâs reserved and self-conscious in social situations).
- Heâs too needy and clingy and always wants to spend time with her, because heâs too afraid to follow through and make progress on his big goals and dreams in life.

When you change in the ways that really matter to your ex and then you interact with her again, she wonât be able to stop herself from feeling a whole new surge of respect and sexual attraction for you.

It will feel like sheâs meeting you for the first time, rather than judging you based on the man you used to be before.

When that happens, her guard starts to slip down and the path to a new and happier relationship opens up before you.

However, make sure that youâ

2. Base the new relationship on love and laughter

One of the most important things to remember when dating an ex after years apart is not to put too much pressure on her (and yourself) to make the relationship work this time around.

Where many guys go wrong in a situation like yours, is they start thinking things like, â€œIâ€™m lucky to be getting another chance with her after all these years, so I canâ€™t afford to screw things up again.â€

As a result, a guy like that puts on his best behavior around his ex and starts saying things like, â€œI promise you that things will be different this time. Youâ€™ll see that Iâ€™ve changed after all the years apart and Iâ€™m going to be a much better boyfriend this time around so we never have to get to the point where we break up ever again.â€

Essentially, heâ€™s likely thinking that heâ€™s doing the right thing by reassuring her in that way.

Yet, rather than make a woman think, â€œThis is great! Itâ€™s so comforting to know that after all the years apart, we can now start a new relationship that will last forever!â€ his words will simply make her feel pressured into committing to a future with him.

However, although a woman might want that to happen in the long term, she usually doesnâ€™t want to be pressured into it right away before sheâ€™s had a chance to fully reconnect with her lost feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, if you really want things to work out with your ex, itâ€™s always best to avoid talking about a future together as a couple.

Instead, just focus on having fun and getting to know each other in a whole new and exciting way, so you make her fall in love with you all over again.

For example: Something you might say to her is, â€œHey, lets not talk about our old relationship, or where this is going. Instead, letâ€™s start over with a clean slate and just focus on hanging out and having fun together and see where things from there, without the pressure of being afraid weâ€™re going to repeat the mistakes from the past.â€

By saying something like that to your ex, not only does it take the pressure off, it also makes her see you in a more positive light (i.e. because youâ€™re being a confident, emotionally mature man).

She then naturally drops her guard and allows herself to open up to the new you, without always bringing up your past mistakes in her mind.

Then, when she sees for herself that you really have changed and are a better man now (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more emotionally mature, more emotionally masculine), she will naturally start to feel surges of respect and attraction for you in a way that feels good to her.

So, make sure that you relax and focus on making your ex laugh, smile and feel good to be around you.

The more you do that, the faster she will reconnect with her dormant feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

You can then build a long lasting relationship from there.

However, if she still seems a bit closed off, you need toâ€

3. Laugh at the silly mistakes you and her made before

For example: Imagine you're talking to your ex on the phone and she says something along the lines of, I don't know if we should get back together again. I still can't forget how you hurt me before.

Instinctively, you might want to defend yourself and say something like, Please don't bring that up. I know I was a jerk back then, but I promise you I've changed. Please give me another chance to prove it to you, but that's not going to show her the new confident, emotionally strong you.

Instead, it's going to put her in a position of dominance over you, because she now has the power to decide whether you and her will get back together again, which actually makes her lose respect for you as a man and causes her to feel turned off by you at a deep, instinctive level.

She will then likely pull away from you by saying something like, You know! I've been thinking about it and I don't think it's a good idea to start dating again after so many years apart. It didn't work then and I don't think it's going to work now.

So a better way to respond to your ex when she says something like that to you is to laugh and say, Yes, I was an idiot back then, wasn't I? I sometimes think back to the way I behaved and I can't believe that was me. No wonder you broke up with me then. I would have dumped me too! and have a laugh about it with her.

By laughing at yourself and your past mistakes, it shows your ex that you're no longer the same guy you were all those years ago.

Instead, you've grown up and matured as a man.

You've learned from your mistakes and have taken steps to become a better, man.

As a result, she naturally drops her guard and starts to relax, smile, laugh and feel good around you again.

When she does that, she then becomes open to letting go of what happened in the past and giving the relationship another chance.

Just make sure that you also!

4. Let her feel safe that you are now a much more mature and emotionally masculine man

Probably one of the most important things your ex is going to be looking out for now is whether you've grown up as a man since you and her split up.

So it's up to you to show her via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to her, that you have changed in the ways that are important to her.

For example:

- You're more emotionally independent, which means that you don't need her in your life to feel good about yourself. Yes, you want her, but you're still happy, satisfied and fulfilled with, or without her.
- You're less insecure and self-doubting now, which means you don't feel the need to cling to her, get jealous or control her anymore.

- You're more emotionally mature now, which means that you aren't running around being irresponsible and not having a clear plan for your future, and by association, her future with you.
- You're more emotionally masculine now, which means you no longer feel intimidated by her confident personality. You stand up to her in a dominant, yet loving way, and make her feel like a feminine, girly woman as a result.

When she experiences those kinds of changes in you, she naturally starts to think about her future with you.

She begins to see that she can now rely on you to create a relationship dynamic that will make her feelings for you grow over time and cause her to want to treat you well, be attentive, loving and affectionate.

As a result, her defenses come down and she begins to feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

From thereâ€¦|

5. Get to a kiss and then sex and blow her mind ,/h3>

The main thing to remember is that the fastest way to make your ex want to be in a relationship with you again after years apart, is to actively make her have strong feelings for you again.

When she's interacting with you and she's feeling a lot of respect and sexual attraction for the man that you are now, it becomes difficult for her to remain closed off and guarded.

So, don't waste time being on your best behavior around her and hoping that if you take things slow, she will warm up to you again and want to be your girl.

Instead, use every interaction to make her feel strong surges of respect and desire for you, so she's left thinking, â€œThis feels so good. I love being around him now.â€

Focus on building the sexual tension between you and her to the point where she can't stop herself from wanting you to release the pent up emotions inside of her with kissing and sex.

Then, when it feels like an appropriate time, give her a hug and then progress to kissing.

From there, hook up with her sexually, blow her mind, get her back for real and enjoy the great times ahead!

Where Guys Go Wrong When Dating an Ex After Years Apart

If you want things to work with your ex this time around, make sure you don't turn her off by saying and doing the types of things that will ruin her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

For example: Some mistakes to avoid areâ€¦|

1. Trying to make it all happen via text and then turning her off in the process

Texting is fine if you want to break the ice and get back into contact with your ex after years of being apart.

However, using text as your main way of trying to get her back simply won't work.

Why?

Essentially, because your ex hasn't seen you in a while, the way she will be thinking about you will be based on the guy you were all those years ago when you and her broke up.

So if, for example, back then you used to be a bit insecure and tended to get jealous every time she interacted with another guy, she's likely going to assume that you're still like that.

Alternatively, if you were a bit childish and irresponsible and enjoyed to party, drink too much and do silly things, she's probably going to have that picture of you in her mind.

So, if you only interact with her via text, she won't be able to see for herself that the things she remembers about you that turned her off before, are no longer there.

That is why, if you want things to go well with your ex, make sure that you're not trying to make it happen via text.

Instead, get on a phone call, or better still, get to an in person meet up right away.

When she can observe your assertive body language, hear the confidence in your voice and experience the man you have become for herself, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some surges of respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, her defenses come down and she wants to start dating again because she feels drawn to the man you are now.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Feeling unwelcome to reach out after so long apart

Sometimes a guy might say to himself, What if I call her and she rejects me? Even worse, what if I call her and she doesn't even remember me? Besides, it's been such a long time since we split up that I'm sure she will have moved on by now with some other guy.

As a result, he doesn't make a move to contact his ex and ends up missing out on the opportunity to get her back.

Yet, here's the thing

If you don't at least give it a shot to get your ex back, you may end up always wondering if you let the love of your life get away.

On the other hand, if you do contact her (i.e. by calling her on the phone and then meeting up with her in person), reactivate her feelings for you and get her back, you'll always be grateful to yourself that you had the courage to make a move.

So, don't let your doubts stand in the way of your happiness.

Go ahead and contact your ex and then reawaken her feelings for you so that you can get her back.

You can do it.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Not knowing that he can actively create a spark and make her fall in love with him

When a guy has been apart from his ex for years, he may develop insecurities and doubts about his ability to get her back.

This is especially true if he contacts her and she doesn't seem very interested in talking to him or seeing him in person again.

Yet, here's the thing!

Just because your ex doesn't have feelings for you right now, it doesn't mean she will feel the same way a week from now after you've reawakened her feelings of respect and sexual attraction.

All it takes is a small spark to light a fire.

In the same way, all it takes is one call or meet up to make your ex see you in a different light and make her want to give you another chance.

You can take control of the ex back process by interacting with her and re-sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, flirting with her to create sexual tension, making her feel good to be in your presence again).

Suddenly, she realizes that you really are different now and she really does feel differently about you as well.

It makes her curious and she feels intrigued about the man you have become after all these years apart and she wants to explore her new feelings for you, rather than cutting you off and then potentially regretting it later.

She's then more open to talking to you, hanging out with you and seeing where things go from there.

So, don't give up.

You really can change how she feels and get her back, if you want to.

Another mistake to avoid is!

4. Sending out feeler texts and hoping that she makes all the moves

Another way that guys go wrong is by sending a woman feeler texts to see if she'll respond with signs of interest.

For example: A guy might text his ex something like, "Hey, what have you been doing all this time? Are you in a new relationship now?" in the hope that she will respond by saying, "No, I'm not seeing anyone. To be honest, I've been thinking about you all this time and the only person I want to be in a relationship with is you."

Of course, a woman will almost never say that to a guy, especially if they've been apart for years. However, he doesn't see it that way and because his ex doesn't seem overly interested in a relationship, he loses confidence.

He doesn't realize that a relationship is the last step of the ex back process.

Here's the thing!

To get your ex to the point where she wants to be in a relationship with you, you first need to reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction.

Only when she's feeling drawn to you in ways that feel good to her will she be interested in getting back together again for real.

However, you will still have to be the one who makes it happen.

Don't expect her to make the moves, because in almost all ex back cases, the woman will wait to see if the guy is man enough to get her back.

If he's too insecure or unsure of himself and waits for her to make it easy for him, she will usually decide that he's not the right guy for her and close herself off to him once again.

Another mistake to avoid is

5. Waiting even longer and then losing her forever

Sometimes a guy sits around hoping things will work themselves out between him and his ex, without any interference from him.

So, instead of interacting with her and actively re-sparking her feelings for him, he just waits for the right moment (which never comes) to make a move.

He's then stunned to find out that his ex had truly moved on (e.g. she's engaged, getting married, having a baby) and he's lost his last chance with her.

So, don't let that happen to you.

Dating an ex after years apart is a golden opportunity that you cannot waste.

You now have the chance to get the woman you love back and experience a new and profound love with her.

So, get to a meet up with her as soon as possible where you can reactivate her feelings for you and begin your new adventure together.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

4 Examples of How to Stop Romanticizing Your Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 things you can do to stop romanticizing your ex, so you can regain control of your mind and then get her back:

1. Come up with a list of positives and negatives about her

After a break up, a guy will often find himself thinking of his ex and telling himself that heâs an idiot for losing her.

Rather than remember that she had her faults too and that she also made some mistakes in the relationship, he instead romanticizes her and ends up feeling like heâs lost the most wonderful, perfect woman in the world.

Yet, the truth is, no one is perfect and if you want to stop romanticizing your ex, you need to see that for yourself.

One of the ways to do that, is by making a list of positive and negatives about her, as a way of stopping yourself from idolizing her and seeing her as a real, flawed person like everyone else.

So, grab your smartphone, tablet, computer or a piece of paper (whatever works best for you) and start making that list.

If youâre not sure what to put on it, here are 15 examples of potential positives and negative traits that a woman might have, to get you started.

Note: Just make sure that you focus on the negatives, rather than clinging onto the positives.

Positives:

- She has a great sense of humor.
- Sheâs a great conversationalist.
- She gets on well with your friends and family.
- Sheâs a great cook.
- Sheâs sexy.
- She's pretty.
- She's one of a kind.
- She is good in bed.
- Sheâs adventurous.
- Sheâs loyal.

Negatives:

- She always wants things her way and if you stand up to her, she throws a tantrum to make you give in to her.
- Sheâs lazy.
- Sheâs not 100% honest.
- She likes to drink and party too much.
- Sheâs not supportive of your dreams and goals.
- She spends too much time on social media.

- She's jealous and controlling.
- She's often moody and unhappy for no reason.
- She doesn't enjoy sex, or doesn't make it enjoyable for you.

The more you can see for yourself that she's not perfect, the less time you will spend blaming yourself for everything that went wrong and help you realize that she isn't more valuable than you.

Of course, it's not about focusing on your ex's negative qualities and then deciding not to get her back.

Instead, it's about putting her and your relationship with her into perspective, where you made mistakes and she made mistakes too.

You can then go about re-attracting her and getting her back, because you and her are on the same level, rather than her being perfect and you being a jerk who isn't worthy of her.

Another example of how to stop romanticizing about your ex isâ€¦

2. Look for positive qualities in other women that your ex didn't have

If you spend a bit of time interacting with other women, you will most likely realize that there are many great women out there who are even better than your ex in some ways.

For example: Some women may be a lot more beautiful than your ex, kinder, more attentive, funnier, less self-involved.

The list can go on and on.

The important thing is for you to realize that your ex wasn't perfect and that she was as lucky to have you as her guy, as you were to have her as your girl.

When you put yourself on an equal footing with her (i.e. you believe that you are good enough for her, just like you believe she's good enough for you), you automatically stop romanticizing her.

You understand that you can get any woman you want, because there are many, even better women out there for you, however, you choose her.

You can then easily get her back, because you have the confidence needed to regain her respect and attraction for you and make her want you back too.

Another example of how to stop romanticizing about your ex isâ€¦

3. Interact with a pretty woman and make her feel attracted to you

This doesn't mean you should decide to move on with another woman and give up on the idea of getting your ex back.

Instead, when you prove to yourself that you can easily make another, equally or even more attractive woman than your ex feel attracted to you, you will automatically stop putting your ex on a pedestal and making her out to be perfect.

You will realize that there are plenty of hot women out there that you can have and it will erase any thoughts of, â€œMy ex is the only beautiful woman that gave me the time of day. If I don't get her back, I'm going to be stuck being alone, or dating unattractive women for the rest of my life, because no other quality woman will want me,â€ that you might have.

Remember: A woman wants to feel lucky to be with her man, not like she's doing him a favor by being his girlfriend because he can't attract other quality women like her.

So, if you want to stop romanticizing your ex and get her back, you must believe in yourself and in your attractiveness to her, as well as to other women.

If you don't value yourself and believe that you are good enough for her, not only will getting her back become a lot more difficult for you, you will also stay stuck idolizing her and feeling like she's too perfect for a man like you.

Another example of how to stop romanticizing about your ex is

4. Browse through photos of your ex when she wasn't looking her best

This is a good way to remind yourself that she's not perfect.

Yes, she's attractive, but there are definitely times when her hair is a mess, she has pimples on her face, or dark rings under her eyes.

Essentially, she's human and because of that, she's not too good for you.

If you continue to romanticize your ex and put her above you in terms of value, you will inevitably end up feeling unworthy of her.

Then, when you interact with her, it will come across in your body language and vibe and it will turn her off you even more.

Here's the thing

Women are naturally attracted to men who are confident in themselves and their value to a woman, so if you want to re-attract your ex and get her back, make sure that you feel completely worthy of her.

Don't doubt yourself in any way.

That's how you need to be thinking, rather than telling yourself things like, She was the most perfect woman in the world. No other woman can compare to her. I was so lucky to have her. What am I going to do now that she's gone? I can't live without her.

Common Problems That Guys Experience When Romanticizing Their Ex

If you want to stop romanticizing your ex and get her back, you have to make sure that from this point onwards you have the mindset of a guy who says and does all the right things when interacting with her.

The more emotionally attractive you become around your ex (e.g. confident, self-assured, emotionally independent), the more her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you will reawaken. However, if you make any of the following mistakes that some guys make, you will disrupt your chances of getting her back.

1. Hoping that time will make him stop romanticizing

For many guys, the romanticizing goes on for years or decades.

Some men get married to a new woman and still secretly miss their ex girlfriend.

In some cases, a guy might even compare his wife (or any other woman he dates) to his ex girlfriend and always feel that he somehow settled for her and that sheâs not as perfect for him as his ex was.

He then becomes emotionally distant and detached in his relationship with his wife/new woman, which inevitably leads to problems (i.e. divorce or a break up).

The truth is, time isn't the answer.

If you want to stop romanticizing your ex, you need to take action.

That means, you first have to admit to yourself that your ex wasnât perfect.

Yes, she may have been an amazing woman, but she also had some flaws and problems of her own.

Then, you need to reaffirm to yourself that no matter how great your ex was, you were equally worthy of her.

She wasnât better than you.

In fact, she was lucky to have you.

Then, once you get to the point where you absolutely believe that you are good enough for her, you need to interact with her (on the phone and in person) and actively re-spark her feelings for you and get her back.

Donât doubt yourself in any way.

Another mistake that guys make in a situation like this isâ!

2. Never trying to reach out to his ex and guide her through the ex back process

Sometimes, a guy will just sit around feeling sad and lost without his ex and thinking things like, *âShe was my soulmate and no other woman will ever be able to take her place in my heart and in my life. I will never be able to get over her and move on. Itâs just the way things are for me now.*â

A guy like that might even secretly believe that his love for his ex is like the love Romeo felt for Juliet and that itâs romantic to feel that way about her and not be able to stop romanticizing her.

The problem though, is that when a guy thinks like that, he doesnât actually do anything to actively reactivate his exâs feelings for him and get her back.

Instead, he just spends all this time idolizing her (e.g. by reminiscing about the good times they had together, looking at photos of her and feeling emotional over them, talking about her constantly to his friends and family).

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

If you donât ever try to get your ex back, you will likely end up building a special place for her in your mind where youâre always seeing her as being perfect for you and where no other woman can ever live up to that perfection.

You will also probably lose her to another man who comes along and makes her feel attracted in the ways that are important to her.

So, if you want to get your ex back, you need to accept that romanticizing her isnât going to make that happen.

What will, is you taking action to quickly change and improve some of the things that turned her off about you and then interact with her and make her feel strong surges of respect and attraction for the new you.

Once your ex realizes that you're a new man and that if she lets you get away, she could be missing out on the greatest love of her life, she will naturally drop her guard and open up to being your girl again.

So, don't be afraid to take a chance.

It's up to you to make it happen. Why not right now?

Another mistake that guys make in a situation like this is

3. Giving up if she doesn't immediately seem excited when he contacts her

It would be nice if a woman made it easy for her ex to get her back, but the truth is, most women won't.

Even in cases where a woman still has some feelings for her ex and actually does want him back, she often doesn't seem very excited to hear from him when he contacts her after the break up.

So, in cases where a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, she's usually going to be cold, aloof and closed off towards her ex when he reaches out to her.

Why?

A woman will first wait to see if her ex really has changed and improved and become the man she wants him to be (e.g. more confident, more emotionally independent, less emotionally sensitive, more emotionally masculine).

This is why she will usually make it seem that she isn't happy to hear from him and that she's really not interested in giving him another chance.

If he then gives up and walks away, she will know that she made the right decision by breaking up with him.

However, if he remains confident and then uses humor to break down her defenses and make her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with him again, she will naturally drop her guard and open back up to giving him another chance with her.

So, if you want your ex back, don't give up just because she's not falling back into your arms just yet.

Instead, just continue using interactions to spark her feelings for you and before you realize it, she will be in your arms and liking it.

Another mistake that guys make in a situation like this is

4. Not realizing that the real way to get a woman back is to re-attract her on the phone or in person

Some guys think that the way to get an ex back is to try and charm her back by sending her flowers or gifts.

Other guys think that being a really nice guy to her and helping her out with errands, or even financially, will convince her that he's the one for her.

Yet, here's the thing!

The main thing that works in getting an ex back, is changing her feelings from negative to positive again (i.e. she stops feeling angry, resentful, turned off and she begins feeling attracted, respectful and in love).

Everything else is just a waste of time in almost every ex back case.

If a guy wants his woman back, he's got to meet up with her and make it happen.

As long as he is prepared to re-attract her, it's usually an easy, fun and enjoyable process for both the man and the woman to get back together.

So, what are you waiting for?

Stop sitting around romanticizing your ex and take action to get her back.

That's what you really want, so make it happen.

She's waiting for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 Examples of How to Respond to an Ex After No Contact

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's how you should do it if you want her back:

1. Use humor to make her feel attracted

It has been said that laughter is the best medicine.

So, when it comes to responding to an ex after No Contact, using a bit of humor is a great way to break the ice and take the bite off any negative feelings she may be holding onto about you.

This is why, if you want your ex to open back up to you and want to talk to you on the phone and see you in person, you need to focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good when she is texting with you.

She can then begin to think something like, "This is interesting. He seems so different now. I'm actually laughing and enjoying interacting with him. I even feel excited when I see that I have a message from him on my phone. Maybe I should talk to him on the phone or in person to see how I feel."

She then becomes more open to the idea of talking to you on the phone and seeing you in person, giving you the opportunity to properly re-attract her, by allowing her to experience the new and improved man that you've become and get her back

Another example of how to respond to an ex after no contact is

2. Play a little hard to get to make her pay attention and focus on your texts

This is not about being a jerk and treating your ex badly (e.g. ignoring her texts, being mean to her, trying to make her feel bad for breaking up with you).

Instead, it's about not being overly available to her every time she texts you.

So, even if you're excited to be hearing from your ex after No Contact, don't make the classic mistake of instantly replying to every text within seconds or minutes.

Instead, take your time and get back to her a little while later.

This will actually pique her interest and make her eager to get your reply.

She may then begin wondering what you're up to and imagine that you might be hanging out with friends, a new girl or doing something so interesting that you don't have time to reply to her.

She then starts to think about you in a positive way and begins to miss you.

However, be warned!

Don't delay your texts for too long, because if she senses that you're messing with her, she will clam up and then she will be the one playing hard to get with you.

Another example of how to respond to an ex after no contact is

3. Text for a little bit, but then get her on a phone call with you

Although it's perfectly fine to text with an ex for a short time, if your goal is to get her back, you have to proceed to a phone call and then to a meet up for it to happen.

The fact is, it's very difficult to reawaken a woman's sexual and romantic feelings for you without actually talking to her (preferably face-to-face), where she can hear the tonality of your voice and see your confidence coming through via your body language.

This is why you can't wait too long to get her on a call.

If you don't, she will most likely get bored with texting you back and forth and she will then focus on moving on.

Then, if some other guy comes along and makes her feel attracted, she will hook up with him instead.

8 Ways That Guys Go Wrong When Responding to an Ex After No Contact

Although in some cases using No Contact on a woman makes her miss her ex and she may then reach out to him to say "Hello" and to find out why he's been ignoring her, it doesn't guarantee that she will get back with him.

If the guy can re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for him, she will drop her guard and open back up to him to see where things go from there.

However, if he responds in ways that turn her off, rather than give him another chance, she will usually think something along the lines of, "Contacting him was a mistake. I thought it was possible for us to work things out, but I see now that he's not the man for me."

She then cuts him out of her life completely (e.g. she blocks his number on her phone, unfriends him on social media) and focuses on quickly getting over him and moving on.

So, if you don't want that to happen to you, you need to make sure that when you respond to your ex after No Contact, you don't make any of the following mistakes:

1. Asking her for a meet up via text

If a woman breaks No Contact by texting her ex, it's only natural that he will respond back to her in the same way.

Yet, what often happens is that the guy gets so caught up in a back and forth conversation with his ex, that he eventually texts her something along the lines of, "Hey, why don't we get together sometime?"

Essentially, he's hoping that she will say, "Yes" and they can then meet up and get back together from there.

However, even though a woman might feel comfortable initiating contact with her ex via text, for her to want to see him again in person, she will usually to see some proof that he's at least changed and improved some of the things that turned her off before.

She can't really get that proof via text though, because it's just a bunch of words on a little screen.

She knows that her ex could be saying one thing and feeling another, so in most cases, a woman will naturally be suspicious of anything her ex texts her.

Then, rather than giving him the benefit of the doubt and assuming that he is feeling relaxed, confident and self-assured when he sent her a text to ask her to meet up, she might just continue thinking about him based on how she felt when him and her broke up (i.e. in a negative way).

Then, rather than saying, "Okay, sure. Let's get together," she may think something like this instead, "He texted me? That's it? I can't believe he doesn't even have the balls to call me to ask me for a meet up after all this time apart. It's like I don't even matter to him that much. It makes me wonder whether he's changed at all and what his motives are for asking me to meet up via text. Either he's lost interest in me and is only asking me to meet up so that he can rub my face in his new life, or he's actually not feeling very confident about himself so he's hiding behind text messages. Whatever his reasons though, neither option is very appealing to me. I think I'm better off just forgetting all about him and moving on with my life."

So, if your intention is to get your ex back, you've got to do what works.

If you just text her, it's so much easier for misunderstandings to happen.

Then, getting her back becomes a lot more difficult because she's closed off.

This is why, if you want to ask your ex to meet up, it's much better done on a phone call.

When she can hear the confidence in your voice (especially if she's being offish towards you), her walls will come down and she will want to meet up with you in person to see the new you for herself.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Asking her if she's changed her mind

As tempting as it might be to want to ask your ex if she's changed her mind about being broken up as soon as you hear from her, it's probably only going to put her on guard and possibly even make her regret her decision to contact you. Why?

In most cases, a woman only contacts her ex when she's using No Contact out of curiosity to see why he's ignoring her.

However, that doesn't mean she has feelings for him and wants him back.

So, if he asks her if she's changed her mind, without first actively re-sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for him, she's usually going to pull away and say, "No."

Even in cases where a woman does still have feelings for her ex and has missed him, she usually won't say that she's changed her mind right away, because she won't want to come across as being too easy.

So, if you want to make your ex change her mind naturally and easily, the best way to go about it is by sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you over the phone and during face-to-face interactions and showing her that you really are a different man now.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Bragging about his new life without her via text

Sometimes a guy might try to make his ex want him, by bragging to her about how great his life has been since they split up.

For example: If his ex asks, "So, how have you been?" he might respond with something like, â€œHaving a wonderful time these days. So many things to do and so little time. Life is so good since we broke up.â€

Essentially, heâ€™s hoping that she will feel a bit jealous and start thinking things like, â€œOh no! Heâ€™s moving on without me! What have I done? I canâ€™t believe I let a catch like him go. I need to take action right away to get him back, before I lose him to another woman.â€

Yet, in most cases, when a guy is bragging about how wonderful his life is without his ex, itâ€™s usually because the opposite is true and in reality heâ€™s actually feeling depressed and miserable without her.

Remember: A woman can easily find out if a guy is really happy without her, or if heâ€™s only putting on an act.

All she has to do is wish him good luck and say sheâ€™s going to move on too and he will usually start chasing after her.

So, donâ€™t brag about your life to your ex via text, even if you are really having a great time.

Instead, meet up with her in person and let her see for herself that youâ€™re a confident, emotionally independent man now, but that you still care about her and want her back.

She will then feel drawn to you in a way that feels good to her and she will then want to be a part of your great life too.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

4. Trying to discuss the relationship via text

One of the biggest mistakes that guys make after No Contact is to quickly try and get their ex back as soon as they start interacting with her.

So, what often happens is that the woman hasnâ€™t heard from her ex for a while, so she sends him a feeler text to see why heâ€™s not talking to her.

He then responds with something along the lines of, â€œItâ€™s so good to hear from you! I just want you to know that Iâ€™m really sorry about everything that happened between us. I know that I stuffed up but I really have changed and I want to work things out between us. I promise things will be different this time.â€

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

When a guy tries to discuss the relationship via text, it usually only makes his ex relive all the negative emotions that she experienced at the time (e.g. anger, frustration, disappointment).

Not only that, she also feels annoyed that heâ€™s talking about getting back together again after heâ€™s just been ignoring her for a few weeks or months.

As a result, she becomes defensive and closes herself off from him.

Suddenly, when she responds to him she sounds offish and in some cases, she may even take longer and longer to reply until she finally stops texting him altogether.

So, regardless of whether you want to apologize to your ex for what happened between you and her, make sure that when you text her, you avoid discussing the relationship, or the possibility of having a relationship, with her.

Instead, put all that behind you and focus instead on rebuilding her feelings of respect and attraction for the man that you are now.

When she begins to associate you with more positive emotions (e.g. respect, attraction, excitement), sheâll naturally want to interact with you more and more.

Then, when you apologize to her and talk about the relationship, it wonât seem out of place and like youâre pushing her into something she doesnât want.

So, focus on making her feel respect and attraction for the new you, rather than reminding her of the old you and the ex back process will become so much smoother and easier.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ!

5. Putting way too much effort into his messages

Sometimes a guy spends hours thinking about how to respond to his ex.

In his mind he may be thinking, âThis is the only chance I have with her. That is why, how I respond to her is vital, because if I say the wrong thing, she might get turned off and decide to stop interacting with me.â

As a result, he puts way too much effort in his messages and comes across as being too tense, emotional, formal or like heâs just sitting around waiting to hear from her.

She then begins to wonder, âWhy does he sound so weird? What is wrong with him? Maybe contacting him was a mistake. Heâs just too serious all of a sudden. I just canât relax and enjoy my interactions with him anymore. I think we no longer have anything in common.â

She then begins to pull away from him, because heâs just not making her feel the way she wants to feel when interacting with him.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ!

6. Playing too hard to get

In some cases a guy will use No Contact as a way of making his ex miss him and come running back.

Yet, when she initiates contact by sending him a text message, rather than respond to her, make her feel some sparks of attraction and then proceed to a call and a meet up so that he can get her back, he instead decides to play hard to get (e.g. takes really long to respond to her text messages, doesnât call her on the phone, pretends to be busy if she suggests a catch up).

He might say to himself, âNo Contact worked perfectly. I just have to make sure that I continue to play it cool, so that she will chase after me and desperately want me back. Then getting her back will be easy.â

However, that approach almost always backfires and he completely misses out on the opportunity to meet up with her, reactivate her feelings and get her back.

Hereâs the thingâ!

When a woman opens herself up to her ex again, sheâs basically giving him a chance to show her that heâs really changed and improved and become a better man than he was before they broke up.

This is why, if he suddenly begins to play hard to get, she might think, âIf he thinks that he can mess me around just because I contacted him, he can think again. Iâm not putting up with his childish behavior. Heâ€™s just blown any chance he might have had with me.â€™

She may then stop responding to him when he does contact her, leaving him feeling confused and wondering what he did wrong.

So, if you truly want to get your ex back and have a happy, loving relationship with her, donâ€™t waste time playing games.

Instead, focus on re-sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you on a phone call or in person.

When you approach the ex back process in that way, things tend to flow more smoothly, because she is feeling open to you and attracted to you.

However, if you mess her around, you will probably be the one who loses out in the end.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

7. Being afraid to get on a phone call and get her back for real

Sometimes a guy will be so happy to be interacting with his ex after No Contact, that he will spend weeks and maybe even months texting back and forth with her.

Yet, what he doesnâ€™t realize is that just because a woman is texting him and possibly even being nice and sweet towards him, it doesnâ€™t mean she isnâ€™t busy moving on and hooking up with and dating other guys.

So, if you want to get back into a relationship with your ex, you canâ€™t stick to texting and expect that to happen.

Remember: As the man, itâ€™s up to you to initiate the ex back process.

Donâ€™t be afraid to call your ex on the phone, so you can then begin to re-attract her and make her want you back.

If you donâ€™t, you may be shocked when one day she sends you a message saying something like, â€™Hey, Iâ€™ve got some great news I want to share with you. Iâ€™m in love with someone and Iâ€™m really happy. I wanted you to be one of the first to know, because youâ€™re such a good friend to me now.â€™

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

If you want her back, you have to be bold and take the actions required to get her back for real.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

8. Failing her confidence tests

Quite often, a guy will end up turning his ex off after using No Contact to get her back, by failing her confidence tests.

For example:

- She plays hard to get and instead of laughing it off, he becomes insecure.
- She pretends to be angry about something and instead of standing up to her in an assertive yet loving way, he apologizes over and over.
- She doesn't seem very interested in something he says and instead of turning it around by making her laugh and smile, he overreacts by trying to be super funny, giggly or cute to hopefully get a reaction out of her.

She then realizes that heâs just not man enough for her, so she closes herself off from him and focuses on fully getting over him and moving on.

So, if you want to get your ex back, itâs very important that you maintain your confidence with her.

Remember: Women are naturally attracted to confidence in a man, so if you can pass her tests, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you, even if she doesnât initially admit it.

When that happens, she will then drop her guard and open herself up fully to reconciling with you and getting back together.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Wants Me Back Now That I've Moved On Without Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why:

1. She is impressed that you were able to attract a quality woman and now believes in your value

What many guys don't realize is that a woman wants to feel lucky to be with her man, not like she's doing him a favor by being his girl because he can't attract other quality women like her.

She wants to feel that everyone who knows her guy (e.g. friends, family, acquaintances) is envious of her and thinking things like, "She's so lucky to have a guy like that. I wish my man was more like him."

So, when she sees that the guy she broke up with is now in a new relationship with another quality woman, she begins to see him with different eyes.

All of a sudden he seems more valuable to her and she begins to want him back.

In the same way, once your ex saw you with another woman, she may have come to realize that she made a mistake in letting you go.

She now sees that you're the kind of man that other (attractive) women feel drawn to, so you can't be as bad as she made you out to be (i.e. you're more confident, emotionally masculine, charming than she perceived you to be at the end of your relationship together).

As a result, her defenses come down and she begins to want to be your girl again.

The great thing is that you are in control of the situation, not her.

What she wants is irrelevant.

So, if you want her back, you can easily get her back by reactivating her feelings for you during 1 or 2 interactions and then getting her back into a relationship with you.

Alternatively, if you decide that you prefer your new woman, you can close yourself off from your ex and continue building your new relationship.

The choice is yours.

Another possible reason why your ex wants you back now that you've moved on without her is

2. She notices the changes in you and now finds you more attractive

When a woman breaks up with a guy it's usually because certain aspects of his thinking and behavior are turning her off (e.g. he's too emotionally needy and clingy, he seems to be drifting through his life without a purpose or direction, he treats her like a neutral friend so she doesn't feel feminine or girly when she's with him).

When that happens, a guy might get quite a shock and begin to question why he got dumped by the woman he loves.

He may then see that he made some mistakes in the relationship with her, so he quickly takes action to change and improve and become a better man than he was before.

Of course when that happens, he automatically becomes more emotionally attractive and he easily finds himself a new woman.

In the meantime, if he interacts with his ex (e.g. he talks to her over the phone, catches up with her in person) and she sees that he's changed in the ways that are important to her, she can't stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for him again.

She may then say something like, "I know you're with someone else now, but I want you back. I think you and I are right for each other and that we could make it work if we tried one more time."

That may be confusing for a guy and he may wonder what kind of game his ex is playing, but what he might not realize is that it's all because of him.

He's a better man now and that is attractive to his ex.

So, if your ex has had the chance to interact with you and has seen for herself that you truly have changed and improved in some of the ways that actually matter to her, it's only natural that she will want to get back with you.

You are now the kind of man she always wanted you to be, so being broken up with you feels wrong to her and therefore she wants you back.

Another possible reason why your ex wants you back now that you've moved on without her is!

3. She hasn't been able to move on with a suitable replacement guy, so she wants to drag you back into a relationship and dump you again later when she's ready

There are some women in the world who are selfish, self-absorbed and want everything to go their way.

So, when a woman like that breaks up with a guy, she will usually be looking to find herself a replacement man as quickly as possible to make herself feel better.

However, when that doesn't happen right away and she also notices that her 'useless' ex is actually the one who has already replaced her, it might annoy her.

As a result, she may decide to try and seduce her ex back into a relationship with her, so she can feel good about herself (i.e. that she's attractive enough to steal him from another woman).

At the same time, she will secretly continue to look for a replacement guy.

Then, when she does find a new man, she can dump her ex again knowing that she is the powerful one, because she was able to manipulate him to her advantage.

So, if you suspect that these might be your ex's motives, then it's very important that you don't get fooled by her, because she's not worth it.

You deserve much better than a nasty, manipulative woman and if you've already found a better girlfriend, you need to stick with her and grow the relationship with her, rather than get tricked into dumping her by your selfish ex.

Another possible reason why your ex wants you back now that you've moved on without her is!

4. She realizes that you are the one for her, so you are worth fighting for

Sometimes, all it takes for a woman to realize that her ex was truly the one for her, is for her to suddenly be faced with the idea of losing him to another woman.

For example: Imagine that a woman breaks up with a guy because there are certain things about him that turn her off (e.g. he has a tendency to quickly give in to the will of others, he's not assertive enough, he's a bit jealous and controlling).

However, she may still have some feelings for him and somewhere at the back of her mind she might be thinking things like, â€œMaybe we just need some time apart to let things settle down between us and then see if we can sort things out and get back together again,â€ even though she doesn't openly admit that (even to herself).

So, when she suddenly sees that her ex is moving on and that she may lose him forever, her instincts kick in and she starts thinking things like, â€œI never realized it before, but even though we had our problems, I really do love him. I believe in my heart of hearts that he's the one for me and if I don't act right away to get him back, I'm going to end up regretting it for the rest of my life.â€

She may then reach out to her ex and try to get him back before it's too late.

Another possible reason why your ex wants you back now that you've moved on without her is!

5. She was waiting for you to stop being so emotionally dependent on her and now that you aren't, she wants you back

Although a woman definitely does want to be loved and appreciated by her man, in most cases, she doesn't want to be his main reason for living or his primary source of happiness.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't know that, so they often make the mistake of giving up everything else in their life (e.g. hobbies, interests, personal goals and dreams, friends), just to spend all their time with their woman.

In his mind, a guy like that thinks he's being a loving and devoted boyfriend and that his woman will be amazed by his dedication and in return, be loyal to him too.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that when a man makes his woman his reason for living, he will eventually become emotionally dependent on her for his well being.

As a result, if she's not being overly loving or giving him all of her attention all of the time, he begins to feel insecure and like he's losing her.

He then becomes extra clingy and needy, which actually causes his woman to feel smothered by him. She then naturally begins to lose respect for him as a man and she starts to close herself off from him. This makes him feel even more insecure and so he becomes even more clingy, until she gets fed up and breaks up with him.

Here's the thing!

A woman wants to be with a man who is happy, confident and forward moving in his life with or without her.

If he can't cope on his own without her, she will quickly lose respect and attraction for him as a man and begin looking for a real man to take his place.

However, if after they break up he finds his own identity and becomes an emotionally strong and independent man, she will naturally start to feel attracted to him again.

She may then try to get him back, even though he has already moved on, because he is now the man she always wanted him to be.

3 Mistakes That Guys Make With an Ex Who Wants Him Back After He Moved On Without Her

If you've moved on without your ex and are happy, then that's great and it shouldn't even bother you that she wants you back now.

However, if you still have feelings for her and want her back, make sure you don't make the following mistakes:

1. Knowing that she could be the one for you, but being afraid to try again in case it ends in a break up

It's probably true to say that in life there are no guarantees.

This is why, if you decide to give your relationship with your ex another chance, it's possible that it might fail again.

However, it's also possible that you and her might end up staying together for life, because that's when you feel the best, most fulfilled, most loved and happiest.

The question you need to ask yourself is this!

If in your heart you truly believe that your ex is the woman for you, do you really want to let her go, simply because you don't have a guarantee that you and her won't break up again?

There's a saying that goes something like, â€œNothing ventured, nothing gained.â€

In other words, if you feel your ex is your ideal woman and you don't try to get back with her, you may end up regretting it for the rest of your life.

You might then end up comparing every new woman that comes into your life to her and always thinking things like, â€œShe's nice, but she's just not â€œthe one.â€ I wish I had had the balls to get my ex back when I had a chance, but now it's too late. She's moved on and is happy with another guy and I've lost her forever.â€

Don't let that happen to you.

Be emotionally courageous enough to take the lead in the ex back process and get her back.

That's how a real man does it.

You can do it.

Another mistake to avoid is!

2. Playing too hard to get

Sometimes a guy might think to himself, â€œShe's the one who was stubborn and didn't want to get back together again, but now that I've moved on she's all over me again. Well,

Iâ€™m not going to fall for her charms so easily. Iâ€™m going to make her chase me, before I give her another chance.

He might then ignore her texts, or refuse to meet up with her again and again.

Basically, heâ€™s hoping that being unavailable, she will wonder, â€˜What is he up to? What isnâ€™t he telling me?â€™ and then want him even more.

However, it rarely (if ever) turns out that way.

Instead, she either feels turned off by his unnecessary arrogance, or she fears being rejected and hurt if she continues to pursue him, so she gives up and moves on.

So, if you decide that you want your ex back, then go ahead and make it happen, rather than waste time playing mind games with her and end up pushing her away for good.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Not understanding that many couples last for life when they get back together after a break up, where the man has improved

In some cases, a guy might think to himself, â€˜If it didnâ€™t work out between me and my ex before, it probably wonâ€™t work out this time either.â€™

A guy like that doesnâ€™t realize that, as long as he can make his woman feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him based on the changes heâ€™s made to himself during the break up, he can easily guide the both of them into long-lasting feelings of love and passion.

The truth is, falling back in love with each other after a break up is one of the most amazing feelings a couple can experience in life.

Thereâ€™s just something special about being able to fix things up and be happier, more mature, more in love and more connected to each other than ever before.

Itâ€™s a really awesome thing to experience and literally millions of couples do it every year.

People break up and get back together all the time.

You can be one of the men who successfully guides his woman back into a relationship.

You are new man now and your ex is a new woman.

As a result, itâ€™s only natural that you and her will experience a whole new relationship with each other based on the people you have become.

So, donâ€™t be afraid to make it happen.

She wants you, so go get her!

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

What Can I Text My Ex to Make Her Miss Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 examples of what you can text her to make her miss you:

1. Text her something that makes her smile and laugh

One of the most effective ways to make an ex woman miss you via text is to make her smile and laugh and feel good to be hearing from you.

When she is smiling and laughing and thinking about you in a more positive light, she naturally starts to miss the fun times you and her shared together.

If you're not sure what to text to make her smile and laugh, here's an example to give you an idea:

If you and your ex had a special coffee shop or restaurant you used to like to hang out at, you might text her something along the lines of, Hey, I was at (insert the name of your special place) yesterday and I thought about you and how you always used to get a spaghetti sauce/cappuccino foam mustache every time we went there together. You're the only girl I know who could rock a mustache like that! Lol! So, anyway how are you?

She will most likely laugh and smile when she reads that and start thinking about the good times you and her shared at that special place.

Another example is if you text something like, Hey, I just wanted to let you know that I cooked your famous lasagna/scrambled eggs/curry last night.

She might then reply with something along the lines of, Oh, and how did it turn out?

You can then respond with, Oh, it was okay, but I couldn't get that burnt flavor the way you used to. Lol!

At that point, she's probably going to be amused because she initially thought you were complimenting her on her cooking.

As she smiles and has a little laugh, she will then begin to think of you in a more positive way.

She may then begin thinking things like, This is what I miss about him the most. He always had a knack for making me smile and laugh. Even when I was angry with him, he could somehow get a smile out of me and although we're no longer together, he can still do it. It makes me sad to think that we're broken up.

She then naturally drops her guard and becomes more open to talking to you over the phone and seeing you in person, giving you the opportunity to reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another example of what you can text your ex to make her miss you is

2. Text her to wish her a happy birthday or for some other occasion

Texting an ex to wish her a happy birthday, or to congratulate her for something, is a great way to make her miss you.

Not only does it open the lines of communication between you and her, it also reminds her of all the special birthdays and other events you and her shared together in the past.

As a result, she begins to miss you and the way you used to spoil her.

However, make sure you don't send her a soppy, overly emotional message like, â€œHappy birthday/Congratulations. I hope you have a great day even though I can't be there to share it with you, you deserve the best and I hope your friends will be spoiling you,â€œ because that will likely turn her off and make her think things like, â€œDamn right, I'm going to have a great day and be spoiled by the people who love me, rather than be stuck in a bad relationship with you!â€œ

Instead, keep your message light and use it as an opportunity to spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you and open her up to talking over the phone and seeing you in person.

For example: Something you might text is, â€œHappy birthday/Congratulations to my sexy ex girlfriend!â€œ

She may then respond with something like, â€œThanks,â€œ and you can then text, â€œI hope you're going to save a piece of cake for me. You can post it to me, or better yet, deliver it in person so I can give you your special birthday/congratulatory kiss.â€œ

She will then probably smile and begin to miss you and want to see you again.

From there, all you need to do is get her on a phone call or to a meet up with you, so that you can re-spark her feelings for you and guide her back into a relationship again.

Another example of what you can text your ex to make her miss you isâ€œ|

3. Text her to say hi and have a text conversation with her, but don't try to get her back

Another way to make your ex miss you is to start interacting with her again via text, without putting any pressure on her to get back together again.

In most cases, when a woman gets a text from her ex to say â€œhiâ€œ, her first thought will usually be something along the lines of, â€œHere we go! I was wondering how long it would take him before he tried to get me to change my mind and give him another chance.â€œ

She then automatically puts up her guard and remains very guarded during her interactions with you.

So, to avoid that from happening, it's very important that you don't even mention getting back together again.

Instead, just keep the text conversation between you and her light and simply focus on making her smile and keeping her interested and curious about what you've been up to since the break up.

For example: You can text her about some of the interesting things you've been doing since you and her spilt up (e.g. you've joined a meet up group in your area, started a new hobby, visited some fascinating places) and then ask her about what she's been doing too.

Of course, don't make it sound like you're reporting to her in the hope that she will give you a pat on the back and say, â€œGood boy. You sound so amazing now. Let's get back together again.â€œ

The impression you want to give her is that you're happy and fulfilled in your life with or without her.

Yes, you want her back, but you're not sitting around moping about it.

That is attractive to her.

Then, when you also don't push her for a relationship, she naturally drops her guard and starts thinking things like, "I don't know what's gotten into me all of a sudden but I miss him so much. Our texting conversation has highlighted to me that he's so different now. He's so much more confident, self-assured and emotionally independent now. I actually enjoy interacting with him. I wonder if maybe we can work things out after all."

She then wants to talk to you over the phone and see you in person to see how she feels.

Important: Once you've made her miss you and sparked some of her feelings for you via text, you have to get her to a meet up, so that you can fully reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you and get her back.

On the other hand, even though she initially seemed keen to interact with you, if you stick to texting back and forth for too long, she will eventually become bored and she may then stop replying to you altogether.

Another example of what you can text your ex to make her miss you is:

4. Text her a simple, "Miss you" text

Sending a "Miss you" text works quite well in cases where your ex is already missing you and thinking about you.

She will then be happy to receive that text, because if she was worried that you weren't interested anymore, she will now feel more confident to text with you, get on a call and meet up with you.

This type of text also works well if you've been interacting with your ex and have been sparking some of her feelings for you.

Then, when you text, "Miss you," she will likely be happy to hear that and she may then reply with something along the lines of, "Miss you too."

You can then meet up with her and fully reactivate her feelings of love, respect and attraction for you and get her back, because she wants that too.

Of course, if she isn't missing you, then you have to focus on reactivating her feelings for you first, so that she does begin to miss you when you're not interacting with her.

When that happens, getting her back becomes a lot easier, because she is naturally more open to talking to you and being around you.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Texting an Ex

As you can see, there are many ways you can text your ex to make her miss you.

However, there are also ways you can text that will turn her off even more and make her not even want to respond to you.

3 of those ways are:

1. Texting her about how good your life is now, even though she doesn't care

Sometimes, a guy might text his ex something along the lines of, "Being broken up is actually pretty great. I've been having a wonderful time without you. Remember how you always used to hate going clubbing? Well now I'm out almost every night at a different club. It's amazing!"

Hope youâre having fun too.

Essentially heâs hoping that she will think something like, âOh no! Heâs having such a great life without me! It makes me miss him so much. Maybe I should call him and see if we can work things out.

Yet, if a woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy and heâs done nothing to re-spark those feelings in her, getting a text like that from him is not really going to impress her that much.

Instead, she will likely just do something like roll her eyes and think, âWhy is he telling me this? Does he think I care what heâs doing or that Iâm going to be jealous if heâs having fun? Well, Iâm not. I donât care about him anymore, so he can even go jump in a lake and it wouldnât matter to me.

So, donât bother telling your ex how happy you are without her if you havenât reactivated her feelings for you first.

Then, when you interact with her and she sees that you are getting on with your life and have truly been improving yourself as a man (e.g. via the things that you talk about and do), she will begin to feel drawn to you in a positive way.

She will see that you are now at a completely different level as a man, than you were when she broke up with you and she will start to miss you and want to be around you more, because she can see that youâre not that guy anymore.

Another way not to text your ex if you donât want to turn her off isâ

2. Trying to get her back via text

If a man sends his ex woman a text and she then responds to him and possibly even says that she misses him, itâs only normal for him to feel relieved and happy about it.

As a result, he might then think to himself, âThis is great! It must mean she still has feelings for me too and that she wants us to get back together again.

He may then go ahead and text her something like, âHey, I miss you too! Why donât we put all this behind us and give our relationship another shot?

Yet, rather than get a âYes, I want that too from her, the woman usually closes herself off from him and pulls away even more. Why?

Firstly, when a guy tries to get his ex back via text, it makes her feel that sheâs not important enough for him to even bother picking up the phone and talking to her in person.

Instead, he sends her an impersonal electronic message like sheâs not really that significant to him at all.

As a result, she feels annoyed or insulted.

Secondly, if he hasnât bothered to reactivate her feelings for him before asking her to get back together again, sheâs simply not going to be interested.

Then sheâs just going to say, âNo and most-likely also stop responding to his texts from that moment onwards.

This is why, asking your ex for another chance should be done face-to-face and only after you have first re-sparked her feelings of respect and attraction for you on a phone call and even better, in person.

Another way not to text your ex if you don't want to turn her off is

3. Being too neutral via text so she gets bored

Sometimes a guy might text his ex and pretend that he's only interested in being her nice, neutral friend.

As a result, he sticks to boring texts and totally avoids flirting with her so that he can create sparks of attraction.

In his mind he may be thinking things like, "If I keep things neutral between us and don't give her a sign that I want her back, she'll begin looking at me as though I'm a good guy again. She'll then hopefully stop thinking about me in a negative way and start missing me instead. Then, when she's totally calm and relaxed and feeling drawn to me, we can get back together again."

Yet, in most cases, when a guy is being neutral around his ex, rather than make her miss him more, she usually just gets bored of waiting for him to make a move.

She may then continue texting him, while at the same time focusing on finding herself a new man who can make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for him.

That is why, if you want to make your ex miss you so that you can get her back, don't pretend you only want to be her friend.

From now on, regardless of how you interact with her (i.e. via text, a phone call or in person), make sure that you flirt with her to create sparks of attraction between you.

Only then will she begin to miss you, think about you and open herself up to the idea of being your woman again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Losing My Mind After Divorce

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 ways to regain control of your mind, so you can get her back:

1. Understand that your emotions come from your thoughts

If you spend most of your time thinking negative thoughts like, “I miss my wife so much, but it doesn’t matter because she hates me now and there’s nothing that will ever make her forgive me and give me another chance. The divorce is through and my life is ruined. I will never be able to get over this,” you will undoubtedly find yourself drowning in negative emotions like dejection, hopelessness and despair.

That’s why, if you want to stop losing your mind, you need to change the way you think about yourself and the divorce.

Think new thoughts and you will feel new emotions.

For example: Some new thoughts that you should be thinking at this point are:

- It’s possible to re-attract my wife.
- I can make her feel differently about me.
- Love doesn’t die, it just gets pushed into the background.
- The more relaxed, confident thoughts I have, the more confident I will feel on the inside and look on the outside.
- When she sees that I’ve changed and improved in the ways that are important to her, she will automatically feel some respect and attraction for me again.
- I believe in myself and in my worth to her and I will continue to feel that way when I interact with her, even if she’s being cold, dismissive or bitchy towards me.
- Even if she pretends that she doesn’t have any feelings for me anymore, I won’t feel insecure and unsure of myself around her.

Whatever negative thoughts might be going through your mind right now, focus on replacing them with positive thoughts.

Then, when you interact with your ex wife again, rather than projecting an image of a guy who is losing his mind, your confidence and self-belief will come through instead (e.g. in the tonality of your voice, your body language and in the way you behave and respond to her).

When she sees for herself that you are a much more emotionally attractive man now than you were in the marriage with her (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more emotionally strong, calm and relaxed under pressure), she will naturally start to feel respect and attraction for you again.

You can then build on that and get her to fall in love with you all over again.

However, if you continue to allow your negative thoughts to drag you down into a pit of hopelessness and despair, when you interact with your ex wife, she will pick up on it and she will then likely think something like, “I can’t believe he’s losing it like that. Even if I had my doubts about leaving him before, I see now that he’s definitely not the man for me. I made the right decision to divorce him.”

Another way to regain control of your mind is to

2. Understand that more and more men are getting their wife back after a divorce these days

In the past, it was difficult for a guy to get back together with his ex wife after divorce, because the only options available to him were to seek help from a therapist or relationship counselor.

Then, the main advice in those situations was: Give it time. Take up new hobbies and even start dating again. Just give her some space to recover and stop feeling so angry about everything. She will come back if she misses you.

Of course, in almost all instances, if the guy followed that advice, he ended up losing his wife for good.

She either moved on and refused to have anything to do with him, or she met someone else, fell in love and started a new relationship.

This is why you need to use an updated approach that actually works.

Fortunately, today there are many more options available to a guy than just waiting around for his wife to start missing him.

He can now take control of the ex back process and actually do the types of things that will quickly reactivate his wife's feelings for him so that he can get her back.

Here's the main thing you need to get clear on:

If you want to get your wife back, you can.

However, it's not something that will happen miraculously by you sitting around passively and waiting for her to wake up one day and think to herself, I miss my husband. Maybe we can work things out after all.

Instead, it's something you have to actively make happen.

How can you do that?

You need to

3. Interact with her and make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for the new you

What most guys do after a divorce is close themselves off from all outside interactions and try to heal from the pain caused by their failed marriage.

As a result, they also stop communicating with their ex wife.

In some cases, it's because the wife says she doesn't want anything more to do with him and in other instances, it's because the guy can't deal with the pain of being an ex in her life, rather than her man.

Whatever the reason though, if a guy wants to get his wife back, he has to stay in her life (e.g. via text, social media, the phone and by seeing her in person).

If he doesn't, he won't be able to replace her negative feelings about him and make her see him in a new, more positive light.

So, the most important thing for you to do right now to stop yourself from losing your mind, is to interact with your ex wife and make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you again. You will then see that there is hope. You can make her feel differently. For example: Some of the ways you can do that is byâ€

- Maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what sheâ€™s saying or doing to put you off, (e.g. sheâ€™s being disdainful or indifferent towards you, sheâ€™s blaming you for ruining the marriage)
- Showing her via your conversation style, actions and behavior that youâ€™ve fixed some of the issues that caused her to disconnect from her feelings for you and that lead to the divorce, (e.g. if you werenâ€™t going anywhere in your life/career which made her feel unsafe about her future with you, you are now more goal oriented and are working towards achieving them. If you took her for granted before, youâ€™ve now learned from your mistakes and have become a better man as a result).
- Reacting differently to what she says and does, (e.g. if she tries to start an argument with you, rather than get upset or lose your temper with her like you did in the past, you now remain calm and use humor to diffuse the situation).
- Being more emotionally dominant with her, rather than allowing her to call all the shots because you feel guilty or bad about your behavior leading up to, and after, the divorce.
- Being more emotionally masculine around her and making her feel feminine and girly, rather than being too nice and neutral and making her feel like a friend or an acquaintance in your presence.

The more your ex wife interacts with you and discovers that youâ€™re nothing like the man she divorced, the more her feelings of respect and attraction for you will be reactivated.

As a result, her defenses start to come down and she then becomes more open to talking with you over the phone and meeting up with you in person, to see what happens next.

In the meantime, donâ€™t sit around at home losing your mind.

Insteadâ€

4. Use this as an opportunity to become the man you know you should have become all along

Going through a divorce can be a hugely transformational experience for you if you let it.

You can change and improve and become a much better man than you were before.

So, you can sit around feeling like your confidence is destroyed and thinking dark thoughts like, â€Iâ€™m losing my mind,â€ or you can use the time productively, by transforming yourself into a better version of the man you used to be before the divorce.

How can you do that?

By understanding your ex wifeâ€™s secret, subtle or deeper reasons for getting a divorce and then changing or improving those things about yourself.

If youâ€™re not quite sure what those things might be, here are some questions to ask yourself to gain clarityâ€

Did you always treat her well (i.e. with respect and love) and pulled your weight in the marriage (i.e. did your share of the chores, took care of your half of the responsibilities), or did you slip into a habit of taking her for granted and treating her badly (e.g. you stopped doing your part and let her do everything, you became too selfish/abusive/controlling)?

Were you a reliable husband who kept his promises to her, or were you undependable and left her in the lurch on a regular basis (e.g. unavailable when she needed you, went back on your word)?

Were you nice and loving towards her in front of other people, but critical or emotionally distant when you were alone?

Were you moving up through the levels of life and creating a safe path for your future together, or were you drifting along and living only from day to day (which caused her to feel anxious and unsafe)?

Were you able to maintain her feelings of attraction by making her feel like an attractive, desirable woman around you, or did you treat her more like a neutral friend or housemate?

Once you understand where you went wrong, you can focus on showing your ex wife that youâ€”ve moved past the level that you were at when she broke up with you.

When she sees for herself that youâ€”re now behaving and responding in a completely different way to the way she remembers, her guard will naturally come down and she will start thinking of you in a more positive light.

You can then build on her feelings for you and revive your marriage from there.

Where Men Go Wrong After Divorce

Something important to remember is that if you want to get your wife back, you canâ€”t let the divorce get to you and make you give up.

Where a lot of guys in similar situations to yours go wrong, is to lose hope and make mistakes that ruin their chances of ever getting their ex back.

Donâ€”t let that happen to you.

So, make sure you donâ€”t make any of the following mistakesâ€”!

1. Falling into a deep pit of depression

Thereâ€”s no denying that divorce is a big deal and you wouldnâ€”t be human if it didnâ€”t affect you.

However, if you let your divorce break you and cause you to think things like, â€”Losing my wife is the worst thing that ever happened to me. I feel like my life is over and that I will never be able to recover. Everything feels hopeless and empty without her and my life is not worth living without her,â€” youâ€”ll actually be hurting your chances of getting your wife back.

Why?

When you allow yourself to sink into a bottomless pit of depression and despair, youâ€”re actually preventing yourself from moving forward and becoming the kind of man who can attract her back (e.g. confident, emotionally strong, undaunted, not easily beaten).

Then, when you next interact with your ex wife (e.g. on a phone call or in person) and she senses that you're losing your mind without her, she will feel turned off by what she perceives as your emotional weakness.

She will see your inability to cope as a sign that you're not the kind of man she could depend on in a crisis and she may then decide that she made the right decision to divorce you after all.

On the other hand, if you pick yourself up quickly and get on with your life, she will feel drawn to you again for being an emotionally strong man and cool under extreme pressure.

She then becomes open to seeing you in a new light and you can then build on her feelings and make her open up to the idea of being a couple again.

So from this point onwards, make sure that you stop focusing on the pain of the situation and only focus on what is required to get your wife back.

Another mistake is

2. Trying to mask the pain with random hobbies that he doesn't really care about as much as her

When a guy tries to hide from the pain he's feeling (e.g. by pursuing random hobbies), he's basically avoiding facing up to what he really wants (i.e. to get his wife back).

In his mind he's likely thinking things like, It's over. The divorce is final and there's nothing I can do now to get her back. I need to accept it and try to move on.

Yet, that's not what he wants to do, but he also doesn't know what else to do to make himself feel better.

Here's the thing though

Wasting your time messing around with hobbies that don't matter to you is not going to help you feel better.

On the other hand, if you set yourself a goal that is actually important to you (i.e. getting your wife back) and then take action to make it happen, not only will you stop needing superficial distractions, you'll also find that you automatically feel better because you are now focused on the right things in your life.

So, if you want to get your wife back, don't pretend you want to collect stamps/play computer games/play darts instead.

The only thing that will accomplish is make you miss her more.

Another mistake is

3. Distracting himself with work and the responsibilities of life

In some cases, a guy will decide that the only way to take his mind off the divorce and how bad he's feeling, is to keep himself very busy.

He then puts all his attention on his work and on his other responsibilities, in the hope that he will be too distracting to think about how much he misses his ex wife.

Yet, no matter how busy he gets, he still goes to bed alone at night and missing her.

Here's the thing

Distraction isn't the solution to feeling better.

Itâs just another way for you to stay stuck in limbo where youâre not really getting over your wife at all.

So what can you do to truly feel better?

Get your wife back.

So, rather than trying to take your mind off of her, focus instead on interacting with her and reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you and getting her back.

Another mistake isâ!

4. Feeling like it's just impossible to turn his situation around

Even though your situation might seem hopeless to you right now (e.g. because your divorce is finalized, your ex wife is refusing to talk to you), when you spark new feelings of love inside your wife, anything becomes possible.

The truth is, millions of women go back to their husband after a divorce every year.

You can be one of those men.

Remember: Even after divorce, it doesnât mean the love between you and your ex wife is completely dead.

Right now itâs just buried under a lot of anger and emotional pain.

However, you can bring it back to life (i.e. by interacting with her and showing her that you truly are a better man now).

When she sees for herself that you really have changed in some of the ways that matter to her, she wonât be able to stop herself from feeling some respect for you again.

When she starts to respect you, she naturally also starts to feel attracted to you again and she then becomes open to reconnecting with her feelings of love for you as well.

So, donât sit around feeling hopeless and thinking, âIâm losing my mindâ and just go get your wife back.

You can do it.

Men from all over the world get an ex wife back every day.

You can do it too.

It might seem impossible to you at the moment, but it is possible.

You really can change how she feels and get her to start falling back in love with you again, to the point where she really wants to try again.

All of a sudden, her perception of you and her changes.

You and her feels good to her again, but in a new way.

She feels a kind of love for you that she has never felt before.

That is what is possible.

It really is.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Wife is Divorcing Me Because I Cheated

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 6 tips to help you get her to change her mind and stop the divorce:

1. Verbally accept the divorce, but don't sign yet

Chances are high that so far, nothing that you have tried to convince your wife to change her mind about the divorce has worked.

Which is why, begging her to give you another chance, or being stubborn and refusing to sign the papers is only likely to make things more tense and unfriendly between you and her.

So, if you haven't already done so, stop fighting your wife about the divorce.

That doesn't mean you have to accept it or go through with it.

It simply means you're no longer going to try and change her mind in ways that don't work and that only make her feel even more closed off and determined to go through with it.

To do that, you need to verbally tell her that you accept her decision to get divorced (just make sure you don't sign anything yet).

For example: You might say something along the lines of, "I know I stuffed up pretty badly and I understand why you want to end our marriage. I just want to say that I accept your decision to get divorced and I'm not going to make things any more difficult for you than they already are."

In a way, saying that (i.e. you don't want to make things any more difficult for her than they already are) can cause some women to feel as though they might be overreacting by wanting a divorce.

Maybe you aren't so bad after all.

Maybe you do care how she feels.

Maybe you have become an even more emotionally mature and appealing man as a result of the mistake you've made.

Additionally, by saying that her, you're taking the pressure off her of having to fight and argue with you to try and get what she wants.

This automatically calms her down a bit and she becomes more open to interacting with you without feeling like she is in an ongoing fight.

This is what you want because from there you need to

2. Use the time you still have with her to rebuild her feelings of respect for you

When you accept the divorce, you're literally buying yourself a bit of time where you can change your wife's mind and save your marriage.

However, for that to happen, you need get her respect back, so she stops seeing you as the guy who broke his vows to her and starts seeing you in a more positive way.

So, how can you regain your ex's respect?

Some of the ways you can do that are

- Maintaining your confidence around her regardless of what she's saying or doing (e.g.

sheâs insults you for cheating on her, throws a tantrum, is cold and bitchy, tries to make you feel guilty and like youâre not worthy as a man anymore because of what happened).

- Using humor to diffuse strained interactions and get her laughing, smiling and feeling good around you, rather than becoming annoyed, tense or worrying that youâre losing her.
- Standing up to her in a lovingly dominant way if she tries to control you during conversation, rather than being submissive with her and letting her walk all over you.
- Showing her by the way you respond to her (e.g. calm rather than emotionally volatile, patient rather than easily annoyed) that youâre no longer the same guy she broke up with.

The more respect and attraction you make her feel, the more she will open back up to you.

She stops seeing you as the man who cheated on her and caused her a lot of pain and disappointment.

Instead, she starts seeing you in a new, more positive light and becomes less determined to go through with the divorce right away.

At this point, you need toâ!

3. Make her feel attracted to you in new ways, based on the parts of the attraction experience that were missing in your marriage

Most guys donât just wake up one day and decide theyâre going to cheat on their wife.

Instead, the relationship has likely been breaking down for a while and the woman has been steadily losing respect, attraction and love for her guy over time.

As a result, she was probably less affectionate and loving towards him and the sex may have even completely dried up.

So, rather than quickly change and improve and start making her feel the way she wants to feel in the marriage with him so she becomes a loving, devoted, affectionate wife to him again, the guy instead looked outside of his relationship for what he wasnât getting at home.

However, to stop his wife from going through with the divorce, heâs going to have to face what he was avoiding before and start giving her the attraction experience that was missing in the marriage.

Heâs going to have to change and improve in the ways that are important to her, so she stops feelings turned off by him and starts wanting to save her marriage.

For example:

- If he took her for granted (e.g. he didnât pull his weight in the relationship, he expected her to look good for him, but he didnât do the same for her, he put her in second place to his work, family or friends), he now needs to quickly change and then apologize to her for not being a very good husband to her and for allowing his actions to cause her to feel unloved and unappreciated. He then needs to show her (via his actions and behavior) that heâs learned from his mistake and has become a better, more loving and attentive man as a result.
- If he stopped making her feel like an attractive, desirable woman and instead treated her like a roommate, he now focuses on making her feel like a real woman by being more emotionally masculine around her.
- If he was emotionally distant towards her, he now opens up and is more emotionally available to her. He listens to what she has to say and also expresses himself to her rather than closing up or walking away.

- If he broke his promises to her, he now makes sure that he is a man of his word no matter what.
- If he let her make all the decisions in the marriage because he didn't want to put up with her nagging or tantrums, he now stands up to her in a lovingly dominant way.

When your wife can see that you're an upgraded version of the man you were before, she stops being so sure about wanting a divorce.

Her guard comes down and she then becomes more open to talking to you and seeing you, to see if you and her can work things out.

By the way!

4. Don't ever let her see that you're feeling desperate, but do show her that you love her and want to save the marriage

Although right now you might be desperate to save your marriage, it's very important that you don't show your wife that (e.g. by calling her daily to apologize for what happened, sending her flowers or gifts, writing her long letters, e-mails or texts explaining how you feel).

Why?

If you come on too strong, it can cause her to put up her guard and push you away.

Then rather than think, "I can see by his actions that my husband is really sorry for cheating on me. It looks like he's learned his lesson and is ready to make it up to me now. I guess I should forgive him and give him another chance," she will likely feel even more turned off by what she perceives as his attempts to diminish his guilt.

That's why you need to be calm, confident and in control so that you can re-spark your wife's feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and get her to change her mind.

Then!

5. After reactivating her feelings for you and bringing her guard down, ask her to give it a few more weeks

Once your wife is feeling a bit more respect and attraction for you again and is more open to talking to you over the phone and seeing you in person, go ahead and ask her to wait for a few weeks before she decides what she wants to do.

For example: You might say something like, "Hey, I know I really stuffed things up and I take full responsibility for my actions. I'm not asking you to forget what I did and forgive me right away, however, I am asking for you to wait a few more weeks before you go through with the divorce. Then, if after that time you decide you still want to go through with it, I promise I will accept your decision and not stand in your way."

In most cases, the woman will usually say something like, "Okay, fine, I'll give you a few weeks, but don't try to weasel your way into asking for anything else," or "Fine! As long as you give me what I want afterwards, you can have your few weeks."

However, if she says "No," don't panic and start begging and pleading with her and ruin all the progress you've made so far in reactivating some of her feelings for you.

Instead, stay calm and confidently say, "Why are you making such a big deal about it? Is it because you secretly still love me and want to stay married?â€œ

She will likely be a bit defensive and say something along the lines of, â€œNo, I donâ€™t!â€œ or, â€œYou wish!â€œ and you can then add, â€œLook, Iâ€™m only asking for a few weeks. Whatâ€™s the bid deal? After that, you can go ahead and get a divorce and I promise I wonâ€™t stop you.â€œ

She will probably then agree, even if itâ€™s just to prove to you that she doesnâ€™t still want to stay married to you.

Then, once she agrees to giving you a few more weeks, you need toâ€œ

6. Use the extra time to make her love you in ways she hasnâ€™t ever before

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is byâ€œ

- Maintaining your confidence with her when she tries to belittle you for cheating on her and being disdainful towards you.
- Showing her via your actions, conversation style and behavior that youâ€™ve fixed some of the issues that were turning her off before (e.g. youâ€™re more loving and attentive towards her now while still maintaining your masculinity, when youâ€™re with her you give her 100% of your attention rather than being distracted or having a wandering eye, you keep your word to her no matter how difficult it might be).
- Reacting differently to what she says and does, (e.g. rather than get upset with her and start an argument or walk away, you now remain calm and use humor to diffuse the situation).
- Flirting with her to make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman and like you only have eyes for her, rather than being too stiff and formal around her and giving her the impression that you would rather be anywhere else other than with her.

The more she interacts with you and discovers that youâ€™re nothing like the man who cheated on her, the more attracted to you she will become.

Her defenses then start to come down a little bit and she then becomes open to holding off the divorce for a little while longer to see if you and her can actually work things out after all.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Stop Their Wife From Going Through With Divorce

[image: Mistakes to avoid when your wife wants a divorce due to you cheating on her]

Right now, you are definitely not in your wifeâ€™s good books.

However, you can change that if you ensure that every time you interact with her you spark her feelings just a little bit more than before.

Over time, each small spark will grow and eventually her love will become a raging fire again.

Yet, for that to happen, you have to make sure you donâ€™t make mistakes that will turn her off rather than re-attract her.

For example: 3 mistakes to avoid making areâ€œ

1. Thinking that apologizing over and over will make her want the marriage

Sometimes a guy feels so guilty and disgusted with himself for cheating on his wife, that he wants to apologize to her over and over again.

Yet, even though he is genuinely being sincere about his regret for cheating on her, apologizing over and over is not the thing that will convince her to give him another chance.

Why?

Basically, because it doesn't actually get to the core of the problem.

Instead, he's just saying how sorry he is, but that doesn't convince his wife that he won't do it again the next time another attractive woman comes along and gives him attention.

So, if your wife can't see any obvious changes in you (e.g. you still have a wandering eye when you're with her, you and her still argue about the same things as before), your apology to her will feel fake and like you're only apologizing to her because you think it's what she wants you to do.

She will then keep rejecting you and saying things like, "Do you really think I can forgive you for what you did? Your apology means nothing to me. It's just a bunch of empty words! You're still the same jerk who cheated on me! Go away and leave me alone. I will never forgive you for what you did!"

So, don't bother apologizing to her again and again.

Instead, apologize to her once in a calm, confident and sincere manner and then let your actions be your proof to her that you really have changed and are now a better, more honest and faithful man than you ever were before.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Offering her the same old attraction experience, when she knows that you probably acted differently around the other woman

Sometimes when a woman is threatening to divorce a guy because he cheated on her, he gets so caught up thinking about how terrible he feels, or how difficult it will be to convince his wife to give him another chance, that he remains stuck at the same level he was at when she broke up with him.

In other words, rather than quickly learn from his mistakes and make some attractive changes to his thinking, behavior and the way he treats his wife so that he can re-attract her and make her change her mind, he instead stays the same.

Then, when he attempts to get her back, she doesn't feel a new spark with him and rejects him, because at the back of her mind she's likely thinking things like, "I bet he wasn't like this with her! He was quite the man with her, but with me he still behaves the same as before. So, what he's asking from me is that I accept the crappy, old, boring version of him, while that tramp got to enjoy him at his best. Well, I'm not falling for it. He isn't offering me anything that I want right now, so I'm better off divorcing him and finding myself a new man who can make me feel like I want to feel."

So, if you want your wife to give you another chance, you have to use a different approach with her (e.g. you need to make her feel desirable rather than treat her like the boring wife, you need to listen and be supportive of her needs rather than dismiss her as being an overly emotional woman, you need to maintain your dominance with her rather than give in to her just to avoid an argument). You've got to be ready to give her the kind of attraction experience that will cause her to feel like she just has to give you another chance, or else she will regret it for the rest of her life. Another mistake to avoid is

3. Trying to discuss his way into making her have feelings

Sometimes a guy will make the mistake of thinking that the only way to make his wife change her mind about divorcing him is by having long discussions about the relationship with her.

He assumes that if he talks to her about why he cheated and then tells her how he's going to make sure that it never happens again (e.g. by giving her a full account of his whereabouts, showing her all the history on his phone/e-mail/social media pages), she will see that he's putting in the effort to fix things between them and she will then begin to reconnect with her feelings of love and trust for him.

Yet, even though his intentions are good, discussing the relationship problems in detail, only highlights his betrayal to her and causes her to feel stressed, hurt and like forgiving him and giving him another chance is just too much hard work.

Here's the thing

Having serious discussions with your wife about your relationship and why you cheated is something that will definitely have to be done.

However, that comes later when she's already opened back up to you and agreed to give you another chance, not before.

For now, it's more important to focus on making her reconnect with her feelings of respect, trust, attraction and love.

So, even if she tries to get serious with you, always steer the conversation back to flirting, humor and feel good emotions, so she can see that she is feeling good around you again.

Her guard will naturally start to slip down and she will then open up to the idea of giving your marriage another chance.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Long Does it Take For a Woman to Miss Her Ex?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends on the woman and the reason for the break up.

Here are 5 examples of how a woman can react after breaking up with a man:

1. She misses him after a week because she still loves him and feels enough attraction for him to not want to let go

Sometimes a couple might get into a bit of a rut in their relationship (e.g. things become a bit boring and predictable, they no longer go out as often as they used to at the beginning of their relationship, the sex becomes formulaic).

When that happens, a woman might stop focusing on all the good things about her guy that she likes (e.g. he's got a great sense of humor, he is kind and honest, he treats her with love and respect) and she instead begins to nitpick about the minor things that irritate her (e.g. he forgets to put the cap back on the toothpaste, he isn't as romantic as some of her friends' boyfriends, he forgets to call her if he's going to be late from work).

She may then start thinking things like, "I don't know if I really love him anymore. What if I'm just sticking around in this relationship because it's comfortable? Could I be stopping myself from finding my ideal match? I don't want to wake up one day and find that I'm with the wrong man."

This kind of thinking may then lead to her breaking up with her guy.

However, after a week of space where she doesn't interact with her ex at all, she may realize that she made a mistake and regret her decision to break up.

When that happens, she will likely begin thinking things like, "What have I done? How could I let such a great guy go? If I've lost him because of my stupidity, I'll never forgive myself!"

She may then contact him and say something like, "I think I made a big mistake by breaking up with you," or "I realize that I still care for you. How about we give our relationship another try?"

Yet, here's the thing!

Not all women will make the first move with an ex, even if they do miss him and want him back.

This is why, if you want your ex back, don't wait around hoping she will miss you and contact you.

Instead, give her a week of space to miss you and then contact her, preferably over the phone or in person, reactivate her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel like a real woman around you, showing her you're a better man than you were before the break up) and get her back.

Don't wait around wondering, "How long does it take for a woman to miss her ex?" and risk losing her because you wait too long for her to hopefully contact you and want you back.

Make her want you back now.

Another example of how a woman can react after breaking up with a man isâ€¦!

2. She never misses him because her feelings were destroyed and he didn't ever contact her to reactivate them

In most cases, a woman will break up with a guy as a last resort.

In other words, she will usually give him several chances to change and improve and finally, if he doesn't take any notice of her unhappiness, her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him will switch off and she will then break up with him.

When that happens, a woman generally feels relieved to be free from what she perceives as being a miserable, doomed relationship.

So, rather than sit around feeling sad, depressed and missing her ex, she will likely focus instead on moving on with her life by going out with friends, hooking up with new guys and finding herself a new relationship.

So, if your ex has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for you, it's not a good idea to wait around for her to start missing you, because it may never happen.

Instead, you need to interact with her and actively re-spark her feelings for you, so she does start missing you when she's not hearing from you.

Another example of how a woman can react after breaking up with a man isâ€¦!

3. She misses him, but moves on with another guy that she meets because her ex never contacts her to get her back

A very common reaction that a woman has after a break up is to feel angry with her guy for a few days and then starts missing him.

She may then start thinking things like, â€œIf he calls me, I'm not going to push him away. Instead, I'm going to give him a chance to show me that he's changed and see where things go from there.â€

She then waits to hear from her ex so that they can work things out.

However, if he doesn't get in touch with her after a week, she will naturally begin wondering things like, â€œWhy isn't he calling me? Doesn't he care that we've broken up? Doesn't he miss me at all?â€

She might then decide that he's no longer interested in having a relationship with her, so she makes an effort to move on and forget about him by finding herself a replacement man as quickly as possible.

Then, if her ex finally gets in touch with her (e.g. after a few weeks or even months), he is shocked to discover that she has moved on and is happy without him.

So, if you don't want that to happen to you, don't wait around hoping your ex will miss you enough to contact you.

Instead, be courageous enough to start the ex back process with her as quickly as possible.

Another example of how a woman can react after breaking up with a man isâ€¦!

4. She misses him, reaches out to say hi and his response or reaction turns her off

In some cases, a woman will break up with a guy only to very quickly realize that she misses him. So, after a few days of being apart, she might send out a feeler text (or social media message) to say â€œHi,â€ and see if he is missing her too.

Unfortunately, in a lot of cases, the guy ends up blowing his chances with her by responding in an unattractive way.

For example: Some common reactions a guy might have areâ€

- He tries to show her that heâ€™s not needy by waiting too long to respond to her, so she assumes heâ€™s not interested and decides to move on.
- He gets so excited that she is contacting him that he goes overboard with her (e.g. bombarding her with texts or social media messages, talking about the relationship) and ends up turning her off by what she perceives as his desperation.
- He replies to her in what he thinks is a cool manner to hopefully impress her and instead turns her off because he sounds too cheesy.
- Heâ€™s cold and offish towards her, so she feels put off and cuts off all contact with him.

As a result, she may then start thinking things like, â€œI canâ€™t believe I actually missed him and thought we could work things out! What a waste of my time and energy. I see now that heâ€™s definitely not the right guy for me. I need to forget about him and focus on finding myself a real man who knows how to handle a woman like me.â€

She then closes herself off even more.

If he then tries to interact with her, she gives him the cold shoulder.

Heâ€™s then left feeling confused and in some cases, even thinking things like, â€œWhy is she being such a bitch?â€ or, â€œWhy is sheâ€™ being so hot and cold with me?â€

What he doesnâ€™t realize is that he blew it with her by not knowing the right way to respond to her to reactivate her feelings for him and make her want him back.

Another example of how a woman can react after breaking up with a man isâ€

5. She misses him, but is afraid to contact him in case he rejects her

[image: Woman afraid to contact her ex in case he rejects her]

Sometimes a woman will start missing her ex after a few days apart.

Yet, rather than contact him, she doesnâ€™t do anything because sheâ€™s likely thinking things like, â€œWhat if I call him and he rejects me? What if he tells me that heâ€™s over me and maybe even that heâ€™s found himself another woman? I wouldnâ€™t be able to handle that. Thatâ€™s why Iâ€™m not going to do anything. If he still cares for me, he will have to make the first move.â€

This is why you canâ€™t sit around waiting for your ex to reach out to you before you start the ex back process.

If you want her back, you need to have the balls to take the lead.

So, interact with her (on the phone and especially in person) and spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love, so she wants to be your girl again.

Don't waste anymore time waiting for her to miss you and come running back.

When guys use that approach, they usually waste a lot of time and end up losing their woman as well.

So, if you want her back, make it happen now.

She's waiting for you.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Waiting For an Ex to Miss Them

By the way!

If your intention is to get your ex back, you need to make sure that you have the right mindset for that to happen (e.g. confident, assertive, positive).

If you go into the ex back process with the wrong mindset, you might end up delaying, or even ruining your chances of getting her back.

3 examples of the wrong mindset are:

1. Thinking that waiting is the way to get an ex back

Most guys have heard the expression, âAbsence makes the heart grow fonder.â

So, after a break up, a guy might decide that if he waits long enough, his ex will eventually start to miss him and then she will contact him so that they can get back together again.

He might then sit around for weeks, months and in some extreme cases, even years, waiting for her to get in touch so that they can resume their relationship.

Yet, that almost never happens.

Instead, if a woman doesn't hear from her ex within a few days of breaking up, she usually assumes he's not interested in getting back together again and she then focuses on fully getting over him and moving on.

Even if a woman does miss her ex and feels sad that he's not contacting her, she will rarely make the first move and get in touch with him because she doesn't want to get rejected by him.

As a result, the guy loses his chance of getting her back, all because he had the wrong mindset (i.e. he believed that waiting for an ex is the way to get her back).

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, you shouldn't wait longer than 7 days to start the ex back process with her.

If you do wait longer than a week, you might be shocked and disappointed to find out that she has already started to move on without you and is possibly dating, or even falling in love with a new man.

Another example of the wrong mindset is!

2. Getting a text from her after a few days or weeks, but not feeling confident about what her intentions might be

Sometimes, if a woman still has some feelings for her ex, she will begin to miss him after a days or weeks of not hearing from him and she might then make the first move.

For example: A woman might send her ex a text or social media message to say, “Hi” and open the lines of communication between them.

However, he ends up not being sure if he should try to get her back and risk getting rejected or not, so he keeps his reply short and ends the conversation hoping that it will make her chase him.

It doesn't.

A woman might risk making the first move, but if her ex doesn't seem keen to be hearing from her, she will almost never put herself in the position where he can reject her again.

Instead, she will likely think something like, “Well, I gave it a shot and he didn't seem interested, so I guess I need to accept that it's truly over between us and focus on moving on.”

She then does just that, usually by going out more and opening herself up to meeting, dating and hooking up sexually with other men.

Here's the thing!

If your ex contacts you, don't play hard to get, because you will almost certainly end up blowing it with her.

Instead, be confident enough to use the opening she's giving you to re-attract her, reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you and get her back.

Another example of the wrong mindset is!

3. Waiting so long that you lose confidence in your attractiveness to her and other women

In some cases, a guy will wait around for weeks, or even months in the hope that his ex will miss him and he can then start the ex back process with her.

Yet, the longer he waits, the more he begins to doubt his chances with her.

He then starts thinking things like, “What if she doesn't miss me? What if she doesn't want me back after all? What if I contact her and she tells me that she's met someone else even better than me? Maybe she's realized that I'm not good enough for her and that she can do better than me. It's probably hopeless. Not only doesn't she want me anymore, I'm sure no other woman will want me either.”

Yet, thinking like that only makes him think, act and behave in ways that are unattractive to women.

So, if he then tries to get his ex back, or meet other women, he will usually get rejected because they will all sense his lack of confidence and self worth and feel turned off by it.

Here's the thing!

Women are attracted to confident men who believe in themselves.

Likewise, women are turned off by insecure men who doubt themselves and their value to her.

So, if you've been waiting too long for your ex to miss you and have been losing confidence in yourself and in your attractiveness to her as a result, you really do need to begin building your confidence back up, or else you won't be able to re-attract your ex or any other woman for that matter.

You need to get to the point where you believe in yourself and in your value to her and other women. When you do, not only will you be able to make your ex feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, you will also be able to attract other beautiful women, if you want to.

So, don't waste time ignoring your ex in the hope that she will miss you and come running back and end up losing your confidence as a result.

If you want her back, believe in yourself and then take action to re-attract her and make it happen now.

When you do, everything will begin to change for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Hanging Out With an Ex You Still Have Feelings For

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 things you should do if you want her back:

1. Don't give off an, â€œI want a relationship with you. That's all I am interested in. I can't deal with being just friends energy when around her

Sometimes, when a guy still has feelings for his ex and secretly wants her back, he can't stop himself from making every interaction he has with her about that.

For example: A guy might

- Talk about all the great times they had together and say things like, â€œWe were really good together,â€ or â€œWhat we had was really special.â€
- Call, text or message her every day just to stay on her mind.
- Like all her posts on social media regardless of how trivial her comments might be.
- Suck up to her over the phone and when they are together, even when she's being a bit bitchy towards him.
- Make himself indispensable to her (e.g. helps her with errands, chores or bills).
- He insinuates himself into her life (e.g. if they get invited somewhere by mutual friends he says things like, â€œDon't worry about taking your car. We can go together. I will pick you up).
- Make himself available to her 24/7 regardless of his own plans.

In his mind he's likely thinking, â€œI'm just being a good friend to her, that's all. It's not like I'm asking her for a relationship or pressuring her in any way to get back together again.â€

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that a woman can easily see through a guy's act and pick up on his true intentions.

She then starts thinking things like, â€œI'm not sure that hanging out with my ex is such a good idea after all. It looks like he still has feelings for me, but I don't feel the same way about him. So, the more we see each other, the more he will likely assume he has a chance with me. Yet, I don't want to give him that impression, because I'm just not interested in him in that way anymore. Maybe it's better if we cut all ties and move on with our lives separately from now on.â€

Here's the thing

If you want your ex to start having feelings for you again, you need to focus on using interactions to make her feel respect and attraction for you.

That means, you need to behave in ways that are attractive to her (e.g. confident, emotionally independent, relaxed), rather than in ways you think she wants (e.g. extra nice, always available, overly helpful).

When you have the confidence to hang around your ex without making it all about getting her back, something amazing happens.

Not only do you feel better about the break up, but you instantly become more attractive to her as a result.

She stops thinking of you as her good old reliable, boring ex who she knows she can push around because he wants her back and starts to see you in a more positive light (i.e. because youâre being an emotionally strong, confident, masculine man).

She then starts to feel surges of respect for you again.

When that happens, she feels attracted and when she respects and feels attracted to you, her guard comes down and she opens herself up to the idea of getting back together.

Another thing you should do when hanging out with an ex you still have feelings for isâ

2. Focus on making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you, so the feelings become mutual

If your ex is open to the idea of you and her hanging out, youâre actually luckier than most guys are after a break up.

Essentially, you have a valid reason for meeting up with her any time you want (i.e. you and her are now friends).

However, if you waste that opportunity by being too nice or neutral with her (e.g. because youâre afraid of losing her if she picks up on the fact that you still have feelings for her), you might actually lose her for real to another guy who has the balls to make her feel attracted.

So, donât waste your interactions with your ex by pretending that youâre not interested in getting her back.

Of course that doesnât mean you should go on and on about how much you still care for her either.

Instead, focus on having fun with her, while at the same time making her feel strong sparks of respect and attraction for the new man you have become.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is byâ

- Making her laugh and smile and feel relaxed to be around you again, rather than trying to get into intense, deep discussions about the relationship.
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you, rather than just acting friendly or neutral.
- Making her feel feminine and girly in your presence by being more emotionally masculine than her and not allowing her to dominate you during conversations.
- Maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what she says or does to make you feel unsure of yourself around her.
- Believing in yourself and in your value to her, rather than doubting yourself.
- Showing her that youâre now a new and improved man that she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, rather than continuing to make the same old attraction mistakes as before.

When she experiences the new you for herself, she will naturally start to feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you again.

She then stops putting up walls every time you interact with her and starts to feel open to the idea of being in a relationship with you again.

Another thing you should do when hanging out with an ex you still have feelings for isâ□!

3. Be a more emotionally attractive version of yourself

[image: Be a more emotionally attractive version of yourself]

This simply means you make some quick, easy improvements to yourself, so that when you hang out with your ex, she starts to see you with different eyes.

For example: Some of the ways you can become more emotionally attractive areâ□!

- If you were a little bit confident before, like in situations where you felt comfortable such as at work or with your friends, you now become a lot more confident. Even when youâ□□re in unfamiliar situations that would have made you feel uncomfortable or unsure of yourself in the past (e.g. when hanging out with an ex you still have feelings for), you now feel relaxed and sure of yourself.
- If you were too much of a nice guy before and allowed your ex and other people to push you around, you now become more assertive and stand up for yourself in a firm, yet loving way.
- If you fell into the habit of treating your ex like a friend so she stopped feeling like a real woman around you, you now become more emotionally masculine in your approach so that when you hang out with her, she starts to feel feminine and girly again.
- If you were unsure of your purpose and direction in life before and seemed to just be drifting along, you now become more focused and goal oriented. You know what you want and youâ□□re busy working towards achieving it.

Show your ex (via the way you now talk, act, think, behave and react to her) that you now have the ability to be the man she always wanted you to be.

Then when you hang out together and she sees that you really have changed and are more emotionally attractive to her as a man now, she will automatically begin to feel surges of sexual and romantic attraction for you again.

When that happens, it will then become a lot easier for her to reconnect with her feelings of love for you and want to give the relationship another try.

Another thing you should do when hanging out with an ex you still have feelings for isâ□!

4. Let her see that your confidence isn't dependent on how she treats you, reacts to you or feels about you

Right now, your ex probably suspects that you still have feelings for her.

However, even if she feels the same way about you, sheâ□□s unlikely to make it easy for you to get her back.

Instead, sheâ□□s almost certainly going to test your confidence before she opens herself up to giving you another chance.

For example: Some of the way she might do that is byâ□!

- Pretending that sheâ□□s completely over you to see if you will lose confidence in yourself and stop hanging out with her, because you can't bear to be around her knowing she doesn't return your feelings of love.

- Flirting with other guys in front of you, or talking about other guys that are interested in her to test if you will get jealous or angry and start doubting your attractiveness to her, or if you will maintain confidence in yourself and your value to her.
- Being distant and closed off towards you during conversation to see if you can maintain your confidence with her, or if you become insecure and unsure of yourself (e.g. you start stumbling over your words, you become extra nice to her, you try to please her).
- Messing with your head by saying things like, â€œI miss you, but I don't want to get back together again,â€ to see if you will lose it and start begging and pleading with her to change her mind.

Essentially, she wants to see how strong of a man you really are, so it's very important that you don't let her get to you.

It's up to you to stay emotionally strong, regardless of what she's saying or doing to make you doubt yourself around her.

Remember: Women are naturally attracted to confidence, so if you can pass her tests, she will naturally feel attracted to you, even if she initially only wanted to mess with your head.

[image: Let her see how confident you are now]

When she feels attracted, she will then drop her guard and open herself up to giving you another chance.

However, you must stay confident.

If you don't, she will feel turned off and then she will stick to her decision to break up with you and move on.

Another thing you should do when hanging out with an ex you still have feelings for isâ€

5. Be a challenge, but don't play too hard to get

Most guys who get the chance to hang out with an ex they still have feelings for, often make the mistake of being too nice and accommodating to her in the hope that this will please her (e.g. he makes himself available to her whenever she wants, answers all her texts, messages or calls instantly, lets her call all the shots).

A guy like that may even justify his actions by thinking something like, â€œIt's no big deal. I'm just being a good friend to her and maybe in time she will start to have feelings for me again when she realizes that I'm always there for her and that she can depend on me no matter what.â€

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that a woman doesn't want to feel as though she is more valuable or powerful than her man.

Instead, she wants him to make her feel as though she needs to be the one who is nice and accommodating to try to please him, rather than him being no challenge to her at all.

She doesn't want to feel as though she can push him around and treat him like dirt without him standing up to her, or even walking away, because she's being a brat.

So, if you want to re-spark your ex's feelings for you, stop being a good little boy around her who is always saying and doing things to please her.

Be a bit more of a challenge to her by not always being available when she wants to meet up.

Take your time answering her texts, messages and phone calls.

Have fun with your own friends without her.

Youâd be surprised to see how attractive a bit of ballsiness can be to a woman.

Before you realize it, she will be the one chasing after you and saying things like, *âMaybe we should give our relationship another try.*â

Where Guys Go Wrong When Hanging Out With an Ex They Still Have Feelings For

When you approach hanging out with an ex in the right way, you can easily change her feelings and get her back.

However, if you make common mistakes that guys make in a situation like yours, you can end up losing your chance.

So, make sure that doesnât happen to you, by not making any of the following mistakes:

1. Acting like a neutral friend and expecting something sexual or romantic to happen

Being broken up can cause a guy to feel a bit awkward when he interacts with his ex, especially if he still has feelings for her.

At the back of his mind he may be wondering things like, *âShould I let her know that I still care about her and want her back and risk being rejected by her, or should I just play it cool and just hang out with her and let her lead the way?*â

In most cases, the guy will decide to let his ex call the shots and he just sticks around pretending to be her nice, sweet, platonic friend who isnât interested in getting her back.

Yet, what almost always happens when a guy does that, is he gets the shock of his life when his ex calls him up one day (i.e. because heâs her nice, sweet friend) and tells him something along the lines of, *âIâm so excited and I wanted you to be one of the first to know. Iâve met someone and Iâm in love. Isnât that great? I hope you will meet another girl soon too! Maybe we can even double date when that happens.*â

Heâs then left feeling devastated and wondering why this happened to him.

The answer is simple.

It happened to him because he failed to reactivate his exâs feelings for him and make her want to be in a relationship with him again.

So, if you donât want the same thing to happen to you, make sure you donât waste your interactions with your ex, pretending you only want to be her platonic friend and that you donât want her back.

If you act like a friend, thatâs all youâll end up with (i.e. a friendship, rather than a relationship).

So, make the feelings sexual, initiate a kiss and then enjoy the great times ahead with her.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

2. Telling her that he has feelings for her, even though she doesnâ€™t feel that way about him yet

As tempting as it maybe to just go ahead and say, â€œHey, I still have feelings for you. Letâ€™s try to work things out,â€ itâ€™s not a good idea. Why?

If you havenâ€™t spent time reactivating your exâ€™s feelings of respect and attraction for you first, sheâ€™s not going to want to hear that, because she doesnâ€™t feel the same way about you.

Instead, she will likely say something along the lines of, â€œThatâ€™s really sweet of you, but I donâ€™t think we can go back to being a couple again because I just donâ€™t feel the same way about you anymore. Iâ€™m sorry, but being friends is the best I can offer you. If you canâ€™t accept that, then maybe we should stop hanging out and try to move on.â€

So, if you want a relationship with your ex, make sure that itâ€™s what she wants too before you go and pour your heart out to her.

How will you know?

If you focus on using your interactions with her to reactivate her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be around you, flirting with her to create some sexual tension, showing her via your actions that youâ€™re a new man), sheâ€™ll start to want a relationship too, because it feels like the right thing for her.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Being afraid to hug her or touch her when appropriate

If you want your ex to start seeing you with romantic, rather than friendly eyes again, you need to be able to hug her and touch her from time to time.

That doesnâ€™t mean you should throw yourself at her and make it uncomfortable for her to be around you because youâ€™re constantly groping her and making her feel uncomfortable.

However, thereâ€™s nothing wrong with giving her a friendly hug to say hello or goodbye, or touching her occasionally during conversation.

Itâ€™s just two, mature adults interacting with each other in a playful, innocent, friendly manner, with subtle romantic undertones.

Yet, despite that, many guys are still too afraid to touch their ex.

So, a guy will keep his distance from her and hope that she somehow changes her mind and starts to feel attracted to him again in a romantic way.

However, in almost all cases, a woman wonâ€™t because heâ€™s not doing anything to spark her sexual and romantic feelings for him.

Heâ€™s just causing her to feel neutral around him, or worse, turned off even further because thereâ€™s clearly no spark between them anymore.

This is why, if you want your ex to begin having romantic feelings for you again, you have to be comfortable enough with her to initiate some physical contact.

So, don't go around treating her like a neutral friend and then expect her to feel turned on.

The next mistake is

1. Getting friendzoned by assuming that he doesn't deserve to be in any other position with her

If you start telling yourself that the only way you can stay in contact with your ex is if you accept being her friend, then getting your ex to see you as more than just a friend will be difficult.

The best way to get out of the friendzone is to not see yourself as being in it in the first place.

Instead, see yourself as a guy that your ex is clearly attracted to.

She wants you.

It's obvious and you know it.

By having that kind of mindset, it causes you to display the type of confidence that actually does make her feel attracted to you (i.e. belief in yourself, relaxed confidence, no need to try hard around her because you know that you're good enough and that she wants you).

You can then easily build on her feelings for you and lead her back into a relationship with you.

However, if you only see yourself as her friend, she will only see you that way too.

She will then look for another guy to make her feel sexually and romantically attracted.

Don't lose your chance with her.

Be that guy who makes her feel the way she wants to feel (i.e. attracted, desirable, turned on) and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Do I Know if My Ex is Using Me? 7 Signs to Look Out For

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 7 possible signs that she is using you:

1. She stays in contact, but keeps rejecting your attempts to meet up with her

Generally speaking, after a break up, a woman may feel worried that her ex will find a replacement woman and move on before sheâs had a chance to hook up with another guy first.

Of course, she wonât want him to know that, so she might stay in contact with him (e.g. via social media, texting and phone calls), to keep tabs on him.

Then, while he begins thinking things like, *â Could it be possible that she still has feelings for me after all? Maybe we can work things out and get back together again,*â she focuses on trying to find herself a new guy.

If he then suggests a meet up, rather than say *â Yes,*â she instead makes some excuse as to why itâs not a good time for her.

He then continues to hold on to the hope that they might reconcile and get back together again, while she focuses on being the first one to move on.

So, if your ex is staying in contact with you but wonât meet up, itâs quite possible that sheâs using you for emotional support as she moves on without you.

She just wants to make sure that you're not going to move on before her.

Of course, you donât have to put up with this treatment from her.

If you want her back, you need to call her right away and spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, showing her that youâve changed), so that she canât stop herself from wanting to see you in person.

Then, when you meet up with her, you can fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Alternatively, if you decide that you donât want her back, you need to cut off all contact with her and move on, rather than let her continue to use you.

Another possible sign that your ex is using you is ifâ

2. She texts you when she's bored and then stops replying

Sometimes a woman will be sitting around feeling bored (e.g. on a Sunday evening, at the office).

She might then decide to text her ex as a way of passing the time.

She may then start a conversation with him (e.g. ask him what heâs doing and what heâs been up to since the break up, talk about things they both like such as movies, music, a shared hobby) to entertain herself for a while.

Once again, the guy might then take this as a sign that she still has some feelings for him.

However, if he then gets too carried away with the conversation, or he tries to start a text chat with her again the next day, she usually just ignores him, because sheâs no longer feeling bored and is busy living her life (e.g. hanging out with friends, at work, participating in a sport or other activity).

Heâ□□s then left feeling confused and wondering things like, *â□□What happened? Why is she ignoring me all of a sudden? I thought we were getting along so well the other day/night. Did I say something wrong to put her off?*â□□

Yet, what he doesnâ□□t realize is that she was just using him to entertain herself for a while and isnâ□□t really interested in him at all.

Another possible sign that your ex is using you is ifâ□□|

3. She is happy to talk to you when talking about herself and her life, but she doesn't really listen or care when you talk about yourself

If your ex is currently only interested in talking about herself and what sheâ□□s doing, but doesnâ□□t give a damn about you and your life, itâ□□s likely that sheâ□□s using you as her sounding board (i.e. because youâ□□re familiar to her).

As a result, you end up getting friend-zoned or acting like her therapist.

Unfortunately, both of those situations mean that she won't be feeling attracted and drawn to you in a sexual or romantic way.

So, if you want to get her back, you canâ□□t put yourself in the position where she can use you in that way.

Instead, you need to be more of a challenge to her, rather than always being there for her.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is byâ□□|

Not responding to her messages, texts or calls every time she tries to get in touch with you.

That doesnâ□□t mean you ignore her or play hard to get, instead you take your time responding to her and then when you do, you say something like, *â□□Sorry...I was out with friends/at the gym/in my photography class,*â□□ to make it clear to her that you have a life too and arenâ□□t sitting around waiting for her to get in touch with you.

You might also use some humor to make her feel surges of attraction for you when she starts talking about herself, by saying (in an easy-going, joking way) something along the lines of, *â□□Oh, weâ□□re talking about you again? Iâ□□m not your therapist you know. However, Iâ□□m happy to listen, but youâ□□ll have to pay me. I must warn you though, Iâ□□m not cheap!*â□□ and then laugh.

She will likely be a bit shocked and she may ask something like, *â□□What? Pay you? What are you talking about?*â□□ and you can then respond by saying, *â□□I told youâ□□| Iâ□□m not going to listen to you talk about yourself all the time without getting something out of it. Itâ□□s going to cost you a 3 course dinner. So, when are you going to pay up?*â□□

She will then most likely start laughing with you and feeling more open and interested in what you have to say.

Even if she tries to fight it, she wonâ□□t be able to stop herself from beginning to feel respect for you for having the confidence and the social skills to stand up to her in that way.

She then stops being so self-absorbed and starts to feel drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

She becomes more open to meeting up with you in person, which then gives you the opportunity to fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another possible sign that your ex is using you is ifâ€¦|

4. She says she doesn't want a relationship right now, but is secretly trying to find a replacement guy

Sometimes, a woman wants to break up with her guy, but keeps him in her life (i.e. by staying in contact with him) while she secretly tries to find her next boyfriend.

Then, once she secures a new relationship, she will break the news to her ex and quickly cut him out of her life.

Basically, she used him to feel good about herself and move on without experiencing the pain of being rejected or not wanted after the break up.

If this is the case with your ex, you need to quickly decide what you want to do.

Are you going to let her use you and then dispose of you when she meets another guy, or are you going to reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

The choice is yours, not hers.

If you feel that sheâ€¦ is the right woman for you, then donâ€¦t allow her to mess you around while she secretly tries to move on.

Instead, interact with her in ways that create feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside of her and make her really want you again.

The more attracted to you, you make her feel, the less motivated she will be to replace you with another guy.

Suddenly she will start being nice to you, because she will fear losing you to another woman and you can then kiss her, hook up with her sexually and get her back.

Another possible sign that your ex is using you is ifâ€¦|

5. She wants sex, but isn't interested in anything else

In some cases, a woman will keep her ex around for sex when sheâ€¦s between boyfriends, or feeling alone or unattractive.

She can then turn to him, get her sexual fix, make herself feel better and then go back to enjoying her life without the restrictions of a relationship with him.

Of course, the guy might then take that as a sign that she still has feelings for him and cling to the idea that if he just hangs in there, over time, the sex will evolve into a relationship again.

On the other hand, the woman is busy actively trying to move on by finding herself a replacement guy.

Then, when she does, she will drop her ex like a hot potato and move on with her new man.

Hereâ€¦s the thing thoughâ€¦|

If your ex is still having sex with you, it means that on some level she still finds you physically attractive.

All you need to do is make yourself more emotionally attractive too (e.g. by changing some of the things that turned her off about you before) and she wonâ€¦t be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you and wanting to be your girl again.

Another possible sign that your ex is using you is ifâ€¦|

6. She uses you for financial support, but doesn't ever seem interested in wanting to start a real relationship again

Sometimes a woman is an opportunist.

So, when she realizes that her ex still has feelings for her and she can use him to help her out financially, she decides to take advantage of him.

She may then be extra nice and sweet to him and even give him some hope by saying things like, â€œYou really are the best guy Iâ€™ve ever known,â€ or â€œI donâ€™t know why I ever broke up with you.â€

He might then start thinking things like, â€œIt sounds like she still has feelings for me after all. Maybe we can work things out and get back together again.â€

If he then suggests that they give their relationship another try, she puts him off by saying things like, â€œIâ€™m just not ready for that yet. Letâ€™s keep things the way they are for now and see what happens later on,â€ or â€œPlease donâ€™t push me for a relationship right now. I need more time to figure out what I want in my life before I can commit to being with one guy for the long term.â€

He then continues to help her out with money (i.e. because he thinks they will eventually get back together again), while she enjoys the feeling of financial freedom at his expense.

Then, if she meets another guy who makes her feel attracted in the ways that are important to her, she will quickly drop her free ride and move on, leaving him feeling confused and used.

Another possible sign that your ex is using you is ifâ€¦|

7. She keeps giving you mixed signals, but never wants to take it any further than that

In some cases, a woman who is using her ex will behave in ways that makes him think he still has a chance with her and that sheâ€™s open to getting back together again.

For example: A woman mightâ€¦|

- Turn to him for help of advice like she used to when they were together.
- Call him just to chat about random things.
- Tell him that she misses him.
- Send him photos of herself.
- Hang out with him on the weekends like theyâ€™re still together.
- Take him as her date to parties or family events.

However, if the guy then tries to get her to commit to getting back together again, or attempts to kiss her when theyâ€™re together, she pulls away, possibly becomes angry and says something like, â€œWhat are you doing? In case youâ€™ve forgotten, Iâ€™m not your girl anymore, nor do I want to be. Please donâ€™t try that with me again, or else Iâ€™m going to have to stop being your friend.â€

Naturally, heâ€™s left feeling confused and wondering, â€œIs my ex using me?â€

In a case like that, chances are high that she is. Why?

Often, a woman will do this because she's already seeing another guy and just doesn't want to come out and say it.

Instead, she likes the idea of having her ex available to her every beck and call, while at the same time, she enjoys the sex and romance of being with a new man.

Alternatively, a woman might simply use her ex to give herself an ego boost, to get emotional revenge on him for hurting her, or just for something fun to do.

It's not nice, but that's how some women are.

After a break up a woman can change and become a completely different person.

Not all women are that mean of course, but many guys do encounter a completely different side to their ex after a break up.

So, don't let yourself get caught up in a situation like that.

If you allow your ex to use you, it will do nothing to change her negative feelings for you and make her want you back.

Instead, she will probably lose even more respect and attraction for you for not having the balls to stand up to her and put her back in her place (in a loving way) when she steps out of line and tries to use you.

So, go ahead and take charge of the situation and use it as an opportunity to spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you and make her want you again.

How Guys Often Mess Things Up Further When They Realize They Are Being Used By Their Ex

Sometimes a guy will know that his ex is using him, but instead of putting an end to it, he actually makes it worse by making the following mistakes:

1. Seeking pity for how upset, confused and sad she is making him feel by her approach

For example: A guy might say something like, "Why are you using me like this? Does it make you happy to treat me like crap? Are you trying to hurt me for what happened between us? Well congratulations! You've succeeded. I feel terrible. I hope you're satisfied with your handiwork."

Secretly, he's hoping his ex will think something like, "Oh no! What have I done? I've been such a bitch to him and now he's feeling hurt and used. I feel horrible for doing that to him. He doesn't deserve it," and then start being nice to him again and give him another chance with her.

Yet, that's practically the last thing that will happen.

Instead, she will feel even more turned off by what she perceives as his emotional weakness and vulnerability.

She might then treat him even worse than before, because she's lost all respect for him as a man, or just cut him out of her life completely and move on.

Another mistake isâ€¦!

2. Putting up with her bad behavior just to get to text with her or spend time with her

In some cases, a woman will openly use her ex and treat him with disrespect.

However, even though he can see what sheâ€™s doing, he continues to put up with it in the hope that she will realize what a nice guy he really is and give him another chance.

Yet, that almost never happens.

Instead, the woman loses even more respect for him for not being man enough to stand up for himself.

When she canâ€™t respect him, she also stops feeling attracted to him and then thereâ€™s nothing there to make her want to get back into a relationship with him.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Your ex might not admit it to you, but she wants a man who wonâ€™t allow himself to ever be used, by her or anyone else, because he values himself too much.

So, if you want to get her back, you need to make sure that the next time she tries to use you, you stand up to her and show her that youâ€™re no longer the kind of man she can push around and disrespect.

Itâ€™s not about being rude to her, being aggressive or anything silly like that.

Instead, itâ€™s about standing up to her in a calm, confident, loving, but assertive manner to remind her that youâ€™re the more emotionally dominant one.

When she realizes that she can no longer get away with treating you badly, she will naturally feel respect for you again for having the balls to stand up to her.

She will then also feel attracted and then getting her back becomes a lot easier for you to do.

Another mistake isâ€¦!

3. Using a neutral or friendly approach to get her back

If every time you interact with your ex you pretend that all you want is to be her nice, neutral friend, chances are high that thatâ€™s exactly what you will get.

Sheâ€™ll likely continue to use you to her advantage (e.g. when she needs a date for some random event, when she needs help with her car/to paint her house/to help her move), while at the same time making herself available to meeting, hooking up with and dating other guys.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Pretending to be Mr. Nice Guy, Mr. Plain or Mr. Neutral doesn't create a spark.

Instead, it puts you in the friend zone and it reduces your chances of getting your ex back dramatically.

So, if your intention is to get your ex back, you canâ€™t pretend to be her neutral friend and then expect it to happen.

Sheâ€™s got to know for sure that youâ€™re attracted to her in a sexual, romantic way and that youâ€”re open to being with her.

At the same time, you need to focus on making her experience sexual and romantic feelings for you, so that she wants to be with you in that way too.

You can then easily get her back because you both want it to happen.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex Girlfriend Thinks I Will Just Break Up With Her Again in Future

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 6 common reasons why a woman will say that:

1. She noticed that you had a wandering eye when you and her were together, so she assumes that you secretly wish you could get another woman

In some instances, a woman may have noticed that every time she goes out with her guy, he tends to spend more of his time looking at and possibly even flirting with other women, rather than focusing his attention on her.

This naturally made her feel insecure and like she somehow wasn't good enough for him.

Of course, initially she probably made excuses for him and told herself things like, "He's a typical man and that is fine. Men like to look at other women. There's nothing wrong with that, as long as I'm still the number one woman in his life."

Yet, here's the thing!

Although it's perfectly normal for a guy to look at other attractive women and even feel attracted to them, it's not okay for him to spend more time and attention on other women than he does on his own woman.

If she gets a sense that he's secretly wishing he could be with another woman other than her, she will begin to feel jealous and insecure and start thinking things like, "He's always looking at other women when he should have eyes only for me. Obviously he's not as attracted to me as I am to him. This isn't going to work out after all. I just can't go through life waiting for the man I love to cheat on me and dump me for some other woman."

She then decides to break up with him and find herself a man who only has eyes for her.

If her ex then tries to get her back, even if she still has feelings for him, she will usually say something along the lines of, "Sorry, but I can't get back with you because I think you will break up with me again sometime in the future. I don't want to go through that pain again. I think it's better for the both of us to move on and find someone else."

If this is the case between you and your ex girlfriend, to get her back, you need to make her feel loved and appreciated in a way that feels good to her.

You need to show her, via your actions and behavior that she's the only woman for you.

Of course that doesn't mean you go overboard and lose that thing about you that made her feel attracted to you in the first place (i.e. your confidence, emotional masculinity, your charm).

Instead, you need to create a healthy balance between you and her where she feels lucky to be with you, but she also feels wanted, loved and appreciated.

When that happens, she will quickly change her mind about getting back together again and give you another chance.

Another common reason why a woman will say that she thinks you will just break up with her again in the future is because!

2. She feels like you accepted her, rather than selected her

Sometimes a couple falls into a relationship together by accident.

For example: They may grow up together as childhood friends (e.g. they go to the same school, live near each other, hang out in the same social circle) and over time, they drift into a relationship with each other because it seems easy and comfortable.

Alternatively, a guy and a girl might meet under unusual circumstance (e.g. on vacation, at a club while drunk) and end up having sex and dating as a result.

However, deep down the woman might secretly feel like her guy just accepted her because she was available and if he got the chance to pick a woman that he really wants, it wouldn't be her.

As a result, she begins to develop insecurities about herself and her attractiveness to her guy.

Then, if they end up breaking up and the guy then tries to get her back, rather than get back with him (even though she may still have feelings for him), she instead pushes him away and say "No, because she still believes that he is settling for her, rather than selecting her.

Here's the thing!

Even though your ex girlfriend might believe that you accepted her rather than selected her, it doesn't mean it's the truth.

In fact, there are many reasons why a guy will select a woman other than her physical appearance (e.g. she's a kind and honest person, she is loving and supportive of his dreams, she has a great sense of humor and makes him feel good when he's with her).

So, if you did indeed select your ex girlfriend and feel she's the one for you, it's up to you to make her believe that by making her feel happy, attracted and wanted when she's around you.

When she starts to see herself through your eyes (i.e. as though she is the one you truly want), she will naturally drop her guard and open back up to being your girl again.

Another common reason why a woman will say that she thinks you will just break up with her again in the future is because!

3. She's worried that you will eventually break up with her to get revenge on her for breaking up with you

If your ex was the one who initiated the break up with you, she may feel worried that you're secretly angry with her (e.g. because you lost your temper with her when the break up happened, you ignored her for a while after the break up).

As a result, she might be hesitant to get back together again, even if she really wants to, because she's likely thinking things like, "What if he hasn't forgiven me and is only trying to get me back, so that he can make me fall in love with him again and then dump me to get revenge on me for breaking up with him in the first place? I think I'll just have to stick with being broken up instead, because I can't risk being dumped by him. It will just be too painful for me."

She then just pushes you away by saying that she thinks that you will just break up with you again in future.

Of course, you probably don't want to do that and you likely do care for her and want to make things work out.

However, you can't tell her that, because she in all likelihood won't believe you.

That's why you need to show her instead that you care for her (i.e. by acting and behaving in ways that will make her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with you).

When you make your ex girlfriend reconnect with her feelings of love, respect and sexual attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel appreciated), she will see you for the man you really are (i.e. honest, loving, sincere) and she will be happy and willing to give you another chance.

Another common reason why a woman will say that she thinks you will just break up with her again in the future is because

4. She believes that you don't know your own worth yet, but you will

It's only normal for a man (or a woman) to sometimes wonder if they're good enough for the person they're with.

This usually happens when one person feels as though the other is more valuable or attractive than them.

So, if your ex secretly doubted that she was worthy of you, it's only natural that she will feel insecure about being your girl and will then keep pushing you away.

For example: If a guy and woman come from very different social and economic backgrounds and his family and friends don't approve of her, she might easily feel like she's not good enough for him.

Even if he tries to reassure her by saying things like, "I love you and it's my opinion that counts, not anyone else's," she can't stop herself from thinking something along the lines of, "He's just saying that because he hasn't yet realized what a catch he is. When he does, he will see that he can do much better than me and he will quickly dump me. I couldn't handle that. I think it's better that we stay broken up. He deserves to get a woman that is at his level, rather than have me drag him down."

So, if your ex girlfriend felt that she was unworthy of you, to get her back, you can't just tell her that you love her and that she's the one for you, because she probably won't believe you.

What should you do instead?

For her to believe that you truly value her and want to be with her, you'll need to show her that you do, via your actions and the way you treat her and respond to her, both in private and in public (e.g. if you were unwilling to hold her hand in front your family and friends, now is a great time to start doing that at times).

You also need to accept that your ex girlfriend will probably always feel a bit insecure about how fully committed you are to her, because in her mind, she'll likely always see you as being of higher value than her.

However, you can calm that down over time and get her to relax and trust in you and the relationship, but you need to be patient about it.

Whatever you do though, don't swing the other way and become desperate and needy in your attempts to convince her, because she will then lose respect for you and break up with you anyway.

So, just be confident and emotionally strong and focus on making her feel loved, appreciated and valued when you and her are together.

When she starts to see herself through your eyes, she will naturally drop her guard and want to be your girl again.

Another common reason why a woman will say that she thinks you will just break up with her again in the future is becauseâ€¦!

5. She sees how other women look at you and worries that you might act on that interest from women one day

Sometimes, a woman might date a guy who is very attractive and wherever he goes, he always seems to get noticed by other women.

She may then end up thinking things like, "I know he's with me now, but he can have any woman he wants. What if he eventually feels more attraction to someone else and just dumps me? It's better to just let him go now and focus on finding myself a guy who won't leave me, rather than get back with him and then have to deal with the pain and rejection of being dumped by him when he hooks up with some other woman in the future."

Of course, the guy probably doesn't think that way and to him, his girlfriend is his ideal woman, but what he likely doesn't realize is that in general, women are a lot more insecure than men.

For example: According to a report commissioned by Dove Cosmetics, 96% of women around the world don't consider themselves to be beautiful and feel insecure about their physical appearance.

Additionally, according to the National Institute of Mental Health in the U.S.A., women are twice as likely to experience depression than men.

So, even though your ex girlfriend might have given you the impression that she was confident, self-assured and happy about her physical appearance, chances are high that she was a lot more insecure, self-doubting and prone to feelings of depression than you ever realized.

So, if you want to convince her to give your relationship another chance, it's vital that you make her see herself through your eyes (i.e. make her feel loved, desired and like she's your ideal woman).

Once again though, you can't say that to her, instead you need to stay calm and just focus on making her feel happy, attracted and wanted when around you (e.g. by using humor to break through her insecurities, flirting with her to make her feel desirable, making her feel feminine and girly in your presence).

The more that you build on her feelings for you, the more her doubts about giving your relationship another chance will begin to fade.

Suddenly, she will begin seeing herself through your eyes (i.e. as though she is good enough for you).

When that happens, she will stop feeling insecure and start wanting to be your girl again, before another woman actually does come along and seduces you away from her.

Another common reason why a woman will say that she thinks you will just break up with her again in the future is becauseâ€¦!

6. She's just saying that to see if she can get some power over you and change the relationship dynamic when you get back together

A woman will sometimes say that she thinks her ex will break up with her again in the future so she doesn't want to get back with him, simply to see how he will react.

For example: Will he remain confident and emotionally strong, or will he become desperate and hand all his power over to her in an attempt to get her back?

If he crumbles and begins chasing after and saying things like, â€œNo, no! That's not true! Why would I want you back if I was going to do that? Can't you see that I love you and that I want you to be my girl? What can I say or do to prove it to you? I'll do anything!â€ rather than feel relieved and reassured, a woman will usually just feel turned off.

Why?

In most cases, one of the main reasons why a woman initially feels drawn to her guy is because he is confident, emotionally strong and emotionally dominant.

So, if he suddenly becomes wimpy, self-doubting and hands all his power over to her (i.e. by offering to do whatever she wants), he will lose the very thing that attracted her to him in the first place (i.e. his confidence and emotional masculinity).

As a result, she stops feeling respect and attraction for him and then even though her resistance to give him another chance started off as a test, she now feels convinced that she was right not to want him back.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't fall into the trap of becoming desperate and give all your power over to her.

Instead, try to see the funny side of how she's behaving, rather than getting sucked into the fake drama that she is creating.

Of course initially your ex girlfriend might be a bit shocked that you're not chasing after her and she may even say things like, â€œSee? This is what I'm talking about. You're already acting like someone who will break up with me in the future. You're being disrespectful towards me and I don't like it.â€

However, even if she doesn't show it, she will be feeling respect and attraction for you for being confident and emotionally strong enough to pass her test.

She will then realize that you really are the man she wants to be with and won't be able to stop herself from reconnecting with her original feelings of respect, attraction and love for you once again.

Where a Guy Might Go Wrong When an Ex Girlfriend Refuses to Give Him Another Chance Because She Thinks They'll Just Break Up Again in the Future

To get your ex girlfriend back, you simply need to re-spark her feelings for you enough, so that she can't resist wanting to be with you again.

This is why you need to focus on thinking, saying and doing things that are attractive to her (e.g. being confident and emotionally strong, using humor to break down her defenses, flirting with her to create sparks of attraction), rather than doing things that will turn her off.

For example: 3 mistakes you should avoid making areâ€¦|

1. Promising to never leave her if she just gives you one more chance to prove your love for her

As tempted as you might be to say something like, â€œI know you think we will break up again in the future, but I promise you that wonâ€™t happen. I will never leave you because I love you and nothing will come between us ever again. Please just give me a chance to prove to you that our love will last,â€ donâ€™t do it.

Why?

Firstly, you canâ€™t make promises to your ex girlfriend that you might not be able to keep.

The truth is, no one knows what happens down the road of life and something might occur that actually does cause you to break up with her in the future.

She will then throw it in your face that youâ€™re not a man of your word.

Secondly, and most importantly, saying that to her is once again giving her power over you, which makes you less attractive in her eyes.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

2. Pouring your heart out in a long letter or email and turning her off in the process

Telling your ex girlfriend how you feel about her in a letter or e-mail might seem romantic to you, but to a woman, itâ€™s a sign that youâ€™re being too emotionally sensitive.

As a result, she feels turned off.

So, even though you may believe that pouring your heart out to her is the right thing to do, because youâ€™ve seen guys acting like that in movies, or in music videos, it isnâ€™t.

In the real world, women canâ€™t feel respect and attraction for a guy who is emotionally sensitive and expresses his feelings like a woman does (i.e. women are the ones who write soppy love letters to an ex, not men).

So, forget about telling your ex about how you feel and focus instead on making her feel the way she wants to feel during interactions with you (e.g. respectful, attracted, in love).

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Not realizing that some women like the thrill of the chase when it comes to guys

When a guy desperately wants to get his ex girlfriend back, he usually makes the mistake of chasing after her and begging and pleading with her to give him another chance.

Essentially heâ€™s hoping that the more he pursues her, the more she will realize that heâ€™s serious about her and she will feel convinced that they wonâ€™t break up again in the future.

As a result, he stops being a challenge and rather than want him back, his ex actually loses interest. Why?

What a guy like that doesnâ€™t realize is that a woman doesnâ€™t want to feel as though she is more valuable or powerful than him.

She wants him to make her feel as though she needs to chase after him, because if she doesnât, she will lose him to another woman.

She doesnât want to feel as though she can push him around and treat him like dirt and he will put up with it.

So, if you want to get your ex girlfriend back, be a bit more of a challenge to her, rather than being a good little boy who chases after her and does whatever she says.

Youâll be surprised to see how effective that actually is in making a woman feel surges of respect and attraction for you again.

Suddenly, she starts to chase you and when that happens, getting her back becomes easy and effortless.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Help My Ex to Get Over Her Resentment Towards Me and Give Us a Chance

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 things that you can do to achieve that:

1. Stop trying to get her to give you another chance

One of the most common reactions that guys have when they get broken up with is to quickly try to convince their ex to give them another chance.

For example: A guy might start off by apologizing to his ex over and over again for what happened and saying things like, â€œIâ€™m so, so sorry for what I did! I know I messed up badly, but I promise I will never do anything to hurt you ever again. Please forgive me and give me one more chance to make it up to you.â€

If that doesnâ€™t work and she remains closed off, he might then resort to begging and pleading with her and saying something along the lines of, â€œIâ€™m begging you. Please give me another chance. I swear to you that I will do anything you ask me to do to make things right.â€

Yet, a woman rarely gets over her resentment towards her ex and gives him another chance based on his apologies or promises to do her bidding, especially when he is being desperate, needy and emotionally submissive as he tries to get her back.

In fact, that usually just gives her even more reasons to want to stay broken up, because women are instinctively turned off by emotional weakness in men.

So, if that has been your approach to getting your ex back so far, you need to stop right away, because youâ€™re likely turning her off even more.

Of course that doesnâ€™t mean you should give up.

On the contrary.

When you use the right approach, you can easily make your ex get over her resentment towards you and give your relationship another chance.

So, what should you do to make that happen?

Start using interactions with your ex to make her feel the way she wants to feel when sheâ€™s with you (e.g. respectful, attracted, like a real woman, exhilarated).

It has to be about how she feels, not about how bad you feel and how you want another chance with her.

If she currently resents you, then she cares about her own feelings right now and isnâ€™t going to be too interested about how youâ€™re feeling, or what you want.

Thatâ€™s why you canâ€™t convince her to get over her resentment towards you with words.

Instead, you need to convince her via your actions, behavior and the way you make her feel when sheâ€™s with you.

When you rebuild her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you (i.e. by showing her that youâ€™re now a new and improved man), she will automatically stop being so resentful towards you.

Her guard will come down and she will then open up to talking to you over the phone and seeing you in person to prove to herself that you really have changed and aren't putting on an act just to get her back.

Then, when she realizes that you really are a different man from the guy she broke up with, not only will she stop resenting you, she will also begin to open up to the idea of getting back together again.

However, if you don't reactivate her feelings for you first and just try to convince her with words, she will keep pushing you away and saying things like, â€œI don't want anything more to do with you. Just accept that it's over and leave me alone!â€

Another thing you can do to help your ex get over her resentment towards you and give you another chance is to

2. Create feelings of sexual tension between you and her and build on it

Right now, any positive feelings your ex might still have for you are buried under negative emotions such as resentment, anger and disillusionment.

As a result, she doesn't feel drawn to you.

In fact, the idea of imagining herself in your arms, hugging, kissing or having sex, likely doesn't appeal to her at all.

You need to change that and one of the best ways to do that is to create so much sexual tension between you and her, that when she's alone and thinking about you, rather than think things like, â€œHe's such a jerk! I will never forgive him,â€ she starts thinking something along the lines of, â€œWhat's gotten into me? I thought I was truly over him but now I find myself thinking about him all the time and imagining what it would be like for him to kiss me and touch me again. I want him and it's driving me crazy!â€

How can you do that?

To begin with, you need to stop putting yourself in a position of weakness around your ex (e.g. being extra nice and sweet to her, being afraid to stand up to her when she's being mean or unreasonable, letting her push you around and blame you for the break up, pretending you only want to be friends with her from now on), because that turns her off.

Then you need to create some sexual tension between you and her, so she naturally wants to kiss you, hug you, have sex with you and see what happens after that.

One way to do that is by flirting with her in a relaxed manner, without giving off a, â€œI want you to get over your resentment towards me and give us a chance,â€ vibe.

When it comes to getting an ex back, flirting is one of the most effective ways to break down the walls your ex has put up between herself and you and get the sexual energy flowing once again.

It allows her to feel attracted to you, without worrying that it means she is agreeing to give you another chance.

It also makes her think about you in a more positive way when she's not interacting with you.

Then instead of thinking things like, â€œI don't want anything to do with him anymore,â€ she begins to wonder, â€œWhy can't I stop thinking about him and hoping that he's going to call me again?â€ or, â€œWhy do I want to see him again?â€

So, don't be afraid to flirt with your ex and make her laugh and smile when you interact with her. The more you build the tension between you and her, the less she will be able to hold on to her feelings of resentment towards you.

Her guard will come down and you can then kiss her, have sex with her and get her back into a relationship with you.

Another thing you can do to help your ex get over her resentment towards you and give you another chance is to

3. Let her see that she feels differently about you and you're not even asking for a relationship

One of the reasons why your ex is currently feeling resentful towards you is because she's thinking of you based on her last impression of you (i.e. at the end of your relationship and after you and her broke up).

In other words, if you were being insecure, needy, clingy, immature, irresponsible, submissive, took her for granted, treated her more like a friend than a lover, or behaved in any other unattractive ways, your ex is going to be remembering those things about you and that is going to make her feel resentful towards you.

So, for her to change her mind and want to give you another chance, you need to show her that you're now a different man than the guy in her mind, so she will naturally start to feel differently about you.

Of course, you can't tell her that you've changed, because she probably won't believe you.

Instead, you need to show her that you've changed, based on how you communicate and interact with her on phone calls and in person.

For example: Imagine that a guy is on a call with his ex woman and she says something along the lines of, "I don't have feelings for you anymore. What we had is over and I'm never going to get back into a relationship with you again!"

She will likely be expecting him to get upset when she says that and possibly even respond by saying something like, "Please don't say that! I know I made a mistake but I'm willing to do whatever it takes to make it up to you."

In her mind, that will prove to her that he's still the same guy he was when she broke up with him (e.g. emotionally weak, needy, insecure, unable to stand up for himself) and she will stick to her decision to not give him another chance.

So, to show her that he's changed, he reacts differently to the way she's expecting him to.

He laughs at her (in a loving way) and says something like, "I'm cool with that. We don't need to get back together again. It's totally fine. Let's just relax, hang out and enjoy each other's company as friends instead," and then he changes the subject.

Chances are, his ex will be shocked (in a good way) by his new, confident attitude towards her.

She will then open up even more to talking to him over the phone and meeting up with him in person to see how she feels when she's with him.

In the same way, when you show your ex that you truly have changed and improved in some of the ways that actually matter to her and at the same time, you don't put pressure on her to give you another chance, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling differently about you (i.e. respectful, attracted).

You can then build on those feelings and get her to the point where she is the one who starts talking about getting back together again, rather than the other way around.

Another thing you can do to help your ex get over her resentment towards you and give you another chance is to

4. Understand the secret, subtle things that turned her off about you

In most cases, a guy has a general idea about what caused his relationship with his ex to crumble (e.g. he became too clingy, he took her for granted, he didn't want to commit), but a lot of guys don't really know the deeper, more subtle reasons that cause a woman's feelings to erode over time.

This is why, unless you can fully understand your ex's real, more subtle reasons for breaking up with you and change those things about yourself, she's not going to stop resenting you and give you another chance.

So, if you're not 100% sure why your ex is currently resenting you and unwilling to give you another chance, here are a few examples of some of the secret things that turn a woman off in a relationship with a guy:

- She feels like she can't be her true self around him (e.g. because he mocks her dreams and goals, he's always criticizing her appearance/friends/intelligence).
- He is easily pushed around and manipulated by other people and can't stand up for himself (e.g. his friends influence him into doing things she doesn't approve of, his co-workers take advantage of him by giving him their extra workload).
- He has a wandering eye.
- He's always assuming the worst about her (e.g. if she's late in coming home or gets a message on her phone from another guy, he assumes it's because she's cheating on him, if she used to drink/take drugs before she met him he accuses her of relapsing if she goes out with her friends).
- He expects her to do everything for him while he just sits around being waited on by her.
- She matured faster than him and feels like he's holding her back (e.g. she wants to settle down/start a family/focus on her career while he's irresponsible and reckless).
- He avoids building better relationships with her family and friends and tends to keep to himself, even though she has told him that this is important to her.

Once you understand the real reasons she felt pushed to break up with you, you can re-attract her in the ways that really matter to her (i.e. by responding and behaving differently to the way you did before).

When she experiences your new, attractive behavior, she will naturally begin to feel more respect and attraction for you as a man.

When that happens, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to hold on to her resentment towards you. She will then drop her guard and allow herself to open back up to the idea of giving you another chance.

Another thing you can do to help your ex get over her resentment towards you and give you another chance is to

5. Become more emotionally independent

Essentially, what this means is that you need to reach the point where you can

- Be happy and content with or without her.
- Be confident with or without her support.
- Move forward in your life with or without her.
- Believe in yourself and in your value as a man, with or without her approval.

Of course, feeling that way doesn't mean you don't want her back.

The big difference is that you don't need her back to have a good, productive and successful life.

You want her back, but don't need her back.

When you focus on becoming genuinely happy without your ex, not only will it bother you less that she's being resentful towards you, but you will also become more attractive to her (and to women in general).

Women, including exes, are attracted to a good man who is confident, happy and forward moving in life, regardless of what the woman he loves says or does.

In other words, he is emotionally strong and independent and is good to her and appreciates having her in his life, but he doesn't need her.

Your ex won't admit that she wants you to be like that, but be like that and she will want you.

Her feelings of resentment will begin to melt away and all of a sudden she wants to talk to you on the phone and meet up with you in person, because she feels good when she's interacting with you.

Common Problems Guys Experience When Trying to Make an Ex Stop Resenting Them so They Can Get Back Together Again

You now have 5 things you can do to help your ex get over her resentment towards you and give you another chance.

Here are 5 common problems/mistakes that guys in a situation like yours can experience along the way

1. She closes up and doesn't want to work on the relationship

Sometimes, a guy simply cannot understand why his woman is feeling so resentful towards him and refusing to give their relationship another chance.

In his mind he may be thinking things like, She owes it to me to give me another chance, because at the beginning of our relationship we promised each other we would be together forever, no matter what happened to try and tear us apart.

He might then say to his ex, “You promised that nothing could ever make you stop loving me. So, why are you being so stubborn now and refusing to give me a chance? Can’t you see that we owe it to each other to try again?”

Yet, rather than see the error of her ways, saying that to a woman only makes her close up and not want to work on the relationship even more.

Here’s the thing|

In the past, a woman would be forced to marry a guy picked out for her by her father or guardian and then she had to stay with him for life, regardless of how miserable she felt with him.

That’s not the way it works anymore.

These days, if a woman loses too much respect and attraction for a guy, she can not only break up with him, but she can also decide not to give him another chance if she doesn’t want to, because she’s not his property.

He doesn’t own her and she can do what she wants based on how she feels in the moment (i.e. how she feels now is what matters to her, not how she felt before).

So, if you try to force your ex into giving you another chance, she’ll not only end up resenting you even more, she’ll also make it harder for you to interact with her so that you can reactivate her feelings and get her back.

Another common problem/mistake that guys in a situation like yours can experience along the way is|

2. She doesn’t feel motivated to give him another chance because the attraction isn’t mutual

Very often, when a guy wants his ex back, he focuses on trying to convince her to give him another chance.

Essentially, he pushes her to open up (e.g. by begging and pleading with her, apologizing to her over and over again, promising her that he will change, offering to do anything she wants to make her happy) so that they can be a couple again.

However, because he hasn’t bothered to reactivate her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him first, she keeps pushing him away and saying, “No. I don’t want to be a couple again. Why can’t you get that into your head and just leave me alone!”

So, if you want your ex to give you another chance, don’t waste time trying to convince her to stop resenting you and open back up to the idea of having a relationship.

Instead, just focus on using every interaction that you have with her (i.e. especially over the phone and in person) to re-spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

The more she starts to associate positive feelings to interacting with you, the more her resentment melts away.

However, if you keep trying to force her to get over her resentment and give you a chance, the more stubborn and closed off she will remain.

Another common problem/mistake that guys in a situation like yours can experience along the way is|

3. She is turned off by his desperation to get another chance with her

In most cases, the more a guy tries to convince his ex to give him another chance, the more turned off she feels by what she perceives as his obsessive, needy, desperate behavior.

She then starts thinking things like, â€œHeâ€™s totally out of control. I am now seeing him in a way that I never did before and itâ€™s creeping me out. Heâ€™s being so wimpy and needy all of a sudden and itâ€™s turning me off. In fact, Iâ€™m even more convinced now that heâ€™s not the right guy for me and that I made the right decision in breaking up with him.â€

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Wanting your ex back is perfectly fine.

However, you canâ€™t become desperate for it to happen.

If you let her sense that youâ€™re feeling desperate, you will be doing the opposite of what a man needs to do to get an ex back (i.e. reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him).

Another common problem/mistake that guys in a situation like yours can experience along the way isâ€¦

4. He tries to make her get over her resentment via text messages

Sometimes, a guy might send his ex walls of text messages apologizing, explaining and begging her to stop being so resentful towards him.

He may say things like, â€œIâ€™m really sorry for stuffing things up between us. I know I hurt you and I will do whatever it takes to make it up to you. Please stop being so resentful towards me all the time. I just want to make things right between us. Why wonâ€™t you at least give me a chance?â€

Yet, rather than think something like, â€œHe really sounds so sincere. Have I been too hard on him? Maybe I should give us a chance,â€ this makes her feel even more resentful (e.g. because he doesnâ€™t even care enough for her to call or meet up).

She then closes herself off even more and possibly even blocks his number on her phone so he canâ€™t get through to her.

Another common problem/mistake that guys in a situation like yours can experience along the way isâ€¦

4. He makes her feel like the relationship could work if she was willing to put in the effort

When a woman is being stubborn and refusing to let go of her resentment, a guy might feel tempted to say something like, â€œWhy are you making things so difficult? I know I stuffed up but at least Iâ€™m trying to make it right. Youâ€™re the one who wonâ€™t even try. I bet if you stop resenting me so much, we could actually work things out and fix our relationship.â€

Yet, that's not how to get a woman back.

You've got to make her naturally feel respect, attraction and love for you.

When you do that, it becomes practically effortless.

She's motivated to listen, open up and help make the relationship work.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Thank You Letter to Ex Girlfriend

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 tips to make the thank you letter be something that reawakens some of her feelings for you:

1. Keep it as brief as possible

As tempting as it may be to want to write a long letter to your ex girlfriend, listing all the things you love about her, talking about all the wonderful times you shared together and pouring out your feelings for her, don't do it.

Why?

A woman doesn't like getting long-winded letters (emails or texts) about her ex's feelings when she doesn't have feelings for him.

Instead, she just feels turned off by his neediness and emotional softness at a time when she really needs him to harden up and be more manly and in control of himself.

If you write too much, she may end up thinking something like, "Why is he being so mushy and soppy? I know we had some great times together, but it's over now. Does he think that telling me how great I am, or how he feels about me is going to make me change my mind about breaking up? I hope not, because that's not going to happen. I don't have feelings for him anymore and a sweet, romantic, thank you letter isn't going to change that."

That's why you need to make sure that your letter is short and sweet and interesting enough to make her want to talk to you on the phone, or meet up with you in person, where you can reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

One of the best ways to do that is to

2. Use humor in the email or letter to make her smile, laugh and feel good to be hearing from you

Using humor in a letter is one of the fastest ways to break down a woman's defenses and make her feel more open towards you, so don't be afraid to make her laugh and smile.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should write jokes or anything like that.

Instead, while you're thanking her for being a great person, you can then throw in a joke about something she used to do for you to make her feel good about herself.

For example: If you say something like, "I really appreciate that you were always so helpful," you can then use some humor by adding something along the lines of, "I miss that about you! especially when I can't remember how the vacuum cleaner works!" and then add a smiley face or an "Lol!" to let her know that you're just teasing her.

When you use humor and get your ex smiling and laughing, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to hold on to her negative feelings about you.

Instead, she starts feeling respect and attraction for you again and she begins to think things like, "I wonder what has gotten into him? He's being so funny and confident all of sudden. Maybe heâ€™s changed. Maybe I should text him and see what happens from there.â€™

Her guard then comes down and she becomes more open to the idea of talking and interacting with you to see where things go from there.

So, donâ€™t be afraid to use a bit of humor to break the ice when you write a letter to your ex girlfriend, especially if sheâ€™s currently being closed off and uninterested.

Of course, donâ€™t just joke around in your letter, instead you should alsoâ€™!

3. Thank her for being who she is and not putting up with who you were back then

For example: You might say something like, â€™I just wanted to thank you for being the great person that you are. Regardless of how bad things got between us, you were always nice and I respect that about you. Iâ€™m also grateful that you had the courage to stand up to the guy I used to be back then, rather than let me get away with being a jerk.â€™

By saying something like that to her, youâ€™re subtly suggesting that you are different now, without actually needing to say it.

As a result, she becomes curious about you and opens up to talking to you on the phone or meeting up with you to see for herself if itâ€™s true, or if you were just saying that to make her drop her guard.

Then, once youâ€™ve said everything you wanted to say in your letter, you need toâ€™!

4. End the letter with humor

Again, using humor to finish off your letter to your ex girlfriend is a great way to leave her with a â€™sweet taste in her mouthâ€™ (i.e. feeling good about you).

An example of that is to say something along the lines of, â€™Anywayâ€™ I just wanted to tell you that Iâ€™m grateful for having had you in my life. Of course, I do miss you and wish we could be together again, but on the bright side, I know Iâ€™m going to live a lot longer now that youâ€™re no longer cooking for me! Haha!â€™

Finallyâ€™!

5. Sign off with love

For example: â€™Love, your ex boyfriend, Peter.â€™

Quite often, a guy will be too afraid to say something like that because he doesnâ€™t want to scare his ex off by showing her that he still has feelings for her.

In his mind he may be thinking things like, â€™If I sign off with love, she will know that I still care for her and then sheâ€™ll be turned off. Sheâ€™ll close herself off even more than she already has and I wonâ€™t be able to get her back.â€™

Yet, the opposite is true.

If a guy pretends not to have feelings for his ex anymore, sheâ€™s usually going to take that as a sign that she needs to move on, rather than hang around hoping he might change his mind.

Another reason why a guy doesnâ€™t want to sign off a letter with love is because he thinks itâ€™s a sign of weakness (i.e. because she will know that he still cares for her and she may then have power over him).

Yet, letting your ex know that you still care for her is actually a sign of emotional strength.

The truth is, nothing that you say can make you lose any power, because you are the man.

You are the stronger one.

You are always in the power position, because you are the man, so you can sign your letter off with love and not worry about it.

It's just raw, honest masculinity.

Women respect that kind of confident, non-needy honesty from a man.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Writing a Thank You Letter to an Ex

Now that you know what you should do in your letter to your ex, here are 5 things you should avoid:

1. Coming across as arrogant based on how happy you say you are now that she has broken up with you

Sometimes, when a guy writes a thank you letter to his ex, he might try to sound like he's really happy without her, so as not to come across as being needy or desperate.

He might then say things like, I'm having such a wonderful time now that we're broken up. I never realized how much fun my single friends were having until now. I've been to more clubs, bars and parties than ever before in my life. It's fantastic!

In his mind he may be thinking, When she reads that she will see that I'm not sitting around at home feeling sorry for myself and that I'm having fun without her. She might then start regretting that she let me go and contact me so that we can work things out.

Yet, here's the thing!

Although being genuinely happy and moving on with your life can impress your ex girlfriend (because women love the idea of being with a man who wants her, but doesn't need her to be happy and content), making it sound like you're better off now that she's out of your life, isn't a good idea.

Why?

Rather than be impressed by your new-found emotional independence, your ex will likely see your letter as an attempt to rub her face in it.

She will perceive you as being arrogant and full of yourself and she will then likely ignore your letter altogether and probably even unfriend you on social media and block your number on her phone too (if she hasn't already done that), making it even more difficult for you to interact with her so that you can get her back.

Another thing you should avoid when writing a thank you letter to your ex girlfriend is

2. Being overly nice, polite or sweet

The opposite of being arrogant in your letter is being super nice, sweet and soppy.

For example: A guy might write things like, â€œI just wanted to say how much I appreciate the time we had together. Youâ€™re a wonderful woman and Iâ€™m a better man because I had you in my life. I only wish you the best from now on and hope you will always be happy.â€

Essentially, he thinks heâ€™s being a perfect gentleman to his ex and that if she reads that she will be reminded that heâ€™s actually a good guy and then open up to giving him another chance.

However, the opposite is usually true.

The truth is, women feel disgusted by that, if the feelings aren't mutual.

Another thing you should avoid when writing a thank you letter to your ex girlfriend isâ€¦!

3. Making it all about you

In most cases, when a guy decides to write a letter to his ex, itâ€™s usually because he wants to pour his feelings out to her and let her know that he still cares about her.

However, when a woman has lost touch with her feelings of love, respect and sexual attraction for a guy, him writing to her to express his feelings doesnâ€™t mean that much to her at all.

So, rather than think, â€œThatâ€™s just so amazing! He still cares about me so much. That simply melts my heart and makes me regret breaking up with him,â€ she instead feels turned off by his lack of understanding of her feelings.

In some cases, a woman will even take that as a sign that he is more selfish and self-absorbed than she initially thought.

She will think something like, â€œMe! Me! Me! Thatâ€™s all he talks about in his entire letter to me. Everything is about him and how he feels! He only cares about himself. Itâ€™s like he doesnâ€™t even realize that it takes two to make a relationship work. He thinks that just because he cares for me, I should just accept that and give him another chance. Well, Iâ€™m not going to get back with a guy based on a letter about how he feels. Heâ€™s definitely going to have to do more than that.â€

So, if you want to get your ex back, just understand that your letter canâ€™t all be about how much you care for her or how much you need her back in your life, because she wonâ€™t care about that.

What she cares about now is how she feels, not about how you feel and what you want.

So, your approach to getting her back needs to be about how you make her feel, in your letter and then when you talk to her on the phone or in person.

Another thing you should avoid when writing a thank you letter to your ex girlfriend isâ€¦!

4. Wanting her back, but acting like you just want to thank her

Most women are not stupid and they can easily see through a guyâ€™s intentions.

So, if you were upset when you and your ex broke up and tried fervently to make her change her mind, itâ€™s likely that sheâ€™s going to know you still have feelings for her and want her back.

If she then gets a letter from you where youâ€™re acting like you just want to thank her, sheâ€™s probably going to see through it and sense your real intentions (i.e. to make her think that youâ€™re happy without her, that the break up was the best thing that ever happened to you and that you wouldn't ever consider getting back with her).

Sheâ€™s will then perceive you as being childish and immature and focus even more on moving on without you.

Another thing you should avoid when writing a thank you letter to your ex girlfriend isâ€¦!

5. Losing confidence in your ability to get her back if she doesn't reply or if she replies in a neutral way

The truth is, most women won't make it easy for an ex to get her back.

Instead, she will sit back and wait to see how emotionally strong a man he really is.

For example:

- Is he going to crumble and start doubting his chances with her just because she doesn't respond to his thank you letter, or only responds in neutral way?
- Will he give up on getting her back just because she's being a little cold and aloof towards him?
- Will he take the next step and call her on the phone, or will he stick to letters and text messages?

If he reacts in any of those ways, it will prove to her that he's not really the man she wants to be in a relationship with.

On the other hand, if her ex remains confident no matter how she reacts to his thank you letter and he then just calls her up and focuses on making her feel attracted again, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect for him as a man.

When she feels respect for him, she will also start to feel attracted again and when that happens, her defenses will come down and she will open herself up to being his girl again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 Examples of How to Run Into Your Ex On Purpose

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The obvious thing to do is to go to places that you know she will be at and hopefully be there at the same time, right?

The less obvious thing is what you should actually say and do once you run into her.

That is what it really counts and will determine whether or not running into her turns out to a plus or a negative on your chances of getting her back.

So, here are 3 examples of how to run into your ex on purpose and what to say and do when you finally come face to face with her:

1. Go to the same supermarket or grocery store at the approximate time she'd be shopping there

If you know your ex's shopping habits, accidentally bumping into her at the supermarket is the perfect way to run into her on purpose.

Of course, you need to first make sure that you don't come across as a stalker and follow her to the supermarket in your car and then around all the aisles.

Instead, you need to get your timing right so that you literally bump into her unexpectedly as you come round the corner of one of the aisles.

When that happens, smile at her in a relaxed, easy-going way and say something along the lines of, âHey! Fancy seeing you here.â

She will likely be surprised to see you there and she may respond with something like, âWhat are you doing here?â

Whatever she says, just smile and say, âWell, obviously Iâm doing the same thing youâre doingâ| getting my groceries,â then add, âI see youâve got pasta (or whatever food item you can see) in your cart. So, whatâs for dinner tonight?â

She will most likely ask, âWhy do you want to know?â and you can then say in a joking way, âWell, you were always such a lousy cook that I want to make sure I know what to tell the paramedics if I have to call them to rescue you,â and have a laugh with her about that.

Sheâs probably going to smile and laugh and say something like, âHey! How dare you say that? You know Iâm an excellent cook!â

You can then laugh some more and say, âOh yeah, I forgot. Iâm the one who is a lousy cook.â

Alternatively, when she asks, âWhy do you want to know?â you can answer, âWell, I want to know to see if it's something I'd be interested in eating. You were always a good cook, so maybe you can cook me dinner tonightâ and have a laugh with her about that.

At that point, she is probably going to be smiling and thinking about you in a positive way, because youâre not acting like a desperate ex and trying to get her back in the middle of the grocery store and are instead just being a bit playful.

She will also be feeling surges of respect and attraction for you, which is what you want.

From there, you can either continue shopping with her and having a nice, relaxed conversation (e.g. ask her how she's been, tell her a bit about what you've been doing).

Just remember!

You need to stay confident and only talk about positive things you've been doing.

Then, if things seem to be going well and she seems open, you might say, Hey, it was really nice chatting to you like this. Let's catch up sometime this week for a cup of coffee as friends. I'm free on Wednesday and Sunday afternoon.

Initially she might be a bit resistant to the idea and say something like, No, I don't think that's a good idea.

However, the important thing is that you maintain your confidence and respond with something along the lines of, Look, it's no big deal. We're two friends catching up. There's nothing wrong with that. We're mature enough to catch up and say hi as friend. It's not like we're going to get back together again just because we're having coffee. So, let's catch up and say hi something this week.

Usually, when you say something like that to a woman and remain calm, relaxed and confident, she will likely say Yes, (even if it's only out of curiosity to see for herself if you've really changed).

Then, just go ahead and make plans to meet her at a time that suits you both, say goodbye and go your separate ways.

You want to leave her wondering, What just happened? I can't believe I just agreed to have coffee with my ex. He's just so different all of a sudden. I actually enjoyed being around him again.

Just remember though!

When you meet up with her in person, you've got to continue sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you if you want to change how she feels and get her back.

Another example of how to run into your ex on purpose is!

2. Go to the same bar or nightclub

Bars and nightclubs are designed for people to let their hair down, let go of their inhibitions (e.g. by having a few drinks, dancing) and have fun.

This is why it's a great place to run into your ex on purpose.

Of course, don't just show up by yourself and then sit in a corner all night sneaking looks her.

That would be creepy and a definite way to turn her off even more.

Instead, make sure you are with at least one friend, so you don't look lonely and out of place.

Then, confidently walk up to your ex and say, Hi.

Remember though!

She will most likely be there with her friends or work colleagues, so make sure to be charming and greet everyone in the group.

From there, have a friendly chat with her.

Focus on maintaining your confidence with her no matter what she says or does to put you off (e.g.

sheâs initially cold and aloof, she only gives you one word answers during conversation).

At the same time, use humor to create sparks of attraction and get her thinking things like, *âI canât believe Iâm actually smiling and enjoying myself. Whatâs going on? Why am I feeling so drawn to him again all of a sudden?*â

Then, after a few minutes of conversation where youâre making her smile, laugh and feel good to be interacting with you again, say something like,

*âAnywayâ I need to get back to my friend. It was great seeing you though. Have fun. Bye for now,*â and walk away and enjoy the night with your friend.

If she keeps looking at you over the next 30 minutes to an hour, go back to her, or let her come to you.

When that happens, focus on saying and doing the types of things that are going to keep turning her feelings on for you.

For example:

- Be confident and charismatic, no matter what she says or does to test you (e.g. shows interest one minute and pulls away the next).
- Use humor to lighten the mood and make her feel relaxed around you.
- Make her feel feminine and girly by being emotionally masculine.
- Flirt with her to create some sexual tension between you.
- Use her uncertainty about talking to you to create funny moments that bring you closer together.
- Show her via the way you respond to what she says or does that youâre not intimidated by her, or insecure and hurt without her support.

As you talk to her, pay attention to the signs that she may be giving you (e.g. licking her lips, touching you on the arm and/or leg, playing with her hair or a necklace, talking about the good times that you and her shared) that sheâs open to connecting with you on a more intimate level.

When she seems relaxed and happy, lean in and give her a hug and if she doesnât pull away, give her a kiss.

From there, if sheâs open, you can go to your place or hers, hook up with her sexually and get her back.

Another example of how to run into your ex on purpose isâ!

3. Run into her on her lunch break

A good way to run into your ex on purpose is to bump into her in the cafeteria or at a coffee shop/restaurant she likes to have lunch at.

Of course this applies if she works, or if she studies at university.

When you see her, you can confidently walk up to her and say hello.

Then say something funny to create a spark of attraction by making her smile and laugh.

For example: Imagine your ex is eating lunch in the cafeteria at her university.

You can approach her and say in a light-hearted, joking way something along the lines, âHey! I just wanted to warn you. Stay away from the jello. I heard that the science department experimented on it and itâ€™s now got some weird chemical that makes women fall irresistibly back in love with their exâ€™s.â€

She will likely smile and she might say something like, â€Oh, really?â€ or, â€Donâ€™t worry, that will never happen to me.â€

You can then say, â€Well, donâ€™t say I didnâ€™t warn you,â€ and have a laugh with her about that.

You can then say, â€Okay, Iâ€™m only joking. The jello is totally cool by the way.â€

At this point she will likely be smiling, laughing and feeling good to be talking to you.

She will also be feeling surges of respect for you for having the confidence and social skills to make her laugh and smile even though youâ€™re broken up.

She will then most likely be open to you joining her for lunch.

From there, continue to spark her feelings by flirting with her and creating some sexual tension and then say something like, â€Itâ€™s really great to run into you like this, but Iâ€™m afraid I canâ€™t stay very long.â€

Then chat for a few more minutes and get up to leave.

If youâ€™ve been sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you, she will likely be thinking something like, â€Awwwâ€| does he have to leave so soon? I canâ€™t believe Iâ€™m thinking this but Iâ€™ve had so much fun chatting to him.â€

You can then call her on the phone after a day or two and get her to meet up with you for a catch up. At the meet up, fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Running into an Ex On Purpose

Running into your ex is probably something you can easily do.

However, when you come face-to-face with her, you need to make sure that you wonâ€™t turn her off by making some of the common mistakes that most guys make with their ex.

For example:

1. Looking nervous when you approach or start talking to your ex

Thereâ€™s no point in running into your ex, if youâ€™re going to blow it by being too nervous around her and turn her off.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€|

If a woman hears the nervousness in her exâ€™s voice and picks up the insecurity and self-doubt in his body language, rather than think, â€Awwwâ€| heâ€™s feeling so anxious and scared to be talking to me. Thatâ€™s so cute. I should be extra sweet and nice to him and make it easy for him to try and get me back,â€ sheâ€™s going to feel turned off by what she perceives as his emotional weakness.

She will then likely respond by being cold and aloof, which in most instances will make the guy feel even more nervous and insecure, which then makes her feel even more turned off and so on and so forth.

So, approaching or talking to your ex in anything other than a confident, self-assured way will simply serve as another reason why she wants to remain broken up.

Another mistake isâ€¦!

2. Only being friendly and neutral and not creating a spark

Sometimes a guy will go to a lot of trouble to run into his ex on purpose, only to waste the opportunity by pretending that heâ€™s only interested in being her friend now.

For example:

- He only has a nice and polite conversation with her.
- Doesnâ€™t flirt to create sexual tension.
- Doesnâ€™t use ballsy humor to make her feel attracted.
- He allows her to call the shots during the interaction so she feels more emotionally dominant than him.

Unfortunately though, being friendly or neutral with an ex who has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him doesnâ€™t work.

Rather than open up and want to continue the interaction, she will likely just make an excuse to get away from him as quickly as possible and he will have wasted his chance.

So, if you want to re-attract your ex and get her back, donâ€™t pretend that you donâ€™t.

Instead, you need to actively spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you, so that her defenses start to come down and she opens up to the idea of giving you another chance.

Another mistake isâ€¦!

3. Overstaying your welcome

When it comes to running into your ex on purpose, you need to remember that â€˜less is more.â€™

In other words, rather than hang around so long that your ex starts thinking things like, â€˜This is so awkward. What does he want? Why wonâ€™t he just go away?â€™ you want to leave her wanting more and thinking, â€˜Wow, that was so much fun. I wish heâ€™d stayed longer.â€™

Of course, if your ex is giving you clear signs that sheâ€™s open and wants you to stay, donâ€™t just get up and leave.

However, if sheâ€™s being a bit reserved and cautious, simply focus on sparking her feelings and then leave.

Then just call her the next day, arrange to see her again and fully reactivate her feelings so that she wants to get back together again.

Another mistake isâ€¦!

4. Trying to discuss the relationship

As tempting as it might be to want to discuss the relationship and getting back together again when you run into your ex, if you havenâ€™t fully reactivated her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, sheâ€™s not going to want to hear it.

Instead, she will likely put her guard up and start to look for excuses to get away from you.

So, try to avoid discussing the relationship.

Instead, steer the conversation towards flirting, humor and feel good emotions.

When she can see that she is feeling good around you and that things aren't so bad between you and her after all, she will automatically start to open back up to you again.

Then getting back together again becomes easy, because she wants it to happen as much as you do.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Overreacted to a Text On My Girlfriend's Phone and She Dumped Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 tips to help you get her back:

1. Understand that we all live and learn

Everyone makes mistakes in a relationship.

In some cases, a mistake can even cause a temporary break up.

That's life.

It's completely normal, natural and common for a couple to get into an argument and nearly break up, or actually break up and feel like it's final.

However, just because you overreacted and turned her off to the point where she dumped you, it doesn't mean that you can't work things out and get her back.

You can.

You made a mistake by overreacting and you now know better.

So, don't keep beating yourself up about what happened.

You've become a better man from it already.

That's a good thing.

So, focus on the fact that you learned a very important relationship lesson and have become a better, more mature man as a result.

Let go of the old version you who overreacted to a text on your girlfriend's phone and move forward based on the man that you are now.

To get her to appreciate the new you, begin replacing the negative feelings that she experienced (e.g. betrayal, anger) with positive feelings (e.g. trust, respect, attraction).

When you rebuild her feelings of respect and attraction for you again, everything changes.

Her defenses come down and she opens herself up to getting back together again because her feelings for you have changed for the better.

Then, the idea of remaining broken up over a simple misunderstanding will start to feel silly to her.

She may then begin thinking things like, "Maybe I overreacted when I dumped him. Sure, he blew things out of proportion when he saw that text on my phone, but is it worth losing a great guy over? I'm not so sure anymore. I think he realizes his mistake. Maybe he does deserve another chance."

When that happens, she will naturally start to want to get back together and you can then make it happen.

Another thing you can do to get your girlfriend back after overreacting, is to

2. Apologize to her for overreacting and then laugh about what happened

If you haven't already done so, make sure that you apologize to your girlfriend for how you behaved.

Don't go on and on about it though.

Keep the apology simple, brief and sincere.

Don't make the mistake that some guys make by saying things like, I'm so sorry! Please forgive me. I was such a jerk. I hate myself for not trusting you. It's just that you mean everything to me and the thought of you with another guy made me go crazy! Please give me one more chance. I'm sorry. Please believe me. From the bottom of my heart, I am sorry. I have never been this sorry. Please. I'm so sorry.

Instead, just give her a short, sincere apology and then change the conversation to be about laughing at how you overreacted.

For example: You might say something along the lines of, I really am sorry for overreacting to that text on your phone. It was silly of me to lose it like that.

You can then laugh and add something like, Although I don't get why you broke up with me though. Think about how safe our house would be if you just put up a sign on the front door saying, Beware of the crazy boyfriend. He bites! We'd have the safest house in the neighborhood! That's got to be a good thing, right? and have a laugh with her about that.

By laughing at yourself, it gets rid of the seriousness of the situation and also lets her see that you've changed and realized your mistake.

Then you can say, Seriously though, it really was such a silly reaction from me. I'm embarrassed now that I behaved in that way. Yet, as you would most likely agree, that's in the past now. I've learned my lesson. I know it was silly. It was immature. I now know better. Maybe it's too late for me to know better and I'm okay with that, but I know better now. I get it that I reacted in an immature way. It was so silly.

When she can see for herself that you have become a more emotionally mature man, she won't be able to stop herself from considering the idea of giving you another chance.

Another thing you can do to get your girlfriend back is

3. Re-attract her on a phone call or in person, but don't ask for another chance

On a phone call and in person is where the ex back process really speeds up because you can quickly make your ex girlfriend feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you based on how you interact with her.

Unlike texting, on a phone call or in person, she can experience the new you via the tonality of your voice and the way you react to what she says and does.

She can quickly see for herself that the guy she dumped is different than who you have become now.

She goes from telling herself, I will never forgive him for overreacting like that and not trusting me to be a faithful girlfriend, to thinking things like, He's so different now! I can see that he gets it. He knows that he was silly to react in that way. He has learned his lesson. So, maybe I overreacted by dumping him and saying that it was over for good. I'm really starting to wonder now if I made a mistake by breaking up with him.

So, don't be afraid to call her and meet up with her in person to reactivate her feelings for you. It's so much quicker and easier to get a woman back that way, compared to just texting her. For more info, watch this video I made about texting an ex!

BTW: When you re-attract her on the phone or in person, don't ask for another chance right away. Why?

If you push her to get back together before her feelings are fully reawakened, she may continue to focus on her negative feelings towards you and decide that she made the right decision to dump you.

So, just relax and concentrate on making her feel good to be interacting with you again (e.g. by using humor to break down her defenses, flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you, maintaining your confidence around her even when she's blaming you for the break up).

The more sparks of respect and attraction she feels for you, the more she opens back up to being your girl again.

Another thing you can do to get your girlfriend back is!

4. Give her 3 to 7 days of space

Giving her a few days to a week of space is a great way to calm things down between you and your girlfriend and give her a chance to miss you.

Giving her up to a week of space is important if you've been going overboard with texting, messaging or calling her to apologize for overreacting to the text on her phone.

So, if you haven't done so already, stop all interactions with her for a few days.

Just relax and know that she is going to be thinking about you and wondering what you're up to.

She's not going to immediately forget about you in a few days to a week.

Give her a chance to breathe and realize that you're not so bad after all.

When you give her a few days to a week of space, it proves to her that you are now in control of your emotions.

At the same time, it gives her a chance to stop focusing on all the negative things about you that have been turning her off (e.g. You behaved like a jealous, controlling boyfriend. You were being desperate and needy after the break up) and begin missing the things about you that she really does like and feel attracted to (e.g. the way you make her feel loved and appreciated when she's with you, your sense of humor, how you and her want the same things in life, your unique personality that she always loved).

The more she remembers her reasons for loving you and wanting to be with you in the past, the less she will be certain about her decision to break up with you in the present.

She might then contact you during the 3-7 days and you can then quickly re-spark her feelings for you and get her back.

However, if she doesn't reach out to you, don't worry.

Just take the lead by contacting her after 7 days and then start re-attracting her and getting her back from there.

By the way!

Don't make the mistake of thinking that 3 to 7 days is not enough time to let things cool down between you and then end up not calling her for weeks or months instead.

It's plenty of time!

If you take longer than a week to get in touch with your girlfriend, she might decide that you're not interested in her and then focus on getting over you and moving on (usually by hooking up with another guy).

Don't let that happen to you.

3 to 7 days of space is more than enough time.

Another thing you can do to get your girlfriend back is

5. Let her experience the new and improved you in person

The more time you take to meet up with her in person, the longer it will take to get her back.

So, don't put off catching up with her by hiding behind texts, social media messages or endless phone calls.

You have to get to an in-person meet up so she can experience the new, emotionally mature you for herself.

Here's the thing

Right now, your girlfriend is probably going to be on her guard and thinking things like, “I don't know if I can trust him again” or, “He's got issues and I'm not sure if I want to be in a relationship with a jealous man who loses it every time I talk to, or text another guy. I probably need to just move on.”

So, rather than trying to get you back, she's going to wait to see if you change or remain the same.

If you and her interact and you're still the same guy, her guard is going to remain up.

BTW: A woman can sense insecurity based on how a guy talks, behaves, moves, reacts and so on.

It can't be hidden.

Women are very good at picking up insecurity.

So, if you want her back, you've got to quickly improve and stop being the insecure guy you were in the relationship.

If you need help with that, I recommend that you watch Get Your Ex Back Super System

When your ex sees you in person and can sense the inner changes that you've already gone through in just a week, she will be amazed.

She will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, even if she tries to hide it or never admits it or even suggests that she's feeling it.

For example: One way that you can show her you've changed is to let her see that you don't become jealous or insecure anymore if she mentions other guys.

If she says something like, “I was hanging out with my friend David the other day. He's so funny. He's kind of cute” or “I don't know” just maintain your composure and even laugh at her attempts to make you jealous.

You can laugh and say, “Oh no, I'm so jealous” and have a laugh with her about that.

Then, change the conversation and let her see via your body language and vibe that you are totally fine.

You don't care.

You know that whoever David is, he's not as good as you.

You are way better than him.

He doesn't even compare.

That will come through in the subtleties of your body language, vibe and behavior and she will like it.

All of a sudden, she may then begin thinking something like, â€œMaybe this break up was a mistake. I thought he was an emotionally immature guy, but heâ€™s obviously used the time apart to change and become the kind of man that I always wanted him to be. Maybe this break up woke him up. He's the sort of guy that other women will be attracted to now. They will see what I can see. I will end up losing him and regretting. So, I can't be angry with him anymore. Maybe we should get back together again after all.â€

You can make her feel that way.

However, you must do it face-to-face, not via text.

Itâ€™s the only way youâ€™ll be able to convince her (without using words) that you really have changed and become a better man since she dumped you.

She will hear it in your voice and see it for herself in the way you act, behave and respond to her and she will know that itâ€™s not an act.

As a result, she will feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and then, getting back together will become something she really wants too.

Where Guys Go Wrong After Being Dumped For Overreacting to a Text On Their Girlfriendâ€™s Phone

Okay, so you overreacted to a text on your girlfriendâ€™s phone and she dumped you, right?

Well, you can't change how you reacted in the past.

Yet, you can change the present and the future.

It all depends on how you think, act and behave from this point onwards.

Youâ€™re either going to be saying and doing things that will get your girlfriend back, or saying and doing things that will make the break up permanent.

The choice is yours.

Thatâ€™s why you need to make sure you don't make any of the following mistakes:

1. Feeling ashamed of your overreaction, rather than accepting, learning from it and then feeling good about the fact that you're becoming a better man

You might feel justified in telling yourself things like, â€œI'm such an idiot! How could I do this to the woman I love so much? I should be ashamed of myself for doubting her loyalty. I deserved to be dumped,â€ but thatâ€™s not going to change what happened.

In fact, the only thing it will accomplish is to kill your confidence and prevent you from taking steps to get your girlfriend back.

So, promise yourself that youâ€™re not going to dwell on the negative side of what happened anymore and start looking at the positive side.

What is the positive side of what happened?

Essentially, making that mistake helped you become a better, more emotionally mature man.

That really a good thing.

Itâ€™s not something to be ashamed of.

It's something to be grateful for.

So, focus on that.

Focus on how cool it is that you've leveled up as a man by learning, first hand, that a guy shouldn't overreact to texts on his girlfriend's phone.

Instead, a man should maintain his cool by not looking at other guys as competition for his girl.

It's fine to be annoyed and even dump a woman if she is actively flirting with other guys or cheating, but if she's not doing that and you overreact, then you fail the test.

You show her that, deep down, you are insecure and see other guys as being better than you.

That's not what a woman wants.

A woman wants to be with a man who knows his value and as a result, doesn't worry about other guys trying to get her attention.

That may sound like it would be difficult to do, but it's not.

When you honestly know how to attract a woman in a relationship and build on her attraction to the point where she falls more and more in love with you, other guys simply do not compare.

It would be a huge loss for her if she ever strayed, because most guys out there have no idea how to deepen a woman's feelings over time.

Most guys let the relationship go stale and the sex dries up.

Women know this.

So, when you're the sort of guy who easily deepens his woman's feelings over time, you have nothing to worry about.

If she ever strayed, it would be her loss, her mistake and she would be the one regretting it for the rest of her life.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

2. Cutting off contact for 30 to 60 days and expecting her to chase you and try to get you back

Sometimes a guy feels so embarrassed by his behavior that he thinks, â€œAfter the way I overreacted to a text on her phone, Iâ€™m almost 100% sure that my girlfriend won't want to hear from me. So, rather than calling her and trying to get her back, Iâ€™m going to back off for a while and let things cool down between us. Then, when sheâ€™s calmed down, she might start to miss me and we can then work things out.â€

He then cuts off all contact with her (i.e. he stops texting, messaging, calling or seeing her) for several weeks or even months in the hope that she will come back to him.

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect and attraction for a guy, she's usually not going to run after him if he cuts off contact.

Instead, sheâs usually just going to accept that the break up is final and will focus on moving on with a new guy instead.

Even in cases where a woman still has feelings for her ex and regrets dumping him, if he stops interacting with her, she usually begins to doubt his feelings for her.

As a result, she feels unsure about contacting him in case he rejects her, so she lets him go and moves on with a new guy instead.

So, if you want your girlfriend back, donât ignore her for 30 to 60 days and assume that she will want you back.

If you do ignore her for that long, you might be shocked to find out that she has moved on and is happy now without you.

That would suck, right?

Absolutely.

Another mistake to avoid isâ!

3. Not getting to the core reason for your jealousy and insecurity to then fix it

If you want to get your girlfriend back into a relationship that lasts, it's best that you get to the core of what caused you to overreact to the text.

For example: Some questions you can ask yourself areâ!

- Why did I lose confidence in my attractiveness to her?
- Why did I assume that she would be more attracted to another guy and want to leave me?
- Why am I insecure with her, but probably wouldn't be that insecure with another girl?

When you understand what really caused you to overreact, you can then change and improve so that you can get her back.

One thing is for sure thoughâ!

Don't wait too long to make a move.

Women can easily move on after a break up, especially when the guy turned her off by being very jealous or insecure.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

7 Stages of Grief After a Break Up (For Men)

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The 7 stages of grief after a break up is usually something that you can go through very quickly, so you can then get your ex back and enjoy a new and improved relationship with her.

It really depends on how you approach it.

For example: You could decide to spend many months, years or even decades grieving over her and wishing that she was still in your life.

If you want her back, or if you want to move on, I recommend that you get through the grief quickly so you don't remain stuck like other guys do.

To begin with, here are the 7 stages of grief after a break up.

Note: These stages apply to women also, but I only help men, so this is for men.

1. Shock: At this stage, a guy will still be trying to understand what just happened and thinking things like, "I can't believe it's over" or, "This can't be happening to me." It's a huge shock to the system when the woman you love no longer wants anything to do with you. It can literally make you feel sick to the stomach, lose your appetite, stress, lose focus at work and so on. It's a big shock if you really loved her and don't want to lose her.
2. Denial: Once the initial shock begins to calm down (anywhere from minutes to days), a guy will start to resist what happened. He may then think things like, "I refuse to accept that it's over between us. She's my soulmate and I just can't lose her." He might then text her, call her or arrive at her house to see her and try to work things out.
3. Anger: If she still doesn't want to get back together and a guy feels as though he can't do anything about it, he may begin to feel angry at himself or at her. If he's angry at himself, it might be for not realizing that things were bad enough for his ex to want to break up. He may think things like, "I didn't see this coming," and "How could I be so stupid? Why was I such a jerk to her that she had to leave?" Alternatively, he might feel angry towards his ex for breaking up with him and thinking things like "I trusted her and she destroyed that trust. It's like I meant nothing to her!" or, "She betrayed me! She said she loved me and wanted to grow old with me. How dare she lie to me like that!"
4. Bargaining: When a guy gets to this stage, he begins to bargain with himself and with his ex that if he gets another chance, he will do whatever she wants to make her happy. Alternatively, he may only want to bargain with her to get her back, so he can then get a chance to dump her and walk away leaving her feeling rejected and upset.
5. Depression: If a guy is unable to get his ex back, that is the point where he starts to feel depressed and sad about the whole thing. He may think, "It's hopeless. There's no point in trying anymore. She's gone and I will never get her back. I might as well accept it." He might also feel sad about the state of his life now that he is single. What will other people think of him (i.e. friends, family, coworkers)? How is he going to explain it to them? Additionally, now that he's on his own, will he ever be able to find a woman like her again? Is he destined to be lonely and sad?
6. Testing: Once the guy makes it past the depression stage and starts to realize that there are ways to get a woman back after a break up, he may begin feeling a bit more hopeful. He may then begin to test the waters and see if there's a chance (e.g. he texts her to see how she responds).

7. Acceptance: If a guy has been unsuccessful with his attempts to get her back and finally gets over her (this can take months, years and even decades for some guys), he will eventually feel ready to move forward without her. He will accept that what happened is in the past and there's nothing he can do to change it anymore (e.g. she's now married with children).

So, it really depends on how you want to approach this.

You can decide to get over her by sleeping with new women and moving on with your life, or you can learn how to get her back and then do that, so you can put an end to the grief and enjoy a new relationship with her.

The Timeline to Get Her Back

For example: The timeline to get an ex back can be as follows:

1. Days, if you can regain control of your emotions and focus on re-attracting her

A guy can get his ex woman back within days if he gets rid of his neediness and desperation and accepts the break up as quickly as possible (i.e. proceeds to stage 7, Acceptance, pretty much right away).

It's not easy to do, but if you can do it, you will feel stop feeling needy for her and as a result, when you interact with her, you will naturally begin to say and do the right things to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

However, if you're still stuck at Denial, Anger or Bargaining and you try to get her back, you will naturally behave in ways that are a turn off to her, no matter how much you try to hide it.

Why will she feel turned off?

Women are not attracted to desperation and neediness in men.

Women are attracted to emotional strength and emotional independence in men.

So, when your ex can see that you have quickly become an emotionally strong, emotionally independent man, she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, even if she doesn't openly admit it.

If you know what to say and do to get her back, you can then proceed with that and get her back.

In other cases, it might take

2. Weeks, if you need more time to regain control of your emotions before attempting to re-attract her

Sometimes, a guy might find himself stuck at one of the levels of grief after a break up (the most common places to get stuck are in Denial, Anger, Bargaining or Depression).

As a result, he will need more than just a few days to get a hold of himself and start the ex back process.

However, although it's perfectly fine to take a bit of time to recover, don't wait too long and then risk losing her if she decides to move on and hook up with another man.

If you want to speed up the process of recovery, then watch this (it's my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System).

Finally, in some cases it can take

3. Years, if you don't do anything to regain control of your emotions and simply obsess about her, miss her constantly and focus on your loss

In some cases, a guy will struggle to get a hold of himself after a break up.

He will be an emotional mess and to him, it will seem next to impossible for him to feel anything other than desperately wanting her back, feeling sad and lost without her and so on.

As a result, he will remain stuck at the stage of Depression.

He will feel sad about losing her, depressed about his position in life (i.e. a guy who got dumped by the woman he loves and now doesn't want to love another woman as deeply) and down about how he couldn't keep the relationship together.

This can result in him getting into relationships with women that he's not fully attracted to, just so he doesn't fall in love.

Alternatively, he will meet a woman he is attracted to, but he won't allow himself to fall in love with her because he wants to protect himself from getting hurt.

Yet, by doing that, the relationship isn't based on an enjoyable, loving, fulfilling emotional connection, so it feels awkward, boring, forced and stale.

Eventually, the woman breaks up with him and he's back being single again.

As a result, a guy like that can end up losing confidence in his ability to keep a woman in a relationship, which may result in him always wishing that he could just get his original ex back.

He might regularly look at her social media pages just to feel connected with her, but she will always seem to be in a relationship or he won't have the courage to contact her and arrange a meet up.

So, if you want to get your ex back, you need to make sure that you get through the 7 stages of grief as quickly as possible.

The longer you take, the more you increase your chances of losing her to another guy, or for you and her to grow apart so much that you don't feel like you want to connect again.

5 Problems That Guys Often Encounter After a Break Up

When a man gets lost somewhere in the early stages of grief after a break up, he will naturally end up saying and doing the kind of things that will turn his ex woman off.

Here are some examples...

1. Remaining stuck at stage 4 (Bargaining) and trying to convince her to give him another chance

A guy might interact with his ex and say things like, "Please, just give me one more chance to make things right between us. I promise that this time things will be different. You just have to tell me *what you want and I swear that I will do it. I will do it, no matter what is it. That's how much you mean to.*â□□

Yet, the very fact that heâ□□s bargaining with her by promising to do whatever she tells him, only backs up her feeling that heâ□□s not the right man for her.

Why?

Women aren't attracted to desperation, or to men who want to be told what to do by a woman.

Additionally, when a woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy, him trying to talk her back into a relationship simply doesnâ□□t work.

She doesnâ□□t have feelings for him anymore, so she doesnâ□□t really care about his promises to change and do whatever she wants.

No matter what he says, it just doesnâ□□t hit the mark with her because she doesnâ□□t feel attracted to him anymore.

So, if you want to get your ex back, getting past stage 4 (Bargaining) is crucial.

Passing that stage allows you to begin interacting with her in ways that are attractive to her (i.e. you stop bargaining and you start making her laugh and smile and feel good to be around you again. You focus on re-attracting her, rather than trying to convince her to give you another chance).

When you change how she feels, she naturally changes her mind and opens back up to you.

2. Turning her off by remaining stuck in grief

Sometimes, a guy will feel sad, dejected and depressed and keep thinking things like, *â□□Iâ□□m so lost without her. I donâ□□t know if I will ever be able to get over her and move on. I hate my life without her. It's not the same. She made me happy.*â□□

He might then go around expressing his grief to anyone who might listen.

For example: He mightÂ talk to mutual friends aboutÂ how sad and depressed he feels , in the hope that they'll tell his ex and she'll feel sorry for him and contact him, or open up to him again.

HeÂ might also post sadÂ quotes on social media, or lonelyÂ photos of himselfÂ to let his ex know that he is missing her.

He hopes that she will notice, realize that heâ□□s lost without her andÂ then think something like, *â□□Thatâ□□s so sweet. I never realized how much I mean to him. Itâ□□s so romantic to have a guy falling apart without me. Itâ□□s like being in a movie. I feel so attracted to him all of a sudden. Maybe I should call him and see if we can work things out. After all, what kind of guy would post sad updates on social media like that? He must be genuine! That's all that matters to me. He's genuinely lost without me. That's what I want! I want an emotionally needy guy! I want a guy who can't pull himself together after a break up. Now that's hot!*â□□

Yet, it just doesn't work that way.

Instead, she feels turned off by his lack of emotional strength, emotional maturity and inability to stand on his own two feet without her.

She then closes herself off from him even more (e.g. she unfriends him on social media, refuses to talk about him with friends and family, blocks his number on her phone) and focuses on moving on without him.

So, if you want to re-attract your ex, make sure that you donâ□□t turn her off by remaining stuck in the earlier stages of grief.

Level up by accepting the break up and knowing that you can re-attract her and get her back.

Another problem that someÂ a guy might encounter after a break up is...

3. He tries to get over the grief by giving her space for weeks or months and then loses her

In some cases, a guy might think to himself, âI can't deal with the pain of losing her. I will never be able to heal if I continue to interact with her. So, maybe if I give her a few weeks or months of space, I will be able to get past the grief of losing her, while at the same time, allow her to miss me too. I've heard that some women come back if you walk away. Maybe it will could work with her.

He then cuts off all contact with her for 30 or even 60 days and tries to forget her.

Yet, he doesn't forget her.

He misses her pretty much the whole time.

Then, after a few weeks or months, he gets back in touch with her, only to be shocked when she tells him that she's moved onÂ and is enjoying single life, or is in a new, committed relationship and is in love.

He then plummets back into the earlier stages of grief because he's lost her all over again.

AllÂ that waiting achieved nothing.

Here's the thing|

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she's lost touch with her feelings for him and is thinking that she wants to move on without him now.

So, if he then disappears from her life before re-attracting her and making her want him back, it's unlikely that she will miss him or want him back.

Instead, she will focus on getting over himÂ by moving on with her life.

Even if she does still care about him,Â if she doesn't hear from him for a long time,Â a woman will usually assume thatÂ he has moved on, so she will lose interest in waiting around for him.

She will aim to make herself feel better by sleeping with a new guy, or getting into a new relationship and falling in love.

This is why, if you want your ex back,Â you shouldn't waste a lot of time ignoring her while you slowly work your way throughÂ the stages ofÂ grief.

What's important to realize is that your grief will instantlyÂ vanish when you get her back.

That is the ultimate cure.

Yet, thatÂ will only happen if you interact with her andÂ reawaken her feelings for you.

Most women do not come back to guys that they're no longer attracted to.

Remember that.

If you want her back, re-attract her and reawaken her feelings.

If you don't want to do that, then start getting over her and move on without her.

Another problem thatÂ a guy mightÂ encounter is...

4. She isn't interested in helping ease his feelings of shock, anger or sadness because she's not attracted

Sometimes, a guy will turn to his ex for emotional support even though they are broken up.

For example: He might call her on the phone and cry to her about how sad, lost and dejected he has been feeling since they broke up.

Alternatively, he might talk about how he has been getting into trouble at work because he hasn't been able to focus.

She is on his mind all the time and he just wants her back.

Yet, what a guy like that usually doesn't realize is that his needy and emotionally weak behavior is just adding to her reasons to remain broken up.

A woman doesn't want to be a guy's therapist or counselor and help him cope with challenges in his life.

If they are friends, then fine, she will do that.

Yet, when it comes to a sexual, romantic relationship, a woman wants to be a man's girl, not his counselor.

She wants him to be emotionally strong enough to handle his problems on his own, without her having to hold his hand and repeatedly tell him that everything is going to be okay.

So, when a guy turns to his ex for help in easing his feelings of shock, anger or sadness after they've broken up, it makes her feel as though he needs her to be able to function and feel good about himself.

He's not his own man and needs her to support him like a mother would support a son, or a big sister would support a little brother.

As a result, she pushes him away, leaving him feeling even more lost, confused and angry by what he perceives as her cold, unloving and even selfish treatment of him.

Another problem a guy might encounter is...

5. Giving up when his initial efforts to get her back didn't work

In many cases, a guy's initial efforts to get his ex back doesn't work, because he remains in a state of panic, denial, bargaining, anger or desperation.

While feeling like that, he's inevitably going to say and do the wrong things (i.e. be needy, say insecure things), which won't make his ex woman feel motivated to want to be in a relationship with him.

Here's the thing!

The key to getting your ex back is to make sure that when you interact with her from now on, you displaying some of the behaviors and traits that will naturally attract her to you again (e.g. confidence, emotional strength, emotional masculinity, charisma).

The more emotionally attractive you become to her, the less she will be able to resist the idea of giving you another chance.

Suddenly, interacting with you will feel good to her again.

She then drops her defenses and you can get her back.

On the other hand, if you keep trying to get her back while you are stuck in the stages of shock, anger, bargaining or depression, you will probably continue to turn her off.

As a result, getting back together again becomes a lot more difficult.

So, if you want to make things easy, focus on quickly getting through the stages.

Some guys can do it in hours, some within days and others within a week or two.

How long will you take?

Do you want to speed up the process?

If so, continue learning right now.

You are almost there.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Can't Stop Stalking My Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 things that you can do to regain control over your emotions and stop the stalking:

1. Don't unfollow her or unfriend her from social media

Other people might tell you to unfollow your ex on social media, but unfollowing her or unfriending her isn't going to help you.

For example: Well meaning friends might say things like, â€œIf you unfollow/ unfriend her, you won't be torturing yourself anymore when you see photos or videos of her smiling and having fun without you. Unfollowing/unfriending is the best thing you can do to start letting her go.â€

Yet, that is not the solution.

That's just putting a band-aid on a huge wound.

It's not going to work.

If you can't stop stalking your ex, you will probably just find another way to check on her.

For example: Go and look at her profile from the outside and obsess about her in that way instead.

Alternatively, you might drive yourself crazy because you can no longer follow her online and end up spying on her even in other ways, (e.g. lurking around at university, outside work, watching to see if she goes to the gym and even lurking around her neighborhood to get a glimpse of her), which is even worse.

You don't want to end up doing those things.

It's not good your emotional health and it's definitely going to turn her off if she finds out.

So, don't unfollow her on social media.

Be stronger than that.

Be a man about this.

If you unfollow her and are still obsessed by her, you're probably going to check the profiles of her friends to see if she is in any photos.

That will cause you to feel even more obsessed and worry even more.

So, don't bother blocking her on social media.

What should you do instead?

Do this...

For just one day, clear your mind and allow yourself to feel good about life, even though your ex isn't a part of it right now.

As much as possible, allow yourself to disconnect from wanting her by honestly imagining a great life without her.

Even if you don't want to have a new woman ever again and only want her, just spend the day imagining yourself living an amazing life without her, with a new woman or enjoying loving relationships with new women.

It might be tough for you to do that, but it's the first step to stop feeling like you need her.

You can still get her back.

No problem with that.

However, you have to stop the obsession.

So, give yourself a day to completely disconnect from her emotionally by imagining an amazing life without her.

That's what you should do.

On the other hand, what you shouldn't do is stay at home and focus on things like how much you miss her, how you can't live without her or how you're afraid that she's going to meet another guy and move on without you.

Thinking like that is only going to make you obsesses over her even more, which may result in you stalking her online or in person.

Not good.

So, for one day, clear your mind of her and force yourself to enjoy imagining an amazing life without her.

See yourself in love with a new woman and feel amazing with that new woman.

Feel love with her like you have never felt before with any other woman, including your ex.

When thoughts of your ex come into your mind, tell yourself, "I don't need her. I am fine without her. So many other women would love to be with me. It's easy to get a new girlfriend because I'm such a great guy. I don't need my ex. I'm free."

If you can honestly spend a day without her clouding your thoughts and making you worry, stress and panic, you will begin the process of getting her back.

Why?

Getting an ex woman back is mostly about becoming emotionally attractive to her again.

If you're stalking her, it's almost guaranteed that you're going to be in an emotional state that is unattractive (i.e. you're needy for her).

So, start the process of getting her back by mentally and emotionally letting her go.

Replace her in your mind by imagining yourself living an amazing life with a new, amazing woman or with a series amazing women that you enjoy passionate, loving, fulfilling relationships with.

Another thing you can do to regain control over your emotions and stop stalking your ex is...

2. Change your perception of her

Right now, you're probably only thinking about how perfect she was for you.

However, if you are completely honest with yourself, you will likely realize that no one in this world is perfect, including your ex.

If you don't believe that, have a think about all of her positive and negative qualities and try to focus on her negatives for the next few days.

Here are 10 examples of some positive and negative qualities to help you with your list:

Positive qualities	Negative qualities
--------------------	--------------------

She has a good sense of humor.	She lies to me all the time.
She is beautiful and sexy.	She likes to create drama for no reason.
She is great in bed.	She is too self-absorbed.
My friends and family like her.	She likes to gossip about other people.
She is ambitious.	She's very negative.
She is fun to be around.	She isn't supportive of my goals and dreams.
She is a generous person.	She disrespects me in front of others.
She is loyal.	She is too demanding.
She is adventurous.	She is untidy.
She is confident.	She neglects me because she spends too much time on social media.

While reading through the list above, you most likely found some positive and negative qualities that relate to your ex, right?

That's a good thing.

Now try to add more items to your list of negatives about her and focus on that whenever you think of your ex in a positive way.

Make sure that for now, you only focus on the negatives, rather than clinging onto the positives.

When you switch your focus away from all the positives about her, you will likely realize that she had some faults too.

As a result, you hopefully won't feel as tempted to stalk her, because you realize that even though you made mistakes, she made mistakes too.

That allows you to feel more equal to her, rather than putting her on a pedestal and worshiping her as someone who is more valuable than you.

She isn't more valuable than you.

You are a valuable man.

You are good enough for her.

When you can honestly feel that way about yourself, getting her back suddenly doesn't seem as impossible as you once thought.

You can then stop stalking her and start interacting with her and reactivating her feelings for you so that you can get her back.

Another thing you can do to regain control over your emotions and stop stalking your ex is

3. Feel sorry for her that she has broken up with you and is missing out on being with you

One of the main reasons why you may have been stalking your ex is as a result of thinking things like, â€œI was so lucky to have her in my life. She was the perfect woman for me and now sheâ€™s gone and I will never be able to find another woman as amazing as her.â€

If you want her back, now time for you to start thinking in the opposite way.

Even though she may be a great woman, youâ€™re also a great man, true?

There are many remarkable things about you that sheâ€™s losing out on because sheâ€™s no longer your girl, true?

When you can feel sorry for her for letting a great man like you go, not only will you no longer feel the need to stalk her anymore, but you will also begin to feel better about yourself.

When that happens, you can begin to stop thinking insecure thoughts like, â€œSheâ€™s too good for me,â€ or â€œShe will never give me another chance. I blew it and now itâ€™s over between us. Iâ€™ve lost her forever.â€

So, focus on only having confident thoughts about yourself and about your value to your ex.

For example: Tell yourself...

- Itâ€™s her that will be lucky to get me back, not the other way around.
- Iâ€™m a new and improved man now and when she picks it up on that via the way I now talk, think and behave around her, she will automatically feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for me.
- I feel so much more confident now and I will continue to feel even confident when I interact with her, regardless of what she says or does to make me feel insecure and nervous around her.

When she sees that Iâ€™m happy and fulfilled in my life with or without her, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling attracted to me again.

From there, donâ€™t sit around hoping your ex will discover the new and improved you by herself.

You need to contact her on the phone, or meet up with her in person, so she can then experience your newfound confidence and self-belief and feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you because of it.

Your confidence will come through in the tonality of your voice, your body language and in the way you behave and respond to her.

She will pick up on it.

She will sense that you have changed and have become more emotionally attractive (i.e. you're no longer needy because you are happy, confident and emotionally fulfilled without her).

When she sees for herself that you are a much more emotionally attractive man now, she will naturally start to worry about losing you.

Some people may say that you're a bad man for getting to the point where you have stalked her.

Yes, it's not the best thing to do, but hey â€œ everyone makes mistakes.

Likewise, other people don't know what you and her have been through and what you have personally been through during your life that has caused you to end up feeling like you need to stalk your ex.

It's best to stop stalking her of course, but don't beat yourself up about it.

Just focus on regaining control of your emotions and being a more emotionally mature, secure man from now on.

Additionally, some people may think that it would be impossible for a guy to get a woman back if he's gotten to the point where he's stalking her.

Yet, the reality is that if your ex was with you, then she knows what you are like (i.e. you may have been needy) and she remained with you for quite a while.

She may not have liked who you became, but that doesn't mean that she will hate the new you too.

For example: If she can see that you've gotten rid of your inner neediness that results in possessive, jealous behavior and she really did used to love you, she's almost certainly going to be happy about that.

She's going to be happy to see that the man she once really loved has gotten his act together and really has changed.

A guy who ends up stalking his ex might not be attractive to most women, so they might complain if they ever hear about it.

Yet, it's none of their business that you made that mistake.

Likewise, you don't need their approval to transform yourself emotionally and then feel good about yourself for no longer being a needy guy.

Everyone makes mistakes.

So, just use the mistake you've made of stalking her as an opportunity to transform yourself as a man and quickly become the kind of guy that your ex would love to get back with.

Don't worry about what others may think.

This is your personal journey and you are going to stop stalking your ex and start re-attracting her because you're going to become so emotionally attractive to her that she will feel compelled to give you another chance.

Another thing you can do to regain control over your emotions and stop stalking your ex isâ€¦

4. Start enjoying life with other people

Right now, you probably don't want to be around other people and the idea of being able to actually have fun without your ex might seem impossible.

Being anti-social not only keeps you trapped in a negative cycle where you feel compelled to focus on your ex, but it also limits your chances of ever being able to re-attract her.

Why?

Women are instinctively attracted to the kind of men who are emotionally strong enough to handle whatever life throws at them (e.g. a difficult break up) and turned off by men who fall apart when something negative happens to them.

So, the more that a guy struggles to cope with a break up, the less attractive he becomes to her.

If she then also happens to catch him stalking her, rather than thinking, *â€œAwwâ€¦he's really having such a hard time coping. That must mean he still loves me. Maybe I should forgive him and give him another chance,*â€¦ she feels turned off, disgusted and possibly even threatened by his actions.

As you can imagine, those kinds of feelings are not what will make her want to give you another chance.

This is why it's so important for you to start having fun with other people, rather than keeping to yourself.

This doesn't mean you have to date new women.

Of course, you can if you want to, but most guys who want their ex woman back don't want to date other women.

That's fine.

You don't have to do that.

Instead, just get out and enjoy fun times with other people.

For example:

- Join a group exercise class. It may feel a bit awkward to even think of going to something like that, but you will enjoy it if you do it.
- Try salsa dancing and immediately be around a whole bunch of women who want to dance with you. You don't have to hook up with any women, but you can if you want to.
- Go on a weekend adventure with a travel group. You don't even have to bring a friend. You can go alone and join the travel group.
- Take a cooking class. There's usually plenty of women there. Talk to them and have fun. You don't have to date any of them if you don't want to, but let yourself see that women don't hate you. You are loved and accepted. Everything is fine. You don't need to stalk your ex. You won't die without her.

After enjoying some fun times with other people, you can then call your ex on the phone, or meet up with her in person to say hi.

Let her experience the new, confident, emotionally strong you and see for herself that you're not going crazy without her.

Instead, you're actually getting on with your life and even having fun.

As a result, she will be able to relax her guard a little bit around you.

When that happens, she naturally starts to feel some respect and attraction for you again for being man enough to pick yourself up and improve, rather than losing your mind as you stalk her and obsess over her every post on social media.

When she relaxes and opens up, you can then build on her new feelings for you and make her want to try again.

Another thing you can do to regain control over your emotions and stop stalking your ex is to

5. Understand what emotional attraction is and how important it is when getting an ex woman back

Most women are more excited by a man's ability to attract them emotionally during interactions, than they are to other more superficial things such as his appearance, money or status.

Appearance, money or status can initially attract a woman's attention, but what really attracts her and makes her want to stay with a guy is his ability to make her feel emotionally attracted as he talks to her and spends time with her.

Being obsessed with a woman to the point where you are needy and even stalking to her is not the way to make her feel emotionally attracted.

Even if you try to hide it, she will pick up on it via your body language, choice of words, tonality, vibe, behavior and actions.

Emotional attractiveness cannot be faked.

You have to be emotionally attractive on the inside (i.e. confident, emotionally secure) and it will then come through on the outside for her to see and feel attracted to.

Where Guys Go Wrong After a Break Up

Getting broken up and losing the woman you love sucks.

Yet, even though you might be feeling devastated right now, if you don't regain control of your emotions, you may end up stuck in a rut for years or even decades where, no matter what kind of women you meet, you always miss your ex and wish you could get her back.

So, if you want to get your ex back, try to avoid making one of the following mistakes:

1. Focusing on her good qualities so much that she seems perfect

Chances are high that your ex was a great woman.

Maybe she was even the most beautiful woman you've ever dated.

However, even if she is amazing in many ways, she isn't perfect.

You may want to say to yourself, "No, but she's perfect for me" and try to justify how you feel about her, but it won't help.

You have to be able to admit that she isn't perfect.

No one is.

We all have some flaws and we all make mistakes sometimes.

So, if you want to stop stalking her or obsessing over her so you can become more emotionally attractive, you have to stop telling yourself things like, "I will never be able to find another woman as perfect as her. Everything about her was flawless. I was the one who wasn't good enough for her and now I've lost her forever. No other woman compares to her. She is special. She is perfect for me. I could never find that kind of love again."

Don't waste time putting her on a pedestal and then focusing on how badly you messed up in the relationship.

You made mistakes, but she made some mistakes too.

So, focus on the fact that you are becoming a better man and are a better man every minute, hour and day now.

You're on the up and up.

You're improving.

You are becoming more emotionally attractive.

You're becoming more attractive than you ever have been.

You've got this.

Feel different?

You should.

It's important to understand that you control your feelings by how you think and perceive yourself and the world around you.

When you stop idolizing her, you will realize that you are worthy of her and that will make you feel more confident.

When you feel confident enough, you can then take action to re-attract her and get her back.

However, if you keep putting yourself down while comparing yourself to her, you may remain stuck spying on her from afar, because you'll never feel worthy enough to approach her and get her back.

So, start believing in yourself.

Start and then continue.

Quickly become very confident in yourself.

Know your value.

Believe in your value to her.

Believe in your value to other women.

Know that you are an amazing man.

Yes, you made some mistakes, but that was the old version of you.

The new version of you is reading this right now and he is a much better man, right?

Focus on that.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

2. Focusing on how little other women make you feel compared to her

Regardless of how amazing your ex is, comparing her to every other woman you meet won't help you heal and stop stalking her.

The truth is that every woman is unique in her own way and some women will be better than your ex and some won't.

So, unless you've had a relationship with a new woman that you're attracted to and have experienced loving moments with her, you're not going to get the same feeling you got with your ex.

You can't judge a book by its cover.

You have to get involved with the book and read it to experience the feelings that come with it.

In the same way, you have to open yourself up to the possibility of being able to be happy with another woman.

That doesn't mean you should forget about getting your ex back.

Not at all.

It also doesn't mean that you have to date another woman and fall in love with her.

Instead, you just need to understand that new women aren't going to make you feel the same way your ex did because you haven't had a relationship with them yet.

If you want to get your ex back, just understand that.

Understand that you don't need the love that you got from her.

You want it back, but you don't need it.

You won't die without her love and presence in your life.

Yet, you can get her back.

You can get that love back and get her to want a relationship with you again.

You can turn things around.

You can amaze her with how differently she now feels about you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Says She Needs Space, But Still Loves Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Sometimes a woman is lying when she says that and sometimes she is telling the truth.

To help you understand what applies to your situation, here 5 common reasons why a woman will say that she needs space, but still loves you:

1. She wants some space to see if she misses you

When a relationship becomes boring and stagnant (e.g. because the guy has stopped building on his woman's feelings of respect, attraction and love for him and has become like a neutral friend to her instead), a woman might decide to distance herself from him for a while to see how she really feels.

For example: She may think, "I'm confused. I still love him, but I'm not sure if it's the kind of love that will last for a lifetime, or the kind of love that I should be experiencing. I don't feel butterflies in my stomach when I'm around him. I feel kind of numb. Maybe if I take some time apart from him, things will become clearer to me and I will realize that he is a great guy and I'm lucky to have him. Then, if I really miss him, it will give me the motivation I need to put in the effort to make our relationship work from now on. On the other hand, if I realize that I enjoy being single and that I don't miss him that much (or at all), it will be the sign that I've needed all along that I should move on and find myself another guy who makes me feel strong surges of love, respect and attraction for him. I want to have that feeling of never wanting to leave because I love the man so much. That's what I want. I don't know if I have that with my current guy."

She then asks you for space and waits to see how she feels.

It could turn out to be a good thing, or a bad thing, depending on how she feels.

If you want it to turn out to be a good thing, then use the time apart to change and improve some of the things about you that may have been turning her off.

For example: You might

- Focus more on your own goals and ambitions in life and make some progress in those areas, so that you're not so emotionally dependent on her and the relationship for your sense of identity anymore.
- Become more confident about your attractiveness to her, so you no longer feel, think, behave, talk or act in insecure ways around her anymore.
- Get ready to flirt with her and make her feel sexually attracted to you during conversations, so you no longer feel neutral around each other. Get ready to create a new spark with her.
- Understand that most women feel deeply turned off when a man is unable to dominate them in a relationship (i.e. he's too much of a yes man, gives in to her demands out of a fear of losing her, can't handle it when she puts him under some pressure by pretending to be in a bad mood, sees her as being the leader of the relationship and just wants to submit and follow her, gets angry at her when she is in a mood because he doesn't know how else to handle it).

These are very subtle things that have nothing to do with a man's physical attractiveness and all to do about his emotional attractiveness.

Being emotionally attractive is the key to getting your ex back.

Watch this to understand how it worksâ€¦!

So, after giving your ex 3 to 7 days of space where you used that time to make yourself more emotionally attractive, get her on a phone call and arrange a meet up.

At the meet up, focus on making her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new and improved you, so she feels happy to be interacting with you again.

When she feels that way, she can then start to think things like, â€œWell, I guess I have my answer now. The time apart was exactly what I needed to show me that heâ€¦s the man for me. I feel it now. I want him. I don't want to lose him.â€

As a result, she drops her guard and opens back up to the idea of being a couple again.

Another reason why a woman will say she needs space, but still loves you is thatâ€¦!

2. She loves you as a person, but not as a boyfriend or lover

When a woman stops feeling sexual attraction for her guy, she will begin to lose interest in being with him in a romantic, committed relationship.

To get out of the relationship without a fight, she may then say something along the lines of, â€œI still love you, but I need some space,â€ as a way of letting him down gently and giving herself some time to find a replacement guy.

A guy might then think, â€œWell, I suppose I can give her some space. After all, she says she still loves me, so it's fine. Sheâ€¦ll take some time apart, realize that she misses me and we can then get back together. Maybe it will be good for us.â€

Yet, hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

A woman will rarely get back with a boyfriend who she no longer has sexual feelings for.

Instead, she will usually keep stalling for more and more time apart (i.e. “I still need time to think” or, “I still don't know. Give me a bit more time”) while she actively focuses on finding herself a replacement guy.

Then, when her boyfriend eventually asks something like, â€œOkay, so we've been apart for weeks now, have you had enough time to think? Do you miss me? Do you want me back? If so, when can we get back together?â€ she can respond by saying, â€œLookâ€¦Iâ€¦m sorry okay. I really do love you, but not in a boyfriend-girlfriend way. I love you as a friend, that's it. I'm sorry. Also, I have something to tell you. Don't get mad, but I recently met someone new and I want to be with him. We're really happy together. You and I can still be friends though. I asked him about that and he's okay with it. He doesn't mind. So, how about it? Friends?â€

Meanwhile, she's having sex with him, falling in love and you're just a friend?

No thanks.

If you want to prevent that kind of thing from happening, you need to make sure that you donâ€¦t just sit back and wait for her to hopefully come back to you when sheâ€¦s ready.

Instead, take control of the situation by interacting with her and making her feel sexual attraction and romantic love for you once again.

Use every interaction you have with her (e.g. on the phone, or in person) to make her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you, so that when you're apart, she can't stop thinking about you and wanting you back.

That is what works on women.

You've got to actively make her feel sexually attracted and aroused by your new approach to conversations and interactions.

Another common reason why a woman says she needs space but still loves you is because

3. She's trying to create some distance between you and her before she fully breaks up with you

Sometimes a woman is unsure about how to break up with a guy in a way that will be easy for the both of them.

So, rather than saying something like, "It's over between us and I don't want to be your girlfriend anymore," she will say that she needs space, as a way of getting out of the relationship without any drama.

She might also tell her guy that she needs him to respect her wishes and not contact her at all (i.e. no calls or text and social media messages), until she contacts him first.

In that way, she hopes that if he doesn't hear from her for a long time, he might get bored of waiting and move on, or find a new woman and focus on her instead.

As a result, she doesn't have to deal with actually breaking up with him.

However, if your girlfriend is saying, "I need space, but I still love you," one thing is for sure

It's because you haven't been making her feel the way that she really wants to feel in a relationship (e.g. respectful, attracted, in love, like a feminine woman).

This is why you need to focus on changing how your girlfriend feels, by making some adjustments to the way you think, talk, behave and interact with her from this point onwards.

When you change the way you interact with her in a way that makes her feel surges of respect and sexual attraction for you again, her feelings about you and the relationship will automatically change.

She can then get to the point where she thinks, "I feel different all of a sudden. Now, the idea of being apart from him doesn't feel right to me anymore. In fact, I'm even worried that if I take too much space for myself, I might lose him to another woman. I'd better stop saying that I want space and get back with him now, before he gets tired of me and moves on."

Then, getting back into a new, improved relationship that feels way better for the both of you (i.e. because it's based on mutual respect, attraction and love now) is something that happens naturally.

Another common reason why a woman will say she needs space, but still loves you is because

4. She feels like being in a relationship with you is too stressful

In some cases, a guy doesn't know how he should behave in a relationship with a woman (e.g. because he didn't have a strong, male role model when growing up, is inexperienced with relationships, keeps making the same mistakes in relationships and never learns new methods that actually work with modern women).

He then behaves in ways that he thinks are attractive to women, but actually turns them off.

For example: He mightâ€¦

- Text and call her numerous times a day because he wants her to see how committed he is. Yet, she finds it suffocating and never gets the chance to miss him.
- Spend all his spare time with her and stops following through on his goals or ambitions. Yet, she sees that as childish because she knows that a real man will follow through on his goals and reach for his true potential as a man.
- Know every detail of her day (e.g. where sheâ€™s going, who sheâ€™s with and what sheâ€™s doing, what she's feeling). Yet, she ends up feeling turned off by how clingy he is and how there's no mystery in their relationship.

As result, she doesn't feel any excitement in the relationship, or any need to try hard to impress him.

She knows that he is 100% focused on her, which makes her feel smothered by the relationship.

Alternatively, the relationship stresses her out because they are always getting into fights, or he is always sulking, or he's too emotionally sensitive and so on.

So, rather than continuing to deal with the stress of being in a relationship with a guy like that, a woman will say something along the lines of, â€œI still love you, but I need space,â€ as a way of getting away from him, so she can then focus on herself and have space to breathe and figure out what she wants to do with her life.

Another common reason why a woman might say that she needs space, but still loves you is thatâ€¦

5. She's trying to avoid making you angry, or causing you to become desperate if she says, â€œIt's overâ€ and just walks away from you completely

Even if a guy is a really good man who would never do anything to hurt his ex, a woman has a natural instinct to protect herself from potentially getting hurt physically, or having to deal with a boyfriend who threatens her and wants to get revenge.

So, rather than saying, â€œIt's over. Leave me alone. I don't want you anymore,â€ and risk him reacting in an overly emotional way (e.g. getting angry, verbally abusive or even violent, or he breaks down, begs, pleads, cries and even refuses to let her leave until she agrees to give him another chance), she says something like, â€œI still love you, but I need some space. Okay?â€

Sheâ€™s hoping by saying that to him, it will lessen the chance of him taking it badly and she will be safe.

He might then also back off for a little while, giving her the time she needs to find a replacement guy or get herself into a situation where she is protected.

Then, by the time her ex realizes that, â€œI still love you, but I need space,â€ actually means, â€œI don't feel enough respect, attraction and romantic love for you to want to stay in a relationship with you,â€ she will have already found herself a replacement man or got herself into a situation where her boyfriend can't control her (e.g. move in with some friends, tell them that she is scared, ask for protection, etc).

She can then tell her ex boyfriend, â€œI've had time to think about it and I want to stick with my decision. I'm sorry, but it's over.â€

Where Guys Go Wrong When a Woman Asks For Space

Don't worry though.

If your girlfriend is saying she needs space, but still loves you, it usually means you have a good chance of getting her back pretty quickly.

To get her back, you have to make sure that from now on, you think, act and behave in ways that will re-attract her and make her not want to be apart from you for even one more day.

How?

Try to avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Not improving your ability to attract her while you give her space

Sometimes, when a woman says she needs space, a guy assumes that if he gives her the time apart that she's asking for, then everything will work itself out.

As a result, he essentially sits around waiting for her, but doesn't do anything else to improve his ability to attract her when she comes back.

If she then does contact him after a few weeks of space, he makes it easy for her to permanently walk away because he's the same guy as before.

Nothing about him has changed or improved.

He's stuck at the same level that he was at when she asked for space (e.g. he's still not ballsy enough to stand up for himself when she is talking down to him, he still treats her more like a friend than a desirable woman, he still feels insecure about making decisions without her support, he still looks at her as being the main purpose of his life, rather than being a man who has big goals and ambitions in life and is making progress on that while also loving his woman).

If her ex is still at the same level that he was at when she left him, it makes her lose even more respect and attraction for him.

She might then say something like, "I've had time to think about things and I realize that I don't want to be in a serious relationship with anyone right now. Please don't feel bad. It's not you, it's me," as a way of breaking up with him gently and trying to make him feel as though it's her fault and not his.

So, if you don't want to lose your girlfriend, don't waste the time apart.

Use the time apart to quickly improve your ability to attract her and make her feel intense surges of respect, sexual attraction and romantic love for you.

Then, contact her after a week (anything longer than that is a waste of time) and show her that you're a new and improved man (e.g. more confident, emotionally masculine, emotionally mature, more charismatic, more interesting, more appealing).

The more that you can re-attract her in new and exciting ways, the more likely it is that she will say something like, "I've missed you, you know? Seeing you again has made me realize how good we used to be. I think I've had enough space. I now know that I love you and I want us to try again."

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Not understanding the subtle ways in which you were turning her off

In most cases, a guy usually knows the obvious reasons why a woman isn't happy in her relationship with him (e.g. they're having financial problems, she doesn't like his friends, she wants to settle down and he doesn't or visa versa, they keep getting into fights).

Yet, there are also many, more subtle things that turn a woman off and lead to a break up.

These are things that a woman rarely tells her man because it's either too complicated to explain, too personal and would hurt him, or it would cause him to promise to change those exact same things to hopefully keep her or get her back.

So, rather than getting into all the subtle details, she asks for space as a way of starting the break up process.

She distances herself from him and the relationship and waits to see whether he's going to change and improve in the subtle ways that matter to her.

If he does improve and change, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him and she will usually give him another chance.

However, if he doesn't change because he's still clueless about the subtle turn offs, she will ask for more and more space until finally it becomes clear to him that she's never coming back.

So, if you don't want this to happen to you, it's essential that you uncover the real, secret reasons your girlfriend is asking for space (e.g. You're too hesitant around her and she wants a more manly, confident guy. When she tests your confidence by being difficult or getting into a mood, you lose your cool and start getting angry at her or sulking about the fact that she isn't being nice, sweet and loving. You get nervous around other guys, or generally seem anxious and unsure of yourself in social situations).

There are so many subtle turn offs and it's absolutely that you identify the ones that apply to you.

In my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System, I identify 70+ subtle turn offs and explain how you can quickly change, adjust or improve to re-attract your ex girlfriend.

When you know what to change, you can then change the things that truly matter to her, rather than offering her changes that she's not even interested in (e.g. offering to treat her even better than you have before, when being treated well enough isn't not even what she's turned off by).

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Patiently waiting as she keeps extending the amount of space and time she needs away from you

Sometimes a guy thinks that he's being a good boyfriend (or husband) if he gives his woman all the space she asks for.

He might wait for weeks or even months as his woman continues to say things like, "I'm not ready yet. I need more space, but I do still love you. Please be patient."

In the meantime, she uses the time apart to get over him.

Then, he is eventually shocked to discover that rather than working her way back to him, she has been moving on and is possibly in a new relationship already.

Here's the thing

If you want to keep your girlfriend rather than lose her, then don't fall for her, âI need spaceâ routine.

The more time away from you that she has where you're not sparking her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction, the more likely it is she will get over you.

That's just the truth.

Time away from someone that you're not attracted to, doesn't make you feel attracted to them.

Time away from someone that you are attracted to, does make you miss them and want them back.

Big difference.

So, if your girlfriend isn't attracted to you anymore, you need to use any interactions that you have with her to reawaken her feelings for you.

If you don't, she won't really be missing you and will feel compelled to start meeting new guys to find new love.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

4. Appearing sad, rejected and lost without her

Sometimes a guy will use social media as a way of letting his girlfriend know how lonely, sad and rejected he has been feeling since they decided to take some time apart.

Secretly, he's hoping that when she sees that he's falling apart without her, she will feel pity for him, feel guilty and want to be with him to make him feel better.

Yet, rather than thinking, âWow, it's so romantic to see my guy falling to pieces without me. It's just like in the movies. I feel so flattered. I see now that I'm so lucky to have a guy who needs me so much. I think I've had more than enough time apart. It's time for me to be with him again,â she will lose even more respect for him for being so emotionally weak without her.

She may then decide that he's not the kind of guy she wants to be in a relationship with anymore and rather than try to work things out with him, she will focus on getting over him and moving on.

So, if you want your girlfriend back, make sure that you show her that even though you still care about her and want her back, you don't need her back.

You're not falling apart without her.

When she can see that you're confident, happy and emotionally fulfilled even though she's not in your life, she will naturally and automatically feel respect and attraction for you.

Even just from that alone, her guard will come down a little.

However, there are many other ways that you can make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

There are things that you can do right now.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 Examples of Making an Ex Miss Your Presence in Her Life

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

To make your ex miss your presence in her life you can:

1. Attract her on a phone call and then cut off contact

Rather than sitting around waiting for your ex to miraculously start missing your presence in her life if you just wait long enough, it's best to pick up the phone and start making her miss you right now.

Imagine that you're on a call with your ex right now.

You can either use the phone conversation to spark some feelings of romantic and sexual attraction for you and make her long for something more, or you can leave her feeling neutral and not caring that she isn't with you anymore.

For example: When you call her up, you could say something neutral like, Hi Lynn, I just called to see say hi and see how you're doing and then have a straightforward conversation with her after that.

Yet, approaching the conversation in that way probably isn't going to her smile, laugh and feel happy to be talking to you again.

So, what will?

After the obligatory, Hello, how have you been? or whatever introduction you use, you can say something along the lines of, Yesterday I was driving past that little Chinese restaurant we used to go to and I thought of you.

She may then start thinking things like, Oh no, he's going to tell me that he misses me. Lame! or, He's going to ask me if I want to go there with him now.

In the meantime, you can surprise her by saying, Yeah! I was remembering how you struggled to learn to use chopsticks. Most of the time there was more food on the table than in your mouth. You really were a clumsy eater.

At this point, she will probably laugh and feel a little self-conscious.

Obviously, that would only apply if she was a bit of clumsy eater, or if she is the type of woman who knows that you're only joking.

You just need to adapt what you are saying to your situation, but the point is to be funny and get her laughing and smiling, rather than being so serious about everything and causing her to keep her guard up when talking to you.

When you make your ex laugh as you talk to her, she respects for you for being confident enough to joke around with her even though she's your ex.

When she respects you, she also starts to feel sparks of sexual and even romantic attraction for you again.

You can then build on those feelings (i.e. by making her laugh some more, adding some flirting to create sexual tension between you and her) and then, when she seems relaxed, attracted and happy to be talking to you again, you can say something along the lines of, Well, I've got to go now, but it was good talking to you again. Maybe we can do it again sometime, and hang up the phone (obviously after you and her have both said goodbye!).

From there, cut off contact with her for a week, so she can miss your presence in her life.

During that time, or after a week, she might call you to say hi, or if she's feeling a bit shy, she might send you a text and wait to see how you respond.

Whatever happens, you need to call her and arrange a meet up so you can fully reactivate her feelings for you in person and get her back.

By the way!

Even if she doesn't contact you, it doesn't mean she's not missing you.

In some cases a woman is simply too unsure of herself to reach out to her ex in case he rejects her.

She is trying to protect herself from being the one who is being left behind if she reaches out to you and you're not interested anymore.

So, if she doesn't contact you, just make sure that after a few days (anywhere from 3 to 7 days) you call her again and get that meet up.

If you ignore her for longer than that, you stand the risk of making her think that you're not interested in her anymore, so she then tries to move on emotionally and maybe even finds herself a replacement guy to move on physically.

2. Don't just text her as a friend

Some guys make the mistake of continually just replying to their ex woman's texts in a friendly way, when she reaches out from time to time.

For example: A guy might think, â€œMaybe if Iâ€™m nice to her and donâ€™t put any pressure on her to get back together again, sheâ€™ll realize Iâ€™m a decent guy and she will then start to miss having me in her life. She will then be more willing to give me another chance.â€

Yet, that rarely (if ever) happens.

Instead, when a guy is being nice, sweet and neutral with his ex, she usually just loses interest and stops replying.

Why?

Although he thinks being nice to her is what she wants, in reality, that doesn't make her feel sexually attracted to him.

Rather than wasting more time with him, she just starts moving on with her life.

Soon enough, she hooks up with a guy who flirts with her and makes her feel sexually attracted and she begins to feel even more disconnected from her ex.

So, if you want your ex to miss your presence in her life, it's better to spark her feelings of attraction by replying with humor and flirting and then get her on a phone call with you.

Alternatively, you can spark some of her feelings of attraction and then stop replying for a few days to make her miss your presence in her life.

If she is missing you and wanting you back, she might then contact you and you can arrange to meet up with her.

If she doesn't contact you, don't worry.

Just contact her after 3-7 days and get her to meet up with you, so you can fully re-attract her and get to a hug, kiss and possibly even sex the first time you catch up.

By the wayâ€¦!

Make sure that when you see her in person, youâ€™re fully prepared to re-attract her and get her back.

If you meet up and turn her off by behaving in some of the ways that turned her off before (e.g. being insecure, allowing her to have control over you, treating her more like a friend than a desirable woman, being too cautious with your words around her, feeling unworthy of her), she will regret meeting up with you.

Then, getting her back becomes more difficult for you, because she closes herself off from you and starts opening herself up to being with a new guy.

On the other hand, when you are prepared and ready to attract her, she will automatically feel surges of respect and attraction for the new and improved you.

When that happens, her guard comes down and getting back together again becomes something that sheâ€™s open to.

Another way to make your ex miss your presence in her life is toâ€¦!

3. Unfriend her from social media and post things as ‘public’ so she can see it from the outside

By cutting your ex out of your life as an official ‘friend’ on social media, it can spark her curiosity and make her wonder why you felt confident enough to do that, or if you are trying to hide a new girl from her to protect her from feeling hurt by seeing it.

Women love to obsess over guys and wonder what their behavior might mean.

So, when you unfriend her, she can then begin to wonder, â€œWhy did he unfriend me? What is going on in his life? Has he met another woman that he doesnâ€™t want me to know about? Is he moving on? Is he over me? Iâ€™m not over him yet. Why has he unfriended me? I donâ€™t get it.â€

Then, make sure that you post your photos as public from now on, so she can still see them, even though sheâ€™s not a friend of yours on social media.

She will stop by and check your social media because she will be curious about what is going on.

The more she can see that youâ€™re having fun without her, the more she will start to miss your presence in her life.

As a result, she may feel compelled to reach out to you (e.g. by sending you a text or private message, giving you a call) to see whatâ€™s going on.

Alternatively, she might try to protect herself from feeling jealous and missing you by unfriending you on other social media accounts, or blocking you, etc.

Donâ€™t panic.

She will stop by and look at your photos and she will feel respect and attraction for you if you look like youâ€™re having fun, are confident and enjoying life without her.

By the wayâ€¦!

Some guys may wonder, â€œHow will posting up photos of me having fun with other people make my ex miss me? Will she even care if Iâ€™m having fun without her if she no longer wants to be with me?â□□

Well, one of the qualities that women find attractive in a man is his ability to live a happy, fulfilling and successful life with or without her in it.

This means that when a man gets on with enjoying life, rather than sitting around feeling depressed and lost, it literally makes his ex woman feel some respect and attraction for him.

Naturally, women donâ□□t go around admitting that (i.e. because the guy would then feel like what he is doing is working and would do more of it), but itâ□□s true.

So, just understand for yourself that your ex will start to feel attracted to you again when she notices that you are happy and enjoying life without her, even though she probably wonâ□□t admit that, might even pretend she doesnâ□□t care or might even pretend that she's disappointed in you for being happy or even angry at you.

Don't worry.

If you want to be successful with women, it's very important that you don't always take what they say literally.

A woman can literally SAY one thing and DO the complete opposite.

It's just how women are.

Watch thisâ□|

This is why, if you want your ex to miss your presence in her life, you need to show her (from afar) that youâ□□re coping with the break up well and are enjoying life without her.

You don't need to rub it in her face by posting status updates saying things like, "Life is so good now" or, "I'm glad to be single. My last relationship was dragging me down."

That doesn't work.

Instead, just post up photos of yourself having fun with other people and keep things simple by including basic text with the status update like, "BBQ and beers with the boys" or, "Dancing salsa is fun. I think I might do this again next week."

The more she sees for herself that youâ□□re happy and fulfilled without her, the more she will begin to wonder if she made the right decision to break up with you.

BTW: Even if your ex doesn't have a social media account, or doesn't like using it or anything else like that, it doesn't matter.

She is a woman.

She is going to check up on her ex guy to see if he is fairing better than her after the break up.

It's what women do.

So, be ready to make her miss your presence in her life by posting photos of you having fun with other people.

When she sees the photos, she can then start thinking things like, â□□I thought heâ□□d be moping around alone without me. Yet, heâ□□s having fun. Iâ□□m the one who is thinking about him and sitting here on my own. I really thought I was over him, but all of sudden I miss him. I feel so confused. Why am I feeling like this? Maybe it's a sign that we shouldn't be broken up. If I am feeling this way, it means that I still want him.â□□

She then becomes open to talking to you on the phone and meeting up with you in person to see how she feels.

So, she might send you a text to say â€œHey,â€ or ask how you are doing (e.g. â€œHey, how have you been?â€ or, â€œI just wanted to say hiâ€).

From there, get her on a call (where you can build on her feelings for you again) and then get her to agree to meet up with you in person, so you can get her back for real (i.e. get to a hug, kiss and potentially even have sex if applicable).

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Make an Ex Miss Them

When you use the right approach that works on women, making your ex miss your presence in her life and getting her back is pretty easy.

However, when you make any of the following mistakes, you can end up making the ex back process a lot harder than it needs to be.

1. Using the No Contact approach when she's not even attracted

Ignoring an ex for 30 or even 60 days is a common approach that a lot of guys take to hopefully make their ex woman miss their presence in her life.

A guy like that might think something along the lines of, â€œIt's been said that absence makes the heart grow fonder. (He doesn't realize that the saying mostly refers to when you love someone and are attracted to them, but have to spend time apart from them for some reason. It's not about when a woman dumps a guy because she no longer feels enough respect, attraction and love to be with him, or doesn't feel any).Â So, if I cut off all communication with my ex, she will hopefully start to wonder about where I am and begin to miss me. Then, when I contact her after a few weeks or a month, she will be so happy to hear from me again, that she will want to get back together.

Yet, here's the thing!

For a woman to break up with a guy, it usually means she's disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

In other words, she's over it, over him and possibly doesn't want anything to do with him anymore.

So, when he vanishes out of her life after the break up, rather than dwell on it and feel sad, she usually won't care that he's no longer contacting her.

Instead, she will focus on fully getting over him, moving on and finding herself another guy.

This is why, if you want to make your ex miss your presence in her life, the best way to go about it is by interacting with her and making her feel strong surges of respect and attraction for you again.

You can then use No Contact for up to 1 week (any longer than that is a waste of time) so she can miss you.

Then, contact her, fully re-attract her and get her back.

Get the job done.

Get her back for real.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Not realizing that even though she might miss your presence, she might not have the courage to contact you

Even if a woman misses her ex and hopes they might be able to work things out and get back together, she usually won't do much or anything about it.

Why?

In most cases, a woman fears being rejected if her ex has lost interest in her since the break up, so rather than risk getting rejected, she will wait for him to make the first move.

Of course, she won't wait forever.

If she notices that he's not really doing anything to get her back, she might eventually decide to cut her losses and focus on getting over him by hooking up with new guys.

So, if you want your ex back for real, don't make the mistake of waiting too long to make her miss you.

If you do, you might be shocked to discover that she's moved on and is happy with a new guy.

Be courageous enough to take the lead in the ex back process.

Interact with her over the phone and in person, re-spark her feelings for you and get her back for real.

Another mistake to avoid is!

3. Being overly excited when she does reach out to you after missing you

One of the greatest feelings in the world, is when you've been hoping to hear from your ex and she suddenly contacts you to say something along the lines of, 'I've missed you.'

Yet, here's the thing!

If you get too excited and start saying things like, 'You won't believe how long I've been waiting and hoping to hear those words from you. I haven't done anything else but think of you since we broke up! I'm so glad you contacted me. I've missed you so much!' rather than make her feel flattered, she might end up feeling turned off by what she perceives as your desperation.

She may then start thinking things like, 'I can't believe that the only thing he's been doing all this time is sitting around and missing me. That makes him sound so needy and desperate. I think reaching out to him was a mistake after all. I didn't realize that he was lost without me. I don't want a man like that. I want a man who gets on with his life and keeps moving forward, despite me not being around. Why has he been alone all this time? Has he lost his confidence? Is he too stressed out and sad to be in social situations? Is he that needy of me? I want a man who is emotionally independent, not a needy guy who needs me to be there for him to feel okay.'

As a result, she feels a false sense of superiority over her ex.

She feels like she's more valuable than him, even though she isn't or might not be.

So, try to avoid giving your ex the impression that your life is essentially on hold and you are lost and lonely without her.

Instead, understand that even though she won't admit it to you, she really wants you to make her feel as though she would be lucky to get another chance with you, rather than you being lucky to get another chance with her.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

4. Texting her to tell her about all the great things happening in your life without her

If you want to let her know about what is happening in your life, post photos of yourself having fun and set those photos to 'public' so she can see them.

Don't text her about it all though because that can easily come across as being manipulative, whereas posting on social media (even if you don't normally do a lot of it) is much more easily seen as normal and understandable by an ex.

She might accuse you of trying to make her jealous, but you're not doing anything to her.

You're posting photos on social media and enjoying her life.

You're not forcing her to look at them.

Unfortunately, some guys don't realize that and either don't post anything up, or they try to make their ex feel jealous while texting her.

For example: Sometimes a guy might text his ex something along the lines of, â€œLife is so great for me at the moment. I'm spending a relaxing weekend at the beach! Hope all is well for you!â€ or, â€œGoing out with friends tonight. Planning to party until dawn!â€

Secretly, heâ€™s hoping she will think, â€œThat sounds like so much fun. I wish we were doing those things together. I miss him so much!â€

Yet, in most cases, the opposite happens because she instantly understands that he's texting her to hopefully make her jealous.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

When a woman can't hear the tonality of your voice or see your body language, she can interpret anything and everything you text her based on how she remembers you when she broke up with you (e.g. insecure, self-doubting, upset, needing her, dejected, rejected, lost).

This is why texts are not the best way to try to make an ex jealous.

It's just a bunch of words on her phone, which she can interpret however she wants.

Note: Have you noticed that I don't just type up articles on this site? I include videos of me giving advice to you too.

Imagine if it was just a bunch of words on the screen.

You wouldn't know how sincere I was.

You wouldn't know that I am the real deal when it comes to helping men get their ex back.

This is why you shouldn't just rely on text when trying to get your ex back.

You've got to let her see your confidence and happiness in photos, hear your confident tonality on a phone call and see your confident body language and behavior in person.

If you try to hide behind texts (especially if you're using text to hopefully make her jealous), she may end up just blocking your number so she doesn't have to hear from you, or text back and say something like, â€œGood for you! Iâ€™m having a great time too. Glad to see weâ€™ve both moved on.â€

Thatâ€™s not what you want, right?

So, if you want to get her back for real, make sure that you are ready and willing to attract her properly.

Make her want you back for real.

Make her feel rushes of respect, sexual attraction and love for the new you.

When you do that, she automatically begins to miss your presence in her life and wants you back for her own reasons.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

The Perfect Thing to Say to Your Ex Girlfriend

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 examples of what to say to your ex girlfriend to make her want you again:

1. Something funny to spark her attraction

Imagine that you're talking to your ex girlfriend (e.g. over the phone or in person) and she says something along the lines of, "I just don't feel the same way about you anymore. You need to accept that it's over and move on."

Instead of reacting by getting upset at her, walking away or even pleading with her to change her mind by saying things like, "Please don't say that! I know we can still work things out. Just give me a chance to make things right!" and making her close herself off from you even more, just use it as an opportunity to spark her feelings for you by using humor to take away the seriousness of the situation.

For example: When your ex girlfriend says something like, "I just don't feel the same way about you anymore. You need to accept that it's over and move on," you can respond by joking with her and saying something like, "What do you mean I need to move on? The reason I called you was to tell you that I got engaged last week."

She might then say something along the lines of "Really?" or, "Are you serious?" and you can then laugh and say something like, "Yeah, absolutely! My bride is in the mail as we speak!" and have a laugh with her about that.

By approaching a potentially serious conversation in a funny way, she's more likely to relax, smile, laugh and be more open to interacting with you again.

Using humor to get her laughing creates some positive feelings in her.

She then stops constantly thinking about everything that went wrong in the relationship that caused you and her to break up and starts thinking about how good she feels all of a sudden.

Then, even if she tries to fight it, she can't stop herself from beginning to feel some respect for you again for having the confidence and the social skills to make her laugh and smile in a serious moment like that.

When she feels respect for you, she will also start to feel some sparks of attraction and when that happens, her guard comes down and she becomes open to interacting with you more and more to see where things go from there.

All you need to do then, is fully reactivate her feelings for you (i.e. by showing her via your conversation style, actions, behavior and the way you react to her when she tries to test you, that you're a new and improved man) and get her back.

BTW: Don't try to send her that example via text.

Texts are different.

Not everything you would say on a phone call or in person should be said via text.

Watch this!

Another example of the perfect thing to say to your ex girlfriend is

2. Something mature to make her feel respect for you

After a break up, will usually be thinking about her ex in a negative way (e.g. he's so annoying, insecure, jealous, needy or clingy).

To change whatever negative perception your ex has of you, it's essential that you show her that you've already matured and become a better man since the break up.

This naturally makes her feel some respect and attraction for you again, but it's not something you should present as, "Hey, I've changed all these things. Now do you like me?"

Just let her experience the changes in you as you talk to her and interact with her and she will naturally feel drawn to you again.

If you try to get her back by saying that you've changed and asking if it's good enough to get another chance, a woman will almost always play harder to get or say, "No."

Okay, so imagine that you're talking to your ex and she is saying things like, "It's really over between us. You stuffed things up between us and now I only want to move on and forget about you."

As hurtful as that may be to you, don't try to defend yourself or make excuses to hopefully get her to take pity on you, because it will only make her close up even more.

Instead, show her that you're an emotionally strong, mature man by saying something along the lines of, "Hey, I totally get why you're feeling this way. I messed up and you're clearly at the point where you can only focus on the bad stuff that happened between us. I don't blame you for feeling this way. If I were in your place, I'd want to move on and forget all that bad stuff too. However, I hope you can acknowledge that no one is perfect and that even though I made mistakes and you made mistakes too, that doesn't mean we're bad people or that we intentionally wanted to hurt each other. It simply means we stuffed up, or one of us stuffed up more than the other. We've learned from that, which already makes us better people. On my part, I accept full responsibility for my past mistakes. All I ask is that we try to be friends based on who we are now, rather than who we were in the relationship."

By saying something like that to her, it calms things down and gets her thinking things like, "Wow, that was quite a mature thing for him to say. I never expected that from him. Instead, I thought he would beg and plead with me for another chance, or give me a whole bunch of excuses why he did what he did. I must admit, I respect him for being man enough to actually take responsibility for his mistakes. I wish he had been more like this when we were together. If he had, we probably wouldn't be broken up now."

That's what you want her to be thinking.

When you make her feel some respect for you again, it causes her defenses to drop and she opens back up to you, even if just a little bit.

When that happens, just make sure that you continue saying and doing the types of things that will build on her feelings of respect and attraction for you and then confidently guide her back into a relationship with you.

Another example of the perfect thing to say to your ex girlfriend isâ

3. Something funny and mature to make her feel sparks of love for you again

Start off by using some humor to lighten the tension between you and your ex.

For example: If you call her on the phone and she says something along the lines of, “What do you want? I don’t want to talk. I have nothing to say to you,” you can break the ice by saying in a playful way, something along the lines of, “No problem. I’ll do all the talking instead, Anyway! I got up at 6 a.m. I went to the bathroom and brushed my teeth. I then did 20 pushups and 20 sit ups. After that I was feeling a bit hungry, so I made myself a 6 egg omelet and some toast. Now I’m full and calling you to say hi. So, how are you? Oh, wait! I forgot! you don’t want to talk. Okay! so where was I?” and have a laugh about that with her.

Chances are, she will laugh at your goofiness and her guard will come naturally down.

She will no longer feel so tense about talking to you because she will see that there’s no need to be 100% serious and guarded.

That it’s okay for her to crack a smile and be a bit less uptight about things.

You’re not her enemy or some horrible guy who she can’t stand the sight of.

You’re the cool, good man that she once really loved or felt attracted to.

After saying something like that, you can then say, “Just kidding. Seriously though, I appreciate that you probably don’t want to talk at all. I mean, I now understand what I did wrong when we were together and I’m really sorry that I hurt you in the way I did. Of course, I don’t expect you to want to get back with me at all, but I just want you to know that I still care for you and I’d like us to be able to at least be friends, even if we never get back together again.”

By first making her laugh and smile and then showing her that you take full responsibility for your mistakes, she’s almost certainly going to open up to talking to you right then and there.

When she does, just focus on reactivating her feelings of respect and attraction for you by showing her that you’re a new and improved man now (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more emotionally mature, emotionally masculine, assertive and ballsy).

The more she experiences the new you, the more open she will become to meeting up with you in person and seeing where things go from there.

Then, when she feels attracted and respectful towards you again in person, getting back together will seem like a fun thing to do for her.

Common Problems Guys Experience When They Reach Out to an Ex Girlfriend

Getting an ex back is usually an easy thing to do, but guys can run into some of the following problems, which makes it a little more difficult initially!

1. She doesn’t seem excited when he contacts her

Even though you have examples of the perfect thing to say to your ex girlfriend now, it doesn’t mean she’s going to automatically respond to you in a positive way and immediately say, “Let’s get back together!”

Why?

Regardless of whether a woman currently hates her ex and doesn't want anything to do with him, or if still in love with him and hoping they will get back together again, in most cases, she won't act like she's happy to hear from him when he contacts her.

Instead, she will likely pretend that she doesn't want to talk to him, act cold, aloof and even bitchy towards him and generally make it very uncomfortable for him.

A woman will do that to see if you will maintain your confidence (which is attractive to her) regardless of how she's treating you, or if you'll become nervous, insecure and start doubting your attractiveness to her (which is unattractive to her).

So, make sure that no matter how she reacts, you remain confident and don't start doubting yourself or your ability to get her back.

Instead, be confident and use humor to start rebuilding her feelings of respect and attraction for you, so she begins to feel open and drawn to you again.

Another problem that a guy might experience when he reaches out to his ex girlfriend is

2. She takes her time to reply

It's only natural that a guy might feel a bit tense if he calls or texts his ex girlfriend and she takes her time getting back to him.

He may begin thinking, "Texting her was a waste of time. I shouldn't have sent her anything. I blew it by contacting her and now it's too late. She's just not interested anymore."

Yet, thinking like that only causes him to lose confidence in himself and in his value to her.

He stops believing in his ability to re-attract her and gives up on the idea of getting her back.

When she finally replies, he's put himself down so much that his lack of self-belief comes across in the way he texts her, or if they get on a phone call, it comes across in the tonality of his voice and the way he reacts and responds to her.

She then thinks to herself, "I should have just continued to ignore him. I see now that he still hasn't changed and in fact, he seems to be even worse than he was before (i.e. more insecure, self-doubting). I made the right decision to break up with him and from now on, I'm just going to ignore him. I've got to move on."

So, if you lose confidence and hope if your ex girlfriend takes too long to reply to you, you will end up turning her off even more and making it even more difficult to get her back.

Another problem you might experience is

3. She doesn't answer his calls

Sometimes a guy might only give himself one chance at calling his ex.

If she doesn't answer, he then doesn't follow up because he feels rejected or assumes that she isn't interested.

He may then wait weeks or months in the hope that she will eventually contact him, only to completely lose her because she uses that time to move on.

Here's the thing

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, sheâs won't always make it easy for him to get her back immediately.

Instead, she might initially ignore his calls to see if heâs going to give up right away, or if heâs going to remain confident enough to keep trying.

Of course, that doesnât mean a guy should call his ex non-stop until she picks up the phone.

Instead, it simply means you shouldn't always give up at the first sign of resistance from her.

If you do give up too easily, you may end up losing her when you actually had a really good chance of getting her back.

Another problem that a guy might experience when he tries to talk to his ex girlfriend again isâ

4. She loses interest in talking to him because he's talking about the relationship before even re-attracting her

If you want to know the perfect thing to say to your ex girlfriend, just know that it's definitely not about discussing the relationship or having a deep and meaningful conversation with her.

It's all about attraction.

You have to be able to re-attract her to you sexually and romantically.

That is what makes her actually care about you again for her own reasons.

If you donât properly re-attract your ex and make her feel some sparks of respect and attraction for you, hearing you talk about getting back together again may cause her say things like, âForget about it. I donât want to get back together in a relationship with you. We gave it a shot and it didnât work out. Itâs time that we just accept that weâre not right for each other and move on. Please just accept that and let me get on with my life.”

She then feels as though she is making the right decision to remain broken up with you.

That's not the way to get a woman back.

If you want her to be interested in giving you another chance, you have to focus on making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

When you do that, she automatically stops putting up walls every time you interact with her, which then allows her see the positive side of working on the relationship and giving you another chance.

Another problem you might experience isâ

5. Being too neutral with her to the point where she doesn't feel a spark

If you donât actively make your ex feel attracted to you again (e.g. by using ballsy humor to make her laugh and smile when you interact with her, flirting with her to create some sexual tension, showing her by the way you respond and react to her that youâre a new man now), then itâs highly unlikely that she will suddenly start seeing you as the right man for her again.

So, don't be neutral.

Be sexually attractive, not neutral.

Being neutral is being nice, friendly, passive and casual.

If you want her to want you back, you've got to step up your game.

Make her feel sparks of sexual attraction for you again, so she doesn't just see you as a friend now. If you fail to do that and she just sees you as a friend, she might decide to keep you around as a friend while she actively moves on behind your back.

So, if you don't want your ex girlfriend to call you up one day and tell you that she's in love with someone else now, make sure that you don't waste your interactions with her by being too neutral or friendly.

Don't give her the impression you're not interested in getting her back anymore and just want to be a friendly, neutral ex now.

It's fine to say that you and her friends, but just don't act like a friend.

Big difference.

Another problem guys often experience is

6. Being too nice to the point where he comes across as desperate and gives her a false sense of power over him

After a break up, a guy will sometimes make the mistake of being on his very best behavior around his ex girl (e.g. by being extra nice to her even when she is being bitchy towards him, letting her call the shots by doing whatever she wants to do, accepting all the blame for what happened between them, doing favors for her, offering to help her financially or with her life).

Essentially, he's likely hoping that if she sees that he's willing to do anything to make her happy, she will be impressed and then open herself up to giving him another chance.

Unfortunately though, in most cases, the opposite happens.

Here's the thing

A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy that is submits to her and allows her to walk all over him, just so he can get to spend some time with her.

If you want your ex girlfriend to give you another chance, make she doesn't look at your approach to her as being out of desperation.

Let her see that you are happy without her, but are also confident enough to interact with her and make her laugh and feel attracted to you again.

That is what brings down her guard and you can then get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why Doesn't My Ex Care That I'm Truly Sorry

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why:

1. She doesn't respect you yet

Making your ex respect you again is the first step in getting her back.

To be clear here, according to the dictionary, respect is defined as:

Respect (noun): A feeling of admiration for someone or something elicited by their abilities, qualities, or achievements.

Let's apply that to relationships nowâ€¦!

When a woman loses respect for a guy, itâ€¦s usually because he has stopped behaving in ways that allow her to look up to him and admire him.

In other words, she no longer respects him.

As you will discover from the video above, respect is the first step to getting her back.

So, if your ex is saying that she doesnâ€¦t care that youâ€¦re truly sorry, it means that you're saying and doing some of the things that caused her to lose respect for you in the first place, or you are saying and doing new things that are causing her to lose respect for you.

For example: One of the reasons why a woman might lose respect for a guy and as a result, break up with him, is because heâ€¦s too jealous (e.g. he calls her multiple times a day to check up on her, secretly or openly monitors her social media activity, checks her phone to see who sheâ€¦s been texting with and about what).

After losing her respect in that kind of way, he might then try to get her back by saying, â€œIâ€¦m truly sorry I behaved like that. I know I was out of line to spy on you and try to control you and I promise I will never do it again. Please give me a chance to make it up to you.â€œ

She might then test him by saying something along the lines of, â€œI donâ€¦t care that youâ€¦re truly sorry. My friend Jason at work told me that I shouldnâ€¦t trust you again, because a leopard will never change its spots. I believe him, not you.â€œ

If he then feels jealous and starts saying things like, â€œWho is this Jason and why is he telling you what to do? You can make your own decisions, canâ€¦t you? Why would you listen to this guy over me, unless youâ€¦ve been cheating behind my back all this time with him? Is that it? Have you been cheating on me? How long have you been seeing him? Tell me!â€œ she will know that heâ€¦s still the same jealous, controlling guy she broke up with.

Then, not only won't she believe him when he tells her that heâ€¦s truly sorry, but she also won't respect him for trying to get her back before changing his ways.

This is why, if your ex is saying that she doesnâ€¦t care that youâ€¦re truly sorry, it may be because your actions, behavior and conversation style arenâ€¦t fully supporting your words.

You may have changed in some ways, but not in the ways that are causing her to feel as though she can finally respect you and admire you again.

Another possible reason why your ex doesn't care that you're truly sorry is

2. She's not attracted to you yet

Sometimes, a guy might feel so bad about what happened between him and his ex girl that he may think to himself, I'll do anything to prove to her that I'm truly sorry for hurting her. I need to convince her to give me another chance no matter what because I am truly sorry. Even if that means I have to be on my best behavior with her from now on and do whatever she says, I will do it. I will show her that no matter what, I will always be there for her and that she can depend on me from now on. Then, when she realizes that I'm not giving up on our love, she will just have to forgive me and give me another chance. That will work. I know it!

He might then stay in her life and focus on being a nice, helpful, reliable friend to her, even when she's being unfriendly or indifferent towards him.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that being a pushover to her is not what is going to change her feelings for him.

What will?

Flirting with her and making her feel strong surges of attraction for him again.

What you must get clear on is that if you don't actively re-spark your ex's feelings of sexual and romantic attraction first, she's not going to feel tempted to forgive you and give you another chance.

So, don't act like a nice, neutral friend with her in the hope that she will care about you again.

Of course, you should be good to her and even apologize for your mistakes, but don't overdo it.

Instead, just make sure that you use every interaction you have with her to make her experience strong, irresistible, sexual feelings for you.

By the way

There's nothing wrong with making her feel that way about you again.

In fact, everything is right with it.

Some guys worry that it might be overstepping the line or that they are no longer worthy of making their ex girl feel sexually attracted.

Don't think like that.

She's your girl.

If you want her to be back in your arms, feeling sexually attracted to you and wanting you, then you have to focus on making her feel sexually attracted to you as you interact with her.

Another possible reason why your ex doesn't care that you're truly sorry is

3. She knows that even though you're sorry, you're still going to make the same kinds of mistakes

Feeling sorry about something doesn't automatically make it better.

If your ex still suspects that you're still going to be the same guy she broke up with, she's going to continue saying that she doesn't care about you being sorry.

Of course, that might not seem fair to you, but getting an ex back isn't about what is fair.

Getting an ex back is about re-attracting her and making her want you again for her own reasons, rather than trying to get her back by explaining that you're sorry and hoping that she takes pity on you.

Yet, here's the thing!

If she gave you another chance right now, you probably wouldn't make the exact same mistakes as you did in the relationship, but you may make similar or related mistakes that your ex has been picking up on while interacting with you lately.

Here are some subtle things that will continue to push an ex away:

- Her ex guy stops being controlling, but starts being insecure and hesitant around her because he no longer feels worthy of her.
- Her ex guy stops playing video games so much to hopefully impress her, but he still isn't following through on his big ambitions in life and is essentially just hanging around doing nothing with his life as per usual.
- Her ex guy stops being wimpy during arguments and starts becoming overly assertive and domineering, in the hope that it will impress her, but he simply goes to far with it for it to be something that she can respect or feel attracted to.
- Her ex guy stops taking her for granted and becomes a sappy romantic kind of guy who always talks about his feelings.

So, even though he might think that he's changed for the better, his behavior is still unattractive to his ex, but just in a new way.

If you want your ex to feel attracted to you again, you have to change in ways that are going to be attractive to her.

Another possible reason why your ex doesn't care that you're truly sorry is!

4. Saying sorry isn't the final step of the ex back process

Although apologizing is an important part of the ex back process, it's not the main thing that will make your ex give you another chance.

Instead, it's just something standard that is done at the start.

After apologizing, you've got to then reactivate her feelings and guide her through the process of wanting you back, rather than just saying sorry and expecting to get a relationship with her again because of it.

You need to show her via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to her when she tests you, that you're no longer the man she broke up with.

When she can see that you're now a new and improved man, it will make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Then, the idea of giving you another chance starts to feel like something she may be willing to do.

However, if you just apologize to her and expect her to say something along the lines of, “Oh, okay then. I guess it's okay now. All is forgiven, so let's get back together,” you'll be very disappointed, because it will rarely happen in that way if the woman has gotten to the point where she has totally lost respect for a guy.

Remember: Actions speak louder than words.

So, if your goal is to get her back, then once you've told her that you're truly sorry, you need to get on with making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new and improved you.

If you don't do that and simply continue to apologize to her, then she's just going to keep pushing you away and saying, I don't care that you're truly sorry. It's over. Just accept it and move on.

Another possible reason why your ex doesn't care that you're truly sorry is

5. You've given her a false sense of power over you by continually apologizing

When a guy feels bad about what happened between him and his ex, he will naturally want to apologize to her to make it right.

However, although one or two short, sincere apologies are fine and do help, saying, I am sorry over and over again only makes the situation worse.

Why?

By constantly apologizing, a woman sees her ex guy's behavior as desperate, rather than as sincere and strong.

She then begins to feel like he needs more than she needs him, so she is in the position of power.

Then, rather than wanting to forgive him, she begins thinking things like, I never realized it before, but he's such an emotionally wimpy and needy guy. I see now that he's not man enough for me and I can probably do so much better than him. I don't have to settle for an emotionally weak guy. I deserve better. I have to try to move on.

Essentially, by apologizing over and over again, he's given her a false sense of superiority over him and has made her think that she is better than him, when she's not.

So, rather than accepting his apology and want to work things out with him, she pushes him away and says things like, I don't care that you're truly sorry. Leave me alone. I've told you that I don't want to get back with you. Accept it.

Here's the thing

In a relationship, if you hand your power over to a woman, she won't be able to respect you anymore.

If she can't respect you, she won't be able to feel sexually attracted to you and without those two things in place, being in a relationship with you isn't something that appeals to her romantically.

So, don't give your ex power over you by apologizing to her all the time.

Apologize to her if you stuffed up that's fine.

However, once is enough and twice is okay.

After that, just maintain your confidence with her (especially when she tries to make you feel bad by saying things like, You hurt me so much, or I will never be able to trust you again) and focus on re-sparking her feelings for you every chance you get.

The more respect and sexual attraction she feels for the new you, the less she will be able to hold on to her negative feelings about the old you.

Her walls will begin to crumble down and then the process of getting her back becomes easier because she is feeling open to you.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex to Forgive Them

Everyone makes mistakes in a relationship and most people make mistakes during a break up.

It's not just you.

Yet, how you recover from those mistakes is the difference between renewing your ex's feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, or turning her off even more and convincing her she's better off without you.

So, if you want to get your ex back for real, what you do from now on is what really counts.

Try to avoid making these mistakes, or stop making these mistakes if you have been making them lately:

1. Apologizing in a long letter, e-mail, social media message or series of text messages

Many guys are too nervous to face their ex after stuffing up in the relationship, so they hide behind letters, e-mails, social media messages or text messages.

Yet, here's the thing!

Women get turned off by a guy who doesn't have the balls to look them in the eye and apologize for his mistakes like a man.

If an ex guy wants to hide behind the safety of a letter, e-mail or text message and tell her all about how truly sorry he is, it just doesn't cut it for a woman.

Additionally, because she can't hear the tonality of his voice, or see his body language, she doesn't know if he's really being sincere or just saying what he thinks she wants to hear so she will give him another chance.

For this reason, rather than giving him the benefit of the doubt (i.e. that he's genuinely sorry and wants to make it up to her), she usually assumes the worst of him (i.e. he's faking it and is just trying to say whatever he can think of to get another chance).

So, she pushes him away by saying things like, "I don't care that you're truly sorry. As far as I'm concerned what we had is over and I never want to see you again."

This is why, if you want your ex to believe that you're sorry and give you another chance, it's best to do it face-to-face or at least on a phone call, where you can more easily spark her feelings of respect and attraction and get her to forgive you.

Another mistake to avoid is!

2. Promising to do whatever it takes to make it up to her

If a guy gets broken up with by a woman that he truly loves, it can be a huge punch in the guts.

It can leave him feeling sick to the stomach, stressed out, lost, frantic and for some guys, even suicidal.

It's not a nice experience for a guy to go through.

Every guy reacts differently, but most guys feel quite depressed, down, ashamed, betrayed, angry and sad about the whole thing.

As a result, a guy might start saying things like, â€œIâ€™m so sorry for what I did. I know I stuffed up, but I promise I will do whatever it takes to make it up to you. Please just give me a chance to make things right. I will do anything for you. Just name it and Iâ€™ll do it. You mean everything to me. Please.â€

Yet, although he might feel as though what he is saying is right because he is being sincere, she doesn't feel the same way.

For example: By saying, “I will do anything for you. Just name it and Iâ€™ll do it,” it suggests to her that he doesn't really know what he is doing that is turning her off, so he needs her to teach him, guide him and help him through the ex back process to get her back.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

A woman doesn't want to be the one to tell her guy how to be the man she needs, because if she does, she will lose respect for him for not being his own man.

She will look at him as following her instructions like a good little boy, which then throws the relationship dynamic out of whack and makes her feel more like his mother or teacher, rather than his woman or girl.

That takes the romance out of the relationship, kills her feelings of sexual attraction and turns her off emotionally.

So, rather than promising your ex that you will do whatever it takes to make it up to her, focus instead on figuring out what really happened to cause her feelings for you to change.

Don't ask her that.

Figure it out by continuing to learn.

For exampleâ€¦

Then, take action to turn things around by making the necessary changes and improvements to yourself that will show her you have already learned from your past mistakes and are now a better man.

Only then will she care that youâ€™re truly sorry because she will be feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and as a result, will be wanting you back for her own reasons.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

3. Declaring your undying love for her and promising to wait as long as it takes

When a woman is saying, â€œI donâ€™t care that youâ€™re truly sorry,â€ a guy might decide to pour his heart out to her and let her know that he will wait for as long as it takes to get her forgiveness.

Essentially, heâ€™s hoping that when she sees that his love for her is so powerful, she will feel flattered and then her defenses will come down.

He might then give her a lot of space (i.e. he doesn't interact with her in any way for weeks or even months, or stays in contact with her but only treats her as a nice, neutral friend) and wait for her to forgive him and tell him that she's willing to give him another chance.

Yet, in most cases, cutting off contact or being neutral like a friend just helps a woman move on even faster.

Here's the thing!

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she's disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and sexual attraction for him.

So, if he then gives her a lot of space and doesn't do anything to actively spark her feelings for him again, she will usually decide to use that time to move on and find herself a replacement man.

Additionally, when a guy promises his ex that he will wait for her, she starts to perceive him as being desperate, which turns her off even more.

So, if you want to get your ex back, stop waiting for her to care that you're truly sorry and instead make her care by interacting with her and sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

Another mistake to avoid is!

4. Not focusing on attraction

After a breakup, a guy might start being desperate by begging, pleading, apologizing and generally doing whatever he can think of to convince his woman that he's truly sorry.

A guy like that often makes the mistake of thinking that feeling true remorse for his actions will be enough to convince his ex to give him another chance.

Yet, it's not.

For a woman to want to get back into a relationship with a man, he needs to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him first.

So, if you want your ex to accept your apology and open back up to you, you've got to focus on making her feel respect and sexual attraction for you again.

That is what works.

When you do that, her guard will come down and she will naturally want you back for her own reasons.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Dumped Me Because I Made Her Feel Like She Wasn't Good Enough

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 things that will help you get her back:

1. Stopping the apologies

Most guys apologize over and over again to a woman in this kind of situation.

For example: A guy might say things like, â€œI can't believe I made you feel that way. I'm so, so, so sorry! I would never do anything to intentionally hurt you. Please trust me when I say I regret my actions and I feel terrible about what I put you through and I promise I will never make you feel like you're not good enough ever again. Please forgive me.â€

Yet, although he is being sincere, apologizing over and over again is not the best approach to convincing a woman to give him another chance. Why?

Continuing to apologize makes a guy seem desperate and gives a woman a false sense of power over him.

As a result, she might then start treating him badly (e.g. by being rude to him, blaming him for ruining their relationship).

She may also create unnecessary drama when she interacts with him and say things like, â€œI don't know if I can ever trust you again! You destroyed my confidence by being so cruel to meâ€) to see if he will put up with it and continue to chase her.

If he then apologizes to her even more and says things like, â€œPlease forgive me! What can I do to make it up to you? I'll do anything to prove to you how sorry I am for how I treated you,â€ she will pull away from him even more. Why?

Even though a woman might give a guy the impression that she wants to be in control, she's not going to respect him if he actually falls for it and submits to her.

So, if you want to get your ex back after making her feel like she wasn't good enough, make sure you don't make the mistake of seeming so desperate for her forgiveness that she starts to feel like she has control over you.

By all means apologize to her, but one or two sincere apologies are enough.

Then, after apologizing, just show her via your actions, behavior and the way you treat her when you're together, that you've truly changed.

When she can see that for herself, the idea of giving you another chance starts to feel like something she may be willing to do.

Another thing you can do to get your ex back after being dumped for making her feel like she wasn't good enough isâ€

2. Deciding to truly love her from now on

Sometimes a guy might find himself in a relationship with a great woman, but at the back of his mind he might be wondering if he can do better.

Then, every time he sees a woman who is more attractive/better educated/ contributes more money for household expenses/is a better cook than his girl, rather than remember her good points, he might focus instead in things about her that arenât perfect.

As a result, he may then become critical of her and say things like, âWhy is your hair always in a mess? Canât you do something about it?â or âMy friendsâ wives are so career oriented while youâve been in the same dead-end job for years!â or âYouâre the only woman I know who canât even boil an egg without stuffing it up.â

Naturally, being criticized in this way may cause a woman to start feeling like sheâs not good enough for her man.

Of course, most guys donât intentionally go out of their way to be hurtful or critical.

However, if you got dumped for making your woman feel like she wasnât good enough, your actions and behavior clearly made her feel like you didnât truly love her the ways she was.

So, if you want to get her back, you need to prove to her that from this point onwards you will love her the way she deserves.

This includes loving and accepting who she is, flaws and all.

If you can truly love her for who she is, that is one of the best gifts a woman will ever receive in life. She will then naturally want to be good to you, treat you well, be affectionate and loving towards you, and put in the effort to please you.

So even though there will always be other women out there who are more attractive, intelligent or even have more things in common with you, when you decide to truly love your woman, you will develop such an amazing love and connection with her that itâs not something you will ever be willing to throw away again.

Another thing you can do to get your ex back after being dumped for making her feel like she wasnât good enough isâ!

3. Understanding the give and take nature of relationships

Couples who have been together for years and who are still completely in love with each other understand that a relationship has to be balanced, otherwise resentment builds up.

If you feel like you are too good for your woman, youâre naturally going to feel like things arenât fair to you (e.g. you may feel like youâre settling for second best, you canât relax in the relationship because youâre always the one pushing and trying to improve things).

Likewise, if she feels like you donât see her as being good enough it will erode away her confidence and then she wonât feel motivated to contribute to the relationship and be a good, loving, respectful, affectionate woman to you.

This is why, if you decide to get back with your ex, you need to make sure that you are prepared to accept her the way she is.

That doesnât mean you shouldnât encourage her to be the best version of herself, but you must do it in a way that makes her feel loved and respected.

If she doesnât, she will start to feel like she isnât good enough for you again and the relationship will end one more time.

Remember: A woman is at her happiest in a relationship when she is with a man who is good to her and makes her feel valued.

If you can do that, she will want to be good to you, treat you well and make you feel loved and valued as well.

When that happens, the relationship becomes almost unbreakable and both of you feel fulfilled and happy.

Another thing you can do to get your ex back after being dumped for making her feel like she wasn't good enough is

4. Understanding that it could just be a test

Sometimes, a woman will say that kind of thing to see if she can gain power over you in a relationship.

She fears that you could break up with her if another pretty woman came along, so she wants to gain some kind of control over you for her emotional protection.

Here's the thing though

If it is a test, you can't make the mistake of giving your power to her by saying things like, I'm so sorry I made you feel like that! Tell me how to make it up to you. I will do anything you say!

That's exactly what she's waiting for so that she can feel more in control.

Yet, at the same time, she feels disappointed because you failed her test (i.e. of not submitting to her) and now she can't stop herself from losing respect and attraction for you.

So what should you do instead?

The next time your ex says something along the lines of, I don't know if I can ever give you another chance. You made me feel like I wasn't good enough before. I just can't trust you, use it as an opportunity to re-attract her.

For example: You can laugh and say, I never realized you were such a little drama queen. You poor thing. What a horrible boyfriend/husband I was. Okay, how about this? From now on, I will only tell you how wonderful, brilliant and perfect you are. I'll just compliment you all day long. How about that? Will that make you feel good enough? I'll even start right now! you're amazing! You're glorious! You're fantastic! You're magnificent! Should I go on? and then laugh at her, (for trying to test you) and with her about it.

Initially, she might be a bit shocked that you're not allowing her to control you and she may even say something like, That's what I'm talking about! You just think I'm your joke and you don't care about my feelings at all!

Just remember though

She's only keeping the test going (i.e. are you going to crack if she says that to you or are you going to maintain your confidence).

Then, in a gentle, loving way you can add something along the lines of, Look, I'm not making fun of your feelings. In fact, I accept that some aspects of my behavior may have caused you to feel like you weren't good enough for me. However, I want you to know that's not how I feel about you at all. I have always only felt love and respect for you as a person. If I failed to make you feel like that when we were together, I'm truly sorry. Of course, you probably don't believe me right now and I understand. So, how about we just hang out as friends for a while and get to know each other over again with a clean slate? Then, if you decide that I still make you feel like youâ€™re not good enough, I will get out of your life forever. I promise.

By saying something like that to her, youâ€™re passing her test.

Youâ€™re also automatically sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

As a result, she will feel differently and begin to drop her guard and open herself up to the idea of getting back together again.

Another thing that you can do to get your ex back after being dumped for making her feel like she wasnâ€™t good enough isâ€¦!

5. Being a more balanced man from now on

You were out of balance by not making her feel good enough, so make sure that you don't go to the other extreme and make her feel like you worship the ground she walks on now.

A mistake that some guys make in a situation like yours is thinking things like, â€œI canâ€™t believe I made her feel so bad. I must be such a terrible person. The only way I can make this up to her is treat her like a princess from this moment onwards. Maybe then she will forgive me and give me another chance.

He might then start being extra nice to her, agreeing with everything she says and never speaking his mind in case he hurts her feelings and makes her feel like sheâ€™s not good enough for him.

Secretly heâ€™s hoping this will make her happy and convince her to give him another chance.

Yet, it almost never works out that way.

Rather than feel satisfied that heâ€™s now treating her like sheâ€™s valuable to him, her instincts kick in instead and let her know that heâ€™s now potentially the kind of guy who she will be able to walk all over.

She then loses even more respect and attraction for him and decides that she made the right decision to break up with him.

Thatâ€™s why, if you donâ€™t want that to happen to you, you need to make sure that you are being a man that she can look up to and respect.

That means youâ€™re a good, loving man who treats her well, but you donâ€™t go overboard.

When she experiences that side of you, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

You can then easily reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Common Problems Guys Experience in This Situation

If you want to get your ex back after she dumped you for making her feel like she wasnâ€™t good enough, you need to make sure that you donâ€™t make even more mistakes that will push her away.

Thatâ€™s why you need to look out for the following problems:

1. She plays hard to get during the ex back process and he loses confidence

A woman will sometimes pretend that nothing her ex is saying or doing is going to convince her to give him another chance to see how he will react.

Will he remain confident and emotionally strong regardless of her lack of interest, or will he crumble and give up on ever getting her back?

If he gives up at the first sign of resistance from her, she will likely think something along the lines of, “Even though I dumped him because he made me feel like I wasn’t good enough for him, I see now that he’s not good enough for me. He’s actually not the confident, emotionally strong man I thought he was and I’m actually better off without him.”

She may then close herself off even more making it even more difficult for him to get her back.

So, regardless of how hard your ex is making it for you to get her back, don’t let it erode your confidence.

Instead, try to see the funny side of how she’s behaving and use it as an opportunity to spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you by maintaining your confidence with her.

When she sees for herself that you’re not losing confidence in yourself, she will automatically feel a surge of respect and attraction for you again.

Her guard will come down and she will then become a lot more open to talking to you and seeing you in person to see where things go.

Another problem you need to be aware of is

2. He tries to get her back via text and she goes cold

In some cases, a guy thinks that texting an ex who dumped him for making her feel like she wasn’t good enough is the best way to break the ice with her.

Essentially, he’s hoping that by texting her she won’t feel like he’s pushing her to give him another chance and she will then relax and open up to him.

Yet, in most cases, rather than see it from his point of view, a woman just assumes that he’s asking her for a relationship via text because he hasn’t really changed and is too afraid to face her, where she will be able to see it for herself.

She may then start thinking things like, “He just proved my point. He doesn’t even think I’m good enough to waste a phone call on. All he’s doing is texting me like I’m an afterthought and hoping we can get back together again.”

The thing is, you need to make sure that when you try to get your ex back, you do it face-to-face where she can see for herself that you’re being sincere, and only after you have first reactivated her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Another problem you need to be aware of is

3. He uses the No Contact approach, which makes her feel like she wasn’t good enough for him to pursue after the break up

No contact might work in some situations (e.g. if a woman is still in love with her guy and is hoping they will reconcile, she is struggling to find a replacement guy).

However, in a case where a woman dumped her guy because he made her feel like she wasn't good enough, him ignoring her for 30 or 60 days is most likely going to have a negative effect on her. Rather than make her contact him, she's most-likely going to feel hurt and rejected and she's going to be thinking things like, "I guess I was right. If I had any doubts before, he's made it very clear now that he doesn't believe I'm good enough. In fact, he must think so little of me, that he didn't even care enough to call me after I dumped him to see how I'm doing. Well, I can't cry about it anymore. I need to forget about him and find myself a guy who will appreciate me."

As a result, if he finally contacts her after weeks or months of No Contact, he's shocked to discover that she's moved on.

So if you don't want that to happen to you, don't waste time ignoring your ex.

Another problem you need to be aware of is!

4. He goes overboard with contact and comes across as desperate

While some guys will decide to use No Contact to try and get their ex back, others will go the opposite way and bombard her with endless text or social media messages, calls and e-mails.

A guy like that is usually hoping that if he overwhelms his ex with attention, she will stop believing that he thought she wasn't good enough and give him another chance.

Yet, that rarely happens.

Instead, his constant attention turns her off and she begins to feel relieved that she's no longer his girl.

Here's the thing!

Women don't want to reward desperation with respect, affection, sex and love.

So, when a guy is calling, texting and generally going overboard with his efforts to get her back, rather than think, "Wow, that's so sweet. I guess I was wrong about him not thinking I was good enough. Clearly I must be special to him for him to put in so much effort to get me back," she instead thinks something along the lines of, "I never realized this about him before, but he's so needy and emotionally wimpy. I think I made the right decision to dump him after all."

Here's the thing!

Although you must be active about getting your ex back, going overboard with contact is not the way to do it.

Instead, you need to relax and stay in control of your emotions.

Then text her once or twice as a way of getting her on a phone call with you.

On the call, spark enough of her feelings to make her want to see you in person.

Then prepare to re-attract her, meet up with her and get her back.

That's how it works.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Break Ups and Reconciliation

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 6 ways that you can make a reconciliation happen after a break up:

Option 1: Give her up to a week of space, then start the ex back process

Giving a woman a week of space is the perfect amount of time to allow for things to cool down after a break up.

At the same time, it doesn't give her too much time to forget about you and move on.

So, start with that.

Of course, contacting an ex after a week of space isn't the magic answer to getting her back.

You actually have to use that week to prepare to re-attract her.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is by

- Focusing on building up your confidence a bit more, so that regardless of what she says or does to put you off when you interact with her after a week (e.g. she's cold, distant, bitchy), it won't get to you.
- Understanding that being ballsy with your humor is the best way to break down her walls and make her feel drawn to you again.
- Realizing that even though you and her are broken up, you're good enough for her.
- Getting to the point where you feel good about yourself and your life, whether she's in it or not. A good way to achieve this state of mind is by using the week apart to go out and do fun things, hang out with friends and prove to yourself that you can enjoy yourself even when your ex isn't there.

When you feel better about yourself, you automatically begin to heal from the break up.

You are then ready to interact with your ex woman, re-attract her and get her back.

You should then call her on the phone and use all your new-found attraction skills to start reactivating her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again after not hearing from you for a whole week, flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you).

Then, get her to agree to meet up with you, where you can fully reawaken her feelings for you by letting her experience the new you face-to-face.

When she sees that you're no longer the same guy she broke up with (e.g. because you're not being nervous and insecure, you're not losing your confidence even when she's being cold towards you, you're making her laugh and smile), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again and possibly even being open to hugging and kissing you at the end of the meet up.

When that happens, the next step of the ex back process is sex and getting the relationship back together.

You'd be surprised at how often that happens.

Another example of how a reconciliation can happen after a break up isâ€¦!

Option 2: Understand where you were going wrong, immediately start to change and improve, re-attract her and get her back

Understanding where you might have gone wrong is a very important step. Why?

It shows your ex that youâ€™re man enough to not only admit your mistakes to yourself, but also to fix them, and all that without needing her help or guidance to figure it out.

That is very attractive to her and she automatically feels strong surges of respect for you again.

So start with that.

If youâ€™re unsure of what might have caused your ex to feel turned off, here are some common reasons why women lose respect, attraction and love for a guy in a relationship to help you figure it out:

- He stops being confident and emotionally strong and begins to feel more unsure of himself and his value to her and as a result, he becomes clingy, needy, jealous or controlling.
- He becomes complacent about her feelings for him, so he starts to take her for granted.
- He isnâ€™t emotionally masculine enough, so she becomes bossy and domineering in the relationship with him.
- He stops making her feel attracted and turned on by how he talks to her and interacts with her and he then ends up making her feel neutral or bored.
- He puts too much value on her and as a result he loses sight of his own identity as a man (i.e. he stops having his own goals, dreams, interests or friends).
- He stops being romantic and charming and instead starts treating her more like a friend or one of his buddies.
- He doesnâ€™t mature as quickly as she does, so she starts to feel like heâ€™s dragging her down.

Do any of these things ring true for you and your relationship with your ex?

If not, keep thinking about it.

Chances are, you will eventually start to see a pattern based on what you and her used to argue or disagree about and you will then have your answer.

If yes, you can immediately start improving those things about yourself.

By the wayâ€¦!

Once youâ€™ve figured out where you were going wrong in the relationship with your ex, it doesnâ€™t have to take long to change and improve.

A few days is enough to improve your ability to attract her during interactions, so that when you do talk to her, she feels a spark for you and opens back up to seeing where things go from there.

Then, once youâ€™re ready, get her on a phone call with you, or even better, to a meet up and show her that youâ€™re now a new and improved man (i.e. youâ€™ve changed the things that really matter to her).

When she sees for herself that youâ€™ve understood her real reasons for breaking up with you and have taken steps to improve on those things, she canâ€™t stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for you again.

Her defenses come down and you can then guide her back into a relationship with you.

Another example of how a reconciliation can happen after a break up isâ□|

Option 3: Apologize for your mistakes, re-attract her and then say goodbye

Get your ex on a phone call with you, or better yet, meet up with her in person.

You can then apologize to her for what happened.

Just make sure that you keep your apology simple, to the point and you avoid groveling or putting yourself down.

For example: You might say something along the lines of, *â□□ Hey, I just wanted to say that Iâ□□m really sorry for what happened. I know I stuffed up and I regret hurting you. However, I also want you to know that everyone makes mistakes in a relationship sometimes. Iâ□□m not perfect, but then no one else is either. The good thing is that Iâ□□ve learned from my mistakes and Iâ□□m not that guy anymore. Of course I donâ□□t expect you to believe me or want to give me another chance. Thatâ□□s okay. I accept your decision about us breaking up and Iâ□□m not apologizing to you for that reason. I just want to clear the air between us so that we can go forward with no hard feelings.*â□□

By calmly apologizing to your ex woman, while being confident and mature enough to admit your mistake, youâ□□re showing her that youâ□□ve learned from the experience and have become a more confident and emotionally strong man than before.

This is attractive to her.

It automatically re-sparks some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you and she then allows herself to relax and enjoy talking to you again.

At this point, focus on using some humor to further break down her walls and get her thinking things like, *â□□ Heâ□□s so different all of a sudden. This isnâ□□t what I was expecting at all. I thought he would be begging me to get back with him, but instead heâ□□s being so mature about the whole break up. I never imagined I would be able to forgive him so easily, but I think I have.*â□□

You then need to pull back a bit and say, *â□□ Okay then. Thatâ□□s all I wanted to say. I hope youâ□□ll forgive me and then maybe sometime in the future we can even be friends again. In the meantime, Iâ□□ll leave you alone. Bye.*â□□

She will then feel drawn to you and feel like it's not over because you've re-attracted her.

Thatâ□□s when you can quickly and easily guide her back into a relationship.

Another example of how a reconciliation can happen after a break up isâ□|

Option 4: Apologize for your mistakes, ask for forgiveness, re-attract her and get back together right away

Getting an ex woman to forgive you is a very important step if you and her are going to reconcile.

However, just saying, *â□□ Iâ□□m sorry. Please forgive me,*â□□ will rarely result in her sincerely forgiving you.

She might say, *â□□ Yeah, sure,*â□□ but thatâ□□s different to her actually forgiving you for real and because her forgiveness isnâ□□t genuine, she will probably then add something like, â□□ Look, I accept your apology and I forgive you, but that doesn't change anything. What we had is over and nothing is going to change that.

That's not what you want.

So, a better way to apologize to a woman and ask her to forgive you is by telling her that forgiving you is for her own benefit.

Explain to her that if she doesn't forgive you, she will end up holding on to the baggage of her relationship with you and it may then negatively impact any future relationship she might have someday.

BTW: Don't worry it's not about helping her move on.

Instead, forgiving you for her own benefit makes her stop looking at you in a negative way because she has forgiven you for what happened.

When she goes through that emotional transition, she naturally starts to feel better about interacting with you.

You can then use those interactions to re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, showing her via your actions and behavior that you're a new and improved man now).

When her perception of you stops matching the one in her memories (e.g. she remembers you as being insecure, needy, immature, annoying but now you're confident, emotionally independent, mature, easy-going and fun), she automatically begins to look at you with more respect.

The more she respects you (i.e. because you were man enough to quickly change and improve and become better), the more her guard comes down and she begins seeing you and even thinking about you in a romantic way.

When she starts to feel like that, getting back together is the next logical step, because the idea of losing you now is something she doesn't even want to contemplate.

Another example of how a reconciliation can happen after a break up is

Option 5: Never contact her after the break up and hope that she comes back to you

If a woman is being difficult, is refusing to interact with her ex and when she does she says things like, No matter how much you stick around and try to make me to change my mind, I'm not going to. The only feelings I have left for you are negative ones and that's not going to change. So, just accept that it's over between us and leave me alone! it's only natural that he might feel a bit hopeless.

He may then start thinking things like, If sticking around her isn't going to convince her to change her mind, maybe I should disappear from her life entirely. Hopefully the shock of that will make her realize that she still has feelings for me and she will then begin to miss me. She will then have to contact me and we can get back together again.

He might then stop contacting his ex for 30, or even 60 days in the hopes that this will do the trick in getting her back.

Yet, that almost never works.

Here's why

When a woman doesn't have strong (or any) feelings for a guy, not hearing from him isn't really going to be that big of a deal to her.

In most cases, rather than miss her ex who is ignoring her, a woman will think, â€œCool! Iâ€™m so happy he got the message and is now leaving me alone. I can move on with my life without having to deal with a desperate ex.â€

She then quickly focuses on going out more with her friends, meeting new guys and doing whatever she needs to do to move on with her life.

In the meantime, her ex waits and waits to hear from her.

He might then either find out that she's now in a new relationship by checking up on her via social media, or through mutual friends.

Alternatively, he might decide to contact her after a few months of not hearing from her, only for her to say something along the lines of, â€œItâ€™s been ages since I last heard from you, so why are you calling me now? If there was ever a chance of us getting back together, itâ€™s gone now. Iâ€™m with someone else and Iâ€™m happy. Goodbye.â€

Of course, in rare cases where a woman is still secretly in love with her ex and actually does want to get back with him, or she's struggling to find herself a replacement man, she may actually contact him if he ignores her.

However, if she does get back with him and she realizes that in all the time they were apart, he didn't change or improve anything about himself, she will usually break up with him again.

Then getting her back a third time becomes even more difficult.

Another example of how a reconciliation can happen after a break up isâ€¦!

Option 6: Make her feel jealousy and the pain of losing you by quickly moving on without her by dating other women, accept another chance with her when she tries to get you back Moving on with your life is a great way to make your ex want you back. Why?

When she sees that you're not sitting around feeling sad and lonely without her and are in fact having fun and even dating other women again, she likely starts thinking things like, â€œWow, heâ€™s already managed to get himself another girlfriend so quickly. I never realized he was so attractive to other women. I hate to admit it to myself, seeing him with other women like this makes me feel jealous. I miss him. I think I made a big mistake by breaking up with him. Iâ€™ve got to get him back.â€

Suddenly, the idea of losing you to another woman makes her feel attracted to you again and she might then text you or call you in an attempt to get you back.

You can then fully reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you (i.e. by being more of the confident, emotionally masculine man that you've become since the break up) and get her back.

Warning: Make sure that you don't pretend to be having fun and dating other women just to make your ex jealous, because if she catches you out in a lie, not only will she feel disgusted that you tried to trick her, she will also lose even more respect and attraction for you.

She may then decide to get revenge on you by blocking you on social media and her phone and also hooking up with a new guy just to make you jealous instead.

So, make sure that if you do take this option, you don't fake it.

You need to be genuinely moving on without her and focusing on having a fun and fulfilled life without her.

She then realizes that it was her fault for letting you go and she wants you back.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Reconcile With an Ex

Breaks ups and reconciliations happen daily all over the world.

It's actually a very common thing and when you know the right approach, it's also quite easy to deal with.

However, if you take the wrong approach, it can cause the whole reconciliation process to either take longer than it should, or in the worst case scenario, fail altogether.

So, if you want to reconcile with your ex, make sure you don't make any of the following mistakes:

1. Trying to reconcile without attraction

You may truly love your ex and really want her back, but unless she feels the same way about you, it's not going to happen.

So, if you ask her to get back together again, before you first reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, chances are she's going to respond by saying something along the lines of, "No. I'm sorry if you can't accept it, but as far as I'm concerned, what we had is over. I don't want to get back with you again. Please stop pressuring me to give you another chance and just move on."

Here's the thing!

For a woman to commit to the idea of reconciling, the feelings have to be mutual (or at least close to mutual).

It can't be one-sided (i.e. you want her back).

Instead, she has to feel as though losing you will be the worst mistake of her life.

So, if you want her back, focus on re-attracting her first.

Then everything else will happen naturally and easily from there.

Another mistake to avoid is!

2. Trying to reconcile via text

When a woman is making it difficult for her ex to interact with her (e.g. she won't answer her phone, she's cold and uncommunicative when he tries to talk to her), he might decide that texting is the only way to get through to her and convince her to reconcile with him.

Yet, here's the thing!

If a woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for her ex, getting a text from him trying to convince her to give him another chance, only turns her off even more.

Essentially, because she can't hear the tonality of his voice, or see his body language, she can't gauge his state of mind.

So, rather than give him the benefit of the doubt and assume that he's being confident, emotionally strong and has improved in the ways that matter to her, she instead judges him based on her past experiences with him (e.g. he was insecure, needy, boring, easily manipulated by her and others).

As a result, she closes herself off and usually doesn't even bother to answer him.

So, if you want to reconcile with your ex, you've got to do it in person where she can see for herself that you're a new and improved man now.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Trying to reconcile by explaining how much she means to you and how you promise that things will be different this time

When it comes to reconciling with an ex, actions speak louder than words.

So, telling your ex that you still care for her and that you promise to be a better man won't matter to her, if she's lost respect and attraction for you.

She might feel a bit sad that what you and her had together is over, but it's not going to make her want you back.

Why?

A woman doesn't want to be with a guy because she feels sorry for him.

She wants to be with him because he makes her feel sexual and romantic feelings for him.

So, if you want to reconcile with your ex, don't bother explaining your feelings to her and promising to change, because she's probably not going to care.

Instead, just focus on reactivating her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you so that she begins to care.

Then the idea of reconciling will be something she wants too and you can get her back into a new and exciting relationship with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex Wants to Play it Safe and Stick With Her New Guy For Now

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 common reasons why a woman will say that:

1. She doesn't believe that you've changed enough yet to attract her more than he does

When a woman gets into a relationship after a break up, it's usually because the new guy is making her feel attracted in ways that her ex couldn't.

For example: If her ex was too much of a nice guy, which then caused him to be submissive around other people (especially other men), then her new man might be more assertive and emotionally strong.

This allows her to fully relax when she's with him, knowing that he is an emotionally powerful man she can look up to, respect and feel attracted to.

Alternatively, if she felt that her and her ex wanted different things in life, (e.g. a career vs. a family), then her new man will be more in line with her way of thinking.

Even if he's not her ideal man, because he makes her feel attracted in a way that she'd been missing for a long time with her ex, she will usually stick with him.

So, if her ex then tries to get her back, before she lets go of her new guy, she's going to want to see that he's changed in the ways that are important to her (e.g. he's emotionally stronger and less submissive around her and other people, his direction in life is more in line with hers).

However, if she interacts with him (over the phone and in person) and she notices that no matter how much he tries to hide it, he always falls back to his old way of thinking and behaving, she will likely think things like, "I know he means well, and he's a pretty decent guy, but he's just wasting my time. The truth is, he simply can't change those things about him that turn me off. I don't believe he even knows how to change and become the kind of man I want. It's just that he doesn't have anyone in his life that can help him, so he's lost. Unfortunately, I'm just not willing to risk getting hurt by him again if I give him another chance. So, if he wants me to listen to him, he needs to show me that he's really changed. Until he can do that, I'd rather play it safe and stick with my new guy for now."

So, if you want your ex to give up her new man for you, you're going to have to show her via the way you talk, think, behave and respond to her that you truly have changed.

Not sort of changed, "I'm going to change if she gives me another chance," but really change here and now.

Remember: Actions speak louder than words.

When she can see for herself that you're a new man now, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, she'll automatically stop needing to play it safe by sticking with her new guy anymore.

She will then naturally let down her guard and allow herself to open back up to the idea of being your girl again.

However, if you continue trying to get her back without changing the things that matter to her and instead you offer her things she doesn't want (e.g. you buy her flowers instead of being more assertive, you pour your heart out to her in a long letter or e-mail, rather than setting yourself some goals and going after them), she's just going to keep pushing you away and saying, I'm sorry, but I just can't risk it with you. I'm going to play it safe and stick with my new guy for now.

Another reason why a woman might say that to you is

2. She feels like you took her for granted for a long time, so she wants to look out for herself for a while now

Sometimes a guy makes the mistake of believing that the love between him and his woman will last for ever, because it was so great at the start of their relationship.

Yet, that's not how a relationship between a man and a woman works.

For a woman's feelings of respect, attraction and love to expand, develop and flourish over time, she needs to know that she is loved and appreciated all the time, not just at the beginning of the relationship.

If he can make her feel that way, she will then automatically feel motivated to contribute to the relationship and be a good, loving, supportive woman to him.

However, if he falls into the habit of taking her for granted (e.g. he stops noticing her efforts to look good for him, breaks his promises to her more and more, doesn't pull his weight with chores or errands), she will start pulling away, being closed off, treating him with less and less respect over time and finally she will break up with him.

If she then hooks up with a new guy who treats her the way she wants to be treated (e.g. he spoils her, makes her feel loved and appreciated), she won't be eager to give her ex another chance when he tries to get her back.

Instead, she will likely say something along the lines of, I had to put up with being taken for granted for such a long time that I never want to feel that way in a relationship again. That's why I don't care that you are sorry and want me back. For now, I'm going to look out for myself and enjoy being treated like a princess by my new guy.

Another reason why a woman will play it safe and stick with her new guy is

3. She wants to have the best of both worlds

Sometimes, a woman wants to savor the thrill of being in a new relationship, while also keeping her ex around to make herself feel good about herself.

Essentially, she can then have fun being with her new guy, while at the same time having the certainty of knowing that her ex is waiting in the wings for her.

Not only does this boost her confidence, it also provides her with a safety net (i.e. her ex) to catch her if things don't work out with her new man.

If she then says that she wants to play it safe and stick with her new guy for now, it might simply be her way of stopping her ex from moving on by causing him to think things like, What does that mean? If I stick around long enough, will I eventually be able to convince her that I won't hurt her again so she can give me another chance?

So, here's the thing:

If you don't want your ex to continue messing you around, you need to use every chance you get to interact with her (e.g. via text, social media, over the phone and in person), to create feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside her.

Make her really want you in that way so that she starts thinking things like, "I thought I was the one in control of the situation but suddenly I feel so confused. I can't stop thinking about my ex and how it would feel to be his girl again. What should I do?"

She will then naturally start to want to talk to you more on the phone and meet up with you in person to try and decide what to do.

You can then fully re-attract her, kiss her, hook up with her sexually and get her back.

Another reason why a woman will play it safe and stick with her new guy is:

4. You haven't re-attracted her yet, but you're asking for a relationship

You still have feelings for your ex, so the only thing on your mind is getting her back, right?

You might even be saying and doing all sorts of things to try and convince her to forget about her new guy and give you another chance (e.g. begging and pleading, promising to change whatever she wants, sending her flowers or romantic letters/e-mails/texts).

Yet, if you don't first spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, she will usually just keep pushing you away and saying things like, "I know you mean well and I accept that you still have feelings for me, but I just don't feel the same way about you. There's nothing I can do about that. I can't change how I feel, so please stop asking for a relationship, because it's just not going to happen. We gave it a shot and it didn't work out and for now, I'm just going to play it safe and stick with my new guy."

So, don't make the mistake of asking for a relationship with your ex if you haven't done anything else to re-attract her first.

You need to spark her feelings of respect and attraction if you want her to open back up to the idea of being with you.

So, focus on interacting with her whenever you can (e.g. call her on the phone or meet up with her in person) and pay particular attention to saying and doing the kind of things that will make her feel drawn to you again.

For example:

- Stay calm, relaxed and confident no matter what she says or does to put you off.
- Use humor to lighten the mood between you and her and get her to drop her guard.
- Flirt with her to make her feel sexually attracted to you again.
- Make her feel feminine and girly in your presence by being emotionally masculine and strong.
- Feel sure of yourself and of your attractiveness to her.

When you have that kind of confidence and self-belief, you will naturally talk, behave and take action in a way that is attractive to your ex (and to other women).

She then stops putting up walls every time you interact with her and saying that she wants to play it safe and stick with her new guy for now, and she allows herself to open back up to the idea of being in a relationship with you again.

On the other hand if you just try to convince her to forget about her new guy without first reawakening her feelings for you, sheâs just going to keep saying, âNo.â

Another reason why a woman will play it safe and stick with her new guy isâ|

5. You have given her a false sense of power over you

After potentially begging and pleading with your ex for another chance when she broke up with you and chasing her desperately after that, she now feels like she's much more valuable than you, which by the way, isn't actually the case.

She might then start thinking things like, âWhat did I ever see in him? Heâs just so desperate to get me back that he allows me to treat him any way I want and he never stands up to me, even when Iâm intentionally being bitchy to him. Heâs such a wimp. Thereâs no way I would leave the safety of my new relationship to be with him again. I just couldnât respect a guy that I can so easily push around and dominate.â

Hereâs the thingâ|

If you hand your power over to a woman, she wonât be able to respect you anymore.

If she canât respect you, she wonât be able to feel sexually attracted to you and without those two things, she has no reason to want to be in a relationship with you again.

So, donât give your ex one more reason to feel like she has power over you.

You need to reclaim your power from her by not falling for her games anymore.

For example: The next time she says that she wants to play it safe and stick with her new guy for now, rather than get upset about it, or try to argue with her and convince her to change her mind, simply laugh and say, âThatâs a great idea. I think you should definitely play it safe. Iâm way too much man for you anyway. However, your new guy seems perfect for you.â

Of course you donât really mean that, but by saying something like that to her youâre showing her that youâre not going to allow her to push you around anymore.

Initially she might be a bit shocked that youâre talking to her like that.

However, deep down she will be feeling strong bursts of respect and attraction for you again.

Sheâs also going to be wondering about how and why youâve changed so much and sheâs going to be curious to find out more.

You can then use that to your advantage, fully reactivate her feelings and get her back into a relationship with you where she now feels motivated to be good to you, treat you well and make you feel loved and appreciated.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Back Who is With a New Guy

If you want your ex to break up with her new guy and come back to you, youâre going to have to show her (via your actions, behavior and the way you make her feel), that youâ€¢re a much better catch than he is.

That is why you need to avoid making any of the following mistakes:

1. Waiting patiently in the hope that she comes back, but she doesn't

When a woman is saying, â€¢I want to play it safe and stick with my new guy for now,â€¢ itâ€¢s very easy for a guy to feel disheartened.

He might then decide that the only option left for him is to give her some space and allow her to miss him.

Then, when she realizes that heâ€¢s no longer chasing after her, she might fear losing him and come running back.

He then waits around for weeks, months and in some cases even years, hoping that his ex will come to her senses and choose him, only to feel devastated when he discovers that sheâ€¢s fully moved on and either married her new guy, or happily in love with someone else.

So, if you want your ex back, donâ€¢t waste time waiting for her and hoping that she will come back on her own.

If she hasnâ€¢t come back on her own by now, she probably wonâ€¢t ever come back.

If you want her back, you have to step up and make it happen.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¢!

2. Becoming needy for your ex because you keep comparing other women to her and no-one compares

After a break, a guy might sometimes forget about his exâ€¢s bad points and remember only her good points.

He may then make her out to be so much more perfect than she really was, that he struggles to meet another woman who can ever match up to her.

He then starts thinking things like, â€¢Iâ€¢m doomed to be single for the rest of my life because no other woman is as amazing as my ex. She was perfect in every way and I canâ€¢t live without her. I need to get her back,â€¢ which prevents him from being able to move on.

He then stays stuck in a loop where no other woman can match up to his ex, but she doesnâ€¢t want him back, so he remains single and alone.

Hereâ€¢s the thingâ€¢!

No one is perfect; not even your ex.

However, if you continue to compare her to every other woman you meet, youâ€¢ll never be able to move forward with your life.

That doesnâ€¢t mean you have to give up on her and settle for another woman.

It simply means you have to get to the point in your life where you can be happy with, or without your ex.

When you can do that, something amazing happensâ€¢!

You suddenly become more attractive to your ex. Why?

Even though she won't admit this, she likes the idea of being with a man who can have any woman he wants, but chooses to be with her.

She realizes that you're not a lonely, depressed guy who has been sitting at home alone pining for her, which automatically makes her begin to feel some respect and attraction for you again.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Pretending to be happy for her when you're not

If your ex can see that you're happy without her and having a great time, then it will definitely make her feel drawn to you again on some level and you can then build on her feelings and get her back.

However, if you only pretend to be happy and she sees through it (i.e. because she tests you by acting hurt that you're happy without her and you then fall for it and tell her you're not) she will just lose even more respect for you for not having the backbone to be honest about how you feel in a calm, confident, non-needy way.

Another mistake to avoid is

4. Being neutral and friendly with her, which doesn't interrupt the process of her moving on

If a woman is pushing her ex away and saying that she wants to play it safe and stick with her new guy for now, he might decide to pretend that he's only interested in being her friend now (e.g. he's nice and polite towards her, doesn't flirt to create sexual tension, doesn't make her feel attracted).

Essentially he's hoping that by being her friend, she will eventually realize that he's a good guy (e.g. because he's not pushing her to get back together again, he's indispensable to her) and she will then choose him over her new guy.

Unfortunately though, that approach doesn't work if the woman isn't attracted to him anymore.

Instead, she will enjoy having him around as her nice, sweet friend and then enjoy having sex, falling in love and moving on with her new guy (or another guy who ignites her sexual and romantic feelings for him).

So, if your goal is to get your ex back, don't pretend that you don't by being too neutral or friendly around her.

Instead, focus on making her feel sexually attracted and turned on every time you interact with her, so she will naturally begin to want more of that from you.

Make her want you and when you do, things will begin to unfold more naturally and easily.

Before you know it, she will be breaking up with her new guy and you and her will be a couple again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

4 Examples of How to Make Her Miss You After a Breakup

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 ways to make your ex miss you after a breakup are:

1. Interact with her on a phone call, reactivate her feelings and then give her 3 to 7 days of space

One of the most effective ways to make a woman miss you after a breakup is by actively re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you on a phone call and then cutting off communication with her for up to a week.

Some of the ways you can do that are by

- Using humor to lighten the mood and taking away any awkwardness that might be there.
- Showing her your confidence by not feeling nervous or unsure of yourself when she is being withdrawn and unfriendly towards you.
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension, rather than being too nice and neutral.

The more you spark her feelings for you, the more likely it is that she will miss you when you don't contact her again right away. Why?

Essentially, because the last thing on her mind is how nice it was to talk to you on the phone again, how different you seem since she broke up with you and how attracted she suddenly feels to you.

Here's the thing

If you try to make her miss you after a breakup by simply ignoring her (i.e. following the No Contact Rule), because her feelings for you are switched off, she's not really going to care.

Instead, she's going to use the time apart to move on and possibly even find herself another man.

On the other hand, if you interact with her first, reactivate some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you and then ignore her for a few days to a week, she's more likely to think things like, "Why isn't he calling me again? I know I thought it was over between us, but all of a sudden not hearing from him after the last conversation we had is driving me crazy! I can't stop thinking about him and how different he was on the phone. I actually miss him and I'm starting to doubt my decision to break up with him. What should I do?"

By the way

You may have heard the expression, "If a little is good, then more must be better."

That expression is true in some instances, but when it comes to ignoring an ex, more contact is almost never better.

So, even if you did successfully make her miss you, you will likely end up blowing it if you give her too much space (anything longer than 7 days). Why?

Rather than miss you more, she may start thinking that you've moved on.

As a result, she will simply focus on fully getting over you, moving on and finding herself a replacement guy.

So, don't let that happen to you.

After 3 to 7 days of space, call her again, spark her feelings for you some more and get her to agree to a meet up.

In most cases, all it takes is 2 to 3 interactions where the guy is sparking her feelings (on the phone and in person), before a really closed off woman will begin to drop her guard and open herself up to getting back together again.

In easy cases (i.e. where a woman still has some feelings for her ex), all it takes is one phone call and one meet up and the couple is back together.

Another way to make her miss you after a breakup isâ€¦!

2. Post up photos on social media of you enjoying your life with other people

Even if your ex has unfriended you on social media, chances are, she will still take a peek at your profile from time to time to see what youâ€™re up to.

Secretly she will want to find out if youâ€™re still missing her or if youâ€™ve moved on.

This is why you need to make sure that you update all your social media accounts and donâ€™t leave any sad, lonely photos of you posted around.

Instead, make sure that from now on, all your photos are of you having fun with other people (e.g. at a party with friends, doing something fun with other women, at a concert or some other social event).

By the wayâ€¦!

If she isnâ€™t your friend on social media or isnâ€™t following you, just make sure that the photos are public so she can see them from the outside.

Chances are, when she checks up on you, she will be pleasantly surprised to see that youâ€™re not sitting around feeling sorry for yourself.

She may then start thinking things like, â€œWow, heâ€™s really looking good. Not only isnâ€™t he being sad and lonely, heâ€™s actually having so much fun. I canâ€™t believe Iâ€™m even thinking this, but I wish we were doing those things together. I miss him.â€

How can that be?

When you post photos of yourself having fun with other people, rather than make your want to move on, it actually makes her feel drawn to you again.

All of a sudden, she feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and she wants to talk to you again, meet up with you in person and see where things go from there.

Another way to make her miss you after a breakup isâ€¦!

3. Let mutual friends see you confident, happy and doing fine without her

One of the best ways to make a woman miss you and make her want you back, is to simply get on with your life and let her find out about it.

You actually donâ€™t have to do anything other than have fun and make sure enough mutual friends see you doing it.

The news will inevitably get back to her when she talks to them, or when her friends talk to them and pass on the details to her.

She will then likely feel a bit sad and left out.

She might even start thinking things like, â€œI miss him and I miss the way we used to have fun together as a couple.â€

By the way!

If you're wondering, â€œHow will me having fun with other people make her miss me?â€ the answer is quite simple.

The more you enjoy your life without her, the more drawn to you she will become. Why?

When a guy isn't moving on after a breakup and is just sitting around moping and feeling sad, it signals to his ex that he lacks confidence in his attractiveness to her and probably doesn't believe that he can attract other quality women.

As a result she feels like she made the right decision to break up with him.

On the other hand, when a guy is happy and moving forward in his life, even though he may still feel a bit sad about being broken up, it's a sign that he is emotionally strong, confident and self-assured.

She then instinctively feels attracted to him, because those are qualities that women find attractive in men.

So, when you feel genuinely happy and fulfilled without your ex, you naturally seem more attractive to her and she begins to miss you.

Another way to make her miss you after a breakup is!

4. Don't be so responsive and available

If your ex is still staying in touch with you after the breakup, it might be tempting to want to keep the connection going.

In your mind you may even be thinking things like, â€œIf I don't reply immediately, she might stop texting/calling me,â€ or â€œIf I don't go with what she wants to talk about she might get annoyed and stop contacting me.â€

Yet, that kind of thinking makes you appear too available to her and as a result, it's unlikely that she will get a chance to miss you.

So, a better way to interact with your ex is!

Don't always reply to her texts, don't always LOL and don't always be willing to talk about whatever she wants.

This then makes her think about you and wonder why you've changed so much since the breakup (e.g. you're more confident and emotionally independent now).

As a result, she starts to think about you in a positive way and begins to miss you.

On the other hand, if you make yourself too available to her, she will likely start thinking something along the lines of, â€œWhy is he so responsive? Doesn't he have a life? When does he sleep, or eat, or go to work and when does he go out with his friends? I wonder if he's just sitting around waiting to hear from me all the time. I hope not, because that would just be weird.â€

So, just relax and reply when you want, use humor and most importantly, get to a meet up, re-attract her and get her back.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Make a Woman Miss Them After a Breakup

When you know how, making your ex miss you after a breakup is actually quite easy.

However, if you use the wrong approach, rather than make her miss you, you might convince her that she made the right decision to break up after all.

So to prevent that from happening, make sure you avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Assuming that the No Contact approach will work on any kind of woman

Not all women are the same.

So, even though some women might respond well to be ignored by an ex (e.g. a woman who still has some feelings for her ex, is struggling to find herself a replacement guy, or is curious to see what heâs doing), most women donât.

In most cases, a woman will likely just use the time apart to move on and find herself another guy (especially if she doesnât feel much, or any, respect, attraction and love for him anymore).

Even if a woman does still have some feelings for her ex and is hoping they might be able to work things out, if she doesnât hear from him for 30 or even 60 days, instead of contacting him she might decide that he obviously doesnât feel the same way about her, if heâs not calling her.

She may then focus on getting over her feelings for him and moving on.

If he then contacts her after a few weeks or months, he will likely be very disappointed to discover that sheâs no longer interested in giving him another chance.

So, if you want to make your ex miss you, donât think that ignoring her for a long time will work. Of course it might, but chances are high that it will more likely backfire on you.

Is it a chance youâre willing to take?

Another mistake to avoid isâ|

2. Becoming insecure and losing a lot of confidence as you wait weeks or months for her to miss you on her own

A guy will sometimes wait a long time for his ex to initiate contact with him.

Yet, the longer he waits, the more he begins to doubt himself and his value to her.

He then starts thinking things like, âWhy isnât she calling me? I guess she doesnât miss me after all. Sheâs probably forgotten I even exist. Well I donât blame her. I deserve to be forgotten by her after the way I stuffed things up in our relationship. Iâm just such a loser.â

He then stops believing in his ability to re-attract her and gives up on the idea of getting her back.

Donât make that mistake.

Donât wait around hoping she will make the first move.

Instead, believe in yourself, take action and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ|

3. Pretending to be happy about your life via text, when she can sense that you aren't

Sometimes a guy will put on an act of being happy without his ex as a way of making her jealous and as a result, miss him.

He might then send her text messages saying things like, â€œDoing really great! Things are looking up for me. So, how are you?â€ or â€œHaving so much fun. My life is so great. What are you up to these days?â€

Yet, in most cases a woman can sense that's not really true (i.e. because his texts are too obvious, he always responds to her right away when she replies, he tries too hard show her how happy he is).

She may then test him to see if he's really happy or only putting on an act.

For example: She might text him back and say that she has been missing him and is thinking about giving him another chance.

She might also ask if he misses her and if he wants to get back together to find out how he's really feeling.

If he then quickly responds with something along the lines of, â€œYes! Of course I miss you too! Getting back together is the only thing I've been thinking about since the day we broke up,â€ she will know that he was lying to her and she will feel turned off.

Another mistake to avoid making is

4. Being too neutral with her via text

Sometimes a guy might text his ex and pretend that he's only interested in being her neutral friend by being on his best behavior and avoiding any flirting.

Secretly he may be hoping that being neutral with her will make her relax and not feel pressured into getting back together with him.

Yet, in most cases, rather than make a woman think, â€œWow, my ex is being so sweet. I really appreciate the way he's taking things so slow and just being a nice, neutral friend to me. That makes me miss him so much all of sudden. Maybe, I should give him another chance after all,â€ she will likely be thinking something like, â€œOh well. I guess it's over between us. He clearly only sees me as a friend now, so I should forget about him and move on,â€ instead.

She will then just get on with her life and hook up with a guy who actually flirts with her and makes her feel attracted.

So, don't let that happen to you.

If you want to get your ex back, don't pretend you only want to be her friend.

No matter how you interact with her from now on (i.e. via text, a phone call or in person), make sure that you flirt with her and make her feel attracted again.

Only then will she begin to miss you, think about you and open herself up to the idea of being your girl once again.

Another mistake to avoid making is

5. Focusing on improving your physical appearance, rather than your emotional attractiveness

In some instance a guy might think to himself, “If I change my appearance (e.g. go to the gym and build some muscles, lose/pick up some weight, change my wardrobe), my ex will feel attracted to me again and she will then start to miss me and want me back.”

Yet, what a guy like that doesn't understand is that a man's physical appearance doesn't matter as much to a woman as his emotional attractiveness.

How he makes her feel when she interacts with him is what counts.

Does he make her feel feminine and girly in his presence (i.e. because he's being emotionally masculine) or does he make her feel neutral or like a friend?

Can she look up to him, respect him and feel proud to be his girl, or does she feel a bit embarrassed by him, or like she can do better for herself?

Does he make her feel loved, appreciated and respected, or does she feel taken for granted.

These are the kind of things that matter much more to a woman than what a guy looks like on the outside.

Of course, that doesn't mean she will accept a guy who is a slob either.

So, if you want to take care of your appearance for your own sake, go right ahead and do it.

Then, when you also make her feel attracted in some of the ways that matter to her, she will also appreciate that you've put in the effort to look better physically, but not the other way around.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Said it Would Be Better if We Parted Ways

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 common reasons why a woman will say that:

1. She has lost respect and attraction for you and no longer feels like being in a relationship

For a woman to get into a relationship with a guy, it usually means heâs made her feel enough respect and attraction for him for her to start thinking things like, *âHeâs such a good guy and I love the way he makes me feel when Iâm with him. Iâm really excited about this relationship, because I think he might be the right guy for me.*â

Yet, that dream will only last if the guy is able to build on her feelings of respect, attraction and love over time, by being more of the man she fell for in the first place.

Unfortunately, a lot of the time, a guy will usually start off being confident, self-assured, emotionally independent, easy-going or assertive, only to slowly allow those attractive qualities to be replaced by more negative ones the longer heâs in the relationship with his woman (e.g. he begins to doubt his value to her so he responds by being clingy and needy or jealous and controlling, he wants to please her all the time so he becomes submissive around her, he gets used to her being around so he becomes complacent in the relationship and she starts to feel taken for granted).

As a result, the respect, attraction and love his woman felt for him in the beginning slowly starts to fade.

If he doesnât pick up on that and quickly makes some adjustments to his thinking and behavior, she will then likely decide that she prefers to be on her own, than stay in a relationship with a guy she no longer loves, respects and feels attracted to.

She will then say something along the lines of, *âI think it would be better if we parted ways,*â as a means of letting him down easy.

Hereâs the thingâ

If a woman is happy and fulfilled in her relationship with her man, nothing will make her let that go. So, if your ex wants to part ways, you need to show her that losing you will be a big mistake.

How can you do that?

By actively sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you again every time you interact with her on a phone call or in person (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what she says or does to upset you, making her feel feminine and girly in your presence, showing her that youâre a new and improved man).

When she feels more attracted to you than she ever has before (i.e. because you are now making her feel attracted in new and exciting ways), she will quickly change her mind about parting ways.

She will then likely say something like, *âIâve changed my mind. I want to try and make things work between us.*â

Another reason why a woman will say that she thinks it would be better if you parted ways isâ

2. She is interested in another guy and wants to break up with you first

Sometimes a woman might find herself attracted to another guy (i.e. because her man isn't sparking her feelings in the relationship anymore) and wants to see where things go with him.

However, rather than say, "Look, I've met someone else and I want out," and risk making him angry with her (and potentially becoming violent towards her), or hurting him, she instead says, "I think it would be better if we parted ways."

Secretly she may even be hoping that if she says something like that to him, he might respond with something along the lines of, "Don't make your final decision just yet. Why don't you just take some time apart to think things through? Then, when things have calmed down, we can talk again about getting back together again if you want to."

She can then use that time to hook up with the new guy.

Then, if her ex contacts her after a few weeks or months to try and work things out, she can say, "Sorry, I know I said I'd think about us, but I've met someone else in the meantime and I'm in a relationship with him."

This is why, if you don't want that to happen to you, don't just sit back and wait for your girlfriend to change her mind on her own.

You have to be active about keeping her.

In other words, you need to spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you every chance you get, so that if she has met someone else, her attraction for him starts to seem inadequate compared to what she feels for you.

Another reason why a woman will say that she thinks it would be better if you parted ways is

3. You make her feel more like a friend, which isn't what she wants from a relationship

For a woman to be happy in a relationship, she wants a man who is good to her, but also makes her feel feminine and girly in comparison to his masculinity (i.e. the manly way he thinks, acts, behaves and responds to her).

If he can do that, she will naturally feel motivated to be good to him, treat him well and make him feel loved as well.

However, if he is a good guy who makes her feel more like a friend or like one of the guys, rather than like an attractive, desirable woman, her attraction for him as a man will start to fade.

So although a woman might still love her man, the love changes from romantic, sexual love, to platonic, friendly love.

When that happens, she will usually find that she no longer wants to be in a relationship with him and she may then say things like, "I love you, but I'm not in love with you anymore," or "I love you as a friend now," or if she doesn't want to give him an explanation she might simply say, "I think it would be better if we parted ways."

So, if your ex is saying something like that to you, it could be because she hasn't been feeling girly and feminine in the relationship with you anymore.

The good news is that you can easily change how she feels by making some adjustments to the way you interact with her from this point onwards.

You need to show her (via the way you talk, think, behave and respond to her) that you now have the ability to be masculine in a way that makes her feel like a real woman, rather than a neutral friend.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is byâ€¦!

- Making her smile and laugh when she is trying to make you submit to her dominance (e.g. by creating drama and waiting to see if youâ€™ll fall for it).
- Taking charge and leading the way in the relationship from now on, thereby allowing her to relax into feeling feminine in comparison to you.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension, rather than being too nice or neutral around her.

Then, whether she wants it or not, her feelings will automatically start to change.

She will then start thinking things like, â€œSomething has changed. Being around him actually makes me feel excited again. It feels good. Maybe parting ways isnâ€™t the answer after all. Maybe we really can have a second chance together.â€

However, if you continue to make her feel like a neutral friend, she will follow through with her decision to part ways and you may then lose her to the first guy who comes along and makes her feel attracted in the ways that she wants.

Another reason why a woman will say that she thinks it would be better if you parted ways isâ€¦!

4. You make her feel as though she's too good for you, which makes her believe you

Sometimes a guy simply gets lucky in hooking up with a beautiful, confident woman.

He might then start thinking things like, â€œI canâ€™t believe she actually loves me too! Sheâ€™s just too good for me.â€

As a result, he loses confidence in himself and in his value to her, which then begins to show in the way he thinks, acts, behaves and responds to her (e.g. he lets her have her way all the time regardless of how badly sheâ€™s behaving, becomes clingy and needy because he fears losing her, doesnâ€™t trust his own judgment and instead turns to her for guidance and support).

Yet, rather than make her think, â€œWow, itâ€™s so wonderful that he needs me so much and believes he canâ€™t find a better woman than me. I just love being with a guy who thinks Iâ€™m too good for him,â€ sheâ€™s instead going to think something like, â€œHeâ€™s might be a good guy, but his lack of confidence in himself makes him behave in such needy and insecure ways that I canâ€™t take it anymore. I just donâ€™t want to settle for a guy who feels like Iâ€™m doing him a favor by being with him. I want a man who feels worthy of me so I can look up to him, respect him and feel proud to be his woman. He just isnâ€™t that man. Heâ€™s not good enough for a woman like me.â€

She then decides to break up with him and find herself a man who is worthy of her so she says, â€œI think it would be better if we parted ways.â€

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

If you put your ex on a pedestal and tell yourself that sheâ€™s out of your league, eventually sheâ€™s going to start believing that about herself, even though itâ€™s not true.

Even though you definitely are good enough for her, sheâ€™s not going to believe that if you donâ€™t believe it about yourself.

Thatâ€™s why, if you want your girlfriend back, you have to get to the point where you genuinely believe youâ€™re the best man for her.

Then interact with her, make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new you and get her back.

You can do it, but you have to believe that you can.

If you have any doubts about yourself though, it will come across in the way you talk, act, behave and respond to her and she will continue feeling superior to you and saying, â€œSorry, but I still think weâ€™re not right for each other. Itâ€™s probably best if we just go our separate ways.â€

Another reason why a woman will say that she thinks it would be better if you parted ways isâ€

5. She has tried to make the relationship work, but nothing is really changing

In most cases, when a woman breaks up with a guy, sheâ€™s usually come to that decision after a long time where sheâ€™s likely been telling him about her unhappiness.

For example: She might have been saying things like, â€œThis isnâ€™t working. If you donâ€™t take me seriously and sort yourself out, Iâ€™m going to break up with you,â€ or â€œI canâ€™t live like this anymore. You need to make some changes or Iâ€™m out of here.â€

Alternatively, she might have even been very specific about what she wanted him to change about himself, like saying, â€œYou expect me to respect you, but you donâ€™t respect me! You just think itâ€™s okay to mess me around and that I will keep taking it. Well, Iâ€™ve had enough. If you donâ€™t give me the respect I deserve, Iâ€™m going to break up with you and nothing you say after that will make me change my mind!â€

If the guy doesnâ€™t pick up on her unhappiness fast enough and do something to improve the situation, or if he simply ignores her because he assumes that she loves him and will therefore put up with anything, she will eventually lose too much respect for him to want to stay in the relationship.

When that happens, she will usually just break up with him by saying something along the lines of, â€œIâ€™m sorry, but Iâ€™m tired of trying to make our relationship work, I think it would be better if we parted ways.â€

So, if you want to get her back, you have to be aware of why she really broke up with you and begin to change those things about yourself.

When she sees that youâ€™ve understood what she wants from you and have already taken steps to change and improve, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She then drops her defenses and opens back up to the idea of giving you another chance.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Back

Getting your ex to change her mind about parting ways isnâ€™t as difficult as you might think.

However, it does require that you say and do the kind of things that will re-attract her and regain her respect and attraction for you.

That is why you need to be sure that youâ€™re not making any of the following mistakes that guys make when trying to get an ex back:

1. Promising to change whatever she wants, if she'll just give him another chance

When a woman is saying, â€œI think it would be better if we parted ways, it's only natural that a guy might think that promising to do whatever she wants is what she wants from him in order for her to change her mind.

Yet, surprisingly enough, a woman doesn't want that at all.

Why?

To a woman, a guy offering to do whatever she wants is just an indication that he's sucking up to her because he doesn't really know why she's breaking up with him.

In the meantime, she wants to see that he understands the problems and is already making changes because he wants to do it.

Not because he is feeling desperate, is trying to suck up to her and is willing to hand over all of his power to her to make her change her mind.

Another mistake that guys make when trying to get an ex back isâ€¦!

2. Begging, pleading with her or crying to her to seek pity and get another chance

The shock of breaking up might cause a guy to react in ways that go against his better judgment (e.g. he begs, pleads, cries, sulks, or tries to put his ex on a guilt trip).

Yet, rather than make a woman change her mind about breaking up, it actually confirms to her that she's made the right decision.

Here's the thingâ€¦!

A woman's attraction to a guy is based mostly on his ability to make her feel like she can look up to him and respect him as a man.

So, when a guy is begging and pleading and being emotionally weak, he's actually ruining her feelings of respect and attraction for him.

Also, a woman doesn't want to be forced to stay in a relationship with a guy out of pity or guilt, she wants to be with him because she feels lucky to be with him.

Another mistake that guys make when trying to get an ex back isâ€¦!

3. Asking her to remember all the good times and not walk away from what they once had

Wouldn't it be nice if a man could re-spark his ex's feelings of respect, attraction and love for him simply by bringing up all the good times they shared together in the past?

Unfortunately though, life is not that simple.

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, being reminded of how good things used to be between them usually only reminds her that all that is now lost.

She then becomes more convinced than ever that it would be better if she and her man parted ways.

So, if you want your ex to change her mind, you have to actively make her have feelings for you based on who you are now.

Don't bother wasting time reminding her about how good things used to be.

Instead, make things feel good now.

That's what will change her mind.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Breaking Up Because of Moving

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you're breaking up because she is moving away and you want to keep her, here's how to do it. Here are 4 ways to make her want to keep a long distance relationship going with you after she moves away:

1. Tell her that you accept the break up, so she doesn't feel like she is being forced into wanting a long distance relationship

For example: You might say something along the lines of, "Although I really do care for you and would have preferred that we stay together, I understand that you need to make this move. So, I want you to know that I completely accept the break up and wish you everything of the best. I've stopped wishing that things could be different or that you would change your mind about moving. We can now both move on and be happy, without any hard feelings. However, that doesn't mean we can't still be friends. We can still text, talk on the phone and maybe even video chat from time to time and when you're back in town, we can catch up over a cup of coffee too. It will be fun."

By saying that to her, you're letting her know that you're being an emotionally strong and mature man.

Not only does this take the pressure off her to stay in a long distance relationship with you, it also boosts her feelings of respect for you as a man.

As a result, she will then begin to feel strong surges of sexual attraction and love for you and will start to feel the pain of losing you.

She will then naturally begin to consider the possibility of staying in a relationship with you after all, even though she's moving away.

Another thing you can do to make her want to keep a long distance relationship going with you after she moves away is to

2. Start attracting her in new and exciting ways before she moves away

Sometimes, when a guy is forced to break up with his girl because she's moving away, to appear cool about it, he might put on an act of not caring.

He may then start behaving in a neutral way around her (i.e. like he doesn't care one way or another if she leaves).

Yet, that only ruins his chances of staying in a relationship with her, because she likely starts thinking things like, "Well I guess this move was a good thing after all, seeing as he already seems to be over me."

Alternatively, if a guy interacts with his girl while feeling sad, dejected or unsure about his value to her, it will come across in the tonality of his voice, his body language and the way he responds to her every time she talks about the move.

Then, because women aren't sexually attracted to emotional weakness like that, she will decide that he's just not man enough for her and will be happy that she's moving away.

This is why, if you want to prevent your woman from thinking like that about you, you need to make sure you continue to make her feel attracted every time you interact with her (i.e. over the phone or in person).

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is byâ€¦!

- Maintaining your confidence around her regardless of how happy or excited she sounds about moving.
- Using ballsy humor to lighten the mood between you and her, especially when sheâ€™s feeling sad, depressed or overwhelmed by all the changes in her life.
- Being there for her during this transition, while still getting on with your own life (e.g. going out with friends, pursuing your own hobbies and interests, focusing on your goals and dreams).
- Being more manly in how you think, behave, talk and act around her so she feels totally feminine and girly when sheâ€™s with you.
- Continuing to flirt with her so that she canâ€™t stop thinking about you when youâ€™re apart.

The more attracted you make her feel in new and interesting ways, the more convinced sheâ€™ll become that breaking up because of moving isnâ€™t what she wants to do.

Another thing you can do to make her want to keep a long distance relationship going with you after she moves away is toâ€¦!

3. Be more confident and manly in the bedroom all of a sudden

Rather than just having the same, comfortable sex you and her have been having all along, become bolder with her.

After all, you have nothing to lose and the more sexually aroused you make her feel, the more unforgettable you will be to her.

So, focus on having the confidence to take things to a different level with her.

For example:

- Take longer with foreplay and build up the sexual tension by kissing, touching, teasing and playfulness.
- Try something that youâ€™ve never tried before (e.g. a different position, building her up and then pulling away just before she climaxes and then starting all over again).
- Donâ€™t think about her moving away and focus instead on being present in the moment (i.e. When you are present, you respond to what she wants in the moment, not to what you already know she likes).
- Focus on giving her pleasure, while at the same time enjoying the moment for yourself.

Make it an experience that she wonâ€™t be able to stop thinking about.

Another thing you can do to make her want to keep a long distance relationship going with you after she moves away is toâ€¦!

4. Let her see that you are now emotionally independent of her

Even if a woman is unhappy about having to break up with her guy because sheâ€™s moving away, the last thing she usually wants at a time like that is for him to become clingy, needy and emotional. For example: If a guy starts saying things like, â€œI donâ€™t want to lose you! What will I do without you in my life? You mean everything to me and without you I will be lost. Canâ€™t we try and make things work long distance?â€ rather than make a woman feel flattered by his dedication to her, it will often make her pull away from him. Why?

A woman wants to be with a man who is happy, confident and forward moving in his life, with or without her support, approval or attention.

She doesnâ€™t want to feel as though he will fall apart without her presence in his life.

If she gets a sense that he wonâ€™t be able to cope without her, she may begin thinking things like, â€œNow that I know heâ€™s not as confident and emotionally strong and independent as I thought he was, I donâ€™t feel attracted to him anymore. Maybe this move is for the best after all.â€

Thatâ€™s not what you want.

This is why you need to let her see that you are happy, confident and moving forward in life and you donâ€™t need her to feel emotionally fulfilled.

Of course, you really do want her to stay in a relationship with you, but you must get to the point where you donâ€™t actually need that to happen in order for you to feel content.

By not acting like a needy guy around her and instead, you let her see that youâ€™re confident in yourself with or without her in your life, something interesting happensâ€

You become even more attractive to her.

Suddenly, she starts to see you as being more of a catch than you were before, so the idea of losing you begins to bother her a lot.

She might then say something along the lines of, â€œIf youâ€™re willing, Iâ€™d like to try having a long distance relationship after all. Like you said, we can text, call, chat on social media and maybe even visit each other once in a while. I know it wonâ€™t be easy, but I donâ€™t want to lose you!â€

Where Guys Go Wrong When Breaking Up With a Woman Because Sheâ€™s Moving

Your woman is likely under a lot of stress at the moment, so making things worse for her will only make it easier for her to cut you out of her life and try to make a clean start in her new town, city or country.

So, if you donâ€™t want that to happen, make sure you donâ€™t make the following attraction mistakes:

1. Crying with her about the break up

Thereâ€™s no denying that things can get tough sometimes and itâ€™s only normal that having to break up because of moving can make a guy feel like life is being unfair to him.

Itâ€™s also understandable that he might feel upset and may want to vent his frustration by talking about it with his woman.

Thatâs totally fine.

Yet, what isnât fine is him falling apart and crying about the break up to her.

Not only is that unfair to her, because she now has to be the strong one that consoles him, rather than the other way around, it also ruins her feelings for him.

Suddenly she starts to see him with new eyes and she may then begin to think things like, *âI never saw this side of him before, but heâs not as emotionally strong as I thought. In fact, heâs quite wimpy and needy. Maybe this move isnât a bad thing after all. Maybe itâs time that I made a fresh start and found myself a new guy who is emotionally mature and strong like a man.*â

Hereâs the thingâ!

In order for your woman to maintain her feelings of respect and attraction for you, she needs to be able to see that, no matter difficult things get, youâre man enough to remain mentally strong and in control of your emotions.

So, if you start crying to her about the move, youâre likely just going to turn her off and make it easier for her to say *âGoodbye.*â

Another mistake to avoid making isâ!

2. Promising to never forget each other and always stay in touch, rather than creating attraction by being more of a challenge for her

A guy might sometimes think that being soppy and emotional and saying things like, *âIâll never forget you. No matter how far apart we are, I will always be thinking of you and remembering all the good times we shared together,*â will make his woman feel flattered and maybe convince her to stay loyal to him, even though theyâre no longer together.

He doesnât realize that, although she might feel pleased that he still cares about her, sheâs also going to start feeling like she can push him around and not even bother doing anything to keep him interested in her.

Essentially, heâs making it too easy for her to feel like she has control over him by not being much of a challenge to her.

As a result she loses interest.

So, if you want to maintain your womanâs feelings of respect and attraction for you, be a bit more of a challenge to her (e.g. by being emotionally independent and focusing on getting on with your life without her), rather than giving her the impression that you canât cope without her.

Youâd be amazed at how quickly the tables will turn and she will then be the one telling you how she wonât forget you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ!

3. Begging and pleading with her to stay

As tempting as it might be to want to say things like, *âI canât bear the thought of losing you. Please donât go! I beg you,*â donât do it.

Although you likely mean well and youâre only saying whatâs on your mind, begging and pleading simply turns a woman off even more and makes her feel like sheâs making the right decision by moving away from you.

Why?

Women are not attracted to the emotional weakness in men (e.g. neediness, desperation, clinginess, an inability to handle what life throws at him).

So, when a guy begs and pleads with a woman to stay, not only does she feel turned off by what she perceives as his emotional weakness, she likely also feels annoyed with him for expecting her to change her whole life just because he can't cope.

Another mistake to avoid making is

4. Suggesting that he could move to where she is going

In some instances, a guy might offer to go with his woman to wherever she's moving.

In his mind he's likely thinking that she will be happy that he's willing to make such a sacrifice for her.

Yet, in most cases, the opposite is true.

Rather than feel excited about his offer, a woman will usually feel like he's smothering her by not allowing her to do what she set out to do on her own.

At the same time, a woman wants to be the one who asks her guy to go with her because she needs him, not the other way around.

So, when he's being desperate, her instincts naturally cause her to start thinking things like, I can't believe he's being so clingy and needy. He doesn't have the emotional strength required to make me feel protected and safe in a relationship. It's a good thing that I'm moving after all.

She might then say something along the lines of, No. Let me go first. Then, when I've settled down, we can discuss you moving too, as a way of letting him down easy.

Another mistake to avoid making is

5. Turning her off while he still has a chance to interact with her

Although breaking up because of moving sucks, you need to stay in control of your emotions.

If you don't and instead start behaving in unattractive ways (e.g. being whiny and negative, refusing to do any fun things with her anymore because you think it's a waste of time, you get angry with her for moving), you're going to end up ruining her feelings for you.

She will then go away with little to no feelings for you anymore, so it's easier for her to move on and make a fresh start.

So, if you want to save your relationship with her, you need to focus on making her last few days/week/months with you so memorable, that her feelings for you get even stronger.

In that way, she might even decide to stay and if not, she definitely won't be able to forget you and she may then suggest that you and her take a shot at having a long distance relationship for a while.

As you can see, moving does not necessarily have to signal the end of a relationship.

In fact, it can actually be the beginning of something even better.

The choice is yours.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Finally Talked to Me After 2 Months. Now What?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 common reasons why a woman will do that:

1. She is curious to find out how you went from really wanting her back, to not contacting her anymore

If when you and your ex girlfriend first broke up you were texting her all the time, calling her on the phone and sending her messages via social media to try and get her back, she will most likely have been quite surprised when all that suddenly stopped.

Of course initially she would probably have felt relieved that you were no longer contacting her, or trying to get her back.

She may even have thought things like, â€œThank goodness heâ€™s finally gotten the message and is leaving me alone! It feels so good to finally be free of him.â€

Yet, over time, she may have become quite curious about what caused you to vanish from her life.

She might then have started wondering things like, â€œWhy isnâ€™t he still trying to get me back? I wonder what heâ€™s up to. Could he have suddenly met another woman and is now in a new relationship that I donâ€™t know about? Is it possible that heâ€™s moved on?â€

Added to that, if she still hasnâ€™t found herself a replacement boyfriend, she will likely be even more anxious to check up on you to see if youâ€™ve moved on first.

As a result, she suddenly starts talking to you again.

At this point, youâ€™re probably wondering, â€œWhat now?â€

Well, the good news is that you now have an opportunity to re-attract her and get her back.

How can you do that?

By showing her (via your conversation style, actions, behavior and most importantly, the way you respond to what she says and does), that youâ€™re no longer the same guy she broke up with.

Youâ€™ve changed and improved.

For example: Youâ€™re more confident and self-assured now.

So, if she says something along the lines of, â€œDonâ€™t think that just because Iâ€™m talking to you again itâ€™s because I want you back, because I donâ€™t! Iâ€™m over you,â€ rather than feel hurt and lose all hope of getting her back, you realize sheâ€™s only testing you to see if you really have changed.

You then laugh at her attempts to make you feel insecure, which instantly sparks some of her feelings of respect for you.

Another example is that youâ€™re emotionally independent now and getting on with your life without her.

You have goals, hobbies, interests and friends that youâ€™re busy with, so you havenâ€™t been sitting around feeling sad, lonely and waiting for her to contact you.

When she sees that for herself, she won't be able to stop feeling surges of respect and attraction for you again.

You can then build on those feelings so she drops her defenses and opens up to the idea of being your girl once again.

Another common reason why a woman will finally talk to you after 2 months isâ€¦!

2. She just wants to confirm that you're still missing her and wanting her back

Sometimes, a woman might simply be looking for a bit of a self-esteem boost for herself.

So, after 2 months of not talking to her ex, she might contact him to see if he's still pining for her.

If he then starts saying things like, â€œIâ€™m so glad youâ€™re talking to me again! I missed you so much! These past 2 months have been hell without you. Why donâ€™t we meet up sometime so that we can talk in person? I really want to discuss what went wrong with our relationship,â€ she will get the satisfaction of knowing that he still has feelings for her.

Then, after she gets the ego boost she was hoping for, she will likely just go back to ignoring him again, knowing that there's a guy out there who wants her.

A guy might then ask, â€œWhy did this happen? I thought she would be flattered to see that I still miss her and want her back?â€

Yet, here's the thingâ€¦!

A woman wants a man who wants her, not needs her.

So, when she sees that her ex needs her love to be strong and without it he becomes a weak, insecure, needy guy, rather than feel flattered, she feels even more determined to move on without him.

This is why it's so important that even if you have really missed your ex girlfriend, you don't come across as being needy or like you haven't been doing anything with your life since she stopped talking to you.

When she can see for herself that you're an emotionally independent and strong man, she will instinctively feel attracted to you again, even though she may try to deny it to herself.

She then subconsciously changes her plans (i.e. to talk to you, confirm that you're missing her and then ignore you again) and she instead stays in touch to see in what other ways you've changed and improved since you and her broke up.

You can then use the interactions with her to reactivate her feelings and get her back into a relationship with you.

Another common reason why a woman will finally talk to you after 2 months isâ€¦!

3. She misses you and wants to find out if you can now make her feel attracted in the ways that are important to her

In some cases, the longer a woman doesn't talk to her ex, the more she realizes that she misses him.

She may then start thinking things like, â€œMaybe Iâ€™ve been too hard on him. I know he stuffed up, but he wasnâ€™t all bad. In fact, he was a pretty good guy most of the time. I actually miss so many things about him. Maybe I should talk to him again and see if heâ€™s changed. If he has, I would be willing to give him another chance.â€œ

She then makes the first move and gives him an opening to start re-attracting her in some of the ways that are important to her (e.g. by showing her that heâ€™s more ballsy and no longer allows her to walk all over him, by being more sure of himself around her and others, by living up to his full potential in life rather than hiding from it out of fear).

If he then interacts with her and shows her via his actions, behavior and the way he responds to her that he truly has changed, she will allow her defenses to come down and open her heart to him again.

On the other hand, if she contacts him and sees that heâ€™s wasted the 2 months because he hasnâ€™t done anything to change or improve (i.e. heâ€™s spent that time being sad, lonely and feeling hopeless rather than focusing on quickly improving his ability to attract her), she will pull away from him again and focus on fully getting over him this time and moving on.

Another common reason why a woman will finally talk to you after 2 months isâ€œ

4. Her friends dared her to contact you

A womanâ€™s friends might sometimes push her to contact her ex to see what happens.

This could be because they are tired of hearing her talking about him and theyâ€™re hoping that if she gets in touch with him, he will either re-attract her and get her back, or she will see that heâ€™s still the same jerk she broke up with and finally get over him.

Alternatively, her and her friends might simply be getting in touch with her ex to have a laugh at his expense.

Essentially, they may be hoping that he will be so happy to hear from her that he will start believing she wants him back.

She can then say something along the lines of, â€œYou must be crazy if you think I want you back! Itâ€™s over between us and Iâ€™m having a wonderful time without you! There are so many guys who are interested in me now, why would I even consider giving you another chance?â€œ and laugh with her friends about how gullible he is.

Another common reason why a woman will finally talk to you after 2 months isâ€œ

5. She is aiming to make you want her again, so she can then pull away and make you chase her

Sometimes, a woman might resent that her ex has stopped contacting her after their break up.

In her mind she may be thinking things like, â€œHow can he just walk away from me and not even call to see how Iâ€™m coping? Did he ever even love me, or was he just using me?â€œ

These thoughts might keep going around and around in her head until she decides to take matters into her own hands and after 2 months, finally decides to talk to him, either for a self esteem boost, or for revenge for trying to mess with her by not contacting her after the break up.

So, she will contact him and lead him on and pretend to be interested.

Then, when he says something along the lines of, â€œI missed you so much. These past few months of not talking to you have been so difficult. It really took all my strength not to call you,â€œ she can feel better about herself, knowing that he really did care for her.

At the same time, she can get her revenge by saying something like, â€œGood for you! I didnâ€™t miss you and the only reason Iâ€™m talking to you now is to tell you that Iâ€™m over you! Iâ€™ve moved on and Iâ€™m happy now. Bye,â€ and enjoy causing him pain for having ignored her.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Interacting With an Ex Woman After 2 Months of No Contact

Regardless of your ex girlfriendâ€™s reasons for talking to you again, you now have the perfect opportunity to re-attract her and get her back.

It all depends on what you do from this point onwards.

Thatâ€™s why you need to avoid making any of the following mistakes:

1. Sticking to text conversations and then she loses interest

Sometimes a guy is worried about coming across as being pushy or over eager with his ex once she starts talking to him after a couple of months of silence, so he sticks to only communicating with her via text.

Essentially, heâ€™s hoping that when sheâ€™s ready, she will give him a sign that sheâ€™s open to talking to him over the phone, or meet up with him in person.

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€

In most ex back cases, a woman will rarely make it easy for a guy to get her back.

Instead, she will wait for him to take the lead in the ex back process by calling her, arranging a meet up and then re-attracting her and getting her back.

However, if all he does is have long conversations with her via text, sheâ€™s going to get bored with him pretty quickly, because nothing about that is sparking her feelings for him.

She then usually loses interest and becomes increasingly colder and more aloof towards him, until she eventually stops responding to him altogether.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€

2. Over analyzing what she says or doesn't say via text

Itâ€™s only natural that when a guy has been waiting 2 months to hear from his ex, heâ€™s going to be very excited when she start talking to him again.

Yet, rather than just call her on the phone or meet up with her in person where he can spark her feelings for him and start getting her back, he instead agonizes over her text messages, in the hope that he can get a clue about her true feelings for him.

He ex might then read her messages and start wondering, â€What did she mean when she said that? Could she be hinting that she wants to get back together again, or was she just making conversation?â€ or â€I said I missed her, but she didnâ€™t say it back to me. Does that mean she didnâ€™t miss me, or is she just playing hard to get?â€

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€

You will drive yourself crazy by overanalyzing everything your ex girlfriend says or doesnâ€™t say when sheâ€™s texting you.

That's why you need to forget about all that and focus instead on actively making her feel respect and attraction for you again.

That's what really matters.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Waiting for 100% clear signals that she wants a relationship before you try to get to a meet up

There's no way to know what your ex girlfriend was thinking about when she finally decided to talk to you after 2 months.

Yes, she might have missed you and wanted to give you a sign that she's now open to getting back together again.

However, she may also have just been bored or curious about what you've been up to and wanted to see for herself.

The point is, it doesn't matter.

If you wait around hoping to get a clear signal from her that she wants a relationship, you could be waiting for a very long time.

In most cases, rather than make her feelings for her ex obvious, a woman will wait for him to just make a move.

However, if he doesn't she will likely just assume that he isn't interested and she will then try to move on without him.

So, if you want to get your ex girlfriend back, don't waste time waiting for 100% clear signals from her that she wants a relationship.

Instead, be emotionally courageous enough to take the lead in the ex back process and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid is

4. Being neutral and friendly and hoping that she will feel attracted to you anyway

If you're only being neutral or friendly when you interact with your ex, she's likely going to assume that you're no longer interested in her in a sexual and romantic way.

Then, rather than waste any more time with a guy who doesn't want her anymore, she will likely just back off and try to move on.

So, if your intention during the past 2 months of not talking to her was to get her back into a relationship with you, then don't waste the opportunity by being too neutral or friendly with her.

Instead, use interactions with her to spark her feelings and make her feel sexually attracted once again.

You can do that by using ballsy humor to make her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

You can also do that by flirting with her and creating sexual tension.

The more you reawaken her feelings for you, the more open she will become to giving you another chance.

So, stop being Mr. Friendly with her and start making her feel like a real woman every time she talks to you.

Youâ€¦ will be amazed by her response.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

We Broke Up Over Something Stupid

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

3 things you should do before trying to get her back:

1. Get clear on your part in causing the break up

Right now, youâre likely convinced that the only thing standing between you and your ex is the stupid thing that caused the break up.

However, to get her back, youâre going to have to be more honest with yourself and realize that a woman wonât just break up with a guy over something stupid, if she hasnât also been losing respect, attraction and love for him over time, about other things as well.

So, if you can uncover those other, more subtle reasons that turned her off and quickly make some attractive changes and adjustments to yourself based on that, she will probably be a lot more willing to forgive a stupid mistake and get back together again.

Of course, if youâre not sure about what else may have turned your ex off about you leading up to the point where you and her broke up over something stupid, hereâs a list of some of the more subtle things that almost always erode a womanâs feelings for her man:

- How he looks timid and unsure of himself around her or others.
- How he lacks confidence in how he talks to her or others.
- How he essentially sees her as the leader of the relationship and depends too much on her to make all the decisions and take care of him.
- How heâs unable to pass her simple confidence tests (e.g. if she rolls her eyes at him, plays hard to get during a conversation, pretends to feel annoyed about things that she doesn't really feel annoyed about and he gets upset, angry or starts to doubt himself).
- How he fails to make her feel feminine and girly in his presence and instead makes her feel neutral or like she is more powerful than him. As a result, she feels sorry for him or feels repulsed by him, rather than feeling respect and looking up to him.
- How he lacks presence as a man (e.g. heâs not assertive, canât handle conflict, doesnât make a memorable or engaging impression on people).
- How he tends to get annoyed or angry about things that she thinks he shouldn't get so worked up about (e.g. when he watches the news, when his team is losing, someone cuts him off in traffic).
- How he tends to have a negative attitude about most things in his life, which drags her down and makes her feel depressed when sheâs around him.

If you want to get the relationship back together, you have to be aware of all your exâs reasons for breaking up with you (not just focus on the stupid mistake) and begin to change those things about yourself.

Just be calm as you quickly change and improve over a period of 3 days to a week and then interact with her and let her see that you really are different now.

When she sees that youâve actually taken steps to change and improve some of the things about you that had nothing to do with the main reason for your break up (i.e. the stupid thing), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling strong surges of respect and attraction for you again. When that happens, her guard starts to slip down and getting back together again becomes pretty easy, because she now realizes that losing you over something stupid would be a big mistake. Another thing you should do before trying to get her back is to

2. Prepare what you will say to her to get her to forgive your mistake and not see it as such a big deal

If you don't prepare yourself beforehand, you may end up turning your apology into begging and pleading for her forgiveness, as well as making all sorts of promises to do whatever she wants you to do to make it up to her.

Yet, even though you might think this will make things right between you and your ex girl, it can actually make it worse.

Why?

The truth is, a woman doesn't want a guy who is willing to say or do anything she wants, just so she will take him back.

So, when you interact with her, don't feel like you have to grovel to make her forgive your mistake.

For example: Something you might say to her that will spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you is, I just want to say that I'm truly sorry for what happened between us. It was a stupid thing and I honestly believe that something trivial like that isn't worth losing what we had over. So, how about we forgive each other and focus on being friends again, without the pressure of getting back together?

By saying something like that to her, it takes the pressure off your ex to have to apologize to you first if she made the mistake and she will probably also feel grateful to you for not making a big deal about it.

On the other hand, if it was you who did the stupid thing, she will likely feel relieved that you've taken the lead in the ex back process and aren't being stubborn or defensive about what happened.

As a result, her guard starts to come down a little and she becomes more open to talking to you over the phone and seeing you in person.

Then, when she also experiences the changes you've made to yourself during the break up (e.g. you're more assertive, you're more positive in your approach to life, you can hold your own during conversation with her or others), she will begin to feel attracted to you in new ways and the idea of being your girl again starts to feel good to her.

Another thing you should do before trying to get her back is to

3. Get ready to attract her in new ways when you interact with her, so she is motivated to give you another chance

In a relationship, a couple usually gets to know most things about the other person (e.g. their likes and dislikes, the way they react under different circumstances, the things that make them happy and unhappy, what turns them on or off).

So, after a break up, a woman might assume that her ex can't offer her anything new that she doesn't already know.

For example: He was a good guy who treated her well enough, was sort of confident and made her laugh from time to time, had an okay job and was kind of working towards achieving some of his goals in life.

However, she doesn't really believe there's anything more to him than that, so she assumes that the amount of attraction she felt for him has reached its limit.

Yet, that's not the case at all.

The fact is, a man can always become more attractive to a woman, because a woman's attraction to a man is mostly based on how his personality and behavior makes her feel.

In other words, he can always become more confident, emotionally masculine, focused and driven, attentive, loving, emotionally powerful or charismatic.

As a result, he can always become more attractive to a woman.

So, how can you do it?

Start by improving the way you interact with your ex from now on.

For example:

If she brings up the stupid thing that caused you and her to break up and possibly even blames you for it, rather than get upset about it or feel guilty, maintain your confidence and use humor to turn things around and make her see the funny side of what happened.

If she is being emotionally closed off towards you, flirt with her to create some sexual tension between you and her.

If she's saying that she can't forgive you and give you another chance, show her that you're an emotionally strong man by not begging and pleading with her to change her mind.

When she can see that nothing she throws at you makes you doubt yourself and your attractiveness and value to her, she will feel naturally attracted to you, whether she likes it or not.

Initially, she may pretend that the new (more confident and emotionally strong) you doesn't impress her, but she won't be able to hide her feelings from you for very long.

As long as you maintain your confidence, her guard will begin to slip and before long she will be laughing with you about breaking up over something so stupid.

You can then take the last step and gently guide her back into a relationship with you.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Back After Making a Stupid Mistake

Right now, the question you need to ask yourself is, Am I going to let something stupid keep me and my ex apart, or am I going to do whatever it takes to get her back?

If you decide to get her back, then every step you take from this moment on counts.

So, make sure you don't make any of these mistakes:

1. Waiting for her to make the first move and she then moves on

Regardless of whether your ex is still angry with you, or she regrets breaking up and wants you back, it's unlikely that she's going to let you know one way or another.

The fact is, a woman will rarely open herself up to her ex and risk being rejected by him, by telling him what she wants and how she feels.

Instead, she will wait for him to see if he is confident enough in himself and in his value to her to take action and get her back.

So, if you regret breaking up with your ex over something stupid and want her back, don't make the mistake even worse by waiting for her to give you a sign that she's forgiven you.

Just be courageous enough to take make the first move in reconciling with her.

If you do, she will naturally start to respect you again.

When she respects you, she will also feel attracted to you and from there, it's only a matter of time before her guard slips down and she opens back up to being your woman again.

Another mistake is!

2. Trying to apologize and get her back via text

Texting back and forth with your ex and trying to explain and apologize is the quickest way to make things worse. Why?

Arguments break out over text due to misunderstandings and she then goes cold and doesn't want to interact with you anymore.

So, if you don't want to go down that road and risk making things worse, save the apologies for when you're on a phone call, or face-to-face with her.

You can then first use some humor to break the ice and make her laugh and smile and then, when you apologize to her (in a sincere, yet emotionally strong way), she will be happy and open to hear it.

She can then stop focusing on the stupid mistake and begin to see the humor of the situation.

As a result, she stops being so defensive and closed off and she becomes more open to working things out.

Another mistake is!

3. Taking all the blame yourself or blaming it all on her

It might be tempting to say something like, â€œOkay, it's all my fault! I'll take all the blame. I stuffed up and I hurt you in the process. Can we just let it go and try to work things out?â€ or â€œHey, you're the one who messed things up, not me. However, I'm willing to forgive you, so that we can work things out,â€ yet, that's not the way to get her back. Why?

If you take all the blame, she will feel like she has power over you.

Then, if you get back together again and you have an argument or disagreement sometime in the future, she will likely throw it in your face and say something like, â€œThere you go again! You just can't stop doing stupid things,â€ because she doesn't respect you anymore.

On the other hand, if you blame her, she will likely resent you and she won't want to give you the satisfaction of getting her back after you accused her of stuffing up.

Either way, playing the blame game is not the best way to go about getting an ex back.

Besides, who is at fault isn't important.

You broke up over something silly or stupid and that's all.

It's no big deal.

So, just focus on that and have a laugh with her about it.

Then, get her back.

Another mistake is

4. Apologizing over and over in person and ending up giving her way too much power

When a guy does something stupid and causes his woman to break up with him, it's only natural that he will want to apologize to her and get her to forgive him as quickly as possible.

Yet, if he goes overboard with the apologies to the point where he seems to be groveling, rather than forgive him, his ex starts to feel like she has power over him.

She then feels turned off by the new relationship dynamic (e.g. like a boss and her employee, a mother and her child, a teacher and her student).

As a result, she can't respect him and because of that, she doesn't want to work things out after all.

So, don't hand your power over to your ex.

By all means apologize to her, but once is enough.

Then just focus on rebuilding her feelings of trust, respect and attraction for you, so that she wants to forgive you.

So, get started right away with the ex back process and don't let something stupid cost you the love of your life.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex Girlfriend Keeps Blocking and Unblocking Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why:

1. When she unblocks you, she gets annoyed that you're texting her too much

Sometimes, if a woman has cut off all communication with her ex (e.g. she's blocked his number so he can't call or text her, she's unfriended him on social media), she might feel a little guilty about it.

She may then start thinking something along the lines of, "Maybe I've been too hard on my ex. After all, we did care for each other once, so maybe cutting him entirely out of my life like that isn't really fair to him. Besides, if I'm honest with myself, I have to admit that he's not all bad and that he's quite a nice guy in many ways. I suppose I can unblock him and interact with him again from time to time."

She then goes ahead and unblocks his number, only for him to start texting her all the time and about nothing in particular.

What he doesn't realize, however, is that texts can be annoying when the person who is sending you texts isn't someone that you have feelings of respect, attraction or love for.

So, if your ex girlfriend keeps blocking and unblocking you, make sure that it's not because you're annoying her by over texting.

Remember: Your intentions might be good, but it just won't matter to your ex girlfriend if she's no longer feeling respect, attraction and love for you.

So, what should you do instead, the next time your ex girlfriend unblocks you?

You should only use text if it's absolutely necessary and only as a stepping stone to getting her on a phone call with you, so you can then re-attract her and get her to meet up with you in person.

On a phone call, it's so much easier for her to see that you've changed and improved since the break up.

As she listens to the confidence in your voice and smiles and laughs and feels good to be talking to you again, she naturally starts to feel attracted to you again.

Some of her walls start coming down and then, when you suggest a meet up, rather than make excuses as to why she doesn't want to see you again, she instead feels curious about the new you.

As a result, she drops her defenses and says, "Yes" to seeing you in person again and seeing where things go from there.

Another common reason why your ex girlfriend keeps blocking and unblocking you is

2. She just unblocks you to check that you're still missing her and wanting her, so she can move on with that peace of mind

In some instances, a woman might hate the idea of her ex moving on before her.

So, even though she's blocked his number on her phone, she may occasionally unblock him to see what he's up to and if he's moving on without her.

She might then text him and say something along the lines of, â€œHey, I was thinking about you. How have you been?â€

If he then responds with something like, â€œHey! Iâ€™m so glad youâ€™ve unblocked me. Iâ€™ve been thinking about you too! I really miss you,â€ she will know that he hasnâ€™t been moving on and that heâ€™s probably been feeling sad and lonely and struggling to get over her and she will feel better about herself.

She will then block him again and focus on moving on and finding herself a replacement guy, without having to worry about him moving on first.

Another common reason why your ex girlfriend keeps blocking and unblocking you isâ€

3. She has mixed feelings about you and isn't sure if she should get back with you

Sometimes, a woman might struggle to make her mind up about being broken up.

For example: Some days she might be thinking about her ex and remember all the good things about him (e.g. he was honest and reliable, he treated her well, he made her feel loved and appreciated).

She may then say to herself, â€œHe wasnâ€™t that bad. In fact, he was really good to me. I think I may have made a mistake by breaking up with him. Maybe I should give him another chance.â€

When she is thinking that way, she decides to unblock him to see what happens.

Of course, on other days she might only be thinking about all the things about him that turned her off (e.g. he was too smothering and needy, he lacked confidence in himself around her and others, he didnâ€™t know how to keep creating a relationship dynamic between them that would make her want to treat him well, be attentive, loving and affectionate towards him).

This causes her to think things like, â€œWhat was I thinking! Why did I ever unblock him? Heâ€™s all wrong for me.â€

She then blocks his number again.

Naturally, this might leave a guy feeling confused and asking â€œWhy does my ex girlfriend keep blocking and unblocking me?â€

In many cases, the answer to that question is: Sheâ€™s not 100% sure if she should move on and find another guy, or if she should give him one more chance.

As a result, she keeps blocking and unblocking him in the hope that he will do something definitive to help her decide which way to go (e.g. he either behaves so badly that she loses so much respect for him that she never wants to talk to him again, or he re-attracts her in the ways that she wants so she gives him another chance).

Another common reason why your ex girlfriend keeps blocking and unblocking you isâ€

4. She keeps hoping that you will have changed, but you haven't

A woman will sometimes break up with a guy because certain aspects of his thinking and behavior are turning her off (e.g. how he sees her as the leader of the relationship and is hoping for her to guide and support him through life, how heâ€™s unable to pass her simple confidence tests, how heâ€™s unsure of himself around her and other people).

She will then take steps to fully cut him out of her life so she can get over him and move on.

As a result, she blocks him, only to realize that she still misses him so she unblocks him.

If he then contacts her and turns her off by behaving in unattractive ways (e.g. he's too nervous and insecure around her, gives her too much power over him, is too nice and neutral with her), she then changes her mind again and starts thinking things like, "This was a mistake! I should have trusted my instincts to break up with him. Clearly he's not the right guy for me after all."

She then blocks him again, only to start missing him again over and over.

Essentially, she's waiting for him to do something that will break this loop, re-attract her and get her back.

Another common reason why your ex girlfriend keeps blocking and unblocking you is!

5. She's testing to see how you will react

Sometimes a woman might feel unsure about whether she made the right decision to break up with her guy or not.

So, to put her mind to rest, she might decide to test her guy to establish once and for all if he's the right guy for her.

Essentially, she wants to see how emotionally strong he really is, based on his reactions when she messes with him by constantly blocking and unblocking him.

For example:

- Is he going to get upset and start doubting his chances with her?
- Will he get annoyed with her and lose control of his emotions (e.g. he gets angry, shouts at her, calls her names)?
- Will he just give up and walk away?
- Will he beg and plead with her to stop messing with his feelings?
- Will he try to be extra nice to her so that she will stop doing what she's doing?

If he reacts in any of those ways, he will fail her test and prove to her that he's not really the man she wants to be in a relationship with.

So, here's the thing!

If your ex girlfriend keeps blocking and unblocking you, the best way to handle that is by maintaining your confidence and not letting it get to you.

Just get on with your life and focus on pursuing your own goals and interests and having fun with or without her.

Let her see (she will probably check up on you on social media), that her actions are not eating away at your confidence and that you're perfectly fine, no matter what she does.

When she realizes that you're emotionally strong regardless of what she does, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect for you as a man.

When she feels respect for you, she will then start to feel attracted again.

When that happens, she stops messing you around by blocking and unblocking you and she becomes open to talking to you on the phone, meeting up with you in person and letting things unfold from there.

Where Guys Go Wrong With an Ex Who Keeps Blocking and Unblocking Them

It's only natural that a guy will feel confused and even a little bit hurt by his ex's erratic behavior.

Yet, when he realizes that his reactions are what will either convince her to unblock him for good, or block him permanently and move on, he will make sure not to do things that might turn her off.

For example: Some of the common mistakes that guys make are:

1. Sulking or seeking pity for what she is putting him through by blocking and unblocking him all the time

Sometimes a guy might try to make his ex girlfriend feel sorry for him and feel guilty about the pain he is experiencing, by sulking with her and saying things like, "How can you do this to me? I know I stuffed up, but after everything we had together, I don't deserve this kind of treatment from you. Why are you messing me around? Do you enjoy torturing me like that? I really thought you were a better person than this."

Yet, rather than make a woman think, "Damn, he has a point. I really am treating him badly. He doesn't deserve that," she instead feels turned off by his emotional weakness and inability to handle her feminine nature (i.e. that side of a woman that will test a man's confidence by blocking and unblocking him to see how he will react).

As a result, she will lose even more respect for him.

So, if you really want to get your ex girlfriend back, don't bother sulking and trying to make her feel pity for you.

Instead, focus on reawakening her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, so she naturally decides to unblock you and open herself up to interacting with you, so that you and her can get back together again.

Another mistake that other guys make when in your situation is:

2. Asking her to make a decision and stop messing him around, when she's not even re-attracted yet

As tempting as it might be to say, "Hey, you need to stop messing me around. If you want to block me, do it and if you want to unblock me, do that, but you can't keep changing your mind and expecting it to be okay with me," it's not going to fly with your ex if you haven't re-attracted her first.

Instead, it might simply backfire on you when she decided to block you permanently, which will make it more difficult for you to interact with her and get her back.

So, don't bother asking her to decide what she wants.

Instead, use every interaction you have with her (i.e. when she's unblocked you), to spark her feelings for you.

The more attracted you make her feel, the longer she will keep you unblocked, until she stops altogether because she no longer wants to be out of touch with you.

However, if you don't make her feel attracted first, the opposite will happen.

She will block you and refuse to talk to you again, making it so much more difficult for you to interact with her and get her back.

Another mistake that other guys make when in your situation is

3. Being too nice or neutral when texting her and hoping that sparks will fly

Sometimes, when a woman is in one of her unblocking phases, rather than use it to re-attract her, a guy makes the mistake of texting her and being neutral or friendly with her (e.g. he texts things like, Hi, how are you? or It's been a while! What's happening with you?).

The woman then sees this and likely thinks something along the lines of, Boring! He hasn't heard from me in ages and this is the best he can do. I guess I was right in blocking him after all. This pointless chit chat is just a waste of my time, and she then blocks him once again.

So, if you want to break the cycle of blocking and unblocking, rather than text your ex girlfriend and turn her off by being too neutral, just get her on a call instead where you can start re-sparking her feelings for you so that she then wants to meet up with you in person.

Another mistake that other guys make when in your situation is

4. Giving her too much power during interactions

A guy sometimes doesn't know how to behave with an ex who is blowing hot and cold, so he decides to just let her call the shots, in the hope that that will make her happy and then she will stop her bad behavior and open back up to him.

Yet, rather than make a woman think, This is cool. I love the way he lets me be in control. It's what I always wanted. Now I can give him another chance with me, she instead loses even more respect for him for not having enough balls to stand up to her.

She might then treat him even worse (e.g. by being bitchy to him during interactions, blaming him for everything that happened between them), to see how he responds.

If he just takes it, she may then decide to block him for good.

So, if you don't want that to happen to you, make sure you don't give your ex girlfriend too much power during interactions.

That doesn't mean you should be a bully to her, but you do need to stand your ground with her in an assertive, yet loving way.

So, don't let your ex girlfriend call the shots when it comes to interactions and don't wait for her to make it easy for you to get her back.

Instead, just take the lead, re-attract her and get her back into a relationship with you.

You're the man and you are in control.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Asked For a Rain Check After Canceling Our Meet Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 common reasons why a woman will do that:

1. She's worried that you will be trying to get her to commit to a relationship if she meets up with you

If a guy interacts with his ex after the break up and makes her feel some sparks of respect and sexual attraction for him, she might then agree to meet up with him in person.

However, after she says â€œYes,â€ all her doubts begin creeping in and she may then start thinking things like, â€œI don't know what made me say yes to him, but I think it was a mistake. I know he still cares for me and if I do meet up with him, he's more than likely going to push me into giving him another chance. However, I just don't feel ready to be in a relationship with him yet. Maybe it's better if I don't see him in person right now and avoid finding myself in a situation that I don't really want to be in.â€

As a result, she cancels on him and says, â€œCan I have a rain check on the meet up?â€ as a way of stalling for time, as a well as letting him down easy.

Here's the thing though!

It's up to you to take the pressure off your ex, by not making the meet up sound too serious, or making her feel like you're going to try and talk her into getting back together again.

How can you do that?

Start by calling her on the phone again and sparking some more of her feelings for you.

Use humor to make her feel relaxed to be talking to you and get the laughter flowing between you and her.

You can then say (in a joking way) something along the lines of, â€œOkay, you owe me a rain check and it's time to pay up. I'm free on Wednesday or Thursday this week, so pick which day suits you best.â€

If she tries to get out of it again by giving you an excuse like, â€œNo, I can't make it,â€ or â€œI'm busy on those days,â€ make sure you don't become despondent and give up.

Instead, maintain your confidence, smile, laughing and say, â€œOh, come on...why are you making such a big deal out of meeting up for some coffee? You're not thinking I want to meet up with you as an excuse to get you back, are you? Besides, it's not like that between us anymore. We're just friends now and that's cool with me.â€

Of course she then has to say, â€œNo, that's not what I'm thinking,â€ even if she is, because she won't want you to assume she wants you back.

She will then most likely also agree to meet up with you again and also show up this time (to prove that she's not worried that you want a relationship again).

At the meet up, you need to focus on having fun together (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be seeing you in person again), rather than being too serious and making her put up her guard even more.

Just continue building her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

She then naturally relaxes and opens up to the idea of getting back together again, without you needing to force her into it.

However, if you put too much pressure on her to commit to a relationship before she feels ready, she will likely clam up and refuse to see you again in person for a while, making it so much harder for you to get her back.

Another possible reason why a woman will ask for a rain check after canceling a meet up isâ□|

2. She's stalling for time while she tries to move on without you

Sometimes a woman will agree to meet up with an ex, because she doesnâ□t know how to say â□Noâ□ to him in a way that will convince him that sheâ□s not open to seeing him again (i.e. because she doesnâ□t have feelings for him anymore and he hasnâ□t done anything to spark her feelings).

Instead sheâ□ll make plans with him to meet up, only to cancel on him at the last minute as a way of stalling for time.

She will then focus all her efforts on finding a replacement guy (e.g. by accepting dates with guys she knows are interested in her, going out to clubs or bars with her single friends).

Then, the next time her ex calls her on the phone to ask her to meet up again, she can say, â□I know I said Iâ□d take a rain check, but Iâ□ve actually met someone else now. Iâ□m really sorry, but it just happened. So, I think itâ□s better if we forget about seeing each other now and just move on.â□

The best way to prevent something like that from happening to you, is by making sure that you interact with your ex again right away (preferably on a phone call) and focus on sparking some of her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, so that she wants to meet up with you.

Then when you meet up with her, make sure that youâ□re ready to fully re-attract her (e.g. by being confident around her rather than nervous and self-doubting, using humor to break down her defenses, showing her that youâ□re at a different level now than you were when you and her broke up).

Note: Only go to the meet up when you are ready (e.g. youâ□re more confident and self-assured, youâ□re more emotionally masculine).

If you get her there before youâ□re prepared, you will simply turn her off by your nervousness or self-doubt and she will then focus even more on moving on without you.

Another possible reason why a woman will ask for a rain check after canceling a meet up isâ□|

3. She honestly just didn't have the time or energy to meet up at that time

Meeting up with an ex can be very emotional for a woman (i.e. because sheâ□s still dealing with feelings such as anger, disappointment and regret).

So, even though she might initially agree to meet up with her ex, when the time comes, she may start thinking things like, â□Even though I said yes to seeing him in person, the truth is, I just donâ□t have the energy to deal with it right now. Iâ□m already stressed out by work/my studies and seeing him will only add to that and turn me into a wreck.â□

Then, rather than deal with her feelings, she simply cancels on him and buys herself some time by asking for a rain check.

Alternatively, itâs also possible that something important may have come up (e.g. at work/university/with her family) and she really had to cancel, but she sincerely meant it when she said she will take a rain check.

Either way, itâs up to you to call her back and make her feel relaxed and happy to be hearing from you, rather than tense and on guard because sheâs worried about what you will say about her canceling on you.

Focus on making her laugh and smile so that she starts to think, âI regret not meeting up with him before. I hope heâs going to ask me again.â

Then, when she seems at ease and like sheâs enjoying herself, you can say something along the lines of, âBy the way, I bought you a gift.â

She will then likely ask, âWhat is it?â and you can say, âA big, red umbrella for those rainy days when you want to cancel on me again.â

At this point she is probably going to be smiling and thinking about you in a positive way because youâre not making a big deal about her asking for a rain check and are instead making a joke about it.

As a result, she will likely be more open to rescheduling and keeping the appointment with you this time.

Another possible reason why a woman will ask for a rain check after canceling a meet up isâ!

4. She doesn't believe that you've changed, so she isn't sure if she should be spending any time with you yet

Sometimes, after breaking up, a woman can still have some feelings for her ex so when he asks her to meet up, she instinctively says, âYes.â

However, her gut instinct is telling her that he probably hasn't changed and become the guy she needs him to be (i.e. because sheâs given him plenty of chances in the past to improve and he always reverts back to thinking, behaving and acting in his old, unattractive ways).

As a result, she starts to regret her decision to meet up with him.

She's worried that she will meet up with him and be drawn back into a relationship, even though it's not going to be any different.

So, rather than risk getting invested emotionally and being hurt again, she decides to chicken out at the last minute to protect herself.

The good news is that thereâs a good chance that your ex still has feelings for you.

Itâs just that at the moment, she can't trust that you will actually change and become the man she needs you to be.

So, if you want her back, you need to show her that you have already started to change and improve the things that matter to her.

For example: You can show her that youâre more confident now by not feeling insecure and doubting your chances of getting her back, just because she cancelled on you.

You can also show her that you're more emotionally masculine by taking the lead and arranging another meet up, rather than waiting for her to let you know she's ready to cash in that rain check.

Remember: Actions speak louder than words.

When she can see for herself that you've already made positive changes to yourself, she will feel a lot more open to meeting up with you for real this time.

Another possible reason why a woman will ask for a rain check after canceling a meet up is

5. She wants to see how you will react

After a break up, a woman will often test her ex's confidence before she lets down her guard and opens herself up to giving him another chance.

So, rather than make it easy for him to get her back right away, she might give him a bit of hope first (i.e. by agreeing to meet up with him) and then pull back to see how he will react.

For example:

- Will he give up on getting her back at the first sign of resistance from her, or will he persevere until he gets what he wants?
- Will he maintain his confidence when she cancels on him, or will he start to doubt his attractiveness to her?
- Will he take the lead like a real man and call her again to arrange another meet up, or will he wait for her to make the next move?

Depending on his reaction, she will either feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him for passing her confidence test, or she will see his true colors (i.e. that he's an insecure, self-doubting man) and she will then stick to her decision to stay broken up.

This is why, if you want your ex back, you need to remain confident no matter what she says and does to shake you up.

When she can see for herself that canceling on you had no effect on you whatsoever and that you're still confident and sure of yourself, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you.

Then getting that meet up and re-attracting her will happen easily, because she will want it for her own reasons.

Where Guys Go Wrong When a Woman Asks For a Rain Check After Canceling a Meet Up

Just because your ex canceled on you, it's no reason for you to make a big deal out of it.

In fact, if you handle it correctly, it can actually play into your hands where you can use it to make her feel even more attracted to you.

However, if you let it get to you, you might make mistakes that will turn her off.

For example: Where some guys go wrong when an ex cancels a meet up is by

1. Assuming that she is rejecting him

Some guys will always take a situation and assume the worst (i.e. that their ex is rejecting them for canceling their meet up).

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

There are some things in life that you have no control over (e.g. the weather, the outcome of a sports game, your ex canceling your meet up).

However, there are some things that you do have control over and the biggest of those are your thoughts.

Only you can decide what to think.

So, you can choose to think positive thoughts like, âShe asked for a rain check so that must mean she really wants to see me, just not at this time,â or you can choose to think negative thoughts like, âShe canceled our meet up so it must mean she not really keen to see me. Sheâs probably over me and she doesnât know how to tell me that sheâs not interested in seeing me ever again.â

Naturally, whatever you decide to think will have a certain outcome (i.e. you get her back vs. she moves on and meets another guy).

Thatâs why, if you want to get your ex back, make sure you only think positive thoughts.

If you donât you might talk yourself into giving up on her and end up regretting it for the rest of your life.

Another way that guys go wrong in a situation like this isâ!

2. Being too flexible and coming across as desperate, or not being flexible at all and coming across as bitter

Either reaction will turn a woman off and make her resistant to actually giving the guy a rain check.

In the first instance, when a guy is being too flexible, rather than think, âHeâs so sweet. I canât believe how understanding heâs being,â a woman will likely begin thinking things like, âItâs like heâs got nothing else going on in his life other than waiting for me to agree to see him. Thatâs just so sad.â

She then feels turned off by his neediness and desperation and then the idea of going through with the meet up doesnât appeal to her anymore.

In the second instance, if the guy gets stubborn and says things like, âWell, if you donât want to meet with me just say so. You donât have to make excuses. Iâm a big boy. I can take it,â a woman might think to herself, âWhy is he behaving like this? Heâs being so defensive and bitter. This isnât the behavior of a guy who is emotionally strong and mature. Maybe I shouldnât meet up with him after all. I just donât think heâs really changed.â

She then clams up and tries to avoid interacting with him so that she wonât have to agree to meet up with him again.

Another way that guys go wrong in a situation like this isâ!

3. Leaving it up to her to arrange the next meet up

When a woman asks for a rain check after canceling a meet up with her ex, he might start thinking things like, “I don’t want to seem pushy or desperate, so I’m just going to wait for her to come back to me with a suitable date to reschedule.”

Yet, most women won’t make the next move, because they fear being rejected if their ex has lost interest and says, “Sorry, but you had your chance. I’m not interested in seeing you anymore.”

Then she is the one who is hurting.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don’t let insecurity and doubt stop you from making it happen.

If she said “Yes” to meeting up once before, she will do it again.

Just make sure that when you call her to make the arrangements you spark her feelings of attraction for you (e.g. by using ballsy humor, flirting with her, making her smile and laugh and feel good to be talking to you).

Then, not only will she say “Yes” again, this time she’ll be there too, because she will want to experience the new you face-to-face.

So, what are you waiting for?

Call her now and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Make Her Regret Ignoring You After a Break Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 things you can do to make her feel that way:

1. Post up photos on social media of you having fun with other people

The first step to making your ex regret ignoring you after your break up, is by showing her that youâre not sitting around feeling heartbroken and depressed without her and one of the best way to do that is by using social media to your advantage.

BTW: If she has unfriended you, simply set your photos to public so she can see them from the outside.

The truth is, pretty much every woman will check on her ex from time to time by looking at his social media profiles to see what heâs up to.

This might happen if sheâs having a boring day, or sheâs feeling depressed and wants to see if her ex is still missing her.

This is why itâs important that you portray the right type of image to her.

For example: You can do that by posting photos of yourselfâ

- Having fun with new friends and/or new women.
- Achieving something big (e.g. winning a prize or competition, taking your first solo skydive, starting your own business).
- Exploring exotic places that youâve traveled to since the break up with her.
- Participating in fun group events (e.g. at a fundraiser, a festival).

The more she can see for herself that you are confident, happy and getting on with your life without her, the more annoyed she will feel at herself for cutting you out of her life after the break up.

Why?

When a guy is not moving on after a break up and is just sitting around feeling sorry for himself because his ex is ignoring him, it signals to her that he is desperate for her attention, lacks confidence in his attractiveness to her and probably doesnât believe that he can attract other high quality women.

Those are qualities that turn women off.

On the other hand, when a guy is happy and moving forward in his life, regardless of whether his ex is ignoring him or not, itâs a sign that he is emotionally strong and confident in his value and attractiveness to her (and other women).

Those are qualities that make women feel attracted.

So, when youâre genuinely happy and getting on with your life without your ex, something interesting happensâ

Suddenly, you seem more attractive to her and she begins to want you back in her life.

Rather than being happy with her decision to cut you out of her life, she starts to feel unsure of herself.

All of a sudden, she regrets ignoring you after the break up and she starts to worry that you might actually be the right guy for her and she will never know that if she moves on, or if you move on and forget about her.

Another thing you can do to make her regret ignoring you after the break up isâ€¦!

2. Call her, make her feel attracted to you over the phone and end the conversation

One of the best ways to make a woman feel attracted is by talking to her over the phone and making her feel surges of respect and sexual attraction for you again.

For example: Imagine youâ€™re calling your ex for the first time since the break up.

Chances are, sheâ€™s not going to be very friendly towards you and she may even say something along the lines of, â€œWhat do you want?â€ or â€œWhy are you calling me? I have nothing to say to you.â€

To regain some of her respect for you, you need to show her that youâ€™re not intimidated by her, no matter how cold or bitchy sheâ€™s being.

So rather than become nervous and insecure (which she will pick up in your voice), you instead maintain your confidence with her and say (in a joking way) something like, â€œWellâ€¦ I was hoping you could give me your recipe for macaroni and cheese (or whatever dish your ex enjoyed cooking). Iâ€™ve been trying to make it since you left and I never seem to get it burned exactly the way you did. So I was hoping you could tell me your secret.â€

If sheâ€™s was a bad cook, she will probably feel a bit embarrassed and laugh with you for teasing her like that.

She will also feel attracted to you for having the balls to joke with her, even though sheâ€™s being so closed off and bitchy towards you.

On the other hand, if she was a good cook, she might respond with something like, â€œI never burned anything. How dare you say that?â€ and you can then laugh (important, so she knows that you're only joking!) and say, â€œYeah, right! Thatâ€™s what you thinkâ€¦ but itâ€™s okay. I liked it like that. This is why Iâ€™m asking for your secret recipe.â€

At this point she will likely be laughing (or at least smiling) and she won't be able to stop herself from wondering things like, â€œHeâ€™s seems so different from the guy I broke up with. Heâ€™s so confident and self-assured now, even though Iâ€™m not making it easy for him to talk to me. Heâ€™s actually making me laugh. I wonder what else has changed about him?â€

She then naturally drops her guard and opens up to talking to you over the phone.

All you have to do then is continue to build up her feelings for you even more (i.e. by staying confident, using humor to relax her and flirting with her to create sexual tension).

Then, when she seems relaxed and enjoying talking to you, you can say something along the lines of, â€œWell, anywayâ€¦ itâ€™s been fun talking to you again, but Iâ€™ve got to go now. I have a (cooking/martial arts/dancing) class in half an hour and I donâ€™t want to be late. Thanks for the chat. I might call you again sometime. Bye,â€ and then hang up the call after she responds (e.g. she says something like â€œOkay, bye,â€).

Not only will that make her feel surges of respect and attraction for you again, but it will also ensure that she starts feeling regret for ignoring you after the break up.

She becomes curious about the man youâ€™ve become.

As a result, she begins wanting to talk to you again and to meet up with you in person to see for herself whatâ€™s going on with you.

Another thing you can do to make her regret ignoring you after the break up isâ€¦!

3. Meet up with her, make her feel attracted, but don't ask to get another chance

If you successfully spark your exâ€™s feelings for you on a phone call, then she will most likely say â€œYes,â€ if you call her again in a few days time and ask her to meet up with you (even if itâ€™s only to satisfy her curiosity about you).

The important thing is that when you meet up with her, you make sure that you continue to activate her feelings of respect and attraction for you and make her feel good to be around you again, so that she starts thinking things like, â€œI can't believe it, but I'm actually enjoying myself. I wonder if he's going to ask me to get back together again? I think that if he does, I might actually say yes.â€

So, how can you do that?

- By using humor to make the interaction with you relaxing and fun.
- By maintaining your confidence with her no matter what she says or does to put you off (e.g. she goes from hot to cold, she talks about how much better her life is without you in it, she mentions other guys are interested in her).
- By flirting with her to create sexual tension, rather than pretending to be a neutral friend who doesn't make her feel attracted.
- By showing her via the way you talk, act, think and behave that youâ€™ve changed and improved some of the things that caused her to break up with you (e.g. you no longer give your power over to her, youâ€™re more emotionally independent, you are more directed and determined to succeed in your life).

The more she can see that youâ€™re no longer the same guy she broke up with, the less she will be able to keep herself closed off to you.

Even if she doesn't openly admit it, secretly she will likely be thinking things like, â€œI regret ignoring him after the break up. I now wish I had stayed in contact with him and tried to work things out between us. I wonder if that is still possible? Would he give me another chance?â€

Thatâ€™s what you want.

By the wayâ€¦!

No matter how open she seem to you, don't ask her to get back together again right away.

Instead, simply focus instead on making her feel so much romantic and sexual attraction for you again that she asks, â€œCan we see each other again sometime?â€ because suddenly she can't bear the thought of actually losing you.

Another thing you can do to make her regret ignoring you after the break up isâ€¦!

4. (Optional) Temporarily get yourself a new girlfriend and let her find out about it

This is not something you have to do, but in some cases it helps to make an ex feel jealous and as a result, start regretting ignoring you after the break up.

So, if you want to, you can start dating a new woman and then allow your ex to find out about it (e.g. via social media, through mutual friends).

Note: Just make sure that your new girlfriend is more, or at least equally, attractive as your ex.

In this way, when she finds out about her, she may feel twinges of jealousy.

She might then decide to get you back to make herself feel better.

However, even though you will achieve your goal of making her regret ignoring you after the break up, you need to make sure that if you and her get back together again, you don't start making the same old attraction mistakes you made before.

If you do, she won't stay with you for long and this time, she will regret giving you another chance.

This is why you need to quickly make some real changes, so when you do get her back, you keep her and she doesn't ever want to leave you again.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Make an Ex Regret Ignoring Him After a Break Up

As you can see, making your ex regret ignoring you and want you back isn't as difficult as it may seem initially.

However, there is a wrong way to go about it too and if you do, you may actually make her feel happy with her decision to ignore you instead.

So, if you want to prevent that from happening, make sure you don't make any of these classic mistakes that guys make!

1. Hoping that making her feel regret will be enough to get her back

Here's the thing!

Although some women will feel regret, they may also feel fear about contacting their ex to get him back.

This is why, even if your ex truly regrets ignoring you after the break up, she won't want to get rejected if she reaches out to you.

In her mind she may even be thinking things like, "I really miss him but if I contact him now after I ignored him the way I did, he might try to get revenge on me by laughing in my face and rejecting me. I couldn't handle that."

As a result she does nothing and instead waits to see if you will make a move to get her back.

However, if she doesn't hear from you after a while, she will be forced to move on, even if ideally she would have preferred to work things out with you.

So, if your desire is to get your ex back, don't lose her instead just because you're hoping she will make a move first.

You need to stop waiting and start interacting with her right away so that you can re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

When you do that, her walls will naturally come down and she will be more willing to admit to you that she regrets ignoring you after the break up.

However, if you wait for much longer, the next time you hear from her might be when she's calling to tell you that she's in love with someone else.

Don't let that happen to you.

Another mistake is

2. Not following through on the full ex back process

Many guys don't realize that to get an ex back, a guy needs to thoroughly reawaken her feelings for him before she will be willing to give him another chance.

So, once a guy gets back in contact with his ex after she ignored him, he needs to keep the ball rolling until he gets her back.

Where a lot of guys go wrong, is by getting stuck in one place during the ex back process.

For example: Some guys will stick to texting an ex without ever getting to a phone call with her.

As a result she gets bored or annoyed and either blocks his number, or continues to interact with him, while she secretly focuses on finding herself a new man.

He's then shocked when she tells him, "Please stop texting me. I'm in a new relationship now and my boyfriend doesn't want me talking to you anymore."

In some other instances, a guy might actually call his ex on the phone and spark some of her feelings, but he then doesn't proceed to a meet up where he can fully get her back.

Alternatively, a guy might get to a meet up, but once there, he blows it by being nervous and uncertain of himself, so his ex starts thinking things like, "He sounded so much more confident over the phone, but I guess it was all an act to get me to meet up in person. I see now that he hasn't really changed after all and this was just a big waste of my time."

She then leaves and refuses to give him another chance.

Here's the thing

If you want to get your ex back, you need to make sure that you go through the entire ex back process.

You can't only go through part of the process and expect to get her back.

So, make sure you go through all the ex back steps (i.e. interact with her on a call or in person, show her that you've changed and improved some of the things that matter to her, reactivate her feelings, kiss, have sex and get back together again).

When you do, it results in a relationship that's even better than before.

Another mistake is

3. Not realizing that some women don't care what their ex does, until he has re-attracted her and hooked up with her sexually again in person

Sometimes a guy will try all sorts of things to try and make his ex regret ignoring him after the break up.

For example: He might

- Ignore her back.
- Date other women to make her feel jealous.
- Improve his appearance (e.g. by gaining some muscle, getting a new wardrobe, losing some weight), to show her what she's missing out on.
- Go out and party.

Doing things like that can sometimes work if a woman still has feelings for her ex and secretly wants him back.

However, if she doesn't feel much, or any, respect, attraction and love for him anymore and she really does want to be broken up, then whatever he does now that they're apart isn't going to matter to her.

She simply doesn't care because it's not her business anymore and she'll be too busy moving on.

That is why, if you want to make your ex regret ignoring you after the break up, you stand a better chance of getting her back by interacting with her, re-sparking her feelings for you and hooking up with her sexually.

From there, you just need to continue showing her that you've transformed yourself into the kind of man that she can now look up to, respect and feel attracted to (e.g. confident, emotionally masculine, assertive, emotionally mature).

She will then naturally begin to fall back in love with you and you and her can get back together in a relationship that is so much better than before.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Make My Ex See Me as the Man She Wants

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 things you can do to make that happen:

1. Improve your ability to make her feel attracted during interactions

You may have been able to attract your ex initially, but somewhere along the line, something happened that caused the spark between you and her to die out.

So, if you're serious about making her see you as the man she wants, you need to find out why that happened and then change the way you interact with her, so that you can quickly re-spark her feelings for you.

When she can feel surges of respect, attraction and love for you again, she will naturally start seeing you as being the man that she wants.

However, if you continue to interact with her and turn her off by repeating your old patterns that turned her off before, she's just going to keep pulling away and saying things like, "I'm sorry, but I don't feel the same way about you anymore. You're a nice guy, but you're just not the man for me."

The key to re-sparking your ex's feelings for you is to start giving her the attraction experience she always wanted from you but never got.

For example:

- You're now much more confident, self assured and emotionally mature than before, which means you don't feel the need to get jealous or control her anymore.
- You're more emotionally independent (e.g. you're actively pursuing your goals, spending more time with your friends, spending more time on your own hobbies and interests), which means she no longer feels responsible for shaping you into the man she wants.
- You're no longer influenced by her dominant personality, so she doesn't have to throw tantrums to test if you are man enough for her.
- You're no longer afraid to flirt with her and create sexual tension between you, which means she starts to feel more like your lover than your friend.

When your ex starts to experience those kinds of changes in you, she can't stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good.

She then naturally drops her guard and opens up to the possibility that maybe you are the man she wants after all and she made a mistake by breaking up with you.

On the other hand, if you try to get her back while making the same old attraction mistakes that you made before, she definitely won't start seeing you as being the man she wants.

Another thing you can do to make your ex see you as the man she wants is:

2. Review her clues about what she really wants in a man

Most women give hints and clues to their guy in a relationship, in the hope that he adapts, changes and becomes the kind of man that she wants to stay with.

Unfortunately, in a lot of cases, those hints are usually about what a guy might see as subtle, or even unimportant things, so he just ignores her.

For example: Some of the more subtle things that turn a woman off in a relationship and make her doubt that her man is the one for her areâ€¦!

- How he reacts when she tests his confidence (e.g. he becomes emotionally sensitive, irritated or even angry).
- How confident he is around other people (e.g. he lets others walk all over him and doesnâ€™t speak his mind).
- How much power he gives her if she starts throwing a tantrum (e.g. he gives in to her demands regardless of how unreasonable sheâ€™s being).
- How much time he spends with her compared to following through on his big dreams and goals (e.g. he gives everything up just to be with her).
- How he acts around her friends or family (e.g. he doesnâ€™t put in the effort to get to know them, or to get on with them).

So, even though certain things your ex complained about might have seemed unimportant to you, chances are, those are actually some of the things that influenced her decision to break up with you. This is why, if you want to get her back, you need to look back and uncover all the clues she gave you.

You can then make some adjustments to the way you talk, think, act and behave with her, that will show her youâ€™ve finally understood what she wanted all along.

When she can see for herself that youâ€™ve picked up on the things that really matter to her and have already taken action to improve, she will instantly feel a surge of renewed respect for you.

When she respects you again, she will also be able to feel attracted to you and with those two emotions in place, seeing you as the man she wants becomes plausible to her.

Another thing you can do to make your ex see you as the man she wants isâ€¦!

3. Interact with her and re-attract her

A common mistake that some guys make is avoiding their ex and hoping that at some point she will suddenly realize that heâ€™s the man for her and come running back to him.

Yet, that almost never happens.

If your aim is to get your ex back into a relationship with you, you need to make sure you interact with her every chance you get (e.g. via text, social media and especially over the phone and in person), so that you can re-spark her feelings for you.

If you donâ€™t interact with her, you wonâ€™t be able to get her to truly experience the changes in you, feel attracted to them and then look past your mistakes and want you back.

So, regardless of how unsure you might feel about her potentially not wanting to interact with you right now, itâ€™s very important that you get her on a phone call, or preferably meet up with her in person, where you can start fully re-attracting her.

By the wayâ€¦!

If youâ€™re uncertain about how to do that, you can use the following questions as guidelines.

For example: When youâre interacting with your ex ask yourselfâ

Am I maintaining my confidence around her (attractive to her), or am I being nervous, insecure and self-doubting (unattractive to her)?

Am I making her feel feminine and girly because Iâm being more emotionally masculine than her, or does she feel more like a neutral friend?

Is she relaxed, at ease and laughing and smiling, or is she tense, closed off or desperate to get away from me?

Am I in control of the interaction by being the emotionally dominant one, or is she calling the shots and dominating me?

Am I flirting with her and creating some sexual tension between us, or am I being too nice and on my best behavior which makes her feel neutral feelings towards me?

The more you focus on saying and doing the kind of things that are attractive to her, the more your ex will begin to feel re-attracted to you.

She then naturally opens back up to you and starts seeing you as being the man she wants.

So focus on that.

Another thing you can do to make your ex see you as the man she wants isâ

4. Make her feel like she really wants you back, but don't ask her for another chance

The more you show your ex (via the way you talk, think, act and behave) that youâre a new and improved man (e.g. more confident, emotionally independent, ballsy, sure of your attractiveness to her and other women), the more she will begin to want you back.

She may then start saying things like, âI miss you, â or âWhat we had together was special.

At this point you might feel tempted to say something along the lines of, âI miss you too! Letâs forget about what happened before and start over again. You and I are meant to be together.

Yet, if you push her to get back into a relationship with you before sheâs ready, she may close herself off from you.

The truth is, even if a woman is giving signs that she wants to get back together again, if a guy puts pressure on her to make that decision right away, she will usually start pulling away. Why?

A woman doesn't want to be pressured into giving her ex another chance because he wants it. She wants to give him another chance because she wants it.

She wants to feel that if she doesn't get back with him right away, she might lose him to another woman and end up regretting it for the rest of her life.

Thatâs why itâs better that you only focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again.

When you do that, getting her back and keeping her in a relationship will happen easily and quickly, because she will want that too.

Where a Guy Goes Wrong When Trying to Make an Ex Woman See Him as the Man She Wants

When you behave in ways that are attractive, it's only natural that your ex will begin to doubt her decision to break up with you.

However, if you say and do the kind of things that turn her off, she will simply keep pushing you away and saying things like, "Stop trying to get me back. What we had is over and I am not going to change my mind about it. You're not the man I want and that's final!" Don't let that happen to you.

Make sure that you avoid making any of the following mistakes:

1. Trying to explain to her via e-mail, text or letter that he has changed

Sometimes a guy struggles to express himself verbally, so in order to get his point across he decides to explain to his ex how and why he's changed in a long e-mail, letter or a series of text messages.

Essentially he's hoping that she will think something along the lines of, "Wow! I never realized he's gone to so much trouble to change for me. I am glad he explained everything in this e-mail/letter/text. I can now stop assuming that he's still stuck at the same level he was at when we broke up and give him another chance."

Yet, here's the thing!

If he has turned her off and ruined her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him, she's probably not going to believe him. Why?

When a woman can't see a guy's body language, hear the tonality of his voice, or gauge his actions and behavior in person or over the phone, she only has her past experiences with him to judge him on.

So even though he might have sent her a perfectly crafted e-mail/letter/text message that took him a long time to come up with, to her it's just a bunch of words on a screen.

She can't know for sure that what he's saying is really true.

So, if you want to make your ex see you as the man she wants, it's essential that you talk to her on a phone call or in person, rather than making the mistake of hiding behind e-mails, texts or letters.

Only then can you properly re-attract her by allowing her to experience the new and improved version of you.

Another mistake is

2. Writing to her to tell her how much she means to him

If your ex is currently refusing to listen to anything you have to say to her, writing her a letter to express your feelings for her might seem like a good idea.

Yet, here's the thing!

Although your intentions are good, your ex may not see it that way.

Instead, she might read your letter and only pick things out like, "I still love you," or "I really want us to work things out,â€œ or â€œI feel so lost without you.â€œ

She may then think to herself, â€œEverything in this letter is about what he wants and feels. Not once has he mentioned, or thought about my feelings. Heâ€™s just trying to manipulate me into seeing him as the man I want and give him another chance. Well thatâ€™s not how it works. I donâ€™t care what he wants. For once Iâ€™m going to care only about what I want!â€œ

So, donâ€™t bother writing to tell her how much she means to you.

That will only work if you re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you first.

Then sheâ€™ll be happy to read how much you care for her in a letter or e-mail.

Until you do that, writing to her isnâ€™t the best way to get through to her and make her see you as the man she wants.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€œ|

3. Trying too hard to impress her and coming across as desperate or insecure as a result

Sometimes a guy might try to make his ex woman see him as the man she wants, by overwhelming her with attention and romantic gestures.

Essentially heâ€™s hoping that if she realizes what a catch he is, she will regret breaking up with him.

However, the reality is that a woman wonâ€™t be impressed by a guy who is only saying and doing things because he thinks it will make her feel attracted.

Instead she will perceive him as feeling so unsure of himself and his own self-worth, that he has to present an unrealistic version of himself to make her want him (i.e. by being more generous and romantic than he can afford to be).

She will then feel turned off by his desperation and insecurity and she will want to remain broken up.

So, donâ€™t waste time trying to impress your ex.

Instead, focus on making her feel respect and sexual attraction for who you are as a man now (e.g. more confident, ballsy, emotionally independent, self-assured).

The more she can see that youâ€™re not the same guy she broke up with, the more she will begin seeing you as the man she wants.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€œ|

4. Thinking that she will be impressed if he tells her about personal victories or breakthroughs

For example: A guy might say things like, â€œI got that job I was talking to you about!â€œ or, â€œIâ€™ve been going to the gym lately. Iâ€™m in such better shape now.â€œ

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€œ|

A woman is not going to care what heâ€™s up to if she has disconnected from her feelings for him.

She knows that sheâ€™s not going to be getting back into a relationship with his new job or his gym attendance.

If she gets back with him, sheâ€™ll be getting back with the person he has become.

For example: Sheâs going to be asking herselfâ

- Is he different now, or is he still making the same attraction mistakes he made before (e.g. being to insecure and needy, treating her like a friend rather than lover, submitting to her confident personality)?
- Does he make me feel different now (e.g. more feminine and girly, attracted, respectful), or do I still feel turned off by him?
- Do I see myself being with him for the long haul because heâs the kind of man I can look up, respect and feel proud of, or does he not live up to any of my expectations?

That is what really counts.

So, donât bother putting on an act to make your ex see you as the man she wants.

Instead, just be a better version of yourself (i.e. more confident, charismatic, emotionally masculine, ambitious) and she will instinctively feel drawn to you again.

Then the idea of losing you will seem like the worst thing that could ever happen to her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Has Gone Back to the Guy Who Broke Her Heart

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 common reasons why a woman will do that:

1. She wants to get him back, make him love her and then dump him to break his heart

Sometimes, even though a woman gets into a relationship with another man immediately after a break up, she might still find it difficult to get over the pain her ex caused her.

As a result, she may constantly be thinking things like, “I still feel so much anger and resentment towards my ex for breaking my heart, that it is all I can think about. I realize now that I can’t stay in this relationship with my new guy until I resolve my feelings for my ex and the only way I can think of doing that, is by getting back with him, making him fall in love with me and then dumping him to make him feel as much pain as he caused me.”

She then breaks up with her new guy and gets back into a relationship with her ex.

Naturally this leaves her new guy wondering, “I don’t understand why my girlfriend has gone back to the guy who broke her heart. How can I get her back if she actually prefers the guy who hurt her to me?”

The good news is that regardless of her reasons for breaking up with you (e.g. she wants to get revenge on her ex, she still loves him), her feelings aren’t set in stone, so they can change.

Even if your ex never felt strong attraction or love for you before, it doesn’t mean that you can’t make her feel like that now.

In fact, when you interact with her and reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you, maintaining your confidence with her even though she dumped you for the guy who broke her heart, making her feel like an attractive, desirable woman by being more emotionally masculine than her), she won’t be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

Even though she might desperately want to hurt her ex for breaking her heart, the more you make her feel attracted to you, the more she will begin to think things like, “I know my plan was to get revenge on my ex for what he did to me, but I now realize I’m doing that at the cost of losing a man who may actually be the one for me. Suddenly hurting my ex doesn’t seem so important anymore when the price might be so high. I think I made a big mistake.”

As a result, she starts to feel drawn to you again and opens herself up to getting back together again.

So, don’t let it bother you that your girlfriend has gone back to the guy who broke her heart.

Just interact with her and make her feel surges of sexual and romantic feelings for you, so that she quickly regrets her decision and wants you back.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend has gone back to the guy who broke her heart is

2. He made her feel more attraction than you did because he's not as nice or neutral

In some cases, even though a guy might be a jerk in some ways and ends up breaking his woman's heart, it doesn't necessarily mean he can't make her feel attracted to him again.

So, although a woman might initially get into a relationship with another guy who is the opposite to her ex (e.g. nice and sweet, allows her to make all the decisions in the relationship, predictable and stable) something about the relationship just doesn't feel right to her.

She realizes that her new man doesn't make her feel the kind of respect, attraction and love that her ex did.

Yes, her new man is a good guy, but her ex has the kind of masculine edge or masculine toughness to his personality that she prefers.

She realizes that even though her new guy treats her like a princess, she needs a man with more balls and who knows how to make her feel feminine and girly in contrast to his masculine vibe.

She then goes back to her ex, leaving her new man feeling confused (because she chose the guy who broke her heart over him) and like he can't get her back.

Yet, here's the thing!

Even though right now your girlfriend's ex makes her feel a more compelling type of attraction than you, it doesn't mean that he's perfect for her, or that you can't get her back.

When you make some attractive adjustments to the way you think, act and behave around her (e.g. you stop allowing her to dominate you in the relationship by always giving in to her, even when she's being a brat, by treating her more like a sexy, desirable woman than like a neutral friend), you will be ready to properly re-attract her.

Remember: Right now, she's focusing on the positive things about her ex that make her feel attracted to him (e.g. he is more emotionally dominant than her, he makes her feel feminine and girly by being more emotionally masculine, he is more assertive and confident and doesn't put up with her drama).

However, that doesn't mean that there aren't things about you that are more attractive to her than what her ex can give her (e.g. you're a loving caring guy who doesn't take her for granted, you're more emotionally mature, your intentions with her are good).

This is why if you want her back, you need to start attracting her in all the ways that matter to her (e.g. by being more emotionally masculine while still being a good guy).

The more she sees for herself that, not only are you a great guy in your own unique way, but that you've also changed and improved on some of the things that caused her to feel more attracted to her ex, she won't be able to stop herself from doubting her decision to go back to him.

You can then fully reactivate her feelings for you and easily get her back.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend has gone back to the guy who broke her heart is!

3. She just wants to make herself feel better by knowing that she has the ability to re-attract him

In a lot of cases, when a woman gets broken up with, her confidence and self-esteem can take quite a dent.

She might even start wondering things like, Why didn't he love me? What did I do wrong?

Was it because Iâ€™m not attractive enough?â€

These types of thoughts can make her feel unworthy.

Even if her new man is very loving and constantly reassures her of her attractiveness and value to him, somewhere at the back of her mind she might still be wondering if heâ€™s just saying those things because he wants something from her (e.g. sex, affection).

What a lot of guys donâ€™t understand is that in most cases, women are a lot more insecure than men.

In fact, according to a global study conducted by Dove Cosmetics, 96% of women donâ€™t consider themselves to be beautiful.

So, even though your girlfriend might have seemed really confident and like she had it all together, chances are that deep down she was a lot more insecure, anxious and prone to feelings of depression than you realized.

As a result, she may have decided to prove to herself that she is good enough, by making her ex fall for her again.

This stops her from feeling unworthy and gives her the self esteem boost that she has been craving.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend has gone back to the guy who broke her heart isâ€

4. She can see that he is a changed man, so she wants to give it a try

You might not know this, but the main reason a woman leaves a relationship with a man is because certain aspects of his thinking and behavior has caused her to disconnect from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him (e.g. he takes her for granted, he has a wandering eye, he tries to change her core personality and identity, he lies to her).

However, that doesnâ€™t necessarily mean there arenâ€™t other things about him that she still feels attracted to (e.g. he has a great sense of humor, heâ€™s very manly and makes her feel feminine and girly in his presence, he is great in bed).

Itâ€™s just that the bad tends to outweigh the good, so she chooses to break up rather than continue to try and make things work with him.

So, when a guy gets his ex back even though he broke her heart, itâ€™s usually because he has changed the things about himself that were turning her off and in the process regained her respect and trust.

Of course that doesnâ€™t mean heâ€™s now perfect and he might quickly slip back to his old way of thinking and behaving, now that he has her back.

Thatâ€™s why you canâ€™t give up and say, â€Itâ€™s too late. Heâ€™s got her back now and thereâ€™s nothing I can do.â€

The truth is, thereâ€™s a lot you can do.

You can interact with her and show her that youâ€™re a much better man than her ex (e.g. youâ€™re more confident, you are more ambitious and driven, youâ€™re loving yet masculine).

The more attracted you make her feel, the more confused she will feel about her decision to go back to him.

She will then start to look at you in a positive light and realize that you probably are the right guy for her after all.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend has gone back to the guy who broke her heart isâ€¦!

5. He used the ex back process to get her back and it worked

Although you might not want to think about it, itâ€™s possible that the guy who broke your girlfriendâ€™s heart simply educated himself on how to get her back and then went ahead and did it.

The question you need to ask yourself right now is, â€œWhat am I going to do? Am I going to just let him win or am I going to do whatever it takes to get her back?â€

What approach have you been using so far to get her back?

If youâ€™ve just cut off contact and waited around, then you probably already know that using that approach doesnâ€™t work on most women.

Like most women, she hasnâ€™t come running back simply because her ex cut off contact.

Likewise, if youâ€™ve been begging, pleading or even just sending her long letters, e-mails or text messages telling her how much you still love her, she will perceive you as being desperate and her ex will automatically seem so much more attractive to her than you.

This is especially true if her ex is doing all the right things to charm her (e.g. being confident and emotionally strong, being emotionally masculine, making her feel feminine and girly).

She will naturally be comparing him to you and you will be coming in second best.

However, you can change all that.

When you change the way you interact with your ex and focus on re-sparking her feelings by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

Then you can easily win her back, because no matter how great her ex is now, heâ€™s still the one who broke her heart, not you.

She will remember that and she will realize that she made a mistake by letting you go.

Where Guys Go Wrong With an Ex Who Goes Back to a Guy Who Broke Her Heart

Regardless of why your girlfriend has gone back to the guy who broke her heart, if you want her back, you need to be the one who takes the lead and makes it happen.

However, it wonâ€™t if you approach getting her back with the wrong mindset.

For example: Some common mistakes that guys make in a situation like yours areâ€¦!

1. Assuming that she wants to be treated badly again

Just because a woman decides to go back to a guy who broke her heart, it doesnâ€™t mean she wants to be treated badly.

Instead, it might simply be a matter of him having made her feel so much more attracted than the guy sheâ€™s currently with, that sheâ€™s willing to risk it.

So, rather than think things like, “How can she prefer him to me? She must be a sucker for punishment. Clearly she doesn’t like being treated well and instead wants to be abused and disrespected. She must be crazy!” you need to focus on making your girlfriend see that you’re so much better than her ex.

When you can make her feel attracted in the ways that her ex can (e.g. you’re equally as confident and emotionally strong as him), but also in ways that he can’t (e.g. you’re emotionally mature and have a definite purpose and direction in your life while he’s childish and immature), there will no longer be a reason for her to want to be with him over you.

Then, risking getting hurt by him again just won’t be worth it to her anymore and you can easily get her back.

Another common mistake that guys make in a situation like yours is

2. Thinking that women are crazy to not want a nice guy

Many guys believe that to keep a woman happy in a relationship, they need to be extra nice to her, treat her like a princess and never disagree with her, even when she’s throwing a tantrum or behaving like a brat for no reason.

So, a guy like that will usually feel quite shocked if his woman dumps him and goes back to a guy who didn’t treat her as well as he did.

Yet, what he doesn’t realize is that because her ex doesn’t tolerate her drama and instead puts her back in her place in a loving, but assertive manner, it makes her feel more attracted to him than to Mr. Nice Guy.

Here’s the thing

Women do like nice guys, but only if the nice guy is confident, emotionally masculine and doesn’t give her too much power in the relationship.

However, if he’s a nice guy and she can walk all over him and dominate him with her assertive personality, she will prefer a guy who is a bit more of a challenge over him.

Of course that might not make much sense to a guy who believes that niceness is the key to success with women, but that’s the reality.

Another common mistake that guys make in a situation like yours is

3. Waiting and hoping that she will realize her mistake and come running back to him

Sometimes a guy might think to himself, “Sooner or later she has to realize that going back to that jerk was a mistake and when that moment comes, I will be here waiting for her.”

He then sits around for weeks or even months, doing nothing (i.e. he doesn’t interact with her, doesn’t improve himself to become more attractive to her) and hoping she will eventually come back to him.

Of course, that can work if she still feels attracted to him and gets dumped again by the guy who broke her heart.

Yet, in most cases, a woman will just move on if her ex doesn’t re-attract her and lets her see that coming back to him would feel so much better than before.

So, don't let that happen to you.

If you want your girlfriend back, you need to interact with her every chance you get and make her feel strong surges of sexual and romantic attraction for you again.

The more you spark her feelings for you, the more she will start to see you as the right man for her compared to the guy who broke her heart.

So, get started.

She's waiting for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Is it a Rebound if They Were Friends Before Getting Together?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends.

1. It's a rebound if he's very different to you, but not perfect for her

Essentially, a woman might hook up with a friend after she breaks up with a guy, to try and heal herself by being in a relationship that fills the emotional gaps missing in her relationship with her ex. For example: If her ex was the jealous type and as a result he became clingy and controlling (e.g. he wanted to do everything together, he refused to let her hang out with her friends all that much or at all), she's usually going to feel much happier with a guy she already feels comfortable with and who she knows is going to be less jealous and controlling than her ex.

Makes sense, right?

Yet, that doesn't mean that her friend is going to have other, equally important qualities that she's looking for in a man (e.g. confidence and emotional strength, emotional masculinity, drive and ambition), to be able to maintain her attraction for life.

So, in contrast to how her ex made her feel near the end of the relationship, her old friend currently seems like a much better option.

However, the good news is that it doesn't really matter if he's a rebound or not.

The important thing is that you quickly learn from your past mistakes, so that you can regain her respect, attraction and love for you.

The better you are at making her feel sexual and romantic feelings for you again when you interact with her, the faster she will realize that her friend is not the man she wants and you are.

However!

2. It's not a rebound if she has been attracted to him for a long time and he is a balanced, all round man

If your ex's friend not only fills in the gaps that were missing in her relationship with you, but he also makes her feel attracted in other ways that she wants (i.e. because he's not one extreme or the other), it is possible that he will end up being more than just a rebound guy to her.

For example: He's

- Not too nice, nor too arrogant and heartless when it comes to women.
- Able to make her feel strong surges of sexual attraction for him, even though they are also friends.
- Interested in the same things as her, but still maintains his own independence (i.e. follows through on his own goals and dreams, hangs out with his own friends, has his own hobbies and interests).
- Loving and attentive towards her, but doesn't let her push him around or dominate him emotionally.
- Self-confident and self-believing with or without her in his life.

The more well-rounded he is, the more he will be able to attract her and then keep her in a relationship with him.

This is especially true if she's been attracted to him for a long time, but because she was with you, she tried to convince herself not to think about him in that way.

However, now that you and her are broken up, she may begin seeing him as being the one for her, rather than just a guy she's with to get over you.

This is why, if you want her back, you need to quickly transform yourself into more of the man she always wanted you to be (e.g. more confident, emotionally independent, emotionally masculine, driven and motivated in life).

You don't have to be perfect, only better.

Then you need to actively interact with her (over the phone and even better, in person) and make her feel strong bursts of sexual and romantic feelings for you.

When she feels drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her and also sees that you're a new and improved man, her guard will automatically start to come down a little bit.

If she then also begins to notice things about her friend that weren't visible before they started dating (e.g. he gets jealous and controlling), she will naturally begin to question her feelings for him.

You can then build on her initial uncertainty and show her that you are the right man for her, not the other guy.

On the other hand,

3. It's a rebound if she's just using him to avoid the pain of breaking up with you and being alone for a while

Some women can't cope with the emotions of a break up and don't like the idea of being single for very long.

So, rather than having to deal with the pain, a woman like that might quickly get into a relationship with a friend that she knew before.

Essentially, she's just playing it safe with someone she knows won't break her heart, while she can have the benefits of being in a relationship at the same time.

That is why you can't sit around and do nothing.

Instead, focus on giving her the kind of attraction experience she really wants, to make her start paying attention to you and missing what you and her had.

Don't try to get her back by comparing yourself to her friend and pointing out all his flaws, because she just won't want to listen to you (even if what you're saying is true).

You can't tell her you're the right man for her, you need to show her via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to what she says and does.

At the same time, you also need to attract her in ways that her friend can't (e.g. if he's too serious, you make her laugh, if he doesn't show much interest in her dreams and ambitions, you're more supportive).

The more you highlight her friend's shortcomings by being a better man than him, the more she will begin doubting her decision to break up with you.

She will then start to look at you in a positive light and realize that you probably are the right guy for her after all.

You can then gently guide her back into a relationship.

Common Problems Guys Experience in This Situation

It doesn't matter if your ex is in a rebound relationship with her friend or not.

What matters is that you re-attract her and get her back, which is why you need to avoid making these mistakes:

1. Assuming that the ex back process is different based on the uniqueness of the situation

Yes, your situation is unique.

However, the solution remains the same and it works.

Here's the thing:

Whether an ex woman is dating a random guy, her best friend, or is single at the moment, getting her back requires the same approach.

You need to interact with her and actively make her feel sparks of respect and sexual attraction for you.

When she experiences the new and improved you, she won't be able to stop herself from reconnecting with some of her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again.

So, don't make the mistake of thinking things like, "I might have been able to get my ex back if she was dating some random guy, but she's not. She's dating someone who's been her friend for a long time, so her feelings for him are probably really deep. She may even have secretly been in love with him before she dated me. I just can't compete with that," and do nothing.

Instead take every opportunity to make her feel something for you.

The more attracted to she feels to you, the more she will begin to doubt her feelings for her friend.

Another mistake to avoid is:

2. Staying out of the way and never contacting her in the hope that they break up one day

Sometimes, a guy assumes that if he backs off from his ex (i.e. he doesn't text, call or interact with her in any way), her relationship with her friend may eventually die out.

If that happens, he can then reappear in her life and work on getting her back.

Yet, that's the worst thing you can do.

Firstly, staying completely out of your ex's life is the quickest way to make her forget about you (i.e. out of sight, out of mind).

Secondly, because you're not actively sparking her feelings for you, her friend probably will be, so she may actually fall more in love with him than she would have if you'd been around.

Lastly, there's no guarantee that she will even bother contacting you if she breaks up with her friend.

Instead, she will likely just move on to the next guy who sparks her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction, rather than go back to an ex (i.e. you) that she hasn't had any contact with for weeks or even months.

So, if you really want her back, you need to remain an active part of her life (i.e. by calling her on the phone and meeting up with her in person as often as possible).

Then you need to use those interactions to make her feel surges of respect and attraction for you again.

The more you do that, the greater your chance of getting her back.

However, if you just avoid her and then expect her to come back to you one day if she breaks up with her friend, chances are high that you will lose her for good.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

3. Losing confidence as you wait and imagine her being so much happier with the new guy

Naturally, seeing his ex in a relationship with a guy she knew before getting together with him can really dent a man's confidence and self-esteem.

For example: He might say to himself, â€œShe seems so happy with her new man that I wonder if she really ever loved me, or if all the time we were together she was thinking about him. I don't even know for sure if she didn't just go out with me because she believed she couldn't get him. I guess she now has the man she wanted all along and I don't stand a chance of ever getting her back. It's hopeless.â€

Yet, thinking like that only makes him behave in ways that make him unattractive to women in general and his ex in particular.

For example: His body language takes on a more negative slant (e.g. his shoulders are more stooped, his head is bowed).

When he talks in conversation, he subconsciously puts himself down (e.g. he calls himself a loser, makes jokes about his appearance or that he will never find a woman to love him).

Here's the thingâ€¦

If you lose confidence in your ability to make your ex feel attracted, you will likely push her away even more, because women are turned off by emotional weakness and insecurity.

Then, rather than doubt her decision to break up with you, she will feel relieved that she's no longer with a guy who doesn't believe in himself and in his value to her.

This is why, if you want to make your ex want you more than she wants him, you must believe that you are good enough for her.

If you don't, neither will she and then getting her back will be very difficult for you.

So, don't waste any more time doubting yourself.

By maintaining your confidence and believing in yourself, you can make her want you back.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

4. Thinking that relationships based on a friendship are better

Right now your ex may be dating a guy she used to be friends with, because he was there for her after you and her broke up.

However, just because he might be a really good friend, it doesn't automatically make him a good boyfriend as well.

For example: As her friend, a guy might be relaxed, laid back, open minded and supportive of her. So, if she dresses in sexy, revealing outfits, it doesn't bother him and he will probably encourage her to express herself in whatever way she likes.

However, as her boyfriend, his attitude may drastically change, because he is now invested and he suddenly starts to fear losing her, so he becomes jealous, controlling and clingy.

Also, as a friend, a guy is usually used to treating her as one of the guys.

If he then suddenly becomes her boyfriend, it's a lot more difficult for him to switch from being neutral and friendly to making her feel attracted all the time.

Yet, if he can't grow and maintain her feelings of romantic and sexual attraction and he then falls into the habit of treating her like his friend again because that's what he's used to, she will eventually grow tired of him and start to look for a man who can make her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with him.

So, as you can see, a friendship is not a guarantee that a relationship will be better or stronger.

That's why the only thing you need to focus on if you want to get your ex back, is to actively make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you whenever you interact with her.

The more attracted you make her feel compared to her new guy, the more drawn to you she will be.

That's what counts.

Another mistake to avoid making is

5. Not interrupting the process of her moving on

Sometimes, a guy makes the mistake of thinking that if his ex is in a new relationship, he no longer has a chance of getting her back.

So, rather than stay an active part of her life (e.g. by texting her, calling her on the phone and even meeting up with her as friends), he instead steps back and waits in the hope that his new guy is a rebound.

Yet, here's the thing

If you don't do something to stop your ex from moving on, the relationship with her new guy might become more serious than it would have, if you'd been around.

Alternatively, she might break up with her new guy, but because you haven't been actively sparking her feelings, she may decide to find another guy, rather than give you another chance.

So, if you want your ex back, you have to be active about it, rather than passive.

If you're not texting, e-mailing, private messaging, calling and meeting up with her in person and reactivating her feelings of respect and attraction for you, then she's going to fully move on with her new guy and getting her back will become very difficult.

Don't sit around waiting for her to become available again before you make a move.

Get her back now.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

If She Stays Loyal After the Break Up, She's the One. True or False?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

False.

Sometimes it can mean that she is the one, but sometimes she remains single for other reasons.

If you want her back for real, here's what you need to be aware of:

1. When a woman breaks up with a guy, she usually does it after being turned off for quite a while

In most cases, it's not a snap decision for a woman to end a relationship.

So, even though she might be upset because she originally thought her guy was the one too, she doesn't have strong feelings for him anymore because he turned her off and didn't change.

As a result, she can then move on if she wants to.

Here's the thing!

If you still care for your ex and want her back, don't base your decision on whether she stays loyal to you after the break up.

That doesn't prove anything other than that somewhere along the line you stopped making her feel sexual and romantic feelings for you and she is now looking for a man who can.

Yet, nothing says that man can't be you.

If you interact with her and reawaken the kinds of feelings inside of her that she's longing for (e.g. respect, desire, excitement, love), she will quickly change her mind about you.

Remember: It's not the woman's role to chase a man back who she dumped.

So, if you want her back, you have to be the one who makes it happen.

You need to call her on the phone, or even better, meet up with her in person and spark some of her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be around you again, showing her via your actions and behavior that you're a new and improved man, flirting with her to create some sexual tension).

When she starts feeling new, positive emotions towards you again, she is then naturally more inclined to stay loyal (i.e. because she's open to the idea of getting back together with you).

However, if you just expect her to stay loyal without doing anything to reawaken her lost feelings for you, there will be nothing stopping her from hooking up with the first guy who comes along and makes her feel the way she wants to feel in a relationship with a man.

Another reason why is!

2. If she hooks up with a guy while drunk, she may regret it in the morning and miss you

After a break up, a woman will usually feel pretty depressed, so her natural instinct may be to push those feelings aside, by going out and having a good time with her friends.

Secretly she may be hoping that by distracting herself with music, dancing and alcohol, she will forget about how sad she is feeling.

In some cases, this may lead to a woman drinking too much and ending up in bed with another guy.

Yet, that doesn't mean she's not the one.

Especially if she truly regrets her actions in the morning and wakes up feeling guilty and missing her ex.

The important thing for you to understand is that just because your ex might have made a mistake, it's not a sign that you should give up on her and move on.

Instead, if you want her back, just make it happen.

Call her on the phone or meet up with her in person and make her feel so much respect and attraction for the man you are now, that the idea of being with any guy other than you, will make her feel sick to her stomach.

Another reason why is

3. If you use the No Contact approach and expect her to come back, it just doesn't work on most women, including a woman who is the one for you

Even if a woman still has strong feelings for her ex and is secretly hoping they will get back together again, if he cuts off contact with her for weeks or even months (i.e. because he's hoping to making her come running back to him), she might not stay loyal to him. Why?

When he ignores her, rather than chase after him, she might instead feel hurt by what she perceives as his rejection of her.

She may then begin thinking things like, "I guess I didn't mean that much to him after all if he can cut me out of his life so easily. He didn't even have the decency to call me, or even just text me, to see how I am after the break up. I would be a fool to sit here pining for him seeing as he doesn't even care about me anymore. In fact, based on his current behavior, maybe he never cared for me at all and I was just too in love with him to notice. Well I'm not going to let this break me. I'm going to find myself another guy as soon as possible and move on."

She then starts to actively go out with her single friends to places like bars or clubs where she knows she can meet men who will be willing to hook up with her, so she can feel better about herself.

Alternatively, she begins to accept dates with some of the guys that were interested in her when she was with you that she rejected before.

In some cases, a woman might even get angry with her ex for using the No Contact approach on her (i.e. because women know that this is a common trick that some guys use to get an ex back) and she decides to hook up with another guy to get revenge on him.

So, if you want your ex back, don't ignore her in the hope that she will stay loyal to you and prove that she's the one.

If you do, not only will you likely be disappointed, you also risk the chance of actually losing your ideal woman over a silly expectation.

Another reason why is

4. If she sees you as the one, she might also believe in the cliché of, "If he's the one, he'll try to get me back. If he doesn't, I should just move on."

So, while you might be waiting to see if she will remain loyal to you to decide whether you should get her back, she may be waiting to see if you'll put in the effort to re-attract her.

If you don't, she will then likely think something along the lines of, "I guess I was wrong about him. He's not doing anything to get me back, so I suppose I need to accept that he's not the one and move on."

She will then usually hook up with another guy (even if he's not the perfect match for her), to help her get over you and move on.

Remember: If you want her back, you need to be courageous enough to make it happen.

You don't need her to remain loyal after the break up to prove that to you.

You know it in your heart.

So, stop asking, "If she stays loyal after the break up she's the one. True or False?" and just get her on a call with you right away and start re-attracting her.

Then meet up with her in person and blast open her hidden feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and get her back.

Another reason why is

5. She's not obligated to stay loyal because she's no longer in a committed relationship

Think about this

If you met a sexy, beautiful woman who showed interest in you, would you stay loyal?

You might say "Yes" now, but what if it was you who dumped your ex?

Does that change anything?

Of course it does.

The person who dumps usually has a clear reason why.

In a woman's case, it's because she lost respect, then stopped feeling attracted and then fell out of love with her guy.

In the same way, if you dumped your ex and didn't want to be with her anymore, would you stay loyal because you used to think that she was the one?

Chances are high that you would not.

Instead, you would hook up with the next beautiful woman who came along and made you feel attracted to her.

In the same way, if your ex broke up with you, hooking up with another guy who makes her feel respect and sexual attraction for him won't be that big a deal to her.

In fact, it will likely be something she will welcome, because she will have missed feeling strong sexual and romantic feelings for a guy.

This is why, if you want your ex back, make your decision to get her back based on that, not on her loyalty to you after the break up.

Where Guys Go Wrong When They Believe a Woman is the One

If you waste a lot of time wondering whether or not she is the one, you might actually miss out your chance of getting your ex back.

That's what happens to a lot of guys and they end up regretting it for a very long time, if not for the rest of their lives.

So, don't let that happen to you because you're making the following mistakes!

1. Believing in relationship fantasy ideas that don't apply to real life relationships

It sounds nice to create a fantasy about the one and wish that life worked in that way, but it's not how the real world works.

In fact, the idea of there being one true love for everyone, is something that only exists in romantic movies and romance novels, because it's fun to escape the reality we live in and live in a world where there is one perfect person for everyone.

Yet, that's not how relationships function in the non-fictional world.

Instead, in the real world, if a man can't maintain his woman's feelings of respect, attraction and love for him (e.g. because he becomes too insecure and needy, starts taking her for granted, treats her more like a neutral friend than an attractive woman, gives her too much power over him), she will usually break up with him, even if she once said things like, "I love you so much! I think you're the one."

Here's the thing!

A relationship stays together when both people decide that they want to stay together because it feels good, not because they used to be in love and believed they were soulmates (or the one).

So, rather than trying to prove to yourself that your ex is the one because she stays loyal after the break up, you need to instead make her reconnect with her old feelings of respect and attraction for the new and improved version of you.

The more respect and attraction she starts to feel for you again, the more her feelings will begin to change.

She starts to see you in a new light and suddenly, she becomes open to the possibility that maybe you're the one for her after all.

Another mistake to avoid making is!

2. Thinking that all women are alike (i.e. if a woman does this, then it means that)

It would be great if all women thought and behaved in the same way.

Unfortunately they don't.

So, although one woman might break up with a guy and get into a relationship with someone else right away, while another woman stays single for months afterwards, it doesn't necessarily mean either one of them is more likely to be the one.

So, don't give up on your ex based on whether she was loyal to you after the break up or not.

What matters most, is that if you believe she's the one for you, you don't let her go.

You need to interact with her every chance you get and reactivate her feelings of love, respect and attraction for you, so that she begins seeing you as the one for her too.

That's what matters.

Another mistake to avoid making is!

3. Feeling entitled to her loyalty because things used to be good

Sometimes, after a break up with a woman he perceives as being the one a guy might think to himself, I can't even imagine how she could possibly hook up with another guy after what we had together. Our connection was so unique, that I'm pretty sure she will never find that with anyone else.

He's then bitterly disappointed if she quickly hooks up with another man and he then begins to doubt his own judgment (i.e. he wonders if it's possible for her to be the one after all seeing as she didn't stay loyal to him after the break up).

Yet, here's the thing!

If the feelings are not mutual in a romantic relationship, loyalty is lost.

It doesn't mean she is a bad person, or that she didn't love him.

It's just how romantic relationships work.

She has to focus on finding and keeping a man that she can stick with, rather than staying loyal to a guy who isn't yet able to be the man she wants.

So, rather than sit around debating whether it's true or false that she's the one if she stays loyal after the break up and focus instead on making her see you as the one.

How can you do that?

By interacting with her and making her feel such strong surges of sexual and romantic attraction for the man you've become, that she starts to fear losing you.

Then, not only will she start to see you as being the one for her, it will also be easy for her to be loyal to you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

If My Ex Agreed to Meet Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your ex agreed to meet up, would you be ready to get her back?

Here are 5 questions to answer to get clear on whether you are ready and can actually get her back:

1. Do you know exactly what part of the attraction experience was missing?

When a woman breaks up with her guy, itâ€™s usually because certain aspects of his thinking and behavior are causing her to lose respect and attraction for him (e.g. heâ€™s too needy and clingy, she has too much power over him, he takes her for granted).

So, if he wants to get her back, he needs to first show her that heâ€™s changed those things about himself and is now able to make her feel attracted in the ways that she wants.

By the wayâ€¦

That doesnâ€™t mean he needs to become perfect to be able to regain her respect and attraction.

Instead, he just has to show her that heâ€™s putting in the effort to become a better man than before.

For example: If a guy was too emotionally sensitive, got upset about the setbacks in his life and whined about his feelings to his woman, then to earn back her respect, he needs to show her that he is now emotionally stronger and better able to handle his emotions around her (e.g. heâ€™s able to laugh things off rather than getting upset over the tiniest things).

Another example is where a guy stopped making his woman feel feminine and girly in his presence and instead fell into the habit of treating her more like a friend or worse, making her feel like she was the more emotionally dominant one in the relationship.

In a case like that, he needs to show her that heâ€™s now more emotionally masculine in the way he thinks, feels, behaves and interacts with her, thereby allowing her to relax into thinking, feeling and behaving like a girly, feminine woman around him.

This is why itâ€™s very important for you to be ready to give your ex the attraction experience she always wanted from you but never got, if she agrees to meet up with you.

So how can you prepare yourself?

Start by first understanding her core reasons for breaking up with you.

If youâ€™re unsure what those reasons might be, here are some questions to help you find outâ€¦

- Did you stop being the confident guy she fell in love with and instead became insecure and started to doubt your attractiveness to her?
- Were you the one wearing the pants in the relationship, or did she boss you around and get her way even when she didnâ€™t deserve it?
- Did you laugh at her attempts to test you (e.g. by saying mean things to you during conversation, being moody), or did you get upset or angry with her most of the time?
- Did you grow her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you over time, or did you take it for granted that because she loved you at the beginning of the relationship she would continue to feel that way no matter what?
- Did you maintain your independence (e.g. by pursuing your own goals and hobbies, hanging out with your friends), or did you become emotionally dependent on her, which caused you to be needy and clingy?

- Did you get along well with her friends and family, or were you too shy, anti-social or jealous of the other people in her life?
- Did you make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman, or did you treat her more like a friend or a roommate?
- Were you and her on the same level emotionally, or did she mature a lot faster than you?

Once you understand what she really wants you to change about yourself to be able to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, it then becomes easier for you to get her back.

So, focus on that.

Then, when you meet up with her and she sees that you really have changed in the ways that matter to her, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling respect for you again.

When she respects you, she will also feel attracted to you again and from there, reconnecting with her original feelings of love becomes a lot easier than if you try to get her back by being the same guy she broke up with.

The next question to ask isâ€¦!

2. Are you going to feel confident enough to flirt with her like a lover or boyfriend when you talk to her, or are you going to be neutral or reserved around her?

Sometimes a guy doesn't feel confident enough to meet up with his ex and make her feel sparks of romantic and sexual attraction right away.

Instead, he makes all sorts of excuses about why flirting with his ex at a meet up is a bad idea.

For example: A guy like that might think something along the lines of, â€œMy ex agreed to meet me and I can't afford to blow it by doing something that will annoy her and cause her to refuse to see me again. This is why I need to be on my best behavior around her and not say or do anything that she might take in the wrong way. That means no flirting or acting like I want her back. Instead, I need to treat her like a neutral friend and allow for her to warm up to me over time. Then, when she eventually feels relaxed around me and lets down her guard, I can let her know how I truly feel about her and that I want her back.â€

Yet, here's the thingâ€¦!

If you don't actively make your ex feel respect and attraction for you right away, she's usually just going to assume that you're no longer interested in her.

She then opens herself up to meeting new guys, having sex and falling in love again with a guy who isn't afraid to spark her feelings of lust and desire.

Remember: For a woman to want to be in a romantic relationship with a guy she has to feel respect and sexual attraction for him first.

If those feelings aren't there, it's a friendship at best and it won't last.

So, make sure that when you meet up with your ex, you flirt with her and make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

You can do that byâ€¦!

- Maintaining your confidence with her no matter what she says or does (e.g. she is being closed off and distant, she tells you how happy she is now that you and her are no longer together).
- Making her laugh and smile and feel good to be in your company again.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension.
- Being more emotionally dominant than her so she can relax and feel totally feminine in your presence.

The more you spark her feelings for you, the more she will begin thinking things like, “I don’t know why but I feel so good to be around him. I keep thinking about what it would be like if he kissed me. I don’t know what has gotten into me, but all of a sudden I feel more open to the idea of us getting back together, even though I was sure that it was over between us before.”

You can then build on those feelings until you and her are hugging, kissing, having sex and back in a relationship again.

The next question to ask isâ€¦!

3. Have you improved things about you that will impress her?

For your ex to really feel impressed and then want to give you another chance, she needs to see that youâ€¦re not the same man she broke up with.

So, before you meet up with her, make sure that when she sees you again, sheâ€¦s going to get the shock of her life (in a very good way).

For example: Some of the things that will impress a woman about her ex areâ€¦!

- Heâ€¦s less insecure and uncertain of himself now, so he wonâ€¦t feel the need to be clingy with her anymore.
- Heâ€¦s more emotionally independent, therefore he wonâ€¦t need her support and guidance to feel good about himself.
- Heâ€¦s more emotionally strong now, which means that he no longer allows her to dominate him with her confident personality like she used to.
- Heâ€¦s more emotionally masculine now, so heâ€¦s not afraid to flirt with her and make her feel surges of sexual attraction, rather than treating her like a friend.

When your ex can experience those kind of changes in you, even if she initially tries to hide it from you, she wonâ€¦t be able to stop herself from feeling surges of respect and attraction for you again. She then naturally drops her guard and opens up to being with you romantically and sexually.

The next question to ask isâ€¦!

4. Will you be able to maintain your confidence if she doesn’t show much interest initially?

In almost all ex back cases, a woman rarely makes it easy for her guy to get her back.

So, chances are high that when you meet up with your ex, sheâ€¦s going to test your confidence before she opens herself up to giving you another chance.

For example: Some of the ways she might do that is byâ€¦!

- Coming to the meet up and saying something along the lines of, â€œI donâ€™t even know why I agreed to meet you. Thereâ€™s nothing you can say that will change my mind about us being broken up, so make this quick because I really donâ€™t want to be here,â€ to see if youâ€™ll lose your confidence and give up on the idea of getting her back.
- Remaining closed off and unresponsive towards you during conversation to see if you will become insecure and nervous.
- Flirting with other guys in front of you (e.g. a waiter, barista), or talk about other guys who are interested in her (e.g. from work or university) to test if youâ€™ll get jealous, angry or start doubting your attractiveness to her.
- Giving you mixed signals (e.g. she says that sheâ€™s interested in getting back together again and then, when you get excited about that, she pulls back and says sheâ€™s not sure).

Essentially, she wants to see how emotionally strong and confident you really are.

If you can maintain your confidence with her throughout the interaction, regardless of what she does to set you off, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

On the other hand, if you become nervous, insecure and start doubting yourself with her, you will fail her test and she will remain closed off to you until you can prove to her that youâ€™re the (confident) man she wants you to be.

The next question to ask isâ€¦!

5. How do you think she will react if you ask for another chance?

If you meet up with your ex and donâ€™t fully reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you first, then chances are sheâ€™s going to reject the idea of getting back together again.

This is why you need to make sure that youâ€™re fully prepared to re-attract her when you meet up with her.

If you get there and you make rookie mistakes (e.g. giving her too much power over you, being nervous and uncertain of yourself, not using humor to break down her defenses and make her relax and enjoy being with you again), not only will she feel disappointed that she agreed to meet up with you, she will also likely refuse to see you again after that, making it very difficult for you to get her back.

So, make sure that youâ€™re prepared to show her (via your actions, behavior and conversation style) that youâ€™re a new and improved man.

Then just focus on sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you by behaving in some of the ways that are attractive to women (e.g. by making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine vibe, making her smile, laugh and feel happy that she agreed to meet you).

The more you reactivate her dormant feelings for you, the more open she will become to getting back together again.

However, if you try to get her back without first re-sparking her feelings for you, sheâ€™s just going to say, â€œThanks, but Iâ€™m not interested in getting back with you. Itâ€™s over for me and you need to accept that and move on too.â€

Where Guys Go Wrong When Meeting Up With an Ex

If you want your meet up with your ex to go well, it's very important that you prepare yourself beforehand, so that you don't make the kind of blunder that will convince her that she made a mistake when she agreed to meet you (i.e. because you're turning her off with your behavior and conversation style).

This is why you need to make sure you don't!

1. Meet up with your ex and try to make her feel attracted in the same old ways

If you meet up with your ex and end up talking to her and interacting with her in the same old ways (e.g. being nice and sweet towards her rather than being confident and manly, giving her too much power over you rather than taking the lead in the interaction, trying to explain your feelings to her rather than making her have feelings for you), she's just not going to be very interested in getting back together with you.

So, if you want to get her back, you need to re-attract her in new and exiting ways (e.g. by being confident and emotionally strong even when she's being cold and aloof, by standing up to her in a loving way when she's being unreasonable or disrespectful towards you, by being more emotionally masculine and making her feel surges of desire).

Essentially, you need to say and do the types of things that will prove to her that you're no longer the same guy she broke up with.

When that happens, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

She then drops her guard and opens up to the idea of being your girl again.

Another thing you shouldn't do when you meet up with your ex is!

2. Be neutral and act like a friend, but hope that sparks fly

If you pretend that you're not interested in getting back with your ex, she will likely start thinking things like, "I thought this meet up was about him trying to get me back, but I guess I was wrong. He's clearly over me and just wants to be friends from now on."

She then closes herself off to the possibility of getting back with you and opens herself up to meeting new guys, having sex and falling in love again with someone else.

So, if you don't want that to happen, make sure you don't act like a neutral friend around your ex.

You need to flirt with her and re-spark her feelings of romantic and sexual attraction for you.

Only then will she be open to getting back together again.

One more thing you shouldn't do when you meet up with your ex is!

3. Give her too much power at the meet up

Sometimes a guy thinks that for a meet up to go well, he needs to allow his ex to call all the shots (e.g. choose where they meet up, decide the duration of the interaction, do all the talking).

Yet, here's the thing!

If you hand your power over to a woman, she won't be able to respect you anymore.

If she can't respect you, she won't be able to feel sexually attracted to you and without those two things, getting back together again won't even cross her mind.

So, don't let your ex control you during the meet up.

Instead, focus on being the emotionally dominant one.

The more you can maintain your cool with her, the easier it will become to re-spark her feelings for you and seduce her back into a relationship with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why Didn't My Girlfriend Give Me a Proper Reason For Breaking Up With Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The 5 most common reasons why a woman will avoid giving you a proper reason for breaking up with you, are:

1. So she doesn't tell you what you need to change to get her back

A woman doesn't want to be your teacher about how to be a man in a relationship.

She wants you to figure it out on your own, make some changes to yourself, and show her (via your thinking, actions, behavior and conversation style), that you are now the kind of man she wants you to be.

This is why she won't actually tell you why she's breaking up with you.

However, before you ask something like, "How am I supposed to know what to fix if she won't tell me? Why is she being so unreasonable?" you need to first understand how a woman communicates.

Basically, rather than come out and say what is bothering her, a woman will often hint at the problem.

For example: If a woman wants her guy to be more manly and not allow her to dominate him so much, rather than actually say that to him, she might say something like, "I like it when you're in charge. It's very sexy," instead.

Alternatively, if she wants her guy to stop being so clingy and needy all the time, she may say something along the lines of, "Why don't you give your friends a call and arrange to go out with them sometime? I really don't mind if you take some time for yourself and do things independently of me from time to time."

Essentially, she's hoping he will pick up on what she really wants and make the necessary changes that will deepen her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, based on that, even though your girlfriend didn't spell things out for you, she probably did give you several clues along the way.

If you're not sure where to start, here are some questions to ask yourself that might help you get to the bottom of why she broke up with you!

- What are some of the things you and her argued about (you will most-likely find several clues there as to what was making her unhappy)?
- Did you still notice her in the way you used to at the beginning of the relationship (e.g. if she bought a new dress, changed her hairstyle, made herself look pretty for you), or did you take her a little bit for granted?
- Were you still the same confident, emotionally strong man she fell in love with, or did you become a bit insecure and self-doubting in the relationship with her?
- Did you and her still touch, hug, kiss and have sex regularly, or did you end up treating each other more like friends than lovers?
- Were you reaching for your true potential in life (i.e. setting and pursuing goals), or were you just drifting from one thing to the next and wasting time (e.g. playing video games, going from one dead-end job to another).

Chances are, if you dig deep enough, you'll start seeing things that you might have missed before that can lead you to the answers you're looking for.

The good news is that when you understand your girlfriend's reasons for breaking up with you, you can begin to make some attractive changes to yourself.

Then, when she can see for herself that you have figured out what has been turning her off (without her help) and have also taken action to improve those things in yourself, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you as a man.

She then naturally drops her guard around you and becomes open to the idea of getting back with you.

Another common explanation why a woman won't give you a proper reason for breaking up with you is

2. To avoid hurting your feelings if she tells you the real reasons

Sometimes, a woman doesn't want to be a bitch to her guy when she breaks up with him and make him feel even worse.

For example: If one of her reasons for breaking up with a guy is because he has low self-esteem and doesn't believe in himself and in his value to her, rather than say something like, "Your self-doubt and insecurity is unattractive to me. It makes me feel like I'm too good for you and that if I stick around it will only be because I feel sorry for you, not because I love, respect and feel attracted to you for being my ideal man. It just feels wrong to be with a guy I can't look up to and respect, so I'm breaking up with you," she instead gives him a vague reason like, "I just think it's better if we don't see each other anymore," or "Maybe we should just be friends for now."

In her mind she's likely thinking, "I don't want to tell him the truth and end up giving him even more reasons to put himself down and feel unworthy of himself. This way, he'll never know that it was his low self esteem that caused me to fall out of love with him and it will spare his feelings."

Yet, here's the thing

As painful as it might be to know the truth about why your girlfriend broke up with you, if you don't understand her real reasons, you won't be able to re-attract her (i.e. because you will likely be repeating the same mistakes with her that you made during the relationship).

So, don't be afraid to be honest with yourself and admit where you might have gone wrong.

The sooner you know the real reason that your girlfriend broke up with you the faster you will be able to change and improve those things about you and start re-attracting her.

Another common explanation why a woman won't give you a proper reason for breaking up with you is

3. To let you down softly, rather than potentially making you angry at her

Even though most guys are good guys and would never intentionally do anything to hurt their girlfriend, it's a woman's natural instinct to protect herself no matter what.

So rather than get into a big argument with a guy if she tells him she's breaking up with him and why, a woman will usually err on the side of caution by letting him down as easily as possible.

For example: Imagine a woman says something along the lines of, I'm breaking up with you because you're too childish and immature. You have no plan for your life and all you ever do is hang out with your silly, equally childish and immature friends and play video games. I'm sick of waiting for you to man up and take responsibility for yourself and our relationship, so I'm leaving you!

Chances are her guy will get quite upset about it and in some cases, a guy might even become angry and start defending himself and saying things like, How dare you say that to me? You're such a bitch! You're only saying that because I'm not always willing to do what you want. Maybe you're the problem! Maybe it's because you're so selfish and only want things your way!

This may then lead to a big argument and possibly even result in him becoming verbally abusive or even physically aggressive towards her.

So, to avoid any of that (potentially) happening, a woman will usually just try to make a clean break with as little confrontation as possible.

Another common explanation why a woman won't give you a proper reason for breaking up with you is

4. She doesn't feel like she has to give you a proper reason

Sometimes, a woman will simply feel that breaking up with a guy is her choice and she doesn't owe him an explanation.

Essentially, she believes that she's not his property and if he can't maintain her feelings of respect, attraction and love (e.g. because he has become very insecure and clingy, treats her badly, takes her for granted, is too wimpy and she walks all over him, stops trying to make her feel good), she can walk away from him without needing to explain herself to him.

Additionally, a woman might also think things like, After all the fights and arguments we've had, if he doesn't already know all my reasons for breaking up with him, then I'm not even going to bother telling him. Clearly he's either too naïve or in denial about the problems in our relationship if he can't figure out by himself my real reasons for calling it quits between us.

This is why asking your girlfriend to give you a proper reason for breaking up with you is not a good idea as it will only give her even more cause to want to stay broken up.

So, focus on figuring out her reasons by yourself and then showing her via your actions, behavior, communication style and the way that you respond to what she says and does that you've changed and improved.

She will then automatically feel some respect for you again for understanding her reasons without her help and taking action.

When that happens, her walls come down and she becomes more open to talking to you on the phone, meeting up with you in person and seeing where things go from there.

Another common explanation why a woman won't give you a proper reason for breaking up with you isâ€!

5. She didn't want to open a discussion that would result in you seducing her back into a relationship or convincing her to give you a chance to prove that you can do better

In some cases, a woman will avoid giving her guy a proper reason for breaking up with him, because she doesnâ€t want him to talk her out of her decision.

For example: If a woman says that sheâ€s breaking up with her guy because heâ€s been taking her for granted, he might try to change her mind by saying things like, â€Iâ€m sorry! I really stuffed up, but now that I know where I went wrong, I promise Iâ€ll never do that again. I give you my word that I wonâ€t break my promises to you again, Iâ€ll pull my weight with the chores and Iâ€ll make sure that I take you out once a week and spoil you the way you deserve. Just give me one more chance and Iâ€ll make it up to you. Please!â€

She may then feel obligated to give him another chance, even though deep down she feels that he wonâ€t be able to stick to his word for very long and she will then have to break up with him again.

Alternatively, a woman might still have feelings for her guy, but she knows that he wonâ€t or canâ€t change.

She also knows that because she still cares for him, he can effortlessly charm her into forgiving him and staying with him, even though sheâ€s not happy anymore.

So, to avoid that from happening, she doesnâ€t give him a proper reason to protect herself from being convinced to stay in a relationship thatâ€s not good for her.

Where Guys Go Wrong With an Ex Who Wonâ€t Give Them a Proper Reason For the Break Up

Although right now you might be feeling confused and even hurt by your girlfriendâ€s lack of explanation for ending your relationship, if your goal is to get her back, you need to make sure you donâ€t push her away even more.

This is why you need to avoid making any of the following mistakes that guys often make in a situation similar to yours:

1. Accusing her of being selfish and inconsiderate for breaking up with him in that way

A guy might sometimes say things like, â€How can you just walk away from our relationship without an explanation! Youâ€re just being selfish and only thinking about yourself! No matter how you feel, I donâ€t deserve to be treated this way. After everything weâ€ve been through together, donâ€t you think itâ€s only fair that you tell me what I did wrong? Youâ€re being intentionally vague just to hurt me. I canâ€t believe youâ€re doing this to me!â€

Yet, hereâ€s the thingâ€!

Even though he might feel justified in what heâ€s saying, getting angry with an ex girlfriend and accusing her of being selfish doesn't accomplish anything other than to push her further away. So, even though you may feel tempted to throw accusations at your ex for being inconsiderate with you, it's unlikely to make her see things from your point of view.

Instead, she will likely see your anger as another sign that she made the right decision to break up with you.

Another mistake that guys make in a situation like this is!

2. Assuming that she must not have ever cared for him or felt attracted to him

Getting broken up with without a proper reason can definitely be painful.

As a result, a guy might start doubting if the relationship meant as much to his ex as it did to him.

He may then say something to her alike, “Did you ever really love me and want me the way I did you, or was it just all a lie?”

Yet, rather than make her feel guilty and rush to apologize to him and try to make him feel better (i.e. by giving him a proper reason for breaking up with him), this kind of behavior only turns a woman off.

Why?

When a man is insecure about his attractiveness and value to a woman and has to ask her whether or not she sees him as being good enough, a woman loses respect and attraction for him.

So, although he is being honest about his feelings, his lack of belief in himself just convinces her that he's not the right man for her.

She then puts more effort into fully getting over him and moving on.

Another mistake that guys make in a situation like this is!

3. Asking her why she won't give him a proper reason

Although a guy might feel like he has a right to be given a proper reason for his ex breaking up with him, she may not see it that way.

In most cases, a woman will feel that if she doesn't want to be with him anymore, that should be reason enough.

So, if a guy then asks his ex to tell him her reasons, rather than get his satisfaction, he may be bitterly disappointed when she gives him a vague excuse and leaves him forever wondering what he did wrong.

Here's the thing!

Don't let your girlfriend have that kind of power over you.

Show her that you are man enough to figure it out on your own without her help.

When you do, she will automatically feel surges of respect and attraction for you again for not being a confused guy who needs her help to grow up and become a man.

Her guard will come down and she will feel drawn to you again in a way that feels good.

You can then easily guide her through the rest of the ex back process and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why Do Women Act Like They Don't Care About You After a Break Up?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 common reasons why:

1. She becomes an individual again, so she starts looking out for herself rather than trying to care for you

When in a relationship, it's only natural that a woman (and a man) will have to make some adjustments and compromises (e.g. dress up to look good for her guy even if she's feeling down or under the weather, be supportive of his wants and needs, stop going out to clubs and bars with her single friends, spend more time doing the things her guy likes).

So, when she breaks up with him, her first reaction might be to start enjoying her new-found freedom and individuality.

For example: She might enjoy being able to

- Pursue her own interests and hobbies without having to compromise for her guy's likes or dislikes.
- Hang out with whomever she wants, whenever she wants, without feeling guilty or needing to give him an explanation.
- Focus more on her studies or work.
- Stay out late and party with her single friends and even hook up with guys that she meets, if she wants to.
- Not have any relationship responsibilities (e.g. put his needs ahead of her own, deal with arguments and disagreements).
- Make her own choices about things (e.g. where, what and when to eat, how to spend her weekends, where to go on vacation, who to spend the holidays with).

As a result, she (initially) doesn't miss her ex very much and when he then reaches out to her via text, social media or gives her a call, she acts like she doesn't care about him.

Instead, she's having fun being an individual again without having to care about anyone else's feelings, needs or wants other than her own.

Yet, here's the thing

Just because your ex might be feeling that way now, it doesn't mean she will feel that way forever.

In fact, when the novelty of being single again wears off, she will likely start missing being in a relationship and having a guy take care of her.

When that happens, she will open herself up to dating and finding herself a new guy as quickly as possible.

This is why, if you want her back, you need to make sure you don't give up on her, just because right now she's acting like she doesn't care about you.

You need to maintain your confidence around her and continue interacting with her and sparking her feelings for you every chance you get.

When she realizes that it actually feels better with you in her life than without you (i.e. because you make her feel positive emotions such as respect, attraction, excitement), the less she will be able to act like she doesn't care about you anymore.

Her guard will slip down and she then opens up to the idea of being your girl again.

Another common reason why women act like they don't care about you after a break up isâ

2. She disconnects from her feelings, so she doesn't feel drawn back to you

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she usually disconnects from her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for him and becomes cold and emotionally distant.

Naturally, when that happens a guy might feel confused and he may then wonder, â Why do women act like they don't care about you after a break up?â or âHow can she forget about everything we had together and act like it meant nothing to her?â

The reason is because acting like she doesn't care is a woman's way of ensuring that she can get over her guy as quickly as possible and move on.

At the same time, if he tries to talk her into giving him another chance (e.g. by promising her that he will change, offering to do whatever she wants), she won't be easily convinced by him and then risk getting hurt again if she gets back together with him and things don't work out.

This is why, if you want your ex to stop acting like she doesn't care about you, you have to spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you first.

If you don't, she will remain closed off towards you and she will focus on moving on and finding herself a replacement guy who will.

So, how can you reawaken her feelings for you?

One great way to do it is by using ballsy humor to make her smile, laugh and feel good to be interacting with you again.

The more laughter you can share together, the less she is able to pretend that she doesn't care about you.

Then, rather than think things like, âI wish he would accept that I'm not interested in him anymore and just leave me alone,â she will be thinking things like, âI can't believe I'm thinking this, but I actually feel good around him again. I actually look forward to his text messages or calls and I'm even open to seeing him in person again. I don't know how this happened, but I feel drawn to him again in a way that feels good.â

She then naturally relaxes her guard and opens herself up to seeing where things go from there (e.g. seeing you in person, hugging, kissing, having sex and being back into a relationship with you again).

Another common reason why women act like they don't care about you after a break up isâ

3. She is just testing to see if you will lose confidence in yourself

One of the qualities that women find attractive in a man is his confidence.

So naturally, when a guy is being insecure, needy and desperate, a woman will feel turned off by him.

This is why, one of the first tests a woman might put her ex through after she breaks up with him (e.g. acting like she doesn't care about him) is to check if he's going to react by becoming insecure and self-doubting, or by maintaining his confidence with her.

If he stays strong and even laughs at her when she's being distant and unfeeling towards him, she will automatically feel a surge of renewed respect for him for handling her like a real man.

When she feels that respect, she will then start to feel attracted again and when that happens, her defenses will come down and she will open herself up to the idea of giving him another chance.

On the other hand, if he falls apart and becomes despondent (e.g. gives up on getting her back, is extra nice to her in the hope that she will be nice back) she will know that he doesn't possess the one fundamental quality she needs in a man (i.e. confidence) and she will then usually focus on moving on and finding a man who does.

So, if you want to make your ex care about you again, make sure you maintain your confidence with her.

No matter what she says and does, you are confident.

When you believe in yourself, so will she.

Another common reason why women act like they don't care about you after a break up is that

4. She's trying to get you to react in an unattractive way, so she can have more reasons to remain broken up from you

Sometimes, even though a woman has broken up with a guy, she might find it difficult to give him a convincing reason why.

As far as she's concerned, something about the relationship just didn't feel right and she doesn't want to be with him anymore.

However, because she doesn't know what to tell him that will satisfy him enough so that he will leave her alone, she decides to act like she doesn't care about him, in the hopes that he will do something to give her ammunition to stay broken up.

For example: A woman might be hoping that her ex will

- Lose his temper with her for acting like she doesn't care (she can then use his aggressiveness as an excuse not to want to be around him anymore).
- Use the No Contact Rule and ignore her for 30 or 60 days (she can then use the time apart to move on and find herself a replacement guy).
- Pretend that he only wants to be friends with her to stay in her life (she can then find another guy because he's not making her feel attracted).

Here's the thing

If you want your ex to stop acting like she doesn't care about you, you can't play into her hands by losing your cool around her and behaving in unattractive ways.

Instead, you need to show her (via your actions, behavior, conversation style and the way you respond to what she says and does) that you're a new and improved man now.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is by

- Being more confident and self-assured so that you don't feel threatened when she acts like she doesn't care about you or says things like, "You mean nothing to me now. My feelings for you are dead!"
- Using ballsy humor to break her out of her bad moods and make her feel happy to be interacting with you again.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension.
- Leading the way in the ex back process so she can relax into thinking, feeling and behaving like a feminine woman around you.

The more she can see that you're now the man she always wanted you to be, the less she will be able to resist letting down her guard and allowing herself to imagine what it would be like to be your girl this time around.

Where Guys Go Wrong With a Woman Who Acts Like She Doesn't Care After a Break Up

Regardless of what your ex is saying or doing right now, if you want to get her back, you have to make sure that your behavior and actions are going to be sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

This is why you need to avoid doing the kind of things that will turn her off.

For example: Some mistakes to avoid making are:

1. Seeking pity from her for how badly she is treating you and how it makes you feel

When the woman you love is being cold, stand-offish and acting like you mean nothing to her, it's very tempting to want to confront her and say something along the lines of, "How you can be like this after everything we had together is beyond me? Doesn't our relationship mean anything to you? I just don't understand how you can be so cold. Yes, we've broken up but I still have feelings for you. How can you not have any feelings for me? How can you not care that I'm suffering so much? Is this what you want? To see me suffer? Well if it is, you have your wish, because I am suffering!"

Secretly you may even be hoping she will feel so bad over her treatment of you that she will not only start treating you better, she will even say something like, "I'm sorry! I didn't mean to hurt you. It's just that I still love you so much that acting like I don't care is the only way I could think of to try and get over you."

You and her could then kiss and make up and everything would be perfect.

Yet, here's the thing.

Seeking pity and getting positive results is only something that happens in romantic movies.

In the real world, when a guy tries to make his ex feel pity for him, she feels turned off by his emotional weakness and his inability to cope with the break up like a real man.

She also tends to feel resentful towards him for trying to manipulate her into being nice to him.

Then, rather than treating him better from that point onwards, she instead acts even more like she doesn't care about him.

So, don't bother trying to make your ex feel pity for how she's making you feel and focus instead on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Accusing her of being selfish

Even though you might feel justified in accusing your ex of being selfish, it's unlikely to make her see things from your point of view.

Instead, she will likely see your accusations as a sign that you're not emotionally mature enough for her.

She will then feel that she made the right decision to break up with you (i.e. because you're now coming across as a childish, immature ex and she doesn't want anything more to do with you).

So, if you truly want to get her back, the best way to go about it is by showing her that she made a mistake by breaking up with you.

How?

One way of doing that is by maintaining control of your emotions around her no matter what she says or does.

As a result, she will realize that you're being the kind of man she always wanted you to be (i.e. confident, emotionally strong and someone she can look up to, respect and feel proud to be with).

When that happens, she will start to feel drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

Then, acting like she doesn't care about you stops being something she wants to do.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Asking her if she ever loved you or if it was all just fake?

When a woman is acting like she doesn't care about you after a break up, it can definitely make a guy wonder if she ever did.

However, asking a woman something along the lines of, "Did you ever really love me, or was it all a big act?" only causes her to feel even more turned off by him.

Why?

When a man is insecure about his attractiveness and value to a woman and has to ask whether or not her feelings for him were ever real, she loses respect and attraction for him.

Here's the thing

Women are naturally attracted to men who believe in themselves no matter what a woman says or does and they are turned off by the kind of man who needs a woman to make him feel worthy and like he's good enough.

So, don't put yourself in that position.

Believe in yourself and know that she loved you and if you focus on re-attracting her, she will easily love you again.

Another mistake to avoid making is

4. Interacting with her in ways that turn her off and expecting her to continue caring

A guy will sometimes feel so desperate to get his ex back that he will make all kinds of mistakes that actually turn her off even more.

For example: He mightâ

- Text or call her repeatedly to try and discuss the relationship with her.
- Send her flowers and cards apologizing for what happened.
- Ask her to tell him what he did wrong and how he can fix it.
- Beg and plead with her to remember the good times they once had and just give him another chance based on that.
- Pour his heart out to her and say things like, *âEven though you donât care about me, I will always care about you. My love for you is real and I will do whatever it takes to prove it to you.*â

He just canât stop himself from being that way because he thinks that heâs doing the right thing by showing her how committed he is to getting her back.

Yet, what he doesnât realize is that his behavior only convinces her even more that heâs not the right man for her.

She then digs in her heels and acts even more like she doesnât care, leaving him feeling confused and wondering what went wrong.

Hereâs the thingâ

If you want your ex to stop acting like she doesnât care about you and to get her back, youâve got to make sure that you start approaching her in a way that is going to be attractive to her.

Donât just expect her to change how she feels simply because you still care for her, because itâs not going to work on her.

What will?

Showing her via your actions, behavior, conversation style and the way you respond to her when she acts like she doesnât care about you, that youâre a new and improved man.

Youâre more confident and self-assured now.

You believe in your value to her and even though you do want her back, you donât need her back to feel good about yourself.

If you can display that type of confidence, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, she canât stop herself from dropping her act and opening up to caring about you once again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

When She Says She's Done With You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

3 common reasons why a woman will say that to a man she has broken up with:

1. She can see that he doesn't even know what to change to make her feel attracted

In most cases, a woman won't just break up with a guy the first time he does something to annoy her or turn her off.

Instead, because she still loves him, she will give him a chance, or even several chances, to change his behavior.

She may even give him some clues as to what is bothering her to help him figure it out.

For example: If one of the things turning her off is that he's too irresponsible, is stuck in a dead-end job and doesn't have any goals for his future, she might say things like, "I saw this amazing course online that I'm sure you will love. Not only will it improve on your current skills, it also offers an internship when you're finished. Isn't that great? You can then quit your job and do something that will enhance your prospects for the future."

If he takes notice and follows through on her suggestion, she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him for understanding what she wanted him to change and then taking action.

However, if he just brushes off her suggestions and continues to make the same mistakes over and over again, she will eventually lose so much respect, attraction and love for him, that breaking up becomes her only choice.

The guy might then try to make her change her mind by offering to change things about himself that don't actually matter to her.

For example: He might say something like, "Please give me another chance. I promise to be more romantic and take you out to fancy restaurants, rather than cafes or diners and I'll also buy you flowers and special gifts. I give you my word."

Yet, that's not what she wants.

She wants him to be more responsible and focused in his life, not be more romantic or buy her things.

This only makes her think, "He clearly doesn't get it. After everything I've said to him to try and make him realize his mistakes, he's still the same guy that he was before and if I give him another chance, he's not really going to change, because he simply doesn't know how, or even what to change."

As a result she pushes him away and says things like, "No. I'm done with you! It's over! Just go away and leave me alone."

He's then left feeling hurt and confused and wondering things like, "Why is she being so stubborn?" or, "Why won't she give me a chance when I've already promised to change?"

Here's the thing!

If you want your ex to stop saying that she's done with you and give you another chance, you first need to understand her real reasons for breaking up with you (e.g. you werenât manly enough in your behavior, you became too clingy and needy in the relationship with her, you lacked focus and direction in your life, you werenât able to give her the kind of attraction experience she really wanted so she felt more like your friend than your woman).

When you understand what actually matters to her and make those changes (rather than offering her things that she doesnât want), she then feels understood.

As a result, she stops saying that sheâs done with you and she instead opens herself up to the idea of exploring her new feelings of attraction for you.

On the other hand, if you keep offering to change things about yourself that donât really matter to her, she will continue saying that sheâs done with you and then getting her back will be a lot more difficult.

Another common reason why a woman will say that to a man she has broken up with isâ!

2. She's tired of him chasing a relationship for his own reasons, rather than making her feel the way she wants to feel

In your mind, you probably have lists of valid reasons why you and your ex should get back together again.

For example: Some of the reasons a guy might give his ex as a way of urging her to give their relationship another chance areâ!

- He still loves her and needs her.
- He canât function in his life without her.
- They had such good times together in the past and they can again.
- They are soulmates and theyâre meant to be together.
- His friends and family adore her.

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

If a woman has lost respect and attraction for her ex, sheâs not going to care how good his reasons are.

Instead, sheâs likely going to be thinking things like, âYes, Iâm sure all his reasons are true for him. Yet, what he doesnât realize is that from my perspective none of that matters, because I spent most of the relationship trying to show him how unhappy he was making me feel and to get him to change. So even though he wants me back, I definitely donât want to go back to the annoying, frustrating life I had with him. Also, if he really loved me the way he says he does, he wouldnât have hurt me in the first place and we would still be together. He would have cared enough to understand that his actions and behavior were making me feel fed up and he would have changed. However, he didnât, because he doesnât even have a clue what I really want. All he cares about is his own needs, wants and desires. Well, Iâm looking out for myself now and Iâm done with him!â

Although knowing that your ex might be thinking things like that about you sucks, the good news is that her feelings arenât permanent.

You can change the way that she feels about you.

How can you do that?

By making sure that every time you interact with her from now on (i.e. on a phone call or in person), you are actively making her feel sparks of respect and sexual and romantic attraction for you.

Don't waste time trying to convince her to give you another chance based how you feel, because that is irrelevant to her.

What matters to her is how you make her feel.

For example:

Can she relax into thinking, feeling and acting like a feminine woman around you because you're being more emotionally masculine than her, or does she feel more like a neutral friend or roommate?

Does she look up to you and respect you as a man, or does she look down on you a little bit because she feels more emotionally dominant than you?

Does she feel like she would be winning by getting back with you, or does she feel like she would be doing you a favor if she gave you another chance?

When you start doing more of the things that make her feel attracted to you and less of the things that turn her off, your ex will quickly stop saying that she's done with you.

Even if initially she tries to hide it, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling bursts of respect and attraction for you again for making her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with you.

When that happens, her defenses will come down and she will naturally begin to wonder about what a relationship with you would be like this time around.

Another common reason why a woman will say that she's done with a man is

3. He's been trying to get her back via text and has turned her off or annoyed her because of it

Sometimes a guy believes that he stands a better chance of convincing his ex to give him another chance if he asks her via text.

This is especially true if his ex has been cold and distant towards him over the phone and has stubbornly been refusing to meet up with him in person.

He might then think to himself, "Well if I can't make her listen to reason any other way, at least she can't run away from a text. She'll have to read it and when she sees that I'm being sincere and that I really want us to work things out, she'll hopefully stop being so stubborn and closed off and give me another chance."

He then proceeds to send her walls of text messages saying things like, "I'm sorry. I know I'm stuffed up, but I will make it up to you if you give me one more chance," or "What we had was special and I will do whatever it takes to prove to you that things will be different between us, if we get back together again."

Yet, when a woman has disconnected from her feelings for her ex, getting a text from him trying to get her to commit to a relationship only makes her pull away from him even more.

She might even feel a bit annoyed with him for trying to get her back via text and she may think something like, "He's trying to convince me to give him another chance, but he doesn't even have the balls to do it face-to-face, or at least over the phone. It's like he was bored with his day and suddenly thought, 'Oh, let me text my ex and see if I can get her back,' just to pass the time! Well he can forget about getting another chance with me. Iâ€™m done with him!

Additionally, because she canâ€™t see his body language, hear the tonality of his voice, or judge his actions and behavior in person or on a phone call, she just assumes that heâ€™s hiding behind text messages, because he hasnâ€™t really changed or improved in any way and heâ€™s afraid to face her, where she will be able to see it for herself.

So, if you want your ex to stop saying that sheâ€™s done with you, stop trying to convince her to change her mind via text, where she can easily make up all sorts of negative stories about you because youâ€™re not there to prove her wrong (e.g. that youâ€™re feeling nervous and insecure, youâ€™re still stuck at the same level you were at when you and her broke up).

She needs to see for herself that you really are a new and improved man and that can only be done in person.

So, focus on that and you will see that reactivating her feelings of respect and attraction for you is actually easier than it seems.

Common Problems That Guys Encounter When a Woman Says Sheâ€™s Done With Them

Chances are, if your ex is saying that sheâ€™s done with you, youâ€™ve likely encountered some of the problems below.

Letâ€™s look at why sheâ€™s behaving in these ways and what you can do to change it!

1. She won't listen to your point of view and give you a chance to explain

Even though you likely have many good reasons and explanations for what happened in the relationship with your ex, itâ€™s unlikely that she will care what they are.

Why?

Essentially, when a woman has lost respect and attraction for her ex, she becomes closed off and unwilling to see things from his point of view.

So, how can you change all that?

By making sure that every time you interact with her from now on, youâ€™re actively re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Donâ€™t waste time explaining and trying to convince her.

If she doesnâ€™t fully respect you at the moment, your efforts to persuade her to give you a chance to explain will fall on deaf ears.

So, focus on changing how she feels and her mind will then change without you having to sweet talk her.

Another way your ex might be behaving and what you can do to change it is!

2. She has been sticking to her decision no matter what you have said to her

If your ex is coming across as stubborn and closed off, itâ€™s possible that youâ€™re feeling hopeless and despondent right now.

You may even be thinking things like, “Why won’t she bend a little and just give me a chance to prove to her that things can be different between us? After everything we shared together she could at least give our relationship one last chance to survive.”

However, here’s the thing!

A woman will only behave like that when her ex hasn’t been doing anything to re-spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him.

All he has been doing is trying to convince her to change her mind, but he’s not making her feel motivated to want to do that, so she keeps saying, “No. I’m done with you.”

So what should you do instead?

You need to replace her negative feelings for you (e.g. anger, annoyance, disappointment) with positive ones (e.g. respect, sexual attraction, love).

The more she feels drawn to you in a way that feels good to her, the more open she’ll become to changing her mind and giving you another chance.

Another way your ex might be behaving and what you can do to change it is!

3. She has lost interest in communicating with you

When a woman cuts herself off from her ex (e.g. she unfriends him on social media, blocks his number on her phone, refuses to meet up with him in person), it’s usually her way of fully getting over him and moving on.

So, what is the best way to handle an ex who has lost interest in communicating with you?

You need to show her that you’re not going to become insecure and self-doubting (e.g. by not begging and pleading with her to give you another chance and instead focusing on having a good time without her and posting photos on social media for her to see).

Instead, you believe in yourself and in your value to her regardless of whether she’s talking to you or not.

When she sees that you’re not crumbling because she’s ignoring you, she will naturally start to feel some respect for you again.

She may then unblock your number or friend you again on social media and wait for you to make the next move.

Another way your ex might be behaving and what you can do to change it is!

4. She is tired of trying to make the relationship work and doesn’t see the point anymore

A woman will usually give her guy more than one chance to change and improve before she gets fed up and decides to break up with him.

That’s why, him trying to make her change her mind by begging, pleading, promising to change and telling her how much he loves her, won’t easily change her mind.

Instead, she will remain closed off and say things like, “No. I’m done with you. It’s over.”

So, if you want to change that, you need to show her (not tell her) that you really have changed and improved in some of the ways that matter to her.

You don't have to become perfect.

Just better.

Then, when she experiences the new you for herself, she will naturally feel some respect and attraction for you again.

She then starts to feel curious about what it would be like to give you another chance, so she drops her guard and allows you back into her heart a little bit.

All you need to do then is prove to her that she made the right decision by being the man she always wanted you to be.

She will then reciprocate by being a loving, devoted woman who wants to stick with you for life.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Breaking Down My Ex's Emotional Walls

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 reasons why a woman will have her emotional walls up with an ex:

1. She can see that he doesn't understand what she truly wants

After a break up, some guys try to get an ex woman back by promising to fix things that don't even matter to her.

For example: A woman might feel too emotionally dominant over her man (i.e. she can push him around, get her way with him even when she's being a brat, dominate him during a conversation, make him feel uncomfortable with her very confident personality).

As a result, she can't look up to him and respect him because he is emotionally weaker than her.

Then, when she breaks up with her boyfriend, he might start saying things like, "I will do whatever you tell me to do to make you happy" or, "I'm sorry, it's all my fault. I should have treated you better. I promise to make you happy from now on. Just tell me what I need to do and I'll do it."

He hopes that he is somehow saying and doing what she wants to hear to convince her to give him another chance.

So, when she doesn't open back up to him and instead puts up an emotional wall that he can't break through anymore, he feels confused and lost.

He might then ask himself, "Why is she being so unresponsive? What am I doing wrong? What will it take to break down her emotional walls? I love her so much. Doesn't that mean anything to her? How could she go cold on me like this? She used to really love me? Why isn't she opening up?"

The answer is simple!

A woman will remain closed off to her ex if she gets the sense that he doesn't understand what she truly wants.

She will get that sense if he is trying to get her back by offering things that she doesn't even care about (e.g. to treat her better, when she really wants him to be more ballsy and make her feel like she needs to treat him better).

Another possible reason why a woman will have her emotional walls up with an ex, is

2. He's trying hard to understand her, when what she really wants is for him to attract her

Sometimes a guy will spend days, weeks or even months trying to understand what his ex woman is thinking, so he can then crack the code and get her back.

As a result, he over-analyzes everything she says or texts him, to hopefully find a clue about why she's staying closed off to him.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that women are like an endless puzzle that cannot be solved by trying to put all the existing pieces together.

When you put all the pieces together, a woman changes the puzzle and you're back to where you started.

So, the secret is not to try to put a woman into a fixed arrangement of behavior and thinking.

You have to let her be free to be an ever-changing woman, without trying to understand her.

When a man allows a woman to be like that, she will feel instinctively drawn to him and won't want to leave, because he is one of the rare men in this world who can allow a woman to think, feel and behave like a real woman (e.g. unpredictably, emotionally, without having to make sense, illogically, irrationally).

Women can be sensible, rational and logical of course.

However, when it comes to a romantic, sexual relationship, a woman wants to be free to be feminine. Being feminine is different to being masculine.

Generally speaking, being feminine is about going with how she feels, changing her opinion in the moment, being unpredictable in how she behaves and so on.

On the other hand, generally speaking, being masculine is about going with what makes sense, having an opinion based on facts and being more stable in terms of behavior and feelings.

So, if a guy tries to make a woman fit into a nice, predictable pattern of thinking and behavior, she will continue to change (e.g. one day she gets annoyed with him for calling her and the next day she is happy to hear from him), leaving him feeling confused and not knowing what to say or do to please her.

This is why, if you want to break down your ex's emotional walls, you need to forget about trying to understand her and focus instead on making her feel drawn to you.

Women tend to go with how they feel, so don't try to get her to understand your logical reasons why you and her should be together.

Make her feel attracted and drawn to you and she will flow with that.

So, when you interact with her, on the phone and especially in person and make her feel sparks of respect and sexual attraction for you (e.g. by being more of a challenge, using humor to ease the tension she's feeling, maintaining your confidence with her even when she's being stand-offish and distant) her emotional walls will naturally come down because she feels drawn to you and wants to open up to you in the moment.

Another possible reason why a woman will have her emotional walls up with an ex, is that

3. He has been trying to get her to commit to a relationship right away, even though she's not attracted yet

If a woman's ex guy keeps talking about the relationship and how he wants to fix things so they can get back together, it's understandable that she might put up some defensive walls.

The fact is, unless a woman is still in love with her ex, feels that the break up was a big mistake and wants to get back together again right away, she won't feel comfortable being pushed back into a relationship.

When her ex is pushing for a relationship, she will be thinking things like, "I just want to take things slow for now and see where it leads to. Maybe we can get back together again and maybe we can't. I don't know yet. I kind of feel drawn to him, but I don't know. I don't want to jump back into a relationship with him just because heâ€™s pushing me, only to discover that nothing about him has changed and improved. If I do that, I'll then have to go through the trauma of breaking up with him all over again.

As a result, she will remain guarded and put up a wall that her ex can't seem to get through.

So, if you want to get her back, don't put any pressure on her to commit to the idea of a relationship. Instead, just focus on making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you whenever you interact with her on the phone or in person.

Let her truly experience the new and improved you, so she wants you back for her own reasons (e.g. she's attracted to you again and worried that if she doesn't give you another chance, you might move on with a new woman), rather than trying to pressure her into making a decision and pushing her further into her shell.

Another possible reason why a woman will have her emotional walls up with an ex, isâ€¦|

4. Heâ€™s stuck in the friend zone with her now

A guy will sometimes remain friends with an ex as a way of getting her back, which can work if he approaches it correctly.

Unfortunately, many guys don't know how to use a friendship with their ex woman to get her back, so they end up being friend zoned while she moves on and starts sleeping with new men.

This happens because the guy is simply being friendly towards her, rather than using the so-called friendship as an opportunity to make her feel sexually attracted and turned on.

For example: A guy might think, â€œIf I stick around long enough and be her nice, reliable friend who is always there for her, she will realize that no-one else is as devoted to her as I am. She will then see that she made a mistake by breaking up with me and we can get back together.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that rather than convince a woman to give him another chance, his approach causes her to remain closed off.

Why?

Thereâ€™s no sexual attraction and respect to make her feel motivated to want to open up to him emotionally.

She doesn't see the point of opening herself back up to a man that she can't see a romantic, sexual future with.

She's not looking for a friendship.

She's looking for a sexually attracted, romantic relationship that causes her to fall more and more in love over time.

So, if you want to break down your exâ€™s emotional walls, you need to use the so-called friendship that you now have with her to re-attract her sexually and romantically.

This means you need to change your approach from being her nice, neutral friend to using interactions to turn her on sexually, so she actually has a reason to get back into a relationship with you.

Another possible reason why a woman will have her emotional walls up with an ex, isâ€¦|

5. He's giving her logical reasons why they should get back together again, rather than making her feel it

A guy might sometimes try to convince his ex to get back together again by giving her many logical reasons why the relationship can be saved, or why they are meant to be together.

He might say things like, “Can’t you see that what we had together was one of a kind? We have such a special connection. I’ve never felt that way with any other woman and I know that you never felt that way with another guy. You used to always tell me how much you loved me. How can you now forget that? Sure we had some problems, but don’t all couples disagree sometimes? Having a few arguments or problems doesn’t mean we should just throw everything away. In fact, if we don’t quit now that the going is rough, our relationship will be even better than it was before. We’ll prove to everyone that what you and I have is indestructible. We’ll be one of those couples who have made it through a rough patch and have fallen more in love as a result. That can be us. So, just give me a chance. I love you more than anything. Just give me one more chance to make it right.”

Alternatively, he might use excuses like, “We need to be role models for our friends and family. They all thought we were perfect together and if we give up now, we would be proving to them that relationships are hard to keep together these days. That would be so sad to disillusion everyone just because we’re going through a small bump in our relationship. We owe it to them to at least try and work things out. People look up to you and me. We’ve got to show them that we can do it.”

Essentially, he's hoping that if his argument is good enough, she will change her mind about breaking up.

Yet, regardless of whether his argument is valid or not, trying to convince a woman to stay in a relationship that she doesn't want only makes her put up more walls to protect herself.

Here's the thing:

A modern woman doesn't want to stay in a relationship with a guy out of a sense of duty, or because she feels guilty about leaving him behind.

She wants to be with him because he makes her feel good right now and from now on.

So, if you want to break down your ex's emotional walls and make her want to get back together again, you need to stop trying to convince her to give you another chance based on logical reasons.

Make her feel attracted and in love with you again as you talk to her and she will then want to give you another chance based on how she feels now.

3 Common Problems That Guys Encounter When Trying to Break Down an Ex's Emotional Walls

After a break up, a woman usually won't make it easy for her ex to get her back right away (e.g. because she doesn't want to seem too easy, she wants to see if you're emotionally strong enough to break down her walls).

So, at the moment, you might be facing one or more of the following problems:

1. She isn't listening to your point of view

From your point of view, there are many good reasons why you and her should get back together.

Your point of view is based on your intense feelings of love and attraction for her.

Yet, her point of view is based on her feeling turned off and repelled by you at the moment.

This is why you shouldn't be aiming to get her to understand your point of view because she just won't see it your way based on she's feeling at the moment.

If you keep trying to get her to bring her emotional walls down and open up to you, she will keep pushing you away.

Then, to avoid getting back with you, she will force herself to begin moving on by flirting with and potentially hooking up with a new guy.

So, focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, rather than trying to get her to understand your point of view.

Your point of view is based on your feelings for her and need for her.

If you want her point of view to change, then change how she feels by changing your approach to her.

Another problem you might be experiencing with her isâ€¦!

2. She treats you like just a friend now, or worse, like a stranger

This usually happens when a guy makes the mistake of being on his best behavior around his ex.

For example:

- He talks to her in a nice, polite way.
- He pretends that heâ€™s not sexually interested in her anymore, so he doesnâ€™t flirt with her to create sexual tension.
- Heâ€™s too serious around her, rather than using ballsy humor to make her laugh, relax, open up and feel attracted to him again.

Without feelings of respect and sexual attraction, a woman doesn't feel motivated to bring her emotional walls down and get back with a guy.

So, make sure that you don't make the mistake of being extra nice, polite and sweet to hopefully make her see that you only want to be her friend.

You don't just want to be her friend.

You want a sexual, romantic relationship with her and the path to get to that is via sexual attraction.

Another problem you might be experiencing with her isâ€¦!

3. She doesn't care that you have changed

A guy will sometimes try get another chance based on telling his ex woman that he has changed.

For example: If his girlfriend broke up with him because he was too needy and insecure in the relationship, he might say something like, â€œLook, I really have changed. Iâ€™m a different man now. I promise, I don't feel needy anymore. All of that has gone. I'm so much more confident now. If you give me another chance, I will prove it to you.â€

Sometimes that can work, especially if a woman can sense that her ex has changed and she is already feeling attracted to him because of it.

Yet, if a woman can sense that her ex has only slightly changed, or hasn't changed and is hoping to trick her into giving him another chance, she will close up and reject him.

Additionally, in many cases, a woman won't want to hear about how her ex has changed.

Why?

To some women, saying, "I've changed. Please give me another chance" annoys them because you're essentially looking at her as being in the power position.

Women don't like it when guys feel desperate for them and try hard to get a chance.

What women find attractive is when a man believes in himself and doesn't need a woman to tell him that he is good enough.

He knows that he is good enough and just gets on with interacting with her, attracting her, turning her on and moving to a hug, kiss and then sex.

Remember: Women like to go with how they feel, so if you make her feel attracted and turned on, she will drop her guard and open up to you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me and Said That I Needed to Grow Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why a woman will say that when breaking up with you:

1. She matured faster than you during the relationship

Some guys mature faster than women, but for the most part, women tend to grow up and mature faster than guys.

This natural occurrence ends up leading to a lot of heartbreak for guys all over the world, when the woman they love eventually says something like, “Sorry, but it’s just not working out. I’m breaking up with you.”

Here’s the thing:

For a relationship to last past the initial lust and falling in love phase, there needs to be more than just a superficial attraction between the man and woman.

In other words, although they might be physically attracted to each other and enjoy each other’s company initially, that won’t be enough to keep the relationship together for life.

For a relationship to last past the initial phase, a couple needs to connect on a much deeper level.

For example: They need to

- Ultimately want the same things in life (e.g. to get married, settle down and start a family together, or to pursue a career, or to go traveling) and be heading towards that slowly, but surely.
- Have a big goal or dream in life that they’re working towards achieving together, rather than just hanging out and wasting time as boyfriend and girlfriend.
- Have similar beliefs and values (e.g. prefer to stay at home and focus on studies or work, or prefer to party and living a carefree lifestyle).
- Be able to feel more and more respect for each other over time, based on who they are becoming together in the relationship and individually.
- Feel like life is getting better together, rather than getting worse.
- Be happy and hopeful about a future together, rather than miserable and unsure.
- Grow up and begin to experience new levels of life together, rather than remaining stuck at the same level for many years, while friends and family move on to new levels.

So, when a woman discovers that she is maturing a lot faster than her boyfriend (e.g. She’s ready to settle down, but he isn’t. She has big dreams of where she sees the relationship going in the future, but he can’t seem to decide what he really wants. She is making progress in life, but he keeps failing at what he’s doing or procrastinating and wasting time), then she may start feeling like they are no longer well matched.

Initially, she might hang around for a while in the hope that he will begin to grow up and mature like her, but if he doesn’t, she will eventually lose too much respect and attraction for him to want to stay in a relationship.

At that point, she will break up with him and say, “I’ve given you plenty of chances, but you never chance. You really need to grow up. I’m not sticking around any longer to wait and see if you will. It’s over now. I’m breaking up with you. I’ve had enough. So, goodbye.”

Another possible reason why your girlfriend broke up with you and said that you needed to grow up isâ€¦!

2. You were too emotionally sensitive

There’s nothing wrong with feeling emotions as a man, but when you become too sensitive, a woman starts to lose respect and attraction for you.

Of course, that’s not what the mainstream media will tell you.

Every day, guys are bombarded by messages (e.g. TV, magazines and the internet) telling them that women want to be in a relationship with a nice, sweet, dependable guy who listens to them and can express his emotions like women do.

Yet, in reality, women are most attracted and in love when they are with a man who feels emotions, but remains in control of them like a man.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don’t understand that, so they assume that a woman will be okay with him becoming more and more emotionally sensitive as the relationship goes on.

Yet, she won’t.

Eventually she will want to break up with himâ€¦!

Of course, he can get her back after the break up if he changes his approach and re-attracts her.

Yet, a lot of guys just don’t do that.

They end up using the same old, emotionally sensitive approach that turned her off when in the relationship.

For example: Some of the ways that an emotionally guy will turn a woman off in a relationship areâ€¦!

- Becoming very clingy and needy because he thinks that his girlfriend will be impressed at how devoted he is to her.
- Getting emotional or sulking like a boy when they have a disagreement.
- Blowing everything out of proportion when they have a fight (e.g. start worrying and thinking, “She doesn’t love me anymore! I’m losing her!” or, “She’s going to break up with me. I can feel it!”) and then begin to panic and stress around her.
- Crying to her when he is facing challenging problems in life.
- Cuddling into her like a boy would cuddle into his mother.
- Complaining about having to be responsible like an adult.
- Acting childish or immature around her family and friends.
- Trying to stop her from spending time with anyone but him.

As a result, he ends up getting dumped by his girlfriend and then wonders things like, “I don’t get it. I was completely devoted to her and I love her with all of my heart, but she broke up with me and said I needed to grow up. How could she just turn her back on me like that? I thought she loved me.”

Here's the thing!

What he doesn't understand is that almost all women feel turned off by emotionally weak, insecure men.

So, even though he assumed that he was doing the right thing (i.e. because he saw guys acting like that in movies, or in music videos), he wasn't.

In the real world, women don't continue to respect and feel attracted to guys who can't grow up and be more of a man all the time.

You have to man up, or they will step down as your girl.

It's as simple as that.

Of course, some women are okay to stay with a guy who isn't manning up, but it's usually because the woman needs him to help pay the rent with her, enjoys having sex with him or is insecure about her attractiveness and doesn't want to get out into the dating scene again.

Yet, pretty much every other woman will eventually dump a guy who doesn't grow up and become more and more of a man over time.

One of the most important parts of becoming more of a man is to gain more and more control over your emotions.

In other words, to become less and less like a boy who would cry or get upset when something happened.

Why is that important to women?

Even though women act like they are strong these days and don't need a man to take care of them, they still feel vulnerable in this world.

This is why women all over the world feel attracted to men who are confident, emotionally strong and able to cope with whatever life throws at them, rather than settling for an emotional weak or sensitive guy who makes them feel like they have to take care of him because he can't manage on his own.

So, when a guy becomes too emotionally sensitive in a relationship, a woman instinctively starts to lose respect and attraction for him.

If she wants to save the relationship, she might throw some hints his way by saying things like, "You're being so childish! Just grow up will you?" or, "Why do you act like such a baby sometimes? I don't like it" or, "You need to be more manly. When I first got with you, I didn't think you'd end up acting like this."

She will hope that he'll listen, make some adjustments to his thinking and behavior and let her see that he is capable of becoming more and more of a man over time.

Yet, if he doesn't catch on and continues with his wimpy, emotional behavior or adds to it by asking things like, "Why are you doing this to me? Don't you love me anymore?" or, "What can I do to make you happy? You know that I wouldn't be able to cope if you ever broke up with me, right?" it will lead to her breaking up with him.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend broke up with you and said that you needed to grow up is!

3. You became too clingy

Sometimes a guy will start off a relationship by being confident and self-assured, only to slowly begin doubting his attractiveness to her as time goes on.

As he begins to feel insecure about her desire for him, he may start thinking things like, “What if she finds another guy who is better than me (e.g. more good looking/has more money/is more successful) and then decides to break up with me? I wouldn’t be able to cope without her. I’ve got to make sure that I spend as much time with her as possible, so she doesn’t have a chance to meet any other guys.”

Yet, rather than making her think, “Oh, how sweet! My guy loves me so much he has made me the centre of his world. He only wants to spend time with me and doesn’t want anyone else to spend time with me. He must love me so much! I am so lucky!” a woman will feel smothered by his clinginess and turned off by his insecurity.

Of course, even though being clingy is unattractive to a woman, she usually won’t break up with her guy right away.

Instead, a woman will usually try to encourage her boyfriend to be more emotionally independent by suggesting that he spend more time with his friends, focus more on his goals and dreams, or take up a new hobby or sport.

If her guy ignores her hints and continues being clingy and needy, she will continue to lose respect for him.

Eventually, when she can no longer respect him, she will stop feeling attracted to him and then fall out of love with him.

At that point, she will then break up with him and try to find herself a more emotionally mature, emotionally secure and emotionally masculine guy.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend broke up with you and said that you needed to grow up isâ€¦!

4. You expected her to take care of you

For a woman to maintain respect and sexual attraction for her man, she has to feel as though he is the man and she is his girl.

So, if her boyfriend starts to behave in ways that make her feel more like his mother, or big sister, who essentially has to keep saying to him, “It’s okay sweetie, I’m here for you. Don’t worry about anything, because I will take care of everything for you. You just sit back and relax and I’ll make all the decisions. I’ll take care of us” she will begin to feel more emotionally dominant than him.

As a result, she will stop thinking, acting and behaving like the feminine girl she wants to be and instead, start wearing the pants in the relationship like a man.

Here’s the thing!

A woman doesn’t want to be the boss in her relationship with a man.

There are some women who do like being the boss, but they are in the minority.

Most women who you see as being in the boss role in a relationship with a man are secretly disappointed at how they ended up with such a wimp.

In many cases, the woman will say with her man even though she is wearing the pants, but she won't want sex and if he wants sex, he will usually have to suck up to her, do chores around the house and live up to all of her expectations to get any.

On the other hand, a man who takes on the boss role in a relationship and allows his woman to be his girl will enjoy a completely different relationship dynamic.

She will feel sexually attracted to him, initiate sex, treat him well and want to impress him by doing housework, cooking and looking sexy and pretty for him.

Of course, you won't hear many women admit that when asked because they are embarrassed to admit what they really want.

So, you just need to look at the women who are the happiest and most in love with their man and you will see that he is the man and she is his girl.

She looks up to him and respects him as her man and he loves her and respect her as his woman.

Yet, they are not equals in terms of dominance.

He is the more dominant one and she loves it.

Despite what you may hear on politically correct TV shows, the majority of women want to be with a man who is more emotionally dominant than her, thus allowing her to relax into being an emotional, vulnerable, feminine, girly kind of woman, rather than having to 'man up', be the emotionally strong one and take care of him.

So, if a woman feels as though she has to hold her boyfriend's hand and guide him through life like he is a lost little boy, she will not only feel turned off, but she will also lose too much respect for him as a man to want to stay in a relationship.

She will then try to find herself a man who knows how to be a man and loves being a man, rather than sticking with a guy who wants to be protected by a strong woman.

Strong women want a man who is even stronger than themselves (emotionally).

Yet, most strong women struggle to find that, so they end up accepting men who aren't as strong as them, but always secretly hoping that they will meet a man who is stronger.

If a strong woman meets a man who is emotionally stronger than her, she will feel an intense attraction for him and if her current relationship is going downhill, she will almost certainly open herself up to him and then leave her boyfriend.

This is why, as a man, it's absolutely essential that you get your emotions under control.

You've got to be emotionally strong and never try to cling to your boyhood weaknesses.

You've got to develop past that and become a man that a woman can look up to, respect and feel safe with.

If you do that, women simply don't want to leave you.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend broke up with you and said that you needed to grow up is

5. She got tired of noticing that the boyfriends or husbands of her friends (or family members) were much more emotionally masculine and emotionally mature compared to you

Most women like the idea of being with a man they can look up to, respect and feel proud of to show off to her family, friends and coworkers.

So, if a guy acts more like a child around her and other people (e.g. throws tantrums or sulks when things don't go his way, says inappropriate, childish things in front of her friends, family or even her boss, behaves like a shy boy, acts very cute like a boy), she will start to feel embarrassed to be called his girlfriend.

If she also happens to notice how happy and proud her girlfriends, coworkers, sisters or cousins are of their boyfriend or husband, she will begin to wonder why she's wasting her time trying to make things work with a guy who is too childish and immature for her.

Then, rather than put up with his lack of emotional maturity anymore, she will simply break up with him and say, "You need to grow up!"

3 Mistakes to Avoid if You Want Her Back

1. Promising that you will grow up and be more manly, if she just gives you a chance to prove it

For most women, promises aren't what she needs to hear from her ex to want to give him another chance.

Why?

He has likely promised things to her before that he wasn't able to follow through on, so why should she believe him now?

So, what a woman needs is for her ex to make her feel differently by actually changing the way he interacts with her from now on (e.g. by being more emotionally mature, manly, responsible), without trying to get her to commit to a relationship.

Clearly he wants to have a relationship with her, but if she gets the sense that a relationship is his number one priority, she will close up.

She will feel as though his efforts to be more manly are selfish and are simply about him trying to get her back.

This is why, you need to man up and start making her feel attracted to the new and improved you, without trying to push for a relationship.

Make her want you back naturally, rather than making her put her guard up because she feels as though you're trying to force her into giving you another chance.

So, if you want your ex to give you another chance, don't bother making promises to her that you will change if she gives you chance.

Instead, focus on showing her (not telling her) that you've fixed your emotional issues (i.e. your emotional immaturity) and have already begun to transform into the type of man she wished you were all along.

The next mistake to avoid is!

2. Feeling entitled to another chance because she used to say that she would always love you

After getting dumped, a guy might think, How could she do this to me? She said she would love me forever. So, she owes it to me to give me another chance to make things right between us. She can't just walk away from me like this. She promised to love me forever.

Yet, although he makes a good point, it's just not how a woman works.

Women say things based on how they feel in the moment, which is why you can't take a woman's promise seriously

A woman can literally say, "I promise to always love you no matter what" based on her feeling attracted and in love with you.

Days, weeks or months later, she can then "I hate you. I never want to see you again" based on not feeling attracted and in love with you.

That infuriates some guys, but it's just how women are.

Women aren't the same as men, even though the politically correct media will try to suggest that they are.

Women are unreliable promise makers because they based their promises on what they feel, rather than on their honor.

When a man makes a promise, he wants to keep it because he wants to be a man of his word.

Yet, when a woman makes a promise, it's just what she is saying based on how she feels.

She doesn't need to be a woman of her word and be a strong, reliable figure for her man to look up to and follow.

She just has to be his girl.

So, if your girlfriend promised that she would love you forever, you need to stop looking at that as a legitimate promise.

It's just based on how she felt at the time.

If you want to get back, you have to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you who you are now.

When she feels respect and attraction for you again, her thoughts and behavior will change and she will open back up to you.

So, don't try to get another chance with her because you think she owes you it based on a promise she made when she was in love.

Get her back based on how attracted you make her feel now.

That's how it works with women.

The next mistake to avoid is

3. Seeking pity for how lost and lonely you feel now that she doesn't want to be with you

When a guy feels hopeless and lost about how to get his ex girlfriend back, he might try make her feel sorry for him based on how lonely and sad he is now that she's gone.

For example: He might cry to her over the phone, or in person and say things like, “Canâ€¢t you see that Iâ€¢m lost without you?” or, “My life is a total mess now without you. I can’t function. I can’t concentrate at work. I think I might even get fired. I need you,” send her sad texts, tell her friends or family how devastated her feels without her, or post sad status updates on social media.

Yet, rather than making her think, “I never realized how much he really needs me. Maybe I was too hasty with my decision. Based on his need for me, I should give him one more chance,” she thinks something along the lines of, “This is exactly what I mean when I said he needs to grow up. He’s acting like a little boy who needs me to bail him out of his unhappiness. Well, maybe I took care of him in the relationship, but now. We’ve broken up now and his pity meâ€¢ act has only convinced me that I made the right decision by calling things off. Iâ€¢m now going to focus on finding myself a real man and moving on.”

So, if you truly want to get your girlfriend back, the best approach is to interact with her (over the phone and especially in person) and reactivate her feelings for you by displaying some of the traits that sheâ€¢s been looking for in you in all along (e.g. confidence, emotional maturity, emotional masculinity).

Don’t tell her, “Hey, I’ve changed” and essentially ask, “Can you give me another chance now?” That approach rarely works.

You’ve got to change and then not push for a relationship, so she naturally begins to think, “Hmâ€¢ why do I feel like I want him back all of a sudden? I miss him. Maybe I should give him another chance.”

You then agree when she suggests giving the relationship another chance, so it’s essentially her idea and what she wants.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

We Broke Up Because She Couldn't Commit

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will do that:

1. She wasn't completely attracted to who you were being in the relationship

Sometimes a woman will get into a relationship with a guy because he seems to have some of the qualities and personality traits she is looking for.

For example: At the start of the relationship, he came across as being confident and emotionally masculine.

His confidence and emotional masculinity (i.e. he wasn't an emotional wimp) made her feel positive emotions such as respect, attraction and safety.

She was able to look up to him as her man.

As a result, she may have thought along the lines of, "I think he might be the one for me. He makes me safe when we're together. I love that he's so confident and emotionally strong all the time. It allows me to relax and be a real woman when I'm with him, rather than having to be on my guard all the time and worry about having to take care of him because he doesn't believe in himself, or can't cope with life's challenges. Maybe will get married and start a family. That would be fun. I love him and he loves me, so it only makes sense that we would go down that path. I'm looking forward to seeing what happens!"

Yet, as the relationship progressed, she began to see that his so-called confidence was just an act to get her into a relationship.

She also began to realize that he only felt confident if she showed him love, attention and affection.

If she started to pull back and not be as loving, attentive or affectionate, he automatically began to feel insecure.

He then asked her things like, "Do you still love me?" or, "Are you still attracted to me?" or, "What's wrong? Do you still want to be with me? Is there someone else? What is going on?"

She also noticed that when he was faced with a big problem (e.g. at work, with family or friends, in their relationship), rather than facing it head on like an emotionally strong man, he usually crumbled under the pressure and struggled to cope.

Naturally, she then began to lose respect for him and started thinking things like, "I really thought he was the one for me, but I see now that his outer persona that he showed me at the start isn't who he really is deep down. I honestly didn't see this side of him when I met him, or else I would never have gotten myself involved with him. He's now trying to make the relationship even more serious and committed, but I don't want that. Committing myself to him more would be such a big mistake because he's not a truly confident man that I can rely on. So, I need to break up with him now, before things go too far and we both end up getting hurt."

She then breaks up with him and focuses on moving on by finding new guy who really is what he appears to be (e.g. confident, emotionally mature, emotionally masculine), rather than continuing a relationship with a guy that she can't fully respect, feel attracted to and love.

Another possible reason why your ex wouldn't commit isâ€¦!

2. She only ever wanted casual sex

Sometimes, a man and a woman will want very different things from a relationship.

For example: While a guy is busy falling in love with his girlfriend, imagining a great future together and thinking things like, *â€œShe's the one for me. I can see us being together for life,*â€¦ he fails to realize that her feelings and relationship goals are very different.

Even though she cares for him and enjoys his company, she's not interested in taking on the role of being a more serious girlfriend, fianc  or wife to him.

Instead, she's secretly thinking, *â€œI enjoy being in a relationship with a guy that I'm not emotionally attached to. That way, I can break up with him whenever I want and I won't be broken hearted. I enjoy having him around for sex, going out together and having fun, but I don't want anything more than that. If he can't sense that, it's not my fault. I've given him plenty of signs to show it.*â€¦

Of course, not every guy is experienced enough with women and relationships to be able to pick up on those signs.

So, if he misses the signs and keeps saying things like, *â€œWell, we've been dating for a long time now, so I think we should consider moving in together*â€¦ or, *â€œI love you with all of my heart. I really think we should get married. Will you please consider it?*â€¦ or, *â€œI can't wait to start a family with you. Our children will be so beautiful if they get your looks. Do you want a boy or a girl to start with?*â€¦ she will usually decide to break up with him, rather than committing to him any further.

Another possible reason why your ex wouldn't commit isâ€¦!

3. She was intending on using you as a rebound

Sometimes a woman will come out of a serious relationship with a guy and immediately get into another relationship to help her from missing her ex, or feeling brokenhearted.

Yet, in most cases, the rebound relationship is not with a guy that she perceives as being her ideal man.

Instead, he is usually the kind of guy who displays personality traits and behaviors that are the opposite of her ex.

For example: If a woman's ex was very confident in his attractiveness to women and it caused him to have a wandering eye, her rebound guy is more likely to be a bit insecure and clingy, so she can feel safe that he won't want to cheat on her.

She might justify her decision to date a guy who lacks confidence in himself by thinking, *â€œAt least I know that he won't be looking at other women while he's with me. He will be loyal and will even feel lucky to have me, so he will always put me first in his life and treat me like a princess. I need that now after the way my ex hurt me. I need to be loved and cherished.*â€¦

Yet, a guy who feels lucky to be with her and essentially lets her get her way all the time, isn't what she really wants.

If she's going to commit to a man for life, he will need to be very confident, as well as being the kind of guy who truly loves her, cherishes her and wouldn't want to cheat on her.

So, if her new guy (the rebound) starts talking about moving in together, getting engaged or having children, she will want to break up with him because she knows that he's not the right man for her due to his insecurity and lack of skill when it comes to being able to make her feel attracted (e.g. he's too nice and gentle with her, but she likes a man who is more assertive, while also being a good man).

By the way!

If the rebound guy realizes his mistake (e.g. that he wasn't confident and emotionally strong enough for her, he was too soft) and quickly makes some adjustments to the way he interacts with her, he can easily get her back.

She will be impressed and shocked (in a good way) that he is now able to make her feel attracted in the ways that truly matter to her, which will then make her regret breaking up with him.

Another possible reason why your ex wouldn't commit is!

4. You weren't able to make her fall in love with you

Sometimes a woman will get into a relationship with a guy that she isn't truly attracted to, but will hope that he will be able to make her fall in love with him over time.

She thinks, "He's really sweet and I like how he makes me feel when we're together, but I don't really feel strong sexual and romantic feelings for him yet. To be honest, I see him more as a friend than a boyfriend at the moment. Maybe because he's too nice to me, or is just too neutral like a friend." I don't know, but that's what I'm feeling about him now. I'm willing to give the relationship a shot and see where it leads to. Maybe over time I will grow to love him more. Maybe this is how a relationship is supposed to be. I don't know, but I'm willing to give it a try."

She will then stick with him in the hope that she ends up loving him, as much as he loves her.

Yet, she never does.

Something is always missing and even though he's nice to her, she just doesn't feel like he is the one. Why?

In most cases, it will be because the guy was too nice, too gentle, too sweet or too neutral.

I explain that and give examples in this video!

Here's the thing!

Although there's nothing wrong with being a good man and treating a woman well in a relationship, if a guy goes overboard (e.g. lets her get away with bad behavior, bends over backwards to accommodate her wants and desires to the detriment of his own), she won't be able to fully respect him.

If a woman can't respect a guy, she won't feel attracted to him and then it becomes almost impossible for her to fall in love with him and want to commit to him.

Then, regardless of how good the relationship seemed to be (e.g. they never really fought, they got along well), she breaks up with him.

The guy is then left thinking, "What happened? I thought everything was fine! What the heck do women want?"

Unfortunately, he just isn't aware that getting along isn't the ultimate recipe for success in a romantic, sexual relationship with a woman.

There has to be a real spark between him and her, rather than it only being him who is truly attracted to her and in love with her.

Making a woman feel that way doesn't happen by just being good to her.

There's more to it than that.

By the wayâ€¦

This doesn't mean that a woman wants a man who treats her badly.

Instead, she just wants a good man who doesn't suck up to her all the time and place her above him in terms of value and importance.

She wants a good man who makes her feel as though she needs to impress him and live up to his standards, rather than her being the leader of the relationship.

This doesn't mean that a woman wants a man who puts her down and orders her around.

Instead, it means that a woman wants a guy who has standards and expects a woman to live up to them, while at the same time, treating her well, making her feel loved and enjoying a happy relationship together.

It's not about telling a woman that she isn't good enough and expecting her to do everything for you.

Instead, it's about letting her get the sense that, if she doesn't be a great girlfriend to you, then you could lose interest in her and dump her.

As a result, she wants to be a great girlfriend to you, so she can hopefully get you to commit to her.

Another possible reason why your ex wouldn't commit isâ€¦

5. She didn't like the relationship dynamic

Women are attracted to men who have the confidence, emotional strength and emotional masculinity to take the lead and do whatever is needed to make her feel protected and safe in the relationship with him, as well as in life in general.

So, when a man lets his girlfriend make all the decisions, falls apart when she's creating drama and cries to her like a woman or a child when things get tough, she instinctively starts to lose respect and attraction for him.

She might not consciously think, â€œHmmâ€¦ I don't want to be in a relationship with him anymore, because I don't feel safe with him,â€ but she will feel it.

Her instincts will kick in and she will start thinking things like, â€œSomething just doesn't seem right. I don't feel attracted to him anymore. I don't know what changed about him, but I don't like it. He's not the kind of man that I can settle down and feel safe with. I think he still has a lot of growing up to do.â€

She will then break up with him, rather than committing to a guy who seems like he will get worse as times goes on (e.g. he'll become more insecure, more fragile, more needy).

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Back Who Couldn't Commit

To get your ex back and make her want to commit, you need to use the right approach from now on. The right approach is to focus on re-attracting her and making her want you, without you actually pushing for a relationship.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't ever learn that, so they end up making one or more of the following mistakes!

1. Believing that the break up was about her fear of commitment

When a guy gets dumped by a woman who couldn't commit, he will often assume that it's because she has commitment issues.

Yet, in most cases, it's not about that at all.

In fact, most women want to commit and get onto the next levels of a relationship with a guy, even though they might not openly admit it.

Most women hate being left behind by their girlfriends who are getting engaged or married, or being the single sister when her siblings are happy in relationships, or being the single girl at work when everyone else is happy in a relationship or married.

Of course, in some cases, a woman does have commitment issues, but here's the reality of the situation.

If a woman with commitment issues meets a man who causes her to feel a tremendous amount of respect, attraction and love (much more than she's ever experienced before) she isn't going to have commitment issues.

She is going to want to be with him and only him.

This applies even if she is married and has been sleeping with a guy on the side.

If the guy on the side makes her feel more respect, attraction and love for her husband (that she is likely no longer in love with anyway), she will want to get a divorce to be with her new guy.

Likewise, if a woman has a boyfriend and is cheating on him with a new guy, she will leave her boyfriend and commit to the new guy if her feelings for him are much stronger.

So, when a woman doesn't want to commit to a guy, it's almost always because she's just not very attracted to him or in love with him.

He can change her mind by making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him and by attracting her in new and more appealing ways, but only if he changes his approach to her.

One the biggest mistakes that guys make when trying to get a woman back who couldn't commit, is that they use the same old approach to attraction that she wasn't interested in anymore to try to get her back.

As a result, she isn't inspired to give him another chance and keeps rejecting his attempts to get her back.

The next mistake is!

2. Telling her that he will wait for her no matter how long it takes

Waiting for her isn't the answer.

If your ex isn't attracted to you anymore, she's probably going to keep feeling that way about you and just fall in love with a new man instead.

Unfortunately, many guys don't realize that and end up saying something like this to the woman who is breaking up with them, â€œI just want you to know that itâ€™s okay if you donâ€™t want to commit to me right now. I love you more than anything in life and I am willing to give you as much space as you need. I donâ€™t want you to feel pressured. Take all the time you need and when you feel ready to take our relationship to the next level, I will be right here waiting for you because I canâ€™t live without you. You are the woman I love. I've loved a woman as much as I love you. I will wait for 40 years if I have to. You are the only woman I want.â€

He hopes that his ex will feel flattered and be impressed about how dedicated he is to her.

She will then come to her senses and they can then start over, get married and live happily ever after.

Yet, that's rarely how it plays out.

In most cases, a woman will feel turned off by what she perceives as her ex's lack of emotional independence (i.e. he can't be happy and fulfilled in life without her) and his inability to move on (i.e. he can't attract another quality woman like her because he got lucky with her and is now stuck on his own).

So, instead of running back to him if he waits for months or years, she just moves on.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

3. Writing a long love letter or e-mail to her

As romantic as it may seem, writing a love letter (or e-mail) to an ex woman to tell her how much you still love her and want her back in your life, almost never changes her mind about being broken up.

Why?

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings for a guy, how much he loves her, misses her and wants her back just doesn't matter to her anymore.

Additionally, she also feels annoyed that he's going on and on about his feelings, while also trying to suck up to her by saying sweet things that he hopes will trick her into thinking she still loves him.

Yet, she doesn't love him anymore, so it doesn't work.

She sees his letter or email as being a soppy, out of place, ineffective, lost way to try to get her back.

As a result, she loses even more respect for him.

So, what should you do instead?

Don't try to be sweet and romantic if she doesn't have sexual or romantic feelings for you anymore.

Women only appreciate romance from men that they feel sexually and romantically attracted to.

So, the first step is to re-attract her, not be sweet and romantic by declaring your undying love for her, or trying to woo her with sweet words about love, soul mates or anything like that.

Another mistake that guys often make when in a situation like yours isâ€¦!

4. Trying to convince her that he would never break her heart and would always want to be with her, so she has nothing to worry about

Sometimes a guy will try to convince his ex to give him another chance by saying, â€œYou have nothing to worry about if you commit to me. Maybe some other guy broke your heart in the past and thatâ€™s why youâ€™re afraid to commit to me, but I would never do that to you. I promise that I will always treat you like a princess. Youâ€™re the one for me and I would never do anything to hurt you or betray your trust. I promise. Please believe me. I am willing to take things slow if you want, but you have to believe me that I would never break your heart. I want you and only you.â€

It sounds great, right?

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

When a woman wonâ€™t commit to a guy, itâ€™s usually not because sheâ€™s worried about getting her heart broken.

Instead, itâ€™s usually because deep down, she feels as though the guy just doesnâ€™t know how to make her feel attracted in the ways that really matter to her.

Heâ€™s promising to never break her heart, but sheâ€™s thinking, â€œYeah, but Iâ€™ll break your heart because I will definitely break up with you in a couple of years, or maybe sooner. So, Iâ€™m going to break up with you now, rather than wasting my time or your time.â€

Nothing that he can say will change her mind.

The only thing that will change her mind is if he uses a different approach to attraction that changes how she feels.

That is what works.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Should I Tell My Ex That I'm Getting Help to Work On My Issues?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

No.

Don't tell your ex that you're getting help to work on your issues and problems, because she doesn't want to hear about it.

Why?

Women don't want to be in a position where they effectively have to say, "Good boy" or, "Good on you. I'm proud of you."

It makes them feel like a mother figure or like a big sister in your life, which turns her off even more.

Women don't feel sexually attracted to the idea of being a mother figure to their man.

It's not sexy or attractive, so if you tell your ex that you're getting help to improve yourself and deal with your issues, it will simply make her feel more certain about wanting to move on without you.

Here's what you should do instead:

1. Just get the help, change quickly and get her back

If you're going to get help to fix your issues, just do it.

You don't need her to be patting you on the back and telling you that you're a good man for doing it.

Likewise, she's not going to be impressed about being reminded of the fact that you're trying to overcome issues (that other men don't experience) so you can possibly be man enough for her.

So, rather than telling her, just quickly learn from your past mistakes and get on with being the kind of man that she can naturally look up to and respect from now on.

For example: If one of your issues was being unable to control your anger and were always losing your temper, shouting, causing a scene or being overly jealous and controlling in the relationship, then focus on quickly fixing that.

Learn how to be more in control of your emotions (e.g. by realizing that there are more effective ways to respond to an annoying situation, such as using humor to diffuse it or walking away and discussing it when you are calmer) and start being the confident, emotionally mature man she always wanted you to be.

Here's a video of mine with an example!

Another example is if you had trust issues, resulting in you being emotionally closed off towards your ex (e.g. you never fully opened up to her, you were cold and distant towards her even in the relationship, you were unwilling to commit to her, you were holding onto things that hurt you in the past and bringing it into the relationship with her).

To begin getting past that issue, you need to understand that in a relationship, you have to be able to fully trust your woman without question.

If you can offer her that trust, the love between you and her will grow stronger, closer and more intertwined over time.

You will literally become inseparable.

So, even though you might feel as though you have good reasons for being emotionally closed off or insecure (e.g. youâ€¢ve been cheated on or hurt by other women before, you weren't loved as a child, you were abandoned, you were betrayed by a close friend or by an ex girlfriend), you have to be able to let go of the past because the past isn't her fault.

You need to let go of the past and allow yourself to fully trust her, so you can both fully open up to each other and experience true love that lasts a lifetime.

Fully opening up doesnâ€¢t mean that you now become wimpy and start pouring your heart out to her like a woman or a little boy would to a counselor.

Instead, it simply means that this time around, you are able to open up and discuss your feelings with her in a calm, rational and composed way like a man would (i.e. be sincere, get to the point and feel it, but don't be soppy or wimpy about it).

So, regardless of your past issues, just focus on quickly making some changes and adjustments and then let her experience the new you via the way you now talk, act, think, behave and react to her.

Show her (don't tell her) that you now have the ability to be the man she always wanted you to be (e.g. more emotionally available to her, less volatile, more emotionally mature).

When she sees that you really have changed (without needing her help or support and without needing to discuss it with her), she will automatically begin to feel respect for you again because you are your own man.

When she respects you and sees you as your own man, she will also start to feel sexually attracted to you again.

When that happens, it will then become a lot easier for her to reconnect with her feelings of love for you and want to give the relationship another try.

You can then guide her back into a relationship with you that is better and stronger than it was before.

2. Don't burden her with your struggles or the obstacles you are overcoming on your journey to become a better man

[image: Don't burden her with your struggles]

Who else is there to turn to during a difficult time in your life, other than the woman you love?

Itâ€¢s fine to turn to her when you and her are in love and are enjoying a close relationship, but not when youâ€¢ve broken up.

So, even though you are currently facing one of the biggest challenges of your life (i.e. overcoming your issues and preparing to re-attract her and get her back), you actually have to get through it without the help of your ex.

Why?

A woman just wants to be in love, rather than trying hard to make a relationship work with a guy who doesnâ€¢t yet understand how to be the man she needs.

So, if a guy discusses his struggles to become a better man with his ex woman, she isn't going to enjoy being seen as his support system.

For example: A guy might say something like, â€¢This is really difficult for me. I've been dealing with these issues all my life, so it's not easy to just overcome them, but I've been learning. I've been getting help online and I've been thinking about going to a therapist. I'm glad that I still have you to talk to as well. You've always been there for me. I am determined to fix my issues this time and get us back together."

Yet, rather than make her think, "Wow! Iâm so impressed that he's getting help to work on his issues. He also needs my guidance and support to get through it, which is so cute. I feel so flattered that heâs turning to me for support and guidance through this difficult time," she will probably feel annoyed that he's still trying to be the kind of man she wants, even after all this time.

If she has recently been flirting with new men and noticed that they don't have the issues her ex has, she is going to feel as though her ex is holding her back.

She will begin to see her ex as a guy who needs a lot of work and she probably won't feel the motivation to want to help him through that and stick around long enough for him to be 'normal'.

She may then begin to think, "Even now after we've broken up, he still expects me to be there for him and give him guidance and support. Iâm tired of trying to help him grow up and be a man. I just want a man who is already a man and has grown out of his childhood issues. I want a man that I can look up to and depend on to be strong on his own, so I can then relax and feel safe in the knowledge that heâs in the lead and taking care of both of us, rather than me taking care of him."

As a result, she might then decide to cut off contact with her ex and try to move on, or keep the lines of communication open and secretly begin moving on behind his back.

So, if you want to get your ex back, the best approach is to just get on with fixing your issues and using interactions with her as a way of making her feel surges of respect and attraction for you again. Keep your struggles to yourself and focus on making her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you again, rather than weighing her down with your issues.

When you can show her that youâre a different man now, (rather than trying to discuss every step of your difficult journey with her), she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you again, whether she likes it or not.

Even if she initially pretends that the new you doesnât impress her, deep down she will be feeling surges of respect for you for becoming a better man.

She will then begin to open back up to getting back with you and seeing how it goes.

3. Don't talk about your issues with her, unless you are able to look back and laugh about them

Once you have gotten help, worked on your issues and improved, thereâs no reason why you ever need to talk about it with your ex.

That's who you used to be.

Let the old you go and start being the new you.

You have changed.

Embrace the new you and let her experience that and only that from now on.

So, if you ever find yourself in a conversation with your ex and she tries to push your buttons by bringing up your past mistakes, rather than getting upset about it and possibly saying things like, â€œNo! No! You donâ€™t understand. Iâ€™m not like that anymore. Iâ€™ve been working on my issues and Iâ€™ve changed. Just give me a chance to show you,â€ a better way to react, is to laugh at yourself and say something along the lines of, â€œHa ha! Yes, I did do that before, didnâ€™t I? I was so childish/immature/out of control. I canâ€™t believe that was me. No wonder you broke up with me. I would have done the same thing if I was in your place. Fortunately though, Iâ€™m not that guy anymore. The old me is like the black sheep in the family that we no longer talk about. He has been outcast. He is no longer part of the flockâ€ and have a laugh with her about it. By laughing at yourself, it shows her that you really have changed and are no longer the same guy she broke up with.

You have learned from the experience and have already taken steps to become a better, more emotionally strong and mature man, without ever needing her help or leaning on her to discuss it and get a pat on the back.

As a result, she doesnâ€™t have to keep her defenses up when sheâ€™s around you anymore because you clearly are more of a man now.

She can now relax, laugh, smile and feel good being in your presence again, rather than having to always feel like you need help and she needs to be there for you.

When she can relax around you, she begins to forgive your past mistakes and wants to give the relationship another chance.

4. Focus on making her have feelings for you, not on talking about your struggles

Although working on your issues might be quite a struggle for you, itâ€™s not something that you need to share with your ex.

If you tell her that youâ€™re getting help (e.g. therapy, counseling, learning from an online guru like me) it might cause her to think something like, â€œWellâ€¦even though heâ€™s getting help to work on his issues, I just donâ€™t think I want to be with a guy who is so messed up. Itâ€™s probably better if I just move on and find another guy who is emotionally stable and together.â€

This is why you should just focus on reawakening her feelings of respect and attraction for you, by talking and behaving in ways that are sexually and romantically attractive to her.

For example: When you interact with your ex from now on, show her that you areâ€¦!

- Confident, emotionally strong and self-assured, rather than insecure and self-doubting.
- Emotionally masculine and dominant, rather than timid, hesitant, submissive or docile around her.
- Emotionally independent and focused on making your goals and dreams in life a reality, rather than living your life for her or needing her to reassure you that the future will be okay because she will always be there for you.
- Capable of making her laugh, smile and feel relaxed around you, rather than making her feel bored, annoyed, irritated or uncomfortable with you.
- Emotionally masculine in ways that make her feel feminine and girly in your presence, rather than making her feel like a neutral friend or big sister to you.

Remember: How you make your ex feel is the most important part of getting her back.

Getting her back is largely about making her have positive feelings for you again (e.g. respect, attraction, love), rather than trying to talk her into giving you another chance.

How she feels about you now and from now on is what counts.

So, stick to reawakening her feelings when you interact with her and keep your struggles to yourself.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Back

1. Thinking that a woman will be impressed that he is getting help and want him back because of that

Sometimes a guy will get help to work on his issues, solely for the purpose of impressing his ex enough to give him another chance.

Essentially, he will hope that she might say something along the lines of, â€œWow! Youâ€™re really taking this break up so seriously, aren't you? Good on you! Iâ€™m so flattered that you love me enough to get help and become a better man. So, based on your commitment to improve, Iâ€™m willing to give you another chance right away. Letâ€™s do it! Letâ€™s get back together again right now!â€

Yet, in most cases, the opposite happens because a woman doesn't want to feel as though her ex is doing everything just to get her back.

If she gets that sense, she begins to worry that his efforts are fake and that he doesn't even want to change, but is doing it out of the fear of losing her.

He doesn't really want to become a better man; he just wants to avoid being dumped.

As a result, he isn't his own man.

He is reacting and living his life based on what she has decided.

He is following her lead and trying to live up to her expectations, just so he doesn't get dumped and left behind.

Therefore, she feels more like a mentor, a mother figure or a big sister to him and as though he is trying to grow up under her leadership and direction.

That does not make a woman feel sexually attracted and turned on.

Feeling like a mother figure literally shuts down her ability to feel sexually attracted to him and when that happens, a boyfriend/girlfriend relationship no longer seems appealing.

So, rather than be impressed by the fact that he is seeking help, a woman begins to think things like, â€œWhy is he telling me that he's getting help? Does he want a pat on the back for doing what he should already have done long ago? Well, Iâ€™m not impressed. In fact, all heâ€™s doing is highlighting to me that he still doesn't know how to be the man that I want him to be. He's proving to me that I made the right decision to break up with him. He's not man enough for a woman like me. Maybe he will be man enough for another woman, but not me. I refuse to keep waiting around for him to grow up and be the kind of man that I want. There are millions of men out there who are way more mature and emotionally secure than him. I'm going to fall in love with a man like that instead. I'm not going to stick around and help my ex any longer. It's time for me to start putting myself first.â€

She then closes herself off from her ex and begins flirting with new men, having sex and falling in love.

So, if you're getting help to work on your issues, just keep it to yourself and use interactions with your ex to re-attract her and seduce her sexually.

Don't get into big discussions about issues.

Instead, get to a hug, kiss and have sex with her after fully re-attracting her based on your changes and how great it makes her feel (e.g. you're so much more confident now and she feels attracted to you in a way she has never felt before).

When that happens, you will naturally begin to get back together.

Another mistake to avoid is!

2. Not realizing that most women want a ready-made man, or a man who can continue becoming a better man without the need for her help, support or guidance

A guy might say something along the lines of, I'm getting help to work on my issues. So, just tell me what you think I need to focus on most and I'll do it. I am willing to do whatever it takes to be the man you want. Please just tell me how I'm doing and what else I need to improve.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that she doesn't want to take on the responsibility for his development as a man.

She wants him to get the help if he wants or needs it, but not tell her about it or ask for her input.

She wants him to figure out how to be the kind of man that she wants and then start being that man, without needing to discuss it with her.

If he needs to discuss it with her, it takes the romance out of it and she feels as though he's putting on an act to impress her.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Making the idea of having a relationship with him seem stressful

If a relationship feels like it will be too much hard work for her (e.g. because the guy has so many issues and problems that he needs to work hard at overcoming), a woman will usually opt to just remain broken up.

Rather than getting back with a guy and having to deal with him constantly relapsing into old patterns of negative behavior (e.g. insecurity, jealousy, lying, having anxiety attacks), she will try to just find herself a man who already has it together.

This is why you need to have already changed and improved before you interact with your ex.

Don't wait too long to do that though.

You need to get help to rapidly change and improve over the next few days to a week.

Then, you need to interact with her and let her experience the new and improved you, without trying to discuss what you've been through with her.

Just allow her to feel attracted to how confident, charismatic, easy-going, positive and assertive you are now.

You are a completely new man and she now feels completely different about you.

She feels drawn to you in new and interesting ways and wants to explore her new feelings for you, rather than walk away and regret losing you.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

4. Not realizing that every great man has overcome issues in his life

Even though you made some mistakes in the relationship or in life, thereâ€™s no reason for you to feel alone about that.

Every man makes mistakes and learns from those mistakes in one way or another.

No man is perfect from birth until death.

Every man makes mistakes, but what separates the great men from the losers of life, is that the great men learn always from their mistakes and continually become a better man throughout life.

The losers of life make mistakes and remain stuck at that level for years or decades.

That's not you.

You are a great man you learn from his mistakes and continues to become an even better man throughout life.

You are someone that others can look up to because you're always improving and becoming a better man.

Right?

If not, start now.

Change and improve quickly (within the next few days to a week) and then interact with her, re-attract her and get her back.

Today is the day that you change your life forever.

Today is the day that you become the man you always knew you could be.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 Second Chance Relationship Stories

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

There is almost always a way to get a second chance with a woman who had broken up with you.

Unfortunately, a lot of men just don't know it and end up losing their woman as a result.

Some guys believe that when a woman says something like, It's over. I don't have feelings for you anymore, it means that her decision is final and that getting her back will be very difficult, if not impossible.

Yet, here's the thing:

A woman's feelings can change and in many cases, they can change very quickly.

So, here are 3 second chance relationship stories to help you understand how smart men get their ex woman back after a break up:

1. Second chance relationship story: He got her back after re-attracting her right away

A guy got broken up by his woman, but rather than sit around feeling sorry for himself and think negative thoughts like, I can't believe it's over. I've lost the woman I love and I will probably never get another chance with her. It's hopeless to even try. I give up, he decided to figure out how to re-attract her and get her back.

To begin with, he made sure to avoid all the common mistakes that most guys make when trying to get another chance with an ex woman.

For example: He didn't:

- Beg and plead with her to reconsider her decision.
- Promise her that he would do whatever she wanted if he got another chance.
- Try to make her pity him for the emotional pain he is feeling.
- Tell her that he can't live without her.
- Send her flowers and gifts to apologize for what happened.
- Ask her what she needs in the relationship to feel happy again.

Why didn't he do any of those things?

He knew that rather than convince his ex to give him another chance, that kind of behavior would only make her disconnect from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him even more.

She would feel turned off by what she perceived as his emotional weakness and insecurity and she would work harder to fully get over him and move on.

So, what did he do instead?

He got clear on some of the deeper reasons why his ex broke up with him (e.g. The confidence she was attracted to him when they first fell in love had turned into insecurity. He spent too much time trying to please her rather than getting her to be a good woman for him, so she felt like she could walk all over him. He became too boring and predictable and expected her to be happy to be stuck in a go-nowhere-fast routine for the rest of their lives together).

After figuring out what really turned her off, he thought about how he could change that and make her regret leaving him.

He then got her on a phone call and used some humor to make her feel happy and relaxed to be talking to him again.

He then built on her feelings of respect and attraction as he talked to her, to the point where she didn't seem to want the conversation to end.

He then said something along the lines of, â€œHey, it was great chatting with you, but I have some work I need to get to right now. Yet, I think we still have some catching up to do. So, let's meet up later today or tomorrow and finish our conversation. I will be available from about 4 p.m. today and I'll have an hour or two free tomorrow morning. What suits you best? Today at 4pm, or tomorrow morning?â€

She then agreed to meet up with him because she secretly wanted to see for herself if he'd really changed, or if it was all an act or only something he could do on a phone call.

At the meet up, he continued to say and do the things that proved to her he was a new and improved man (e.g. he maintained his confidence with her when she was being stand-offish towards him, he used humor to relax the mood, he brought out her feminine, girly side by being emotionally masculine around her).

She then realized that he really had changed in some of the ways that really mattered to her.

As a result, she naturally felt respect and attraction for him and decided to give him a second chance.

2. Second chance relationship story: He gave her a week of space and then began re-attracting her

After a big fight, a woman broke up with her man by saying, â€œThis isn't working out anymore! I need some time alone to figure things out and see if I still have feelings for you. Please just leave me alone. Goodbye.â€

Then, rather than trying to stop her from leaving (e.g. by begging and pleading, trying to discuss the relationship), he maintained his composure and said something along the lines of, â€œOkay, if that's how you feel, I respect your decision. I love you and want to be with you, but I accept your decision. I wish you the best of luck. Goodbye.â€

By responding in that way, he automatically planted seeds of doubt in her mind about her decision to break up the relationship.

From there, he cut off all contact with her for a week, giving her enough time to calm down and start missing him.

In the meantime, he used the week apart to learn new ways to re-attract her.

To fully prepare himself, he asked himself these questionsâ€

- Am I the kind of man that she can look up to and respect, or does she feel like I'm not living up to my full potential as a man (e.g. because I don't have any big goals or dreams that I'm working towards achieving, I don't have a purpose in my life, I'm too reckless and impetuous, I tend to put her down and criticize her too much, I tend to lose confidence and go into my shell in social situations)?
- Do I make her feel the way a woman wants to feel in a relationship with a man (e.g. feminine, girly and sexually desirable), or does she need to wear the pants in the relationship because Iâ€™m too insecure or emotionally wimpy?

- Does she feel lucky to be with me, or does she feel like she can do better?
- Do I believe in my attractiveness and value to her, or do I secretly believe that I got lucky and I will never be able to get another woman who is as good as her?

By asking himself questions like that, he was able to zone in on what he really needed to change to re-attract her.

Then, after a week of space, he called his ex on the phone and re-attracted her based on the changes he knew would impress her, or at least get her to drop her guard a little.

Initially, she tried to test him by pretending to be annoyed with him for calling her.

Yet, rather than feeling anxious, insecure and beginning to doubt himself, he remain calm and used humor to ease the tension between them.

He then asked her to catch up with him and say hi as friends and she said, â€œYes.â€

At the meet up, he made her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

As a result, she began to think, â€œMaybe I made the wrong decision by breaking up with him. At the time, I believed it was impossible for him to change how I felt, but he has proven me wrong. I actually like being around him now. It feels good to be talking to him. I want to hug him. I want to get back together again.â€

Then, once he sensed that her guard was down and she was opening back up to him, he asked her to get back together again and she agreed.

3. Second chance relationship story: He made her jealous by moving on without her

After breaking up with his woman, a guy decided that although he truly wanted her back, he doesnâ€™t need her back to feel happy and fulfilled in his life.

So, rather than sitting around waiting for her to contact him and work things out, he began to enjoy his life without her.

For example: Heâ€™

- Started to focus on his big goals in life and made progress towards achieving them.
- Began going out to clubs and bars with his single friends.
- Began hanging out and having fun with other attractive women.
- Started to spend more time doing things that he had neglected while in a relationship with her (e.g. play a sport, travel, pursue an old hobby).

Some of his friends were shocked and said things like, â€œIf she sees you moving on, she might believe that you donâ€™t love her anymore. Are you sure you want that to happen?â€

Yet, he knew that even though women wonâ€™t go around admitting it, one of the qualities they find most attractive in a man is emotional independence.

In other words, although he loves her and does want to be with her, he is able to enjoy life, feel confident and move forward with or without her.

Women respect that, but just don't go around admitting it because they worry that other people might take it the wrong way and think that she wants a guy who doesn't care about her.

Yet, what it really means is that women feel respect and attraction for a man who is a good man and loves her, but doesn't need her in his life to be able to function, feel happy and make progress.

So, in this second chance relationship story, the man knew about that secret of female attraction.

Then, to make sure that his ex found out about it, he posted photos of himself on social media having fun with other people and enjoying his life without her.

When she saw him looking confident, happy and having fun without her, she started to feel jealous. She then began to worry about losing him.

So, she sent him a feeler text to test his interest level, â□□Hi. Iâ□□ve been thinking about you. What have you been up to lately? I miss youâ□□ and waited.

He texted back to say, “Hey, how are you? I’m doing well. I’ve missed you at times as well. I’ll give you a call to say hi in about 10 minutes.”

He then called her after 10 minutes, re-sparked some of her feelings of respect and attraction for him (i.e. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be interacting with him again) and got her to agree to meet up with him to say hello as friends.

At the meet up, he continued being confident and charismatic and making her laugh and smile, to the point where she wanted to be back in his arms again.

Then, when the mood was right and her defenses were down, he initiated a hug, then a kiss and from there, they went back to his place, hooked up sexually and got back together.

So, as you can see from those second chance relationship stories, it is possible to get a woman back who has dumped you.

Her words may have sounded final when she said something like, “I no longer have feelings for you. It’s over,” but you can change how she feels.

When you change how she feels, you can then get her back.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get a Second Chance With an Ex Woman

Every day, all over the world, men get a second, third and fourth chance with an ex woman.

It happens all day, every day, all over the world.

You can do it too.

Your success at getting her back all depends on your approach.

So, to ensure that you successfully get her back, be sure to avoid the following mistakesâ□!

1. Asking what she wants you to do, change or improve to get a second chance with her

Most women donâ□□t want to be responsible for shaping their ex into the man that he needs to become.

So, if he asks her something along the lines of, â□□Just tell me what you want me to do to make you happy and Iâ€¦ will do it,â€¦ a woman might come up with some unreasonable request that he has to live up to, in order to get her back (e.g. she will give him another chance if he agrees to give her a month of space).

That way, if he has promised to do whatever she wants, she can request that he give her time to think and during that time, she will make sure that she moves on without him.

Alternatively, a woman might not have the courage to explain what she really needs from a man in a relationship (e.g. she wants him to make her feel girly by being more ballsy and masculine around her), so she makes up some lame excuse why she canâ€¦t be with him anymore (e.g. she has to focus on her studies, she needs some space to find herself, needs time to think, doesn't want to be in a relationship with anyone, is confused and needs time to find out who she is).

This is why, in almost all ex back cases, you have to figure out how to re-attract her without asking her for instructions.

Then, go ahead and do that and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

2. Waiting too long to make a move and get a second chance

After a break up, if a woman's ex doesn't call her or try to get her back, she will usually just use the time to get over him and move on with another guy.

That's how it works in most cases, which is why a guy needs to actively re-attract his ex woman and get her back.

However, in some cases, a woman doesn't want to move on without her ex and secretly hopes that he will contact her.

Yet, if she finds that she's been waiting for many weeks and he still isn't making a move, she will usually decide to just move on.

This is why you shouldn't wait longer than 7 days to start the ex back process with your ex.

If you do wait longer than a week, you might be disappointed to find out that she has already started to move on without you and is possibly dating or even falling in love with a new guy.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Appearing to be desperate and in a hurry when trying to get a second chance

Although taking too long to get an ex back can result in her moving on without you, it doesn't mean that you should do the exact opposite and desperately beg and plead for another chance right away.

If you bombard her with attempts to get her back, (e.g. by calling her daily to stay on her mind, sending her flowers or gifts, writing her poems, love letters and long e-mails explaining how you feel) it can cause her to put up her guard and push you away.

Of course, if your ex is still in love with you and you quickly try to get her back with a romantic gesture, it can work.

Yet, your ex probably isn't still madly in love with you, right?

Pretty much every man who actually needs help to get his ex woman back, is in a situation where the woman has fallen out of love with him and no longer wants to be with him.

That's why, in the majority of ex back cases, you need to be calm, confident and in control to get her back.

You give her 3 to 7 days of space and during that time, you improve your ability to attract her.

You then contact her, re-attract her and make her want you sexually and romantically.

When you approach it in that way, you will naturally get a second chance at a relationship with her.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

4. Trying to get her to give you another chance before reactivating her feelings

If you ask your ex for a second chance before you reactivating her feelings of respect and sexual attraction, chances are high that she will respond with something like, â€œSorry, but Iâ€™m not in love with you anymore. Maybe we can be friends, but I can't commit to anything more than thatâ€ or, â€œPlease stop pushing me for another chance because itâ€™s just not going to happen. You need to accept it and move on. We have broken up, okay? Please just leave me alone now.â€

Why will she respond in that way?

Simple.

Her ex still feelings for her, but she doesn't have feelings for him.

He hasn't even reactivated her sexual and romantic feelings and he's already trying to get a second chance at a relationship with her.

The fact is, for a relationship to get back together, the feelings need to be mutual.

It can't be about a guy wanting her back, if she doesn't feel the same way about him.

If you try to get your ex back without reawakening her feelings of respect and attraction for you, then you're going to be making the ex back process more difficult than it needs to be.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Know if She Still Loves You After a Breakup

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways to know if your ex still loves you after a breakup:

1. She still texts you and sometimes admits that she misses you

If your ex is texts you and sometimes even says things like, â€œI miss you,â€ or â€œIâ€™ve been thinking about you. Sunday afternoonâ€™s are lonely without you now,â€ then thereâ€™s a very good chance that itâ€™s her way of trying to let you know she still has feelings for you.

So, if your ex is giving you signs like that, donâ€™t sit around wondering things like, â€œDoes that mean she still loves me, or is she just saying she misses me to be nice? Should I contact her, or should I wait until she gives me a clear sign that sheâ€™s interested in getting back together?â€

In most cases, even if a woman still has feelings for her ex and wants him back, saying she misses him is about as much as she will reveal.

Women want a man who has the courage to make a move, rather than having to be gently guided all the way by a woman.

If a woman's ex doesn't have the courage to do that, she will try to get over him and move on.

In some cases though, a woman will stay in touch with her ex via text in the hope that he picks up on her signals.

She might even say that she misses him to hopefully boost his confidence and make him take action to get her back.

So, if you want your ex back, you need to take control of the ex back process, rather than waiting for her to hopefully 'be the man' and make it happen.

Another example of how to know if she still loves you after a breakup isâ€

2. She is open to catching up with you

A fairly obvious sign that your ex is still in love with you is when she seems open, or in some cases, even keen to meet up and see you in person.

She might act like she just wants to catch up as friends, but that will almost certainly be her way of trying to protect herself from being rejected by you (e.g. if she shows interest in a relationship and you then say that you don't want that, but are happy to be friends).

Alternatively, to make sure that her ex guy is interested, she will play a little hard to get about meeting up.

For example: If her ex suggests catching up in person, she might say, â€œIâ€™m not sure thatâ€™s a good idea. Give me a few days to think about it, okay?â€ or, â€œOkay, maybe we can meet up sometime next week. Iâ€™ll let you knowâ€ or, â€œI guess we can do that, but I can only spare 15 minutes and then I have to go. I have something else on that day and I'm busy the rest of the week.â€

It really depends on the woman and the dynamic of your relationship.

In some cases, a woman will be openly keen to catch up with her ex and in other cases, she will make it difficult or act as though she is only catching up with him as a friend and has no interest in anything else.

So, regardless of how eager or reserved your ex is being about catching up, you must maintain your confidence and secure an in person meet up with her.

At the meet up, focus on saying and doing the types of things that will revitalize her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you.

When you do that, she will naturally feel drawn to you again and begin to open up to the idea of getting back together.

For example: Some of the ways to do that are byâ€¦!

- Passing her tests (e.g. she pretends that doesn't have feelings for you to see how you react, she is stand-offish towards you at the start, she gives one or two word answers to see if you will get annoyed or lose confidence) by remaining confident in your value and attractiveness to her.
- Being more emotionally masculine than her, so she feels like a feminine woman around you.
- Using humor to dissolve any awkwardness between you and her and make her feel good to be seeing you again.
- Flirting with her to create a sexual vibe and make her then want to release the sexual tension with hugging, kissing and sex.

The more she reconnects with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, the easier it becomes to get her back.

She naturally wants to be back in a relationship with you because it feels so good for her to be around you again.

Another example of how to know if she still loves you after a breakup isâ€¦!

3. She regularly contacts you without you having to contact her first

A woman usually won't make the first move to get a man back after she has dumped him.

So, if your ex is putting in a lot of effort to text, call or send you social media messages without you having to contact her first, it's very likely that she still has feelings for you and loves you.

If that's the case, the texts or contact is her way of opening up the lines of communication with you so and her can get back together.

This is why you need to use the openings she is giving you and arrange to see her in person, where you can fully reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings and get her back.

On the other hand, if you just sit around doubting her feelings for you and thinking negative thoughts like, â€œJust because she texted/called/e-mailed me without any prompting from me, it doesn't mean she still loves me. She's probably just contacting me to see if I'm missing her. Maybe she's just being friendly and if I misinterpret her motives and try to get her back, I will make a fool of myself. It's probably better if I just play it safe and wait for her to tell me that she wants to get back together,â€ then it's possible that she will get fed up with waiting for you and focus on moving on without you.

So, the next time your ex contacts you without you contacting her, take it is a good sign that she loves you, misses you and wants you back.

Then, pick up the phone and call her (don't text her), make her feel attracted, meet up with her in person and get her back.

Another example of how to know if she still loves you after a breakup isâ□|

4. She talks about you and the relationship in a positive way

When a woman hates her ex and never wants to see him again, she usually won't say things like, *â□□ We had some really great times together. I know weâ□□ve broken up, but I still have such positive feelings about you and our relationship. You were a great boyfriend. I really loved you. We had a special relationship. I look back on it fondly.*â□□

Instead, sheâ□□s going to be angry, disappointed and saying negative things every chance she gets, or she's going to cut off contact with him and move on.

So, if your ex is saying positive things about you the relationship, then know that she still has feelings for you.

If that has been happening in your case, what are you going to do about it now?

Are you going to wait for even more proof of her interest, or are you going to guide her back into a relationship with you.

Note: If your ex hasn't been contacting you and talking positively about you and the relationship, don't worry.

95% of guys who get their ex back start off with a situation where the woman is completely over them and doesn't want to get back together.

Then, they do this and get her backâ□|

Another example of how to know if she still loves you after a breakup isâ□|

5. She appears sad, lonely or confused without you in her life

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings for her ex guy, she will usually focus on moving forward with her life by hooking up with a new guy and forgetting all about her ex.

For example: She mightâ□|

- Go out with her single friends to bars, clubs and parties where she can let her hair down, dance, have some fun and hopefully flirt and hook up with a new guy.
- Cut off all contact with her ex and refuse to interact with him in any way.
- Make herself available to the men she knows are interested in her (e.g. at work, through friends, at university, an ex).
- Register on dating sites or use dating apps.
- Go on a singles only vacation, or go to singles parties.
- Post photos of herself on social media having fun with other guys.

So, if the opposite is happening with your ex (e.g. she doesnâ□□t go much or at all, she isn't interested in meeting guys or dating, she posts things on social media about how sad and lonely she feels, how life sucks and how much it hurts to be broken up), chances are high that she still loves you and misses you.

So, go ahead and get her back.

Sheâs waiting for you.

4 Mistakes That a Guy Might Make When He Feels Unsure About His Exâs Feelings For Him

1. Asking if she still loves him, before he has re-attracted her and made her have strong feelings for him again

To get your ex back, you have to focus on re-attracting her first, so she actually has a real interest in getting back with you.

Don't start by asking her if she loves you, if you haven't even made her feel attracted to you again first.

Unfortunately, most guys don't ever find this out until it's too late.

In many cases, a guy simply can't handle the uncertainty of not knowing where he stands with his ex.

So, he will talk to her and say things like, âI think we made a mistake by breaking up. I still love you. Do you love me? If yes, then we can work this outâ or, âI just need to know where I stand and if thereâs a chance of us getting back together again. I love you. Do you love me?â

Yet, rather than getting the simple answer heâs looking for (i.e. âYes, I still love you,â or âNo. Itâs over between us,â) a guy will usually gets an evasive, âI donât know how I feel,â kind of answer, which then leaves him feeling even more confused about how to get her back.

Hereâs the thingâ

Even if a woman still has some feelings for a guy, she will also have some doubts about his worthiness as a boyfriend/husband now that she has dumped him.

So, if he asks her how she feels about him before re-attracting her, she is going to answer based on how she feels (i.e. turned off by him, still wanting to remain broken up).

She might even get a bit annoyed with him for thinking he can get her back without being a better man than he was before.

He wants to get her back now, even though he hasn't even changed the things that turned her off (e.g. his insecurity).

The next mistake to avoid isâ

2. Turning her off by appearing sad or lost without her

Sometimes a guy will struggle to deal with being dumped.

He might go around feeling sad, depressed and then express some of those emotions to anyone who might listen (e.g. friends, family, people on social media).

For example: If he happens to interact with a mutual friend, he might say, âI miss her so much! I feel so lost without her. I just canât let go and move on. It's killing me. I just can't deal with it. I need her back so badly.â

Alternatively, he might use Facebook (or other social media apps like Instagram), to post lonely, sad photos of himself, or messages that say things like, âBreak ups suck! All you do is sit around missing them. Why does it hurt so much?â€œ or, “Takeout and a movie for one is not fun!â€œ or, “Love hurts” or, “Why?” or, “My heart has broken into a million pieces. They say time heals all wounds, but it doesn’t seem like this will ever heal. I miss her.”

Secretly, heâ€™s hoping that when his ex gets wind of how sad and lonely he feels without her, she will be flattered that she still means so much to him.

She will then contact him and want to get back together.

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

It’s fine for a woman to behave like that, but not a man.

Why?

What men and women feel attracted to is completely different.

If a woman appears sad and depressed without her ex guy, it can actually make him feel flattered that she canâ€™t cope without him.

Why?

Men are instinctively programmed to protect vulnerable women.

So, when a woman seems vulnerable and lost without him, his instincts kick in and he wants to protect her and take care of her.

However, the opposite is true for women.

When a guy is being sad and depressed and struggling to cope with a break up, her natural instincts kick in and she starts thinking things like, â€œHeâ€™s such a wimp. If he canâ€™t cope with a breakup, then he probably wonâ€™t be able to cope with the more difficult problems in life. I guess heâ€™s not the man I want him to be after all. I made the right decision to leave him. I’ve got to find myself a real man.â€œ

So, if you want to re-attract your ex, make sure that you donâ€™t turn her off by appearing sad, lonely and helpless without her.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Waiting for crystal clear signs that she loves him before he tries to get her back

Sometimes, a guy might think to himself, â€œMaybe she still loves me, but maybe she doesnâ€™t. I donâ€™t feel sure enough to make a move yet. I think the best thing to do is wait a bit longer for her to give me an obvious sign that she wants a relationship. Then, I will definitely take action to get her back.â€œ

He then sits around waiting for a sign from his ex that she still loves him and wants to be in a relationship, only to be shocked when he finds out that sheâ€™s been moving on without him.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

If you want your ex back, you have to be active about it, rather than being passive.

Start interacting with her (e.g. call her and meet up with her) and make her feel strong surges of respect and sexual attraction for you.

The more sexual and romantic feelings you spark inside of her, the more she will open up and let her real feelings for you show (i.e. that she still loves you and wants to be with you).

On the other hand, if you do nothing about this and just wait, you might end up missing out on the opportunity to get her back.

Talking about that, the next mistake to avoid isâ€¦

4. Waiting so long that she moves on and falls in love with a new man

Even if your ex does still love you, chances are high that sheâ€™s not going to make it completely obvious to you (i.e. by telling you that she loves you and wants to be with you again).

Instead, she will give you hints via what she says or does and wait for you to take the lead in the ex back process and get her back.

For example: She might stay single for a little while to show you that sheâ€™s not moving on.

Alternatively, she might contact you and tell you that she misses you, or even just call to say hi, in the hope that you will see it as a sign she is interested and then guide her back into a relationship.

So, if your ex realizes that no matter what she does to encourage you to get her back, you still arenâ€™t making a move, she will probably force herself to move on and forget about you.

Then, when you finally pluck up the courage to take action, you may get the shock of your life when she says something along the lines of, â€œI really thought you and I could make things work, so I waited for you. Yet, you never did anything, so I gave up and moved on. Iâ€™m sorry, but itâ€™s too late now. Iâ€™m seeing another guy and Iâ€™m really happy. I wish you all the best.â€

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

If you want your ex back, donâ€™t wait too long to get her back.

Confidently contact her right away (even if youâ€™re not 100% sure if she still loves you or not), make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you and then get her to meet up with you.

Then, meet up with her, re-attract her, seduce her into hugging and kissing you and then have sex with her again.

When you get to that point, you and her will naturally get back together.

On the other hand, if you sit around waiting and doing nothing about this, she will probably just move on without you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me After Coming Back From a Holiday

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

In most cases that means she cheated while on holiday.

In other cases it means that she didn't cheat, but realized she wasn't missing you while she was away.

In cases like that, she may have decided to end the relationship and find someone who made her feel more love, respect and attraction.

So, if your girlfriend broke up with you after coming back from a holiday, here are 5 things to ask yourself if you now want to get her back:

1. Did you make her feel intense love for you, or was she only kind of in love?

Sometimes a woman will date a guy and even get into a relationship with him, even though she's not completely attracted to him or in love with him.

If she is hopeful that things will change over time, she will stick with him and look to see if she falls more and more in love with him.

If the guy is able to build on her feelings of respect, attraction and love over time, she will forget about her initial doubts and start seeing him as her ideal man.

On the other hand, if he fails to build on her feelings and ends up turning her off even more (e.g. He feels insecure about losing her, so he becomes being clingy and needy. He lets her make all the decisions in the relationship to please her, but that only makes her lose respect for him for not being man enough for her), she will never truly fall in love with him.

Even if she sticks with him for a few more months, she will be thinking, "This isn't working out. One of these days I'm going to have to break up with him and move on."

She may then tell her girlfriends about and they might suggest going away for a holiday (with them, or on her own) to see if she misses him.

Then, when she goes away on holiday and realizes that she's not thinking about him and she doesn't miss him, she might come to the conclusion that it's best if they break up.

She will then return from her holiday and say something along the lines of, "I've had time to think while I was away and I've decided that I don't want to be in a relationship anymore. I'm sorry, but it's over between us."

[image: Breaking up after she gets back from a vacation]

So, what can a guy do if that's essentially what happened to him?

Well, what you need to understand is that even if your girlfriend never felt strong attraction or love for you before, it doesn't mean that you can't make her feel like that now.

You can.

In fact, when you interact with her from now on and say and do the types of things that make her feel the kind of attraction she always wanted to feel for you, she will begin to look at you in a more positive light.

Even though she may previously have doubted that she could ever fully love you, she will suddenly start imagining what it would be like to stick with you for the long term.

Another question to ask yourself isâ€¦

2. Were you able to make her feel attracted initially, but the spark died out in your relationship over time?

Although most guys will give their woman a lot of attention at the start of a relationship (e.g. compliment her on her appearance, send her romantic texts, take her on romantic dinner dates, be loving and attention), all of that usually fades away once the relationship becomes comfortable.

When a guy gets too comfortable, he might then make the mistake of treating his woman more like his friend, or a roommate than anything else.

As a result, the spark of sexual attraction that was originally there will gradually start to fade away. Why?

Making a woman feel like your friend doesn't make her wet.

What makes her wet is when you make her feel like she's your girl and you're her man.

You always have to maintain the boundary that keeps you and her feeling like a man and a woman who are sexually and romantically attracted to each other, rather than a couple of buddies who love each other.

Being buddies can work for a while, but it doesn't last.

The sexual spark fades away because you no longer look at each other in that way anymore.

You might still have sex and even feel attracted to each other and in love, but it just isn't the same as maintaining the boundary of being romantically attracted lovers, rather than just great friends.

Initially, a woman might say to herself, â€œI know that he loves me and I love him, so let's just see how this goes. Hopefully we won't end up feeling more like friends. It seems to be heading in that direction, but I hope it doesn't.”

Yet, when she notices that nothing is changing and the spark continues to fade away, she may begin to think, *â€œThe spark in our relationship is dead. All we ever do these days is watch TV or go out with friends. He never even notices that I go to the gym to look good for him, or that I always make an effort to wear nice clothes when we're together. There was a time when he couldn't keep his hands off me and would compliment me about how I looked. Now he doesn't even seem to notice. I'm tired of feeling like his roommate. I want to feel like a real woman again. I want to feel sexy and noticed.*â€œ

If the guy picks up on her unhappiness and begins giving her the attention that she is craving, then she will quickly settle back into being his adoring girl.

Yet, if he just lets it slide (e.g. he writes it off as her being a moody woman, thinks that she will be fine about it because they used to be so in love), she will eventually get to the point where sheâ€¦ feels bored and unsatisfied by the relationship.

Then, if she happens to go away on holiday and interacts with other men who make her feel the way she wants to feel (e.g. beautiful, sexy, desirable), it may push her over the edge and convince her to finally break up with him.

So, if your girlfriend broke up with you after coming back from a holiday, it could be because you stopped making her feel like a feminine, girly, sexy woman around you.

Don't worry though.

If you want her back, you can begin to make her feel that way from now on and when you, she will start to feel drawn to you again.

So, make sure that every time you interact with her from now on (e.g. over the phone and especially when you see her in person), you actively trigger her feelings of sexual attraction for you by making her feel sexy and desirable, rather than just being a nice, polite, neutral friend to her.

Some guys worry about doing that because they assume that their ex girlfriend will use it against them (e.g. she will feel like she is too good for him now, or that he is horny and isn't getting any sex now that she has left him).

Yet, you can't worry about those sorts of things.

You've got to do what works to get a woman back.

Women are very different to men, so if you want to get her back, you will usually have to do things that seem like the opposite of what you think might work.

Another question to ask yourself is

3. Do you have a lot of purpose and ambition outside of your relationship with her?

Some guys don't realize that a woman doesn't want to be the most important thing in a man's life.

If they are in a committed, loving relationship, then she will want to be the most important person, but not the most important thing.

So, when a guy puts all of his attention and focus on her and starts neglecting important areas in his life (e.g. he gives up on pursuing his goals and dreams, he quits his hobbies and interests, he cuts off his friends) to spend all his time with her, rather than make her happy, it turns her off and makes her feel frustrated.

In almost all cases, a woman doesn't want to feel responsible for a man's emotional state in a relationship (e.g. he's only happy when he's with her, he's only confident when she reassures him), or to be his main reason for living.

A woman wants her man to be happy, confident and forward moving in life with, or without her support or reassurance.

So, when she finds herself in a relationship with a guy who doesn't have much purpose or direction in life outside of his relationship with her (i.e. he's not following through on achieving his biggest goals, dreams and ambitions), she will inevitably start feeling smothered by his need to cling on to her and hide from the world behind her.

Initially, she might try to encourage him to be more independent, but if he fails to pick up on her hints and continues being needy and clingy, she will begin to cut herself off from him emotionally.

If she goes on a holiday and has a lot of fun being away from him, it may give her the motivation she was looking for to finally break up with him.

So, if you want to get your girlfriend back, you must show her that even though you still care about her and want her back, you don't actually need her back.

When she can see that you're no longer emotionally dependent on her and have become your own man, her guard will come down and she will open herself up to the idea of giving you another chance.

On the other hand, if she gets a sense that youâ€™re falling apart emotionally without her, she will want to stick to her decision about being broken up and then move on.

Another question to ask yourself isâ€”

4. Do you know exactly what you need to change to re-attract her when you next interact with her?

For example: Some of the reasons why a woman might lose respect, attraction and love for her guy include:

- He stopped being the confident man that she initially fell for and became needy, clingy and insecure.
- He started treating her more like a friend than a sexy, desirable woman.
- He wasnâ€™t ballsy enough in the relationship, so she felt more emotionally dominant than him.
- She grew up and matured a lot faster than him, which made her feel as though he was holding her back.
- He wasnâ€™t affectionate enough and she felt neglected by that.
- She felt like she could never truly be herself with him because he was too emotionally sensitive, or too judgmental and critical of her.

Do you know exactly what turned her off?

If yes, have you already changed those things about yourself?

If you havenâ€™t and you interact with her again, sheâ€™s going to pick up on it and probably wonâ€™t want anything to do with you after that.

So, before you contact her, make sure that you are fully ready and prepared to re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship with you.

Another question to ask yourself isâ€”

5. Are you willing to take her back if she cheated while on holiday?

In a relationship, a man and a woman must be able to fully trust each other, or else it simply wonâ€™t last.

So, if your ex cheated on you while she was away on holiday, you need to decide if sheâ€™s worth getting back with, or if youâ€™re just going to cut your losses and find yourself a new woman.

If you decide that you want your girlfriend back, you need to be sure of two very important things.

Firstly, you need to ensure that your reasons for wanting her back are because you know sheâ€™s the one for you and not because you secretly believe that you wonâ€™t be able to find yourself another, even better and more attractive woman than her.

If you are only trying to get her back to avoid being lonely, she will pick up on that and it will turn her off.

Secondly, if you agree to take her back, you have to be able to fully forgive her so you can both move forward with a clean slate.

If you get back with her and keep starting arguments about her potential cheating while she was away, the relationship isn't going to last.

Of course, you can do that if you want to (e.g. if you don't care about keeping the relationship together), but if you want the relationship to work, it's best to start off on a clean slate and not bring up the past again.

3 Mistakes That Guys Often Make When Trying to Get an Ex Woman Back Who Ended the Relationship After Coming Back From a Holiday

1. Angrily accusing her of cheating

It's only natural that when a woman breaks up with a guy after being on holiday, he might start thinking things like, "Why would she do that? I bet she cheated on me. That's the only reasonable explanation that I can think of. After all, we had a perfect relationship before that. I always treated her well, so what happened? She must have gotten drunk and cheated on me."

He might be right, but getting angry with her and accusing her of cheating isn't going to fix things between them.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys can't stop themselves from feeling angry (it's understandable), so they end up exploding at their girlfriend and accusing her of cheating.

For example: A guy might say something like, "Why are you doing this?! Before you left, you said that you loved me and would miss me. Yet, now that you're back, that love you felt for me seems to have vanished and you want to break up all of a sudden. So, let's cut the crap! You cheated on me while you were away, didn't you? Admit it! Be honest with me! Admit that the reason you want to break up is because you're a lying, cheating slut who couldn't be faithful when we were apart! You went on your little holiday and opened your legs like a slut. You cheated on me, didn't you? So, tell me! Was it just one guy, or did you have a whole parade of men going through your bedroom? I can't believe you would do this to me! What kind of person are you? An absolute slut!"

Yet, here's the thing!

Even though a guy might feel 100% justified in feeling angry with his ex, losing his cool and insulting her, isn't going to make her want to give him another chance, especially if he is accusing her of cheating without any proof that anything happened.

Getting angry and accusing her of being slutty and unfaithful will usually only cause a woman to lose even more respect for her ex and she may even start to fear for her well-being.

Then, by the time he has calmed down, he might discover that she has cut him out of her life entirely (e.g. by blocking his phone number, unfriending him on social media, rejecting his attempts to get her to meet up), which simply makes it more difficult to get her back.

It sucks that she might have cheated, but you have to maintain your cool if you want to get her back.

Once you get her back and have sex again (where a condom to be safe, if you want to), you can then ask her if she cheated.

At that point, a woman will be much more likely to admit the truth because she will feel as though you and her are back on good terms after having had sex.

If you find out that she did cheat, you can decide then and there to dump her and move on, or forgive her and start a new relationship off on a clean slate (e.g. you and her write it off as a silly mistake that she made while drunk).

It's really up to you.

You will have to trust your gut instinct in that moment and go with what feels right for you.

Another mistake that guys make when in a situation like yours isâ€¦

2. Pouring his heart out to her and hoping that it makes her change her mind

When a guy's girlfriend is saying things like, â€œIt's over between us, I don't want to be with you anymore,â€ he might decide that the only way to make her change her mind is by telling her how much she still means to him.

He might then say things like, â€œI want you to know that no matter what happened while you were on holiday, it doesn't matter to me. All that can be in the past. We don't have to ever talk about your reasons for wanting to break up with me. What happened over there is what happened. It's done. What matters now is that we stay together. I love you more than anything else in my life and I can't go on without you. Please reconsider your decision and give us a chance. I love you more than anything, so give me a chance. That's all I'm asking for. I promise you won't regret it.â€

Here's the thing thoughâ€¦

If a woman no longer has feelings for a guy, she simply doesn't care about his feelings for her.

Even though he's pouring his heart out to her, she's usually just going to say something like, â€œLook, thank you for being such a nice guy about this, but you have to accept my decision. Even though I know that you love me and would forgive me for anything, I still think it's better for both of us if we go our separate ways. I had time to think while I was away and I know that I don't want to get back with you. So, please, just let me go. It's over.â€

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦

3. Not understanding what she really wants from a relationship with him or any other man

A guy will sometimes offer a woman a type of relationship experience that she's not even interested in.

For example: He might try to be more romantic by sending her flowers and cute cards saying things like, â€œI love you. We can make this work,â€ or â€œLet's start over and build a new future together.â€

If one of the reasons why she dumped him was that he was too much of a soppy romantic and wasn't ballsy and masculine enough around her, she's going to be turned off by his old approach to romance and attraction.

This is why, if you want to get your girlfriend back, you have to get to the core reasons for the break up and begin to fix those things, rather than trying to patch up the relationship by offering her things that she doesn't want or even care about.

If you can't give her the attraction she really wants in a relationship, she will feel motivated to stick to her decision to be broken up.

So, if you want to get her back now, you've got to be willing to use a new approach to attraction.

Don't try to get her back by using the same old approach to attraction that she got bored of in the relationship.

It's time to use a new and unexpected approach that shocks her into wanting to be your woman again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Should I Use the No Contact Rule After a Break Up to Get Her Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends.

In most cases, the No Contact Rule doesn't work because the woman doesn't have enough feelings for her ex to care that he isn't contacting her anymore.

So, here are 5 questions to ask yourself to decide whether or not the No Contact Rule applies to your break up:

1. Does she still have strong feelings for you?

If she doesn't, then she's probably going to care if you don't contact her anymore.

In fact, unless a woman still has strong feelings for her ex and is secretly hoping they can get back together again, not hearing from him for 30 or 60 days will actually be a welcome surprise to her.

She may think something like, â€œPhew! I thought this break up was going to be hard and that he would pester me to give him another chance. Instead, he just disappeared out of my life without me having to turn into a cold, mean bitch to get rid of him. That was easy! Now I can use the time apart to hook up with new guys and get over him.â€œ

Then, if her ex calls her 30 or 60 days later, he might be stunned to find out that she has been enjoying the single life and has met a guy that she is getting serious with.

As a result, not only has he wasted the last 30-60 days of his life worrying and stressing out about his ex potentially moving on, but he has now come to find out that she has moved on.

So, if his confidence had taken a beating from the break up, finding out that she didn't care that he wasn't contacting her, will probably ruin his confidence even more.

This is why, in the majority of ex back situations where a man is trying to get a woman back, he shouldn't use the 30-60 day NC rule.

He should give her 3 to 7 days of space and use that time apart to rapidly improve his ability to attract his ex.

Then, he should contact her, re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship.

That's what needs to be done for the majority of ex back cases where a man has been dumped by a woman who no longer wants to be with him.

Of course, in a situation where a woman does have strong feelings for her ex guy and is secretly missing him and wishing they'd get back together, using the No Contact Rule after a break up can get her back.

When she hasn't heard from him in weeks, she may start to panic and then send him a text, or call him to see what he's up to.

He can then re-attract her and get her back.

However, even in a case like that (i.e. where the woman is still in love with her ex), the NC rule can also backfire.

For example: She might feel hurt that her ex isn't contacting her and then decide to hook up with new guys to move on without him.

She may then meet a new guy that she finds more interesting and attractive and then begin to lose interest in her ex.

So, even if your ex still has strong feelings for you at the moment, there's a much easier and faster way to get her back than using the No Contact Rule.

That way is active re-attraction after giving her 3 to 7 days of space.

When you actively re-attract your ex over the phone and in person, her guard will come down and you can then seduce her back into a relationship with you.

Another question to ask yourself before you use the No Contact Rule to get her back is

2. Is she only trying to gain power over you by breaking up with you, but still secretly wants to be with you?

Sometimes, a woman will be unsure whether or not her guy is the right man for her.

For example: He might be a really nice guy who treats her well and makes her feel valued and taken care of.

Yet, he's also too easily swayed by his feelings for her and as a result, he allows her to get away with bad behavior (e.g. when she creates unnecessary drama, she nit-picks about irrelevant things and he then runs around trying to please her, she makes unreasonable demands that he then fulfills to keep her happy).

So, even though she appreciates that he is a good man to her, she also feels turned off by his inability to stand up to her and be more emotionally masculine than her.

Essentially, she wants him to take back the position of power in the relationship, rather than letting her continue to walk all over him.

She may hint at that by saying things like, "You don't have to do everything I say, you know?" or, "You need to be more confident" or, "Why are you such a wimp at times?" or, "You never stand up for yourself."

If he fails to recognize what she wants him to change, she will eventually get tired of being with such a pushover of a man.

She will break up with him to see if he will man up and stop being such a pushover.

So, if he realizes that he needs to stop being such a wimp with her and starts being more manly and assertive (in a loving, relaxed manner — not in an aggressive, angry way), she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

However, if he fails to man up, she will force herself to begin getting over him and trying to find herself a guy who can be the man in a relationship with her.

So, if you suspect that your ex is secretly testing to see how you will react to the break up, then using the No Contact Rule can help get her back.

However, don't waste time ignoring her for 30 or 60 days to make your point that you're not needy.

What you have to understand is that 7 days of no contact is more than enough time to convince her that you are in control of your emotions and aren't going to come running back to her, pleading and begging for another chance.

So, ignore her for a week and let her begin to worry that you've had enough of her and are going to move on.

During the 7 days apart, focus on having some fun without her (e.g. go out with friends, start a new hobby that involves interacting with other people, do some fun, outdoor activities) and let her find out about it via your social media posts, or through mutual friends.

When she can see that you're not feeling desperate to get her back, she will automatically respect you.

She may not openly admit it, but she will feel it and it will make her feel drawn to you again.

Another question to ask yourself before you use the No Contact Rule to get her back isâ□!

3. Did you turn her off to the point where she lost interest in hugging you, kissing you or having sex with you?

If your ex ended the relationship because the spark between you and her died out, using the No Contact Rule to get her back will probably backfire.

Since she doesn't feel attracted to you anymore, she will most likely use the time apart to hook up with a new man that she finds sexually appealing and attractive.

If they share a great connection, they might just get into a relationship, which then leaves you behind in the dust.

So, what should you do instead?

Rather than cutting off contact and hoping that it makes her come running back to you, even though she's not attracted to you anymore, you should interact with her over the phone and especially in person and rekindle her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

Another question to ask yourself before you use the No Contact Rule to get her back isâ□!

4. Can she easily move on without you, or do you think she will really struggle to find a new guy?

When a woman feels confident in herself and in her attractiveness to men, being ignored by her ex usually isn't a big deal to her because she knows that finding a new guy will be easy for her.

All she has to do is start going to bars or clubs, or put out the word that she's single again and multiple men will flock to her and hope to get a chance with her.

She can then have her pick of men for dates, sex or a relationship, without ever having to worry about the fact that her ex isn't contacting her or trying to get her back.

So, while you're sitting at home waiting for your 30 to 60 days of No Contact to come to an end, she will probably be moving on and feeling great about it.

Of course, if a woman is insecure about her attractiveness and is worried that she won't be able to find another guy to accept her the way her ex does, she might contact her ex if she doesn't hear from him for weeks.

Yet, in most cases, a woman can easily find a new guy for sex or a relationship, so she doesn't have to go running back to a guy that she dumped.

Another question to ask yourself before you use the No Contact Rule to get her back isâ□|

5. How serious was your relationship and how strong was her love for you?

Most relationships start off fairly well, but not all relationships get to the point where both the man and the woman are madly in love with each other.

So, while the relationship might feel good for a while, if it doesn't get better over time and become more serious and loving, a break up will usually end up happening.

A woman might miss her ex after the break up, but if she realizes that their love wasn't strong enough and she really wasn't 100% serious about him, she's not going to come running back to him.

So, if her ex ignores her for 30 or 60 days, she won't really worry because she doesn't see a good future with him anyway.

This is why, in most cases where a guy is trying to get a woman back who dumped him, he should be actively re-attracting her, rather than ignoring her and hoping that it causes her to miss him and want him back.

In some cases, ignoring an ex woman can work (e.g. she can't move on, she can't deal with not hearing from him), but in most cases, the woman just moves on because she's no longer attracted to or in love with her ex.

4 Common Mistakes That Men Make When Using the No Contact Rule

1. Thinking that the No Contact Rule will work on any woman or any relationship

Women aren't all the same.

Each woman is different.

Therefore, it goes without saying that not all women will react in the same way when a guy ignores them after a break up.

For example: A needy, insecure woman is more likely to fall for the No Contact track compared to a confident, independent woman.

Yet, it doesn't always work that way.

Sometimes, a needy, insecure woman will try to make herself feel better by going out with her girlfriends, getting drunk and hooking up with a new guy.

She might really like the new guy, begin falling in love with him, get into a relationship with him and forget all about her ex.

Every woman is different, so you shouldn't just cut off contact and assume that it will work on your ex.

For example: A woman with abandonment issues might come running back to her ex if he ignores her, or she might hate him for doing to her what all the other, unreliable men in her life have done before (e.g. her father left her mother, her ex boyfriend dumped her when she really loved him).

So, as you can see, thereâs no guarantee that using the No Contact Rule after a break up to get her back will actually work in your case.

What does work for pretty much every ex back case, is where a man actively re-attracts his ex woman, so she actually has a reason to get back with him now, or very quickly.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

2. Losing confidence as he waits weeks or months for her to hopefully contact him

One of the biggest risks that a man faces when using the No Contact Rule to get an ex woman back, is that after waiting a long time for her to come back to him, nothing happens.

She doesnât text him to say, âI miss you.â

She doesnât call him to see what heâs up to.

She doesnât even click like on his social media posts.

She just doesnât care.

Naturally, that can have a devastating effect on a manâs confidence.

He may begin to really doubt his attractiveness to his ex and to other quality women.

So, donât waste time using the No Contact Rule and losing your confidence as a result.

If you want her back, believe in yourself and then take action to re-attract her and make it happen now.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

3. Not interacting with her and creating a spark of attraction to interrupt the process of her moving on

As you may have realized by now, sitting around waiting for your ex to change her mind about breaking up with you probably isnât going to work.

On the other hand, if you interact with her and make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again, she will naturally begin to feel drawn to you again.

When you make her feel that way, her guard comes down and you can then guide her back into a relationship with you now.

By approaching it in that way, you are being active about the situation, rather than passive.

You are making her want you back now and then getting her back, rather than doing nothing and hoping that she wants you back, even though sheâs no longer attracted to you or in love with you.

Another mistake that guys often make when in a situation like yours isâ

4. Not improving his ability to attract her the next time he interacts with her

Sometimes, a guy will cut off contact with his ex for 30 to 60 days and then contact her.

Yet, she wonât be impressed or interested because heâs using the same old approach to attraction that got him dumped before (e.g. Heâs too neutral with her, rather than flirting with her and building up sexual tension. Heâs still not more emotionally dominant than her, so she feels as though she can walk all over him. Heâs still insecure and doubts his attractiveness to her, so she feels as though sheâd be doing him a favor by being with him).

As a result, she refuses to give him another chance.

This is why, if you truly want to get your ex back, make sure that you use the time apart to prepare yourself to properly re-attract her.

Don't contact her and offer her the same old attraction experience that she got bored of in the relationship.

Make her feel attracted to you in new and interesting ways, so she feels compelled to give you another chance, or at least meet up with you and sleep with you to see how she feels after that.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Said That I'm Being Annoying

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will say that to her ex guy:

1. He's trying to get her back even though the feelings aren't mutual yet

When a guy gets dumped and he suddenly realizes that he's losing the woman he loves, panic might set in and as a result, he may begin to behave in ways that are seen as annoying by her.

For example: He might

- Repeatedly text, send messages via social media and call her on the phone to say things like, "Please just give me one more chance!" or, "Please don't just end it without at least giving me an opportunity to explain" or, "I love you. Please don't do this. I will do whatever it takes to make it work between you and me. Please just give me a chance."
- Show up at her house or work uninvited and pressure her into having long, stressful conversations about the relationship and break up.
- Send her flowers and gifts to apologize and ask her to give him another chance.
- Ask her friends or family to help convince her to reconsider her decision.
- Try to make her feel guilty for how sad, dejected, depressed, lost or lonely he is without her.

He hopes that she will see his desperate efforts as meaning that they are meant to be together.

After all, if he's going to all that effort, surely he must be sincere, right?

Well, that's not how a woman sees it or thinks about it after a break up.

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy and then breaks up with him, she changes the way she thinks about him and looks at him.

Rather than feeling flattered that he's putting in so much effort to get her back, she will begin to feel annoyed by his constant pestering.

As a result, she will begin to want to distance herself from him (e.g. block his number on her phone, unfriend him on social media, get a restraining order against him to stop him from showing up uninvited, tell family and friends to not give any more details about her to him, ignore his texts and calls).

If her ex guy notices that she is distancing herself and then becomes emotionally wimpy and begins to sulk or complain to her, then he will be making what I refer to as the biggest mistake to avoid when trying to get an ex woman back

Here's the thing

A woman doesn't want to be in a relationship that feels forced or one-sided (i.e. you have feelings for her, but she doesn't have feelings for you).

Instead, a woman wants to be in love with her man and feel naturally drawn to him based on how much attraction his behavior makes her feel.

After a break up, she doesn't want to have to put in loads of effort to make a relationship work with a guy who doesn't yet understand how to be the man she needs.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend to stop saying that youâ€™re being annoying and instead want you back, you have to stop focusing on what you want and start giving her what she wants (i.e. to feel respect, attraction and love for you based on your new and improved behavior).

It canâ€™t be all about how much you love her and need her back for your reasons.

It has to be about her feeling attracted and drawn to you for her reasons (i.e. she likes how confident you are now, she likes how you no longer feel insecure when she is being difficult or putting you down, she likes how you are able to make her smile and laugh, even when she is being cold and distant).

Focus on that and you will naturally get her back without a fight.

Another common reason why a woman will say that her ex is being annoying is becauseâ€¦

2. He doesn't understand what she really wants him to change, so he's offering her all the wrong things

Quite often, a woman will break up with a guy without coming out and telling him her secret reasons for doing so.

Instead, she might say something like, â€œIâ€™m tired of trying to make this relationship work. All we ever do is argue and fight over everything and I feel stressed out all the time. Iâ€™m sick of it and I want out.â€

Unfortunately, because of that, a guy might not realize that her secret reasons are different to the reason of wanting to break up due to arguments and fighting.

So, when he tries to get her back, rather than offering her what she really wants, he offers to change things about himself that donâ€™t matter to her.

For example: In a case where a woman says sheâ€™s tired of fighting and arguing, a guy might make the mistake of thinking that if he chills out and lets her call the shots in the relationship from now on, they will no longer disagree.

He assumes that if they no longer disagree because he just accepts whatever she wants, then there will be no more fighting and the problem will be solved.

Yet, being the boss in the relationship is usually the last thing that she wants.

In fact, feeling more emotionally dominant than a man is one of main reasons why a woman will end a relationship (i.e. because she canâ€™t respect him and look up to him when heâ€™s being wimpy and submissive to her).

So, by offering to become more docile and submissive to her will, it will simply convince her that he has no idea what she really wants.

If he continues to insist that he will stop arguing with her and let her have her way in the relationship, she will eventually start to feel annoyed by his lack of insight into what women really want from a man.

As a result, she will keep pushing him away and will start focusing on finding a new man.

So, if your ex girlfriend has been saying that youâ€™ve been annoying lately, it may be because you donâ€™t really understand her real reasons for breaking up with you.

You may have been offering to change the wrong things about yourself (e.g. be nicer, when she really wants you to be more ballsy) to get her back and she's now fed up with it.

Another common reason why a woman will say that her ex is being annoying is because

3. He's trying to get her back via text

One of the most annoying things to a woman, is when an ex guy tries to get her back via text.

Why?

Firstly, it makes her feel that she's not important enough for him to even bother picking up the phone and talking to her in person when trying to get her back.

Instead, he sends her a bunch of words on a screen in the hope that she will say, Oh, okay. Sure, let's forget about everything that happened between us and try again.

She sees that as a half-assed effort to get her back, which she then sees as being annoying or insulting.

Secondly, when a woman has lost touch with her feelings for a guy, anything that he sends her via text will be judged based on her most recent experiences with him (e.g. the last fight she had with him, the last promise he made her to change but didn't keep, the break up, how he has behaved since).

So, if she currently thinks of her ex in a negative way, she's going to look at his texts in a negative way too.

Rather than think, What a cool text! He's being so sweet. I'm so impressed! He really is trying to make things right between us, she may be thinking, Does he really think I'm going to give him another chance just because he's saying that he's changed via text? If he couldn't be trusted to keep his word in the relationship when he was looking me in the eye and promising me, what makes him think that I'd believe him now when he is hiding behind text messages?

As a result, she's going to feel annoyed with him and will continue to say, No. I'm not interested in getting back together again. Leave me alone.

This is why, asking your ex for another chance should be done in person and only after you have first reactivated her feelings of respect and attraction for you on a phone call, or in person.

Don't ask for another chance via text.

Don't ask for another chance before you've reactivated her feelings of respect and attraction.

Approach things in the correct order and you will get her back.

Approach things in a lazy way (i.e. text her and ask for another chance) and you will almost certainly get rejected and miss out on getting her back.

Another common reason why a woman will say that her ex is being annoying is because

4. He isn't being mature about the ex back process

When a guy doesn't have a lot of experience with relationships, he might not have the most mature reaction to being broken up with, because he simply doesn't know any better.

For example: A guy might

- Constantly beg and plead with his ex to give him another chance.

- Whine to her about how bad heâ€™s feeling and hope that she takes pity on him.
- Harass her for not wanting to discuss the relationship with him.
- Get overly emotional (and possibly even cry), when he talks to her on the phone or in person.
- Hope that if he breaks down and cries in front of her, it will show her how much he loves her and she will then want to get back with him.
- Demand that she not go out with her single girlfriends or go on any dates until theyâ€™ve resolved their relationship problems.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Although itâ€™s understandable that a guy may feel upset about being dumped, falling apart emotionally and behaving like an immature brat is not okay to a woman.

Not only does it annoy a woman, but it also begins to kill any remaining respect that she has for him. When she can't respect him anymore, she doesn't feel much attraction and begins to feel the need to move on without him.

Another common reason why a woman will say that her ex is being annoying is becauseâ€¦

5. He's trying to make her feel guilty for leaving him, or pity for how bad he feels now that she doesn't want him back

Imagine how a woman would feel if she is trying to move on after a break up, but her ex is constantly hovering around her (e.g. texting or call, showing up at her house or at places where he knows sheâ€™s likely to be) and trying to make her feel guilty about leaving him.

He's saying things like, â€œI canâ€™t believe you did this to me! Did our love mean anything to you? I know that I wasnâ€™t the perfect boyfriend, but I donâ€™t think I deserve this! How could you just leave me? We could have made it work between us if you hadnâ€™t just dumped me like that,â€œ or â€œHow can you not care about me anymore? Just the other week, you told me that you loved me and now you wonâ€™t even give me a chance to make things right between us. Donâ€™t you even care that I still love you?â€œ

He's trying to get her back and it seems like he makes a good argument with what he's saying, right? After all, he loves her and is sincere about trying to make things work.

So, what is her problem?

Well, she has broken up with him and as a result, she no longer feels like his girlfriend.

When she doesn't feel like his girlfriend anymore, she doesn't feel the pressure of having to live up to the responsibilities of that role (i.e. caring for her boyfriend, trying to work things out, being patient and loving).

Instead, now that she is single, she feels the need to take care of herself and start trying to move on and find a better future for herself.

This is why trying to make your ex feel guilt or pity for the emotional pain that youâ€™re experiencing will usually just push her away even further.

So, donâ€™t try to get your ex back by making her feel sorry for you.

Instead, focus on reawakening her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, so that interacting with you actually starts to feel good to her.

Then, giving you another chance will be something she wants to do, rather than something that she is being forced to do out of pity or guilt.

4 Mistakes That Will Annoy Her Even More

If your ex girlfriend said that youâre being annoying, it may be because certain aspects of your behavior and the way you talk and interact with her have been turning her off (e.g. whining, constantly trying to discuss the relationship, sulking, complaining, getting annoyed with her).

So, when you change your approach (i.e. think, act and behave in more attractive ways), she will naturally begin to change how she feels about you and the situation.

On the other hand, if continue to say and do things that turn her off, sheâs going to keep pushing you away and saying, âJust leave me alone! Youâre being so annoying! Stop it! Just go away.â

If you donât want her to say something like that to you, be sure to avoid the following mistakes:

1. Not realizing that needing her back will be seen as selfish by her

You wanting to get your ex back is NOT selfish.

However, if she gets the sense that you need her back to feel okay about yourself again, then she WILL see your attempts to get her back as selfish.

In other words, if itâs all about you getting what you want (even if you say that youâre doing it for her, or are willing to do whatever she wants), then itâs seen as selfish.

To get a woman back, you have to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, so she naturally feels like she has a reason to want to get back with you.

When she feels like getting back with you would be a good thing for her to do (you can make her feel that way in minutes), then she will open up to you again.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

2. Trying to convince her to give him another chance

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy, him trying to talk her back into a relationship with him simply doesnât work.

Why?

She doesnât have feelings for him anymore, so she doesnât really care how convincing his arguments might be.

No matter what he says, it just doesnât hit the mark with her because she doesnât feel attracted to him anymore.

She feels disconnected from any of the sexual or romantic feelings she used to have for him, so she doesnât look at him as a boyfriend anymore.

Heâs almost like a stranger to her now.

This is why trying to convince an ex woman to give you another chance usually wonât work, if you havenât first reactivated her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend to drop her guard and listen to what you have to say, you have to first change how she feels by using a new approach with her (e.g. if you've been irritating her by begging for another chance, switch your approach to being easy-going, using humor to make her smile and laugh and flirting with her to build up sexual tension).

When you change how she feels, she will then naturally change her mind and open back up to you. However, if you keep trying to break through her defenses by using the same old approach over and over again (e.g. telling her reasons why you think the relationship deserves another chance, telling her how much you love her, telling her how much you've been hurting since the break up), she will just keep saying, â€œNo.â€œ

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Waiting too long to get to a phone call or an in person meet up and she then loses interest

It's very difficult to reawaken a woman's feelings of respect, attraction and love without actually talking to her (preferably face-to-face), where she can hear the sincerity in your voice and see your confidence coming through via your body language.

So, if your goal is to get your ex back, don't lose your chance with her by waiting too long to get her on a call, or meet up with her in person

You've got to make a move.

If you don't make a move, some other guy will and by the time you've plucked up the courage to call her, she's likely going to say, â€œI'm sorry, but I've met someone else. I'm happy with him and I don't want you to ruin it, so please don't ever call me again.â€œ

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

4. Asking her how she feels, if she will ever change her mind and what he would need to do to get another chance

A guy might say, â€œDo you still love me? Is there still a chance for us? I just want to know how you feel about me and if there's a chance that you will ever change your mind about us being broken up. I promise that if you tell me what you want me to do to fix our relationship, I will do it. I'll do anything to get you back. Trust me. Just tell me what you want and I will do it.â€œ

Yet, what he usually doesn't realize is that asking a woman what he needs to do to make her happy makes her feel stressed and annoyed that he needs her to help him become a more attractive man.

She doesn't want to take on that responsibility.

Instead, she wants him to figure out how to be the kind of man that she wants and then start being that man, without her help and guidance.

If he can do that, then she will be able to look up to him and respect him for being a self-made man.

However, if he continues to struggle and need her support, she will feel annoyed by him and want to push him away.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't rely on her telling you what you need to change or do to accomplish that.

Likewise, don't ask her if she still loves you, or if there is a chance for you and her.

Instead, make her love you again and you and her will then naturally get back together quickly and easily.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Obsessed After Break Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways to calm yourself down, so you can get her back quickly:

1. Understand that emotional desperation is unattractive to your ex, so it will literally prevent you from getting her back

Sometimes, when a guy is obsessed with his ex after a break up, he might start doing things that make him appear desperate, needy and out of control to his ex.

For example: A guy mightâ€¦

- Bombard her with endless walls of text messages, or long e-mails apologizing to her and promising to change.
- Spy on her via social media (and in some cases, in person) to see what sheâ€™s doing, who she is hanging out with and if she is moving on.
- Pester her friends, coworkers and family to help talk her into giving him another chance.
- Show up uninvited at her place of work, home or the places she likes to hang out at and try to discuss the relationship with her.
- Send her long love letters declaring his love for her, â€œYouâ€™re my reason for living and without you nothing feels right,â€ or â€œYou are my one and only soul mate and a break up will never change that.â€

Sometimes, a guy will hope that when his ex woman sees how lost he is without her and how desperate he is to get her back, she will change her mind and give him another chance.

Yet, in most cases, rather than convincing a woman to take him back, obsessive behavior only turns her off even more.

She then starts thinking things like, â€œHis behavior since the break up has spiraled out of control. I am now seeing him in a way that I never did before and itâ€™s creeping me out. Iâ€™m suddenly very aware that heâ€™s not an emotionally strong man after all. Instead, heâ€™s somewhat emotionally wimpy and weak on his own. His desperation has proven to me that my instincts were right about wanting to break up with him. So, I have to now focus on moving on without him.â€

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Feeling a little desperate to get your ex back is understandable, but you can't let that show up in your behavior, conversation style, body language or vibe.

If you let her sense that you're feeling desperate, you will be doing the opposite of what a man needs to do to get an ex back (i.e. get her respect back, make her feel attracted again, cause her to fall back in love with him).

2. Calm down by knowing that there is a quick, easy to use process that you can follow to get her back

One of the main reasons why you feel obsessed about your ex is because, somewhere in the back of your mind, youâ€™ve convinced yourself that thereâ€™s no chance of getting her back.

You may have even thought something like, “I screwed up big time and there’s no coming back from this. I ruined the relationship with the woman of my dreams and I’m on my own now. I don’t think I would ever be able to get her back after how I acted and how much I turned her off. She even said that she never wants to see me again, so there’s nothing that I can say or do to make her change her mind. Her decision is final and I’ve lost her forever.”

Naturally, when you think like that, you are going to begin to feel stressed out by the whole break up. You will lost, out of control, left behind and dejected by the whole thing.

Don’t do that to yourself.

You’ve got to know that there is a quick, easy to use process that you can use to get her back...

When you focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she will naturally begin to think about you and look at you in a completely new way.

She will begin to see that there is still hope for you and her because she feels a spark with you again.

When that happens, she will begin to worry that if she doesn’t give you another chance, or at least hook up with you sexually one last time to see how she feels, she will end up regretting it for the rest of her life.

As a result, she will open back up to you and you can get her back.

On the other hand, if you make the mistake of allow your emotional state to spiral out of control because you believe that you have no chance of getting her back, then you won’t be able to overcome your obsession and desperation and it will end up turning into depression, self-doubt and anxiety in regards to women in general.

So, if you want her back, make a decision today to get your emotions under control and prepare to get her back.

3. Get clear on exactly what you really need to improve before you start the ex back process

To make your ex want to give you another chance, you first need to understand her real reasons for breaking up with you.

Why is this step important?

If you don’t understand her real, secret reasons for breaking up with you, you will likely end up offering her things that she doesn’t want (e.g. a guy will offer to spend more time with his ex and not be so focused on work, but what she really felt turned off by was his lack of emotional masculinity when they did spend time together. She never felt like his girl and felt more like his friend. She didn’t feel enough of a difference between him and her and she wants a guy who thinks, feels, behaves and acts in a more masculine manner, rather than being so soft, friendly and nice).

So, if you offer to fix, change, improve or adjust the wrong things, your ex may think something like, “This is exactly why I broke up with him in the first place. He just doesn’t get it! He keeps making promises to change things about himself that I don’t really care about. He still doesn’t have a clue what turns me off about his approach to the relationship. It highlights to me that he’s probably a lost cause. So, I need to move on and find myself a guy who gets me, rather than wasting my time with him.”

This is why you need to know exactly why she broke up with you.

At this point, you might be wondering, “Should I ask her to tell me?”

The answer is definitely, No!

If you ask her, you will turn her off even more because women don't want to be responsible for shaping you into the man that you need to become.

Essentially, a woman doesn't want to be your teacher in life and tell you how to think, act and behave to make her respect you, feel sexually attracted to you and love you.

That's why I am here.

I'm here to help you get her back and keep her in a relationship.

So, to help you understand why she might have broken up with you, here are some questions to ask yourself:

- What aspects of my thinking and behavior initially attracted her to me (e.g. my confidence, my belief in my attractiveness to her and other women, my great sense of humor, my emotional masculinity)?
- Did I continue to act, think and behave in those attractive ways throughout our relationship, or did I slowly slip into behaving in unattractive ways (e.g. I started doubting my attractiveness to her and as a result became more needy, clingy, jealous or controlling. I began giving in to her demands more and more and she started feeling more emotionally dominant than me. I stopped making her feel desirable and sexy and started treating her more like a neutral friend or roommate)?
- Did I try to get her to accept things about me that just weren't attractive to her (e.g. I displayed annoying habits that she clearly didn't like. I became too emotionally sensitive and she ended up feeling like she had to be gentle and take care of me emotionally, otherwise I would get angry, sulk or give her the silent treatment)?

By answering those questions, you will begin to feel aware of what you need to adjust in order to properly re-attract her.

If you haven't done so already, make sure that you:

4. Give her 3 to 7 days of space to miss you

This is an important step if you've been pestering your ex and making her feel annoyed by your approach to getting her back (e.g. you've been calling, texting or messaging her too much, begging and pleading with her to listen to you, crying and asking her to give you another chance).

So, if you haven't done so already, stop all interactions with her for a few days and allow for things to calm down between you and her.

During that time, she will have a chance to stop focusing on things that she doesn't like about you and begin to miss the things she does like about you (e.g. the way you make her feel like a princess when she's with you, how you're so ambitious and hard-working, that you always treated her friends and family well, that you're a really good guy, that you honestly love her and care about her, that you make her smile and laugh a lot).

Important: The old saying of, More is better doesn't apply when it comes to giving an ex space after a break up.

So, donâ€™t make the mistake of thinking, â€œIf 3 to 7 days of space will make her miss me, then cutting off contact for 30 or 60 days will make her really miss me and want me back. Then, when I eventually contact her after a month or two, she will jump at the idea of getting back together again.â€

Yes, that can work if a woman is still in love with her ex guy.

Yet, in the majority of ex back cases where a man is trying to get an ex woman back, she is no longer in love with him and feels as though she made the right decision to break up with him.

So, if a guy then cuts off contact for 1-2 months, she doesn't care.

She just moves on.

This is why you shouldn't give your ex any more than 3 to 7 days of space.

If you've been very annoying and needy, then give her the full 7 days.

Once you've done thatâ€¦!

5. Contact her and start the ex back process

To show your ex that you're a different man now, you have to interact with her on a phone call or in person.

When you do, so she can hear the tonality of your voice, assess your behavior and see for herself that you really have changed.

If you have been obsessing over her and that ended up causing you to be needy and annoy her, then you can show that you've changed by being more relaxed, easy-going and adding in some humor to let her see that you're not freaking out anymore, or trying to pressure her into giving you another chance.

Once she has dropped her guard a little is feeling more relaxed and happy to be talking to you, say something along the lines of, â€œAnyway, it's been good talking to you again. It's nice to see that we can actually talk as friends, without it being about us getting back together or anything like that. For the record, I accept that weâ€™re broken up and Iâ€™m fine with it. So, I think it would be best to put the past behind us and just be friends.â€

When she agrees, go ahead and say something like, “Cool. Well, I think if we're going to part ways as friends, it would be the right thing to do to catch up as friends one last time and wish each other the best. So, letâ€™s meet up for a quick coffee to say hello this week. I'll be busy on Monday and Tuesday, but Iâ€™m free on Wednesday or Sunday this week. Which of these two days suit you best?â€

If she disagrees about the meet up, just say, “Hey, it's just a quick catch up as friends to say goodbye in a mature way. When we catch up, if you decide that you don't ever want to talk to me again, I promise that I will respect that 100% and never contact you again. So, this catch up can simply about us parting as friends and wishing each other all the best. So, let's do it. Let's catch up to say hi this week.â€

Then, when you meet up with her, focus on fully re-attracting (e.g. by showing her that youâ€™ve understood her real, secret reasons for breaking up with you and have already made some changes based on that).

When she senses the changes in you, she will naturally begin to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She will realize that you aren't so bad after all and when that happens, her guard will come down and she begin to open up to the idea of giving you another chance.

3 Mistakes That Some Guys Make When Obsessed About an Ex Woman

As you may have realized by now, what you say, do and the way you behave around your ex will either reawaken her feelings for you, or convince her that she made the right decision to break up with you.

So, if you want to reawaken her feelings and get her back, try not to be one of the guys who make the following mistakes:

1. Assuming that acting like a desperate ex boyfriend who needs her, will impress her and make her feel lucky to have him

Sometimes, a guy will try to get his ex woman back by saying things like, I'm so lost without you in my life. I need you so much. Please give me just one more chance. I promise I will do whatever it takes to make you happy this time. I need you. You are everything to me. Please!

Essentially, he's hoping his ex will think something like, Oh, well that's so sweet. I feel so lucky to have a man who feels lost and hopeless without me in his life. Every girl dreams of having a guy who is obsessed with her and needy of her. So, for that, I have to give him another chance.

That might happen in romantic movies just to entertain the audience, but in real life, women don't respond well to seeing their ex guy fall apart emotionally.

What makes a woman feel attracted to her ex, is seeing that although he still wants her back, he is absolutely confident, happy and positive about his life with or without her.

He doesn't shove it in her face by saying, "My life is great without you."

Instead, he lets her sense that he is confident and happy without her, based on the way he talks to her, behaves and acts around her.

She can sense it for herself and when she notices that he's not trying to rub it in her face, she will also feel respect for him for being a good guy about it.

So, don't go to either extreme of showing desperation or acting like you are so happy that you and her broke up.

Instead, just let her see that you are interested in getting her back, but at the same time, you feel confident, happy and are making progress in life with or without her.

The next mistake to avoid is

2. Hoping that staying on her mind by constantly texting or calling will save the relationship

When a guy is unable to meet up with his ex woman as frequently as he did when they were in a relationship, he will often start to worry that she will forget about him and move on if he doesn't stay on her mind.

So, to prevent that from happening, he will send her daily texts, social media messages or call her on the phone as a way of remaining part of her life.

Yet, rather than make him unforgettable to her in a good way, his constant pestering turns her off more because he comes across as a needy, clingy, desperate guy who is obsessed with his ex.

There's nothing wrong with getting in contact with your ex, but you have to be calm about it.

Use the interactions that you have with her to make her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again.

Then, make sure that you meet up with her in person, re-attract her, get to a hug, kiss and then sex. Once that happens, you and her will get back together naturally.

Yet, if all you're doing is texting her or messaging her to stay on her mind, she's going to get annoyed and may end up blocking you or telling you to leave her alone.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Not knowing that he can easily turn things around and make her want the relationship too

When a woman is being closed off and saying things like, "It's over between us. I don't love you anymore and nothing that you can say or do will ever make me change my mind" a guy might start believing that getting her back will be impossible.

Yet, here's the thing!

Just because your ex doesn't have feelings for you right now, it doesn't mean she will feel the same way a week from now after you've reactivated her feelings of respect and sexual attraction.

So, don't give up.

You really can change how she feels and get her back, if you want to.

You can take control of the ex back process by focusing on re-attracting her and seducing her back into a relationship that she wants.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Should I Knock On My Ex's Front Door?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends.

Here are 5 possible reactions that you might get from her if you knock on her door:

1. She is happy that you had the confidence to go and see her and try to work things out

Sometimes a woman will break up with a guy, but secretly be hoping that they'll be able to work things out and get back together.

So, if her then has the confidence to knock on her front door and work things out, it will be exactly what she's been hoping for.

Of course, even though your ex may still have feelings for you and want you back, if you go ahead and knock on her door, don't expect her to throw herself into your arms and say something along the lines of, "I'm so glad you came! I've been hoping that'd you come over so we can sort things out and get back together."

Instead, if she's like most women, she will act surprised and say something like, "What are you doing here?"

If she reacts in that way, don't panic.

Just remain confident, relaxed and easy-going and say something like, "I thought I'd drop by for a minute to say hi as a friend and see how you are."

She might then invite you in for a coffee, drink or a chat.

Once you are inside her house, focus on maintaining your confidence with her (especially if she starts getting nervous about you being there and begins to act cold or aloof) and continue to break down her walls by sparking her feelings for you.

The best way to do that is to be relaxed and easy-going and use some humor to lighten the mood and get her smiling and laughing.

If she was hoping that you'd drop by, she will be happy to see that you and her can still chat, have a laugh and feel good around each other.

The more you continue to show her via your behavior and conversation style that you've transformed into the kind of man that she can now look up to, respect and feel attracted to (e.g. confident, self-assured, emotionally masculine) the more her defenses will come down.

She will naturally begin to open up and you can then give her a kiss and possibly even hook up with her sexually.

Note: She might not be ready to have sex with you the first time you knock on her door, so don't worry about it if she isn't.

Instead, just continue to interact with her (over the phone and especially in person) and build on her initial feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you until she falls back in love with you, or at least opens up to having sex with you to see how she feels afterwards.

Another possible reaction your ex might have if you knock on her front door is a

2. She is angry that you turned up at her home uninvited

In some cases, a woman won't enjoy being caught off guard by her ex and will react in an angry way, â€œHow dare you show up at my house uninvited! Weâ€™ve broken up and you have no right to be here unless I say that itâ€™s okay! So, go away. Don't ever do that again. Get out here. We have broken up. Leave!â€

Some of her possible reasons for reacting in that way might beâ€¦

- She's worried that you're going to create drama and drag her into a long, drawn out and stressful conversation about the relationship.
- Sheâ€™s still feeling bitter about the break up and isnâ€™t ready to see you yet.
- She's worried that you might be stalking her.
- She's worried that you might hurt her physically if she lets you in. Many women watch a lot of crime TV shows and often think the worst when an ex guy shows up their door.
- She feels self-conscious and insecure about you seeing her without her make up on/her hair in a mess/wearing sloppy clothes.
- Sheâ€™s expecting one of her friends to arrive soon and doesnâ€™t want you to be there when she arrives (e.g. because her friend disapproves of you and wants her to forget about you).
- She has made other plans and you are now delaying her.
- She doesnâ€™t want to make it easy for you to get her back.
- She doesn't want you thinking that you can just arrive at her home anytime you want, without being invited.

So, if you go and knock on your ex's door to say hi as a friend and she gets angry, don't let it put you off.

If you can remain calm, relaxed and confidently focus on reawakening her feelings of respect and attraction for you as you talk to her (e.g. by using humor to diffuse the situation), she wonâ€™t be able to stay mad at you for long.

So, if you think that your ex might react in an angry way, you need to be prepared to face potentially 1-2 minutes of her being annoyed, before she calms down, relaxes and begins to open up and talk more freely with you.

When you focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good as you talk to her, her guard will start to come down.

You can then build on her feelings and get her to open up to the idea of hanging out to see where things go.

On the other hand, if you crumble at the first sign of resistance from her, she will perceive you as being emotionally weak and unable to cope with the challenges that life throws at you, which will turn her off.

She will then think something along the lines of, â€œIf he canâ€™t even handle a little resistance from me, how will he be able to get through the more difficult things in life? Is he the kind of man who feels afraid when confronted by a challenging situation? Is he the sort to just give up and run away? I donâ€™t want a man who is too insecure and cowardly to be able to face the challenges of life. I want a man who has the courage and determination to remain confident, calm and in control *no matter what life throws at him. By going into his shell and seeming like he is intimidated by me, he has highlighted to me that I made the right decision by breaking up with him. I now need to focus on forgetting about him and moving on.*â€œ

Another possible reaction your ex might have if you knock on her front door isâ€œ

3. She has her guard up and doesn't want to talk to you about the relationship

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she will usually try to avoid seeing him as much as possible to allow herself to move on, rather than having to deal with him wanting to talk about the relationship with her (and trying to get her back).

So, if her ex suddenly knocks on her front door, rather than be happy to see him, she will feel like she needs to get him to leave so she doesn't get seduced back into a relationship.

She will then begin to think something like, "I know why he's here. He wants to talk about the relationship and convince me to give him another chance. He's probably going to start going over all of his mistakes and ask me what he needs to do to make me happy in a relationship. I don't want to talk about the relationship and I definitely don't want to teach him how to be the man I want him to be. If he really wants me back, he needs to figure that out by himself and change and improve without my help. If he can do that, then I would be okay about talking to him and seeing if I am willing to open back up to a relationship. Yet, I bet that nothing has really changed about him, so I've got to get him to leave."

She will then try her best to get you to leave, so she can continue trying to get over you and move on.

If you don't want her to react in that way, you need make sure that if you do knock on her door, you keep the interaction fun, easy-going and lighthearted, rather than trying to get into deep, stressful conversations about the relationship.

For example: You might say to her, "Hey, I get it that you're probably surprised to see me here right now, but I just want to make it clear that I'm not here to talk about the relationship or about getting back together. I just wanted to come by and say hello as a friend for a few minutes, cool? If you don't want to talk any longer than that, I will leave. No problem at all. Anyway, so how are you?"

By saying something like that to her, not only are you taking the pressure off her from having to talk about what she doesn't want to talk about (i.e. the relationship and getting back together again), it also makes her see you in a more positive light.

She can see that you're not there to cause trouble and just want to say hi as a friend.

Of course, she might still be a bit worried or on guard, but that's only natural.

When she sees that you're being confident, relaxed and easy-going, she will begin to drop her guard a little without feeling as though it means she's agreeing to getting back together with you.

Another possible reaction she might have if you knock on her front door isâ€œ

4. She tells you to go away and never come back again

In some cases, a woman will feel shocked to see her ex standing on her front door and because of that, a lot of different things may go through her mind at that moment.

For example: She mightâ€œ

- Secretly feel pleased that heâ□□s there, but at the same time, not want to make it easy for him to get her back by appearing happy to see him.
- Feel like he hasnâ□□t done anything to re-spark her feelings first, so she doesn't feel ready or willing to see him.
- Wonder if heâ□□s actually changed anything about himself, or if heâ□□s still the same guy that she broke up with.

As a result, she might react by saying something along the lines of, *â□□ Why are you here? This is unacceptable, you know? You can't just arrive at someone's door and expect that they will want to talk to you. Go away, I don't want to talk to you.*â□□

Although what she's saying might sound as though she is rejecting him and that he no longer has a chance, it can also mean other things.

For example: In some cases, a woman will say that as a test to see if her ex confident enough to stand his ground and talk to her in a calm, rational manner, regardless of how negative she is being towards him.

This usually happens if the woman dumped her ex because of his anger issues, or because he was too wimpy and was easily controlled or bossed around by her.

It can also apply when a woman was taken for granted by her ex, to the point where he treated her badly and expected her to just put up with it because she used to love him so much.

So, if your ex tells you to go away when you knock on her front door, rather than getting upset and taking it as a sign that itâ□□s 100% over between you, just remain calm and use some humor to break down her defenses and remove some of the awkwardness from of the situation.

For example: If she sayâ□□s something like, *â□□ What are you doing here?*â□□ you can say in a joking way, â□□ I was all the way across town in a really important business meeting, when all of a sudden I started smelling lasagna. So I followed the aroma and it led me right up to your front door!" and have a laugh.

Then say, *"Anyway, since Iâ□□ve come all this wayâ□□|how about some lasagna for lunch?"*â□□

She will probably try to act annoyed and say something like, *â□□ Youâ□□re crazy! I didn't cook any lasagna today.*â□□

You can then laugh and say in a joking manner, *â□□ Oh, thatâ□□s very disappointing. Well, at least make it up to me with a cup of coffee then.*â□□

If you're on good terms with each other, she will likely laugh and say something along the lines of, *â□□ Youâ□□re so cheeky! Okay fine, come in, but only for 10 minutes...then you have to leave and promise me that you wonâ□□t knock on my front door again without an invitation, okay?"*â□□

If you're not on good terms with each other, she might remain annoyed and say, "No, I'm not making you a coffee. I didn't invite you over, so you have to leave."

You can then say, "Hey, I was only kidding. Of course I don't expect a coffee. I accept that you and I have broken up. No problem at all. I just came by to say hello as a friend. All I'm asking for is a quick chat and then I'll leave. If don't ever want to talk to me again after that, I promise to leave and never contact you again. You have my word."

She will most likely let you in at that point, or have a conversation with you at the door.

Whatever the case, the most important thing is that you maintain your confidence and don't seem worried, intimidated, angry, insecure or tense.

Just relax, be confident and easy-going and talk to her as though everything is cool between you and her.

Use the conversation to reawaken her feelings for you by adding in some humor and using flirting to make her feel sparks of sexual attraction for you.

When you do that, her guard will come down and she will begin opening back up to you.

Another possible reaction she might have if you knock on her front door isâ€¦!

5. She threatens to get a restraining order out on you

If a woman threatens her ex with a restraining order, it usually (but not always) means that a guy will have done many other things to cause her to feel annoyed, or even threatened by him.

For example: He might haveâ€¦!

- Repeatedly called her, texted, e-mailed or sent her messages via social media demanding that she talk to him in person.
- Shown up unexpectedly at her work, university or where she likes to hang out with her friends.
- Begged and pleaded with her for a second chance in person and become very emotional and even a bit angry when she didn't give him the chance.
- Followed her around to see where she goes going and who she is now hanging out with.
- Intruded on her dates with other guys and caused a scene (e.g. by picking a fight with the other guy).
- Parked outside her home and waited for her to come home, so he could then talk to her.
- Physically hurt her or threatened to hurt her if she didn't give him another chance.

So, if he then knocks on her front door, sheâ€™s probably going to freak out and threaten to take a restraining order out on him to hopefully get him to leave her alone.

If youâ€™ve been behaving in any of the above mentioned ways, itâ€™s probably best if you donâ€™t knock on your exâ€™s front door, until youâ€™ve re-sparked some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you first (e.g. over the phone).

Then when you do, she will be more open to forgiving you your past behavior if she sees you standing there, than if you just show up without reactivating any of her feelings for you.

4 Mistakes a Guy Might Make When He Wants to Knock On His Exâ€™s Front Door

Before you show up at your exâ€™s front door, make sure youâ€™re prepared enough to be able to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

If you are, then she will most likely drop her guard and open back up to you.

Unfortunately, many guys in your situation are unprepared and end up making one or more of the following mistakes, which causes the woman to feel annoyed and want him to leaveâ€¦!

1. Turning up to her house and trying to discuss the relationship before re-attracting her

When it comes to getting an ex woman back, making her feel respect and sexual attraction for you as you talk to her, is infinitely more effective than trying to discuss the relationship.

If a woman doesn't feel attracted to you, then she's not going to feel motivated to want to discuss the relationship and work things out.

So, you have to start with re-attraction first.

When you knock on your ex's door, use it as an opportunity to build on her feelings for you by having some fun as you talk to her (e.g. using humor to break down her walls).

Let her realize for herself that she really does feel good around you anymore, so there's still hope for you and her.

If you approach it that way, you have the best chance of getting her to drop her guard, open back up to you and give you another chance.

However, if you knock on her door and want to get into serious discussions about the relationship, or about how much you've improved, then she's probably not going to be interested.

Another mistake that some guys make when they knock on their ex woman's door isâ€¦

2. Appearing desperate or needy as he talks to her

Women are attracted to men who are confident, self-assured and can remain calm and composed under pressure.

As a result, neediness and desperation are not attractive qualities and will simply turn a woman off when displayed.

So, if you knock on your ex's front door and subtly or obviously begin to plead with her to give you another chance, it's going to turn her off.

Likewise, if you appear desperate by saying something like, â€œI just had to see you again. I can't cope without you,â€ it's not going to sweep her off her feet if she is already turned off by you.

So, make sure that you show her (by the way you think, talk and behave) that you are now an emotionally strong and confident man who can remain calm and composed under pressure, while also having the balls to add in some humor to ease the tension between you and her.

As a result, you will naturally begin to make her feel respect, attraction and love for you all over again.

3. Not giving her 3 to 7 days of space before starting the ex back process

Sometimes, a few days of space is exactly what is needed after a break up, to allow for things to calm down and your woman to start missing you.

This is especially true if you had annoyed your ex by begging and pleading for another chance, or have generally been needy and desperate since the break up.

If you don't give your ex any space after annoying her and then show up at her front door, she probably won't be very happy to see you.

Causing her to feel annoyed like that makes it more difficult for you to break through her defenses and get her to open back up to you.

So, if you have been annoying her since the break up, give her 3 to 7 days of space and then begin the ex back process.

On the other hand, if you haven't been annoying her, then go ahead and start the ex back process and get her back.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

4. Expecting that she will be impressed if he pours his heart out to her, expresses his undying love and promises to do whatever she wants

Some guys hope that their ex woman will be flattered if he knocks on her front door and tells her how much he loves her and how heâ€™s going to do whatever it takes to get her back.

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

If a woman doesn't have feelings for her ex anymore, she's not going to care about his feelings for her.

This is why you need to start the ex back process with re-attraction.

Only when she feels a renewed sense of attraction for you, will she then begin to care and open up to explore her new feelings for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Destroyed My Confidence

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why:

1. She was a higher quality woman than you were used to dating, so you've lost the added confidence that came with having a woman like her

Sometimes a guy might feel very lucky to have a certain woman as a girlfriend (e.g. because she's very beautiful and he sees himself as being average or below-average looking, she has a better education than he does, she earns more money than he does, she comes from a wealthy family while his parents are ordinary working people).

So, when he won her over and got into a relationship with her, it gave him a new kind of confidence boost in life.

He may have thought things like, "If a woman like her wants to be with me, then I must be a pretty cool guy after all. I don't have to settle for women that I'm not really attracted to. I've done well for myself and I deserve it. She is the type of women I should have had all along."

Naturally, he feels great about himself based on being in a relationship with her.

Yet, his new level of confidence is unreliable because it's mainly dependent on continuing to have her as his girlfriend (or wife).

So, when she eventually breaks up with him, he feels lost and dejected without her and his confidence begins to fade away.

This is why it's essential that you build up confidence in yourself and truly begin to believe that you are more than good enough for her.

When you can genuinely feel confident about your attractiveness and value to your ex and to other women, no one can take that away from you.

You will have that confidence now and for the rest of your life.

On the other hand, if you go through life never knowing how to truly believe in yourself and your attractiveness to women, it will be a rocky road for you.

If you only ever feel confident because of external factors in your life (e.g. if you get a new, attractive girlfriend or wife, you drive a nice car or have an important job), then if you happen to lose one of those things, you may end up losing the associated confidence along with it.

By the way!

When a man only feels confident because of a woman, she will gradually begin to see that and it will turn her off.

For example: The longer a relationship continues, the more emotionally sensitive, insecure, clingy, jealous and controlling a guy will become if his confidence is largely based on her loving him and sticking with him.

If she gets to the point where she's had enough of being with an emotionally weak man, she will break up with him and try to find herself a truly confident man who doesn't rely on her dedication to him to feel confident and worthy as a man in this world.

So, if you want to get your ex back, you need to stop thinking things like, “My ex destroyed my confidence” and start saying, “I am confident with or without her. My confidence grows stronger every day. I am more than good enough for her and many other attractive women. I’m the man. I’m so damn good I’d even date myself. So, my ex will be lucky to get me back when I contact her, re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship. I’ll literally be giving her a gift by doing that.”

You’ve got to believe in yourself.

You’ve got to know that you are more than good enough.

If you don’t, she will pick up on your lack of confidence (via the tonality of your voice, your body language and the way you talk and respond to her) and she will feel convinced that she made the right decision to break up with you.

Another possible reason why you might feel that your ex destroyed your confidence is

2. You made her your purpose in life

Some guys mistakenly believe that a woman will be flattered and will dedicated herself 100% to a guy if he makes her the center of his world.

For example: A guy might stop focusing on his goals and dreams and instead, devote all of his attention and time to being with her.

He may give up his interests and hobbies and also stop hanging out with his friends, unless he can bring her along too, of course.

Eventually, she becomes the main purpose in his life and his main reason for living, so he doesn’t take a step without her.

Naturally, when she then breaks up with him, his main reason for living disappears and it leaves him feeling destroyed and broken.

He may even start thinking things like, “Without her I am nothing,” or “She was my life and now I can’t succeed without her. My confidence is destroyed now. I thought everything would be fine because her and I were so in love, but I guess I wasn’t enough.”

He was enough, but he went about the relationship in the wrong way (i.e. she became the most important thing in his life, rather than just the most important person).

A woman doesn’t want to be a man’s most important thing, mission, dream or ambition.

That place is reserved for his biggest dreams, goals and aspirations in life, so if he puts her in that place, she feels turned off because she is not his biggest achievement in life.

She is not his highest potential as a man.

He can only reach his highest potential as a man by following through on his biggest dreams, goals and ambitions in life.

Unfortunately, many guys don’t realize that until it’s too late.

The woman takes all the attention for months or even years and becomes increasingly fussy, irritable and frustrated in the relationship.

The guy doesn’t know why she is changing, but the reason is clear; he has made her his purpose in life and she doesn’t want that.

So, if a guy made that relationship mistake and got dumped, he can make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him by:

- Focusing on his big goals and dreams in life and begin working towards achieving them.
- Reconnecting with friends that he had been neglecting, or make new friends and start going out more and having fun without her needing to be there.
- Pursuing a hobby or interest that heâs been ignoring, but is very passionate about.
- Taking up something new that he always dreamed about (e.g. a new sport or activity), but always put off because of his relationship with her.

If you can't do any of those things, at least get yourself to the point emotionally where you are confident, happy and moving forward in life with or without her.

You can get to that point tomorrow, the next day or this week.

It shouldn't take you very long at all.

Once you honestly feel confident, happy and willing to move forward without her, then you are ready to interact with her, re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship with you.

Another possible reason why you might feel as though your ex destroyed your confidence, is thatâ!

Another possible reason why you might feel that your ex destroyed your confidence isâ!

3. You've been creating more insecurities for yourself since the break up

Although getting dumped can cause some guys to feel down and dejected for a while, it can also be an opportunity for a guy to become more confident and well rounded.

How?

He can use the break up as an opportunity to have an honest look at himself and where he has been going wrong and then change or adjust those things about himself (e.g. get rid of needy ways of thinking, be more masculine in his behavior).

Then, when he interacts with his ex woman again, she will be able to see he has changed in the ways that really matter to her.

As a result, she will have a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

If he is able to build on that as he interacts with her, she will fall in love with him all over again and they will get back together.

Alternatively, a guy might improve himself and then have a new, attractive girlfriend and then have a successful, long-lasting relationship with her because heâs an even better man than he was before.

In both of those cases, a man will become even more confident in himself and his attractiveness to women as a result of the break up.

Unfortunately, many guys don't approach the post-break up phase in that way.

In some cases, a guy will go in the opposite direction and develop even more insecurities than he had before.

For example: A guy might start thinking, âIâm such a failure as a man! I can't even keep a damn relationship together. I'm a loser. Itâs all my fault that she broke up with me. Nothing that I do is ever right. I always stuff things up in the end. No wonder she doesnât want to be with me anymore. Not only have I lost her forever, but I probably won't ever find another quality woman like her ever again. Women like her usually aren't interested in me, so I'm probably going to be on my own for quite a while. This sucks! I'm such a failure as a man.

As a result of thinking in that way, he becomes insecure and self-doubting and if he interacts with his ex woman, she picks up on it.

A woman can even sense it when looking at new photos of him on social media.

If he seems drawn inward and insecure based on the subtleties of his body language in the photo, she will assume the break up destroyed his confidence and he is lost without her.

Another possible reason why you might feel that your ex destroyed your confidence is

4. You believe that you did your best to keep her happy, but it wasn't enough

Sometimes, a guy will think to himself, I did everything to make my ex happy. I let her have her way. I never lost my temper with her during arguments. I spoiled her with gifts and romantic dinners and weekends away. I was loving and attentive. I put her first place in my life, even when she was being argumentative, or even unreasonable with her requests. I don't know what else I could have done to keep her happy. I mean, what the heck do women want? How good of a boyfriend do you need to be? Regardless of how nice I was to her, it was never enough. In the end, she discarded me like I meant nothing to her.

As a result, he starts to feel like he's not good enough as a man and he could never live up to the expectations of a woman in a relationship.

Yet, he can and quite easily, if he approaches the relationship in a different way.

Here's the thing

Although it would be great if just being nice to a woman was the secret to maintaining a woman's respect, attraction and love in a relationship, it's not.

Why?

Even though a woman might appreciate it when a guy is being nice to her, she doesn't want to feel like she is the boss, the leader, or the most valuable one in the relationship.

Instead, she wants him to make her feel as though she needs to do her best to keep him happy, rather than feeling as though he needs to work hard to impress her, treat her as best as he can and live up to all of her expectations to keep her happy.

In other words, she wants him to be more of a challenge.

If he can't offer her the challenge she secretly wants in a relationship, then she will naturally get bored of being in the one up position and will begin to lose respect for him.

When she can't respect him, she will also stop feeling sexually attracted to him and without respect or attraction, her feelings of love will begin to fade as well.

She will then want to break up with him (even though he's treating her really well) and find herself a man who is more of a challenge.

So, if you want to get your ex back, stop thinking negative thoughts like, I did everything to make her happy but she dumped me anyway. I did my best and it wasn't enough, so my ex destroyed my confidence.

Instead, focus instead on approaching her in a completely new way that is going to be more attractive and appealing to her.

This new way involves you putting in much less effort than you ever have and getting way better results with her than you ever have.

It's about making her feel the need to be good to you and treat you well.

You really can get your ex back and create the kind of relationship dynamic with her, but you need to be willing to use a completely new approach with her from now on.

Another reason why your confidence might have taken a bit of a beating after the break up, is that

5. Your confidence was heavily reliant on her love for you

Some guys are fortunate enough to have male role models in their life (e.g. a father, grandfather, uncle, big brother) who teach them what it means to be a confident, masculine man that a woman would never want to leave.

However, not all guys are that lucky (e.g. because a guy's parents got divorced when he was young, the male figures in his family are as confused about women as he is), so many guys get into a relationship with a woman and end up ruining it by not thinking, behaving and acting like a masculine man.

For example: A confused guy might regularly ask his woman things like, "Do you still love me?" or, "You wouldn't ever leave me, would you?" or, "Do you still find me attractive?" or, "Do you ever miss any of your ex's?"

When she replies with something along the lines of, "Of course I still love you" or, "No, I would never leave you, because I love you" or, "You'll always be attractive to me. You're the man I choose to be with" or, "No, why would I think about my ex's? They are history. I am with you now and I want to be with you" he will relax and feel confident about himself for a while.

Soon enough though, he begins to feel insecure once again and asks her more questions, or now needs her to be extra loving and attentive so he can feel confident about himself.

Initially, a woman might feel flattered that her guy is so devoted to her and wants to be with her and only her.

However, when she realizes that he only feels confident when she reassures him of her love or desire for him, she will start to lose respect and attraction for him.

She might then test him by not giving him the reassurance he wants.

When he asks her, "Do you still love me?" rather than saying, "Yes" she says, "I'm tired of you asking me that. If you keep asking me, maybe I will say no one day, so stop it."

She then starts to feel turned off by having sex with him and begins to show interest in other guys to push his insecurity to the limit.

If he then becomes even more insecure, she will know that he needs her love to be strong and that without it he becomes a weak, insecure, needy guy.

She will then feel a strong, instinctive desire to break up with him and look for a man who can be confident and emotionally strong, with or without her love and support.

So, if you want to get your ex back, you need to get to the point where you honestly feel confident and happy with or without her.

3 Ways That Guys Mess Up After Being Dumped by the Woman They Love

Losing a bit of confidence after being dumped is okay if you quickly recover from it and then come back emotionally stronger than ever before.

However, if you let the break up destroy your confidence and send you into a downward spiral, you may end up feeling depressed, insecure and left out, which will not only turn your ex off, but will be unattractive to other women as well.

So, to make sure that you bounce back into confidence, be sure to avoid the following mistakes!

1. Feeling pity for yourself

Sitting around feeling sorry for yourself isn't going to help you.

So, if you notice that you're sitting around alone and feeling sad, down and dejected, say to yourself, "Enough! I am more than good enough for my ex and other women. I'm an awesome man. I have become such a better man since the break up and I continue to become an even better man every day. I have so much to look forward to. I have so much to feel confident about in myself. I'm an amazing guy."

Steer your thoughts towards confidence, self-belief and self-assuredness, rather than allowing your thoughts to derail you and send you off track into the endless abyss of insecurity.

Remember: A woman is attracted to the kind of guy she can look up to, respect and be proud to call her man (i.e. because regardless of what happened between them, he has maintained belief in himself and in his value to her and has already taken steps to become even better than he was before).

A woman is not attracted to the kind of guy who makes her feel as though she has to build up his confidence and take care of him emotionally because he's so sensitive and unstable.

So, if you want your ex to reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, don't sit around feeling sorry for yourself anymore.

Quickly build up your confidence today and then get ready to interact with her within the next few days to a week.

Interact with her on a phone call or in person and re-attract her.

Once she feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she will open back up to you and you can then seduce her back into a relationship with you.

2. Feeling unworthy of her or other attractive women because of how bad the break up was

There's no denying that it sucks to be broken up by the woman you love, or really want to be with.

Yet, allowing that pain to destroy your confidence and make you feel unworthy of your ex (or other attractive women) will also decrease your chances of getting her back.

Your ex will feel turned off by your lack of belief in yourself and will then feel glad that she decided to break up with you when she did.

No woman wants to go running back to a guy that she dumped, if he is now broken emotionally.

That's not attractive.

If she got dumped by him and really wanted him back, then she would be fine about him being broken emotionally without her.

She will see that as a sign that she can get him back and keep him.

Yet, if a woman dumped a guy because he turned her off and she then noticed that he has become even more of a turn off (i.e. by losing confidence in himself), she's not going to feel motivated to get back with him.

So, if you want your ex back, you have to absolutely believe that you are more than good enough for her and then interact with her, re-attract her and get her back.

If you don't believe that you are more than good enough for her, she will pick up on it, feel turned off and it will then become more difficult for you to get her back.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

3. Not focusing on the opportunity to quickly improve and become a better man, so he can get her back or attract a new woman

Right now, you have an opportunity to re-attract your ex, get her back and enjoy an even better relationship than you had with her before.

Alternatively, you can walk away, never really knowing how much you would have grown as a man by going through the ex back process.

Going through the ex back process with a woman is a hugely transformational experience for a guy.

You start out feeling like your confidence is destroyed and end up becoming truly confident in yourself, getting your ex back and seeing her look into your eyes and say, "I love you. I've missed you so much."

When that happens, you realize that you can pretty much achieve or do anything in life.

As a result, your confidence is fully restored.

You are a new, more powerful man who now has a fundamental type of confidence that can never be taken away or destroyed.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Still Emotionally Attached to Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you're still emotionally attached to your ex, here are 5 questions to ask yourself to work out what to do next:

1. Do you feel that way because you see her as being the one for you?

Sometimes it takes a break up to shock a guy into realizing that his woman really was the right the one for him.

Of course, when that realization hits, a guy might begin to blame himself for messing things up with his ideal woman and feeling like a failure.

He might then begin to think things like, "She was the perfect woman for me and I stuffed it up. So, it would serve me right if I ended up alone. She probably wouldn't want me back anyway."

Unfortunately, a lot of men finds themselves missing an ex woman and feeling emotionally attached to her, but never really knowing how to make her feel the same way.

As a result, a guy will end up feeling stuck and unable to truly move on with new women.

He might date new women and even feel some love, but it won't be the same as what he felt with his ex.

He knows that she was the right woman for him.

How about you?

Do you see your ex as being the one for you?

If so, then do something about it.

Get her back.

How?

Interact with her again and reactivate her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you to make her feel good to be in contact with you again.

Make her smile, laugh and feel relaxed and open during interactions with you, so when she's on her own, she thinks things like, "I know that I once said I would never give him another chance, but all of a sudden I don't feel so convinced that being apart is the right thing for me. I'm actually starting to miss him now when I don't hear from him. Maybe the break up happened for a reason. Maybe we needed that time apart for him to change and be able to make me feel the way I really want to feel. I feel it again with him. I can't stop thinking about him. I have to do something about this. I have to open back up to him and see how it goes. I have to follow my heart."

She then becomes more open to interacting with you, seeing you in person and getting to a hug, kiss and even sex.

When that happens, you and her naturally begin a new relationship and can get back together at that point.

So, if you see your ex as being the one for you, don't remain in the shadows.

Come back to life in her heart and mind by interacting with her and making her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you.

When that happens, she too will begin to feel emotionally attached.

Another question to ask, isâ□!

2. Are you clear on exactly what turned her off about you?

Most guys know of some of the things they did to turn their ex woman off, but many guys don't know all of the exact details.

For example: A guy might know that he didn't treat his woman very well and it turned her off and made her feel taken for granted.

Yet, he might not know that one of her real reasons for leaving him was the fact that she could easily control and dominate him during conversations.

All she had to do was throw a tantrum and demand that she get her way and he would go along with it, because he didn't know how to get her to stop throwing the tantrum and calm down.

She hated that.

She knew that she was being a pain in the butt and was hoping that he could put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way.

Alternatively, she hoped that he could be confident and masculine enough to change her mood with humor and a playful attitude, rather than taking her emotional outburst so seriously.

Yet, he never could, which really turned her off.

She always secretly wanted to find herself a man who could make her be a good girl and put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way.

However, the man she got into a relationship with was never really able to do that, either because he couldn't be bothered, or didn't know how to.

He just wanted her to shut up, so he went along with whatever she wanted, but that's not what she wanted.

She wanted him to use his manliness in a loving way, to let her see that he wasn't the type of guy that she could control with a tantrum or emotional outburst.

He was so manly and in control of his emotions that her outbursts didn't throw him off, or cause him to go into his shell and just give into what she wants.

Instead, he either changed the dynamic of the situation by using humor and a playful attitude to get her smiling and laughing, or he didn't take her outburst seriously and let her know that, "Okay then Little Miss Dramatic. Settle down. If you're going to be like that, I'm not going to listen to you."

He then didn't listen to her or pay attention to her no matter how angry she got or how much she threatened him (e.g. with a break up).

She then knew her place (i.e. beneath him in terms of dominance) and she loved it.

So, as you can see, if a guy just thinks that the reason why his ex woman dumped him was due to him taking her for granted, he's missing the mark.

If he tries to get her back by saying, "I will treat you better, I promise. I took you for granted and I'm sorry. From now on, things will be different" she's going to see that he doesn't even understand why she is leaving him.

She will then say something along the lines of, “Look, I know you mean well, but it’s just not going to work out between us. We’re not compatible, so let’s accept that and try to move on, okay?”

The man is then left feeling confused and has no idea why his offer of treating her better didn’t work. So, if you are unsure what may have caused your ex to feel turned off by you in the relationship, here are some questions to help you come up with some ideas that relate to your situation:

- Were you confident when she first met you, but as the relationship progressed, you began to doubt your attractiveness to her and as a result became clingy and needy. If so, then she would have felt turned off by your emotional weakness, neediness and insecurity.
- Was she initially attracted to you because you are a nice, loving guy, only to eventually that you couldn’t stand up for yourself in the relationship, so she ended up walking all over you? If so, she would have felt turned off by your lack of dominance and emotional masculinity.
- Did you have to try hard to get her to like you and agree to be your girlfriend, only for her to then realize that you loved her way more than she loved you? If so, she would have felt turned off by how unchallenging the relationship was. She would have felt as though she might be able to do better, rather than settling for a guy who had to essentially convince her to be his girlfriend.
- Did you and her start off at the same level in terms of maturity, only for her to grow up faster than you. If so, she would have felt turned off by how the relationship dynamic made her feel more like a big sister or mother figure in your life, rather than your girl.

When you get clear on exactly what turned your ex off, you can then make the right adjustments that will actually re-attract her and make her feel drawn to you again.

When you make the right changes, she see that you understand her now and have already changed and become the man she wanted you to be.

As a result, she will begin to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, even if she doesn’t initially admit it.

When you make her feel that way, don’t ask for a relationship right away because she will most likely play hard to get and try to hide her new, compelling feelings for you.

Instead, just build on her attraction and make her really want you back for her own reasons (i.e. she’s attracted to you now and is worried that if she doesn’t give you another chance, she will end up regretting it for the rest of her life and missing you as the one that got away).

Another question to ask yourself is

3. What methods have you tried to use to get her back?

Most guys miss out on getting an ex woman back because they just don’t know how to re-attract her sexually and romantically.

As a result, a guy will try all sorts of methods to get her back, which rarely, if ever work.

For example:

- Trying to convince her to change her mind by having long, drawn out conversations about the relationship and where he went wrong. That approach highlights the negatives in the relationship and helps convince her that she made the right decision.

- Pleading with her to give him another chance. That approach makes her feel more turned off by what she perceives as his emotional weakness.
- Explaining all the reasons why she should be with him. That approach annoys her because she sees it as being selfish.
- Asking her to tell him what he needs to do to make her want to give him another chance. That approach points out to her that he doesn't even know how to be an attractive man without her help and guidance.
- Telling her that he can't live without her. That approach makes her feel turned off by his emotional dependence.
- Cutting off contact with her and waiting for her to reach out to him. That approach usually results in the woman moving on.

Have you tried to get your ex back by using any of those methods and failed?

If you have, don't worry about it.

As long as from this point onwards, you change your approach to one where your actions turn her on, rather than turn her off.

From now on, you need to have more confidence, more self-belief and add in flirting and humor to your interactions with her.

When you do that, you'll be amazed by how quickly her attitude changes.

Suddenly, she wants to talk to you on the phone and see you in person.

When she opens back up like that, you can then fully seduce her and get her back.

Another question to ask yourself is

4. Have you experienced love with any new women since the break up?

After a break up, a guy might try to get over his ex woman by getting back into the dating scene.

For example: He might start going out again with his single friends to bar and clubs where there are always lots of single, attractive women looking to hook up with a man.

He might also accept more party invitations, go on singles only travel vacations or attend singles parties.

Alternatively, a guy might register himself on online dating sites or using dating apps to find himself a new woman that will help him get over his ex.

Yet, although meeting new women can sometimes help a guy get over his ex, it's not always guaranteed to work.

Why?

If the new women that you hook up with aren't as physically or emotionally attractive as your ex, you may end up thinking things like, "No one else makes me feel like my ex. I just want her back. She's the one I love."

As a result, you remain emotionally attached to her and can't move on.

Of course, you don't have to move on with new women if your real goal is to get her back.

If you want her back, you have to be courageous enough to start the ex back process.

Starting the ex back process is about interacting with her and making her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you.

If you haven't done that yet, then you haven't even started.

When you start the ex back process with re-attraction, she becomes open to it and you then confidently guide her back into a relationship with you.

Another question to ask, isâ€¦!

5. Did you end up becoming more like friends later on in the relationship?

Losing the sexual spark and feeling more like friends, is one of the biggest reasons why a couple will break up.

For example:

- A manÂ stops treating his woman her like 'one of the boys' by expecting her to enjoy thinking, behaving and acting like he does.
- A manÂ stops holding hands with his woman, or being physically affectionate towards her unless they are about to have sex.
- The sex diminishes or even dries up completely because the couple just ends up hanging out and feeling more like a couple of buddies.
- AÂ man stops doing anything romantic with her and assumes that she will be fine with that because he did it at the start.
- They tend to spend more time hanging out with groups of friends or family.

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

The less feminine and girly a woman feels around her man, the less sexual attraction she feels for him.

The less sexual attraction a woman feels, the less she wants to stay with a guy.

So, although you might have felt comfortable with the idea that you and your ex were great friends and did everything together, the same may not have applied to her.

Instead, although she appreciated the friendship, she may have also been thinking things like, *"We seem to be stuck in a rut lately. I don't feel sexy anymore around him. I feel like a housemate or something. It's like we're just living together, paying bills and passing time. I don't feel like I'm in a romantic relationship anymore. Maybe it's my fault, or maybe it's his fault. I don't know. All I know is that I don't feel much of a spark with him anymore and he doesn't seem to be concerned about that at all. He's happy to just exist alongside each other and feel like good friends. I don't want that. I want to be in love with my man. I want to feel like his girl and see that there is a spark between us. I want to see my man look at me as though I'm his sexy girl, not his friend."*â€¦

After the break up, she won't feel as emotionally attached to her ex in a romantic way.

She might miss him as a friend, but she will know that she doesn't want a friendship; she wants a sexually attracted, romantic relationship.

In other words, she wants to be in love in a romantic way, rather than getting into a partnership kind of relationship with a good friend.

So, while youâ€¦re still emotionally attached to your ex and possibly even thinking things like,

What we had was so good. I can't believe that it's over. I want her back so badly. I feel connected to her. I can't let her go she's probably trying to find herself a man who will make her feel like a real woman again (i.e. girly, feminine, emotional, focused on being in love).

So, if you want to stop your ex from moving on, you need to use every interaction that you have with her from now on to reawaken her sexual feelings for you by making her feel like a girly, feminine woman again, rather than a nice, neutral friend.

When she stops feeling bland, boring, friendly emotions and begins feeling excited and turned on again, she'll naturally start to think about you and look at you in a romantic way.

She will then become more open to talking to you on the phone and hanging out in person to see where things go.

3 Mistakes That Guys Make When They're Still Emotionally Attached to an Ex Woman

When a guy is still emotionally attached to an ex woman, he might make one or more of the following mistakes, which only push her away even further!

1. Expressing his feelings to her in a letter or email and hoping that it will make her have feelings too

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and sexual attraction for a guy, him writing to her to express his feelings doesn't mean that much to her at all.

Rather than make her think, He still cares for me so much. That touches my heart and makes me want him back. Maybe I should give him another chance, she just feels turned off by his lack of understanding of her feelings.

In some cases, a woman will take his expression of feelings as a sign that he is more selfish and self-absorbed than she initially thought.

She will think something like, "It's all about him, isn't it? That's all he cares about. He hopes that if he says sweet things to me via email, then I'm going to be flattered and give him another chance. He will then get what he wants. Well, I'm not going to give him that satisfaction. If he can't even talk to me in person and make me feel attracted enough again to want to give him another chance, then I'm going to move on. I'm not going to get back with a guy based on an email. He has to do more than that".

He will hope for a reply, but in most cases, he won't get one.

Instead, she will simply continue to move on without him.

So, if you want to get your ex back, just understand that it can't all be about how much you care for her or how much you need her back in your life, because she won't care about that.

What she cares about now is how she feels, not about how you feel and what you want.

So, your approach to getting her back needs to be about how you make her feel when you talk to her on the phone or in person.

When she begins to associate positive, happy emotions with you again (i.e. respect, attraction, love), she will then feel lucky that you still care for her and were man enough to stick around and get her back.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

2. Feeling attached to his ex because he is unable to attract new, quality women

Some guys feel that they got lucky by scoring their girlfriend (e.g. she was out of his league, he fumbled his way into a relationship with her, they were drunk when they met, he grew on her over time and she eventually gave him a chance when she was lonely and hurt after being dumped by a guy), so the idea of having to go out and find a new woman seems next to impossible.

As a result, a guy like that will focus on remaining emotionally attached to his ex, rather than facing the difficult task of attracting a new woman who is as good as her.

He will secretly feel as though he is unworthy of attractive, quality women and that he needs to get her back, otherwise he will be alone and unhappy for a long time.

Yet, thinking like that not only makes him appear unattractive to other women (i.e. because women can sense insecurity and desperation and it turns them off), but it also turns his ex off even more (i.e. because she picks it up on his desperation in the tonality of his voice and in the subtleties of his body language and behavior).

So, what should a guy do instead?

A guy needs to understand that a woman wants to feel lucky to be with her man, not like sheâ€™s doing him a favor by being his girlfriend because he can't attract other quality women like her.

If you want to get your ex back, you must believe in yourself and in your attractiveness to her, as well as to other women.

If you donâ€™t value yourself and believe that you are good enough for her, neither will she and as a result, getting her back will become a lot more difficult for you.

Another common mistake that guys make after being dumped by the woman they love isâ€¦!

3. Not even knowing that it is totally possible for him to get her back

Some guys give up when they hear a woman say something like, "I don't have feelings for you anymore. It's over. Leave me alone. Goodbye."

A guy feels as though her words are final and there's absolutely nothing he can do about it.

Yet, here's the thingâ€¦!

Just because your ex doesnâ€™t have feelings for you right now, it doesnâ€™t mean that she will be stuck feeling that way about you forever.

You can literally change how she feels today, tomorrow, the next day or within the next week.

You can interact with her and reawaken her feelings for you and when you do that, it will then be totally possible for you to get her back.

After all, her feelings for you have changed many times before, true?

For example: She went from not knowing you, to liking you, to being in love with you and then falling out of love with you.

So, why should her feelings be permanent this time?

They're not.

You can literally change how she feels and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Do Women Commit if You Walk Away?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends.

Here are 5 possible reactions from a woman when her ex walks away:

1. She doesn't care because she's not in love with him anyway

In most cases, for a woman to get to the point where she wants to break up with a guy, it means that she will have already disconnected with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, if he decides to walk away after she dumps him, rather than make her think, â€œOh no! Iâ€™ve made the biggest mistake of my life! Heâ€™s the love of my life and I donâ€™t want to lose him. I need to get back with him right now!â€ she thinks something along the lines of, â€œCool! Well, that was easier than expected. I thought he was going to try and make me change my mind, but he just walked away. Now I can move on and find myself another man who can give me the kind of relationship experience I actually want. Iâ€™m free to move on without having to deal with an ex who wonâ€™t let go. That was easy!â€

She then focuses on meeting new guys, hooking up and falling in love.

Meanwhile, her ex has walked away and is hoping that she will panic, worry and miss him.

Yet, she hasn't been panicking, worrying or missing him because when she broke up with him, she no longer had feelings for him.

So, she just didn't care when he walked away and didn't try to get her back after the break up.

If he then tries to initiate contact after a few weeks or even months, she will almost certainly reject him, ignore him or reply and tell him that she is with someone else now.

He is then left feeling broken hearted and wondering, â€œWhy did this happen? Why didnâ€™t it work? I thought women chase if a guy walks away. Why didn't it work?â€

The answer is this: If a woman doesn't have strong feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for a guy, him walking away doesn't really matter to her.

Watch this video where I explain that answer in more detail and give you examples to help you understand what you need to do insteadâ€|

If your ex has lost touch with her feelings for you and has possibly even said things like, â€œI donâ€™t have feelings for you anymore,â€ then walking away probably isn't going to make her want to commit to you.

What will?

Reawakening her feelings for you, so she starts to feel as though losing you will be something that she will regret for the rest of her life.

When you approach the ex back process in that way, your ex will naturally start to drop her guard and start wanting to be your girl again.

You can then confidently guide her back into a relationship now, rather than having to walk away for months or years in the hope that she comes back, only to find out that she quickly moved on and never really cared that you walked away.

Another possible reaction a woman might have when her ex walks away isâ€¦!

2. She does care that he walks away because she was only putting him through a break up to hopefully gain more power in the relationship

Before a woman will commit 100% to being with a guy for life, she will usually test him to see how much of a man he really is.

One of the ways she will do that is by breaking up with him to see if he will crumble under the pressure and start handing over his power to her (e.g. "I will do anything you want. Please just give me another chance"), or if he will maintain his dignity and walk away.

If he hands over his power to her and essentially starts sucking up to her and doing whatever she wants, she will lose respect for him.

Then, rather than making her want to commit to him, she will begin to feel turned off by his lack of confidence and manliness.

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

In most cases, a woman doesnâ€¦t want to feel more emotionally dominant than her man.

She wants to be treated well and loved, but she doesn't want a man to turn into a wimpy, do-whatever-she-says kind of guy just because she is threatening to break up with him.

A woman wants to be with a guy who knows how to confidently lead the way in a relationship, take charge and not allow her to get away with bad behavior or with treating him disrespectfully.

If he can do that, while still being a good man, then she will look up to him, respect him and be a good girl to him.

She will happily and eagerly commit to him because she knows how difficult it is to find a man who doesn't crumble under a woman's pressure.

So, if your ex has broken up with you to see if you will crumble under pressure, then walking away will definitely help make her want to commit.

It will be a great way to remind your ex of her place in the relationship with you (i.e. beneath you in terms of dominance, which is where she wants to be).

Of course, her being beneath you in terms of dominance is not about making her feel beneath you in terms of intelligence, value or worth.

Instead, it's about allowing her to realize that she's not in the power position in the relationship in terms of dominance.

If you can be strong enough emotionally to create that type of dynamic with her, it will naturally spark intense feelings of respect and sexual attraction inside of her.

Then, she will be one saying things like, "I made a big mistake by breaking up with you. I realize now that youâ€¦re the man I want to commit to. Will you please forgive me and give me another chance? I canâ€¦t live without you! I love you. Being apart from you has made me realize that. Please, let's just get back together. No more of this break up stuff. We're meant to be together and that's pretty obvious now. I love you."

You can then give her another chance to be with you.

Of course, walking away doesn't always work.

For example: Another possible reaction a woman might have when her ex walks away isâ€¦!

3. She feels some pain initially, but gets over it quickly and decides to move on

Sometimes a woman will initially feel sad and depressed if her ex walks away from her after a break up.

She may even think things like, â€œI canâ€™t believe it was so easy for him to walk away from what we had. I thought I was special to him, but I guess I was wrong. What we had is over and he probably never really wanted me to commit to him anyway. After all, if it was that easy for him to walk away, then he clearly didn't care about me. Even though it really hurts to think about it, I need to face the fact that heâ€™s gone and focus on getting over him so I can move on too.â€

Here's the thingâ€¦!

If a woman has had some experience with break ups she will know that no matter how sad, lonely and depressed she might feel initially, those painful feelings won't last forever.

So, rather than focusing on how much pain she is feeling, she will focus on doing the kind of things that will help her get over him as quickly as possible (e.g. spending more time going out with her single friends, meeting and hooking up with new guys, putting more effort into her work or studies, taking up an interesting new hobby, using dating sites or apps to line up dates, flirting with a guy who has a crush on her at work and then going out on a date with him).

If her ex then contacts her after a few weeks or months, she will probably have healed enough to say something like, â€œSorry, but itâ€™s too late for us now. I honestly thought I mattered to you, but you just walked away from what we had like it meant nothing. It was a good thing you did that, because it made me realize that committing to you would have been a huge mistake. If you could walk away from me so easily after you said that you didn't want to break up, what would happen if you were unhappy in the relationship? You would just turn your back on me and leave. Well, fortunately, Iâ€™m over you now, so it doesn't matter. I wish you all the best, but I'm not getting back with you and I don't want to talk to you anymore. Goodbye.â€

Another possible reaction a woman might have when her ex walks away isâ€¦!

4. She hooks up with a new guy to get over her ex

There are some women who donâ€™t like the idea of being single and lonely, so they immediately get into a new relationship after a break up, or quickly begin dating new guys for casual sex and love.

If a woman like that notices that her ex has walked away after the break up and isn't contacting her, she will usually just go about her normal business of hooking up with new guys quickly to get over him and move on.

So, if your ex is the kind of woman who always wants to be in a relationship or have guys that she is dating, then walking away probably isn't going to work.

With a woman like her, youâ€™re more likely to get her to commit by interacting with her and attracting her in new and exciting ways.

Another possible reaction a woman might have when her ex walks away isâ€¦!

5. She stays in contact with her ex pretending to be interested, while she finds a replacement guy

Sometimes a woman will feel so angry with her ex for walking away and not trying to get her back, that she will decide to get revenge.

To get revenge, she will remain in contact with him and string him along (i.e. make him feel as though he still has a chance), while she secretly begins dating and hooking up with new guys behind his back.

To string him along, she might say something like, “Not hearing from you since the break up has made me realize how much I still care about you. I was a fool to let what we had go. Do you think you can ever forgive me for not wanting to commit so that we can work things out between us?”

If he then jumps at the chance to get her back and says something like, “Of course we can work things out! It’s what I’ve been hoping for all along,” she can then string him along by saying that she wants to take things slow.

She might say, “Okay cool! I want to work things out too, but I need some time. I have to be on my own for a week or two just to make sure that I really miss you and want you back. I think I will of course, but I owe it to myself and to you to have some time to myself.”

In the meantime, she secretly focuses on finding a replacement guy.

Then, when her ex gets in contact with her and hopes that she is ready to see him, she says, “Ummâ well, I have something to tell you. I’ve met someone else and I really like him. Meeting him has shown me that you and I would never be right for each other. I’m sorry to do this to you, but I have to follow my heart. So, please accept that we’ll never get back together again and just move on. I should have told you earlier, but I didn’t want to hurt your feelings.”

She then gets revenge on her ex for walking away and not trying to get her back.

He then has to live with the pain of being broken up with once again, after having his hopes up that they were in the process of getting back together.

4 Common Problems You Might Encounter if You Walk Away From Her

If you’re thinking about walking away from your ex as a way to get her to commit, you might run into the following problems:

1. She doesn’t ever contact you, so you ended up losing confidence in your attractiveness to her

When a guy doesn’t know how to re-attract his ex woman, he might walk away to hopefully show her that he doesn’t care.

He thinks, “When she realizes that I’m not even trying to get her back, she will come running back because she will know that we had was irreplaceable. We can then get engaged/married/move in together and have the kind of relationship I actually want with her.”

It sounds like a good plan, but it rarely works, especially when a woman is no longer attracted to her ex.

In almost all cases, a guy loses more and more confidence as the days, weeks and sometimes months pass where he doesn't hear from his ex woman.

Naturally, he begins to doubt his attractiveness to her and as a result, he loses confidence in his chances of getting her back.

He then begins to wonder, "I thought a woman would come back and commit if a guy walked away. Why isn't it working? Maybe I'm just not good enough for her."

He then begins to lose even more confidence in himself and his attractiveness to her.

As a result, he may give up on trying to get her back and end up losing the love of his life, simply due to using the ineffective strategy of walking away to hopefully make her commit.

The next problem that might arise is

2. You wait so long for her to come back that you end up losing your ability to attract women in general

When a guy spends too much time waiting for his ex woman to come back, he often stops doing the things that make him attractive to women.

For example: A guy might

- Avoid going out with his friends to have some fun, because he doesn't want his ex to hear about it and think that he's over her.
- Spend more time at home playing video games/watching TV to distract himself, which ends up turning him into a bit of a loner, or makes him start to feel anti-social or even socially anxious.
- Post sad, lonely comments or photos (e.g. a photo of the beach, rather than a photo of him at the beach with friends. A photo of his dog, rather than walking his dog with a friend or two) on social media in the hope that his ex will see how miserable he is without her and come back to him.

Naturally, that type of behavior makes him seem unattractive to most women who then happen to interact with him (i.e. because he comes across as being emotionally weak, wimpy and needy or a bit of a loner who lacks social confidence), so he gets rejected.

He then ends up losing even more confidence in himself and in his ability to attract women in general.

As a result, he ends up missing his ex woman even more and thinking things like, "At least she loved me for who I was. I hate my life now. If I want a new girlfriend, I'm going to need to become confident again. I can't be bothered doing that. I just want my ex back."

This causes him to go into his shell even more and not only avoid trying to interact with his ex to re-attract her, but also avoid interacting with pretty women to attract and start dating them.

Months and possibly even years pass and he eventually realizes that walking away from her wasn't the best idea after all.

The next problem that might arise if you walk away, is

3. You over analyze any signs of interest from her

When a guy walks away, it usually doesn't also mean that he stops thinking about his ex woman, or stops looking at her social media posts.

In most cases, a guy who has walked away after a break up (to hopefully get his ex woman to come running back), will end up over-analyzing his ex's every move (e.g. on social media, what she said to him via text, the last conversation they had, what she said to a mutual friend) in an attempt to hopefully understand her feelings for him.

Essentially, he hopes that she will say or do something to clearly indicate that she misses him, wants him back and hopes that it makes it happen.

For example: If they are still texting, he might wonder about things like, "Why hasn't she replied yet? Is she with another guy at the moment?" or, "She usually doesn't take this long to reply. Did I say something wrong?"

Alternatively, if they are still friends on Facebook, he might think, "She clicked like on my Facebook post. Was that a hint that she wants me to contact her?" or, "She posted a sad photo of herself online. Maybe she wants me to see that she's missing me so that I will call her" or, "She added a new guy as a friend. Is she sleeping with him? Have I lost her?!"

Here's the thing!

Over-analyzing your ex's actions will probably end up making you feel pretty crazy about her.

If you want her to commit to a relationship again, you have to be bold enough to make it happen by re-attracting her on a phone call or in person and then getting to a hug, kiss and then sex.

The next problem that might arise if you just walk away, is!

4. You wait too long to start the ex back process, so she moves on

Even if walking away makes your ex worry about losing you and want you back, chances are high that she's not going to make it obvious to you.

Instead, like most women, she will wait and see if you have the balls to take the lead in the ex back process and get her back.

If she realizes that you're not making a move, a woman will usually try to move on by dating and sleeping with new men.

So, if you want her to commit to you, don't wait too long to start the ex back process.

Interact with her (on the phone and especially in person) and spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love, so she actually has a reason to want to commit to you again.

Don't waste anymore time waiting that she will come running back and saying that she wants to commit.

When guys use that approach, they usually waste a lot of time and end up losing their woman as well.

So, if you want her back, make it happen now.

She is waiting for you...

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Can I Get My Ex to Be Truthful About How She Really Feels About Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's what you need to do...

1. Stop asking her how she feels and start making her have feelings for you

Not asking her how she feels might seem like the opposite of what you want to do, but in reality, it will actually get you what you want.

You want her to have strong feelings for you and want you back, right?

Well, what you need to understand is that women don't like to be asked about their feelings for an ex guy.

Instead, what women respond best to is when their ex guy makes them have feelings again, rather than asking her to explain her feelings.

By the way!

Even when you make your ex have feelings for you again, trying to get her to tell you how she feels still isn't the right approach.

Why?

In most cases, even when a woman begins to have feelings for her ex again, she won't want to admit it.

Instead, she will keep quiet about her feelings and just see what happens.

Why?

Here are a few common reasons why a woman will do that:

- She wants to test to see if her ex is man enough to take the lead and get her back, regardless of what she's saying or doing to discourage him.
- She doesn't want to seem too eager in case her ex then loses interest in getting her back (e.g. he only wanted to see that she wanted him back and when she shows that, he feels good about himself and then moves on).
- She needs a bit more time to finally decide whether or not she wants to get back together or move on.

This is why nagging your ex by saying things like, "Please just be truthful to me about me how you really feel. Just be honest. I want to know," is likely only going to get you stonewalled.

So, what should a guy do instead?

Use every interaction that you have with her from now on (especially on phone calls or in person, rather than text), to make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again, so she can then naturally fall back in love with you.

The more you focus on making her have strong feelings for you again (e.g. by using humor to break down her defenses rather than being stressed and serious when you talk to her, making her feel like a feminine woman in your presence rather than feeling like just a friend, maintaining your confidence with her and showing her you are an emotionally strong man, rather than showing her that you feel lost, confused or hurt without her), the more drawn to you she will feel.

Her feelings will begin to show in the tonality of her voice, her body language and in the way she talks and responds to you.

You will see that sparkle come back into her eyes, where she looks at you with feelings of respect, attraction and love flowing through her.

You can then build on those feelings and get her back.

However, if you just sit around asking, “How can I get my ex to be truthful about how she really feels about me?” and then try to get her to explain herself, she will probably get fed up with dealing with your ineffective approach and then just move on.

So, don't waste your time and energy trying to get her to open up and be honest.

Instead, make her have strong feelings for you again, so she naturally feels drawn to you and wants back.

When you do that, you will see the truth about how she really feels.

She will show you by way of her actions and behavior that she feels attracted and in love again.

Another thing you can do is

2. Let her see that you don't need to get an answer from her

Sometimes a guy becomes fixated on getting a clear answer from his ex about her feelings for him.

Yet, here's the thing

If a woman senses that a guy needs to know her true feelings for him so that he can take feel better about himself or decide what to do with his life (e.g. to get her back or move on without her), it actually turns her off him even more. Why?

Women are attracted to men who are confident about their attractiveness to a woman and don't need to be told, “I like you” or, “I find you attractive.”

Women are attracted to men who know that they are likeable, attractive, cool, interesting and valuable, without having to be told by a woman.

So, if a guy behaves in an insecure manner by needing to know his ex's real feelings for him and then loses confidence in himself when she doesn't tell him, she won't be able to fully respect him and feel attracted to him.

She will feel disappointed by his lack of independent confidence and how much pressure he is putting on her to help him manage his emotional state.

If she was hoping that they would get back together somehow, she will also feel disappointed that he is ruining that with his insecurity and neediness.

So, the next time you interact with your ex, make sure you don't mention her feelings for you and try to get her to give you an answer or even hint at an answer.

Just know that you are more than good enough for her and then, allow that confidence to come through in your body language, vibe, conversation style, behavior and actions.

When you do, she will naturally feel sparks of respect and attraction for you for being such a man about this all of a sudden.

Even if she brings up the topic and says something like, “I don’t know how I feel right now,” just laugh and say in a relaxed, easy-going way, “I’m cool with that. We don’t need to tell each other exactly how we feel. It’s fine. Let’s just relax, hang out and enjoy each other’s company” and then change the subject.

She will likely be shocked (in a good way) by your new, confident attitude and begin to hope that you’re finally starting to understand how to handle the situation.

From there, you need to use every interaction you have with her to

3. Build on her feelings for you by creating sexual tension that you don’t release right away

Sexual tension happens when a man and a woman feel sexual desire for each other, but don’t immediately release it with kissing and sex.

When that happens, the sexual tension builds up to the point where they feel like they will burst if they don’t kiss and have sex.

In other words, they both want it, but it’s not happening right away.

Something is in the way (e.g. they are ex’s and she isn’t sure if she should do it right away, they are talking on the phone and live hours apart, they are in a café and can’t just start kissing or having sex right then and there).

So, from now on, use interactions with your ex to make her feel attracted to you again, but don’t ask for a relationship.

Make her feel so attracted and drawn to you again that she feels like she just has to have you.

One of the ways you can do that is by combining some flirting into ordinary conversations that you’re having with her.

For example: Imagine that you’re at a coffee shop with your ex and are talking about what each of you has been up to since the break up.

You might be saying something like, “Yeah, I’ve really been busy lately. Remember how I always talked about (mention a goal or activity you always wanted to accomplish that she knows about)? Well I’m now doing it and it’s even better than I thought it would be. How about you? What have you been up to?”

She might then tell you something that she’s been doing and you can then respond by saying, “Wow, that’s awesome! I’m really happy for you. By the way, you look sexy today and you smell great too.”

Then add, “Come on over here and let me get a whiff of that enticing perfume you’re wearing” and lean into her.

Lean in close to her neck area just under her ear and say, “Mmmm, that’s delicious!”

Then, pull away and continue on with the conversation as if nothing happened.

Do this (i.e. add flirting in between stages of normal conversation) several times throughout the meet up, to build up the sexual tension between you and her.

She will be feeling attracted to you, even if she tries to hide it or laugh it off.

BTW: In case you didn’t know, women love to be told that they smell great.

Some guys are worried about talking about how a woman smells, but when a woman hears, “Mmm, you smell great,” it makes her feel more sexually confident and open around you.

4. Slowly build up to a kiss to release some of the sexual tension

When you build up enough sexual tension between you and your ex, she will naturally want to release that tension with kissing and sex.

So, when you have done that, you can then say something along the lines of, “Well, it’s good to see that we can still get along well with each other, don’t you think? I think we deserve a hug for being such cool exes. Come over here and give me a hug” and then move towards her, open your arms and initiate a hug.

By this stage, she will likely be more than willing to release at least a bit of the sexual desire in her, so she will easily agree to a hug.

Then, once you have her in your arms, slowly and confidently pull back (while still hugging her) and give her a kiss as well.

In most ex back cases where sexual tension has been built up, a woman will respond positively to being kissed and you can then go to your place or hers to hook up sexually.

If she’s not willing to do more than kiss, don’t worry about it though.

The important thing is that you’ve broken down her walls of resistance, made her feel sexually attracted and opened her up to the idea of being a couple again.

You can then build on those feelings and get her back.

4 Mistakes Guys Make When Trying to Get an Ex to Reveal Her True Feelings

As you may now understand, it doesn’t matter whether or not your ex is being truthful about how she really feels about.

What matters is how you make her feel when you interact with her.

Understand, right?

That is what matters.

That is what gets an ex back.

So, from now on, it’s essential that you don’t say or do things that will turn her off.

For example: Some of the ways guys mess up when in a situation like yours is

1. Thinking that expressing his feelings will make her have feelings

A guy might sometimes say to his ex, “I know that it’s hard for you to express yourself, so I will tell you how I feel. If it makes it any easier for you, I want you to know that I still care for you, I still love you and really want you back. I really want to work things out with you. I love you more than anything.”

Essentially, he’s hoping she will then say something like, “Oh, then that changes everything! Now that I know you still care for me, I can open up and be honest with you too! I still love you and *want you back too, but Iâ€¦ve just been too shy to tell you. Thanks for being so brave and telling me first. Now we can now focus on getting back together again.*â€¦

Here's the thingâ€¦!

Although it would be nice if all you had to do was tell a woman how you feel and she would then love you and want you back, it just doesn't work that way.

If a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for a man, then him telling her about his feelings isnâ€¦t going to make her suddenly feel the same way about him.

So, if you want your ex to show you how she feels and want you back, donâ€¦t waste time discussing your feelings with her.

Instead, focus on making her feel respect and sexual attraction for the new, improved version of you, so that opening up to you happens because it feels like the right thing to do for her.

When you approach it that way, you don't have to try to force an answer out of her that she doesn't want to give.

Instead, you allow her to approach it in a way that is most comfortable for her (i.e. she goes with how she feels).

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

2. Not understanding that she isn't required to share her feelings if she doesn't want to

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

Even if a guy really loves a woman and wants to know exactly how she feels, she doesnâ€¦t actually have to tell him if she doesnâ€¦t want to.

Itâ€¦s her decision and nothing he says and does can change that, because he doesnâ€¦t own her. She can decide to tell him or not to tell him.

Thatâ€¦s how it works.

The same goes for a man.

A man doesn't have to tell a woman how he feels if he doesnâ€¦t want to, because she doesn't own him or control him.

In a relationship, if a man or a woman wants to express how they feel, they will do it if they want to, but trying to force it isn't the right approach.

So, donâ€¦t make the mistake of expecting your ex to be truthful about how she really feels about you based on your need need to know.

If you approach it that way, she will probably close up even more and give you even less details just to show you that she makes her own decisions and can't be controlled.

Another mistake that guys often make when in your shoes isâ€¦!

3. Trying to make her feel guilty for not telling him the truth about her feelings

A guy might say to his ex woman, â€¦Why are you being like this? All Iâ€¦m asking for is some clarity so I can try to understand what happened. Doesnâ€¦t what we had together mean anything to you? If you felt even a little bit of love for me, youâ€¦d tell me how you really feel about me now.

*So, please tell me. I need to know. You can't just leave me feeling clueless and never knowing how you really felt. Just tell me. You owe me an explanation. I deserve to know, rather than being left in the dark like this. After all we have been through together, I deserve to know.*â□□

Although he might feel justified in asking her for an answer, the fact is that trying to make a woman feel guilty for not wanting to reveal her feelings rarely makes her change her mind and come clean.

Women hate it when men put too much pressure on them to open up (this is especially true when dealing with a guy that they've recently broken up with).

So, rather than trying to guilt your ex into revealing her true feelings for you (which even if it works, it doesn't guarantee that she will tell you the truth and not just a lie that she hopes will get you off her back), simply focus on reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you so she feels drawn to you again.

That's how to get an ex back.

Another mistake that other guys make when in a situation like your isâ□|

4. Getting angry with her and demanding an answer from her

If a woman doesn't open up and tell her ex the truth about how she really feels, he might eventually lose his cool and get angry with her.

He might start shouting at her and saying things like, *â□□ Why are you being such a bitch to me?! All I'm asking for is an honest answer. Just tell me how you feel about me damnit! I deserve to know! Stop being so immature. Tell me how you feel! All I'm asking for is a simple answer. Tell me how you really feel about me!*â□□

In cases like that, a guy doesn't know how else to get his ex woman to open up, so he attempts to intimidate her into telling him what he wants to know.

Yet, that approach rarely works.

In fact, most women see the angry outburst as another reason to remain broken up.

A woman might then say to herself, *â□□ If I was confused about my feelings for him before, but now I know for sure he's not the man for me. He's crazy and if this is how he is behaving now, who knows what he would do to me at a later stage if things didn't go his way. I need to get away from him as quickly as possible. I've got to move on and find a new guy.*â□□

Alternatively, she might get angry in response to his angry and even though it might not be the truth, she might say something like, *â□□ Okay, you want to know how I really feel about you? Well I hate you and I never want to see you again! I never loved you. You mean nothing to me. So, don't ever contact me again. If you do, I will get a restraining order out on you. There! Now you know exactly how I feel. I hope you're happy. Goodbye!*â□□ and then end the phone call, or leave if they are talking in person.

So, if you want to get your ex back easily, don't let your situation get to the point where both you and her get angry and say things you don't mean or will regret later.

Instead, just focus on using an easier, stress free approach to getting her back.

Re-attract her, seduce her and make her want you back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Break Down My Ex's Boundaries So She Opens Up to Me Again

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 6 things that you can do to break down your ex's boundaries, so she opens back up to you:

1. Stop coming across as though your #1 aim is to get a relationship with her

When a guy still has strong feelings for his ex woman and wants to get back with her as quickly as possible, he's usually going to trying to achieve that every time he talks to her.

She is going to sense that and if she doesn't have strong feelings for him, then her guard is going to go up.

She will feel as though he is trying to get her back into a relationship, even though the feelings aren't mutual.

Here's the thing:

When a woman is at a point where she's disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, hearing him talk about getting back together is going to make her feel uncomfortable, pressured and as though she is being forced into something that she doesn't want.

As a result, she will be thinking things like, "He's trying to force me back into a relationship even though I don't want that. I really don't enjoy interacting with him anymore. It's just too stressful. All he wants is a relationship. He doesn't get it that I don't even have much or any feelings for him anymore. Why would I want a relationship? I have to show him that I'm not open to a relationship."

She then begins to make excuses not to talk to him over the phone, or see him in person anymore.

The more time she spends away from him, the more she begins to get over him and want to move on.

This is why, if you want to break down your ex's boundaries and get her to open up, make sure that she gets the sense that you're not pushing for a relationship.

Additionally, make sure that you:

2. Begin attracting her in new ways

If your ex is not opening up to you, it's probably because your approach to attraction isn't appealing to her anymore.

Maybe it's time for you to try a new approach:

Some guys miss out on getting an ex woman back because they use an approach to attraction that used to work on her (e.g. being really nice, buying her gifts, listening more, being more understanding).

A guy might think, "It worked on her when we were in a relationship, so I don't see why it wouldn't work on her again."

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that it only worked before because she was still in love with him and willing to work on the relationship.

So this time around, flowers, romantic love letters, gifts, being nice, listening and being understanding just isn't going to cut it.

If a guy uses the same old approach with her, she may think, “Is this all he knows how to do? Does he honestly believe that flowers, letters and being nice is what will make me feel like giving him another chance? Well, he’s in for a big surprise. I know him too well, so his usual tactics don’t impress me. If he wants me back, he’s going to need to show me a new side to himself that I can actually feel interested in.”

So, if you want an ex woman back who is tired of your approach to her, you need to make sure that your approach to attraction is new and different from now on.

Begin attracting her in new and exciting ways, so that she can start feeling respect and attraction for you again (e.g. If you’ve always been too nice, start being more ballsy, while still being a good guy).

Only when she feels attracted to you in new ways, will she be happy to let her boundaries come down and open up to you again.

By the way!

If you’re not sure how to attract her in new ways, here are some examples of what naturally attracts a woman to a man:

- He has purpose and direction in his life outside of his relationship with her, rather than seeing her as his purpose and reason for living.
- He takes the lead during interactions and is assertive while still being a good guy, rather than allowing her to walk all over him.
- He maintains his confidence regardless of what she says or does to make him doubt himself.
- He makes her feel feminine and girly when she’s with him because he uses ballsy humor and has a masculine attitude, rather than making her feel neutral because he just talks to her like a friend.

The more you begin to attract her in ways that she doesn’t expect, the less she will be able to keep her boundaries up.

She won’t be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and then, the idea of getting back together again starts to seem appealing to her.

The next thing you can do to break down your ex’s boundaries so she opens up to you again is!

3. Let her see that you’re a completely new man now

You can’t tell her that you’ve changed and have become a new and improved man, because she probably won’t believe you.

Instead, you need to let her see that you’ve changed based on how you communicate and interact with her on phone calls and in person.

In other words, don’t tell her, show her.

For example: Imagine that a guy is on a call with his ex woman.

She says something along the lines of, “I just don’t have feelings for you anymore.”

A good way to show her that heâs a new man now, is to reply by saying something like, *âI accept that. I know that I made a bunch of silly mistakes in our relationship that turned you off, so I donât blame you for not feeling the same way anymore.*â

This shows her that he is being emotionally mature, rather than needy and emotionally sensitive, which automatically makes her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

If he responded with something like, “Don’t say that. I still love you. Please just give me a chance to prove that I have changed. I have changed so much, I promise” then she’s going to feel turned off by his desperation and the fact that he looks at her as being in the power position as they talk.

Another example is where a guy got broken up with because he wasnât ballsy enough in the relationship and ended up being a bit feminine or wimpy in his thinking, behavior and actions.

If his ex woman says something like, *âItâs all your fault we broke up!*â he can show her that he’s no longer a softy, by laughing and saying something like, *âAll my fault? It’s your fault. You weren’t able to inspire me to be a great boyfriend, so I ended up being a crappy boyfriend. It’s all your fault.*â

Obviously, he will only be joking when he says that and he can then have a laugh with her about it, rather than taking her attack so seriously.

She can then feel respect for the fact that he has become emotionally stronger and can now stand up to her, rather than allowing her to walk all over him like she did in the past.

As a result, she automatically starts feeling some attraction for him again, which then makes her want to interact with him even more to see where things go from there.

When you show your ex that you truly have changed and improved in some of the ways that actually matter to her, her boundaries begin to break down and she starts to open up again.

Another way to bring your ex’s boundaries down is toâ

4. Have some boundaries too

A woman respects a man who respects himself, while also being respectful towards her.

That means, you canât become a doormat for your ex to walk all over and then expect that she gives you respect for that.

That’s not how respect works.

You have to see yourself as being a man who is worthy of respect and then expect that, while also being a good man to her.

It’s not about being really nice to her, sucking up to her and then hoping that she respects you because of how sweet you are.

Women respect balls.

So, let her see that you’re a good guy with balls.

Not a soft guy who is ready to be walked all over by her, as long as he gets a chance with her.

One of the ways to show her that you deserve respect is to begin having some boundaries for yourself.

For example: Rather than accepting whatever conditions she gives you (e.g. “Only text me once a week” or, “I will meet up with you, but I am only staying for one minute and then I’m going”), you need to set some of your own boundaries and rules, while still being respectful towards her.

If she says, “Only text me once a week” you can simply laugh and say, “Okay, can do. How many words can I send in the text? 5, 10, 20?” and then have a laugh to let her know that you’re not taking her ridiculous rule seriously.

You can then say, “Hey, I get what you’re trying to say. You don’t want me texting every day. Got it. Yet, texting once a week is just silly. I’ll text you whenever I want, but I won’t text often.”

She can then see that you’re still being a good guy and being respectful towards her, but you’re not being a pushover.

As a result, she will feel respect for you and when a woman feels respect for a man, she will also begin to feel attracted to him.

5. Use humor

One of the biggest mistakes that a guy can make when trying to get an ex back, is to be too serious when interacting with her (e.g. he talks about the relationship and the mistakes he made, he agrees with whatever she says so as not to upset her, he talks in a very polite or formal manner, he is overly respectful and considerate).

Essentially, he’s hoping that when she sees how nice he is being, she will want to open back up to him and give him another chance.

Yet, life doesn’t work that way.

Women don’t feel sexually attracted to niceness from a guy who is afraid of them.

Women respect balls.

One of the ways to show a woman that you have balls, is to have the balls to use ballsy humor.

Did I say balls enough in that last sentence?

Lolâ€¦!

Balls.

Lookâ€¦!

If you want your ex to open up to you again, don’t be so serious with her all the time.

Humor makes people relax and open up, which is what you want your ex to do.

So, focus on making her smile and laugh when you talk to her, rather than trying to discuss the relationship and convince her to give you another chance.

When you approach it in that way, she can then begin to think, “Why am I enjoying talking to him so much all of a sudden? He seems so different now. Maybe he has learned his lesson and changed.

*Maybe I should give him one more chance. After all, I feel good when I’m talking to him now. Having make up sex with him could be fun.*â€¦

6. Get her to feel a renewed sense of respect for you

For a woman to open up to the idea of getting back with her ex, she usually needs to be able to look up to him, respect him and feel attracted to him again first.

This is why it’s so important for you to re-spark your ex’s feelings of respect for you before trying to get her to discuss having a relationship again.

Begin:

- Showing her your confidence by not feeling nervous or unsure of yourself when she is being reserved or withdrawn around, or when sheâs saying things like, âm sorry, but what we had is over. Please accept it and move on.
- Showing her by the way you respond to her (e.g. calm rather than highly strung, patient rather than easily annoyed) that youâre no longer the same guy she broke up with.
- Using humor to diffuse a tense situation and get her laughing, smiling and feeling good when sheâs in a bad mood, rather than becoming tense or worrying that youâre losing her.
- Standing up to her in a dominant, but loving way if she tries to control you during conversation (e.g. you laugh at her attempts to create drama and make things out to be worse than they actually are).
- Flirting with her to make her feel sexually attracted to you again.

The more respect and attraction you make her feel, the more she will open back up to you.

She stops seeing you as the guy who broke her heart and caused her a lot of pain and disappointment. Instead, she starts seeing you in a new, more positive light and becomes curious about what it would feel like to get back with you.

When she is open in that way, you can easily get her back, or at least hook up with her sexually to see how you both feel afterwards.

2 Mistakes to Be Aware of When Trying to Break Down Your Exâs Boundaries So She Opens Up to You Again

1. Seeking pity from her as he tries to get her to open back up to him

Sometimes a guy might sulk, whine or even cry to his ex woman about how much heâs suffering due to the break up.

He hopes that feel guilty, let down her guard and then give him another chance.

Yet, sulking and seeking pity rarely (if ever) works on a woman who has decided to finally break up with a guy and try to move on.

Rather than breaking down her boundaries, it causes her close up even more because she sees the sulking and seeking pity as a pathetic attempt to manipulate her into giving him another chance.

Even though the guy might be a good guy and have good intentions, a woman usually wonât see it that way.

He wonât see what he is doing as pathetic, but she will.

Women hate it when guys break down emotionally and cry, whine or sulk to get their way with a woman.

So, donât bother trying to make your ex woman feel pity for you as your way of getting her back because it will most-likely backfire.

Instead, just focus on reawakening her feelings of respect and attraction, so she naturally feels drawn to you and becomes open to giving you another chance.

Another mistake that other guys make when in a situation like yours isâ€¦

2. Not knowing that he can be in the position of power if he chooses to

Sometimes a guy will hand all of his power over to his ex woman and allow her to call the shots (e.g. he only texts her because she told him that she didn't want to speak to him on the phone, even though he could get her back so much easier if he spoke to her on a call).

Essentially, heâ€™s being a good, little boy who follows her orders in the hope that it will make her open back up to him again.

Yet, thatâ€™s not how women work.

If you hand your power over to a woman, she won't be able to respect you.

If she can't respect you, she won't be able to feel sexually attracted to you and without those two all-important feelings, thereâ€™s no reason for her to let down her guard and open herself up to you again.

So, make sure that you maintain your position of power as the man, rather than thinking that it will impress her if you hand over your power to her (i.e. be on your very best behavior, be extra nice to her, tell her or give her the impression that you're willing to do whatever she wants if she will just be so kind enough to give you another chance).

In other words, don't let her call all the shots.

For example: If she said that you could only text her, but not call her, you need to have the balls to laugh at that.

Be a good guy about it and laugh at it in a loving, respectful way, but don't take her order so seriously.

Instead, laugh and say, "Okay, I get it. The last thing you would want right now is for you and me to be getting on long, drawn out phone calls about the relationship. I get it. So, I definitely won't call you and attempt to have a conversation like that. However, I will call you to say hi as a friend once in a while, until we decide to never talk again if we get to that point."

By saying that, she can see that you are being respectful, but you're also standing your ground, which then makes her respect you and feel attracted to you, even if she doesn't openly admit it.

As a result, her boundaries will naturally come down and she will want to interact with you more and more.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why Does My Ex Want to Control Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will try to control her ex man:

1. She is testing you to see if you will take control and start being more of a manly man, or keep handing over your power to her like a wimpy man would

A common reason for a break up between a man and a woman is where the woman feels more emotionally dominant than her man (i.e. she can control him).

Some women (usually insecure or unattractive women) like it when they can control a man, but most women don't.

So, if a man is unable to stand up for himself in a loving, but assertive way when in a relationship with a woman, she will lose respect for him and eventually stop feeling attracted to him.

When she's sick and tired of not being able to feel attracted and in love, she will eventually get to the point where she breaks up with him.

Yet, even though she goes through with the break up, she will hope that there is still a chance for them.

For example, she may think, "Hopefully this break up will shock him into manning up. If he can show me that he can take control and be the man from now on, then we might be able to work things out. I want to feel girly and feminine in a relationship. I don't want to feel as though I am more powerful and dominant than him. I was okay with that for a while, but I just can't deal with it anymore. So, I hope he takes this break up as a sign to man up and start being more manly and confident around me."

She will then test her ex guy by giving him mixed signals (e.g. saying she misses him one day and then saying that she has no interest in him the next) to see if he will finally stand up to her and be the man, or if he'll continue to let her mess him around.

If he takes control of the situation in a confident, manly and emotionally mature way, she will be able to respect him again.

When she respects him again, she will also begin to feel sexually attracted to him and with those two things in place, reconnecting with her original feelings of love for him then becomes possible.

Unfortunately, some guys mess up by assuming that if they let an ex woman control everything and be in charge, she will be happy and want him back.

Yet, that's not what most women want.

The majority of women want to be with a man who is more emotionally masculine than her and who can take the lead in a relationship, thus allowing her to relax into thinking, talking and behaving like a real woman around him (i.e. feminine, girly, focused on being in love with him, emotional).

If a woman gets the sense that her ex is going to continue being the soft, insecure man that she could always dominate, she isn't going to feel motivated to get back with him.

So, if you want to get your ex back, the first step you need to take is to stop allowing her to call the shots when it comes to your personal life.

From there, you need to take the lead in the ex back process, rather than waiting for her to give you the go ahead.

On the other hand, if you don't want her back, you need to be strong enough to tell her to mind her own business and then find yourself another woman.

Another possible reason why your ex wants to control you is

2. She wants to keep you interested while she moves on

Sometimes, a woman's ego can't stand the idea of her ex moving on before she does.

So, she will do things to control him, such as

- Keeping tabs on him and where he goes, whom he hangs out with and what he does.
- Texting, calling and messaging him repeatedly to stay on his mind.
- Asking him for favors to keep him in her life.
- Hinting that she might be open to getting back together again, but never following through on it.

The more she can control him by preventing him from being able to move on, the better she feels about herself.

Behind his back, she then secretly focuses on moving on and finding another guy.

When she finds a new guy and her ex eventually asks if she wants to get back together, she can then break the news to him.

“No way! Of course not. We broke up, don't you remember? I've moved on now and you really need to do the same.”

Her ex is then left feeling hurt, confused and wondering what the heck happened.

Yet, she knows exactly what happened.

She was just keeping him around and preventing him from moving on, so she could be the one who moved on first.

Another possible reason why your ex wants to control you is

3. She wants to hurt you for disappointing her and not being the man she wanted you to be in the relationship

Some women feel very bitter and angry about having to break up with a guy who they have spent a lot of time with.

This has a bit to do with the fact that women have a limited amount of time before they eventually become infertile and are unable to get pregnant.

It's hard-wired into a woman to find herself a man that will love her, take care of her and any offspring that they have.

So, when a woman realizes that she has just wasted many months or years with a guy who couldn't be the kind of man she wanted, she may end up feeling angry, bitter and resentful towards him.

As a result, she might blame him for everything that happened to hurt him and make him feel like a failure as a man.

She then might try to control him as a way of preventing him from moving on, so he continues to suffer long after the break up.

For example: She might say to herself, â€œI could have moved on a long time ago, but I stuck with him. What a waste of my time! Well, now Iâ€™m going to give him a taste of his own medicine. Iâ€™m going to control him by keeping him interested in me and feeling like he has a chance with me. Then, when Iâ€™ve wasted enough of his time, Iâ€™m going to tell him that I no longer want him in my life at all. He can then experience what it feels like to have your hopes invested in a person who lets you down.â€

She will then lead him on, make him try to win her over and then eventually tell him to leave her alone.

Another possible reason why your ex wants to control you isâ€¦

4. She feels as though you and her are still boyfriend and girlfriend in a way

Even though a woman has broken up with a guy, she will sometimes continue to look at him as her boyfriend.

For example: In some cases, a man and woman will have been in a relationship with each other for a very long time and when they break up, it can take a woman many months to come to terms with the fact that they are no longer a couple.

As a result, she might treat her ex like he is her boyfriend (e.g. ask him what heâ€™s up to, get annoyed if he doesnâ€™t call her or answer her calls, invite herself over when heâ€™s having people over), because deep down she still thinks that he belongs to her.

In a situation like that, a guy has two options:

Firstly, if a guy wants to move on without his ex, when she tries to control him, he needs to kindly, but firmly say something along the lines of, â€œHey, you know that weâ€™ve broken up, right? I think itâ€™s better if we set some ground rules for how we behave with each other from now on. Of course, Iâ€™m still be here for you in a real emergency, but you canâ€™t call me any time you want, or show up uninvited to my house. If you can respect that, then great. If not, then weâ€™ll have to cut off contact with each other until weâ€™ve both gotten used to the idea that weâ€™re not a couple anymore.â€

Initially, she might create some drama about that by pretending to be offended, get upset or even cry and accuse him of being heartless or selfish.

Essentially, itâ€™s just another way that she is trying to control him.

Yet, if he maintains his confidence and stands by his decision, she will eventually get the message and start to give him the respect that he deserves.

Alternatively, if a guy wants to get her back into a relationship, he needs to earn her respect and attraction for him by being the emotionally strong, dominant man that she always wanted him to be. He needs to have the balls to confidently stand up to her when she tries to control him, rather than just putting up with it.

He also needs to laugh at her (in a loving way) and show her that heâ€™s not the insecure, wimpy, gullible man that he used to be.

When she can see that she no longer has control over him, she will automatically start to feel some respect for him again.

She will then feel sexually attracted to him and he can build on her feelings for him from there.

Within hours or days, she will fall back in love with him and want to be his girlfriend once again.

Another possible reason why your ex wants to control you isâ€¦!

5. She's not sure if she wants to move on without you

Sometimes a woman will break up with a guy and then start doubting her decision.

For example: This can happen ifâ€¦!

- She still has some feelings for him, but isn't sure if he will ever change and become the man she truly wants him to be.
- She feels insecure about her chances of finding another guy (e.g. because sheâ€™s not very confident in herself and in her attractiveness to men).
- She wonders if she was being too fussy and expecting way too much of her ex.
- She still cares for her ex, but doesnâ€™t believe that he can give her the attraction experience she really wants (e.g. because he's just not confident enough for her).

She might then think to herself, â€œI donâ€™t know if breaking up was such a good idea after all. I know that he stuffed up, but he is also a good guy in many ways. I don't know if Iâ€™m ready to just let him go. Maybe I should just hang on to him for a while to stop him from getting over me until Iâ€™ve fully made up my mind.â€

So, rather than walking away and cutting off contact with him, she sticks around and tries to control him to prevent him from moving on.

He can get her back in a case like that, but he needs to really make some changes to the way he approaches interactions with her, especially not letting her control him anymore.

Of course, this doesn't mean a guy should get angry with his ex woman for trying to control him.

Instead, he needs to laugh at her (in a loving way) when tries to control him, or turn it into a joke (e.g. she orders him to do something and he says, “Yeah, okay...and you do this for me” and then gives her an equally unreasonable request like washing his car, or doing his laundry).

When she sees that she can no longer control him because he has manned up, she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him and feel drawn to being with him for real.

So, right now, thereâ€™s a good chance that your ex still has some unresolved feelings for you if she has been trying to control you.

This is why itâ€™s essential that you take control of the ex back process from now on, rather than hoping that she will guide you back into a relationship with her.

If you donâ€™t man up and take the lead, she will get tired of waiting for you to have the courage and skill to get her back and will then give up and try to move on instead.

3 Mistakes That Some Guys Make With a Controlling Ex

Be sure to avoid the following mistakes when your ex tries to control you:

1. Giving her more and more power and control and hoping that it will make her happy

Sometimes a guy assumes that if he agrees to everything his ex says or tells him to do, she will be impressed by his obedience and give him another chance.

So, the more demands she makes (e.g. expects him to tell her everything that he has been doing and with whom, expects him to drop everything and run to her rescue when she needs him, expects him to reply to her texts right away) the more obedient he becomes.

He thinks something like, “When she sees that I am willing to do things her way all the time, she will appreciate how dedicated I am to her. She will see that she can call the shots, so a relationship will be on her terms. She will like that and will then give me another chance.”

Yet, in almost all ex back cases like that, the opposite happens.

Here’s the thing!

A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to, respect and feel proud of, not a guy who is too timid to stand up to her and put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way (i.e. be the man).

A woman might give a guy the impression that she likes to be in control and make all the decisions in the relationship, but she’s not going to respect him if he actually falls for that act and then hands all his power over to her.

Instead, she’s going to walk all over him for a while and always know that she will dump him the moment she finds a new man that she can fully respect and submit to.

Another mistake to avoid is!

2. Seeking pity for how her controlling behavior makes you feel

For example: A guy might say something like, “Why are you being like this to me? Does it make you happy to treat me like this? Is this your way of getting back at me for our break up? If it is, great job. I feel terrible. Thank you.”

Secretly, he hopes that if he makes her feel sorry for him, not only will she stop trying to control him, but she will also want to give him another chance.

Yet, that’s practically the last thing that will happen.

Why?

Vulnerability is a sexually attractive trait in a woman, not a man.

A woman being vulnerable and emotionally sensitive is what brings out the protector in a man and makes him want to take care of her.

However, the same does not apply to women.

Women do not want to be a man’s protector.

It’s not what turns a woman on.

Women might go around saying that men should cry and be vulnerable or emotionally sensitive, but that’s just political correctness.

What women are sexually attracted to for real is when a man doesn’t need a woman to protect him emotionally in any way at all.

So, when a guy is being vulnerable and seems unable to cope with a challenging situation in life (e.g. his ex being dominant and controlling), a woman feels turned off by what she perceives as his wimpy, emotionally weak behavior.

Then, rather than making her feel pity for him and want him back, it makes her lose even more respect and attraction for him than ever before.

Another mistake isâ€¦!

3. Not understanding that you can take back power at any moment, if you are emotionally strong enough

Just because a manâ€¦s ex woman wants to control him, it doesnâ€¦t mean that he has to let her do it.

Unfortunately, where some guys go wrong is by constantly giving in to an ex woman's demands (e.g. being available to her whenever she wants, giving her more information about his actions and activities than he wants to, helping her with her life even though he doesn't want to), rather than standing up for himself and letting her see that she can no longer control him or push him around.

This mistake often happens when a guy thinks something along the lines of, â€œIf I give her what she wants, she will stop nagging me all the time. I just have to keep her happy and she will eventually start to treat me better.â€

He then lets her get away with her bad treatment of him, effectively allowing himself to be controlled, even though heâ€¦s no longer in a relationship with her.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that his obedience and submissiveness when it comes to her is what lead to the break up in the first place, so it's not going to be the thing that re-attracts her.

So, get clear on this now: How much control your ex woman has over you is completely up to you, not her.

You can take your power back and stand up to her any time you want.

You can say â€œNo,â€ to her demands.

Not only will you feel better about yourself when you do, but you will also become more attractive to her in the process.

Suddenly, she will begin to see you as being more of a catch than she previously thought you to be.

She then stops looking at you as her gullible, wimpy ex who she felt she could easily control and manipulate and she starts to notice that you are the kind of man who deserves her respect.

She then feels the need to show you respect, which makes her feel attracted to you again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why Did My Ex Cut Off All Contact?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why your ex has cut off all contact:

1. She's using the classic No Contact Rule on you

The No Contact Rule (cutting off contact for 30 to 60 days in the hope that an ex comes crawling back) is a technique that both men and women use after a break up.

So, it's quite possible that your ex is using it on you right now.

When women use the NC rule after dumping a guy, it's usually to get over him and move on.

She may have an interest in getting back with you, but if you don't find a way to contact her and re-attract her, she's most likely just going to move on.

Another possible reason why your ex has cut off all contact with you is

2. You were annoying her by pleading with her to give you another chance

A common reaction that guys have when they get broken up with is to plead and beg with an ex for another chance.

For example: A guy might say to her, "Please baby, don't walk away from what we have! I know that we've had our problems, but our love is strong enough to survive this. Just give me one more chance. I promise that this time things will be different between us. I know I can make you happy. Please give me another chance. I need you in my life. I don't know if I would be able to live without you. I love you more than I've ever loved another woman. I only want to be with you. Please, just give me a chance."

Yet, rather than making her think, "Okay, it seems like he really needs me, so maybe I should give him a chance," his pleading simply annoys her and turns her off even further.

She then decides to cut him out of her life completely (e.g. by blocking him on social media, blocking his number and e-mail, avoiding going to places where she knows he likes to hang out, or ignoring his attempts to contact her), so she can have some space to find a new guy and move on.

Here's the thing

Women aren't attracted to the emotional weakness in men (e.g. neediness, desperation, an inability to handle what life throws at him).

So, when a guy pleads with a woman for her to give him another chance over and over again, it turns her off at a deep, instinctive level (i.e. she fears that she'll have to take care of him emotionally because he clearly can't cope on his own).

Then, rather than sticking around and putting up with his pleading, she cuts off contact and tries to move on.

Another possible reason why your ex has cut off all contact with you is

3. She doesn't believe that you will change

In most cases, a woman won't break up with a guy before she gives him one or two chances to improve, especially if he has been promising her that he will change.

Yet, if he doesn't follow through on his promises (e.g. because he doesn't actually know what or how to change, he was too lazy to put in the effort and just assumed she would put up with his behavior because she loves him, or he never planned on changing and just wanted to keep her around for a little longer), she will eventually go through with the break up.

Then, to get over him and move on, she will cut off all contact because she knows that he will try to convince her to give him another chance once again.

Based on her past experiences, she doesn't believe that he will change, so she doesn't want to have to deal with it anymore.

She wants to be done with the relationship and try to move on and forget about him.

So, if you want your ex to open herself up to interacting with you again, you first need to make some changes to the way you approach interactions with her (e.g. If you were previously too emotionally sensitive or insecure, you are now very confident and self-assured. If you previously gave her too much power over you and made her feel like the more dominant one during interactions, you now reclaim your masculine position and let her see that you can be the man she needs).

When you are ready to re-attract her, get in contact with her (don't wait for her to reach out to you first) and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new and improved you.

Naturally, she will then become more open to communicating with you further and exploring her new, interesting and appealing feelings for you.

Another possible reason why your ex has cut off all contact with you is

4. She can see that you don't understand the real, secret and subtle reasons why she broke up with you

For example: A guy might know that he took his woman for granted by getting into the habit of talking down to her, getting angry at her or neglecting her (e.g. to play video games, go out drinking with his buddies, work extra long hours all the time).

He knows that, but he doesn't know her other, secret reasons for breaking up with him.

While she was annoyed about being taken for granted, what really turned her off and caused her to want to go through with a break up was the fact that he didn't make her feel sexy and desirable during sex, the way that he did in the beginning.

When the relationship first began, he was really into her and made her feel like she was the sexiest woman he'd ever been with.

Yet, months or years into the relationship, he slipped into the habit of just having sex with her to get to the point where he ejaculated.

He didn't really look at her as being sexy, say that she was sexy or make her feel sexy and desirable.

He was just going through the motions and having sex with her without caring about how she felt about it.

As a result, she started to feel the need to get attention from other men.

When she opened up and began to flirt with men at work, or throughout her everyday life, she noticed that they found her to be sexy and desirable and many commented about her being beautiful.

Yet, her boyfriend just treated her like a woman that he was bored with.

He didn't look at her the way he used to and that really hurt her and annoyed her deep down.

So, if he tries to get her back after getting dumped by saying that he will spend more time with her and be nicer to her, it's not really going to make her feel motivated to get back with him.

If she senses that he is just saying that to avoid being dumped and will likely dump her after getting her back, she will remain closed up.

She won't want to put herself in a situation where she opens back up to her ex, falls in love with the idea of him changing and then notices that he still doesn't find her very attractive when they have sex.

She will want to be with a guy that honestly, sincerely finds her sexy and will always see her that way, rather than being with a guy who is secretly bored of having sex with her and just wants to stay with her for a while longer until he is ready to break up with her.

So, if she gets that sense about her ex, she will cut off all contact with him and try to move on.

Another possible reason why your ex has cut off all contact with you isâ□!

5. She wants to see how you will react

For a woman to really want to get back with her ex man, she needs to feel that she is going to be gaining something (i.e. getting back with a man that she can now look up to, respect, feel proud of and love) rather than losing something or doing her ex a favor.

So, to test her ex man, a woman will sometimes cut off all contact with him and wait to see what he will do.

For example:

- Will he give up and walk away?
- Will he lose confidence in himself and in his attractiveness to her?
- Will he become obsessive and start stalking her?
- Will he have the confidence to persevere, contact her, reactivate her feelings and get her back?
- Will he lose control of his emotions and begin pouring his heart out via texts, emails or online messages?
- Will he get angry with her for cutting off contact?
- Will he lose interest and just move on with a new woman?

Depending on how he reacts, she will either continue ignoring him and trying to move on, or she will open herself up to being guided back into a relationship with him.

So, if you want your ex back to be open to being guided back into a relationship with you, the most important thing for you to do is to contact her and make her feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for you.

When she sees that you have the balls to go after her and the ability to make her have feelings for you again, she will begin to see you in a more positive light.

Her guard will come down and she will start to feel lucky to be getting back together with you.

Where Guys Go Wrong When an Ex Woman Cuts Off All Contact

Being cut off by the woman he loves can make a guy feel frustrated, hurt and dejected.

He may then get fall into a downward spiral of negative thoughts (e.g. â€œWhy is she doing this to me? Did she ever love me? Does she care at all about what we had? Did it mean anything to her? Am I not good enough for her, or other women? Is this how my life is going to be?â€œ), which can then cause him to behave in unattractive ways that turn his ex woman off even more.

For example: Some of the common mistakes guys make that turn an ex woman off even more areâ€œ

1. Asking her why she has cut off contact

Feeling desperate and not knowing what else to do, a guy might text or e-mail his ex to ask something like, â€œWhat did I do? Why are you ignoring me like this? I know that weâ€™ve broken up, but I donâ€™t deserve to be cut off like this. Doesnâ€™t what we had together mean anything to you? How can you be so coldhearted? Why are you doing this? Please, just be reasonable. Let's talk. You don't need to cut me off like this.â€œ

Even though he might believe that he has a right to ask for an explanation from her (after all, she was his girlfriend), a woman usually won't agree and will end up feeling even more annoyed and turned off by him.

She might then think something like, â€œHow dare he ask me why Iâ€™ve cut off all contact with him. Does he think that he owns me or something? Besides, after everything he put me through in the relationship, he should already know why I donâ€™t want anything to do with him. Itâ€™s so just typical of him to act like a victim. He wants me to feel as though Iâ€™m the one being a bad person for not wanting to talk to him. Well, Iâ€™m not going to let him make me feel bad for putting myself and my needs first for a change. He had his chance with me and he blew it. I donâ€™t owe him anything anymore!â€œ

She then makes herself even more unavailable to her ex (e.g. blocks him, unfriends him, marks his email as spam) and focuses on finding herself a replacement guy as quickly as possible.

So, if you donâ€™t want to push your ex even further away than she already is, donâ€™t make the mistake of asking her why she has cut off contact with you.

Instead, use interactions that you have with her to make her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you.

Bring her guard down and make her feel sparks of respect, attraction and love for you again.

When you do that, she won't want to keep cutting you out of her life.

She will open back up to you and you can then confidently guide her back into a relationship.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€œ

2. Losing a lot of confidence in himself as he waits for weeks or months for her to eventually contact him

When a woman cuts off all contact, a guy will often lose confidence in himself and his attractiveness to her (and to other women in general).

He will then avoid contacting his ex because he doesn't know how to re-attract her.

He will wait for weeks or even months for her to hopefully change her mind and open back up to him.

Yet, she doesn't, so he waits even longer and loses even more confidence in himself.

He hopes that if he just waits long enough, she will miss him and want him back.

Yet, she doesn't and he then starts to feel as though he has no chance with her anymore.

This is such a classic mistake that guys make after getting dumped.

So many guys don't realize that when a woman has lost touch with her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy (and then dumped him), she usually won't make an effort to contact him and get him back.

Instead, she will focus on forgetting about him and moving on.

So, if you want your ex back, you must believe in yourself and in your value to her enough to make the first move (i.e. call her on the phone, or meet up with her in person) and be ready to make her feel attracted in new and exciting ways as you talk to her.

When you do that, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

As a result, you can get her back now or within the next few days to a week, rather than waiting around for many months or even years in the hope that she might reach out to you one day and want you back.

Another mistake to avoid isâ

3. Feeling unwelcome to contact her and re-attract her

Sometimes a guy will assume that if his ex woman isn't contacting him, then he can't reach out to her and begin the ex back process.

He may think, âMy ex cut off all contact with me. If thatâs not a sign that she doesn't want me in her life anymore, I don't know what is. So, even though I want to call her, I can't because she won't want to hear from me. She's made that perfectly clear by cutting off contact. It's over and there's nothing I can do about it.â

He then doesn't do anything to get in touch with his ex and misses out on the opportunity to get her back.

Yet, here's the thingâ

If you don't interact with your ex (over the phone and most importantly, in person), she probably won't have any reason to keep you on her mind and in her heart.

Instead, she will focus on getting over you, moving on, hooking up with another guy (or guys) and falling in love again with someone else.

So, if you want to get your ex back, go ahead and contact her and then reawaken her feelings for you.

The more respect and sexual attraction she feels as you talk to her, the more she will feel drawn to the idea of giving you another chance.

On the other hand, if you feel unwelcome to contact her because she has cut off all contact, then you will probably waste a lot of time waiting around for her only to discover one day that she has moved on and is happy without you.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

4. Waiting for positive signs from her before trying to get her back

Where some guys go wrong is that they wait way too long to get a clear sign from their ex that she wants to get back together again (e.g. a text saying that she misses him).

Yet, when a woman has cut off all contact with her ex, she usually won't come running back and saying that she misses him.

That only happens if she is still in love with him, can't find a suitable replacement guy or is too young or inexperienced to handle the pain of a break up.

In all other cases, a woman who cuts off contact simply moves on and does her best to completely forget about her ex.

So, while her ex is waiting around for weeks or months for a clear sign from her that she is interested in him pursuing her and getting her back, she has been moving on, having sex with new guys and getting used to life without him.

So, if you don't want that to happen to you, here's what you need to get clear on!

It doesn't matter if your ex is giving you signs that she's open to getting back together or not and it doesn't even matter that she's cut off all contact with you.

What matters is whether or not you have the courage to take the lead in the ex back process and do what needs to be done to get her back.

So, are you going to contact her, re-attract her, seduce her and get her back into a relationship, or are you going to wait until it's too late?

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Reverse the Roles, So My Ex Wants Me Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 tips to help you reverse the roles and make your ex want you back:

1. Get clear on the subtle things about you that secretly turned her off

She's not going to want you back if you're still turning her off in the same ways that you did during the relationship.

So, to successfully reverse roles so your ex wants you back, you first need understand her real, more subtle reasons for breaking up with you.

Then, when you interact with her again, you will be able to give her a new and improved attraction experience that causes her to feel drawn to you and intrigued by her new, interesting feelings for you.

On the other hand, if you don't get clear on this all important aspect of the ex back process, you will be offering her things that she doesn't want.

For example: A woman might break up with a guy and say something along the lines of, "I'm sick and tired of all the fighting and arguing. It's bringing me down and I feel miserable all the time. I think it's better if we just accept this isn't working and break up."

The guy will naturally then think that she's breaking up with him because she's unhappy about the fighting and arguing.

He might then even try to get her back by being extra nice to her and agreeing with everything she says and does to avoid fights or arguments.

He hopes that if he does things her way, there will no longer be any reason for them to argue, so she will then be happy and want him back.

Yet, not only does being extra nice and obedient turn a woman off (because women are not attracted to a guy they feel they can dominate), but it also highlights to a woman that her ex guy still doesn't understand her deeper, more subtle reasons for always getting into arguments with him.

For example, some of the secret things that may have turned her off and caused her to want to get into arguments with him, may include:

- His inability to make a decision without her approval or say-so.
- Being unsure of himself around her or in social situations.
- Being unable to pass her simple confidence tests. For example: She rolls her eyes at him, pretends to disagree with him during a conversation, or acts like she's annoyed about things that she doesn't really feel annoyed about and he then worries, tries to suck up to her or gets annoyed at her. He doesn't realize that she wants him to maintain control of his emotions and not take her tests of his confidence so seriously. He needs to be able to laugh at her tests, ignore them or turn them back on her (in a loving, playful way) if he is going to be the kind of man that she can respect and not want to get into arguments with.
- How he tends to get annoyed or angry about things that she thinks he shouldn't get so worked up about (e.g. the taste of food at a restaurant, the weather, the government).
- His lack of presence as a man (e.g. he tends to go into his shell in social situations).
- How he seems so confident when playing video games, but when it comes to his career, he can't seem to make any progress.

- How he avoids building friendships with her family and friends and tends to keep to himself, even though she has told him that family and friends are important to her.
- How he tends to spend more time with his friends than her and when he does spend time with her, he is emotionally unavailable.
- How he is too needy and clingy and always wants to spend time with her, because he's too afraid to follow through and make progress on his big goals, dreams and ambitions in life.

So, to make your ex want you back you first need to be able to re-attract in the ways that really matter to her (e.g. you are now able to make her feel girly and feminine during a conversation in comparison to your masculine approach, rather than just talking to her in a friendly, neutral way or worse, giving her all the power and making her feel more dominant than you).

When she experiences your new, attractive behavior, she will naturally begin to feel more respect and attraction for you as a man.

She will then drop her guard and allow herself to open back up to the idea of being in a relationship with you again.

Another tip to help you reverse roles so your ex wants you back is to

2. Regain control of your emotions and confidence

Chances are high that if you're currently asking how to reverse roles with your ex so she wants you back, you're at a point where nothing that you have tried has worked.

She just doesn't seem to care about you anymore and seems to be happy to move on from the relationship.

As a result, you might feel a bit rejected by her and lost as to what you can do now.

You might even go to bed at night feeling a bit depressed or dejected and wonder if you will ever be happy again.

Although feeling like that is natural, you have to get past it right now.

Feeling down and dejected will naturally cause you to say and do the wrong things around your ex and turn her off even more.

So, you have to accept the break up and start focusing on the solution to get her back.

When you do that, you will feel a resurgence of confidence and hope and you will then naturally begin to say and do the right things when interacting with your ex.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't ever really focus on a solution to get their ex back, other than just ignoring her and hoping that she comes back.

Yet, if you've tried that already, you know it doesn't work.

Other guys approach in the same way and end up feeling more and more desperate to get their ex woman back.

For example: A guy who is feeling desperate and beginning to worry that he has no chance to get his ex woman back, might

- Beg and plead with her to see things from his point of view and give him another chance.
- Pour his heart out to her and tell her how much he loves her and how he can't live without her.

- Promise to do whatever she wants to make her happy.
- Be extra nice and sweet towards her and put up with her bad treatment of him (e.g. she's uncommunicative and standoffish during interactions, she blames him for the break up).
- Bombard her with texts or emails in an attempt to stay on her mind, or make her feel pity for him and give in.
- Ask mutual friends to put in a good word for him.
- Post sad, dejected status updates on social media.
- Show up at her house and plead with her to talk to him and work things out.
- Get angry with her for being so selfish by leaving him behind.
- Try to be a nice, helpful friend to her and help her with her life (e.g. run errands for her, fix things for her, help her pay rent or bills).

Yet, rather than make her want him back, she feels even more turned off because she perceives his behavior as being wimpy, emotionally weak, needy and lacking in self confidence.

Feeling turned off like that makes her feel more motivated to move on and find another man as soon as possible.

This is why, if you want your ex back, you have to make sure that you approach this properly.

Don't go ahead and make all the mistakes that other guys make, before eventually searching around and trying to find a tested, proven to work solution.

So, the first thing you must do is regain control of your emotions.

Get rid of the feeling of neediness and desperation by knowing that you can re-attract her and get her back.

Know that from now on, you are going to be in control of the ex back process, not her.

You are going to reverse the roles and make her want to get back with you.

As a result, you don't need to panic, worry or feel needy in any way.

You can relax and confidently get her back over the next few days to a week.

3. Interact with her and reactivate her feelings

Even if your ex is currently saying things like, â€œForget it! I never want to be your girl again. You need to accept that it's over between us and move on,â€ it doesn't mean that her decision is final.

So, don't just accept what she is saying and wait around for her to hopefully change her mind over the next 6 months to a year.

Make her change her mind NOW, or at least within the next week or so.

You really can do that.

To reverse roles so your ex wants you back, it's absolutely essentially that you interact with her as often as possible (over the phone and preferably in person, rather than text), so she can experience the new and improved you for herself.

When she can see that you don't lose your confidence even when she's being cold, distant or even hostile towards you, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling respect for you again.

When she starts respecting you again, she then also begins to feel sexually attracted to you again. When those two emotions are reactivated, it becomes difficult for her to stay closed off towards you for very long.

She feels drawn to you and realizes that what you and her have isn't over.

There is clearly still a spark between you and her and she felt it when she interacted with you.

If she didn't agree to get back with you right away, she will have gone away thinking about you, feeling drawn to you and beginning to miss you.

When that happens, her defenses come down and she then becomes open to talking to you more, seeing you in person and seeing how she feels about being your girl again.

Another tip to help you reverse roles so your ex wants you back isâ€¦!

4. Don't ask for another chance

Sometimes, a guy will see that things are going well with his ex (e.g. she responds to his texts, she is friendly over the phone, she agrees to meet up with him for coffee, she seems open to interacting with her), so he then goes ahead and asks her for another chance at a relationship.

That can work if she is fully re-attracted and wants him back, but if she isn't, a woman will usually say, â€œSorry, but I don't feel that way about you anymore. We can be friends if you want, but nothing more than that. Please accept that. If you can't, it might be better if we just stop seeing each other altogether.â€

He almost had her back, but he asked for another chance too early and she ended up playing hard to get.

Additionally, to reverse the roles and make an ex want you back, it's always best to make her feel so attracted to you that she begins to hint at or suggest getting the relationship back together.

Then, it's about you giving her a chance to be with you, rather than you trying to convince her to give you another chance.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that until it's too late.

A guy will approach the ex back process in a way that essentially says to the woman back, “I still have feelings for you and therefore, I want another chance.”

Yet, here's the thingâ€¦!

For a relationship to get back together, there needs to be mutual feelings between the man and the woman, or at least close to mutual feelings.

It can't all be about the guy wanting her back because he loves her and needs her.

That is one-sided.

So, if you want your ex woman back, make sure that you fully reactivate her feeling for you first, before anything else happens.

Initially, all it usually takes is a spark and most women will begin to open back up to talking to you and seeing you in person more often.

When you have that opening, you can then guide her through the rest of the ex back process and get her back.

Another tip to help you reverse roles so your ex wants you back is toâ€¦!

5. Give her 3 to 7 days of space

If your ex is being closed off towards you right now and saying things like, *â€œJust leave me alone!*â€œ or, *â€œI donâ€™t want you back. You need to accept that and move on,*â€œ itâ€™s perfectly fine to give her a few days of space (i.e. 3 to 7 days) to let things calm down between you.

Then, after a few days have passed, go ahead and contact her and reawaken some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be hearing from you again, by flirting with her to build up sexual tension, by making her feel girly and feminine in comparison to your masculine approach to the conversation, by maintaining your confidence if she is being cold or distant to test you).

You then need to get her to agree to a meet up with you in person.

At the meet up, you need to re-attract her sexually and romantically so she starts wanting to be around you again.

From there, just use every interaction that you have with her to build on her feelings of respect and attraction for you and guide her back into a relationship.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Reverse Roles With an Ex to Make Her Want Him Back

Everything you say and do from now on is either going to be making your ex want you back, or convincing her that sheâ€™s better off without you.

So, if you want to be successful at getting her back, be sure to avoid making any of the following mistakes:

1. Thinking that ignoring an ex for 30 or 60 days will work on any woman

This is one of the biggest myths out there when it comes to getting an ex backâ€¦!

The truth is that not all women respond well to being ignored by an ex for 30 or even 60 (or more) days.

Why?

In most ex back cases, when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's because she no longer feels enough respect, attraction or love to want to be in a relationship with him anymore.

So, when she doesnâ€™t hear from him for a month or more, rather than thinking, *â€œOh no!!! Why isnâ€™t he calling me? I miss him! Does him not contacting me mean found someone else? I wouldnâ€™t be able to cope if he has. He is my man! I want him so bad! Iâ€™m going to call him right away so that we can get back together again before itâ€™s too late!*â€œ she usually thinks something like, *â€œI wonder what my ex is up to? He must have moved on. Yay! Cool, Iâ€™m so relieved that it wasnâ€™t a messy break up with him trying to get me back all the time. It has made getting over him so much easier.*â€œ

During the time that he wasn't contacting her, she was free to go out and party with her single girlfriends, use dating apps to line up dates or sleep with the guy that had a crush on her while she was in a relationship (e.g. a guy from work, university or that she knows through friends).

As a result, cutting off contact for 30 to 60 days was a completely ineffective strategy and absolutely backfired.

So, let me make this 100% clear for you now!

Unless your ex is still secretly in love with you and is hoping that you and her will get back together, or if she is struggling to find herself a replacement guy, ignoring her for weeks or months is not going to make her come running back to you.

If your ex girlfriend doesn't have feelings for you anymore, ignoring her for 30 or 60 days will just give her more time to completely get over you and move on.

If you want her back, you should actively re-attract her, rather than waiting around and hoping that she comes back to you just because you aren't contacting her.

The next mistake is!

2. Not improving your ability to attract her and your understanding of what really attracts a woman to a man

When trying to get an ex back, a lot of guys make the mistake of using the same old approach that they used before (e.g. being really nice to her, listening and trying to understand her feelings, buying her flowers, chocolates and other gifts, being her friend in the hopes that she will see how dedicated and kind he is to her).

Yet, that approach rarely works to get a woman back.

Why?

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because something about his attitude, behavior, actions or way of life had turned her off.

She got to the point where she just didn't feel enough respect, attraction and love to justify continuing a relationship with him.

So, if he wants to get her back, he has to improve his ability to make her feel attracted in new and more interesting ways (e.g. making her feel feminine and girly in comparison to his masculine vibe, using ballsy humor to break down her defenses and make her feel good to be interacting with him again, turning the tables and making her feel like she needs to impress him or live up to his standards).

If he tries to get her back without changing any of the things that turned her off (e.g. he remains needy, insecure, unmotivated, wimpy), nothing that he says is going to convince her to give him another chance.

Another mistake to avoid making is!

3. Not interacting with her to reactivate her feelings

Sometimes, when a woman says things like, "Leave me alone. I know you want us to get back together again, but I don't want you back. It's over. Leave me alone" it's only natural that a guy will assume he no longer has a chance.

So, rather than annoying her, he will pull back and just wait for her to cool down and hopefully open back up to him one day.

Essentially, he's hoping that she will eventually make the first move (e.g. text him to say hi, suggest catching up, call him out of the blue to talk, send him a message on social media to apologize) when she's ready.

He then sits around for weeks, months and in some cases even years, waiting for her to contact him, only to be devastated when he finds out she is dating someone else or in love and happy in a committed relationship.

If you don't want that to happen, you have to be strong enough to change how she feels by interacting with her.

Don't worry â she's not going to be annoyed if you interact with her and make her smile, laugh and feel good to be interacting with you again.

She's not going to be angry if she feels attracted and drawn to you again.

She might initially act that way, but if you have the confidence to withstand her initial coldness (it may last anywhere from 10 seconds to 5 minutes), then you can re-attract her and get her back.

So, call her on the phone or meet up with her in person and show her that you are now the man she always wanted you to be (e.g. confident, self-assured, determined, emotionally independent, emotionally mature).

Don't tell her that you are; show her.

Let her experience it for herself and decide that you really are different now.

The more she experiences and enjoys the new you, the more she will associate positive feelings with you, rather than holding onto her negative feelings about you from the past.

As a result, her guard will naturally come down and she will become open to the idea of getting back together again.

On the other hand, if you don't interact with her because you're worried that she might get annoyed or angry, she will most likely move on and forget about you.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

4. Pretending to be happy without her when you're not

Although being genuinely happy and moving on with your life can impress your ex (because women love the idea of being with a man who wants her, but doesn't need her to live a great life), pretending to be happy without her when you're really not, isn't a good idea.

Why?

In most cases, all a woman has to do is say something along the lines of, âOh, okayâI see that you're over me now and are enjoying life without me. Well, that's too bad. I really thought I mattered to you, but now I've seen how easy it was for you to move on without me, I realize that you didn't care about me after all. I honestly thought we could get back together again, but now it's too late,â to catch her ex guy out in a lie.

If he tries to convince her that he isn't happy and has been missing her the whole time, she will know that he was acting as though he was happy to trick her into wanting him back.

She may then start dating a new guy to protect herself against being hurt by her ex's mind games again.

So, don't pretend to be happy without your ex if you're not.

Instead, be genuinely happy without her (e.g. by focusing on and making progress on your big goals in life, going out and having fun with friends, meeting and interacting with other women, pursuing your hobbies and interests).

You don't have to begin dating other women to get your ex back, but at least be open to simply interacting with other women, to help yourself see that you can attract other women and aren't doomed without your ex.

When you do that, it brings out all the positive traits that women respect in a man (e.g. confidence, masculinity, self-belief, assertiveness, emotional independence) and as a result, you automatically become more attractive to your ex.

Then, when you interact with her and she senses (via your tonality, body language and the way you think, behave and react) that you are now very confident, happy and have been getting on with your life without her, she will naturally begin to feel drawn to you again.

Of course, don't shove it in her face and try to make her feel bad about the fact that you're happy. Just let her sense it based on how you think, talk, behave and act when interacting with her.

Women find men like that very attractive and appealing, so don't be afraid to make her see you in that way.

She will then begin to look at you in a new light because you are behaving like the kind of man that she can look up to and respect.

Then, without you having to convince her, the roles reverse and she starts wanting you back.

You can literally achieve that within the next week.

You can make her want to be back with you and then give her a chance to be with you.

Alternatively, you can use an approach that gets her back today, tomorrow or within the next few days...

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Found Someone Better

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 things you should ask yourself now:

1. Is he really better than you, or just different?

Right now, your ex-girlfriend might be saying that she has found someone better than you, but in most cases, the new guy will usually just be filling in the emotional gaps that you left open in the relationship.

For example: When a woman breaks up with a guy because he was too jealous and controlling, her new guy will usually be a lot more easy going and relaxed with her.

Yet, that doesn't mean that the new guy is perfect, or that other aspects about his thinking and behavior won't turn her off once the novelty of being with him has started to wear off.

He might be 'better' than you because he's not as controlling towards her as you were, but that may actually stem from a lack of confidence and self-belief in his value to her.

He feels lucky to have a chance with her and just lets her get her way all the time, because he's afraid of annoying her and getting dumped.

Over time, she will pick up on that and suddenly he will seem less attractive to her.

She may then start to think, "My ex wasn't as insecure as my new guy. Yes, maybe he was a bit too controlling, but at least he believed in himself and in his value to me. Maybe my new guy isn't better than my ex after all. Maybe my ex and I can actually work things out. Maybe I had to leave the relationship and experience this to realize how much better my ex really is. It wasn't a perfect relationship, but I'm sure he will be willing to change and stop being so jealous and controlling if I offer him a chance to get back with me."

Then, if she happens to interact with her ex and she notices that he has already made changes to the way he thinks, acts, behaves and responds to her (e.g. he no longer gets jealous when she talks about other guys, he is so much more relaxed and easy-going now, he respects her decisions and doesn't try to force her to think like him), she will truly start doubting her decision to breakup with him.

He can then build on her feelings, seduce her and get her back.

So, just understand that your ex's new man isn't necessarily better than you.

Instead, he is simply different than you.

Rather than thinking of him as being better than you and feeling unworthy of your ex, know that you can re-attract her, seduce her and get her back.

Start by focusing on changing some of the things that turned your ex off (e.g. you were too emotionally dependent on her, you took her for granted, you stopped making her feel desirable).

Learn from your mistakes and then interact with your ex to make her feel respect, attraction and love for the new and improved you.

Don't push for a relationship right away though.

Just let her feel attracted to you again and worry that she has made a mistake by walking away from you.

She will then begin to focus on the emotional gaps in her new relationship and realize that her new guy isn't any better than you, just different.

The next question you need to ask yourself isâ€¦

2. Are you going to use this break up as an opportunity to improve yourself and become more confident so you can get her back, or are you going to lose confidence in yourself and give up?

Hearing that your ex has found someone better is naturally going to cause you to feel a bit upset.

Yet, don't let it get to you.

You have to look at yourself as being better than the new guy, regardless of how much 'better' he is than you in certain ways.

If you look at him as being better than yourself, you just won't be able to feel confident enough in comparison to him and when you talk to your ex, she will sense that and feel turned off.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that and end up allowing the fact that she has found someone new to kill his confidence.

For example: A guy may think, â€œWell, I guess Iâ€™ve lost her completely now. I canâ€™t compete with her new guy. Heâ€™s better than me and she even said it herself, so what chance do I stand with her now? If the woman who used to love me says that I'm less than in comparison to him, then it must be true. Iâ€™m never going to find another woman like her ever again. I'm screwed.â€

He then loses confidence in himself and begins to give off a vibe that says, “I'm not worthy of an attractive woman. I'm not good enough.”

If he happens to interact with his ex, she picks up on his lack of confidence (via his vibe, the tonality of his voice, his body language, behavior, choice of words) and feels turned off by him on a deep, instinctive level.

She then thinks something along the lines of, â€œWow, I'm glad I broke up with him when I did. He has gotten even worse than he was before. He doesnâ€™t even believe in himself at all. My new man is so much better. He's so much more confident. That's how a man should be. Clearly my ex doesn't have it anymore. He used to be confident when I liked him, but he has lost that edge. I just don't look at him the same way anymore because of it. He's not good enough for me anymore. I'm glad that I moved on.â€

This is why, if you want to get your ex back (even though she has found someone new), you have to believe you are more than good enough for her, otherwise she will pick up on your self-doubt and feel turned off.

The new guy is most likely acting very confident around her because she likes him at the moment.

It's easy for a guy to feel confident under those conditions.

Yet, when your ex can see that not only are you a good guy when you talk to her and make her smile, laugh and feel good, but you're also 100% confident in yourself and your value to her, she will feel attracted to you on a deep, instinctive level.

Women can't stop themselves from feeling attracted to a man who can be confident under pressure, while also being a good guy.

So, right now, you need to use any time apart from your ex to improve and become an even more confident man than you ever were before, rather than sitting around feeling sorry for yourself and feeling unworthy of her now because she has found someone new.

The next question you need to ask yourself isâ€¦

3. Do you know what parts of the attraction experience were missing from your relationship with her?

When your ex broke up with you, she may have given you vague reasons for leaving such as, â€œIâ€™m tired of trying to make this relationship work. I just can't do it anymoreâ€œ or, â€œI don't feel the same about you anymoreâ€œ or, â€œI don't think I love you anymoreâ€œ or, â€œI just want to be on my own for a while.â€œ

Essentially, she didn't really tell you WHY she stopped feeling attracted to you and then fell out of love with you.

So, if you want her back, you absolutely must get clear on that because if you don't, you simply won't be able to make her feel attracted in the ways that she really cares about.

Ask yourself:

- Did I maintain the kind of confidence and self-esteem that she originally felt attracted to, or did I become an insecure, needy or clingy guy as the relationship went on?
- Did I make her feel loved, appreciated and taken care of, or did she feel neglected and as though I was taking her presence in my life for granted?
- Did I take the lead in the relationship and allow her to relax into being my girl, or did she feel like she had to wear the pants and make all the decisions like a man?
- Did I make her feel feminine and girly around me by being more emotionally masculine than her, or did I end up becoming emotionally sensitive and soft?
- Was I a man of my word, or did I let her down and betray her trust?
- Did I make her feel as though her and I were on the same level socially, or did I end up making her feel as though she was cooler than me and I was dragging her down?
- Did I encourage her to follow her dreams and enjoy life, or did I try to keep her all to myself because I was worried that other guys would hit on her?
- Did I make her laugh and feel happy to be with me, or did I end up becoming a stressful, annoying boyfriend to be around?

When you understand what really turned your ex off and why she now feels as though her new man is better, you can then start improving yourself in the ways that will actually matter to her (e.g. become very confident and emotionally masculine, if she felt turned off by how insecure and sensitive you became).

Then, the next time you interact with her, you will be able to give her the type of attraction experience that she always wanted from you, but wasn't getting.

That will plant seeds of doubt in her mind about the new guy.

She will begin to wonder whether she is going to end up regretting letting you go and being the one who gets left behind.

If she begins to feel that way, she will naturally open up to you and begin trying to establish a relationship with you.

You can then build on her renewed feelings for you, hook up with her and get her to dump the new guy.

The next question you need to ask yourself isâ€¦!

4. Do you remember how happy she was with you at the start?

Most relationships start out feeling happy, but then end in a break up within the first few months.

Think about itâ€¦!

You and her were happy together at the beginning of the relationship.

You may even have discussed things like moving in together, getting married or starting a family.

Yet, it didnâ€™t work out, even though at the time, it felt like you and her would stay together forever.

In the same way, she could seem happy with her new man right now, but as the novelty starts to wear off, she may lose interest in being with him or break up with him for some reason that you're not aware of.

So, the important thing for you to do now is not give up.

Of course, don't desperately chase her or tell her that you'll wait around forever.

Instead, just stay in her life (you can pretend to be her friend if you want to) and use every interaction you have with her to reawaken her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you.

The more drawn to you she feels, the less perfect her new man will seem.

If they get into a fight, or he does something that turns her off or makes her doubt whether a relationship would last, she will automatically begin thinking about getting back with you.

The next question you need to ask yourself isâ€¦!

5. Are you ready to contact her, re-attract her and get her back from the new guy?

It might be true that your ex believes that her new guy is better than you, but it could also be true that she is only saying that to get a reaction out of you.

She wants to know whether you are going to sit around feeling defeated and thinking things like, â€œOh well, I guess thereâ€™s nothing I can do anymore. She said she found someone better, so Iâ€™ve now lost any chance with her,â€ or are you going to believe in yourself, take action and get her back?

If youâ€™re ready to get her back (i.e. you know how you're going to attract her when you talk to her on the phone and in person to make her want you again), hereâ€™s what you need to doâ€¦!

Get her on a phone call with you.

Remember: Sheâ€™s likely going to be a bit resistant to talking to you at first and she may even try to put you off by saying things like, â€œWhy are you calling me? I told you that I'm with someone else now.â€

Regardless of what she says or how unwelcoming she is towards you initially, just remain calm and maintain your confidence.

Then, use some humor to ease the tension between you and make her feel happy and relaxed to be talking to you again.

Once you've broken down her defenses with confidence, a relaxed attitude and some humor, get her to agree to meet up with you.

If she resists, just tell her that it's an innocent coffee to say goodbye to each other in a mature way.

Tell her that you respect her new relationship and just want to say goodbye and end on friendly terms.

Most women want to be able to end a relationship on friendly terms, so she will almost certainly agree to meet up.

If she doesn't agree, insist in a relaxed, but confident manner and get her to catch up to say goodbye in a friendly, mature way.

Then, at the meet up, don't respect her relationship by being all nice and friendly.

Instead, use the meet up to flirt with her to build up sexual tension between you and her and when the moment is right, get to a hug and potentially a kiss if you can.

If she is open to the kiss, you can then suggest hooking up sexually one last time to say goodbye.

If she isn't open to kissing or sex, don't worry as long as you at least get to a hug after building up sexual tension, she will go away experiencing new feelings for you.

She will realize that it isn't really over between you and her because she still has feelings for you.

You can then suggest staying in touch from time to time as 'friends' and when she agrees to that, use any interaction that you have with her from then on to build on her feelings and make her want to see you again.

Note: Many guys do get to a kiss and sex at the first meet up when they are prepared to re-attract their ex.

However, when a guy goes to a meet up and uses the same old approach to attraction that she got bored of in the relationship, she just doesn't feel motivated enough to want to hug, kiss or have sex.

So, make sure that you're prepared to attract her in a new and exciting ways as you talk to her.

4 Common Mistakes That Some Guys Make When Their Ex Woman Finds a New Guy

Just because your ex is saying that she has found someone better (or you think she has found someone better), it doesn't mean you can't get her back.

Whether or not you get her back all depends on your attitude and what you say and do from now on.

So, ask yourself: Are you going to reawaken her feelings for you and get her back, or are you going to make some or all of the following mistakes?

1. Thinking that it's too late now that she has a new boyfriend

It's understandable that when a guy sees his ex girlfriend happy with someone else, he may think that he no longer stands a chance with her.

He might then give up, stop contacting her and wait to see if she'll eventually break up with her new guy, so he can then contact her and see if she's interested.

Yet, here's the thing!

If you don't actively do something to reawaken your ex girlfriend's feelings for you right now, even if she does break up with her new guy, she's probably not going to come running back to you.

Instead, she'll just keep dating new men until she finds the one who can give her the kind of attraction experience she's looking for (e.g. she wants a guy who is more masculine in his behavior, but keeps on attracting guys who are too nice or gentle).

Then, by the time you realize what is happening, she will have likely gotten married and possibly even started a family and then it really will be too late.

So, if you want her back, start doing what needs to be done to get her back now, rather than wasting the next 6 months to a year of your life waiting around for her to hopefully break up with him.

You can get her back in about 1-2 weeks.

Most guys who are in a situation like yours are able to accomplish that when they focus on re-attracting and then seducing their ex girlfriend.

Some guys get it done within days, but most guys get it done within 1-2 weeks.

I'm sure you'd agree that getting her back in 1-2 weeks from now is better than waiting 6 months and then seeing her move on with another guy, or waiting around for years and remaining single in the hope that she calls you one day.

The next mistake to avoid is!

2. Focusing on the new guy's good qualities and not realizing that he'd be making mistakes in the relationship too

Yes, the new guy probably is better than you in some ways (e.g. he's more settled in his career and can offer her the stability that you couldn't, he treats her like a princess and gives her everything she wants).

However, that doesn't mean he's not turning her off in other ways too (e.g. he's too boring and predictable, he can't stand up to her in a conversation so she feels more emotionally dominant than him).

Whatever the case is, you shouldn't waste time comparing yourself to him and thinking that he is better.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Losing confidence as you wait around and hope that she will eventually break up with him

The longer a guy sits around waiting for his ex girlfriend to break up with her new guy, the more likely it is that he'll start doubting himself and his value to her (and other attractive women).

Then, if he happens to interact with her (e.g. she calls him to ask him something, they bump into each other in a social environment and say hi) and she notices that he is now insecure, stuck and hasn't been able to move on with his life, she will naturally think that her new guy is better than him.

So, if you want to get your ex girlfriend back, you must believe that you are worthy of her and are more than good enough for her, regardless of what qualities the new guy has that you might think are 'better.'

If you don't believe that you're good enough for her anymore, she will sense that and naturally feel turned off and repelled.

The next mistake to avoid is!

4. Not doing anything to interrupt the process of her moving on and make her want you again

When an ex girlfriend has a new guy, the best approach to take to get her back is to interrupt the process of her moving on.

Mess with her feelings by interacting with her and re-attracting her.

Make her feel confused about her feelings and feel drawn to you.

Then, meet up with her, seduce her and get her back.

You can do it.

She is your woman, not his.

Get her back!

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Said She Wants to Be Single For Now

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 steps that you can use to get her back:

1. Accept the break up and give her 3 to 7 days of space

This takes away her feeling of power over you at the moment.

Right now, she knows that you want her back, so don't give her the satisfaction of trying to convince her to change her mind.

Just accept the break up and then give her 3 to 7 days of space to be on her own.

If you make the mistake of getting into an argument about her wanting to be single, or worse, beg and plead with her by saying things like, "Please don't do this! I love you! Can't we just try and work things out first? I promise I will do anything you say if you give me another chance. Just give me a chance" she will feel even more determined to be single and do whatever she wants to do.

So, just casually and confidently just accept her decision and then give her a few days to a week of space.

For example: You can say in an easy-going, relaxed tone of voice, "I still care for you and wish we could work things out, but if that's what you want, then I respect your wishes. I wish you only the best. Goodbye," and then walk away, or hang up the phone.

This clearly demonstrates to her that you're not being needy and trying to force her to change her mind.

Instead, you are in control of your emotions, which automatically makes her feel a rush of respect for you.

She feels as though you and her have ended things in a mature way, but for some reason, she also feels a bit drawn to you again, based on the way you reacted.

From there, avoid contacting her for a few days to a week and allow her some time to cool off and miss you.

Important: Make sure that you don't give her more than 3 to 7 days of space.

Giving her that bit of space proves the point that you're not needy.

You don't need to go overboard and avoid her for many weeks or months to prove that point.

Additionally, if you wait too long, she may feel as though she needs to start hooking up with new guys to get over you and move on.

2. Use the 3 to 7 days to prepare to get her back

When giving an ex woman some space after a break up, a guy might make the mistake of sitting around at home moping, missing her and feeling depressed.

It's understandable that he is hurting and wants her back, but using the 3 to 7 days to feel those emotions is a huge waste of time.

It also doesn't prepare the guy to re-attract her and seduce her the next time he interact with her.

So, when he does interact with her, rather than attracting her in new and exiting ways, he ends up turning her off because she can sense that he is lost, hurting and sad without her (even if he tries to hide it).

Just like you can tell when someone is hurting, but trying to act happy, your ex can sense that as well.

So, don't use the time apart to sit around missing her, feeling sorry for yourself and worrying that she might be hooking up with a new guy.

Use the time to prepare yourself to re-attract her!

When you re-attract her, she naturally feels drawn to you again and begins to wonder whether she should move on and be single, or give you another chance.

Based on how drawn she feels to the new and improved you, she will begin to worry that if she doesn't give you another chance, she will end up regretting it and it may then be too late to get you back.

That's how you want to make her think during this time.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't approach the ex back process in that way, so a guy will end up giving his ex woman the impression that he needs her back to feel better about himself.

She then thinks something like, "I see that nothing has changed with him. He's still the same guy I broke up with. I guess he's just not the right guy for me after all. What I really need to do now is move on and find myself a man who can make me feel the way I want to feel when I'm with him. I don't want to get back with an ex who needs me to make him feel whole again. I don't want a broken man. I want a man who is confident, happy and forward moving in life, regardless of whether I like him or want him. My ex simply doesn't get that."

If her ex then starts talking about getting back together, she just says something like, "Sorry, but I've already told you that I want to be single for now. Please accept that and give me a few months of space to explore myself and figure out what I want. Maybe after that we can discuss getting back together again, but for now, I don't want you contacting me anymore. Please leave me alone."

So, if you want to prevent that from happening to you, make sure that you use your 3 to 7 days wisely by preparing to re-attract her.

The next step is to

3. Interact with her on a phone call and make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you

After a few days to a week, you need to get your ex on a phone call and start re-attracting her by making her feel sparks of respect, sexual attraction and love for you again.

You can do that by using humor to break down her defenses and make her smile, laugh and feel good to be hearing from you again.

You can also do that by flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you and get her thinking things like, "What's going on here? Talking to him on the phone has made me realize how much I missed him over this past week. Even though I said I wanted to be single, I now want to see him again. I'm so confused. Maybe I should just give him one more chance, or at *least hook up with him to see how I feel after that.*â€œ

From thereâ€œ

4. Get her to meet up with you in person

Once you have reawakened some of her feelings and she seems open and happy to be talking to you, go ahead and arrange a meet up with her.

Remember: You canâ€œt get your ex girlfriend back for real until she has interacted with you face-to-face and gotten the proof sheâ€œs looking for that you are now a new and improved man.

So, make sure that you get to a meet up and are fully prepared to re-attract her, seduce her and get her back.

Don't go to the meet up using the same old approach to attraction that got you dumped.

That won't work.

You need to level up your ability to make her feel attracted to you as you talk to her.

Without that, she's probably not going to feel enough attraction for you to feel motivated to ditch her dream of being single.

So, after a bit of conversation where you have been making her feel sparks of respect, attraction and love for you, say something along the lines of, â€œAnyway, so itâ€œs been great chatting. Let's continue our conversation over a cup of coffee this afternoon or tomorrow. Just as friends of course. We can do that, so what works best for you â€œ this afternoon, or tomorrow?â€œ

If she agrees, then go ahead and arrange a meet up.

If she doesn't initially agree and says something like, *â€œNo. I told you I want to be single for now,*â€œ just remain calm.

Maintain your confidence and say, in a light-hearted voice, â€œHey, who said anything about you not being single? Of course you are still single. All that I said was it would be good to chat as friends over a cup of coffee. It doesnâ€œt mean weâ€œre getting back together again. Besides, weâ€œre friends, arenâ€œt we? That means we can meet up and say without it being a big deal, right? So how about it? When is a good time for you?â€œ

If she doesn't agree, just say, “Okay, well let's approach it this way instead. Let's catch up to say hi over a cup of coffee and if you don't ever want to talk to me again after that, I promise not to contact you ever again. So, the coffee can be a chance to say goodbye if that's what you want. I promise that I will accept that and we can say goodbye in a mature way. So, let's catch up today or tomorrow.”

When she agrees, go ahead and arrange the meet up.

At the meet up â€œ

5. Make her want you back, but don't ask for a relationship

When you see her again for the first time, make sure that you continue focus on re-attracting her and making her feel drawn to you the new and improved you.

For example:

If sheâ€œs being reserved or withdrawn at the meet up, rather than let that make you feel insecure (and possibly cause you to babble too much or try too hard), simply use humor to make her relax and open up.

If she tries to test your confidence by saying something along the lines of, “I like being single. So many guys are interested in me now,” rather than doubting your attractiveness to her, just laugh and say in a confident way, “That’s great! I’m happy for you.”

The more she can see that nothing she says or does causes you to react in the ways she is expecting (e.g. feeling insecure, annoyed, doubting your chances with her), the more respect and attraction she will feel.

When that happens, her barriers will dissolve and she will naturally become open to getting back together, or at least hooking up with you again to see how she feels.

Important: When you notice her opening back up to you, don’t start asking, “So, can we fix things? Are you open to giving our relationship another shot?”

If you ask for a relationship before you get to sex, it will almost certainly make her put her guard back up.

So, make sure to approach this one step at a time and you will successfully get her back.

Where Guys Go Wrong When an Ex Girlfriend Says She Wants to Be Single For Now

Your ex girlfriend saying that she wants to be single now, is not the end of the world.

You really can change how she feels if you maintain a positive attitude and focus on saying and doing the types of things that will re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

To ensure that you succeed at doing that, be sure to avoid the following mistakes that other guys often make when in your shoes:

1. Pouring his heart out to her in the hope that she takes pity on him and changes her mind

A guy might say, “Please don’t do this to me. I really love you and I’m willing to do anything to make you happy. Just tell me what you want and I’ll do it. Give me one more chance to prove to you that what we have is worth fighting for. Please don’t throw away what we’ve built together. I know that you might be feeling confused and may think that being single is what you need, but it’s not. Let me show you that. I love you more than anything. I am willing to do whatever it takes to fix things between you and me. I need you in my life. I love you. Please don’t do this to me.”

Essentially, he’s hoping she will feel guilty about the pain she is causing him and will then change her mind.

Yet, here’s the thing:

If a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, she’s not going to really care how he feels about her anymore.

He has feelings for her, but she doesn’t have feelings for him, so she will now focus on taking care of herself and her needs, rather than trying to look after him.

Additionally, a woman doesn't want to feel as though she is being forced to stay in a relationship with a guy out of pity.

It's just not attractive to a woman.

So, although a woman might feel sorry for how much the break up is hurting her ex, she usually won't allow those feelings to force her back into a relationship that doesn't make her feel the way she wants to feel.

In fact, when she realizes that her ex is trying to manipulate her into staying with him out of pity, she will lose even more respect for him and want to stick to her decision to be single.

So, don't bother trying to make your ex girlfriend feel pity for you in any way whatsoever.

Instead, just focus on sparking her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, so the idea of being in a relationship with you again becomes more appealing to her than being single.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Accusing her of being selfish

Another tactic some that guys use to make a woman change her mind about being single, is to accuse her of being selfish.

A guy might say, "All you think about now is what you want, but I invested just as much into this relationship as you did. Why don't I get a say in this? I can't believe you haven't even taken my feelings into consideration here. You're just so self-absorbed and selfish now."

Although what he is saying is partially true (i.e. she's only thinking of herself now and doesn't care what he wants), it just doesn't work.

Why?

A woman isn't a man's property.

He doesn't own her and if she decides that she wants to be single, she is allowed to go ahead and do that.

Yes, it sucks and it feels like a huge betrayal, but you have to understand the reality of modern life.

Modern women are allowed to get out of a relationship if they want to.

So, getting annoyed with your ex girlfriend and accusing her of being selfish isn't going to change her mind.

In fact, she will just lose respect and attraction for you, which will make getting her back even more difficult.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Saying that she will never find a guy who loves her the same way he does

If a woman has disconnected from her feelings for her ex, hearing something like, "You will never find another man who will love you the way I do. Why can't you see that I'm the right guy for you and that we're made for each other? Can't you see that my love for you is rare and that you won't find it again? Other guys are just going to use you for sex. I love you for you. I am completely committed to you. You won't find that out there easily," just isn't going to matter that much to her.

The truth is, a woman stops caring about what her ex thinks when she stops feeling respect, attraction and love for him.

If her ex doesn't do anything to reawaken her feelings, then she's not going to care how much he loves her.

A woman doesn't want to run back to a guy that she no longer loves.

This is why, if you want your ex to value your love, you need to reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you first.

Only then will she start to care, as she begins to reconnect with her feelings of love for you.

If you don't approach it that way and another guy comes along and makes her feel the kind of respect and sexual attraction for him that you are currently unable to, she's going to value him more than she does you.

Another mistake to avoid is

4. Constantly texting her, e-mailing her, messaging her or calling her to stay on her mind

After a break up, a guy might gradually lose touch with his ex (i.e. because she's no longer texting him, calling him on the phone or interacting with him in any way).

This might cause him to panic, 'It's like the old saying, 'Out of sight out of mind.' She is forgetting about me. I can't let that happen. I need to do whatever it takes to stay on her mind, so she doesn't get a chance to move on without me. If I don't stay in constant contact with her, she will enjoy being single and move on.'

He will then begin to text, e-mail, send her messages via social media or call her on a daily basis, as a way of staying on her mind and hopefully stopping her from moving on.

Yet, here's the thing

She will most likely feel turned off by what she perceives as his clingy, needy and insecure behavior. So, when she gets bombarded by messages and calls from him day after day, she will begin to think, 'What part of 'I want to be single for now' doesn't he get? Why is he bothering me all the time with endless texts? I feel so smothered by him now. This is exactly why I wanted to be single. I hate being in a relationship. It's too stressful and demanding.'

She might then block his number, mark his email as spam and unfriend him on social media, making it difficult for him to interact with her and get her back.

Important: This doesn't mean that you should ignore your ex for many weeks or months.

It just means that you shouldn't bombard her with texts and calls to hopefully stay on her mind, so she doesn't move on.

If you are going to interact with her via text, on a call or in person, make sure to use the interaction as a way to reawaken her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

When you approach it in that way, while being confident and calm about it, she will naturally begin to feel drawn to you again and being single will seem less appealing to her.

When that happens, you can seduce her by getting to a hug, kiss and then sex.

Finally, another mistake that other guys make when in your shoes is

5. Thinking that it's impossible to get her back in his case

It's understandable that when a woman is saying, "Look, it's over between us, okay? I want to be single for now and nothing you can say will make me change my mind," a guy might begin to believe that he has no chance.

He may even say to himself, "I know that other guys have gotten an ex woman back, but my case is impossible. Her mind is clearly made up and I just can't convince her to change it. I guess I will just need to accept that and give up, because I don't stand a chance with her anymore."

Yet, thinking in that way only makes him lose confidence in himself and in his value to her.

Then, when he interacts with her again (e.g. after he's given her 3 to 7 days of space) and she picks up on his self-doubt and insecurity and feels even more turned off by him.

She then begins to think of him as an emotionally weak guy who can't handle life's challenges like a man.

As a result, she becomes even convinced that her decision to break up with him was the right thing to do.

Here's the thing!

Just because your ex girlfriend said that she wants to be single for now, it doesn't mean that her feelings are set in stone (even if she says they are).

When you reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you, she will begin to feel drawn to you again and her desire to be single will start to fade away.

So, if you want to get your ex girlfriend back, you have to believe that you can get her back.

The more you believe in yourself, the more attractive you will be to her, even if she doesn't initially admit it.

Once you make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, proceed to the next step in the ex back process and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why Does My Ex Keep in Touch With Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will keep in touch with her ex man:

1. She wants you back, but is afraid to admit it

[image: She doesn't want to openly admit that she wants you back]

Sometimes, a woman will keep in touch with her ex because she secretly still has feelings for him and is hoping that he will pick up on her subtle signs and then get her back.

She will be friendly, open and even joke around with him via text or on phone calls, but won't make it obvious that she wants him back.

She worries that if she makes it too obvious, he might then say something like, "Hey, look I'm fine to be still in contact with you, but I just want to make it clear that not interested in relationship."

Alternatively, she fears that if he realizes how she feels about him, the thrill of the chase will fade away for him (e.g. he sees that he can easily get her and loses interest in chasing her).

If that happens, she will end up feeling hurt, rejected and left behind.

So, rather than taking that emotional risk, she just keeps in touch with her ex and hopes that he eventually has the courage to make something happen between them.

Another possible reason why your ex keeps in touch with you is

2. She is bored and just talks to you for something to do

In some cases, now that a woman is single, she might find herself feeling a bit bored in the evenings or during the weekend.

If she doesn't have anything else to do, she might go ahead and text her ex or even call him, as a way of passing the time and avoiding feelings of boredom.

So, if your ex is calling you out of boredom (and you secretly want her back), don't make the mistake of being a nice, reliable friend who is always available to her.

If you do, she will use you to keep busy and then drop you like a hot potato when she meets a new guy.

You will then be left wondering, "What happened? I thought we were connecting with each other again. We were talking. She was staying in touch. Now she has a new boyfriend? How could she do that to me? Why did she give me hope and then just leave me behind?"

That will happen if you approach interactions in a friendly, nice way, rather than using your interactions with her to reawaken her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

In other words, you use your interactions to get out of friend zone and into the sexual zone once again

So, if you want her back, use any interaction that you have with her as an opportunity to reactivate her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

Make her laugh, smile and feel so good to be interacting with you that when youâre apart, she naturally begins to think, âI canât wait to call him when I get home tonight. Heâs so different now. I really miss him when weâre not in touch. I want to hug him, kiss him. I miss that. I miss him.

When that happens, her guard naturally comes down and she opens back up to giving the relationship another chance, or at least hooking up with you again to see how she feels afterwards.

Another possible reason why your ex keeps in touch with you is

3. She wants you to keep pursuing her or feeling like you have a chance, while she secretly moves on

A woman will sometimes feel so angry or bitter with her ex for not living up to her expectations (e.g. she thought he would be a confident boyfriend, but he ended up becoming an insecure, jealous, clingy and emotionally sensitive boyfriend) that she will string him along after the break up to get revenge. She will keep in touch with him (e.g. via text, social media, calling him on the phone) and make him believe that he still has a chance with her.

He might then start pursuing her and trying to romance her (e.g. sending her flowers, buying her nice gifts, being available to her whenever she needs him, sending her an email to express his love for her and dedication to her).

In the meantime, she will be secretly moving on and possibly even hooking up with a new guy behind his back.

Then, when her ex finally asks, âCan we give our relationship another shot? she can say something along the lines of, âAre you kidding me? No, of course now! Why would I want to do that anyway? You caused me so much pain and wasted my time. I would be crazy to get back with you again. You were so insecure, clingy and needy. I don't want that. Besides, Iâve moved on already. Iâm seeing a new man now and it feels good to be with a real man.

As a result, she gets the revenge on him that she was seeking.

She was able to string him along and then break his heart and leave him feeling lost, confused and depressed without her in his life anymore.

Another possible reason why your ex keeps in touch with you is

4. She is the sort of woman who likes to stay in touch with her ex's because she thinks it's the right thing to do

Not all women react in the same way after a break up.

For example: Some women will immediately cut off all contact with their ex or even block his number and unfriend him on social media, so they can get over him and move on.

Other women go around badmouthing their ex to mutual friends and acquaintances, in the hope of making him look like the bad guy.

Other women decide to remain friends with their ex and even catch up and say hi over coffee from time to time.

Then, there are those women who keep in touch with an ex (e.g. text or call him from time to time, send him messages via social media), because they are being kind to him and are hoping to make the break up process easier for him.

So, if your ex is keeping in touch with you, it may be because she's a nice person who still genuinely cares enough about you enough to stay in touch and make sure that you're okay.

In her eyes, she's just doing what she feels is the right thing to do.

The good news is that even if she's just staying in touch to be nice, you can use the interactions to reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you and make her fall in love with you again.

You can make her smile, laugh and feel great to be interacting with you again.

You can flirt with her to build up sexual tension between you and her.

You can let her see that you really are a different man to the one she broken up with.

When you approach it that way, her defenses will come down and she will begin feeling surges of respect and attraction for you once again.

When that happens, she starts imagining what it would be like to get back together and you can then guide her back into your arms where she belongs.

Another possible reason why your ex keeps in touch with you is

5. She is hoping that you will say or do something to create a sexual spark between you and her again, so you can then get back together

Will you be able to talk to her in a way that creates a spark, or will you just talk to her in a friendly, neutral way?

Will you flirt with her and build up sexual tension, or will you be too afraid to interact with her in that way now that the relationship has ended?

Do you still feel enough sexual attraction towards her to feel motivated to make her feel turned on by your approach to conversation, or do you just see her as the ex who broke your heart and are only trying to get her back temporarily to make yourself feel better?

These are the sorts of questions that a woman will be looking to answer when she stays in touch with you after a break up, as a way of giving you an opportunity to create a spark with her again.

If you fail to notice the opportunity, she may end up thinking, "Well, I guess I'm the only one who wants to get back together. Clearly he doesn't have feelings for me for anymore, because if he did, he would have made a move by now. Maybe I need to get over him and move on. He just talks to me like a friend. Maybe the spark between us has died and can't be brought back to life, or maybe he just doesn't want to because he really isn't that interested in me after all. Maybe he just wants to stay in touch because he doesn't want to feel abandoned by me. Maybe he's trying to move on without me. So, I need to stop keeping in touch with him. I need to move on."

This is why, no matter what your ex's reasons might be for keeping in touch, you should just be secretly thanking her (i.e. say it to yourself. Don't thank her) for giving you the opening you need to get her back.

Use every interaction that you have with her from now on to reactivate her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you.

Then, go ahead and enjoy the great times ahead when she becomes your girl once again.

Where Guys Go Wrong With an Ex Who Keeps in Touch

Your ex keeping in touch with you is the perfect opportunity to re-attract her and get her back.

Yet, if you approach the interactions in an unattractive way, rather than reactivating her feelings for you, you may actually convince her that she made the right decision by breaking up with you.

So, if you want to get her back, be sure to avoid the following mistakes!

1. Being her texting buddy

A guy will sometimes be so happy that his ex woman is talking to him, that he ends up happily accepting a role as her friend.

He becomes her texting buddy (i.e. where she texts him when she's feeling bored or lonely to make herself feel better) and hopes that it will be the path back into a sexual, romantic relationship with her.

For example: A guy might think, "This is great. At least she's talking to me! All I have to do now is play it cool, be a nice, reliable friend to her and then, when she's ready to see me again as a boyfriend, she will let me know. We can then meet up and get our relationship back together."

Yet, it almost never happens that way.

Why?

If a guy is being a texting buddy for his ex woman, she's usually only going to see him as a friend.

She's also secretly going to lose some respect for him because he only sees himself as a friend, rather than seeing himself as her more than good enough lover or boyfriend, even though they've broken up.

So, she might enjoy keeping in touch with him for an ego boost (e.g. knowing that he wants her back and is trying to be a good friend to accomplish that), but she will also open herself up to meeting, hooking up with and dating new guys.

Of course, she usually won't tell her ex that.

She will say things like, "I'm not interested in dating anyone else right now" or, "I just want to be on my own for a while" to keep her ex around as her texting buddy.

Then, when she has secured herself a new guy and is in a relationship, she can then drop the bombshell on her ex and walk away unhurt by the break up.

Her ex is then left feeling brokenhearted and maybe even betrayed by her, but in reality, he dug his own grave by acting like a nice friend.

So if you don't want to get a text from your ex saying, "Hey, guess what? I've met someone else and I think I'm falling for him," don't make the mistake of becoming her nice, friendly texting buddy.

Instead, use the interactions that you have with her to reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Then, seduce her back into a relationship via a hug, kiss and then sex.

Another mistake to avoid is!

2. Trying to have real, in-depth conversations via text

If your ex woman is keeping in touch with you via text, then don't stick to just text.

Get her on a phone call, re-attract her on that call and then get her to meet up with you in person, so you can seduce her back into a relationship.

Don't hide behind texts.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't ever realize how much damage they are causing to their chances of getting their ex woman back by sticking to text.

Rather than going from texting to a phone call and then to a meet up, a guy will stick to text and try to discuss the relationship and work things out that way.

For example: He might text her things like, â€œIâ€™m so glad that you kept in touch with me. Now we can really get to the bottom of what happened between us and work things out, which is great. Iâ€™ve had a lot of time to think about where I went wrong and I think Iâ€™ve figured it out. I did [these things wrong] and I made [these mistakes]. I'm sorry about that. I look back now and wonder what I was thinking. I really lost my way. How about you? What do you think? Are there certain areas you believe that I need to focus on and improve? Iâ€™m willing to do whatever it takes to regain your trust in me and be the man you want me to be. I want to work things out, so let's discuss this.â€

Yet, even though his intentions are good, it's usually just too much for an ex woman to handle via text.

If she is still madly in love with him and wants him back, then she will deal with it initially because she wants him to keep pursuing her.

However, if she doesn't really have strong feelings for him anymore, she will feel turned off by how overwhelming and stressful it feels to be texting with him.

He sends her huge walls of text with many questions and lots of things for her to think about and answer, even though she isn't that interested.

As she looks at the detail he is putting into the texts, she then begins to see him as being desperate and putting in way too much effort to explain himself.

She also begins to wonder why he is hiding behind text, “Is he too afraid to call me? Would he be able to say those things to me on a phone call, or in person? Is that the kind of guy I should give another chance to?”

She then feels turned off by him and either replies with a few words to his big texts, or begins to avoid replying altogether.

Eventually, she may end up texting him to say that she thinks it would be better if they didn't keep in touch anymore.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Turning her off by appearing to be waiting around for her to give him another chance

Sometimes a guy will avoid doing anything that might make it seem as though he is moving on and enjoying life without his ex.

So, he will decline invitations to go out with friends and instead, spend a lot of time sitting at home alone, watching TV or playing video games.

If she ever asks him what he's doing, he can then respond with something like, "Oh, not much. I've just been chilling out at home. Nothing is that much fun without you anyway. I prefer being on my own these days."

Yet, rather than make her feel flattered that he can't move on without her, it actually turns her off even more.

Here's the thing!

Although a woman usually won't admit this, she loves it when a guy can be happy without her in his life and (don't expect women to admit this) may even have other women who are interested in him.

Being happy without her and potentially having other women who are interested in him makes him seem more valuable to her.

He doesn't have to actually date other women, but the mere idea that other women are interested in him can make an ex woman want to get back with a guy right away.

Important: You don't have to get out there and date new women.

Instead, just make sure that you don't give your ex the impression that you have nothing going on in your life and are lonely without her.

That doesn't impress an ex.

Women are impressed by men who are happy, confident and forward moving in life with or without them.

As an added bonus, if you also seem to be around other people and potentially have some women who are interested in you, that can often be enough to make an ex woman want to see you and give you another chance.

4. Waiting too long to arrange a meet up and she then loses interest

Even if a woman's main reason for keeping in touch with her ex is that she still has feelings for him and is hoping they will get back together, if he doesn't move things along (i.e. goes from texting to calling to meeting up with her in person), she will eventually get bored of waiting for him and just move on instead.

She may think, "Well, I tried! He clearly isn't that interested in us getting back together again. If he was, he would have made the effort to see me by now. Instead, he's just been texting back and forth like a friend. I'm not going to wait any longer for him to make a move. I'm getting on with my life as of right now. As a matter of fact, I'm calling my girlfriends and arranging a girl's night out. I'm going to get drunk and flirt with guys. If I want to have sex, I will. I just going to get on with my life and forget about my ex. It's time for me to move on."

She then cuts herself off from her ex (e.g. she stops responding to his texts/social media messages/calls, she becomes cold and distant towards him) and then actively begins flirting with new guys and moves on.

Don't let that happen to you.

The fact is, your ex has already given you much more of a chance to get her back (i.e. by keeping in touch with you) than most guys ever get after a break up.

So, use that opportunity to re-attract her and arrange a meet up with her today or tomorrow.

At the meet up, fully reactivate her feelings for you (e.g. by making her smile and laugh, making her feel feminine in contrast to your emotionally masculine vibe, being confident and self-believing regardless of what she says and does) and break down her remaining walls, so she wants to get back together with you for real.

Don't keep her waiting.

Get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Many Break Ups Are Too Many?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

There is no set number.

Whether you can get her back or not, depends on the following 5 things:

1. How serious the break ups were

No two relationships are the same, so no two breaks ups are the same either.

For example: Some couples will break up and then make up many times over trivial things.

This often happens when a couple is young or inexperienced in relationships.

So, when a problem arises between them, rather than discussing it and solving it like two mature adults, they get into an argument, feel upset at each other and then break up.

Then, after a few days, one or both of them realize that what happened wasn't worth breaking up over and they kiss and make up, only to repeat the same pattern again a few weeks or months later.

Yet, over time, they may both mature and rather than breaking up at the drop of a hat, they begin to talk things through and resolve their problems in a sensible and mature way.

So, in an ex back case like that, the answer to the question of, "How many breaks up are too many?" is as many as it takes for the relationship to mature.

There are also couples who break up over more serious reasons (e.g. one of them cheated, the man was abusive, the man took her for granted and ended up treating her badly, the man became very clingy or jealous).

In cases like that, getting back together will depend on the 'guilty' person's ability to truly change and improve.

For example: If a guy wasn't being responsible about his life and future (e.g. partying all the time, playing video games too much, not making any serious progress in life), but promises to now change and become more responsible and goal oriented, his woman might forgive him and give him another chance.

However, if after they get back together he reverts back to his old habits or fails at his attempts to make progress in life, his woman will likely break up with him again.

Over time, if that pattern continues (i.e. they break up, he promises to grow up, she takes him back and then breaks up with him again), it may get to the point where she starts thinking, "He's never going to change. No matter how many chances I given him, he always ends up doing the same thing in the end. As much as I love him, I have to face the fact that he's never going to be the man I want him to be and that I won't have a secure future with him. I need to find a man who is more mature and has the potential to succeed at whatever he aims to do in life. I need a man who isn't going to make me have to worry about our future together and my ex isn't that guy. He just won't man up. I have to move on."

She will then try to move on without him.

So, in a case like that, how many break ups are too many?

Well, it all depends on the man's ability to change and let his ex woman see that he is no longer the same old guy that she had to break up with over and over again.

He really has become a more mature man and is already making progress towards his goals in life.

He's no longer failing at it and is no longer avoiding making progress.

Things are happening for him now.

How quickly he can start making real progress will determine how willing she is to begin looking at him in a different light.

On the other hand, if he continues to think and behave in the same old ways as before, she will use that as a reason to end things for, â€œLook, weâ€™ve had too many break ups. This isn't normal. Relationships aren't supposed to break up all the time. Our relationship clearly isn't working, so letâ€™s just accept that and move on.â€

Whether you can get her back also depends onâ€

2. How you behaved during the break ups

How you behave after a break up is of vital importance.

Whatever you say and do after a break up will either convince her to give you another chance, or turn her off even more and make her try to get over you even faster.

For example: Some of the things that make it more difficult for a man to get a woman back after a break up are:

- He begs and pleads with her for another chance, which turns her off because she perceives him as being emotionally weak and desperate.
- He promises to change and improve if she gives him one more chance, which turns her off because heâ€™s made promises before that he hasn't ever been able to keep.
- He offers to do whatever she tells him, which turns her off because she doesn't want to be his teacher in life about how to be a man.
- He tells her how much he loves her and needs her in his life, which turns her off because she perceives him as being selfish and only thinking about his feelings.
- He says that he can't live without her, which turns her off because it highlights to her that he can't cope with the challenges of life without her support and guidance.

If a man behaves like that after a break up, it doesn't really matter how many break ups the couple had gone through because the woman will be turned off by his approach.

What matters most is whether or not your approach to her is re-attracting her and making her feel respect for you again.

Whether you can get her back also depends onâ€

3. How you behaved after getting her back

As important as it is to handle a break up in a confident, mature way, itâ€™s equally important to be the same way when you get her back.

For example: Sometimes a guy will put in a lot of effort to convince his ex to give him another chance (e.g. be on his best behavior, pretend that this time heâ€™s really changed the things she wants him to change, plead with her to just give him one more chance).

Then, if he happens to get lucky and get a chance with her, he continues to make the same old mistakes that he made to cause her to fall out of love with him (e.g. taking her for granted, not making her feel feminine and girly when she's with him, being too jealous and controlling, being insecure or emotionally sensitive).

When that happens, a woman will start to think, “Why did I even bother giving him another chance? He put on a good show to get me back, but nothing is different. It was all just an act to get me back. He's still the same guy as before and I'm now just wasting my time in a relationship that is going nowhere. We've had too many break ups. It's time to give up and focus on finding a man who can give me what I want, rather than holding on to a lost cause of a guy. He's not for me. I've got to break up with him once and for all.”

If he then tries to get her back again, she will be much more resistant than ever before because she doesn't believe that he can or will change.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back and keep her, you have to truly change and improve some of the things that matter to her.

When she sees for herself that you really are a new and improved man, her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you will intensify and you and her will enjoy a much better relationship than you did before.

Whether you can get her back also depends on

4. If you are able to make her love you again

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she doesn't feel enough respect, attraction or love for him anymore to warrant being in a relationship.

Essentially, she doesn't have feelings for him, because he is continually saying and doing things that are turning her off.

So, she falls out of love with him and then tries to move on.

If a guy wants to get a woman like that back, he has to focus on being a man that she can now fully respect, feel attracted to and love.

When she interacts with him, she will be asking herself:

- Is he confident and self-assured, or is he still insecure, self-doubting and unsure of himself?
- Does he make me feel like a real woman by being more emotionally masculine than me, or do I feel like I can walk all over him because he's too emotionally weak and wimpy?
- Do I feel sure about a future with him because he has definite goals that he's working towards, or do I feel uncertain and insecure with him because he's too childish or immature?
- Would I feel lucky to be his girl again, or do I feel like I could do a lot better than him now?

If she can see a lot of positives, she will naturally feel drawn to him and want to give him another chance, despite the many break ups they've been through.

Whether you can get her back also depends on

5. If you can handle her initial resistance to getting back together

Even if a woman still has feelings for her ex and secretly wants him back with him, sheâs wonât always agree to give him another chance right away.

Why?

In most cases, a woman doesnât want to make it too easy for her ex to get her back, especially if she has been disappointed by him in the past (i.e. him promising to change and fix things, but never being able to).

So, she wonât initially make it easy for him to win her back.

She will want to test his confidence, emotional strength and his ability to cope with a difficult situation (i.e. the extreme pressure heâs under of potentially losing her forever).

Will he give up if she doesnât make it easy for him initially, or even for a few days?

Will he become insecure and emotionally sensitive and start begging and pleading for another chance?

Will he get angry with her and accuse her of being selfish or heartless for turning her back on him and not giving him another chance?

These are the questions she will be looking to find answers for when interacting with her ex.

So, if you want your ex back for real, donât back down at the first sign of resistance and donât lose confidence if she says harsh things to you (e.g. “You are a complete turn off to me now” or, “I regret the day I ever met you. You ruined my life”).

Instead, maintain your confidence, be a good man and focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new and improved you.

Then, seduce her back into a relationship by getting to a hug, kiss and then sex.

After you have sex, donât push for a relationship.

Let her feel attracted and drawn to the new and improved you and allow her to want a relationship more than you do.

Then, she will naturally give you another chance because she wants it too.

4 Mistakes That Make Getting Her Back More Difficult

Here are 4 common mistakes that other guys make when in a situation like yours, which make the process of getting their ex woman back more difficultâ

1. Trying to get her back by promising that things will be different

For example: A guy might say to his ex, âLook, I know I stuffed up, but this time, I promise that things will be different. Iâve learned my lesson and I wonât make the same mistakes again. I mean it. Please believe me.â

It sounds quite sincere, right?

He deserves a chance if he means it, true?

Yes, but not necessarily from the womanâs perspective.

If she has given him plenty of chances before based on him promising that things would be different, why should she believe him now?

This is why, rather than promising that things will be different, he needs to avoid saying that and just show her that things are already different.

In other words, make changes to how he thinks, talks, behaves and acts when around her, so she can see for herself that things really are different and she really does feel differently about him now.

When she can see that and experience that for herself, she will naturally want to give him another chance.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

2. Trying to discuss the relationship in detail to hopefully work things out that way

Sometimes a guy will try to get into deep discussions with ex about the relationship and what went wrong.

He hopes to prove to her how serious he is about working things out, so she then feels as though he deserves another chance and that things could work better this time around.

Yet, rather than making her think, *âHe must really be serious about getting me back if he wants to discuss our relationship and where he went wrong. So, I just have to give him another chance,*â she simply begins to re-experience all the negative moments from the relationship (i.e. because heâs highlighting what went wrong and trying to discuss it in detail).

As a result, she feels turned off and repelled by the idea of going through all that again with him.

So if you want to get your ex back, don't focus your energy on what happened in the past.

Instead, focus on making her feel new and exciting feelings for you now.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

3. Not changing in the ways that are secretly most important to her

Most women will break up with a guy without ever giving him her real, secret reasons for doing so.

That is why a lot of guys don't change the things that matter to her most and instead keep offering an ex woman things that she doesn't really want or care about.

For example: A woman might want her guy to be more ballsy and stand up to her, rather than putting up with her bad moods and drama, but he keeps promising to treat her even better, spend even more time with her and so on.

As a result, she thinks, *âHe just doesn't get it! I don't want to tell him what I really want because then it will seem like he is faking it. I want him to understand this without me having to tell him.*â

If she can see that he just won't change in the ways that she really wants, she will switch off her feelings for him and begin trying to move on without him.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

4. Giving up because others think that the relationship has run its course and is impossible to fix

Sometimes, friends and family just get sick and tired of hearing about all the trouble between you and your ex, so they begin to encourage you to end the relationship and move on.

For example: They might say something along the lines of, “How many break ups will it take for you to finally realize that she’s not the right girl for you? You two can’t even stay together for months without getting into a big fight. That’s not normal. Forget about her, man. She’s just not worth it. You deserve better than her. Just let her go.”

Yet, here’s the thing!

Nobody can tell you how you should feel.

If you truly love her and know that you’re ready to man up and make the relationship work this time around, then that is your decision to make.

You are allowed to do whatever you want.

If you feel as though you will regret it for the rest of your life if you walk away from her now, then decide to get her back.

Make the relationship even better than it was, by finally understanding what she really wants you to change and then changing that.

Additionally, use an approach to the relationship that gets her to change and start treating you even better than she ever has before.

Make her feel more respect, attraction and love than she has felt before, so she feels motivated to be a good woman to you and never leave you again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Does No Contact Work On Women With Abandonment Issues?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends.

If your ex is still attracted to you and in love with you, then No Contact will hurt her and she might want to get you back to feel better about herself.

On the other hand, if she dumped you after losing respect, attraction and love for you and no longer has an interest in you, then she will probably just move on and not look back.

Remember: No feelings for you = no motivation to want to get you back.

What matters the most when getting an ex woman back is her feelings for you.

That fundamental rule applies even if a woman has abandonment issues, or is totally independent.

It's all about how you make her feel and No Contact won't necessarily make any women feel drawn to their ex and want him back.

So, if you want to get her back for sure, here are 3 questions to ask yourself:

1. How strong is her love for you?

[image: Using no contact on an ex with abandonment issues]

If a woman is still in love with her ex, then using No Contact [^] can work on her.

When she doesn't hear from her ex, she may begin to think, "I know that we've broken up, but I'm still in love with him. The thought of losing him forever makes me feel sick, so it must be a sign that we should get back together. Not hearing from him is driving me crazy! I just can't take it anymore. He is the man that I love and I can't deal with being abandoned by him like this. Maybe I was too hasty in breaking up with him. Maybe if I contact him again, we will be able to work things out. All I know is that I can't just sit here and live with the thought of losing him. I have to contact him."

She will then contact him and try to get him back.

Here's the thing though!

In pretty much every ex back case where a man needs help to get his ex woman back, she isn't still in love with him.

She is over him and wants to move on, so No Contact doesn't work on her.

So, when she notices that he's not contacting her, she may think, "I knew I couldn't trust him. He's just like all other men. When the going gets tough, they abandon me. No-one is willing to fight for me and get me back. Well, that's fine with me. I've survived this before and I will survive it again. I'm going to find myself a man who I love, who loves me and who doesn't ever want to leave me."

If her ex then contacts her after 30 or 60 days of No Contact to hopefully get her back, rather than running back to him, she will say something like, "How can you even talk to me after the way you behaved after the break up? You knew I had abandonment issues and you just walked away like I meant nothing to you. Don't you understand how that would have made me feel? Well, it doesn't matter anymore because it's completely over between you and I. I can't be with a man who *disrespects my feelings like that. Donâ€™t ever contact me again!*â€œ

It then becomes more difficult for the guy to get her to forgive him, re-attract her, seduce her and get her back.

This is why No Contact isn't an approach that should be used on ANY woman.

It's best used when a woman is still in love with her ex, can't find a replacement guy or can't deal with the pain of a break up.

In pretty much every other situation (i.e. 99% of ex back cases where a guy actually needs help), the woman will move on if her ex doesn't contact her because she's no longer attracted to him.

So, if youâ€™re not sure about how much your ex loves you and how she will react if you walk away from her, itâ€™s best not to use No Contact on her.

Instead, you should interact with her every chance you get (e.g. by talking to her over the phone, or meeting up with her to catch up) and reawaken her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, so she actually has a reason to get back with you (i.e. she has feelings for you again).

The more that you make her laugh, smile and feel like a sexy, desirable woman around you, the more she will open back up to you and want a relationship.

As you are getting back together, she will then begin to think something like, *â€œHe could have abandoned me when we broke up, but he stuck around and changed and improved so he could be a better man for me. I donâ€™t know if Iâ€™ve finally found the man that I can stick with for life, but I do know that he at least deserves another chance. He didn't abandon me. He truly loves me and I'm starting to think that I truly love him too. Maybe this is it. Maybe he's the one after all.*â€œ

She then opens up to giving the relationship another try.

Another question to ask yourself isâ€œ

2. How easily can she move on without you by hooking up with a new guy?

In some cases, even though a woman has abandonment issues, being ignored by her ex might not be that big of a deal to her.

She knows that she can easily find a replacement man (e.g. because she is attractive, she knows how to flirt and make guys interested in her), so she isn't worried about being 'abandoned'.

So, rather than feeling sad or panicking about her ex not contacting her, she focuses on finding herself a new guy as soon as possible (e.g. by using dating apps, going to bars or clubs with her single friends or coworkers, taking up a mostly male-oriented hobby or sport, saying "Yes" to a guy that has had a crush on her for a while, flirting with coworkers).

Alternatively, she might decide to go from relationship to relationship to ensure that she is never alone.

She may think, *â€œIf Iâ€™m never single, I never have to feel abandoned. So, I should always have other guys lined up and ready to date me, in case the relationship I'm in breaks up. That way, I will always have someone ready to love me and I'll never feel alone.*â€œ

While her ex is sitting at home counting the 30 or 60 days of No Contact off his calendar, she may have already moved on by the time he finally initiates contact with her again.

After wasting 30 or 60 days doing 'No Contact,' he then has to face up to the fact that she has been happy, having sex and enjoying herself the whole time.

Meanwhile, he will have most-likely lost a bit of confidence in himself and will now have to deal with the potential heartbreak of imaging her having sex and being in love with a new man.

So, if your goal is to get your ex back, it's usually best not to count on her fear of being abandoned as the way to do it.

Instead, a much easier way to change how she feels is to interact with her and make her feel respect, sexual attraction and love for you again, so she has a reason to get back with you now.

The next question to ask yourself is

3. Have other guys hurt her in the past and caused her to come running back to them?

Sometimes a woman might have a pattern of running back to an ex who ignores her after a break up, because she fears being alone or abandoned.

If that's what your ex tends to do, then chances are high that she will come back to you if you cut off contact and wait.

However, just because she does come back, it doesn't mean she that will stay for long if you continue to think, act and behave in ways that turned her off and lead to the break up.

For example: A woman might break up with a guy because she feels that she's more emotionally mature than him.

So, while she's focused on her studies or career, he's busy living a carefree life (e.g. working in a dead-end job, having no goals or plans for the future, spending too much time partying/watching TV/ playing video games).

As a result, she breaks up with him as a way of hopefully shocking him into becoming more serious about his life.

If he then cuts off all contact with her, she might begin to panic about losing him and then come running back.

Yet, if she discovers that he's still the same emotionally immature guy that he was before, she will want to end the relationship and move on without him.

So, if you intend using No Contact with your ex because you know it worked on her before, make sure that you at least change some of the things that turned her off in the relationship (e.g. become more confident, get clear on your goals for the future and start working towards achieving them, become more emotionally masculine so she feels more feminine around you from now on, become more emotionally mature or emotionally strong).

Then, when she does come back to you and sees that you're a new and improved man, she won't want to let you go again.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Using No Contact on a Woman With Abandonment Issues to Get Her Back

If you're currently thinking about cutting off contact with your ex as a way of getting her back, make sure that you're clear on all the facts, rather than falling victim to some of the biggest ex back myths out there.

For example: Some of the mistakes that guys make in a situation like yours areâ€¦|

1. Thinking that because she has abandonment issues, she will run back to him if he simply doesn't contact her

Regardless of what a woman's issues might be, when she breaks up with a guy it's usually because she no longer has enough feelings for him to justify being in a relationship.

So, if a guy then ignores her to make her come running back to him, she may begin to feel like he is abandoning her and it may hurt her a little.

Yet, it won't necessarily get her back.

In most cases, rather than reacting in the way that he's hoping (i.e. she comes running back to him), she will just use the time apart to get over him and move on.

She may then think to herself, "Well, I guess he's just another guy to add to my list of guys who have abandoned me. I'm not worried though because I it's for the best. I just don't feel any love, respect or attraction for him anymore, so there's no point feeling like I've been abandoned. I don't want him back. I can now stop wasting time with a guy who isn't right for me and focus on finding the kind of man who will not only give me the attraction experience I really want in a relationship, but that I can build a future with as well."

So, before you use No Contact as your main method of getting your ex back, make sure that she still has strong feelings of love, respect and attraction for you.

If she has disconnected from her feelings for you and you then ignore her, she will probably just try to get over you rather than come running back to a relationship that doesn't fulfill her emotionally.

Another mistake isâ€¦|

2. Not improving his ability to make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction during interactions

Some guys assume that because their ex woman doesn't like being abandoned, she will accept him back fairly easy without him having to do anything to improve himself.

As a result, he will interact with his ex and continue to make the same attraction mistakes he made before (e.g. being too insecure, treating her more like a friend than a sexy woman, not having a clear purpose and direction in life, being too emotionally immature, allowing her to dominate him during conversation or always get her way).

So, rather than make her want him back, she feels repelled by him and the old, unattractive and unappealing approach that he is using on her.

Here's the thingâ€¦|

If you want your ex to really want you back, you must interact with her (on the phone and especially in person) and reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦|

- Using humor to break down her defenses and make her feel more relaxed about interacting with you again.

- Being confident in your attractiveness to her, while also being understanding towards her (e.g. if she cries and says things like, “I don’t know if we should get back together. I can’t risk being hurt again,” or “This has happened to me so many times before that I can’t trust you not to desert me.”).
- Focusing on making her feel safe and protected around you by being emotionally strong and masculine in comparison to her girly behavior, energy and way of thinking.
- Not sucking up to her and trying to jump through all of her hoops to get a chance with her. That is the mistake that pretty much every other guy in her past has made. They take her fear of abandonment too seriously and try to be a knight in shining armor.

The more you reawaken her feelings for you during interactions, the less she will be able to resist coming back to you.

On the other hand, if you continue to turn her off (e.g. by being insecure, tiptoeing around her, sucking up to her), she will decide that it’s probably best for her to be alone and try to move on, rather than being with a guy that she no longer feels attracted to.

Another mistake is

3. Forgetting that women with abandonment issues are usually sick and tired of being abandoned, so they feel resentment and move on, rather than running back to a guy

You’ve probably heard the expression, “Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned,” right? Essentially, what it means is that a woman who has been rejected by a man can become extremely angry and vindictive.

In a case where a guy uses No Contact to get a woman back who has abandonment issues (e.g. because her father left when she was very young, she’s been dumped by men that she has loved), she starts to feel bitter towards her ex and begins to resent him.

If he then contacts her after 30 or 60 days, rather than saying, “Oh, I’m so glad you called! I thought you had abandoned me like everyone else in my life, but you haven’t! You’re my knight in shining armor! I love you so much! Come and see me right away,” she instead says something along the lines of, “I see now that you’re just like every other guy I’ve known. As soon as you got a chance to walk away, you walked away without giving me a second thought. Well, forget about getting me back! I will never forgive you for abandoning me in the way you did. You could have contacted me and we could have worked things out, but you didn’t. You walked away and now probably only want me back because you can’t find yourself a new woman. Well, I won’t let you use me like that. I hate you now and I never want to see you again.”

Don’t let that happen to you.

In almost all ex back cases, it’s better to interact with an ex and make her feel a strong resurgence of respect, attraction and love for you (via the way you talk, act and behave), than to use No Contact and risk igniting even more negative emotions inside of her.

Another mistake to avoid is

4. Not understanding that all women are different

Every woman with abandonment issues experiences it in a completely different way.

For some, the fear of abandonment is strong and causes them to hold onto guys who they don't even love, rather than being left behind.

For others, it's a gentle fear that they can overcome by hooking up with a new guy and falling in love.

In the same way, every woman reacts differently to No Contact.

For example: Some women will begin stalking an ex guy who isn't contacting them (e.g. follow him around, show up at his work, home or favorite hangout, send text messages or call him on the phone, troll him on social media, hack into his email or social media, ask mutual friends about him and what he has been up to).

On the other hand, not being contacted after a break up can be the thing that finally gets a woman to stop having abandonment issues and no longer care about being alone.

She might say, "I need to stop caring about whether I am being left behind. I dumped him. He doesn't need to come back to me. Besides, he probably thinks I wouldn't give him another chance. So, I need to just find myself a new man and move on. No need to worry about my ex. He is my ex now. I made that decision and I'm sticking with it."

So, if you want your ex to get your back into a loving, trusting relationship with you, I don't recommend playing unnecessary games with her.

Instead, just call her on the phone, or better yet, meet up with her in person, reawaken her feelings for you, seduce her and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Cheated On Me and Now Wants to Be Friends

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 options for you to choose from now:

1. Be her friend, re-attract her, have sex with her again and get her back

You can use the friendship as a way of reawakening her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

The way to approach the friendship is to be available to her, but use any interactions that you have with her to re-attract her sexually and romantically and then seduce her back into a relationship with you.

Don't make the mistake of hanging around her and pretending that you only want to be her nice, neutral friend and that you're not sexually interested in her anymore, because if you do that she may take it as a sign that you don't see her in that way anymore.

If she thinks that, she will then hook up with other guys to move on without you.

If she does that, you might then feel betrayed by her again and possibly even start thinking things like, "I can't believe she did it to me again! Not only did I forgive her for cheating on me and agree to be her friend, but she now expects me to hang around while she hooks up with other guys. How could she do this to me?"

Here's the thing:

If you don't make your ex feel sexually attracted when she's with you, she will assume that you're not interested in her anymore, or that there is no spark between you and her anymore.

As a result, she will feel like the best thing for her to do is move on by finding a new man and falling in love with him instead.

So, make sure that you use every interaction you have with your ex from now on, to reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by:

- Flirting with her to create sexual tension, rather than 'playing it safe' by just acting friendly, neutral or distant.
- Believing in yourself and in your value to her, rather than doubting yourself and then making her feel turned off as a result.
- Making her smile and laugh and feel relaxed to be around you again, rather than trying to get into intense, deep discussions about the relationship.
- Showing her that you're a new and improved man that she can now truly look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, rather than continuing to make the same old attraction mistakes as before.
- Being a good man, but also being confident and assertive when talking to her, so she can see that she can't dominate you during conversations.
- Maintaining your confidence when she tries to make you doubt yourself around her.

Once she is feeling respect and attraction for you again, you can then progress to giving her a hug, a kiss and then hook up with her sexually.

From there, you need to continue saying and doing the types of things that will build on her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you (e.g. be more and more confident when you're around her, be more ballsy around her than you were before).

When you do that, she will naturally begin to fall back in love with you and want you back all for herself.

Another option is to

2. Be her friend, make her want you back, but hook up with other women instead to hurt her feelings

You can use the so-called 'friendship' with your ex to reactivate her romantic feelings for you (e.g. by using ballsy humor to make her laugh and feel good to be interacting with you again, by standing up to her in an emotionally masculine way when she tries to push you around and thereby making her feel feminine in comparison to you).

Then, when she's fully re-attracted and possibly saying things like, "I know I messed things up between us before by cheating on you, but if we ever got back together, I promise I would never do that again. I would do anything to make you happy and show you that I regret the mistake I made," you can begin to hook up with another woman (or women) to hurt her feelings and make her feel like she is being left behind.

If she gets upset with you for moving on with other women, you can say, "Hey, why are you acting like this? I don't get it. You said you wanted to be friends, so we're just friends. It's not like we're a couple or anything. Besides, did you honestly think I would get back with you after what you did? I'm sorry, but as the saying goes, 'Once bitten, twice shy.' I would never be able to trust you again after you cheated on me. So, the best I can offer you is a friendship."

You will then have gotten your revenge and can move on from there, as she is left behind feeling horrible about herself.

Another option is to

3. Re-attract her and then ask to hook up with each other sexually one last time to say goodbye

With this option, you can use a friendship with your ex as a way of getting closure and then moving on.

For example: You reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you by interacting with her on a phone call, or in person.

Then, when her walls have come down and she's feeling open to being with you again, say something like, "Things between us didn't end in the best possible way, agree? Yet, we can fix that and then move on without either of us having to feel bad about it. We can hook up one more time to say goodbye to each other in a good way. Alternatively, if we decide that we still want to be together, we can start with a clean slate without the past hanging over us, and if we don't, there will be no hard feelings between us. So, come here," give me a hug and then move in for a hug.

Then, when you hug her, pull back after about 5-10 seconds and then move in for a kiss.

If she is open to that, then proceed to hook up with her sexually one last time.

You can then hook up with her, blow her mind and get her back if you want to.

Alternatively, you can walk away knowing that she still felt attracted enough to you to want to have sex with you one last time.

If the sex is great, she may end up feeling confused and want you back and it will then be your choice as to whether you give her another chance or not.

Another option is toâ€¦!

4. Say no to her offer and move on without her

Just because your ex wants to be friends with you after cheating, you are under no obligation to agree to her request.

If you donâ€™t want to stick around and be her friend (e.g. because you donâ€™t want to be friends with a person who isnâ€™t 100% loyal in a relationship, seeing her will only remind you of how she cheated), you donâ€™t have to.

You can simply say something like, â€œLook, I know you want to be friends and that's a nice gesture, but I donâ€™t feel the same way. I forgive you for what happened and I donâ€™t hold any grudges against you, but I think for my own peace of mind, it would be better if we just move on from, rather than trying to hold on even as friends. I wish you the best and I hope you will be happy in your life. Good luck and goodbye.â€

Then, cut your losses, move on and find yourself another woman who will give you the respect and love that you deserve.

Where Guys Go Wrong With a Cheating Ex Who Wants to Be Friends

[image: Where guys go wrong with a cheating ex who wants to be friends]

If you genuinely want to make things work with your ex, try to avoid making any or all of these mistakesâ€¦!

1. Saying that you want a relationship or nothing

For example: A guy might say to his ex woman, â€œYou cheated on me, but Iâ€™m willing to forgive you and take you back. However, I canâ€™t stick around and be your friend while you date other men. If you want me in your life, youâ€™re going to have to be my girlfriend again. Otherwise, itâ€™s better if we just go our separate ways.â€

Although he might feel justified in giving his ex an ultimatum like that, the truth is, if he hasnâ€™t first reawakened her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for him, sheâ€™s not going to want a relationship.

So, instead of getting her back, which is what he actually wants, heâ€™s more likely to lose her and hear her say, â€œWell, I offered you a friendship, but if you don't want that, then I can't force you. Okay, let's not talk to each other anymore. Goodbye.â€

This is why you shouldn't give your ex an ultimatum if you want her back.

Instead, just focus on using every interaction that you have with her, to generate feelings of romantic and sexual attraction inside of her.

The more attracted she feels, the more her guard will come down.

When that happens, she will start wanting to get back into a relationship without you having to force her.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

2. Sulking about her offer of a friendship only and trying to seek pity for your emotional pain

For example: A guy might say, â€œHow can you even ask this of me after what you did? Canâ€¢t you see that being friends with you will only make me relive the pain you caused me? You know that I still have feelings for you. Even though you cheated on me, Iâ€¢m willing to forgive you and start over. However, you canâ€¢t torture me by expecting me to only be your friend. I just canâ€¢t handle that kind of pain.â€

Essentially, heâ€¢s hoping that by making her feel pity for him, she will change her mind about being friends and agree to get back together again.

Yet, it just doesnâ€¢t work like that.

A woman doesnâ€¢t want to be manipulated into giving her ex another chance simply because she feels guilty for cheating on him.

Additionally, when a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her ex enough to cheat on him, sheâ€¢s not going to think itâ€¢s such a big loss if he doesnâ€¢t want to be friends with her.

Additionally, seeing a man sulk and seem desperate isn't attractive to a woman.

Women are naturally attracted to men who maintain control of their emotions and always feel more than good enough for them, rather than guys who lose control of their emotions and feel unworthy.

So, when a guy sulks and seeks pity from his ex woman, she will just use it as another reason to cut him out of her life completely and move on.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Not being aware that you can use a friendship to re-attract her and get her back

Sometimes a guy makes the mistake of assuming that being friends with an ex means he can never get her back.

He then feels disheartened and possibly even says â€œNo,â€ to her offer to be friends, because he canâ€¢t face the thought of interacting with her and not being able to hold her, kiss her and have sex with her.

Alternatively, he hangs around her being a nice, sweet, reliable friend, in the hope that she will one day realize what a great guy he is and give him another chance.

Yet, hereâ€¢s the thingâ€¦|

If you decide to reject your exâ€¢s offer to be friends, you will pass up the perfect opportunity to interact with her regularly (on phone calls and in person) and re-attract her, seduce her and get her back.

As a result, getting her back becomes very difficult and she tries to move on with a new guy to get over the pain of the break up.

So, understand that being friends with an ex is a great way to get her back.

Instead of walking away, you can use every interaction that you have with her to reactivate her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel feminine in contrast to your masculine vibe, showing her that you're now at a new level as a man, being more confident and ballsy than you were before).

The more attracted she feels, the more she will start seeing you as more than just a friend.

You can then hook up with her sexually and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

4. Not being assertive enough when arranging a meet up as friends

Sometimes, when a woman suggests being friends with an ex she cheated on, her idea is to stay in touch with him via text or social media from time to time, but nothing more than that.

So, if her ex then tries to arrange an in-person meet up, she might say, â€œUmmmâ€¦ maybe we should just stick to texting for a whileâ€¦ or, â€œIâ€™m not ready to face you yet after what I did. I need more time.â€¦

In most cases, she is simply testing him to see if he has the confidence and emotional strength to persevere and get an in-person meet up with her, or if he will become self-doubting and give up.

Depending on how he responds, she will either feel a resurgence of respect and attraction for him for being man enough to get her back, or she will lose respect and attraction for him for not believing in himself and in his value to her.

So, if you want your ex back, don't give up if she doesn't agree to meet up with you right away.

When you meet up with her, fully reactivate her feelings for you, seduce her and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Will My Ex Want Me Back if She Sees Me Moving On With Another Woman?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reactions your ex might have if she sees you moving on with another woman:

1. She feels as though it's now too late for you and her because you've moved on

Moving on with a new woman can work to make an ex jealous and want you back, but it can also backfire and make her feel like it's too late for you and her now.

So, rather than making her think, “Oh no! I can't believe he's moving on with another woman! Suddenly the thought of losing him forever has made me realize just how much I love him. I can't let that happen! I need to contact him right away and do whatever it takes to get him back!” she thinks something along the lines of, “Wow, I really thought he'd try to get me back, but I guess I was wrong. I guess he didn't really care about me after all, or maybe he did, but he likes this new woman even more. He has clearly moved on now, so regardless of how I still feel about him, it's too late for reconciliations. I just need to accept that it's truly over between us, we're never getting back together and try to move on too.”

She then forces herself to get over you and move on in her life too (e.g. by going out with her single friends and hooking up with other guys, dating and falling in love with someone else, using dating apps to line up dates).

So, if your plan is to get your ex back, there's a much easier way to go about it than dating another woman to make her jealous.

Here's the thing:

Although moving on with a new woman can spur your ex into wanting you back, it can also be a waste of time. Why?

While you're busy dating and giving your attention to another woman, you're not interacting with your ex and re-attracting her.

Avoiding the re-attraction phase of the ex back process keeps you and her apart for longer, which just gives her more time to get over you and move on.

Of course, moving on with another woman can work to make an ex jealous and come running back, but it also can backfire and end up being a waste of time.

So, if you want her back quickly and cleanly (i.e. without too much drama), focus on interacting with her and reawakening her feelings for you again (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with you again, by flirting with her to create sexual tension, by being more confident and charismatic than you were before to make her feel intrigued about the new and improved you).

When you start to re-attract her, she will naturally begin drop her guard and open herself up to the idea of being your girl again.

Another possible reaction your ex might have if she sees you moving on with another woman is:

2. She feels unworthy of you because the new woman is more attractive than her

She may begin to think, “Wow, he has really done well for himself. She is beautiful. I guess I don’t stand a chance with him anymore. After all, why would he leave an attractive woman like her for me? I need to accept that and just try to move on.”

Of course, it can also work the other way where she thinks, “Wow, she’s really attractive. Maybe I made a mistake by dumping him. I need to get him back” and she then tries to get you back.

However, in many cases, a woman will feel insecure and back away.

Women often do a great job of hiding their insecurity, but in reality, women are actually more insecure than men about their appearance.

For example:

- According to a global study conducted by Dove cosmetics, 96% of women don’t consider themselves to be beautiful and feel insecure about some aspect of their physical appearance.
- In the USA, women are reported to experience depression at twice the rate of men, while in the UK, 40% of women will require treatment for depression at some point in their life compared to only 10% of men.
- Women are twice as likely to experience anxiety compared to men.

So, while your ex might seem like a very confident, emotionally strong woman, deep inside she may be experiencing all kinds of insecurities about her attractiveness as a woman.

So, all it might take is for her to see you with a woman that she sees as being more beautiful than her, to convince her that she’s no longer good enough for a guy like you.

Then, rather than make her want you back, she backs away because she believes she can’t compete with your new woman.

If you then try to convince her that she’s actually the one you want, she probably won’t believe you when you say, “I love you and only want to be with you. The other woman meant nothing to me,” because she feels less valuable than your new woman.

Of course, it really depends on how your ex views herself and how she thinks of men who can attract beautiful women.

Many women are more attracted to men who can attract beautiful women, so moving on with a beautiful woman can make your ex feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

However, if your ex is insecure and won’t feel worthy of you anymore if she sees you with a beautiful woman, she may decide to hook up with new guys and move on herself.

Another possible reaction your ex might have if she sees you moving on with another woman is that

3. She feels turned off by you because the woman is less attractive than her

When a guy dates a woman who is less attractive than his ex, not only does it make his ex feel good about herself, but she also assumes that he’s desperate and has accepted whatever he can get because attractive women aren’t interested in him.

She then begins to think things like, “Well, it seems like I made the right decision by breaking up with him after all. I see now that he’s not the kind of guy that other attractive women want. Instead, he just has to settle for whatever he can get. If I got back with him now, I’d just be doing him a favor because Iâ€™m too good for him. Thatâ€™s not the kind of relationship I want. I want a man who can have any woman he wants, but chooses to be with me, not a guy who tries hard to be with me because no other attractive woman will want him.”

So, if youâ€™re going to move on with another woman to make your ex want you back, make sure that the new girl is equally, or even a bit more physically attractive than your ex.

When your ex sees that youâ€™ve been able to move on with an attractive woman, she will be forced to admit that you must be desirable, because other attractive women want to be with you.

As a result, she may begin to want you back.

However, that doesnâ€™t necessarily mean sheâ€™s going to chase after you and beg for another chance.

In most ex back cases, a woman will want her ex back, but won't do much or anything about it.

Instead, she will wait to see if her ex pursues her, re-attracts her and seduces her back into a relationship.

If he doesn't, she just tries to move on with new guys to make herself feel better.

Of course, some women do pursue an ex guy if he is moving on, but most don't.

So if you want to get your ex back, understand that as a man, it's your responsibility to interact with her, reactivate her feelings and guide her back into a relationship with you.

Another possible reaction your ex might have if she sees you moving on with another woman is â€œ|

4. She seeks to get revenge by moving on too

Your ex might see you with another woman and think, â€œSo, he has already moved on. Well, good for him. I can move on too. There are plenty of guys who are interested in me. I just need to give them an opening and I can have my pick. I can hook up with a guy tomorrow. I'm going to do it and I'm enjoy it.â€œ

She then opens herself up to hooking up, dating and getting into a relationship with another guy.

Then, if you happen to interact with her and possibly mention that you still have feelings for her, she might respond with something like, â€œYeah? Good for you. I thought we had a chance, but you moved on with someone else. So, Iâ€™m with another guy now and Iâ€™m happy. Itâ€™s too late. Itâ€™s over for us.â€œ

5. She blocks your number and blocks you from social media to avoid hearing about it or seeing it

Another negative response that might come from moving on with another woman to make your ex want you back, is that she cuts you out of her life completely.

She might block your number, unfriend you and block you on social media and possibly even stop hanging out at any of the places that she might run into you, which then makes it difficult for you to get through to her and re-attract her.

It will then take some effort on your part to try and persuade her to unblock you (e.g. by asking a mutual friend to convince her for you, showing up at her place of work to talk to her in person, emailing her), so you can then interact with her, re-attract her and begin getting her back.

Mistakes to Avoid When Trying to Get Her Back

The best way to make an ex want you back, is by actively making her feel respect and attraction for you as you talk to her on the phone or in person.

When you make her have some feelings for you again, her guard comes down and she becomes more open to reconnecting with her original feelings of love for you.

Yet, even though that is the best, easiest and cleanest way to get an ex woman back, a guy might end up making the ex back process harder than it needs to be by trying to play games with her.

So, if you want to get your ex back quickly, try to avoid making some or all of the following mistakesâ€¦!

1. Wasting weeks or months moving on with a new woman, when you could be getting back with your ex this week

Sometimes, a guy will spend a lot of time going out with friends, meeting new women, hooking up with them and then getting to know them.

He will do this as a ploy to make his ex jealous and want him back.

In some cases, it will work while in others it will simply waste time and cause her to move on.

For example: While he is busy getting to know a new woman, heâ€™s not interacting with his ex to re-attract her, seduce her and get her back.

In some cases, this causes an ex woman to feel jealous and try to get her ex man back, but in other cases, she just moves on.

So, if your ultimate goal is to get your ex back, then focus on re-attracting her and seducing her now.

You really can do that.

Even if she has been saying that she's over you and doesn't want anything to do with you, it really is possible to change how she feels in a matter of days.

You don't have to waste time looking for another woman to move on with and then risk losing your ex.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

2. Not fully preparing to re-attract her when you next interact with her

Sometimes, a guy will spend so much of his time thinking about wanting his ex girl back that he will forget to prepare for the most important thing of all: Re-attraction.

If he wants her back, but uses the same old approach to attraction that she fell out of love with, then she's not going to feel inspired to get back with him.

She feels as though if she gave him another chance, it would just end up in a break up once again, so she refuses and rejects him.

So, if you don't want that to happen to you, make sure that you're ready to re-attract your ex when you next interact with her.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦!

- Making her laugh, smile and feel good to be in your company again, or to be talking to you over the phone.
- Showing her your confidence, especially if she's pretending not to be interested in you anymore and is trying to make you feel nervous or insecure about yourself.
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you, rather than just talking to her like a neutral friend.
- Not giving her too much power over you (e.g. by being too nice, doing everything she tells you to do) and instead, letting her see that you are now even more masculine in the way you think, talk, behave and react when interacting with her.

This allows her to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and also begin to see herself being your girl again.

She realizes that you really are different now and she really does feel differently about you as well.

She becomes curious and intrigued about her new feelings for you and wants to explore them, rather than cutting you off and then potentially regretting it later.

She then becomes open to talking to you, hanging out with you and seeing where things go from there.

That's why you need to be prepared to re-attract her properly.

If you're not prepared, she won't feel inspired or motivated to get back with you and will simply keep her guard up.

Then, if she's like most women, she will focus on getting over you by moving on with a new guy as soon as she can.

The next mistake is

3. Remaining unaware of the real, subtle reasons why she broke up with you

Every woman has her reasons for breaking up with a guy and will usually avoid telling her guy exactly what they are.

She won't want to give him intricate clues and hints on how to change and re-attract her and will simply expect him to either understand and change, or leave her alone and let her move on.

So, if you don't change some of the subtle things about you that turned your ex off in the relationship, she's just going to reject when she realizes that you still don't get her.

For example: If a woman broke up with a guy because he was too emotionally dependent on her and he couldn't do anything in his life without her say-so and reassurance, she will be looking to see if he has changed since they broke up.

If he still thinks, acts and behaves in the same old ways (e.g. sees her as the more dominant one, sucks up to her, does whatever she wants, follows her lead during a conversation), she won't feel enough desire to get back with him.

The next mistake is

4. Taking too long to make a move and she then moves on and gets into a committed relationship

Even if moving on with another woman does make your ex want you back, chances are high that sheâ€™s not going to make it obvious to you.

Instead, will likely just wait for you to make a move to get her back.

Yet, sheâ€™s not going to wait forever, so if she realizes that youâ€™re not doing anything to get her back, she will focus on moving on with a new guy herself.

So, what should you do instead?

Get her back now or this week, rather than thinking that you need to move on with a new woman (maybe for months) before she will give you another chance.

The more you reawaken your ex feelings for you now as you talk to her on the phone and in person, the more she will want you back now, rather than later or never.

So, donâ€™t waste time moving on with a new woman if you don't need to do that to get your particular ex back.

In almost all cases, a guy can get his ex woman back without ever having to date another woman.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

4 Things to Talk About With Your Ex Girlfriend on the Phone or in Person

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 things that you can talk about with your ex girlfriend on the phone or in person to get her smiling, laughing and feeling good to be talking to you again:

1. The way you reacted when she broke up with you

When a woman breaks up with a guy who loves her and wants to be with her, he usually won't take the news very well.

As a result, he might then react in a way that he may come to regret later on.

For example: Some of the regrettable ways that a guy might respond to being broken up with are:

- He starts begging and pleading with her to change her mind, which makes him come across as emotionally weak and turns her off even more.
- He makes promises to change and become the man she wants him to be if she will just give him another chance. In most cases, she doesn't believe he can change, so she doesn't give him another chance.
- He asks her to tell him what he needs to do to make her happy in the relationship with him. This makes her feel stressed and turned off because he needs her to help or teach him to become a better, more attractive man for her.
- He tries to change her mind by bombarding her with gifts, flowers or even helping her out financially. Yet, a woman doesn't fall in love with a guy because of what he can buy for her, but rather for how he makes her feel when she's with him.
- He sends her a long letter, e-mail or series of text messages telling her how much he still loves her. Yet, she doesn't care about his feelings anymore and is only focused on how she feels and what she wants.
- He gets angry with her and possibly even accuses her of cheating on him. This just convinces her even more that she's made the right decision.
- He cuts off all contact with her in the hope that she will miss him and come running back. Yet, that approach only works if a woman still has feelings for her ex guy. If she doesn't, she will simply use the time apart to fully get over him and move on.

So, if you reacted in a way that you're not proud of when your ex girlfriend broke up the relationship, you can use it as a conversation topic when you talk with her on the phone or in person.

How?

Make light of it.

Laugh at yourself and how you reacted.

For example: You can say, in a joking way, something along the lines of, â€œWow, I really made a fool of myself when we broke up, didn't I? I don't know what came over me! That was such a silly reaction for me to haveâ€ and have a laugh with her about it.

Essentially, by laughing at yourself, it shows her that you're aware that your reaction was unattractive to her.

It also shows her that you've learned from the experience and have already taken steps to become a better, more emotionally strong and mature man.

As a result, she begins to drop her guard a little and allows herself to relax, smile, laugh and feel good to be around you again.

She then becomes open to forgiving your mistakes and giving you another chance.

Another thing you can talk about with your ex girlfriend on the phone or in person is

2. How much she has missed you since the break up

For example: After getting past the initial part of the conversation (e.g. How are you? What have you been up to?), you can say something along the lines of, Okay, so be honest now, how much did you miss me?

If she responds with something like, I didn't miss you, or Who says I missed you? Don't flatter yourself. I have been fine without you, just laugh and say in a light-hearted, playful manner, Yeah, right, I know you've been missing me and have a laugh with her about the fact that she has been missing you, but doesn't want to admit it.

By making light of it, she is more likely to drop her guard and she may then say something like, Okay, maybe I missed you a little bit.

If she's too embarrassed to admit it, get her to admit to a percentage by saying, Okay, out of 100%, what percentage did you miss me? 45%, 55%, 65%?

She might then joke with you and say, Fine! I missed you 1%, and you can laugh with her about that.

By interacting with her in this way, you're not only making it possible for her to acknowledge to herself that she did actually miss you (even if just a little bit), but you're also sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you by using humor to bring down her guard.

You're also showing her that you're still confident and sure of yourself around her, even though you and her have broken up.

Having confidence in yourself like that is going to be attractive to her.

She will see for herself that you are an emotionally strong man that can remain confident under pressure and not doubt yourself.

As a result, her guard will naturally come down and she will begin to open back up to you, even if just a little bit initially.

When she begins to open back up to you, she then starts to look at you and think about you differently.

She then becomes open to interacting with you more and more to see where things go from there.

Another thing you can talk about with your ex girlfriend on the phone or in person is

3. Life in general

Talking about what you've been up to since the break up is obviously a good thing to talk about with your ex girlfriend on the phone or in person.

However, don't make it a boring chat about that (e.g. what projects you're working on at work, the intricate details of your latest business deal, how you've been studying for exams).

You can mention those things to her, but make sure you're being easy-going, playful and adding in some humor when you can.

For example: You might say something along the lines of, "I've been studying hard for my upcoming exams."

She might then respond with something like, "Oh, okay...and how has it been going?"

You can then say in a joking way, "I'm not sure. I've had so much coffee to keep me awake that I don't really remember anything since last week. I'm hoping it will all come back to me when I get to my exam. If not, I can always fail my exams and become a beach bum instead. I'll go around begging people for money at the beach, carrying a sign that says, 'I failed my exams' and have a laugh with her about that."

Then you can add something like, "Talking of the beach, did I tell you that I've taken up surfing? It's pretty cool. It wasn't easy in the beginning, but I've got the hang of it now. It's actually quite a rush when you stand up and are able to surf the wave for a while."

Alternatively, you might say something like, "Nah, just kidding. I think I'll do fine with the exam. I've got it sorted. How about you? What's been happening?"

Alternatively, if you are working in an office, you can say something like, "I've been working hard lately. Well, that's what I make it look like to my boss anyway" and have a laugh with her about that.

As a result of using an easy-going approach to the conversation, your ex will feel more comfortable to drop her guard a little and be more easy-going and open with you.

When she does that, she will feel a connection with you and will start to think of you in a more positive light.

The next thing you can talk about with your ex girlfriend on the phone or in person is

4. Apart from all the things she didn't like about you, what are a few of the things that she did like?

Rather than bring up all the negative things about you and your relationship, which will just highlight to her why she broke up with you in the first place and put her on her guard, try to talk about the good things instead.

For example: You might say something along the lines of, "Okay, so look, I know that I stuffed up and that you and I are now broken up for good, but I'm sure that there has to be something about me you really liked. So, come on, tell me what it was."

She may then be a bit defensive and say something like, "No, there was nothing," or, "I don't to talk about that" or, "That doesn't matter now" to test whether or not you'll doubt yourself and give up.

So, if she says something like, "Nothing really" to put you off, you can laugh and say, "That's impossible! There has to be something! How about my smile? Surely you liked my smile. If not that, how about the hugs I used to give you? You liked them, right?" and laugh with her about it.

She will likely admit to those things, but if she doesn't and is closed up about it, you can say, "Ahh, I get it that you don't want to admit those things to me. Never mind, I know that you liked many things about me—especially the way I used to kiss you” and have a laugh with her about that.

Alternatively, she might open up and tell you a few things that she liked about you (e.g. the way you always treated her well, your drive and determination, that you're a good guy).

By getting her to talk about your good points, you plant seeds of doubt in her mind about the break up.

She has to begin to think to herself that you're not all bad and that there were something things about you that she really did like.

As a result, she may then begin to think, “Maybe we can work things out between us after all. He is a great guy in so many ways and he seems to have changed and improved since the break up.

He's so much more confident and self-assured than before. Maybe it's not over between us.

Maybe there's still a chance for us. Maybe I should open back up to him and see how it goes.”

You can then fully re-attract her, seduce her and get her back into a relationship with you.

Where Guys Often Go Wrong When Talking With an Ex Girlfriend On the Phone or in Person

What you say to your ex from now on, will either re-attract her and make her open up to getting back together again, or it will turn her off and make her feel glad about her decision to end the relationship.

So, if you don't want her to think that she made the right decision by breaking up with you, try to avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Feeling nervous and unsure of yourself as you talk to her

Even though she broke up with you and doesn't seem to want you back, you must believe in yourself and know that you can re-attract her.

If you doubt yourself, you will fill your brain with self-doubting thoughts that will cause you to think, feel, talk, behave and act in a nervous way when interacting with her, which will turn her off.

For example: A guy might keep saying to himself, “What if I try to talk to her and she says that she never wants to speak to me again?” or, “What if she brings up the negative things that happened between us? What can I say that won't make her think of me in an even more negative light than she already does?” or, “What if she doesn't want to talk to me and gets angry at me for trying to talk to her?” or, “What if I'm just not good enough for her anymore? What if she says that she regrets ever being with me?”

The more he thinks like that, the more nervous and self-doubting he feels when talking to his ex girlfriend.

His self-doubt and insecurity then turns her off and makes her feel as though she made the right decision to end the relationship.

So, do yourself a favor and start imagining every conversation that you will have with your ex girlfriend going well.

Imagine her smiling, laughing and feeling good to be talking to you because you are being confident and add in some humor to lighten the mood.

Imagine that no matter what she says or does to try and throw you off and make you feel insecure, you are able to remain calm and believe in yourself.

When your ex notices this, she will begin to see that you are a much more emotionally attractive man now (e.g. you're much more confident, self-assured, composed under pressure).

As a result, she will naturally start to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Then, the idea of giving you another chance will start to feel like something she wants to do, because you are now the kind of man that she always wanted you to be.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

2. Assuming that she would get angry if you flirted with her like a boyfriend or lover would Sometimes a guy makes the mistake of thinking that itâ€™s not his place to flirt with his ex girlfriend anymore.

He may think, â€œIf I step out of line like that (i.e. flirt with her), she will get angry at me and say that I shouldn't be talking to her in that way. I'll then lose my chance with her completely. At this point, she probably wants me to show her that I can be a nice, neutral friend who isn't expecting anything sexual to happen. If I can do that, she will drop her guard with me and even consider thinking of me as a boyfriend or lover again.â€

Yet, the opposite is actually true.

If a guy is not actively making his ex feel sexually attracted to him as he talks to her, sheâ€™s not going to feel much, or any motivation to want to give him another chance at being in a sexual, romantic relationship with her.

She might still keep him around as her nice, platonic friend so she can feel good about herself, but if she has disconnected from her romantic and sexual feelings for him, she might not even want that.

Instead, she might cut him out of her life completely and focus on finding herself a new man and moving on with him.

So, if you truly want your ex girlfriend back, donâ€™t be afraid to show her that you still find her attractive and want her back when you talk to her (i.e. by flirting with her to create sexual tension between you).

When you create sexual tension, she then naturally has the desire to want to release that tension with hugging, kissing and sex and it then becomes a lot easier for you to get her back.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Stressing her out by trying to work things out, rather than making her feel attracted first

Sometimes, a guy will try to turn every conversation that he has with his ex girlfriend (either on the phone or in person), into a long discussion about the relationship and what he did wrong.

Essentially, heâ€™s hoping that by talking about the problems, his ex will see that he isnâ€™t trying to hide from his mistakes and is committed to fixing things with her.

She will then be impressed and open herself to giving him another chance.

Yet, hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

If you keep trying to work things out with your ex girlfriend by bringing up all your mistakes, it will only make her remember all the negative emotions she experienced at the time (e.g. anger, disappointment, annoyance).

So, it will then have the opposite effect to the one youâ€¦re hoping for.

Rather than opening up to you because youâ€¦re trying to make things work, she will close up even more and convince herself that she made the right decision to break up with you.

It's okay to talk about the relationship problems briefly if she brings it up, but try to keep it short, easy-going and relaxed.

Try to also add in some humor at times to take away the seriousness of what you're talking about, while also still being respectful and sincere.

If you only focus on being respectful and sincere, it will feel too serious and she may end up making the problems out to be worse and more traumatizing than they actually were.

So, try to avoid discussing the problems and if they do come up, keep it light, easy-going and add in some humor to lighten the mood (e.g. "Yeah, I really was a horrible boyfriend. I could probably win a prize for it I think. What you do think? Worst in the World award. Do you think I could win that?") and have a laugh with her about that.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

4. Appearing to have lost confidence since the break up

Naturally, being dumped by the woman he loves can cause a man to lose confidence in his attractiveness to his ex girlfriend and other women.

Yet, hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

If a guy talks to his ex girlfriend on the phone or in person and she picks up that he no longer believes in himself and in his value to her, rather than feel sorry for him and want to give him another chance, she will feel even more turned off. Why?

A woman likes the idea of being with a man who is confident, emotionally strong and believes that he is more than good enough for her, while also being loving and respectful toward her.

So, when a guy appears to have lost confidence since the break up, it only gives her even more reasons to not want to give him another chance.

She begins to think, *â€¦If I give him another chance, I'll have to help him feel confident again. No thanks! I need a man who is already confident without my help, so I can fully relax into being his girl. I don't want a guy who needs me to lift him up and help him feel okay about his value and attractiveness to me. It just won't work.*â€¦

She then closes up even more and it becomes more difficult for him to get her back.

So, make sure that when you talk to your ex girlfriend on the phone and in person, you absolutely believe that you are good enough for her.

Then, re-attract her, seduce her and get her back into a relationship with you.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

5. Giving her too much power during the conversation

A woman will sometimes try to assert her power over a guy during a conversation to see how confident and masculine he really is.

For example: When talking to her ex she might say something like, “Listen, I only have 5 minutes to spare for you. I’m really busy and I don’t have time to waste on you. What do you want?”

A guy who gives a woman too much power during a conversation and thus turns her off, might say something like, “I know you’re busy and I’m grateful that you’re giving me even 5 minutes of your time.”

He hopes that she will think, “Aww, he’s so sweet. He’s doing everything that I ask, just to please me. Maybe I shouldn’t be so hard on him. He deserves another chance for following my orders. He’s a good boy.”

Yet, that’s not what women think.

Instead, when a guy hands his power to a woman during conversation, she loses even more respect for him as a man and thinks something like, “What a wimp. He’s a fully grown man, but he’s behaving like a child. It’s like I’m his mother or something. He needs to grow a pair of balls and be a man.”

Here’s the thing!

If your ex girlfriend can’t respect you as her man, she won’t be able to feel sexually attracted to you and without those two things in place, she’s not going to be interested in getting back together.

So, don’t let your ex girlfriend control you when you talk with her on the phone or in person.

Be the good man that you are, but don’t let her walk all over you during a conversation.

If she can see that you aren’t intimidated by her approach and also have the ability to continue being a good man at the same time, she will respect you and begin to drop her guard.

You can then begin to fully re-attract her, seduce her and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Rebound vs. Grass is Greener

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The difference between a rebound and a woman leaving for 'the grass is greener on the other side' reasons, is that one happens after the break up and the other happens before.

The relationship she gets into after the break up is a rebound.

Suffering from the grass is greener syndrome happens during the relationship, when she's falling out of love.

So, how can you get a woman back from a rebound vs. a grass is greener break up?

Get Her Back From a Rebound

[image: Get her back from a rebound]

1. Interrupt the process of her moving on with him by making her have feelings for you again

You can do this by confidently interacting with her every chance you get (e.g. over the phone and preferably in person) and making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

Show her by the way you talk, behave and respond to what she says and does that you're a new and improved man now.

For example:

- You're so much more confident in yourself and in your value to her now, so you don't get jealous or upset when she talks about her new man. If she says something like, "I'm happy now. He's so much better than you," to make you feel insecure, you simply laugh and show her that you're not bothered by her comments.
- You're so much more emotionally independent now. Even though you still care for her and want her back, you're not sitting around feeling sad or stuck in a rut. You're living a happy, enjoyable, fun life without her.

When interacting with your ex, make sure that you don't pretend as though you're only interested in being her nice, platonic friend now that she has a new man.

No.

You ARE her man.

So, flirt with her to create some sexual tension between you and her.

Let it build up over a couple of interactions and she will begin thinking, "Why do I miss my ex all of a sudden? I want to be hugging and kissing him, not this new guy. I actually look forward to the conversations I have with my ex, even though I know it's wrong to feel this way because I'm with another guy now. I feel so confused. Should I just hook up with my ex again and see what happens? Maybe that's the only way I'll know who I should choose."

2. Confidently move forward to a hug, kiss and then sex if possible

As long as you have been building up sexual tension between you and your ex when talking to her on the phone, when you meet her face-to-face, chances are high that she will be open to at least giving you a hug to say hi, or giving you a goodbye hug when you part ways.

If you she gives you a goodbye hug, go ahead and confidently take her in your arms and give her a warm hug.

If she doesn't, then make sure that you initiate it by saying, "Anyway, good catching up with you. Come here. Bring it in for a goodbye hug" and then move towards her with your arms open.

When hugging her, if she seems open to a kiss (e.g. she remains in your arms longer than necessary, she snuggles into your neck, she looks up at you and smiles and then licks her lips), just lean in and give her a kiss.

Then, head to her place or yours to 'hang out' or 'have a coffee' and then have sex.

3. She then has to decide between you and him

After you've had sex with her again, or at least kissed her, she will then have to make a decision between you and him.

However, don't push her to make a choice if she doesn't make one immediately.

She might get back with you right away, but if she doesn't, just let her walk away feeling confused and missing you.

She will then text you, call you and want to see you again.

You can then catch up with her again, hook up and get the relationship back together.

Get Her Back When She Left You Due to Thinking That the Grass Was Greener on the Other Side

[image: Get her back after a grass is greener break up]

1. Make her feel attracted to the new and improved you

The grass may seem like it's greener on the other side (i.e. other women might seem more attractive to you, or she might feel attracted to certain types of guys), but it doesn't mean that if you or leave you are going to be happy with someone else.

Sometimes, leaving for a 'grass is greener' reason makes a woman realize how special the connection with her ex really was.

Yet, sometimes she doesn't.

Sometimes, she is happy about breaking up and wants to keep moving on without her ex.

If that applies to your situation, then you need to interact with her on a phone call or in person and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you.

You can create a bit of a spark via text, but it's not the best approach to use when an ex woman is cold and uninterested in getting back together.

So, you have to be courageous enough to call, or at least initially text to make her respond and be open and then call.

When talking to your ex on the phone or in person, some of the ways you can re-spark her feelings are by:

- Using humor to make her feel relaxed, happy and attracted to you again.
- Maintaining your confidence around her when she tries to make you feel insecure by being cold, bitchy, mean or critical.
- Showing her by the way you now talk, think, behave, interact with her and respond to what she says and does, that you're no longer the man she fell out of love with. You're so much more confident and self-assured now.
- Making her feel desirable and sexy in your presence, rather than making her feel like just a friend.
- Being more emotionally dominant than her, rather than letting her overpower you with her forceful personality.

When you interact with your ex in some of those ways, she begins to feel drawn to the new and improved you.

She is then suddenly faced with the kind of man she can look up to, respect and feel attracted to and the grass on the other side (i.e. her new man) no longer seems that green (i.e. attractive) to her anymore.

From thereâ€¦

2. Let her see that you've gone beyond the level that you were at when she dumped you

You are now the kind of man she always wanted you to be (e.g. more confident and emotionally strong, more masculine in a way that makes her feel feminine in comparison to you, more focused and driven in your life, more centered and sure of yourself).

In the meantime, if her new guy is making common relationship mistakes that are turning her off (e.g. he's too much of a bad boy and is irresponsible and immature, there's too much of a gap between her relationship intelligence and his, he is selfish, he is too giving and sucks up to her all the time, he gives her too much power), she is going to begin feeling drawn back to you.

She will realize that she wants to be with you way more than she wants to be with him.

You can then build on her feelings and get her back.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Back From a Rebound or Grass is Greener Relationship

If you want her back, you need to make sure that whatever you say and do from this moment onwards sparks feelings of respect, attraction and love inside of her and makes her want you back.

To ensure that happens, avoid making the following mistakes that other guys make when in a situation like yours:

1. Thinking that she is in control of the ex back process

Sometimes a guy assumes that because his ex is in another relationship, getting her back is entirely up to her (i.e. she is the only one who can decide which man she wants to be with and he has no control over that whatsoever).

Yet, here's what he doesn't understand!

A man has a lot of control over the ex back process when he focuses on making his ex woman have sexual and romantic feelings for him again.

When a woman feels drawn to her ex in a way that feels good to her, she naturally begins to want him back for her own reasons (e.g. she begins to notice the flaws in her new guy vs. her ex, she fears letting her ex go and then regretting it later on, she feels curious about her new feelings for her ex and wants to explore them).

As a result, a man can then get his ex woman back because she is open to seeing where things go.

On the other hand, if a guy hangs around pretending to be her friend or cuts off contact and waits for her to make up her mind, he will have pretty much no power over the ex back process.

So, don't make the mistake of thinking it's all up to your ex whether you get back together or not.

If you want her back, you have to be ballsy enough to take the lead and make it happen.

Another mistake that other guys make when in a situation like yours, is!

2. Overanalyzing her state of mind to the point where he feels overwhelmed and totally unsure about how to get her back

Making a big deal about your ex's every mood, gesture or comment is the fastest way to make you feel nervous and unsure of yourself.

For example: A woman might say something like, "I'm so confused right now. You keep calling me and I don't know how to deal with that because I'm with someone else now."

A guy might then wonder, "What does she mean by that? Is she confused because she has feelings for me, or because she doesn't know how to tell me to leave her alone? Does she want me to stop calling her because she doesn't want to upset her new guy, or does she mean that she's attracted to me and doesn't know how to tell her new guy?"

He then becomes uncertain about what to, so he remains stuck and doesn't do anything else to get her back.

Here's the thing!

Feeling unsure of yourself when interacting with your ex is the fastest way to turn her off even future.

Remember: Women are instinctively attracted to the qualities in a man that best display his emotional strength (e.g. confidence, assertiveness, decisiveness, determination, certainty, courage, calmness under pressure), and are turned off by qualities that display emotional weakness (e.g. insecurity, self-doubt, an inability to make decisions and take action).

So, you have to remind yourself not to take the interactions with your ex so seriously from now on.

Instead, let the interactions between you and her be about having fun and enjoying each other (e.g. laughing, smiling, enjoying each other's company), rather than trying to get her back into a relationship by discussing how she feels, asking her for a chance or telling her that you've changed. The more that you can relax and maintain your confidence when interacting with your ex, the more drawn to you she will feel.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

3. Waiting too long to make a move and get her back

When a woman is in a new relationship (regardless of whether itâ€™s a rebound or grass is greener scenario), her ex might worry about being rejected and end up hesitating to make any real moves to get her back.

He may think, â€œSheâ€™s with someone else now, so I probably donâ€™t stand a chance with her. Maybe if I wait long enough, she will break up with him and then I can make my move. Alternatively, he might stuff up and she will then realize that what she had with me was special and she will then come back by herself after a few months.â€

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

If your ex is happy with her new guy and you don't do anything to re-attract her, seduce her and get her back with you, she might end up being with him for 6 months, a year or even longer.

Likewise, if her rebound or grass is greener relationship doesnâ€™t work out, it doesn't mean that she will want to get back with you at that point if you haven't done anything to re-attract her, or are not prepare to re-attract her when she becomes single again.

This is why, if you want your ex back for real, you shouldnâ€™t sit around waiting for 'the perfect moment' to try and get her back.

The perfect moment is right now.

If you donâ€™t take your chance now, you may end up losing her and losing a lot more confidence in yourself in the process.

On the other hand, if you re-attract her and get her back in the next few days or in the next couple of weeks, your confidence will go through the roof and you can make her feel so attracted and in love with you that she will ditch the new guy and stick with you.

Another mistake that guys often make when in a situation like your isâ€¦

4. Feeling unworthy of her because of how and why she broke up with him

It sucks to be broken up and it sucks even more if a woman dumped you for another guy, or hooked up with someone else right away.

However, if you allow the pain of the break up to destroy your confidence and make you feel unworthy of her or other quality women, you will actually be delaying your chances of getting her back or successfully moving on.

Why?

Feeling unworthy only makes you seem less attractive to your ex and to other women.

Why?

A woman likes the idea of being with a confident, emotionally strong man who believes in his value to her no matter what she says or does to make him doubt it.

So, when a guy is being insecure, self-doubting and doesn't believe he is good enough for his ex (or other quality women), she simply feels turned off by him even further.

She can see that he has given up on himself and is lost and upset without her.

She feels right about her decision to have left him and moved on with someone else (i.e. the grass really does look greener for her on the other side).

So, if you want your ex back, you must absolutely believe that you are good enough for her and then take action to re-attract her and get her back.

If you don't and she is happy with her new guy, she will probably continue on with him and see him as being a better option than you, even though he isn't.

Another mistake that guys make when facing a rebound or GIGS (Grass is Greener Syndrome) situation is that

5. Waiting for clear signals from her before he decides to start the ex back process

It would be nice if a woman made her feelings very obvious to her ex (e.g. "Hey, I miss you and want you back. I love you. Please get me back now"), but it almost never happens like that.

In most cases, rather than make her feelings clear, a woman assumes that what they had is over and her ex won't know how to get her back.

So, she then pours all her energy into making her new relationship work, or to meeting new guys and falling in love.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back from a rebound or GIGS situation, don't expect her to give you a crystal clear sign that she's open to you getting her back, because she probably won't (even if she is interested).

What should you do instead?

Be emotionally courageous enough to take the lead in the ex back process and get her back.

That's how a real man does it.

You can do it.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Threatened My Girlfriend and She Left Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 different types of threats and why it can cause a woman to leave a guy:

1. Threatening to break up with her if she doesn't change

Sometimes a guy will threaten to break up with a woman if she doesn't stop nagging him and asking him to change, whereas other times a guy will threaten her with a break up to hopefully get her to change, improve and become a better girlfriend for him.

For example: If his girlfriend keeps pestering him to change and improve, he might say, "Stop harassing me all the time! This is who I am and I'm not going to change. If you don't like it, then leave. Besides, if anyone needs to change, it's you! You've become a constant nag and you've been driving me crazy lately. I'm fed up with you throwing tantrums all the time and telling me that you're not happy. You need to change your attitude towards me fast, or I'm going to break up with you!"

He hopes that she will then respect him, change and stop nagging him to change things about himself that are annoying her or turning her off.

Yet, in most cases, a woman will say something like, "I can't believe you're actually threatening to break up with me if I don't change, when you're the one causing all the problems in our relationship! Well, here's a big surprise for you – I'm dumping you! It's over! Goodbye!" and oh, don't even try to get me back because I don't want you. You can go and get stuffed. It's over. Goodbye and don't ever contact me again.

In a case like that, a guy needs to maintain his cool and not panic that she is now threatening to break up with him and is actually going through with leaving him.

He then needs to calmly, confidently and honestly admit that he was making mistakes in the relationship and it wasn't all her fault.

She might then calm down and stop going through with leaving him, but if she doesn't, he needs to remain calm and let her cool down.

When she cools down, she will then realize that he admitted his mistakes, didn't beg and plead for another chance and was completely reasonable about it.

As a result, she will either text him, call him or be open to replying to his texts or answering calls from him, so they can meet up, work things out and get back together.

Another reason why a guy might threaten his girlfriend is when she has been behaving badly or treating him unfairly in the relationship (e.g. she has a tendency to lie, she's unreliable, she doesn't help around the house, she's always in a bad mood and takes it out on him, she isn't affectionate and expect him to initiate everything).

So, a guy may then try to shock her into changing by saying, "If you don't stop lying to me/letting me down when I need you/help out more with things around the house/stop being a pain in the butt, then I'm going to break up with you."

If she loves him, wants to be with him and knows that she is in the wrong, she will likely apologize and want to change.

Yet, if she hasn't been happy in the relationship for a while, she might decide that she doesn't care enough about him to put in the effort to change.

Alternatively, she might simply want to get revenge on him for threatening her with a break up, so she goes ahead and breaks up with him instead.

Another threat a guy might make to his girlfriend that causes her to leave him is

2. Threatening to hurt her physically if she doesn't do what he wants

You probably already know that becoming violent and threatening to hurt a woman physically isn't the answer in a relationship, right?

It's pretty obvious.

Yet, when a guy uses physical threats to make a woman do what he wants, most self-respecting, modern women will react by walking away from the relationship.

Of course, there are some women who will stay in an abusive relationship for months or even years, but most modern women won't.

It's just not something that she feels like she has to do.

However, that said, if you did make the mistake of threatening her physically, you can recover from it and get her to forgive you.

How?

Start by telling her that you understand what you did was wrong and it was stupid and immature.

Then, show her (via your actions, behavior and the way you interact with her) that she will actually be losing out if she doesn't give you another chance.

For example: One of the ways to show her that is by maintaining control of your emotions around her no matter what she says or does to make you feel angry or frustrated (e.g. she accuses you of being a bully, screams, shouts and even hits you, acts like she's too afraid to be around you by herself, says that she will get a restraining order out on you if you don't leave her alone, says that she now fears for her life, calls you an idiot or some other name to hopefully annoy you and get you to show her that you are still angry and can't control yourself).

However, when she sees that no matter what she does to provoke you and make you angry, you are able to maintain your cool and even laugh and joke around with her, she will slowly begin to trust and respect you again.

When that happens, she will also start to allow herself feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

She will see that you aren't so bad after all and that your threatening to hurt her physically was just a silly mistake and not who you are deep down as a man.

Another threat a guy might make to his ex that causes her to leave him is

3. Threatening to hurt himself, or even kill himself if she doesn't stay with him

Sometimes, when a woman is saying things like, "I'm sorry, but this relationship isn't working out anymore. I think we need to admit defeat and break up. I don't want to be with you anymore" a guy might feel at such a loss of how to stop her from leaving him, that in desperation, he will threaten to hurt or kill himself, "No, you can't leave me. If you leave me I will kill myself. I promise you. It will then be on your head and you can live with the guilt for the rest of your life, knowing that you could have prevented it and you didn't. Is that what you want? Do you want me to kill myself?

He hopes that if he threatens to kill himself, she will change her mind and give him another chance to avoid having to live with the guilt of his death for the rest of her life.

Yet, it just doesn't work that way.

A woman doesn't want to be manipulated into staying in a relationship with a guy, simply because he can't deal with the idea of being dumped by her.

So, rather than think, Oh no! I have to stay with him, or he will hurt himself she will think something like, How dare he try to force me to stay with him by threatening to kill himself! That is so childish and immature. In fact, his behavior has just sealed the deal for me and shown me that I'm better off without him. He's definitely not the kind of guy I want to be with for life. I refuse to be blackmailed into staying with him. He can go and hurt or kill himself all he wants. I'm not staying with him that's for sure.

She then turns that tables on him and says, Well, in that case, go ahead and kill yourself. I just don't care! It's over between us. Good luck! Enjoy the afterlife! Bye!

Sounds pretty cold and heartless, right?

Well, it depends on how you look at it.

Most women know that when a guy says that he will hurt or kill himself, he's just saying that as a last ditch effort to get her to stay.

Additionally, for those women who know that the man will probably hurt or kill himself, it's still not enough of a reason for her to stay with him.

In fact, it just becomes another reason to leave him (i.e. because he's mentally and emotionally unstable and may end up hurting himself and her).

So, if you threatened to hurt or kill yourself as a way of preventing your ex from breaking up with you, to regain her respect and make her open up to giving you another chance, you need to interact with her (preferably over the phone or in person) and then:

- Calmly and confidently apologize to her for reacting that way.
- Laugh at yourself with her and let her see that you were being silly and you can now look at your reaction as laughable and desperate.
- Show her via your actions, behavior, conversation style and the way you respond to what she says and does that you're a more emotionally mature man now.

When she can see that you truly are at a different level now than you were before, she will automatically begin to feel some respect and attraction for you again.

You can then build on those feelings and get her to the point where she opens herself up to the idea of getting back with you again.

Another threat a guy might make to his girlfriend that causes her to leave is

4. Threatening to never speak to her again

Sometimes in the middle of a big argument, a woman might say, I'm sick of this! I want to *break up.*â□□

In response, a guy might then say, *â□□ Yeah? If you break up with me, I will never speak to you again. So, it's up to you. If that's what you want, then fine – leave me,*â□□ only to be shocked when she retaliates by saying, *â□□ Fine! We'll never speak again. Goodbye!*â□□ and then breaks up with him.

In most cases, neither of them really wanted to break up, but the argument just escalated out of control.

Then, she doesnâ□□t want to reach out to him first and give him the satisfaction of winning (i.e. she breaks her words and speaks to him).

Likewise, he doesnâ□□t want to make the first move either because he feels silly for threatening not to talk to her again and wants to try to stick to his word and wait for her to contact him first.

As a result, they both remain stuck ignoring each other out of stubbornness and not getting back together into a more mature relationship.

Instead, he or she ends up finding someone new and moving on, even though they could have gotten back together.

So, if you threatened not to speak to your girlfriend ever again if she broke up with you, don't let the silence continue because you're worried about looking weak.

Just call her on the phone, be confident and use some humor to diffuse the tension between you and her.

Then, apologize briefly for your silly reaction and proceed to reawaken her feelings for you by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

Then meet up with her, fully reactivate her feelings for you and get to a hug, kiss and sex.

Where Guys Go Wrong After Threatening a Woman When in a Relationship

Just because you threatened your girlfriend, it doesnâ□□t mean that you donâ□□t have any chance of getting her back.

You can get her back.

However, if you make the classic mistakes that other guys make when in a situation like yours, you will make the process of getting her back more difficult than it needs to be.

For example:

1. Apologizing over and over again

Sometimes a guy feels so shocked by his angry behavior and the fact that he threatened his girlfriend that he wants to apologize for it, over and over again.

Yet, even though he is sincere about his regret for threatening her, apologizing over and over is not the thing that will convince her to give him another chance.

Why?

Apologizing over and over again doesnâ□□t actually get to the core of the problem.

Instead, heâ€™s just saying how sorry he is, but heâ€™s still stuck at the same level that he was at when she broke up with him.

So, if your girlfriend canâ€™t see any obvious changes in you (e.g. you still feel annoyed when she talks or behaves in a certain way), your apology to her will seem like empty words.

As a result, she will keep pushing you away because deep down, she will fear you'd just end up doing the same thing again (maybe even worse the next time) if she gave you another chance.

So, donâ€™t bother apologizing to her again and again.

Instead, give her one brief, sincere apology in a calm, confident and sincere manner and then focus in showing her (via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to her from now on) that youâ€™re a new and improved man now.

Another mistake to avoid making is toâ€™

2. Trying to get her to agree to a relationship before he has reactivated her feelings

Right now, your ex has likely disconnected from her positive feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and might be feeling negative emotions such as disgust, mistrust and anger.

If you try to get her to agree to give the relationship another chance right now, she's probably going to reject you.

So, from now on, just use every interaction that you have with her (e.g. via text, social media, over the phone and in person) to make her laugh, smile and feel at ease around you.

Once she can feel relaxed around you in person or when talking to you on the phone, her defenses will naturally start to come down.

You can then build on her feelings and make her open back up to the idea of seeing where things go from there.

Another mistake that other guys often make when in a situation like your isâ€™

3. Promising that things will be different if she just gives him one more chance

Youâ€™ve probably heard the expression, â€™Actions speak louder than words,â€™ right?

In a case where a guy has threatened his girlfriend, no amount of promises are going to convince her to give him another chance.

Promising is seen as mere words, whereas showing her that he is different by way of his change in behavior, attitude and vibe are actions that she can believe in.

So, after being threatened by her boyfriend, a woman is going to be looking at how he acts and behaves around her, especially when sheâ€™s being bitchy and telling him that she hates him and never wants to see him again.

For example:

Will he remain calm, confident and use her bitchiness as an opportunity to create some positive feelings such as respect and attraction inside of her, or will he â€™lose itâ€™ again and turn her off even more?

Does he now have the ability to make her smile, laugh and feel good when talking to him, even when she is testing him by being difficult?

Actions like that have much more power than mere promises to change, if she gives him another chance.

So, if you want to convince your girlfriend to give you another chance, don't waste time and energy trying to do it by promising her that things will be different this time.

Show her that things will be different by letting her experience the new and improved you for herself.

When she can sense the changes in you, her perspective of you will change and following that, her feelings will change.

She will open back up you, without you having to pressure her into it.

Another mistake that guys make when in a situation like yours isâ

4. Giving her too much space and then losing her

When a guy threatens his girlfriend and causes her to leave him, chances are he will be experiencing a lot of guilt and remorse about it.

He may then decide that his best approach is to give her a lot of space to allow things to calm down between them.

For example: He will avoid her for weeks or even months, in the hope that when he finally gets in touch with her again, she will have forgotten (or at least forgiven) that he threatened her.

Yet, in most cases, a woman simply won't sit around waiting for an ex she doesn't have feelings for anymore.

Instead, she will usually feel relieved that he's out of her life and will just focus on moving on.

Then, when he finally contacts her, she will say something along the lines of, âWhy are you calling me? Did you think I was going to sit around waiting for you? Well, you were wrong. I've moved on and I'm with a man who would never threaten me in the way you did. I'm happy now, so please leave me alone.â

Don't let that happen to you.

In almost all ex back cases, a week of space is more than enough time to allow for things to calm down between a man and a woman.

After giving her that little bit of space, you then need to contact her (preferably by calling her on the phone) and actively spark some of her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

Once you do that and you can see that her guard is down, get her to agree to a meet up with you in person.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Threatened My Ex Girlfriend That I Would Commit Suicide if She Didn't Get Back With Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 things that you can say and do to recover from that mistake:

1. Laugh it off

If you continue making a big deal about how you messed up by threatening to kill yourself if she didn't get back with you, then she will likely continue to see it as a big deal as well.

She will sense your feelings of guilt and continue to create drama about it for much longer than she needs to.

So, just laugh it off as something silly that you said and laugh at how silly you reacted.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should pretend that it didn't happen at all.

You said it and it was a silly thing to say, but that's all.

So, laugh at yourself with her and let her know that you see how foolish it was of you to threaten to commit suicide if she didn't get back with you.

For example: You might laugh and then say something along the lines of, "Hey, you know, looking back at what I said to you, I have to laugh at myself. It was such a silly, desperate attempt from me to make her feel sorry for me and give me another chance. I'm embarrassed now that I reacted in that way. Yet, as you would agree, that's in the past now. It was stupid, I know."

By laughing at yourself, it shows her that you understand your mistake and won't be doing anything like that again.

As a result, she can relax her guard a little bit and allow herself to smile, laugh and feel good around you again.

When she does that, she then becomes open to interacting with you further, which gives you an opportunity you need to re-spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love and get her back.

Another thing you can do to recover from threatening to commit suicide if your ex girlfriend didn't get back with you, is

2. Apologize for scaring her with that threat

If you haven't already done so, give her a brief, sincere apology for scaring her with your emotional outburst.

For example: You can say something like, "I'm sorry for saying that I would kill myself if you didn't give me another chance. It was silly, but it was also unfair to you. It was wrong of me to say something extreme like that and I see that now. I mean, I wouldn't have liked it either if our roles were reversed and you had threatened to commit suicide if I didn't give you another chance. So, I hope you can forgive me for reacting in the way I did. I still care about you, but I accept your decision about us breaking up. I also want you to know that everyone makes mistakes in a relationship sometimes and that mistake was mine. I'm not asking you to take me back. Instead, I just want you to be able to forgive me so we can at least be friends. Don't worry, I'm not going to jump off a building!”

She can then see that you have learned from the experience and are already a more emotionally mature, emotionally stable man.

The fact that you also have the confidence to add in some humor at the end, automatically makes her feel a whole lot better about the incident, even if she doesn’t openly admit it right away.

She then drops her guard a bit and begins to allow herself to forgive you for saying what you did.

By the wayâ€¦!

Make sure that you don’t over apologize for what happened and don’t let her make it out to be worse than it was.

It was a silly mistake.

That’s it.

You have learned from it and besides, you love life and would never want to kill yourself, right?

Then, let her see that.

Let her see that you were just being silly and saying that to hopefully convince her to give you one more chance, but you realize now that it was uncalled for and over the top.

Another thing you can do to recover from threatening to commit suicide if your ex girlfriend didnâ€™t get back with you isâ€¦!

3. Understand that women don’t want to feel forced to be in a relationship

Although threatening your ex was probably done out of desperation and in the heat of the moment, itâ€™s still possible that you were hoping it would work.

You may have hoped that she would give in and just give you one more chance, so you could then work your charm and hopefully keep her in a relationship.

She likely knows that as well.

So, if you want to move forward and rebuild a relationship with your ex, you need to first understand why it didnâ€™t work.

Women donâ€™t want to be emotionally blackmailed into a relationship (i.e. made to feel guilty for leaving, forced into giving a guy another chance out of pity, having their life threatened, threatening to share her secrets with other people and so on).

If a woman is no longer attracted to her man and can see that he has no idea how or what to change to re-attract her, then sheâ€™s not going to be happy about him threatening her (e.g. by saying he will kill himself) to make her stay.

Instead, she will feel even more determined to get away from him and what has now become an emotionally abusive relationship.

So, if you want to regain your ex girlfriendâ€™s respect, attraction and love, you need to understand that those things need to happen naturally, rather than being forced or pressured.

When your ex can see that you have already changed and improved (via your actions, behavior and the way that you now interact with her), she will naturally begin to reconnect with her feelings for you and open back up to a relationship.

The more she can see that you now understand what it means to be a man that a woman can honestly look up to and respect, the more she will drop her defenses and allow herself to slowly let you back into her life (e.g. talk to you on the phone, meet up with you, hug you, kiss you, have sex with you). You can then build on her feelings and get her back.

Another thing you can do to recover from threatening to commit suicide if your ex girlfriend didn't get back with you is

4. Interact with her and be a completely new, improved version of yourself

Right now, your ex girlfriend probably has a pretty low opinion of you.

So, to change that, you will need to show her that the guy who threatened her that he would commit suicide if she give him another chance, is not who you are now.

How can show her that?

Firstly, you need to realize that saying you would kill yourself was something that an insecure, needy guy would do.

You don't want to be that guy.

So, you need to focus on becoming genuinely happy and independent in your own life, with or without her.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by

- Taking some definite steps towards achieving your big goals, dreams and ambitions in life.
- Taking up a new hobby or sport that allows you to interact and socialize with other people on a regular basis (e.g. cycling, baseball, hiking, martial arts, volleyball, boxing).
- Joining a meet up group in your area that does something you enjoy doing (e.g. dancing, gaming, debating, discussing philosophy, hiking, bike riding, wine tasting).
- Getting in touch and hanging out with old friends again and having fun in social situations with them, or doing outdoor activities with them.

When you take your mind off what happened between you and your ex and start living a good life without her, you automatically become more attractive to your ex and to other women.

When you interact with your ex again (on a phone call, or in person), she will be able to sense that you're not the same guy who threatened to commit suicide and have become a more balanced, emotionally mature man who doesn't need her back to be able to cope with life.

As a result, she will naturally begin to feel some respect and attraction for you again.

She may then open herself up to spending more time with you to see where things go from there.

If she doesn't, don't worry.

As long as you make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction when you talk to her, she will feel that spark and it will be on the back of her mind.

She will begin to wonder, "Is there still something there between us? I can feel it. Maybe I should just forgive him for that and give him another chance. After all, he gets it now that it was silly of him to threaten to kill himself. I just want to hug him again. I want to hug him and see what happens from there."

Another thing you can do to recover from threatening to commit suicide if your ex girlfriend didn't get back with you isâ€¦!

5. Make her want a relationship with you, but don't chase it or try to talk her into giving you a chance

If you follow the steps outlined above, it's very likely that your ex will start to drop her guard and open back up to you again.

You can then re-attract her and hook up with her.

Following that, she might say something like, â€œWow! you really have changed a lot since we broke up. I can't believe that you're the same guy who threatened to commit suicide if I didn't come back to him. When that happened, I was convinced that I'd never, ever want to have anything to do with you again, but now I have to admit that I'm enjoying hanging out with you again. It's fun.â€

At that point, you might be tempted to say, â€œOkay, great. So, we are back together as a couple, right?â€

In some cases, a woman will say, “Yes” and you will be fine. You'll get back with her, no problem. Yet, in other cases, asking her a question like that will cause her to play hard to get, so she might end up saying, “Well, I'm not sure. I said I'm enjoying hanging out with you again, but that doesn't mean we are back together. So, you need to give me more time.”

If you then start to feel desperate to get her to change her mind, she will feel turned off.

Likewise, if she pretends that she needs more time and you give that to her, she could end up taking that time to get over you and then end up hooking up with a new guy (e.g. if she goes out with her single girlfriends).

So, don't make the mistake of pushing your ex girlfriend to commit to a relationship.

If you really want her to give you another chance, then just continue making her experience sexual and romantic feelings for you during interactions (especially over the phone and in person).

She will then stop putting up walls every time you interact with her, because she won't feel as though you're forcing her to get back together.

Where Guys Go Wrong When in a Situation Like Yours

Losing the woman you love can definitely be a stressful experience.

Yet, despite how much it hurts, you need to gain control over your emotions and actions.

How a guy reacts and what he says to after getting dumped and then threatening his ex with self-suicide, will determine whether or not she will drop her guard and give him another chance.

For example: Here are some of the mistakes that guys make when in a situation like yoursâ€¦!

1. Thinking that continuing to threaten to end his life will prove to her how much he loves her. She will then give him another chance

As romantic as it may seem to say, â€œI'm going to kill myself if you don't come back to me,â€ a woman will rarely (if ever) see it as being a romantic gesture.

Instead, saying something like that will only prove to her that a guy is too childish and immature to handle a grown up relationship at this point in his life.

She will then want to get away from him to find herself a more emotionally mature, emotionally strong man who has what it takes to make a relationship last.

2. Telling her that no one will ever love her as much as he does

Sometimes a guy makes the mistake of thinking that his ex woman will give him another chance, if he says something dramatic like, “You don’t see it now, but I promise, you will never find another man who will love and value you as much as I do. I’ve never loved a woman as much as I love you. No one will ever love you the way I do, or as much as I do. I mean it from the bottom of my heart. I love you even more than I love myself.”

Yet, rather than cause her to come running back, she sees it as yet another desperate attempt to manipulate her into giving him another chance (i.e. if threatening to commit suicide didn’t work, maybe this will).

As a result, it makes her even more determined to move on, find another guy and fall madly in love with him, so she can prove her ex wrong.

3. Not growing up immediately and being a better man right away

In some cases, when a guy threatens his ex girlfriend that he will commit suicide if she doesn’t get back with him, the realization of what he did is enough to shock him into quickly changing and becoming a more mature and emotionally strong man.

However, in other cases, a guy will remain stuck at the same level of emotional maturity and continue to whine, complain, beg, plead and attempt to manipulate his ex back into a relationship.

Naturally, that approach turns a woman off even further and she then takes steps to cut him out of her life completely (e.g. blocks his number on her phone, unfriends him on social media, stops hanging out in any of the places she knows she might bump into him, tells mutual friends to not give him any details of her private life now).

Here’s the thing:

Everyone makes mistakes in relationships, not just you.

How you now recover from the mistake you made is what really counts.

So, are you going to sit around worrying about how you threatened your ex girlfriend that you would commit suicide if she didn’t get back with you, or are you going to learn from your mistake and become a better, more emotionally mature man as a result of your mistake?

If you don’t grow up right away and let your ex girlfriend experience the new you for herself, then getting her back is going to be very difficult.

On the other hand, if you quickly level up and become a more emotionally mature man, she will have reason to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

When she feels that, her guard will come down a little and you can then build on her feelings and get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

4. Expecting her to give him another chance because of what they shared before

No matter how great the past was between a man and his ex woman, it's still just the past.

What happened before is what happened before.

If you want her back, what you make her feel now is what is most important and what will work to get her back.

So, when a man says something like this to his ex, it just doesn't work, â€œRemember how good things were between us in the beginning? We could barely keep our hands off each other and we even finished each otherâ€™s sentences. It can be like that again if you just give me another chance. You and I have a special connection between us, you can't deny that. We shouldn't let it be destroyed over what happened. How we felt for each other for so long can't have been a mistake. I truly believe that we are meant to be together.â€

Some women will fall for that, but most women.

In most cases, a woman will feel annoyed at her ex for reminding her of how good things used to be before, compared to how badly everything turned out in the end.

She will then focus on how bad she felt before breaking up with him, how horrible it was to be threatened by him after the break up and how annoying it is now that he still doesn't understand what she really wants and needs from him in a relationship.

She will then say something like, “No. We had our chance and that has passed now. We might have been happy before, but we weren't happy for a long time, which is why I broke up with you. It's over now and you need to accept that and move on.”

So, if you want to make your ex girlfriend drop her guard and open back up to giving you another chance, you should focus on making her feel respect and sexual attraction based on who you are right now.

Interact with her (on a phone call, or in person) and let her experience the new and improved you for herself.

When she feels sparks of respect and attraction for the new and improved you, she will naturally begin to open back up to you and the possibility of you and her having a relationship again.

Finally, another mistake that other guys make when in a situation like yours isâ€¦!

5. Continuing to make interacting with him feel stressful for her

For example:

- He texts her too often as a way of staying on her mind so she doesn't move on.
- He writes way too much in the texts (e.g. he tries to explain why he behaved the way he did, tells her how much he still cares for her, asks her a lot of questions, tries to discuss the problems in the relationship).
- He tries to have deep and meaningful conversations with her to convince her to give him another chance.

In most cases, those things only stress and annoy a woman even more.

Not only does she see them as desperate attempts to get her back, but she also feels as though heâs clinging onto a relationship that he doesnât even know how to handle anymore.

She then realizes that heâs not emotionally mature enough or experienced enough to be the boyfriend that she needs.

So, rather than opening back up to him, she closes herself off even more and either blocks him or ignores him and tries to move on.

Hereâs the thing â

The best way to make your ex girlfriend forgive you and want to give you another chance, is by showing her (via your actions, behavior, conversation style and the way you respond to her) that youâre no longer the same guy who threatened to commit suicide if she didnât get back with him.

When she can see for herself that you truly have changed, she will naturally feel some respect for you again.

You donât have to tell her that youâve changed.

You need to let her experience it.

When she experiences it for herself and feels attracted to you again, it then becomes possible for her to imagine getting back together.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

6 Reasons Why No Contact Sometimes Makes it Harder to Get Your Ex Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

At first, it might seem like a really smart idea to cut off contact with your ex as a way of convincing her to give you another chance.

Yet, when you use the No Contact Rule on a woman, it doesn't always work out as intended.

For example: You use the 30 or 60 day No Contact Rule and thenâ€¦|

1. The woman then plays hard to get when you do contact her

Sometimes a guy hopes that if he ignores his ex woman for 30 or even 60 days, the shock of losing him for real will unsettle her enough to want to give him another chance.

Yet, in some cases, rather than soften her up and make her want him back, the long separation actually makes a woman even more stubborn and closed off than before.

For example: When she doesn't hear from him, she may start thinking, â€œHow dare he ignore me. Who does he think he is? After everything that happened between us, he should be the one running after me and apologizing, not ignoring me like I don't even matter to him. Well, if that's how he wants to be, then two can play that game.â€

She then disconnects from any desire to get him another chance and begins actively trying to hook up with new men, to help herself move on.

Then, when her ex finally contacts her after the 30 or 60 day No Contact period, rather than saying something along the lines of, â€œHey, how are you? I've missed youâ€ she plays hard to get.

For example: She mightâ€¦|

- Refuse to respond to any text or social media messages from him, or answer her phone.
- Block his number or unfriend him on social media.
- Respond to him in an icy, disdainful way and say things like, â€œWhat do you want? Why are you calling me? We have nothing to say to each other anymore! Leave me aloneâ€ or, â€œI can't believe that you have the nerve to call me after all this time and pretend like we're still friends. Go away and don't ever contact me again. You mean nothing to me now.â€

As a result, using No Contact has made the ex back process more difficult, time consuming and stressful than it needed to be.

He could have gotten her back so much more quickly by using a more effective alternative to the NC ruleâ€¦|

Another reason why No Contact usually makes it harder to get your ex back isâ€¦|

2. Most women just move on

A break up usually happens when a woman disconnects from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy.

She no longer feels enough respect, attraction or love to justify being in a relationship and has likely tried to warn him about that prior, but he wasn't able to change or improve.

So, after a break up, if her ex disappears from her life (to ignore her for 30 or 60 days), rather than worrying about it, she's actually happy about it.

She can focus entirely on getting over him and moving on without any interruptions, so it's much easier for other guys to attract her, seduce her and take his place.

Then, by the time her ex calls her to 'initiate contact,' rather than her saying, â€œOh, hi! Iâ€™m so glad to hear from you! Iâ€™ve missed you,â€ she instead says something like, â€œSorry, but I thought you had moved on because you didn't contact, so I moved on too. Iâ€™m fully over you now and Iâ€™m happy again. So, please donâ€™t call me anymore.â€

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

If you want to give your ex some time to allow for things to calm down between you and her, then giving her 3 to 7 days of space is more than enough.

If you wait longer than a week, you're simply wasting time and giving her the chance to move on with you, forget about you and not want anything to do with you any more.

Another reason why No Contact usually makes it harder to get your ex back isâ€

3. She gets used to not having you in her life, so she stops caring that you're not contacting her

Initially, a woman might feel curious about why her ex isnâ€™t calling her and may even feel a bit hurt about it.

She may think something like, â€œI canâ€™t believe heâ€™s cut off all contact with me like this. I thought he would at least call me once or twice to see how Iâ€™m doing. Well, I guess he didnâ€™t really love me that much after all if he can forget about me so quickly like this. So, I will open myself up to new guys now and just move on. Clearly, him and I are finished, so there's nothing for me to think about anymore. It's over between him and I.â€

She will then likely find herself feeling happier each day without him.

She might also notice that, even at her loneliest times (e.g. in the evenings, on weekends), she no longer misses him, or even thinks about him.

Her life fills up with other things (e.g. going out with her single girlfriends, focusing on her career or studies, pursuing a hobby or sport) and she gets used to being single again.

If her ex then suddenly comes back into her life a month or two later with a random message or phone call, rather than jump at the idea of getting back together, a woman like that will usually think, â€œWhy is he contacting me? Has he been unable to find a new girl? Is that why he wants to talk to me now? To get some action? Well, no thanks. I like my life now. Iâ€™ve gotten used to having my own space and doing whatever I like, whenever I want and with whomever I want.â€

If she replies to his text or answers his call, she might then say something like, â€œIâ€™m sorry, but I donâ€™t want to get back together. Being apart for such a long time has made me realize that I really enjoy being single. Maybe some time in the future I will want to be in a relationship, but right now, Iâ€™m really happy on my own. So, I wish you all the best. I'm sure you will find the right girl for you, but that girl is not me. You and I had our chance, but that has passed now. Please don't contact me anymore. I have moved on and I don't want to be talking to you again. Goodbye.

As a result, the guy has not only decreased his chances of getting her back, but he's also wasted 30 to 60 days of his life, where he was thinking about her all the time, hoping that No Contact was working and stressing out about the first text he would send her, or what he would say on the phone.

In the end, the NC rule didn't work for him, just like it doesn't for most guys.

Another reason why No Contact usually makes it harder to get your ex back is

4. She seeks to get revenge on you for trying to hurt her by cutting off contact, so she goes ahead and hooks up with new guys

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she doesn't always believe that it will be the final break up.

In many cases, she is secretly open to getting back with him if he just approaches the ex back process correctly (i.e. re-attracts her, seduces her, has sex and then doesn't push for a relationship).

So, when a guy uses the NC rule on a woman like that, she will feel annoyed that he is trying to mess with her head by not contacting her.

She will assume that he knows that she is secretly open to getting back with him and he's just trying to make her come crawling back by not contacting her.

Yet, rather than come crawling back, she begins to think, Who does he think he is? Does he believe that I'm just going to sit here pining for him and waiting for him to come back, or that I'm going to come running back to him? Well, he's in for a big surprise! I'm not desperate! I can easily get another guy if I want to.

She will then

- Go to clubs, bars or parties with her single friends with the clear intention of meeting and hooking up with other guys sexually.
- Say, Yes to the guys at work or university who have been hoping to get a date or have sex with her.
- Get on an online dating site or use a dating app to line up dates and start having sex.

Then, when her ex finally gets in contact with her (after 30 or 60 days), she can get revenge by saying something like, Why are you calling me after all this time? Did you honestly think I would be sitting here waiting around for you? Well, you are mistaken. These last few months have been the best months of my entire life. I've met so many great guys and had the best fun with them. The guy I'm with now makes me so happy. We went away for the weekend last weekend and basically stayed in bed the whole weekend. It was amazing. Getting rid of you was the best thing that happened to me. I'm happy and living a great life now and I would never want to get back into a boring relationship with you again. So, thanks for contacting me, but don't ever contact me again. Bye!

Her ex is then left feeling heartbroken and wondering, What happened? Why didn't No Contact work? I thought a guy just had to cut off contact and his ex woman would come crawling back.

No.

In most cases, No Contact is a technique that works well for women who want to get a man back (i.e. a woman gets dumped, accepts the break up right away, doesn't contact her man at all and he then contacts her and wants her back, because he can't believe she just accepted it. He wants to seduce again to prove to himself that she wants him and needs him. Therefore, the woman gets her man back).

However, the No Contact Rule doesn't work the same way for men who want to get a woman back (i.e. a man gets dumped by a woman who is no longer attracted to him or in love with him, he cuts off contact and waits. He keeps waiting. Nothing. He eventually contacts her and she has either moved on, blocked him or asks him to leave her alone and never contact her again).

Another reason why No Contact usually makes it harder to get your ex back isâ

5. She sees your lack of effort to get her back as meaning that you didn't really care about her at all and were just using her

If a woman still has some feelings for her ex and is secretly hoping that he tries to get her back, cutting off communication with her will usually end up helping her to get over him and begin moving on.

Here's why

Imagine that a woman is sitting at home alone after a break up and thinking about her ex.

âI'm disappointed that we broke up. I honestly thought we had something special, but I guess we just had too many problems and couldn't work it out. I do miss him, but I'm not going to tell him that. If he wants me back, he is going to have to show me that he cares by contacting me, making me feel good to be hearing from him and then taking it from there. If he doesn't have the courage or the know-how to do that, then I'm just going to move on.â

She then waits for days, weeks and in some cases, even months for her ex to get in touch with her.

Of course, he doesn't contact her during that time because he's using the No Contact Rule and hoping that it makes her come crawling back to him.

She then begins to wonder, âWhy is he ignoring me? Doesn't he care about me? Did I mean anything to him, or was he just with me so he would be lonely or so he could show his friends, family or coworkers that he had a girlfriend? I thought he'd at least call me to check if I was okay. I guess I've been a fool by sitting around and missing him like this. I guess I was silly to think that we could things out. Well, I've learned my lesson and I'm not going to spend another minute sitting around crying over spilled milk and hoping that he will call me. It's over. I'm moving on and I'm not going to shed another tear for that jerk! There are plenty of guys who are interested in getting a chance with me and I'm going to start opening myself up to them. Come to think of it now, this is actually going to be fun!â

She then uses the anger she feels towards her ex to push her to flirt, hook up with and start dating a new guy.

Then, when her ex finally contacts her, he is shocked to find out that No Contact didn't work on her.

Another reason why No Contact sometimes makes it harder to for a guy to get his ex woman back is that

6. She has no evidence to see that you can make her feel differently now. So, she holds onto her negative memories, remembers exactly why she broke up with you and believes that she has made the right decision

Some guys hope that cutting off contact will make a woman forget how badly he stuffed up and she will then want him back.

Yes, that can work if the woman can't find a replacement guy, is very young and inexperienced and can't handle the pain of a break up, or if she really does still love her ex and want him back.

Yet, in pretty much every other case, a woman will clearly remember why she had to dump her ex and will believe that she has made the right decision, UNLESS he contacts her, re-attracts her and seduces her back into a relationship.

If he doesn't contact her and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him, then she simply has no evidence to suggest that he would be able to do that.

So, she holds onto her negative memories of him and moves on.

By the wayâ€¦!

When a woman goes through a break up, she usually searches Google and Youtube, just like you have been doing.

So, just like your ex, pretty much every modern woman who has gone through a break up knows about the No Contact Rule.

It's a good technique for women to use on men, because men usually can't deal with the fact that the woman they have dumped isn't trying to get them back, so the man contacts her and tries to get her back to prove to himself that he still has that power over him.

Yet, women don't do the same thing when they dump a man.

When a woman dumps a man, she usually doesn't want him back and doesn't need to prove to herself that she can get him back (by seducing him and having sex with him).

She knows that he wants her back and she uses that knowledge to happily move on without him.

If she doesn't hear from her ex, she may think something like, "I know he wants me back. I bet he's using that lame No Contact rule to hopefully trick me into thinking that he doesn't want me back. I know that nothing has changed about him. So, I'm better off forgetting about him and moving on with my life."

She then focuses on fully getting over him and moving on.

If he contacts her, she then either ignores him, tells him to leave her alone or pretends to be a little interested initially, to let him show that he still wants her back.

Once she confirms that he's trying to get her back, she then knows that he was using the NC rule and loses even more respect for him as a result.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Using No Contact With an Ex

Here are some classic mistakes that guys make when trying to use the NC rule on a woman who has dumped themâ€¦!

1. Thinking that the No Contact Rule applies to all break ups and all women

It doesn't.

Watch thisâ€¦!

It would be nice if all you had to do was cut off contact and the woman who dumped you would then want you back, but it just doesn't work that way in almost all ex back cases.

In fact, by the time a break up happens, most women are fed up with their guy and are thinking things like, â€œI never want to see him again!â€œ

So, when a guy then uses No Contact to hopefully make her come running back, she just uses the space to peacefully move on without having to worry about being seduced back into a relationship with him.

Of course, the NC rule can work on some women, but you have to understand that it doesn't work on most women.

If you have been using No Contact and it hasn't been working, it's probably not going to work if you wait even longer.

Yes, you might eventually get a message from her, or she might reply to you if you message her in a few weeks or months, but that doesn't mean you get her back.

All you get is a message.

In most cases, a woman will message her ex simply to confirm for herself that he still wants her back.

When she finds that out, she then gets back on with enjoying her life, knowing that he's still yearning for her, while she is enjoying sex, love and relationships with new men.

Another common mistake that guys make when using No Contact isâ€¦!

2. Not improving his ability to re-attract her

One of the main reasons why a woman will break up with a guy is because something about his behavior, attitude or actions has made her lose respect and attraction for him.

In many cases, a woman will be open to getting back with a guy if he quickly improves and is able to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him and then seduce her back into a relationship via kissing and sex.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't do that though and just wait around during the 'No Contact Period' for the time to pass, so he can then text her or call her.

So, after 30 or 60 days, a guy will contact his ex woman in the hope that she will want him back because she's missed him during the No Contact Period.

Instead, she senses that he hasn't changed, doesn't feel a spark of attraction and then says something along the lines of, â€œSorry, but I hadn't heard from you in such a long time that I moved on. I'm over you now and I'm not interested in getting back together again. So, please don't contact me again,â€œ to get rid of him.

So, if you are going to cut off contact with your woman, make sure that you use that time to prepare yourself to properly re-attract her the next time you talk to her.

As mentioned earlier, I don't recommend that you cut off contact for more than a week.

A week (and less in many cases) is enough time to prove the point that you're not being needy, desperate and chasing her down.

Once you have given her a little bit of space, contact her, re-attract her, seduce her and get her back into a relationship.

Another common mistake that guys make when using No Contact isâ€¦|

3. Improving things about himself that she really won't care much about when he tells her or shows her

For example: A guy might think, *â€œMaybe if I get a style makeover and go to the gym and build some muscle, she will feel attracted to me again and want me back. I will use the No Contact Period to improve myself physically, so she sees that I'm much more attractive now.â€*â€¦|

He then puts in a lot of effort to change his physical appearance, but she doesn't care.

Why?

She broke up with him because she wasn't emotionally attracted to him anymore (e.g. he was too insecure, gave her too much power when talking to her, wasn't manly enough in his behavior, didn't flirt with her and create a sexual dynamic between him and her and instead, treated her more like a friend or one of the boys).

So, make sure that you're aware of what really turned her off about you, so you can use the time apart to improve those things.

Improve those things, but don't then go and say, “Hey, I've improved those things. Can you give me another chance with you?”

That approach doesnâ€¦|t work.

You've got to improve the things that you need to improve and then interact with her and let her sense and experience the changes for herself.

Don't try to sell yourself to her and hope that she gives you another chance.

Make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, so she wants to give you another chance because she feels drawn to you again.

That way, you won't encounter as much resistance as you get her back.

She will get back with you because she wants you, rather than having to continually reject you while you try to convince her to give you another chance by explaining that you've changed.

Another common mistake that guys make when using No Contact isâ€¦|

4. Not knowing that there is an easier, quicker way to get her back

Sometimes a guy doesnâ€¦|t know that there is a much quicker and easier way to get an ex woman back, so he uses the No Contact Rule in the hope that it will work.

Then, when he gets in touch with his ex after 30 or 60 days, he is shocked to discover that sheâ€¦|s over him, has moved on and is possibly even in love with a new guy.

Hereâ€¦|s the thingâ€¦|

Yes, you can use No Contact with your ex to try and get her back, and yes, it can work in some cases.

Yet, it just doesn't work on most women.

So, why waste time sitting around and waiting for 30 or 60 days when you could be hugging, kissing, having sex and be in a relationship with her this week?

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Dumped Me Because I Wasn't Trying to Get to Know Her Family

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why a woman will break up with a man if he doesn't try to get to know her family:

1. She sees his approach to the relationship as being selfish or immature

For a relationship to develop and become stronger over time, there needs to be a fairly even level give and take (i.e. sacrifices, compromises, contribution, caring, attentiveness) between the man and the woman.

So, if one person feels that they are always giving and the other is mostly taking, it creates an imbalance and eventually, the giver will start to feel taken for granted.

For example: In a case where a man is refusing to put in any effort to get to know his woman's family (especially if she has been getting to know his family or friends, or has been supporting him and showing interest in things that he cares about, such as his career, hobbies or passions), she will start to feel hurt by what she perceives as his selfish behavior.

Initially, she might make excuses for him to herself by saying, â€œOh, heâ€™s probably not ready to meet them yet. That's okay, he will feel ready soon,â€ or â€œHeâ€™s been stressed by his work lately, so getting to know my family might be extra pressure that he doesn't need at the moment.â€

She may also try to solve the problem by initiating get-togethers between her man and her family (e.g. having a BBQ, going out for dinner, inviting them over for coffee and cake).

Yet, if her man doesn't put in an effort to interact with her family and just sees them as an annoyance, she will begin to resent him.

Likewise, if she arranges something with her (e.g. Sunday lunch, meeting up on a traditional holiday or public holiday) and he always makes an excuse like, â€œOh, Iâ€™m sorry but Iâ€™m working this weekendâ€ or, â€œI can't make it this year, maybe next yearâ€ or worse, â€œYou know that I like to stay home and relax on Sundays. Itâ€™s the only day of the week that I get to be by myself and I don't want to waste it by hanging out with your family,â€ she will begin to feel annoyed.

As a result, she may begin to think, â€œThis doesn't look good for our future together. I mean, heâ€™s always making excuses not to get to know my family. Iâ€™m tired of always putting in the effort for him and being nice to his friends and family, but he never does the same for me. Itâ€™s like he doesn't even care about how it could be affecting me. If heâ€™s being like this now, what else will he be selfish and immature about in the future? Heâ€™s just a taker in a relationship and I have to keep giving and giving. If I stick with him, I will probably wake up one morning and discover that Iâ€™m stuck in a relationship with a self-absorbed, egotistical jerk who only thinks about himself and what he wants. By then, it'll probably be too late for me to move on and find someone else because we might be married, have children or be paying off a house together. I've got to get out of this relationship while I can. He's never going to change.â€

She will then break up with him and try to find a man who she perceives as being more of a giver than a taker.

Another common reason why a woman will dump a guy for not trying to get to know her family isâ€¦!

2. She wants a relationship that goes to the next level and beyond, rather than just sticking to dating and there being no real plan for a future together

When a woman is in a serious relationship, sheâ€™s naturally going to start thinking about the next level and where they are headed as a couple.

For example: A couple will usuallyâ€¦!

- Start dating.
- Get serious with each other.
- Move in together.
- Get engaged.
- Get married.
- Start a family.

Of course, not all relationships follow that exact pattern (e.g. some couples donâ€™t move in together before they get married, others decide to live together, but not get married and others prefer to focus on their career or on having fun together, rather than having a family).

There are no rules, so whatever works for a man and a woman is perfectly fine as long as they are both in agreement with it.

Problems arise when a woman wants to start making plans for a future with her man, but he canâ€™t even be bothered to put in the effort to get to know her family.

She looks at it as a sign that he is probably just using her for sex, or to have a girlfriend for a while, or to have someone to help pay the rent, but he isn't interested in anything long term, especially not marriage or kids.

If she's really in love with him, she might try to make excuses for him and hope that he will change over time.

Yet, if she notices that he doesn't change, no matter how much she tries to get him to change, she will begin to realize that he's probably not the one for her.

She might then think to herself, â€œNo matter how much I push and plead with him to spend some time getting to know my family, he just isn't interested. Maybe it's a sign that I'm taking this relationship a lot more seriously than he is. After all, why would a man want to waste time getting to know a woman's family, if he wasn't going to stick with her, right? He's probably just passing his time with me, until he can move on with some other woman. Heck, he might even cheat on me if he finds a woman who he likes more than me. Meanwhile, I will have been making plans for a future together that he clearly doesn't want. What a fool I would be if I let that happen to me. No way! I have to break up with him first. I have to retain my dignity. I deserve a man who wants me for real.â€

Another common reason why a woman will dump a guy for not trying to get to know her family isâ€¦!

3. She is tired of standing up for him when her family complains about him

A woman might find herself always having to make excuses for her boyfriend's lack of interest in getting to know her family (e.g. he mostly keeps to himself at family gatherings or doesn't show up at all, he always seems to be busy during the holidays or when her parents come to visit her).

For example: He parents might say to her, â€œSo, youâ€™ve been dating this guy for a while now and we hardly know anything about him. Whatâ€™s going on? Are you and him okay? Is there anything we should be worried about?â€

She then has to make up an excuse and say something like, â€œOh, we're fine. It's just that he's been really busy with work/his studies and every time we get together, it's simply a coincidence that itâ€™s an inconvenient time for him. I promise that I'll make plans for all of us to do something together soon. He wants to get to know you all as well, so it's fine.â€

Of course, she knows that sheâ€™s lying to her family and that her guy probably wonâ€™t bother trying to get to know them, regardless of what she says to him.

As a result, she may then begin feeling resentful towards him for putting her in a difficult position with her family.

She might then begin to wonder, â€œWhy am I even bothering to cover for him? Clearly he doesn't care enough for me to make an effort to get to know my family. Why should I ruin my relationship with them by lying to them and hurting them when they eventually find out the truth? My family is probably going to end up thinking that I'm a liar. I don't want that to happen. I will know them for life and they will always look at me as a liar because of him.â€

If she then gives him another opportunity to get to know her family and he refuses, a break up will usually happen at that point.

If the guy can convince her to give him another chance, she might do it, but it really depends on how much she loves him and how sincere he is about wanting to now get to know her family and start taking the relationship to a new level.

Another common reason why a woman will dump a guy for not trying to get to know her family isâ€œ

4. She is tired of being the one who contributes much more to the relationship and no longer wants to be taken for granted

For a womanâ€™s feelings of respect, attraction and love to grow and strengthen over time, she needs to know that her man loves and appreciates her enough to occasionally do things for her, regardless of how uncomfortable they might be for him (and visa versa for her).

For example: A guy might really be into gaming and enjoy hanging out with his online friends on weekends playing video games.

Yet, his woman doesnâ€™t enjoy games at all, sees them as boring and as a waste of time.

However, to show her guy that she loves him, she makes an effort to show interest in his hobby and maybe even play a little bit herself every now and then.

If he has friends over to play games, she might also prepare snacks and drinks them to make their time together more enjoyable.

In return, she may then ask him to spend a weekend away with her and her family, so he can get to know them better.

If he refuses, she will naturally begin to feel as though her commitment and dedication to him is being taken for granted.

She might then start thinking of all the other ways heâs is being selfish (e.g. he expects her to always look good while he has become a bit of a slob, she does all or most of the work around the house while he sits around watching TV or playing video games, he disrespects her and gets angry at her often, but expects her to always be nice and respectful towards him no matter what he has done).

If she realizes that while she gives 100% of herself to him and the relationship, he only contributes a small percentage of that, she will begin to feel resentful.

Gradually, she will begin to disconnect from her feelings of love for him.

Eventually, she will get to the point where she has had enough and will go through with a break up.

Another common reason why a woman will dump a guy for not trying to get to know her family isâ!

5. She feels like she is losing touch with her family relationships because of him

Not everyone has a close family that they want to see often.

Sometimes a woman hates her family and wants to steer clear of them, sometimes a guy feels that way about his family and sometimes, both the man and the woman feel that way.

Yet, when a guy is in a relationship with a woman who values and loves her family, he has to be aware of that and adapt, otherwise she will begin to feel like her life is getting worse as a result of the relationship, not better.

A relationship is supposed to a man and woman's life better, not worse.

So, if a guy isn't putting in much (or any) effort to get to know his womanâs family, she might find that she is spending less and less time with her family just so she can be with him.

Initially, she might be fine with it while the relationship is new and exciting, but over time she may start to miss her relationship with her family and start to blame her man for keeping her away from them.

She will then begin to wonder something like, "Is this how a relationship is supposed to be? Are you supposed to lose touch with your family? My girlfriends don't have to do that because their boyfriends are happy to occasionally catch up with their family. I don't see anyone else having this problem, so maybe the problem is with my man. Maybe he's just not the type who will care about my relationship with my family. Maybe he doesn't care if it's just him and I. Maybe he prefers it that way."

The more she realizes that her man is coming between her and her family, the more respect, attraction and love she loses for him.

When that happens, the sex between them starts to dry up because she no longer feels the desire to be affectionate and no longer feels like he is actually in love with her.

Eventually, she breaks up with him and tries to move on.

Where Guys Go Wrong After Being Dumped For Not Trying to Get to Know Their Woman's Family

By now you've probably realized that not putting in the effort to get to know your ex's family was a mistake.

Don't worry, many guys make the same mistake and the good news is that you can recover from it. The bad news, is that if you use the wrong approach now, you will just push your ex away even further.

So, to ensure that you get her back, avoid the following mistakes that other guys make when in a situation like yours:

1. Promising to spend lots of time and effort getting to know her family now

In an effort to get his ex back, a guy might desperately say things like, "I'm sorry! I never realized how important it was to you for me to get to know your family. I see that now and I promise, if you give me one more chance, I will spend all of my free time getting to know them. We can spend all the holidays with them and I will never miss a function, ever again. I mean it! Please, just give me a chance! I'm so sorry!"

Now, if the woman is still in love with her man and was hoping for that kind of response, then it will work.

Yet, if the woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for him, she's going to see it as too little, too late.

So, rather than making her think, "Ohhh, that's so sweet. Maybe I overreacted when I broke up with him. He obviously cares for me if he's willing to spend all of his free time from now on with my family," she will think, "Whatever! He's only saying that to get another chance with me, but I don't believe that he genuinely cares about my family. It's just what he thinks I want to hear to change my mind about being broken up. He isn't truly dedicated to me. He just doesn't want to get dumped. I bet that if I give him another chance, he will end up breaking up with me in the coming weeks or months. No thanks."

Here's the thing:

What a woman wants is to see that her man understands the deeper issues behind her complaints (e.g. that he's too selfish and self-absorbed, he is a taker rather than a sharer when it comes to relationship) and has already made changes because he honestly wants to.

He honestly wants to change and become a better man, because he truly believes that he stuffed up and was being immature in his approach the relationship.

He's not changing in a desperate attempt to get her back.

Instead, he's changing because he realizes that he was being immature and is now glad to grow up and be more of a complete man.

He realizes that he was just hiding from the responsibilities of growing up and being in a real, mature relationship that would last for life.

So, don't give your ex the impression that you're only changing to trick her into giving you another chance.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

2. Not understanding what other character traits she is turned off by, which are just as important to her

Although a woman might break up with a guy by saying something along the lines of, â€œItâ€™s over because you refused to get to know my family,â€ it doesnâ€™t mean that itâ€™s her only reason for dumping him.

In fact, chances are high that his unwillingness to get to know her family only highlighted other things about him that were turning her off.

For example: A guy who canâ€™t be bothered to get to know the family of the woman he loves, will likely also be self-centered, inconsiderate, self-absorbed and indifferent to the needs of other people. So, to convince his ex to give him another chance, he will need to do more than promise to spend more time with her folks.

Instead, he has to show her that he has moved beyond the level that he was at when she broke up with him.

Heâ€™s no longer the selfish, inconsiderate guy he used to be.

Note: He doesnâ€™t have to do whatever she wants and be a pushover, but he does need to use a more balanced approach with her.

Another mistake isâ€¦|

3. Pleading for another chance to prove that he can be the man she wants

A guy might say things like, â€œPlease forgive me! I know I really stuffed things up, but I promise I will make it up to you. I beg you to give me just one more chance. Let me show you that I can be the man you want me to be. I have changed so much since the break up. I promise. Just give me a chance to show that to you.â€

Yet, rather than change her mind, using an approach like that just turns a woman off even more.

A woman doesn't want to hear that a man has changed, she wants to experience it for herself as she interacts with him.

She wants to be judge of any changes he has made, rather than him trying to convince her that he has changed.

Additionally, when a man is begging and pleading with a woman, her survival instinct kick in and she starts to think, â€œI never realized this before, but he is so emotionally weak and sensitive. What would happen if life got really tough and I had to rely on him to take care of me? Based on his current reaction, it seems to me that I would have to take care of him instead because he's panicking and pleading with me. If life got tough for us, he'd probably break down and get so stressed that I would have to stay strong to help him cope. Thatâ€™s not what I want from a man. I want a man that I can depend on to be strong for the both of us, not an insecure, needy guy who expects me to reassure him and baby him. So, not only was he too selfish to try and get to know my family, but he's now showing me that heâ€™s also too emotionally weak to cope with the fallout of his actions. If I wasnâ€™t sure about the break up before, Iâ€™m now convinced now that I made the right decision. He's just not man enough for me at this point in his life, so I have to move on.â"

So, don't beg and plead with her for another chance.

Don't try to explain to her that you've changed and hope that she will believe it and then give you another chance.

Instead, interact with her and let her experience the new and improved you for herself, so she can then come to the realization that you have leveled up as a man and are now the kind of man that she can truly feel proud to be with.

When she feels like that (even just a little bit), her guard comes down and you can then guide her back into a relationship with you.

Another mistake isâ"

4. Trying to get her to want a relationship, before he makes her have strong feelings for him

A guy might sometimes make the mistake of pushing for a relationship before his ex woman is even ready to accept it.

As a result, she says things like, â"No. You stuffed up and I won't forgive you for that. Please stop trying to make me want a relationship. It's over. You have to accept that.â"

What he doesn't realize is that the main reason why his ex won't look past his mistakes and give him another chance, is because he's not turning her feelings back on for him first.

He is trying to get the LAST step of the ex back process (i.e. a relationship) FIRST.

The first step of the ex back process is re-attraction, not a relationship.

There are other steps after re-attraction and a relationship is the LAST step.

So, make sure that you're not making the classic mistake of trying to get a relationship before you've even gone through the necessary steps to make her want one.

You can get her back very quickly, but you've got to approach it properly, one quick and simple step at a time.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I'm an Emotional Mess After Being Dumped. How Can I Recover and Get Her Back Quickly?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 things you can do now to recover and get her back:

1. Stop focusing on the problem and start focusing on the solution

If you spend most of your time thinking things like, I'm an emotional mess after being dumped. I miss her so much. I can't deal with the pain. It hurts. I want her back so bad then you're focusing on the problem, rather than on the solution.

Yes, the break up happened and yes, it sucks big time, but dwelling on how bad you feel and how terrible your life is without her in it, isn't going to help you recover and get her back.

So, what is the solution that you should be focusing on?

Focus on saying and doing the things that will re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so she naturally wants to open up and give you another chance.

For example: Some of the ways to begin changing her negative perception of you to a more positive one, include:

- Maintaining your confidence when talking to her, regardless of what she says or does to make you feel uncertain of yourself (e.g. she's cold and unfriendly towards you on a phone call, she says things like, Why are you bothering me? I told you it's over between us and nothing you can do will change my mind).
- Using humor to make her stop being so cold and distant and instead, relax and be more friendly and open to you when you talk.
- Laughing at her (in a loving way) when she's creating drama and blaming you for the break up or how she's feeling (e.g. laugh and say, "You're such a drama queen, aren't you? Relax. I know that I was a bad boyfriend, but surely I'm not the worst boyfriend in the world, or maybe I am" and have a laugh with her about that).
- Not trying to get her back into a relationship and instead, just focusing on building up sexual tension between you by using flirting.
- Making her laugh, smile and feel good when she talks to you over the phone or meets up with you in person.
- Showing her that you've changed and matured since she dumped you and are now a new and improved man.
- Not sucking up to her by being so nice (because you're afraid of saying something that will make her feel annoyed) and start being more emotionally masculine and ballsy around her (e.g. be a good guy, but don't be a pushover, stand up to her when she's out of line, laugh at her in a loving way when she's being a pain in the butt).
- Showing her that you're more emotionally independent now, by getting on with your life and having fun without her.

When she can see for herself that you're handling being dumped in a confident, emotionally strong way (rather than being an emotional mess and feeling lost without her), she will automatically start to feel some respect for you.

When that happens, she will also feel attracted to you, which then opens up the door for you to fully re-attract her and make her fall back in love with you again.

That is the best solution to getting an ex back after being dumped, so focus on that rather than on the problem.

Another thing you can do to recover and get her back isâ€¦!

2. See the hope and opportunity in this situation, rather than drowning yourself in fear and self-pity

Although being dumped is not something that would be on anyoneâ€™s â€œmust doâ€œ list, it can actually be a very good thing for a man.

How so?

Sometimes, getting broken up with by the woman he loves, is just what a guy needs to shock him into becoming an even better man than he was before.

It gives him a real opportunity to take an honest look at his strengths and weakness and encourages him to change and improve.

Then, not only can he re-attract his ex woman in most cases (i.e. because she doesnâ€™t want to lose him now that he is the kind of man who takes action in life and uses a challenging situation to improve himself), but he also gets ahead in other areas of his life as well (e.g. work, relationships with friends and family).

So, rather than feeling sad, depressed and possibly even feeling like a failure or a loser for getting dumped, decide to thank your ex instead (in your head only of course!), for giving you a chance to become an even more awesome man than you were before the break up.

3. Regain confidence in your ability to re-attract her by improving your ability to attract her

If you donâ€™t believe that your ex could ever respect, feel attracted to and love you again, then it will come across in your body language, behavior, conversation style and vibe when you interact with her.

She will then look down on you and treat you with disdain, which will only reaffirm your negative beliefs about your chances with her.

This is why itâ€™s absolutely essential that you regain confidence in ability to attract her, before you attempt to re-attract her/

Some of the ways you can do that is by seeing yourself as already being a better man than you were when she dumped you.

For example:

- Youâ€™re less insecure and self-doubting now, so she canâ€™t get under your skin anymore when sheâ€™s being unwelcoming or cold towards you during interactions.
- Youâ€™re more emotionally independent, so you donâ€™t need her approval or emotional support to feel good about yourself anymore. You are a self-approving, confident man who also has the class to be good to her as you talk to her.

- You're more emotionally masculine now, so you no longer let her walk all over you like she used to.
- You believe in your attractiveness to her now, so you don't feel as though she is too good for you. You know that you are more than good enough for her and it comes through in your body language, vibe and behavior, which then makes her feel more respect and attraction for you (as long as you are being good to her at the same time and aren't being arrogant about it).

The more you believe in yourself and your ability to re-attract your ex, the more it will become a reality.

Then, when you interact with her and she experiences the changes in you, her feelings will also begin to change.

Even if she tries to deny it to your face, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again for being man enough to quickly learn from your mistakes and improve.

She will feel a spark with you and will wonder if it means that you and her aren't meant to be broken up.

When those kind of thoughts enter her mind, the door to getting her back begins to open wide and you can enter and get her back.

4. Know that it's possible to get an ex woman back

Even if your ex is saying things like, "There's nothing on Earth that will ever make me change my mind about being broken up with you! I feel nothing for you anymore and I don't want to see you ever again. So, just leave me alone!" it doesn't mean she will feel like that forever.

In fact, you can change how she feels pretty quickly.

When you focus on making her feel surges of respect and sexual attraction for you during every interaction you have with her, she will naturally start to feel less angry and closed off and begin to feel more open and optimistic about the possibility of you and her getting back together.

You can then get her back right away, within days or possibly a little longer (e.g. a week or two).

So, I recommend that you think about that (and then take action to make it happen), rather than focusing on the fact that you've been an emotional mess since the break up.

5. Know that you don't have to be perfect to get her back, just better

A lot of guys don't make the effort to change and improve after a break up because it feels like such an impossible task.

For example: A guy might think to himself, "There's no way I can change everything that's wrong with me. She will see through me the first second we meet again and she will know that I'm not perfect, so why even bother trying? I just need to accept that I will never be good enough for her and give up. Maybe other guys can get their woman back, but I can't because I will have to fix so many things about myself."

Yet, that's the worst kind of thinking you can have because it's just not true.

A man doesn't have to be perfect in every way, in order for a woman (including an ex woman) to love him in a sexual and romantic way.

In many cases, a woman just wants to know that her ex is aware of his mistakes and shortcomings and has already made the effort to change and improve.

If she can see that has been genuinely changing and improving in the ways that really matter to her (e.g. she wants him to be more manly in his behavior, she wants him to stop talking to her in a neutral way and start creating a spark between them by flirting and creating a sexual vibe), she will automatically feel some respect for him again.

When she can respect him, she will then be able to feel attracted to him and from there, reconnecting with her original feelings of love follows on after that.

On the other hand, if a woman gets a sense that her ex can't or won't change, or is only pretending to have changed just to get her back, she will lose even more respect for him and then getting her back will become difficult, if not impossible.

So, while you do need to change, improve and level up as a man (i.e. if you were insecure, you need to become more confident), you don't need to be perfect in every way.

You just need to be able to make your ex feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, so she can begin to open back up to you and naturally feel drawn to the idea of being with you again.

When you make her feel that way, it then becomes possible and often easy, to get her back.

3 Ways That Guys Mess Up When Trying to Get an Ex Back After Being Dumped

Here are 3 mistakes to avoid if you honestly want to get her back!

1. Trying to heal for weeks, which then turns into months and then years

Sometimes a guy will feel so emotionally messed up after a break up that he will assume he needs a long time to recover, before he will be ready to talk to her again.

He will then wait for weeks or even months before he finally contacts feels like he could handle talking to her again.

Unfortunately, in most cases, by the time the guy makes a move, his ex has moved on and is already in another relationship, or is happy enjoying single life and sleeping with new guys.

He is then left feeling emotionally messed up all over again and feels like he has to spend even more time recovering, before he can eventually pluck up the courage to find himself another woman.

Don't let that guy be you.

What you need to understand right now is that healing from a break up doesn't have to take you very long at all.

In most cases, a guy can get himself ready to confidently re-attract his ex woman in one week or less.

During that week, he needs to focus on improving his ability to attract her as he talks to her, so that when they do talk, she feels a spark for him and opens back up to flirting with him and seeing where it goes.

Essentially, you need to use the time apart to prepare.

You're not going to magically heal in a week for no reason at all.

Part of your healing will come from knowing that you are going to be able to attract her, seduce her and get her back.

So, don't make the mistake of thinking that you need a month or two to heal first, before you will be ready to talk to her.

Talking to her after a month or two won't achieve anything if you don't create a sexual spark with her and make her want you back in that way.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

2. Telling her that youâ€¦re an emotional mess without her

Sometimes, a guy will be feeling so upset and lost without his ex woman that he will tell her all about it.

He might say, â€œIâ€¦ve been such an emotional mess since you dumped me. Itâ€¦s been difficult for me to even get up in the morning. I can't fake it and carry on like nothing has happened, when in reality my world has come crashing down around me. You mean everything to me and without you, I just can't cope.â€¦

Heâ€¦s hoping that she will think something like, â€œ*Oh wow! I never realized how much he loves me and needs me. I feel so flattered! Maybe I should give him another chance! After all, what women doesn't want a man who can't handle the challenges of life? Every woman wants an emotionally weak man! Yes! I want him so much now that he is broken and needs my help to heal and feel whole again!*â€¦

It would be nice if that's how reality works, but it doesn't.

Women just aren't attracted to emotional weakness and desperation, especially after a break up.

An unattractive or desperate woman might accept an emotionally weak man, just so she has a boyfriend, but she will eventually withhold sex and make him have to suck up to her to get any action later on in the relationship.

On the other hand, an attractive woman will usually just reject an emotionally weak man because she knows that she can do better.

So, if your ex is attractive and she knows that she doesn't have to accept a man who can't handle the challenges of life, then don't go to her and tell her how messed up you've been since the break up.

Women arenâ€¦t impressed by emotional weakness at all.

Ideally, a woman wants to be with a man who is emotionally stronger than her, rather than being with a guy that she will need to be gentle with and take care of because he's too sensitive and soft.

Additionally, a woman doesnâ€¦t want to be in a sexual relationship with a guy out of feelings of pity for him.

So, if you want to get your ex back, donâ€¦t bother telling her that youâ€¦re an emotional mess after being dumped by her.

Instead, just use any interaction that you have with her from now on to show her that youâ€¦re now the kind of man that she wanted you to be (e.g. you're much more confident, emotionally strong and emotionally masculine now) to reawaken some of her feelings for you.

The more she can see that you're being an emotionally strong man without her help or support, the more open she will become to being a couple again.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Talking to friends and family about how messed up you are

It might feel comforting to offload all your feelings on your friends and family, but it usually just makes the pain deeper and more long lasting.

Family and friends will usually empathize with you by saying things like, It's perfectly normal to feel emotionally messed up. You loved her and now she's gone and you wouldn't be human if it didn't hurt. So, go ahead and feel what you need to feel. Take the time you need to heal.

Alternatively, a friend or family member might say, Who cares? Just forget about her! You're a great guy and if she can't see that she doesn't deserve you, then she's an idiot. Just move on and find another woman who will truly appreciate you.

Unfortunately, neither of those responses helps you get past the pain of the break up.

You just end up feeling frustrated, stuck, depressed, lonely and confused, which isn't going to help you feel the confidence that you need to feel to re-attract a woman.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Is Limited Contact With an Ex Girlfriend Better Than No Contact?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, but neither approach guarantees that you will get her back.

For example: None of the following options will workâ€¦!

1. Limited contact, but you turn her off by your style of communication

[image: Limited contact with ex girlfriend or no contact]

This usually happens when a guy only uses texting as his way of communicating with his ex woman, rather than getting her on a phone call or talking to her in person.

He might decide to use limited contact to stay in touch as a friend, or to send out feeler texts every now and then to see if she is interested.

Yet, if he's not actively creating a spark with her and is subtly turning her off, she's not going to feel motivated to get back with him.

Instead, she is going to use the time apart to hook up with a guy makes her feel sexually and romantically attracted.

Then, the occasional texts from her ex will start to become annoying and unwanted.

She may then end up texting him something like, "Why are you texting me? Don't you understand that we've broken up? Please just stop texting me, okay? I want to move on in peace."

If he then accepts that, he loses her and has wasted weeks or months trying to 'play it cool' with limited contact.

So, what should you do instead?

In the video below, I explain why the 30 day no contact rule doesn't usually work and if and when you should use limited contact (or another strategy) insteadâ€¦!

Unfortunately, many guys don't ever learn what you are now learning, so they end up wasting weeks or months trying to hopefully get an ex woman back who is secretly moving on without them.

In most ex back cases, a man needs to actively re-attract his ex woman, or else she will just move on.

So, if you are going to use limited contact, make sure that you're not turning her off with your communication style (i.e. you're not being needy, desperate, just acting like a friend, trying to have big conversations via text and so on).

Make sure that you use every interaction that you have with her to reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

That's how limited contact can work to get an ex woman back.

Here's another approach that usually doesn't workâ€¦!

2. No contact for 30 to 60 days and she just moves on because she's no longer attracted to you and doesn't care that you're not contacting her

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, him not contacting her will usually just help her move on.

Rather than feeling sad or depressed about it (and as a result, rush back to her ex to get him back), she just uses the time to fully get over him, go out and have fun with her single friends, hook up with new guys and possibly even fall in love and get into a committed relationship.

Then, by the time her ex contacts her again after 30 or 60 days, she will say something along the lines of, â€œSorry, but since I didn't hear from you, I assumed that youâ€™d moved on, so I did the same. Iâ€™m over you now and Iâ€™m happy with things the way that they are. So, please donâ€™t contact me again. I don't want to ruin what I now have with my new boyfriend. You've already caused me enough pain and you need to stop. What you and I had is over now and Iâ€™m not interested in reliving it again,â€ or â€œWhere did you crawl out from? I havenâ€™t heard from you in months and now all of a sudden you try to weasel your way back into my life! Well, itâ€™s not going to happen. Iâ€™m in love with another guy now. You and I are finished. So, please, from now on, just stay away from me.â€

Another approach that doesnâ€™t work isâ€¦!

3. Limited contact, but you act like a friend and that doesn't create a spark

Sometimes a guy will use limited contact to show his ex woman that heâ€™s not going to pressure her to get back together again.

For example: He mightâ€¦!

- Talk to her in a nice, polite way to her, regardless of how badly she treats him or how cold sheâ€™s being towards him, rather than assertively, yet lovingly, putting her back in her place to show her that heâ€™s an emotionally strong, masculine man.
- Pretend that heâ€™s not sexually or romantically interested in her anymore and just wants to be friends and chat every now and then, rather than flirting with her and building up sexual tension that she will then want to release with kissing and sex.
- Use safe, boring humor because heâ€™s afraid of offending her, rather than using ballsy humor that will actually make her feel some attraction.

Naturally, a woman will then remain closed off because thereâ€™s no sexual attraction to make her feel motivated to want to give him another chance.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Itâ€™s totally fine to be friendly towards your ex.

However, just make sure that every time you interact with her, youâ€™re not pretending to be an innocent friend who isnâ€™t interested in her in a sexual or romantic way anymore.

If you do, you will end up losing her to another guy who makes her feel sexually attracted in the ways that she wants.

Another approach that usually ends in failure isâ€¦!

4. No contact for 30 to 60 days. She then seeks to get revenge on you for trying to mess with her head by cutting off contact

Women can search Google and watch YouTube as well.

So, just like youâve probably heard about the No Contact Rule online as a way of getting an ex back, itâs more than likely that your ex has too.

If your ex gets a sense that youâre ignoring her to lure her back, she may turn the tables on you by unfriending you on social media and refusing to answer your messages or calls, when you finally get around to contacting her.

As a result, getting her back becomes way more difficult than you probably thought it would be when you started using No Contact.

So, donât let that happen to you.

Here's What You Should Do Instead

The best approach to successfully get an ex woman back is to be active about it (i.e. interact with her and re-attract her and then seduce), rather than passive (i.e. use limited contact in a friendly way, or no contact and just wait).

Here are 4 tips that will help you get her backâ

1. Understand the real reasons why she felt turned off enough to leave you

If you interact with your ex and you make the same old attraction mistakes that you made before, she wonât feel very motivated to get back together with you.

This is why itâs very important that you understand her real, secret reasons for breaking up with you.

Unfortunately, many guys never really find out what those reasons are, so they keep offering their ex the wrong things when trying to get her back.

For example: A woman might break up with a guy because he doesnât make her feel feminine and girly around him.

He was too soft, nice and gentle and gave her too much power in the relationship.

As a result, she felt much more dominant than him (e.g. she was always making the decisions for them, he would give into her demands even when she was being unreasonable just so he could get to spend time with her, he was too submissive, so he wasn't able to make her feel like she wanted to fully submit to him sexually).

In other cases, a woman might end up feeling more like a friend or roommate when sheâs with her boyfriend, which then makes it difficult to really let go and be his girl.

Instead, she ends up feeling like 'one of the guys' around him, so she ends up thinking, talking, feeling and behaving more like a man around him, which turns her off sexually.

However, she doesnât tell him that in explicit detail.

Instead, she breaks up with him by saying something along the lines of, âI don't know what's wrong, but my feelings for you have changed lately. I just don't feel the same way anymore. I think we're not right for each other and would be better off as friends,â rather than being open and honest with him by saying, âYouâre not emotionally masculine enough for me. Iâm always leading and telling you what to do and that makes me feel kind of manly, or like your mother, which doesn't make me feel sexual attraction. Thatâs why Iâm breaking up with you. I'm *going to open myself up to find a man who can be masculine enough to allow me to fully relax into being a feminine woman around him. I want to be a man's girl, not his friend or his mother figure.*â€

Of course, sometimes a woman doesn't even understand what is turning her off about her ex.

She simply knows that something doesn't feel right to her and she wants out.

This is why you can't depend on your ex to guide you and tell you what you need to do to get her back.

In most cases, she won't want to tell you and in other cases, she won't know what to tell you, so it's a lose-lose approach when you ask for guidance from your ex.

By the way!

Even if she does know how to explain what she wants you to change, a woman usually won't want to tell you because she doesn't want to be your teacher in life about how to be a man.

If she does that, then she fears that it will continue to happen in the relationship for the rest of your life together, which will make her feel more like your mother or big sister, rather than your girl.

So, if you don't already know the real reasons why your ex broke up with you, it's important to find that out (not from her!) before you try to get her back.

For example: Here are some of the hidden reasons why a woman will fall out of love and end a relationship:

- He was confident at the beginning of the relationship, but over time he became insecure, needy, clingy and self-doubting. She then lost respect for him and stopped looking at him as being a man that she could look up to.
- She matured faster than him and got tired of putting up with his irresponsible, immature behavior or way of approaching life.
- She felt insecure about her future with him because he didn't have any big goals or dreams that he was actively working towards achieving in his life. Alternatively, he did have big dreams, but he kept failing at them, wasn't making any progress for years and blamed external things (e.g. the government, his parents, society) for his failure, rather than learning, improving and then succeeding at whatever he was trying to do.
- She felt taken for granted because he would often get angry at her, treat her badly and expect her to just put up with it, even though he was turning her off in other ways and causing her to fall out of love with him.
- She felt like she was always way in the background of his life, or that she wasn't important compared to his family, friends or hobbies (e.g. video games, gym, watching sports, reading books).
- The relationship became too boring and predictable. He stopped putting any effort in to make her feel special because he expected her to stick around based on how good things were at the beginning of the relationship.

Do any of those reasons resonate with you?

Did any of those get you thinking and starting to get some clarity on what might have really turned her off?

When you fully understand what turned your ex girlfriend off, you can then change what she really wants you to change, rather than changing what you think she wants you to change (e.g. being nicer to her, when she actually wants you to be more manly and stop trying to suck up to her).

So, make sure that you are prepared to attract her in ways that will actually work on her and make her drop her guard.

When she drops her guard, it then becomes possible for her to see herself being with you again.

2. Prepare to give her an upgraded attraction experience

Here are some examples of how to do that:

- Show her by way of your behavior, conversation style and actions that you have already fixed some of the issues that were turning her off before (e.g. if you were insecure and self-doubting before, you're now more confident and believe in your value as a man. If you placed her needs ahead of your own despite her bad behavior before, you now stand up for yourself to her and put her in her place in loving, but assertive manner).
- React differently to what she says and does, (e.g. if she previously made you feel angry when she created unnecessary drama, you now relax and lovingly laugh at her attempts to fluster you. You know that women are attracted to emotional masculinity, so by remaining in control of your emotions like a real man, she naturally feels attracted to you).
- Make her feel feminine and girly in your presence by thinking, talking, behaving, feeling and acting like a masculine man, rather than being extra nice or neutral around her.

When you are ready to re-attract her!

3. Interact with her and re-attract her

If you don't interact with your ex on a phone call or in person (i.e. because you're hiding behind texts), you won't be able to get her to truly experience the new you.

As a result, she will probably continue moving on without you and you may then lose your chance to get her back.

So, regardless of how worried you might be about her potentially not wanting to get on a phone call with you or meet up with you in person, you've got to make it happen if you want to get her back for real.

When you talk to her on the phone or in person:

- Use humor to bring down her guard and make her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you. This is especially important if she is initially being standoffish and indifferent towards you.
- Flirt with her to create some sexual tension, rather than just talking to her in a neutral, friendly way.
- Turn her negative feelings about what happened between you into something you can both laugh about together, rather than apologizing over and over or sucking up to her to get her to take pity on you.

The more she can see that you're being a confident, emotionally mature man, the less she will be able to stick to her decision to remain broken up.

4. Make her want the relationship, but don't pressure her into it

Once you have re-attracted her, she will begin to look at you differently.

She will start to worry that if she doesn't give you another chance, she will end up regretting it and you will be the one who got away.

However, if you immediately start trying to get her to want a relationship, you will lose that power.

She will almost certainly put her guard back up, play hard to get and then may lose interest in you if she notices that you feel rejected and are worried about losing her.

So, make sure that you don't push for a relationship once you've re-attracted her.

Make her feel like she needs to give you another chance, or else she will regret it and have to live with emotional pain of seeing you move on and be happy with a new woman.

When you approach the ex back process in that way, she will naturally want to give the relationship another chance and you can then allow her to have that chance with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Said She Isn't Interested in Dating Anyone Right Now

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will tell her ex man that she isn't interested in dating anyone right now:

1. She is telling the truth, but not the whole truth

It's true that she isn't interested in dating anyone right now, but she may begin dating someone new very soon.

If that is the case with your ex, she's just saying things like, "I'm not interested in dating anyone right now" to discourage you from trying to get her back now, so she has some space to begin moving on without you.

Essentially, she's working on finding a replacement guy, but doesn't have anything definite to tell you about yet, so she will just say that she's not interested in dating.

In the meantime, she will keep you hanging around in the background and make you wait, while she tries to find a new guy and move on.

Then, if you're still around when she gets a new boyfriend, she can then say something like, "I'm sorry, but I can't talk to you anymore. I'm in a relationship now, so please stop calling me because my new man doesn't like it. I'm sorry. I wish you all the best. Goodbye."

So, if your ex hasn't found a new man yet, don't waste anymore time waiting for her to want you back on her own.

Use the time you have now to re-attract her, seduce her and get her back into a relationship with you. How can you do that?

Start by interacting with her on a phone call or in person and make her feel strong, positive emotions such as respect, sexual attraction, excitement and happiness.

The better she feels when interacting with you, the less motivated she will be to find another guy and move on.

Instead, she will begin thinking things like, "Did I make a mistake when I broke off the relationship? I mean, he seems so different now. I actually enjoy being around him and the idea of losing him for good makes me feel sad now. I don't want to move on and then regret it, only to find that he has moved on and is happy without me. Maybe I need to give him another chance."

She then opens back up to you and you can get her back, even though she was recently saying that she wasn't interested in dating anyone.

Another common reason why your ex said that she isn't interested in dating anyone else right now is

2. She is dating a new guy, but doesn't want you to know about it in case she changes her mind and wants you back

Sometimes a woman likes to keep her options open.

On one hand, she has a new boyfriend and is enjoying the feelings of being in a fresh relationship with him.

At the same time though, she also likes the certainty of knowing that if it doesn't work out with her new man, she can always go back to her ex who is waiting in the wings for her.

Essentially, she's just using the, "I'm not interested in dating anyone right now," excuse to string you along, until she's 100% sure of her new relationship.

When she is sure, she will then say something, "Sorry. I'm in a new relationship now and I'm happy, so I think it's best if we don't see each other anymore. Goodbye."

So, if you just sit around and do nothing to re-attract her, seduce her and get her back, she will likely move on without.

Here's the thing!

Regardless of whether your ex has a new guy already or not, your response to the break up needs to be the same.

You need to actively re-attract her and reawaken her feelings (over the phone and especially in person), so she starts to realize that you are the man she really wants.

For example: Some of the things that will reawaken her feelings are!

- Maintaining your confidence around her regardless of what she says or does to make you feel insecure, or as though you're not good enough for her anymore.
- Using humor to make her smile and laugh and feel good every time she is interacting with you, rather than trying to discuss the relationship and convince her to give you another chance.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension, rather than just talking to her in a friendly, neutral manner.
- Showing her that even though you still care for her, you're not sitting around feeling sad and depressed without her. Instead, you're confident, happy and are getting on with your life (e.g. pursuing your goals and dreams, doing the things you wanted to do but never got around to when you were with her, partying and having fun with friends).
- Showing her via your actions, conversation and behavior that you've leveled up as a man (e.g. you're more confident and emotionally strong, more ballsy, more focused and determined to succeed in your life).

The better you are at making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, the faster she will reconnect with her feelings of love and consider getting back with you.

Another common reason why your ex said that she isn't interested in dating anyone else right now is!

3. She doesn't want to break your heart (or make you become angry at her) because she either started dating a new guy right after the break up, or start dating him before you and her broke up

If a woman falls out of love with her man, she will naturally begin to think of leaving the relationship.

In some cases, she will line a new guy up before breaking up with her current man and in other cases, she will start dating the new guy before ending the relationship with her man.

Men do that to women as well, but it's more common for a woman to do it because it's a woman's way of protecting herself from being hurt physically as she leaves a relationship.

Even though you might not ever do that to her, a woman has a natural instinct to make sure that she will be protected if a man gets angry with her.

So, rather than saying, â€œLook, Iâ€™ve met someone else and I want to break up with you. Iâ€™m going to be with him nowâ€ (if she has been cheating on him, or has a new guy lined up and ready to go) she will say something like, â€œPlease understand that Iâ€™m not interested in dating anyone right now. Maybe sometime in the future Iâ€™ll be open to again, but for now, please respect my decision and give me some space. I just want to be on my own for a while to figure out what I want.â€

By saying that, not only does she avoid hurting her exâ€™s feelings more than she has to, but she also remains safe from any outbursts that he may have in response to the break up (e.g. getting angry with her, crying and begging her to change her mind, becoming aggressive or violent towards her, threatening to kill himself or her, turning up at her work or home and demanding that she speak with and work things out, wanting her to have a long, emotional and stressful discussion with him about the relationship).

So, how can you get a woman back in a situation like that?

You need to make her feel so much respect and attraction for you as a man that the idea of being with any man other than you, makes her feel sick to the stomach.

Get her to the point where she wants you back for her own selfish reasons (e.g. she feels that what she has with her new guy is average compared to the way she now feels with you, she fears that she made a mistake and if she loses you she will never find true happiness again).

When you approach the ex back process in that way, getting her back becomes easy because getting back together is what she wants to do.

Another common reason why your ex said that she isnâ€™t interested in dating anyone else right now isâ€

4. She is just trying to create space between you and her, so she can move on peacefully, without any drama from you

When a woman feels that her man is too emotionally weak to cope with the idea of being broken up with, she might make it easier for him by saying something like, â€œItâ€™s not you, itâ€™s me. Iâ€™m just not interested in dating anyone right now. Youâ€™re a good guy, donâ€™t think I donâ€™t know that. Iâ€™m lucky that you still want to be with me after the way Iâ€™ve been acting lately, but I need some space to think, okay? Can you do that for me?â€

By approaching the break up in that way, she can leave him feeling hopeful and thinking, â€œWell, at least she didnâ€™t say that she doesnâ€™t love me anymore. Maybe she just needs some space to realize that Iâ€™m truly the one for her. Maybe if I show her that Iâ€™m willing to wait and give her the time she needs, she will miss me and come back to me.â€

He may then give her a few weeks or months of space and hope that she comes back.

In the meantime, she uses the time to quickly move on without having to deal with the drama of an ex guy trying to convince her to give her another chance.

Hereâs the thing...

Giving a woman too much space when she secretly doesnât have strong feelings for you is one of the quickest ways to lose her to another man.

So, make sure that you stay in her life.

Not as a clingy, needy ex boyfriend (fianc  or husband) or as a friend, but as the guy who makes her feel attracted that she starts to regret her decision and starts to want to be your girl again.

Another common reason why your ex said that she isnât interested in dating anyone else right now isâ!

5. If she's going to be interested in anything with you, it has to be just casual sex for now, but not a relationship

Sometimes a woman might get into a relationship with a guy, only to realize that sheâs not ready to take on such a serious responsibility of being a committed girlfriend who is always there for him.

That can happen if a woman is young, inexperienced with relationships or is at a stage in her life where she just wants to have fun without thinking too far ahead into the future.

So, when she breaks up with her guy, she will tell him that she isn't interested in dating anyone else at the moment.

If he then accepts that and sticks around as a lover, she may be open to having casual sex with him, but if he puts too much pressure on her to get back into a committed relationship, she will usually say something along the lines of,    Sorry, but I  m not interested in dating anyone right now.

Maybe you and I should talk to each other for a while.  

You can change her mind, but you've got to use the right approach.

4 Mistakes to Avoid

If you want to change your exâs mind, then make sure that whatever you say and do from now on makes her feel attracted to you, rather than repelled by you and the idea of being in a relationship with you.

For example: Try to avoid making these mistakes  !

1. Telling her that you will wait for her no matter how long it takes

When a woman says that she isnât interested in dating anyone right now, a guy might make the mistake of saying,    Take all the time you need and when you feel ready, know that I will be right here waiting for you.  

Essentially, heâs hoping she will feel so flattered that he is willing to wait for her and she will then change her mind and give him another chance.

Yet, "I'll wait around forever" isn't actually what a woman wants to hear.

In fact, him saying something like that to her only turns her off even more, because she perceives the guy as being emotionally needy.

She then doubles her efforts to get over him and move on as quickly as she can.

So, if your goal is actually to get your ex back, don't tell her you'll be waiting for her like a good little boy.

Instead, show her that even though you want her back, you don't need her back to feel good about yourself.

You're more than capable of living a fun, enjoyable life without her.

Not on your own though!

You're having fun with other people and enjoying life.

That's what makes her see that you are capable of being happy and enjoying a full life without her.

When she notices that you're not chasing after her in a desperate, needy way and are enjoying life without her, she will automatically feel respect for you.

When she starts to respect you, she will also start to feel attracted to you.

You can then build on her feelings and make her be the one who starts suggesting that you and her begin dating each other again.

Don't worry if she doesn't suggest it though.

If she does, then great! go ahead and let her date you again.

If she doesn't, just build on her attraction and then get to a hug, kiss and sex.

After the sex, don't push for a relationship.

Let her be the one wanting it.

The next mistake to avoid is!

2. Telling her to be careful of guys who just want to use her for sex

Saying something like to a woman will annoy her and turn her off.

For example: She might feel that her ex is trying to control her, even though they've broken up and she doesn't have to be faithful to him anymore.

She may then say something like, "What business is it of yours if they do? You're not my boyfriend anymore and I can have sex with any guy I choose if I want to. Maybe I want to be used for sex, have you ever considered that? Maybe I just want to have lots of random sex with many different guys. It's my decision, not yours! I will do whatever I want now."

As a result, she then hooks up with different guys just to spite her ex for trying to control her.

Alternatively, she might feel offended that he believes the only thing a guy would want her for is sex.

She may then say something like, "Is that all you think of me? That I'm just a sex toy for guys and that no other man would actually be able to love me and appreciate me for anything else? What were you, my mercy boyfriend? Was I lucky that you wanted a relationship? Were you just doing me a favor by being with me, because no other guy would want a relationship with me? You're kidding yourself. You weren't that good of a boyfriend anyway. Goodbye!"

She might then rush to get into a relationship with a new guy to prove to her ex that she can.

This is why telling your ex to be careful of guys who just want to use her for sex, is more likely to backfire on you than to convince her not to do it.

So, let her make her own decisions (and mistakes).

The way to get her back is to re-attract her and seduce her, not to try to stop her from doing things that you don't want.

If she is attracted to you again and you get to a hug, kiss and sex and she falls in love with you again, then she's not going to want to be with other guys.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Telling her that no guy will ever love her as much as you do

Although this might be true (because every relationship is unique and it's possible that no other man could ever love her as deeply as you do), it still doesn't mean she won't be able to feel deep and meaningful love with another guy.

So, saying that to her isn't going to change her mind about not being interested in dating anyone (especially you) right now.

This is especially true if you haven't yet done anything to reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Instead, saying something like that to a woman will usually just encourage her to try even harder to find herself a replacement guy, just so she can prove that you're wrong.

So, don't bother telling your ex that no one can love her like you do, because she just won't care and may even resent you trying to manipulate her back into a relationship with you.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

4. Asking what you can do to change her mind

As tempting as it may be for a guy to ask his ex woman, â€œOkay, I understand that you're not interested in dating anyone right now. Yet, there has to be something that I can do to make you change your mind. Just tell me what you want me to do and I promise that will do it. I will do anything for you,â€ he shouldn't say it.

Why?

Rather than making her think, â€œThat's so sweet. No other guy has ever been willing to do whatever I want just to make me happy. He must really love me! Based on that, I guess I would be a fool to let him go! I just have to give him another chance!â€ she feels turned off by what she perceives as his lack of masculinity and cluelessness about how to attract a woman.

She then just says something like, â€œLook, I really don't want to date anyone right now and that includes you too. So, please stop harassing me about it and just give me some space. If I want to get back together with you, I will contact you, but for now I just need time to be on my own and think.â€

This is why you shouldn't ask your ex for instructions on how to get her back.

In almost all cases, a woman isn't going to give her ex the answer to the puzzle of how to get her back.

Instead, she wants him to figure it out by himself.

Luckily, the answer is easy...

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Do Women Ever Dump Men By Mistake?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes.

That can happen if:

1. She dumps you when she is angry about something you said or did, but she still loves you

Sometimes, in the heat of an argument, a woman might say, â€œForget it! Iâ€™m tired of putting up with your crap. Itâ€™s over! I donâ€™t want anything to do with you anymore!â€

She might then pack her stuff and leave, or ask you to leave.

Yet, when her anger dies down, she then realizes her mistake and begins to think things like, â€œWhat did I just do? Why did I break up with him? I know he messed up, but I still love him. It was a silly mistake to break up with him. What should I do now to fix it? Should I tell him that I made a mistake, or wait for him to contact me and fix things?â€

In some cases, a woman might call her ex, apologize to him for overreacting and patch things up with him again.

In other cases, a woman will feel too embarrassed to contact her ex and admit her silly mistake, or she will worry that her ex will now reject her if she calls and tries to get the relationship back together.

This is why, if your ex broke up with you in the spur of the moment over something you said or did that annoyed her, you should contact her (preferably on a phone call, rather than text) to break the ice between you and her.

When you talk to her again, donâ€™t make a big deal about the break up and donâ€™t ask her to get back together.

Instead, just briefly apologize to her for what happened (i.e. for whatever it is you did to annoy her to the point of her breaking up with you) and then have a light-hearted conversation with her where you focus on making her laugh, smile and feel at ease with you once again.

When she seems relaxed and open and feeling better about what happened, get her to agree to meet up with you in person.

When you meet up in person, you just need to reawaken her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you (e.g. by using humor to break down her defenses, being confident around her even when sheâ€™s being closed off and reserved, making her feel feminine in comparison to your masculine vibe, flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you and her).

If she sees that youâ€™re being a confident, emotionally mature guy, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from saying something along the lines of, â€œOkay, lookâ€¦Iâ€™m sorry that I overreacted in the way I did. I made a mess of things between us. Sorry.â€

When she opens herself up like that, you can then take the lead and guide her back into a relationship with you.

Another possible reason why a woman might dump a guy by mistake isâ€¦

2. She likes a new man, dumps you for him, loses interest in him and then realizes her mistake

In a relationship, a man needs to be able to build on the feelings of love, respect and sexual attraction between him and his woman, rather than just expecting her to stick around because things felt good at the start.

A woman is also responsible for building on the feelings and harmony of the relationship and she will have the motivation to do that for a lifetime, if her man is able to continue a relationship dynamic that causes her to respect him, feel attracted to him and love him.

If her man creates a relationship dynamic that continually ruins her respect, attraction and feelings of love (e.g. he is insecure, treats her badly, doesn't continually grow up and become more of a man), she will feel less motivated to work on the relationship.

If he doesn't care to improve the relationship and make her feel happier with him, she might eventually feel as though she is being taken for granted.

As a result, she might complain about it by saying that she feels bored, is unhappy with how he treats her and doesn't feel like the relationship is fun anymore.

She might also begin to compare him to other men (e.g. the boyfriends or husbands of her girlfriends) and suggest that he be more like those men.

If her man doesn't listen to her initial complaints and get the relationship back on track, she will gradually begin to fall out of love with him.

When she falls out of love, she will start to feel less of a need to work on the relationship or even be faithful to him.

Then, if she happens to meet another guy (e.g. at work, university, in the neighborhood, through friends) who gives her the feelings that she is craving (i.e. love, attraction, respect), she may then decide to dump her guy for the new man.

Yet, once the initial excitement of being with someone new wears off, she might realize that she made a big mistake by dumping her ex.

For example: She may notice that her new guy has also started taking her for granted and isn't being as nice as he was in the beginning.

Alternatively, she might realize that although she was initially attracted to her new guy because he made her feel more desirable and appreciated than her ex, now that the newness has worn off, all his faults are starting to seem very obvious to her (e.g. he's too jealous and controlling, he doesn't have any real focus or direction in his life, he's a loner and doesn't get on well with other people).

As a result, she begins to lose interest in him.

At the same time, she starts to remember all the good things about her ex that she misses (e.g. he was confident and emotionally strong, he was self-motivated and ambitious, he treated her with respect and kindness, she loved what it felt like to kiss him) and she realizes that she made a mistake.

So, how can you get an ex woman back in a case like that?

You need to interact with your ex and actively make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you.

The more respect and sexual attraction you make her feel, the faster she will reconnect with her original feelings of love for you and want you back.

Then, dumping her new guy (if she hasn't done that already) and getting back with you will happen very quickly and easily.

Another possible reason why a woman might dump a guy by mistake isâ€¦

3. She's inexperienced with relationships and doesn't know how to handle relationship problems without threatening to break up, or actually going through with a break up

If this was your ex's first serious relationship, it's possible that she didn't know how to manage her feelings and broke up with you by mistake.

For example: A mature woman who has been in a number of relationships will have learned that not every disagreement is worth getting into a big fight over, or breaking up over.

Instead, the disagreement is an opportunity for the couple to improve the relationship and become closer, because they have both learned more about each other and how to make the relationship work better.

Yet, in the case of a woman who doesn't have relationship experience or is still a bit emotionally immature despite her age or experience, an argument about her guy being late for a date can blow up into something serious (e.g. she accuses him of not loving her, cheating on her or being like one her exes).

This may cause her man to get angry with her for not trusting him and before long, she's saying, â€œThat's it! It's over! I'm breaking up with you! I'm sick of this crap. Don't ever contact me again. I regret the day I met you.â€

Of course, breaking up isn't what she really wants.

She wants a relationship that works and she wants to be able to feel more and more love, respect and attraction over time.

However, because she doesn't know how else to behave when things aren't working perfectly in a relationship, she threatens to break up with her guy and then goes through with it, even though she knows it's a mistake.

So, for her guy to get her back, he actually needs to educate her and teach her that successful couples who stay together for life understand that no-one is perfect and that arguments and disagreements will happen, but that usually isn't a good enough reason to break up an otherwise great relationship.

As long as a couple loves and forgives each other and can learn from their mistakes, a relationship can last a lifetime and become increasingly happy and harmonious over time.

Yet, if a man or woman runs away when they are faced with challenges in a relationship, they will never get to experience the kind of love that grows and builds over time for life, which is the most special, most unforgettable love of all.

Another possible reason why a woman might dump a guy by mistake isâ€¦

4. She dumps you when she was stressed out because of work or studies and then realizes that it wasn't your fault

Stress can sometimes cause a person to ruin relationships that they actually want to hold onto and build on.

Stress is the body's way of responding to what it perceives as being a threat, which then causes it to instinctively kick into a 'fight or flight' reaction to solve the problem and get rid of the stress.

So, if a woman is going through a very stressful time in her life (e.g. she's under a lot of pressure to meet a deadline at work, she's studying for exams, she's having problems with her family or friends), she may react in ways that are out of character for her.

For example: Under normal circumstances, she might be very easy-going, has a great sense of humor and like to joke around with her guy.

However, when she's under stress, she becomes tense, agitated and serious.

If her man tries to relieve some of her tension by playfully teasing her (which would usually get a laugh out of her) or by pulling a prank on her to make her laugh, it might cause her to explode with anger and her stress level to increase even further.

Under the influence of stress, she may then start thinking things like, "Everything is a joke to him, isn't it?! He doesn't take my work/studies seriously. I can't be in a relationship with a guy like that. He stresses me out! I'd be better off being single, so I think it's best if we just go our separate ways."

She then gets angry with him, dumps him and walks away hoping that her stress level will go down.

Then, when she meets her deadline and her boss praises her work, or she passes her exams or the family or friend problems go away, the reality of what she did to her romantic relationship starts to sink in.

She realizes her mistake and feels terrible about it.

Here's the thing though!

Even if a woman realizes that the break up was all her fault, she won't necessarily tell her ex that and then help him get her back.

In many cases, a woman will be too embarrassed to reach out to her ex and apologize, or will worry that she will get rejected if she tries to get him back.

So, if you want your ex back after she dumped you by mistake, you need to be the one to make the ex back process happen (i.e. by interacting with her on a phone call or in person and making her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you again).

Texts can be helpful to get an ex back, but I don't recommend texts as your main approach to getting a woman back.

Women can easily play hard to get via text, misinterpret what you're saying and feel turned off or reply for a while and then lose interest if you don't call and arrange a meet up.

So, make sure that you don't make the classic, modern mistake of hiding behind text to get an ex back.

You've got to get a phone call or in person meet up, so you then properly re-attract her and get her back.

Important: Don't go to a meet up if you're not fully prepared to re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship.

Many guys make the mistake of meeting up with their ex woman and turning her off (e.g. by being nervous, unsure of themselves, insecure) or making her feel like they are just friends now (i.e. by using a neutral, friendly, non-flirtatious approach).

So, if you are going to meet up with her, make sure that you are prepared to re-attract her sexually and romantically and then get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

Another possible reason why a woman might dump a guy by mistake isâ€¦

5. She was just putting you and her through a test break up to see if your relationship would survive it, but it didn't

Many women are insecure about themselves and their attractiveness to men.

As a result, when an insecure woman gets into a relationship with a guy, she might behave in odd ways to prove to herself that her guy really loves her and wants to be with her and only her.

One of the ways that she will behave is to prevent her man from hanging out with his friends and co-workers, to hopefully ensure that he doesn't meet any other women and then dump her as a result.

Another way is to break up with her guy to test his love and devotion to her.

If he chases after her and begs her to give him another chance, she will feel better about herself.

Yet, one of the drawbacks of this strategy is that if she gets what she wants (i.e. a guy who begs, pleads and cries for her to take him back), she actually loses respect and attraction for him.

Why?

Women aren't attracted to desperation.

Women are attracted to confidence, self-assuredness, emotional maturity, manliness and emotional independence.

So, if your ex dumped you by mistake as a way of testing your feelings for her, the worst thing you can do is chase after her in a desperate way.

That doesn't mean you should ignore her either, because that may cause her to find another guy and move on to make herself feel better.

What should you do instead?

Maintain your confidence and use any interaction that you have with her to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Make her feel that way, but don't desperately push for a relationship or try to convince her to give you another chance.

Let her see that you do want her back, but aren't being desperate or frantic about it.

For example: Imagine that you're on a phone call with your ex and she says something like, Why are you calling me? It's over between us, in the hope that you'll respond by saying, I'm sorry! Please just listen to me. Give me a chance to explain or Please don't do this to us! I need you in my life! I want to work things out!

Instead of playing into her hands, just turn the situation into an opportunity to reactivate her feelings for you.

Laugh and then say in a light-hearted, joking manner, something along the lines of, Oh, youâ€™re being such a drama queen now aren't you? Look, weâ€™re broken up. I accept that. However, we can be friends and still talk on the phone. Iâ€™m sure that weâ€™re both mature enough to handle that without it having to mean that we're getting back together. We can say hello as friends.â€

Initially, she might feel a little disappointed that youâ€™re not responding in the way she expected you to, but even if she doesnâ€™t show it or admit it, she will suddenly be feeling a tremendous amount of respect and sexual attraction for you.

She will then realize that youâ€™re the confident, emotionally strong man she always wanted you to be and that she was very lucky to have you as her man.

As a result, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from wanting to be your girl again.

When that happens, you can easily get her back.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get a Woman Back Who Dumped Them By Mistake

Here are 3 mistakes you need to avoid if she dumped you by mistakeâ€

1. Thinking that the only solution is to wait for her to come back

In some cases a woman will come back if you wait, but as mentioned earlier, in others she will be too embarrassed to try, or will be worried that you might reject her, so she will just move on instead.

Why take the chance of losing her (potentially forever, if she meets a guy that she wants to marry or have children with), if you can quickly get her back by re-attracting her and seducing her today, tomorrow or the next day?

If you are ready to re-attract her, go ahead and call her on the phone, or even better, meet up with her in person and reactivate her feelings of romantic and sexual attraction for you.

When you do that, she will be grateful that you took the lead in the ex back process (especially if she dumped you by mistake), so it won't take long for her to open back up to getting back together.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€

2. Pouring your heart out to her in an e-mail, letter or series of text messages in the hope that it reignites her feelings for you

Sometimes a guy feels so frustrated to have been dumped (especially if he feels that his ex made a mistake), that he decides to send her a long e-mail, letter or series of text messages to declare his love for her.

He hopes that she will realize how much he still cares for her, even though she walked away from him, which will then compel her to give him another chance.

Yet, in most cases, when a woman gets a long soppy love letter/email/text from an ex, rather than feeling flattered that he still cares for her after being dumped, she perceives him as being desperate.

He then loses the coolness that attracted her to him in the first place, so she naturally begins to think that dumping him was actually the right thing to do after all.

So, make sure that you don't mess things up by pouring your heart out to her via email, letter or text.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Trying to get her back with text messages and turning her off in the process

It's so easy to mess things up via text.

A guy can easily come across as insecure, needy and desperate, even if he isn't feeling that way when he types a text.

Even though he is feeling confident and just trying to work things out with her via text, she just doesn't see it that way.

She ends up thinking things like, He sounds so needy now. It's like he doesn't have a life without me. I know that I made a mistake by breaking up with him initially, but maybe it was the right thing to do after all. After all, what kind of guy would grovel and try to plead with me via text? I don't want a guy like that. I want a guy who has some self-respect.

Yet, she would think that if he talked to her on the phone or in person and was being confident, making her laugh and feel good to be talking to him again.

So, if you want your ex back for real, you have to be willing to re-attract her on a phone call or in person.

Only on a phone call or in person, can she get a clear picture of how you feel about yourself (e.g. you're an emotionally strong, confident, self-assured guy), even though she dumped you.

When she experiences the confident, attractive version of you for herself, she will naturally start to feel some respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, you then won't have to ask her to get back together again, because it's something she will begin to want (maybe even more than you do).

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Should I Forget About My Ex and Just Meet Other Women?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 questions to ask yourself, so you can then make a concrete decision:

1. Do you feel as though the relationship would be even better if you could get another chance with her?

Some couples get into a relationship with each other without knowing how to make it last for life. They're not prepared to deal with all the problems that occur as the relationship begins to settle down (e.g. the power struggle, disagreements, insecurity) and as a result, the relationship begins to go downhill and fall apart until a break up finally happens.

Yet, what they didn't realize is that problems in a relationship don't necessarily mean that the relationship isn't working, can't work or that it has to end.

In fact, successful couples who stay together for life understand that no-one is perfect and that arguments, disagreements and mistakes (even big ones) happen from time to time.

So, if you're wondering if you should forget about your ex and just meet other women, could it be because you, or her, had unrealistic expectations of what a real relationship should be like?

Did you one or both of you assume that a relationship had to be perfect all the time and if it wasn't, then it was heading for a break up and had to end?

More importantly, now that you know that problems and mistakes in relationships are all part of the growing process and can actually make the love even stronger in the long-term, don't you think you'd do a much better job being her boyfriend this time around?

I think you would because you're a more emotionally mature man than you were before.

True?

This is why you shouldn't give up on your ex just yet.

You owe it to yourself (and to her) to give it one more shot.

After all, what do you have to lose?

If it doesn't work out between you and her when you get back together, you can always go on to meet other women.

However, if it does work out, then you'll have successfully gotten back with your ideal woman and made a huge success of new your relationship with her.

You will also have grown and developed so much more as a man, by going through the transformational ex back process.

Of course, if deep down, you feel that you can't be bothered to put in the effort that's required to make a relationship work with your ex, then maybe it's time to move on.

Maybe it's time to find yourself a woman who you want to be with through the good times as well as the rough times, because she's worth it to you.

Another question to ask yourself is

2. Have you felt the same kind of attraction for new women that you've met, or are you more attracted to your ex?

If you're like most guys, chances are high that when you see a hot woman walking down the street, you can't stop yourself from feeling attracted to her.

Attraction is a natural reaction that men and women have when they encounter appealing traits in each other.

It can't be turned off.

However, even though there are potentially millions of other women that you might feel drawn to, if you feel as though the attraction you felt for your ex far outweighs what you feel for other women, then you probably need to focus on getting her back rather than meeting other women.

On the other hand, if other women seem equally attractive to you and you feel drawn to them in the same, or a similar way to your ex, then it may be a sign that you should go ahead and meet new women, have sex and see how you feel afterwards.

Besides, dating other women might be just what you need to convince you that your ex is truly the woman for you (i.e. you might end up having sex with a few women, only to find yourself still missing your ex and the connection that you and her shared).

Warning: Don't make the mistake of thinking that your ex will wait around for you for months, while you try to decide whether or not she's the right woman for you.

So, if you do decide to meet other women, know that if it doesn't work out for you down the line and you decide to get back with your ex, she may not be available anymore.

Another question to ask yourself is

3. How happy would you be if you got another chance with her?

If getting back with your ex would make you feel happier than you've felt in a long time, or maybe even in life, then you should focus on getting her back.

However, if getting her back would make you have a "whatever" type of feeling, then it's best that you just meet new women and move on.

Another question to ask yourself is

4. Have you improved the things about you that turned her off?

For her to break up with you in the way she did, there must've been some aspect of your thinking or behavior that really turned her off about you.

For example: A woman might break up with a guy because he's too childish and immature and has no direction in life.

So, to get her back, he will need to change and improve in ways that will make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

Yet, what if he doesn't want to do that?

For example: A guy might decide that he likes who he is (e.g. carefree, irresponsible, having fun in his life without being committed to any one thing, being reckless, drinking and partying all the time, playing video games all weekend, not working on achieving anything big in life and just cruising through life).

In a case like that, getting back with an ex woman who hates those things about him isn't a good idea and probably won't work.

So, a guy like that should focus on meeting other women who will love him for who he is.

On the other hand, if he realizes that his ex was right to break up with him and that he needs to start being more of a man and getting his life together, then the relationship can work when he gets her back.

So, if you have changed and improved some of the things that turned your ex off, don't give up on the idea of getting your ex back just because she may have said that she doesn't want you anymore.

It's actually up to you to make the decision about whether or not you are going to seduce her back into a relationship.

Another question to ask yourself is

5. Have you come to realize her true, secret reasons for ending the relationship?

A woman won't always tell a guy her all of her reasons for ending the relationship.

Instead, she might only ever say something like, "Sorry, but I just don't feel the same way about you anymore" or, "It's not you, it's me. I need some time apart to figure out what I really want in my life."

How about you?

Did your ex explain exactly why she was breaking up with you and what you'd need to change and improve to get her back, or did she end it with a vague reason of some sort (e.g. "I don't think this is working, so it's best to end it now")?

If you're unsure of her real reasons for dumping you, then you may have been trying to get her back by offering her all the wrong things (e.g. promising to change things that don't matter to her, changing your physical appearance by going to the gym or buying new clothes as a way of attracting her, even though she was turned off by your emotional weakness or insecurity and it had nothing to do with your appearance).

As a result, she would have rejected your attempts to get her back and told you to just leave her alone.

Naturally, that may have caused you to feel dejected and possibly made you wonder things like, "Am I pushing for something that will never happen? Should I forget about my ex and just meet other women? No matter what I do, she doesn't want me back. What can I do other than just move on?"

What you can do is understand her real reasons for leaving you and then make changes and improvements based on that.

Then, interact with her, re-attract her, seduce her and get her back into a relationship with you, or at least have sex with her again and then see how you both feel after that.

3 Mistakes Guys Make When Trying to Decide if They Should Get an Ex Back, or Forget About Her and Meet Other Women

Sometimes a guy finds himself torn between wanting his ex back and moving on, because he isn't sure how to get her back.

He misses her and wants her back, but everything that he has tried so far hasn't worked, so moving on seems like the only options.

As a result, he ends up making one or more of the following mistakes that further reduce his chances of getting her back!

1. Sending out feeler texts to see if she is interested and then losing confidence when she doesn't reply or show much interest

It's only natural that a guy might feel a bit rejected if he sends his ex woman a text to say hello and see how she's been since the break up and she doesn't reply, or responds with something like, "I'm fine" or, "What do you want?"

He may then think to himself, "Well I guess I have my answer. She's over me and I have no chance with her anymore. I should just forget about her now and meet other women. That's not really what I want, but it seems to be what she wants, so I need to accept that."

Yet, thinking like that only causes him to lose confidence in himself and in his value to her, which isn't going to help him get her back.

What he doesn't realize is that just because she doesn't seem excited to be hearing from him, it doesn't mean that she's not secretly happy to be hearing from him.

He is simply reading the text in a negative light because he lacks confidence.

She could be saying, "I'm fine" and smiling from ear to ear and feeling happy that he is contacting her, or she could be rolling her eyes and feeling annoyed that he is contacting her.

Either option is possible, but because it's just text, he has to assume that tone of voice that she would be replying with.

Since he lacks confidence, he will lean towards assuming a more negative tone of voice and will then begin to feel as though he doesn't have much or any chance to get her back.

In terms of her not replying at all; sometimes a woman doesn't want to reply to her ex's initial feeler text.

For example: She doesn't want to come across as too eager to hear from him, she doesn't want to make it too easy for him to get her back, or she is testing to see if he is confident enough to pursue her even though she's being unresponsive.

So, if you lose confidence when she doesn't reply or doesn't seem very interested when she replies, you'll never find out the truth.

Then, you may end up missing out on your chance of getting back with her because you didn't believe in yourself in that moment.

Don't make that mistake.

Believe in yourself and in your value to her and don't give up if she doesn't make it super easy for you right away.

Remain confident, re-attract her, seduce her and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ□|

2. Not preparing to attract her in new, exciting ways and instead, expecting to be able to get her back by offering the same old attraction experience as before

Sometimes when a guy gets broken up with, he gets so caught up thinking about how terrible he feels, or how difficult it will be to convince his ex to give him another chance, that he remains stuck at the same level he was at when she broke up with him.

In other words, rather than quickly learn from his mistakes and make some attractive changes to re-attract his ex, he stays the same.

Then, when he then attempts to get her back, she doesn't feel a new spark with him and rejects him.

He may then end up thinking that he should just forget about her and meet other women, even though his gut instinct is telling him that he should get her back and enjoy a new relationship with her.

So, remember: If you donâ□□t use a different approach with her, she probably not going to be interested in getting back into the kind of relationship that she broke up and got away from.

This is why itâ□□s so important that youâ□□re fully prepared to re-attract her when you meet up with her in person.

You've got to be ready to give her the kind of attraction experience that will cause her to feel like she just has to give you another chance, or else she will regret it for the rest of her life.

Make her feel compelled to at least hug you and kiss you again.

When you get to that point, her feelings of attraction will begin flooding back and she will begin to feel sparks of love for you again.

As a result, you can then get her back and enjoy a new relationship with her.

From there, you can decide whether or not you want to stay with her, or dump her and start meeting new women.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ□|

3. Waiting too long to begin the ex back process and losing confidence in himself as a result

After a break up, a guy might decide to wait for 1-3 months before attempting to get his ex woman back.

For example: Some guys think, â□□I need to heal from the pain of being dumped, before I approach my ex again.â□□

Other guys think, â□□Maybe if I give her some time apart, she will start missing me and then be more open to getting back together.â□□

A guy might then wait around for weeks, or even months, while he tries to build up the courage to start the ex back process with her.

Yet, the longer he waits, the more he begins to doubt his chances with her.

He then starts thinking things like, â□□What if she doesnâ□□t want me back after all this time?

What if I contact her and she tells me that she's with someone else now? Maybe it's probably too late to get her back now. I'm sure that she won't want me now, so maybe I should forget about her and just meet other women.

Yet, when he thinks about getting out there and approaching and meeting women, he realizes that he doesn't want that.

He wants her.

Yet, he's too afraid to contact her and begin the ex back process, so he's stuck.

He then spirals into a cycle of negative, insecure thinking, which eats away at whatever remaining confidence he has in himself.

If he then tries to get his ex back or meet other women, he will usually get rejected because they will all sense his emotional weakness and feel turned off by it.

Here's the thing!

Women are attracted to confident men who believe in themselves.

Likewise, women are turned off by insecure men who doubt themselves.

So, if you've been waiting a long time to start the ex back process and have been losing confidence along the way, you must begin to build your confidence back up right now so you can naturally re-attract her.

When you believe in yourself and in your value to her and other women, not only will you be able to attract other beautiful women if you want to, but you will also be able to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She will sense the change in you and will feel attracted to it, even if she doesn't openly admit it.

She will feel as though you really are different now and when you build on her feelings as you talk to her, she will realize that there is still something between you and her.

As a result, you can seduce her and get her back into a relationship, or at least get to a kiss and then sex to see how you both feel after that.

So, if you've been wondering, Should I forget about my ex and just meet other women? because you've lost confidence in yourself and your ability to re-attract her, then start by believing in yourself right now.

When you do, everything will begin to change for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Getting Back Together After Studying Abroad

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways you can make it happen:

1. Don't aim to get a relationship right away

A lot can happen when a couple is apart for a long period of time.

For example: Your ex might have

- Dated other guys for casual sex, or even had another relationship where she fell in love and got her heart broken.
- Become more emotionally mature than she was before the separation and is now not interested in the same things as before (e.g. she used to like to party and live a carefree life and now she is more serious and focused on her studies or career).
- Disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and now only sees you as a friend at best.
- Realized that the relationship you and her had was better than anything else she could find out there.
- Discovered that she no longer wants to be with a guy like you.
- Learned that you are the right kind of guy for her.
- Decided that she no longer wants to be in a relationship and just wants to be free to focus on herself and enjoy being single.

This is why saying something like, "Okay, now that we're back in the same location, so let's pick up where we left off and be a couple again" probably isn't going to work with her.

If she doesn't yet feel ready to commit to the idea of being in a relationship, suggesting getting back together will likely just scare her away.

She may begin to think, "He's asking me out to pick up where we left off, but I can't do that. We're not the same people anymore and I'm not sure if he's still the right guy for me. Besides, I disconnected from my feelings for him so I could cope with being apart and now I'm not sure if they can be switched back on again. I just don't know how I feel about him anymore. I'm confused. Maybe I need to be on my own here for a while. Maybe I need to date some other guys first, to make sure that I'm not getting back with him just because it's familiar."

So, don't put any pressure on her to commit to a relationship.

Instead, just agree to catch up as friends and then see how you both feel from there.

Don't act like a friend though.

Make sure that you behave in a way that naturally sparks her sexual and romantic feelings for you, without you ever pushing for a relationship.

That will make her want you again.

So, from now on, use every interaction that you have with her to reawaken her feelings (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel happy to have you back in her life, showing her that you've grown and matured emotionally since you split up, making her feel feminine and girly in your presence, creating and building up the sexual tension between you and her).

The more she enjoys being around you, the more her defenses will start to slip down.

She will then open up to getting back with you, or at least sleeping with you again to see how she feels afterwards.

2. Get ready to give her an upgraded attraction experience

Your ex has likely grown up a lot since you and her parted ways (especially if she's the one who went abroad to study), so she will need a more mature, masculine approach from you this time around.

This is why you shouldn't try to get her back by using the same old approach to attraction and relationships that you used on the less mature version of her.

For example: A guy and a woman might start dating each other in school or at university.

Initially, they enjoy hanging out together with friends and going to parties, ball games and being carefree and irresponsible.

Eventually, she decides to go abroad to continue with her studies, leaving her guy behind.

When she comes back, he's ready to get back together with her right away, so he starts inviting her out to parties and ball games.

He thinks, "This is what she used to like doing before, so if I invite her to do those things again, we'll be able to pick up where we left off. She will connect with who she used to be and will want to go back to that."

Yet, rather than make her think, "This is so great! It's almost like I never left at all. I love that we slotted back into the same lifestyle we had before," she may be thinking something along the lines of, "I can't believe that after all this time, nothing about him has changed. He's still stuck at the same level he was at when we broke up, while I'm a totally different person now. Yes, I enjoyed doing those things before, but I've grown up now. I want different things. We've grown apart while we have lived apart. I guess we're not meant to be together anymore, so it's best if we just stay broken up. In this way, I will be free to find another guy who is at the same level as me to fall in love with."

She will then either slot him into the friend zone, or cut herself off from him completely (e.g. ignore his texts, social media messages or calls) as a way of letting him know that she's not interested in getting back into a relationship with him.

So, if you want to get back together with your ex after studying abroad, make sure that when you interact with her from now on, you give her a new and improved attraction experience.

For example:

- If you were carefree and irresponsible before, show her that you're now so much more focused on your goals in life and are working towards achieving them, while at the same time still being able to have fun and relax.
- If you were insecure and self-doubting before, show her that you're now so much more confident and self-assured as a man.
- If you were too nice and easily controlled by her before, show her that you're now so much more emotionally stronger and can stand up to her in a dominant, but loving way.

When she can see that you're an upgraded version of the man you were before, the idea of getting back together again will start to seem appealing to her.

On the other hand, if she notices that she has changed and you haven't, she will likely just prefer to stay broken up and focus instead on finding herself a guy who is more similar to her and a better match for who she has become.

3. Be emotionally independent of her, so you don't feel insecure when she talks about what she did while abroad (or what she did while you were abroad)

There's nothing worse than reconnecting with an ex who is talking about how great her life has been since you and her broke up and you have nothing to say (i.e. because you've secretly been sitting around and waiting to get back).

Don't let that happen to you.

If you want to get her back after studying abroad, show her that even though you did miss her and want her back, you were still able to move forward in life and be happy without her.

By the way!

If you've been stuck in a rut since you and her broke up, don't try to get her back into a relationship with you before you become more emotionally independent.

For example: Some of the ways you can quickly become more emotionally independent (i.e. not be needy) is by!

- Taking some real steps towards achieving your big goals and dreams in life.
- Taking up a new active hobby that involves interacting with other people (e.g. take up a sport such as basketball, badminton, tennis or martial arts, join a meet up group in your area, take cooking classes or dancing classes, join a group exercise class that meets up on the weekends).
- Hang out with old friends again, or make new ones.
- Start looking at her as a woman you want back, but don't need back.

When you focus on becoming genuinely happy without her, not only will it bother you less when your ex talks about all the fun things she's been up to since you and her parted, but you will also become more attractive to her (and to women in general).

Women, including ex's, are attracted to good men who are confident, happy and forward moving in life, regardless of what the woman they love says or does.

In other words, women feel attracted to emotionally independent men who treat them well, but don't need them.

4. Don't be afraid to make a move

When a guy is in a situation like yours, he might make the mistake of thinking, What if I move too fast to hug her or kiss her and end up scaring her off? Maybe I just need to take it slowly, hang out with her as friends for a while and let her feelings for me grow over time.

He then hangs around her for weeks, or even months, being a nice, supportive friend to her, while waiting for her to give him a sign that she wants him back sexually and romantically.

In the meantime, she's thinking, Well I guess what we had before is over. There clearly isn't a *spark between us anymore and it's just a friendship now. Oh well, I guess I need to forget about us getting back together again and focus on moving on.*â□□

She then closes herself off and looks to find herself another guy who will attract her and move in for a kiss and then get to sex with her.

So, by the time her ex realizes that he has made a mistake by being too nice and friendly, it's often too late because his ex has moved on and is now in love with someone else.

If you don't want that to happen to you, then don't waste time 'playing it safe' or 'playing it cool' by acting like an innocent, non-sexual friend.

Make her feel sexually attracted to you and then get to a hug, kiss and sex.

5. Start casual and progress to a more serious relationship when ready

If she wants to get back into a serious relationship right away and you want that too, then great â□□ go ahead and commit to each other again.

However, if she isn't pushing for a committed relationship, then just focus on having fun and getting to know each other in a whole new way.

This allows her to relax and enjoy being around you again, without the added pressure of having to decide whether or not she is going to be exclusive with you again.

4 Mistakes to Avoid if You Want Her Back

When attempting to get back together with your ex after studying abroad, try to avoid making these classic mistakes that other guys make when in your situation:

1. Still being at the same level you were at when she broke up with you

If your ex hasn't improved herself and is still at the same level she was at when you and her broke up, then there won't be much of a problem if you have done the same.

Yet, if she has really changed, improved and grown up, but you're still stuck at the same level you were at when you and her split, then she won't be attracted to that anymore.

One of the benefits of a relationship and a thing that makes it so appealing to people, is that you get to grow and become better people together as a couple.

So, if your ex catches up with you and senses that she couldn't grow with you and would have to take a step back or many steps back, then she will feel repelled and won't be interested in being a couple again.

Another mistake isâ□|

2. Being less emotionally strong than her now

When a woman has been apart from a guy for a while, she can get used to being on her own and having to take care of herself emotionally.

Taking care of herself emotionally gives her a sense of confidence and independence that she likely didn't have when in a relationship.

She doesn't feel like she needs a guy to lift her up and make her feel good about herself anymore, which will come across in her body language, behavior and conversation style.

So, when she meets up with her ex guy, she will be looking to see if he is the sort of man who can handle being with a woman who doesn't need to be reassured all the time.

If he feels intimidated by that, then she will lose interest in him and won't want to step down a few levels to be the insecure, self-doubting woman she used to be.

Another mistake isâ€¦!

3. Acting neutral and friendly, but hoping that she feels a spark

If you act friendly or neutral around your ex, she will probably only ever have friendly, neutral, non-sexual feelings for you.

She might even end up seeing your new relationship as like a brother-sister relationship, where you love each other in a friendly way, but there is no sexual spark between you.

So, to get her back, make sure that you actively spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you, rather than pretending that you just want to be her friend.

Of course, itâ€¦s totally fine to be friendly with her, but just make sure youâ€¦re that not pretending to be an innocent friend who isnâ€¦t interested in her in a sexual or romantic way.

Make her want you again sexually and romantically and when you do, the relationship will naturally get back together right away, or very quickly.

Finally, another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

4. Discussing the possibility of having a relationship before youâ€¦ve even gotten to a kiss or had sex with her again

A relationship is what usually happens after a couple gets to kissing and sex.

Prior to that, a couple might be friends or be dating, but they won't officially be boyfriend and girlfriend.

So, if you start discussing getting back into a relationship before youâ€¦ve fully reactivated your ex's with kissing and sex, sheâ€¦s probably not going to be open to the idea.

Instead, she may feel as though you are pressuring into giving you another chance just because you and her used to be together.

Yet, she will want to base her decision on how she feels now, not on how she used to feel when things were good between you and her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Can't Stop Thinking About My Ex During No Contact

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why that will happen to you:

1. 30 or 60 days of No Contact probably isn't going to be enough for you to fully get over her

Fact: The No Contact Rule doesn't work for most guys.

Many guys end up missing their ex woman for many months, years or even decades after the break up.

A guy will try to forget his ex woman, but he will continue to think, â€œShe was the one for me. I don't know if I can ever truly love a woman again because I know that I want her. I just want to be with her again. If I had her back, I would be happy. I know it.â€œ

This is one of the reasons why No Contact just doesn't work for most guys.

A guy is essentially stuck in limbo as he waits for No Contact to miraculously make her come running back to him.

Since he can't stop thinking about her and worrying that she will move on, he becomes even needier for her than ever before.

Then, when he finally gets in touch with her after 30 or 60 days and she senses that he needs her back, she feels even more turned off by him, especially if she is now happy and enjoying life without him.

So, if you want to stop thinking about your ex during No Contact and just start getting her back, the first step is for you to begin feeling emotionally independent (i.e. know that you can and will be happy without her).

This doesn't mean that you don't want her back.

You do and that's okay.

Yet, you need to get rid of the neediness that the NC rule has been making you feel.

How can you begin getting rid of the neediness?

Start by seeing your purpose in life (i.e. your biggest goals, dreams and ambitions) as the most important thing to you, rather than looking at your ex for your sense of identity or purpose in life.

Note: It's completely fine for a man make a woman the most important person in his life, but he shouldn't ever make her the most important thing in his life.

Women resent being the most important thing in your life.

She is happy to become the most important person if she earns it (i.e. by being a good girl to you), but she doesn't want that position if she isn't treating you well or giving you what you want from a relationship.

So, from this moment onwards, in addition to going through the ex back process to get her back, you also need to begin to focus on yourself and on your own dreams and ambitions.

When you do that, something amazing happens.

You naturally become more confident and self-assured.

You feel great about yourself and you feel more valuable as a man.

When that happens, you automatically become more attractive to your ex because you're now displaying some of the characteristics that women are naturally attracted to (e.g. confidence, emotional strength, emotional masculinity, drive and determination, purpose in life)

As a result, when you finally break No Contact and interact with her on a phone call or in person and she sees that you're so much more confident, self-assured and emotionally independent now, she will begin seeing at you as a man that she can now look up to, respect and feel proud to be associated with.

Her guard will then come down and she will open herself up to being in a relationship with you once again.

On the other hand, if all you do during No Contact is waste time thinking about her and not making any progress in your life without her, when you finally interact with her, she will sense that you've been stuck and lost without her.

She will say something along the lines of, "Look, it's been so long since we talked that I've moved on already. There's no chance of us getting back together now, so please accept that and don't contact me again. Okay? Thanks for calling, but you've got to accept that it's over between us. We had our chance, but that chance has now passed. Goodbye."

So, don't waste time with the NC rule when it won't work on your ex.

If you want her back for real, you should take control of the ex back process rather than messing up your chances by thinking that all women fall for the no contact trick.

Another common reason why you can't stop thinking about your ex during No Contact is

2. You've been focused on the problem, rather than on the solution

What is the problem?

Thinking things like, "She doesn't want to be with me anymore," "It's been a couple of weeks since we broke up and she still hasn't contacted me," "Why isn't she missing me as much as I'm missing her?" or, "What if I call her after the No Contact period is over and she rejects me?"

Thinking like that doesn't get you anywhere.

It's just focusing on the problem and not on the solution.

When you focus on the problem and think that you have no chance with her, it can erode your confidence and belief in yourself, which might then prevent you from taking action to get her back or turn her off when she senses your insecurity and self-doubt.

So, what should you do instead?

Start re-attracting her.

The No Contact Rule says you need to wait at least 30 days before you contact your ex, but the question you need to ask yourself is, "Do I want to get my ex back as quickly as possible, or do I want to mess around for a few weeks or months waiting and hoping that she magically comes running back to me for some reason?"

In almost all ex back cases, for a man to get a woman back, he needs to be active rather than passive about the ex back process.

In other words, he needs to actively interact with his ex woman (e.g. on the phone and in person) and make her feel sparks of respect, sexual attraction and love for him again, so she naturally wants to get back with him now or soon after.

This is why you need to stop sitting around thinking about the problem (i.e. you're trying the no contact approach and it's not working) and start focusing on implementing a real, practical solution to get her back now or very soon.

By the way

Based on my vast experience helping thousands of men to get ex women back, I've found that there's absolutely no reason why a man should cut off contact for more than 7 days.

A week (or 7 days) proves the point that you're not being needy and desperate.

After that (or sooner in many cases), you need to contact her and start re-attracting her, so she naturally wants you back.

Another common reason why you can't stop thinking about your ex during No Contact is

3. You know that she doesn't have much or any motivation to pursue you

In most cases, a woman will break up with a guy when she has reached a point in the relationship where she is completely fed up with him (e.g. she has given him a number of chances to change and improve and he always goes back to making the same old mistakes).

So, if her ex uses the No Contact Rule as his way of hopefully getting her back, rather than make her panic and think, "On no! Why is he ignoring me? What could that mean? Is it possible that he's over me? Could he already have found someone else? I have to get him back!" she will simply feel relieved that her ex isn't pursuing her, because she no longer has feelings for him anyway.

She then uses the space to move on with a new guy and forget about her ex.

In the meantime, because her ex isn't doing anything to re-attract her, he will be worrying about whether or not the NC rule is going to work on her.

He might then spend weeks or even months waiting for her to miss him enough to reach out to him, only to eventually find out that she's over him, has moved on and is possibly even in love with a new man.

So, here's what you need to get clear on

If your ex doesn't have romantic feelings for you anymore, your absence from her life probably won't be enough to make her want you back.

She will probably just use the time apart to move on and begin enjoying life without you.

Another common reason why you can't stop thinking about your ex during No Contact is

4. You're worried that she will find another guy more interesting and attractive and then stop missing you

Sometimes a guy feels very lucky to have gotten with his woman because she is more beautiful, interesting and appealing than any other woman he has ever dated.

As a result, in the relationship, he may end up thinking, “She’s way out of my league. If we ever break up, she will be able to find herself another guy who is much better than me (i.e. more good looking, has more money, is more successful), but I will be left behind heartbroken and won’t be able to attract a woman of her quality easily.”

If they break up and he then decides to use No Contact as a way of getting her back, he probably won’t be able to stop thinking about her during that time.

He will be worrying as he imagines her hooking up with another guy and enjoying it more than she enjoyed it with him.

Another common reason why you can’t stop thinking about your ex during No Contact is

5. You’re using the wrong approach for your situation

No Contact usually only works if a woman has strong feelings for her ex, can’t deal with the pain of the break up, or can’t easily find a replacement guy.

In pretty much every other situation, a woman will be happy not to be hearing from her ex because it will give her more time to find someone else and move on.

So, if No Contact hasn’t worked on her after a week, it probably won’t work at all and you may end up losing your ex to another guy.

This is why I recommend that you contact her right away (preferably on a phone call, or even better, see her in person) and start re-attracting her sexually and romantically.

Make her laugh and smile and feel good to be hearing from you again.

Flirt with her to reawaken some of her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

The more attracted you make her feel when interacting with her, the more open she will become to getting back with you.

So, stop ignoring her and get the job done.

Get her back, rather than hiding away behind the NC rule and hoping that it will work on her one day.

You can use the NC approach if you want, but based on my vast experience helping guys to get women back, No Contact probably isn’t going to work for you.

What I see work, day in and day out, is when a man actively re-attracts his ex woman and then doesn’t push for a relationship.

In other words, he makes her want him again and then doesn’t put any pressure on her to commit to anything.

He then naturally starts to feel drawn to him, opens up and he can then get her back.

3 Common Problems That Guys Encounter When Using No Contact On an Ex Woman

If you decide to use No Contact on your ex and ignore her for 30 or 60 days, make sure you’re prepared for the following possible consequences

1. She never contacts you ever again

When a woman breaks up with a guy, itâ€™s usually because she has lost so much respect and attraction for him that the idea of staying in a relationship with him makes her feel miserable.

So, when she doesnâ€™t hear from him after the break up, rather than getting upset and thinking, *â€œOh no! Heâ€™s not calling me. This is terrible. I need to get in touch with him right away in case he meets another woman and moves on,*â€ she feels happy and relieved.

She then moves on and begins to forget about her ex.

Then, when her ex finally gets in touch with her after 30 or 60 days, he is shocked to discover that she has moved on and is happy without him.

Another possible consequence to using No Contact isâ€

2. She wants to contact you, but doesn't contact you because she's afraid of being rejected

In some cases, even though they are broken up, a woman will still have some feelings for her ex.

Secretly, she will hope they can work things out and get back together.

Yet, when she doesnâ€™t hear from him, she naturally starts to doubt his feelings for her.

She may ask herself, *â€œWhy isnâ€™t he calling me? I really thought he still cared for me and that we had a chance of getting back together. His actions arenâ€™t showing me that though. Instead, Iâ€™m getting the feeling that heâ€™s already moved on, or that he doesn't care enough to get me back. Maybe I should phone him to see why heâ€™s ignoring me, but I'm worried that he will reject me and tell me that he doesn't want anything to do with me anymore. Well, I guess I'm going to have to forget about him and try to move on instead.*â€

She then puts in all of her effort into getting over him (often by quickly getting into a new relationship with a guy that has had a crush on her, or hooking up with new guys until she finds one who wants a relationship) and moving on.

Then, when her ex finally gets in touch, she says something along the lines of, *â€œI'm not sure why you're calling me now. I honestly believed that you and I had a chance, but clearly you didn't care to try. I thought you had moved on, so I forced myself to do the same. Iâ€™m with someone else now and I'm happy, so itâ€™s too late for us. Please donâ€™t call me again.*â€

Another consequence to using No Contact could beâ€

3. She contacts you out of curiosity, but youâ€™re not ready to make her feel attracted, so she loses interest

Sometimes a woman will wonder, *â€œWhy isnâ€™t he calling me? What is he up to?*â€ and will then make the first move to contact her ex.

Yet, when she gets in touch and experiences the same old guy with the same type of insecurities and underlying issues that caused her to break up with him in the first place (e.g. he lacks confidence and self-belief, is submissive around her, he hasnâ€™t grown up and matured), she makes an excuse to hang up the phone or stop texting.

If he then tries to call her again, she will either just ignore him outright, or she will say something like, â€œLook, we can still be friends if you want, but nothing more. Iâ€™m not interested in being *in a relationship with you anymore. I'm sorry if I gave you the wrong idea.*â€œ

Heâ€œs then left wondering why No Contact didnâ€œt work on her.

Hereâ€œs the thingâ€œ!

No Contact is not the magic solution to fixing a broken relationship with any woman.

In fact, cutting off contact and waiting for a woman to come back often causes even more problems than it fixes.

So what should you do instead?

Firstly, donâ€œt ignore your ex for longer than a week.

Then, get her on a call, make her laugh, smile and feel good to be hearing from you.

Then, get her to agree to catch up with you and say in person.

Then, at the meet up, fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Important: Make sure that you are fully prepared to re-attract her at the meet up.

Don't just meet up with her, be nice and friendly and hope that she will want you back.

When you meet up with her, you have to be ready to re-attract her sexually and romantically and then at least get to a hug and potentially a kiss.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Want to Be a Family Again With My Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 things that you can do to make it happen:

1. Don't let her sense that you're aiming for that, unless she clearly wants it too

Although you might desperately want to be a family again with your ex, it's not something you should share with her until you're 100% sure that it's what she wants as well.

If you're too eager and begin to pressure her to commit to a relationship before you've re-attracted her and had sex again, you'll likely just scare her off.

She might then say, "Look, I know you mean well, but it's over between us. Please accept that and move on."

A woman doesn't want to be pressured into a relationship with a guy if she doesn't feel the same way about him as he does for her.

So, to avoid scaring her off, what you need to do is stop trying to get her back into a relationship right away and focus instead on having fun together and then getting to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

Remember: Getting back into a serious relationship is the last step of the ex back process, not the first.

You want a relationship with her and to be a family again, but she's not there yet.

You've got to make her want you back, sexually and romantically, before she will want to be a family with you again.

So, from now on, use any interactions with her (e.g. on the phone and especially in person) to make her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you again.

The more you do that, the more she will be able to relax and reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

Then, get to a hug, kiss and eventually sex, so she can see that there is still something between you and her other than a friendship.

Then, the idea of being a family with you again will happen naturally, because it feels good for both of you.

On the other hand, if you let her sense that the only reason you're interacting with her is because you want to be a family again, she will probably close herself off from you even more.

Another thing you can do to make your ex want to be a family again is

2. Make her feel new, interesting types of attraction when she interacts with you

In most cases, a woman won't break up with a man unless she feels that she can no longer look up to him, respect him, feel sexually attracted to him and love him as her man.

So, if you want to be a family again with your ex, you first need to understand what caused her to feel turned off by you during the relationship.

You then need to quickly prepare yourself to offer her a new and exciting attraction experience that will make her want you again.

By the way

If you're unclear about what you might need to change or adjust to begin offering her a more appealing attraction experience, start by asking yourself these questions:

- Did you continue to display the behaviors and personality traits that first attracted her to you, or did all that change during the course of your relationship (e.g. were you initially confident, emotionally independent and someone she could rely on, but you eventually became insecure and lost as a man)?
- Did you make her feel the way she wanted to feel in a relationship with you (e.g. loved, appreciated, desired), or did you take her for granted and made her feel like your friends or hobbies were always more important than her?
- Did you and her have the same kind of dream for a future together, or did you want different things?
- Was she able to relax and be a feminine woman around you, or did she have to be the stronger one in the relationship and make all the decisions for the family?
- Did you rise through the levels of your true potential as a man by following through on what you feel is your purpose in life, or did you end up making the mistake of seeing her as your purpose and goal in life?

If you can understand the real, hidden reasons why your ex disconnected from her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love, you can then make some quick changes to the way you interact with her from now on.

When you begin to think, behave, act and respond to her in ways that spark feelings of attraction inside of her, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

For example: Imagine that you meet up with her for a coffee and she says something along the lines of, I know that you don't want to accept it, but it's over between us. We're never going to be a family again. You need to get over it and move on. I don't want to be a family anymore.

She might be expecting you to react in your old ways (e.g. get upset, beg her to change her mind, plead with her to think of the children, appear dejected and heartbroken, try hard to discuss the relationship with her to get her to see your point of view, appear stressed or tense).

Yet, this time, you respond by laughing and in a light-hearted, confident tone of voice, say something along the lines of, Okay, it's over between us. I accept that. However, not being a family anymore doesn't stop us from being friends. We're mature adults and we can do that, without it meaning that we have to get back together. Our relationship is over, so let's stop worrying about relationships and focus on enjoying our friendship for what it is now.

By saying something like that to your ex, not only are you responding differently to the way she's expecting you to, but you're also showing her that you're now at a different level than you were when you and her broke up (e.g. you're now more confident and self-assured, you're more emotionally mature, you're no longer feeling desperate and needy to get the family back together, you're doing fine without her, you're not pressuring her to want a relationship when she's not even attracted to you).

As a result, she can then begin to enjoy being around the new and improved you, without worrying that it means you and her are getting back together.

Yet, when she does that, she then drops her guard and opens herself up to feeling attracted to you again, which then allows you to seduce her and get her back.

Another thing you can do to make your ex want to be a family again isâ€¦|

3. Build on her desire by creating sexual tension

One of the quickest ways to make a woman want you back is building up the sexual tension between you, to the point where she wants to release the tension with kissing and sex.

Then, when sex happens, she becomes a lot more open to working on the relationship or at least seeing each other for a while to see how things go.

So, if you want to get your family back, your initial focus needs to be on building sexual tension and then releasing it together in a sexual act of some kind.

For example: Imagine that youâ€¦re in a coffee shop with your ex.

You and her are having a normal conversation, but you're also adding in some humor to lighten the mood and make her feel relaxed in your presence.

When she seems to be enjoying herself, you can then say something along the lines of, â€œBy the wayâ€¦is that a new lipstick youâ€¦re wearing? It looks great on you. Mmmmâ€¦very kissable.â€œ

Then, just relax back into ordinary conversation once again.

Since you talked about her lips being kissable, she will naturally have to at least imagine you and her kissing.

If you had been making her feel attracted prior to saying that, then, when she imagined you and her kissing, she would have liked how it felt.

As a result, sexual tension will begin to build up between you and her.

From there, continue to build up the sexual tension in other ways during the interaction and then go back to normal conversation to let the tension sit there between you and her.

She will then begin to feel surges of sexual desire for you and will start to think things like, â€œI canâ€¦t believe heâ€¦s making me feel this way again. I really thought it was over between us, but I canâ€¦t deny that we still have so much chemistry between us. It's kind of like the old days. Why do I want to kiss him all of a sudden? Maybe it doesn't have to be over between him and I.â€œ

When the moment is right, you can then lean in and give her a quick, innocent kiss on the lips and smile at her as you pull away.

BTW: If she pulls away from your initial attempt to kiss her, donâ€¦t worry about it at all.

Just maintain your confidence, smile and say something along the lines of, â€œIt was good to catch up and say hiâ€¦we should do it again sometime.â€œ

This will make her feel even more desire for you for being man enough to handle her 'rejection' in such a confident way.

Another thing you can do to make your ex want to be a family again isâ€¦|

4. Let her see that you'd be such a better dad and boyfriend/husband this time around

Let her see that you really have changed and have gone beyond the level you were at when you and her split up.

Don't tell her; show her.

If you can't show her that you have already changed for real, she's going to be thinking, How can I trust him to take care of our family after everything that he did in the past? It would be stupid of me to put myself and our kids back in a situation like that again. Before I let him back into our lives, I need to know for sure that things really will be different this time around.

So, you need to prove it to her based on your behavior, actions and the way you now react to her and to life in general.

For example: Some of the things your ex may be looking for are that!

- You're now a much more loving, caring and attentive husband/boyfriend, but you don't let her push you around and get away with being disrespectful towards you or with treating you badly. You still have a backbone and are a man that she can look up to and respect, but you're more loving and understanding now.
- You no longer feel upset or left out when she talks about how important the children/her career is to her.
- You now support her and encourage her to pursue her dreams, while also focusing on achieving your big dreams and goals in life.
- You now use humor to change her mood from angry to happy, rather than losing control of your emotions and getting into an unnecessary argument or fight.
- You're now more responsible and she can rely on you to keep your word when you promise to do something (e.g. pick up the children from school, run an errand, fix something around the home, stop getting angry at her for little things).
- You now make her feel like a desirable woman again, rather than allowing the everyday problems and responsibilities of life to kill the sexual spark between you and her.
- You now have a plan for your life together as a family and you're motivated, focused and active in pursuing that plan, rather than aimlessly drifting through life or continuing to fail at things that you try.

When your ex can see for herself that if she gave you another chance, you wouldn't let her (or your children) down this time, she will be much more open to the idea of giving you another chance.

Once again though, don't tell her that you have changed and then ask for another chance.

Show her that you have changed and then build up sexual tension between you and her, so she naturally begins to want you in a sexual and romantic way.

Another thing you can do to make your ex want to be a family again is!

5. Make her want to be back together as a family once again, but don't pressure her into it

Although you're very certain about wanting to be a family again (i.e. because you still love her, you believe she is the one, you miss your children, you know that you will do a better job this time around), pushing her to get back together before she feels 100% sure is the fastest way to scare her off.

So, from now on, stop putting any pressure on her to get back together and just focus on re-attracting her and having fun whenever you talk to each other.

For example: Every time you interact with her (on a phone call and especially in person), just put your focus on making her smile, laugh and feel at ease.

The more she enjoys herself during interactions with you, the more she will be able to relax and reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

She will then start to want a relationship again for her own reasons (e.g. because she feels good being around you again, she misses the way you used to be a happy family together, she feels she can trust you to be a responsible parent and share the load now, she feels desirable again, she is curious about why she wants to kiss you and maybe have sex with you again).

From there, getting back together again happens naturally, because itâs feels good for both you and her to go through the reconciliation process together.

4 Mistakes to Avoid Making When Trying to Be a Family Again With Your Ex

Some of the things that might keep you from getting your family back areâ

1. Trying to be a family again by talking about the importance of being a family unit

Sometimes a man will try to convince his ex woman to get back together by giving her a bunch of reasons why he thinks they should be together.

For example: He might say things like, âLook, weâve had our differences, but isnât our family worth making some sacrifices for? We owe it to our children to try and make this relationship work. Besides, havenât you read all the statistics about how negatively a separation or divorce affects the children? Do you want our children to suffer? What kind of future example would we setting if we donât at least try to be a family again? We would be teaching our children that relationships are destined to fail. We canât do that to them. They deserve to have a strong family unit to model their future relationships on, so they can be happy.â

Yet, regardless of whether his arguments are valid or not, a woman doesnât have to stay with a man due to logical arguments.

Instead, her willingness and desire to stay is based on how she feels.

In other words, if you make your ex fall back in love with you, then she will go with how she feels and get back with you.

However, if you try to convince her with logic or make her feel guilty about her choices, then she will resent you for trying to manipulate her into being with you.

The best approach to getting a woman back is to honestly make her feel respect, attraction and love for the new and improved you.

When you do that, she wants you back on her own, without you having to pressure her into it.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

2. Trying hard to impress her by being way too generous or helpful

Sometimes a man might try to show his ex woman that he is willing to take care of her and the children by paying for most of her expenses (e.g. grocery bills, rent, gas for her car, school fees).

He might also make himself available to her every beck and call (e.g. run errands for her, watch the children so she can have a girls night out, fix things around her house).

Secretly, heâ€™s hoping she will realize how necessary he is for her survival and she will then give him another chance.

Yet, although a woman might appreciate that heâ€™s being so generous, itâ€™s not the main thing that will change her feelings for him.

What will?

He needs to show her that heâ€™s changed in the ways that actually matter to her (e.g. heâ€™s more confident now, he is actively pursuing his goals in life, heâ€™s stopped socializing with friends who were irresponsible and influenced him in a negative way, he's now able to talk to her in a way that makes her feel sexually attracted).

The fact is that a woman doesnâ€™t feel sexually and romantically attracted to a guy because of what he can do or buy for her.

That might work initially, if a woman wants to use a guy, but in the long run, being her lackey/sucking up to her/giving her all the power/making her your purpose in life does not work.

If you want her to want you back, you need to start attracting her in the ways that actually matter to her.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Never knowing the real, secret and very subtle things that turned her off in the relationship

A woman wonâ€™t always tell a guy her secret reasons for breaking up with him.

Instead, she might say something like, â€œThis isnâ€™t working anymore. Weâ€™re always fighting and arguing and itâ€™s just too stressful for us and the kids. I think itâ€™s best if we separate.â€

She doesn't tell him what he needs to change to get her back, because she doesn't want to take on that role for him.

This is why you need to get to the bottom of what really caused your ex to break up with you (e.g. were you too emotionally needy, so she felt stifled in the relationship? Did you put your work ahead of everything else and only gave her scraps of your time and attention, so she end up feeling like you took her for granted? Did you lack ambition, so she ended up feeling uncertain about her future with you? Did you give her too much power in the relationship? Did you end up becoming a softer, more sensitive version of yourself, rather than being the confident man she fell in love with?).

If you donâ€™t uncover her real, secret reasons for leaving, you may end up trying to get her back by offering her things that she doesn't even care about, which will make her feel as though you don't understand her and probably never will.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

4. Being neutral around her and expecting her to feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for that

To avoid scaring his ex away, a man might decide to be neutral around his ex woman to show her that he's not interested in anything sexual (e.g. heâ€¦s very nice and polite, he doesnâ€¦t flirt with her or show that he still feels attracted to her, he acts like a helpful friend, he talks as though they are brother and sister, rather than lovers who could fall in love again).

He hopes that she'll notice that he isn't pressuring her to get back together and just wants to get along with her in a nice, friendly way.

He hopes that she will then want him back because of that.

Yet, thatâ€¦s not how the ex back process works.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why is My Ex Girlfriend Lying About Having a New Boyfriend?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will lie about that to her ex:

1. She wants the best of both worlds

Sometimes a woman will lie about having a new boyfriend to her ex because she likes the idea of having two guys who are interested in her at the same time.

She has a new guy, but her ex is also pursuing her, so she feels twice as valuable.

This boosts her self-esteem and makes her feel really good about herself.

When both guys want her, she can then think to herself, â€œCool! This is great! Now I have a new boyfriend that I can do sexual and romantic things with and I also have my ex chasing after me, who seems to be available whenever I need someone to talk to, or when I need a favor. It feels good to know that my new boyfriend finds me desirable, while at the same time, my ex canâ€™t get over me either. If things donâ€™t work out with my new guy, I know that my ex will be there waiting for me, so I never have to be alone. Iâ€™ve got this sorted!â€œ

So, donâ€™t let her see you as her back up guy.

Youâ€™ve got to make her see you as being better than him and then hook up with her and get her back.

She is your woman, so get her back and make her new boyfriend history.

Use every interaction that you have with her from now on to reawaken her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, so she starts doubting her feelings for her new boyfriend.

This makes her look at you in a more positive light and realize that you probably are the right guy for her after all.

When that happens, she opens back up to you and you can guide her back into a relationship with you and only you.

Another common reason why your ex girlfriend could be lying about having a new boyfriend isâ€œ

2. Sheâ€™s worried that you might create drama

Sometimes a woman fears that her ex man might cause a scene, if she tells him that she has a new boyfriend.

For example: He might start begging, pleading, crying and saying things like, â€œHow could you do this to me? Didnâ€™t our love mean anything to you? How could you be dating a new guy already? Please give me one more chance. I will do anything to make things right between us and show you that no other guy can love you the way I do! Please baby, please.â€œ

She will then have to deal with him falling apart in front of her, or on a phone call.

She may then have to try to calm him down by saying things that she doesnâ€™t mean, â€œOkay, I promise that we will talk about our relationship. You have to calm down first though. If youâ€™re being like this, then I donâ€™t want to talk to youâ€œ or, â€œOkay, I will think about giving you one more *chance if you stop crying.*â€œ

So, rather than getting dragged into that kind of drama, she just lies and says that she doesn't have a new boyfriend.

Alternatively, a woman might fear that her ex will lose his temper with her and become aggressive or even violent if she comes out and tells him that she had a new boyfriend.

So, she protects herself from a potential attack by lying about her new guy.

Of course, you know that you're a good guy and probably wouldn't react in ways like that, right?

Yet, for your ex girlfriend, the old saying of *â€œBetter safe than sorry,*â€œ will usually be part of her exit strategy from a relationship.

If she's worried about you creating drama or getting very angry, she would rather lie to you than risk having to deal with an emotional outburst of some kind.

So, does reason #2 apply to you and her?

If not, here is another common reason why your ex girlfriend could be lying about having a new boyfriendâ€¦

3. She isn't proud enough of her new boyfriend to show him off to you

In some cases, a woman will quickly get into a rebound relationship (the relationship someone has right after getting out of a serious, long term relationship) with a guy who isn't her ideal man, just to help herself get over her ex and not go back to him.

As a result, she might not be very proud of her new guy, so she doesn't want you to know about him.

For example: He might beâ€¦

- Very plain looking, or even a bit ugly compared to you.
- Insecure and self-doubting compared to how confident you are.
- Less educated compared to you, her or the people she hangs out with (e.g. she's a successful business woman, but her new guy is a blue collar worker who is into drugs, getting drunk all the time or other things that she wants to keep quiet).
- Lacking in social etiquette compared to her (e.g. she's soft spoken and polite, while he likes to talk loudly and tends swear a lot and get into fights).
- Wimpy and easily bossed around by her and other people.
- Married and only be sleeping with her on the side.
- An old friend who has always loved her, but she has never really felt much attraction for him.

So, she will think something like, *â€œHe's okay for now, but he's not the kind of guy that I want in the long term. I'll just use him to get over my ex and to stop my ex from trying to get me back. Then, when things have calmed down and he has begun to move on, I can dump my new guy and find the man of my dreams.*â€œ

Of course, if the new guy knows how to build on her feelings in the relationship, she might go from not being proud enough to show him off, to telling everyone (including her ex) that he is the man she loves and wants to be with for life.

On the other hand, if he fails to build on her feelings, she will never fully commit herself to being his woman and will probably break up with him as soon as can find a suitable replacement.

Another common reason why your ex girlfriend could be lying about having a new boyfriend isâ€¦|

4. She cheated on you with him before breaking up with you and doesn't want you to find out

If she did cheat on you before the break up and you find out about that, then she becomes the one who messed things up.

The break up becomes her fault and she doesn't want that to happen because at the moment, she has been able to break up with you and walk away as though she did nothing wrong.

To avoid feeling guilty for cheating on you and betraying you in the way she did, she can focus on all the mistakes that you made in the relationship and blame you the break up.

So, if your ex girlfriend is lying about having a new boyfriend, a potential reason why is that she is trying to protect her self-image.

She wants you to feel as though the break up was 100% your fault, when in fact, she is the one who messed up and betrayed you by cheating on you.

Important: If she did that to you and you want to get her back, make sure that you don't go to her now and say, â€œI know that you cheated on me with him before breaking up with me. Shame on you. The break up is all your fault.â€

Blaming her won't work.

So, what should you do instead?

You need to follow the same ex back process that you would follow if she hadn't cheated on you.

You need to re-attract her, seduce her into kissing you and having sex with you and then make her want to get back with you.

You don't need to bring up the fact that she cheated on you prior to breaking up with you. If you want to, you can, but you don't need to do it.

If you want the relationship to work, just focus on building on her feelings from there and making sure that she never wants to cheat on you again.

When you build on her feelings and make her fall back in love with you, she will almost certainly reach a point where she cries, apologizes and asks for your forgiveness.

She will then try to be the best girlfriend she can be for you, to prove that she would never do that again.

If you then maintain the power in the relationship, she won't ever want to cheat on you again.

Another common reason why your ex girlfriend could be lying about having a new boyfriend isâ€¦|

5. She's not sure if she wants to keep going out with him or get back with you

In some cases, a woman simply can't make up her mind about how she feels about a guy.

On one hand, she might be thinking things like, â€œI love being in a new relationship. It feels so exciting and fun. I enjoy being treated like a princess by my new boyfriend.â€

Yet, on the other hand, she will be thinking, â€œI do miss my ex though. I know that he made some mistakes and turned me off, but deep down I know he still loves me and if he changes, I could *definitely see myself with him in the long term. I feel so confused right now. Should I just give up on my ex and focus on building a new relationship, or should I give my ex another chance and see where things go from there?*â€œ

Since she can't make up her mind and choose between you and him, she lies and says that she doesn't have a new boyfriend, to keep her options open with her ex.

Here's the thing though!

If you want your ex back, you shouldn't waste time and energy stressing out while you wait for her to decide between you and her new man.

Instead, make the decision easy for her by re-attracting her and making her feel more respect, attraction and love for you than for him (e.g. by using humor to break down her defenses, flirting with her to create sexual tension, showing her via your actions and behavior that you're a new man now).

When she can see that her feelings for her new boyfriend pale in comparison to what she feels for you now, she will want to dump him and come back to you.

However, if you just sit around asking, *â€œWhy is my ex girlfriend lying about having a new boyfriend?*â€œ and doing nothing to re-attract her sexually and romantically, the other guy will likely sweep her off her feet and you may end up losing her forever.

4 Ways That Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Back Who is Lying About Having a New Boyfriend

Here's where other guys mess up when in a situation like yours!

1. Trying to make her feel guilty for making him feel so sad, confused and upset

You might be feeling a range of emotions about how your ex girlfriend has been lying to you (e.g. you might be feeling upset, annoyed, angry, confused, betrayed, lost, heartbroken, disappointed).

However, as tempted as you may feel to say something along the lines of, *â€œWhy are you lying to me? Why can't you just tell me the truth about what's going on with you? I know that we're not together anymore, but we did love each other before. So, based on that, you at least owe me the courtesy of being honest with me now. I don't understand why you're being like this. Does messing with my head make you feel good?*â€œ it's just not going to work.

Trying to make a woman feel guilty for not wanting to tell you the truth about her personal life (i.e. whether she has a new boyfriend or not) rarely makes her open up and tell you.

Instead, she becomes even more stubborn and thinks things like, *â€œHow dare he demand things of me. We're not even together anymore and contrary to what he believes, I don't owe him an explanation at all. If I don't want to tell him the truth about what's going on with me, I don't have to. He doesn't own me. I have my reasons for lying to him anyway. Why can't he see that? Does he have to make me spell everything out for him?*â€œ

So, rather than trying to guilt your ex girlfriend into being honest with you (which, even if it works, isn't necessarily going to make her want you back), just focus on re-attracting her sexually and romantically whenever you interact with her.

The more sexual and romantic attraction she feels for you, the more willing and even happy she will be to open back up to you.

When that happens, you can then build on her feelings and get her back.

Another mistake that guys often make in these circumstances isâ€¦

2. Asking her if she loves her new guy more than she loved him

Sometimes a guy will ask his ex something along the lines of, â€œJust tell me the truth. Do you love him more than you loved me when we were happy?â€

Secretly, heâ€™s hoping that she will crack under the pressure and come out and say, â€œNo! I was just so sad about us breaking up and I got with him so you wouldnâ€™t see how much I still care about you! Of course I donâ€™t love him more than you! Youâ€™re the guy that I truly want to be with, but because weâ€™ve broken up, Iâ€™ve had to settle for what I can get and try to move on.â€

He can then sweep her off her feet and they can get back together again.

Yayyy!!!

Unfortunately, something like that typically only happens in the movies.

In real life, when a guy asks his ex if she loves her new boyfriend more than him, she will usually feel turned off by what she perceives as his emotional neediness and insecurity.

Then, based on her exâ€™s unattractive approach to her, she will compare him to her new boyfriend who is most likely feeling more confident around her (and thus more attractive to her) and she will then say, â€œYes, I do. Iâ€™m sorry, but I do.â€

Hereâ€™s what you always need to remember: All women, including ex women, respond positively to a manâ€™s confidence.

So, when you are confident about your attractiveness to her no matter what she says or does to try to make you doubt yourself, then she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you again, even if she doesnâ€™t want to admit it.

Once you make her feel attracted to you again, you can then build on her feelings and get her back.

On the other hand, if you appear insecure and self-doubting, she will close herself off from you even more and focus on moving on with her new boyfriend, or another guy.

Another mistake guys make isâ€¦

3. Asking her if sheâ€™s happy

If you ask your ex girlfriend if she is happy with her new guy, donâ€™t be surprised if she responds with something along the lines of, â€œYes, Iâ€™m very happy. In fact, Iâ€™m happier than Iâ€™ve ever been before.â€

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Even if she isnâ€™t happy with him, sheâ€™s probably not going to come out and say that to you.

Instead, sheâ€™s going to say whatever it takes to show you that sheâ€™s okay and moving on without you.

So, by asking her if sheâ€™s happy, youâ€™re not going to achieve anything positive for yourself and are just going to end up feeling worse about losing her.

At the same time, you will also be giving her the satisfaction of knowing that you still want her and are hoping that she leaves her new guy for you.

Don't put yourself in that position.

You've got to approach the ex back process in a way that causes her to regret her decision to leave you and then want to give you another chance.

Another mistake guys make is

4. Pretending to be happy that she has a new boyfriend, when he isn't happy about it

Sometimes, as a way of covering up his feelings, a guy will say something like, "Well, I'm glad you've met someone else. I'm happy for you. I only want what's best for you."

He may then pretend to be over her and act as though he's not interested in getting her back.

Yet, all a woman has to do is say something along the lines of, "Well, I'm not really that happy with my new boyfriend. To be honest, I just can't stop thinking about you. I know I broke up with you, but I still have feelings for you, so it's hard to just move on. Yet, I guess you're over me, right? So I have to accept that and try to move on with my new guy," to catch her ex out in his lie.

If her ex then quickly says something like, "No! I didn't say I was over you! Of course I still love you and want you back" she will know that he was only pretending to be happy for her as a way of hopefully making her feel attracted to him for being so independent.

As a result, she will not only lose more respect for him, but she will also feel like she is in the power position and he is still trying to get her back.

So, don't pretend to be happy for your ex and her new boyfriend if you're not.

If your ex catches you out in lie, it will make it that much harder for you to get her back.

So, be honest about how you feel and what you want.

That doesn't mean you should be soppy and pour your heart out to her.

It simply means that when you interact with her, you don't pretend to be her neutral friend.

Flirt with her to build up sexual tension between you and her.

Make her feel drawn to you and want to hug you, kiss you and have sex with you again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Doesn't Want an Exclusive Relationship Right Now

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will tell her ex that she doesn't want an exclusive relationship right now:

1. She just wants a casual sex relationship without all the responsibilities of a committed relationship

After a break up, a woman might want to enjoy being single for a while, rather than be restricted by a committed relationship.

So, if her ex tries to get her to commit to a relationship, she might say something along the lines of, I'm sorry, but I don't want an exclusive relationship right now. Maybe sometime in the future we can get back together again, but for now, I just want to be on my own and enjoy life.

Essentially, she's hoping that he will then give up on trying to get her back, so she can focus on enjoying sex without the responsibilities of a committed relationship.

He still can get her back, but his approach should not be about trying to get a relationship.

Instead, he needs to make her regret breaking up with him!

When you reactivate your ex's sexual and romantic feelings for you, but don't push for a relationship, her desire to sleep around will begin fade away.

She will be thinking about you and how you now make her feel and will naturally begin to worry that she has made a mistake.

She will also begin to worry that if you attract a new woman and move on, she will be the one being left behind.

As a result, she feels the need to open up to you again and give the relationship another try, or at least sleep together again to see how she feels afterwards.

On the other hand, if you keep trying to get her back without first reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you, she will keep saying, I'm sorry, but I don't want an exclusive relationship right now. Please accept that and move on.

So, make sure that you approach the ex back process correctly.

If you approach it correctly, you can get another chance with her, but if you approach it in the way you have been up until now, she's almost certainly going to keep rejecting you.

Another common reason why a woman will say that she doesn't want an exclusive relationship right now is!

2. She is interested in another guy and is trying to keep you out of the way

In some cases, a woman might already have her eye on another guy that she's hoping to get into a relationship with, or at least hook up with for a while.

Understandably, she might not want to tell her ex about that in case he reacts in a negative way (e.g. he starts to cry and beg her to reconsider her decision, he becomes angry with her and possibly reacts in an aggressive or even violent way, he tries to talk her out of moving on, he bombards her with texts or phone calls, he turns up at her home or work and demands that she talk with him and work things out).

So, rather than put herself in a position where she might have to deal with a confrontation, she just makes an excuse of not wanting an exclusive relationship right now, in the hope that her ex will give up and let her go, or at least give her some space so she can attract and seduce the guy she is interested.

This is why, if you want your ex back, you shouldn't sit around waiting for her to give you the go ahead.

Instead, take control of the situation by actively re-attracting her on a phone call or in person.

When you make her feel the kind of emotions that she wants to feel with a guy (e.g. excited, attracted, turned on, aroused), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

Even though she initially thought that she wanted to be with another guy, suddenly he isn't as appealing as she once thought.

She then opens herself up to the idea of being your girl again.

However, if you just wait for her to come back to you without doing anything to reawaken her feelings for you, she will soon go from saying that she doesn't want an exclusive relationship right now to saying, I'm in love with someone else and it looks like it's getting serious. I'm sorry, but I can't talk to you anymore. Please don't contact me again.

So, don't make the mistake of thinking that you need to give her a lot of time to think.

Cutting off contact and waiting is one of the most dangerous ex back myths out there!

Cutting off contact and waiting works well for a woman who has been dumped, but it doesn't work the same way for a man who has been dumped.

When a man dumps a woman and she doesn't call him or contact him at all, he will often feel like he has no power over her anymore and will wonder why she didn't try to get him back.

He will then contact her, show interest and see how she responds.

He will want to hook up with her again to feel confident about himself that she still wants him.

So, she can then get him back by reeling him back in.

However, when a woman dumps a guy and he doesn't contact her, she usually just moves on.

Why?

In most cases, a woman doesn't need to get back with a guy to feel good about herself.

She already knows that the guy wants her back (e.g. he begged and pleaded for another chance, he tried to convince her to change her mind by promising to change).

So, rather than feeling like she needs to get him back to believe that she has the power, she wants to get away from him because she no longer feels enough respect or attraction for him to want sex or a relationship (e.g. because he became too insecure in the relationship, took her for granted for too long).

Another common reason why a woman will say that she doesn't want an exclusive relationship right now is

3. You're asking for a relationship before you've completed the initial steps of the ex back process

The last step of the ex back process is a relationship, so if you're trying to get her to commit to a relationship now, you're doing it wrong.

Watch thisâ€¦

Unfortunately, most guys never realize that they need to re-attract their woman first and then seduce her sexually, before she will open back up to a relationship.

So, in many cases, a guy will make some of the following mistakes:

- Bombard his ex with phone calls, text and social media messages as a way of staying on her mind so that she doesn't move on.
- Send her flowers, gifts and love letters to express his undying love for her.
- Plead with her to talk to him about the relationship in the hopes that they can iron things out between them.
- Try to convince her to give him another chance by promising to change whatever she wants him to change.
- Talk about how special their connection is and try to get her to see things from his point of view, so she will then want to give the relationship another chance.
- Feel like if he doesn't get her to commit to a relationship right away, then there's no chance of getting her back (i.e. it's a relationship or nothing).

So, what should you do instead?

Get your ex to the point where she's yearning for you to kiss her and have sex with her.

How?

Start by flirting with her and making her laugh and smile during a conversation, especially when she is being closed off or distant.

Then, when she starts feeling drawn to you again, go back to interacting in a normal, friendly manner and let her feel the desire for you to flirt with her again.

Repeat this process several times during the course of your interaction with you (e.g. over 15-20 minutes), until she starts wishing that you and her would just hug, kiss and have sex again.

Just remember: Your ex won't be interested in a relationship unless you make her feel sexual and romantic attraction for you again.

Don't try to go from a break up to a relationship in one step.

That's not how it works when a woman no longer feels attracted to her ex.

If a woman is still attracted to her ex, then okay, she will open back up to a relationship fairly easily.

However, if your ex dumped you because she fell out of love with you and no longer feels attracted to you, then you're going to need to re-attract her first.

Another common reason why a woman will say that she doesn't want an exclusive relationship right now isâ€¦

4. She wants to give you hope while she secretly finds a replacement guy

Sometimes a woman will string her ex man along, just in case she struggles to find a new man who is a good enough replacement.

While she won't clearly say that she's open to getting back together, she won't close the door completely.

Instead, she will say things like, I don't want an exclusive relationship right now. However, that doesn't mean I won't be open to settling down again sometime in the future. Please just give me some space to figure myself out and figure out what I want.

She will then use that space to flirt with and potentially hook up with a new guy, so she can be the one who moves on first after the relationship.

When she does find a replacement guy, you will notice that her behavior will change completely and she will most likely become closed, distant or rude to get you out of the way.

Don't let her put you through that nightmare scenario.

Take control of the situation by making her fall back in love with you, before she starts moving on.

Another common reason why a woman will say that she doesn't want an exclusive relationship right now is

5. She isn't in love with you and doesn't know how else to say, I don't want to be with you anymore

Sometimes a woman might initially fall in love with a guy because he displays the qualities and personality traits that she is looking for in a man (e.g. he comes across as being confident and emotionally strong, he seems to be making progress in his career, he makes her feel desirable when she's with him, he seems confident around her, he takes the lead and arranges dates, he seems to know how to make a woman feel like a real woman).

Yet, when she gets into a relationship with him, she then discovers that the man she fell in love with isn't who she thought he was.

For example: She realizes that

- His confidence was just an act and in reality, he's actually quite insecure and self-doubting.
- Although he seemed to be moving forward in life, she now realizes that he's stuck and not making any progress on his goals.
- Despite making her feel attracted in the beginning of the relationship, he now treats her more like a friend or a roommate.
- Despite taking the lead initially, he has now handed over power to her and essentially lets her call the shots, or expects her to lead and 'be the man' so to speak.
- She only felt like a real woman around him initially because he felt confident that she really wanted him. Yet, after the initial buzz of being with someone new wore off and she began to have a more relaxed approach to him and the relationship, he started to worry that he was losing her and ended up becoming insecure, needy or clingy.

When she notices things like that, her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him begin to fade and eventually that can then lead to her breaking up with him.

If he tries to get her back right away, rather than hurting him by saying, “No. There’s no chance of that happening. I don’t love you anymore and I don’t want to be with you,” she gives him an excuse about not wanting an exclusive relationship right now, to hopefully let him down gently.

As a result, he then doesn’t feel so bad about the break up and assumes that he needs to give her space to think about things.

She can move on without him.

Where Guys Go Wrong With an Ex Who Doesn’t Want an Exclusive Relationship

Even if your ex is 100% sure right now that she doesn’t want an exclusive relationship, she can change her mind very quickly.

If she meets a new guy who makes her feel strong surges of romantic and sexual love, she will naturally change her mind and want to be with him, possibly exclusively.

Don’t let that happen to you, where you are left behind by her because you believed her little excuse of not wanting an exclusive relationship.

She is almost certainly just saying that to have some time to move on without you, so she can eventually say, “You and I are finished. I’ve met someone else. You need to respect that. Please don’t contact me anymore.”

Here’s where other guys mess up when in a situation like yours!

1. Not understanding that he can actively make her have feelings for him again

Just because your ex is saying she doesn’t want to be in an exclusive relationship, it doesn’t mean she will feel that way a week from now when you have actively reawakened her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you.

Those feelings change EVERYTHING.

So, don’t let what she has been saying lately put you off, or make you doubt your chance to re-attract her and get her back.

Decide today that you’re going to actively change how she feels about you, by interacting with her over the phone and in person and making her feel happy and excited to be around you again.

When you do that, you will see that she naturally changes her mind and wants to explore her new feelings for you.

Another mistake that other guys make when in a situation like yours, is!

2. Continuing to push for a relationship when the feelings aren’t mutual

Sometimes, a guy refuses to believe that his ex doesn’t want to be in a relationship with him anymore.

He just can’t understand how she could walk away from what they had.

It was such a special, unique connection.

They shared so many good times together, so how could she just walk away and not want to work on the relationship?

As a result of thinking in that way, a guy will continue to push her to give him another chance.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that for a woman to want to get back together again, the feelings have to be mutual or at least close to mutual.

It can't just be about him loving her and wanting her back.

Instead, she has to feel like she will be making a big mistake if she doesn't get back with him.

You can make her feel that way by reawakening her feelings and then not pushing for a relationship.

She feels attracted to you again and notices that you're not trying to get a relationship.

She then begins to worry that if she doesn't give you another chance, you are going to attract a new woman and she will then be left behind.

Another mistake that other guys make when in a situation like yours, is!

3. Cutting off contact and waiting for her to change her mind

Some guys hope that their ex woman will be impressed by his non-neediness if he completely cuts off communication with her.

He hopes that she will think something along the lines of, "My ex is being so mature about this! He's respecting my wishes and giving her some space to have other relationships if I want. He's not need anymore because he's not contacting me! Wow, he has changed! You know what? Having the freedom to do whatever I want doesn't appeal that much to me anymore. Instead, I miss him and want to be in a relationship with only him! I want to be exclusive!" and she then comes running back to him.

Yet, if a woman isn't attracted to her ex anymore, she's usually not going to care all that much that he's ignoring her, other than being curious as to why.

She might contact him to say hi, but only to see that he has been missing her and still wants her back.

She then knows that she can continue moving on with the comforting knowledge that he wants her back, but she doesn't want him back.

So, if you want your ex back, don't cut off contact and hope she will miss you enough to come back to you.

Instead, make her miss you by interacting with her and making her feel so good that when you're not around, she feels empty and sad.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me Because of My Low Self-Esteem

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 6 reasons why a woman will break up with a guy because of his low self-esteem:

1. His low self-esteem ruins her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for him

Generally speaking, most women don't just give up on a relationship with a guy for no reason at all.

In fact, a woman will usually give her guy several chances to change and improve before she eventually decides to break up with him.

So, in a case where a guy had low self-esteem, she probably tried to help him feel better about himself many times in the hope that he would change and the relationship would improve.

For example: She may have!

- Reassured him that she loved him and that he was the only guy for her, but he still couldn't believe it and worried about her potentially finding other guys attractive or leaving him because he wasn't good enough.
- Listed all the great things he does for her and other people, in the hope that he would begin to see how valuable of a man he really is.
- Praised him for being such a great boyfriend, in the hope that he began to believe in his place as her man.
- Been supportive of pretty much everything he did (e.g. cheering him on at sporting events, encouraging him to follow his dreams/apply for that promotion he wanted).

Yet, when a woman realizes that her boyfriend isn't able to shake his low self-esteem and be a confident guy, she will usually reach a point where she's had enough.

She may begin to think something like, "I don't know why I'm with him anymore. No matter how hard I try to make him feel more confident, nothing seems to work. It's becoming such a drag to be around him. I used to enjoy being with him and he used to make me feel good, but now I don't feel attracted to him anymore. I don't feel like I'm being my real self when I'm around him either because I have to be softer and more gentle with him than I really want to be with a man. I'm always encouraging him to feel good about himself, but I want a man who is able to feel confident without needing me to mother him or baby him. I want to be able to smile and feel happy with my man, rather than feeling like I need to get away from him to breathe and feel normal again."

When she gets to that point, she loses respect for him and stops looking at him as her man.

It then becomes very difficult for her to feel sexually attracted to him and eventually, she decides that she will break up with him and try to find a more confident man.

It doesn't mean that her ex can't get her back though.

He can.

He has to show her that he has risen above the level that he was at when she broke up with him. Not only that, but he has begun to go beyond the new level of confidence and is now able to make her feel instinctively attracted to him again, rather than being such a turn off due to his low self-esteem. Another reason why a woman will break up with a guy for having low self-esteem isâ€¦

2. She falls out of love with him and ends up feeling pity, or resentment instead

When a guy goes around putting himself down and saying things like, â€œIâ€™m such a failure. Nothing I do ever goes right. I can't be bothered with life anymore. I don't even know why you stick around with me,â€ it's only natural that a woman will eventually get tired of it.

Initially, she might put up with it because she loves him, but if she realizes that no matter what she says and does, he simply can't or won't change, she will eventually start resenting him for not being man enough for her.

She may begin to think, â€œNo matter what happens to him, good or bad, he always puts himself down. At first I thought he was just going through a bad patch in his life and would eventually snap out of it, but now I see that he will never change. I can't stand being around him anymore. If I have to hear him whine or complain one more time, Iâ€™m going to go crazy! This isn't what I signed up for in a relationship. I can't even remember why I fell in love with him in the first place, because all those feelings are gone now. All I want is to get away from him because heâ€™s bringing me down. I want to find myself again and be confident and happy. I can't do that around him.â€

If she doesn't break up with him right away, she will begin to behave in a cold, bitchy, mean or heartless way towards him.

Unfortunately, when that happens, rather than shock the guy into changing, he usually becomes even more insecure and self-doubting about his place in her life, which turns her off even more.

She may think something like, â€œItâ€™s sad really. I wish he could see that heâ€™s such a great guy with so much to offer a woman. Unfortunately, I haven't been able to convince him of that and now my feelings for him have been switched off. Maybe he will find another woman who can accept him this way, but I can't. I pity him because I used to really love him, but at the same time, I resent the man he has become and how it has been making me feel.â€

Some guys try to keep a relationship together with a woman based on pity, but it doesn't work in the long run because a woman doesn't want to be in a relationship with a guy where she feels like she is doing him a favor by being with him.

She wants to feel like heâ€™s the kind of guy she can look up to, respect and be proud to call her man (i.e. because he has made the necessary adjustments to his thinking and behavior and is now causing her feel attracted in ways that she really wants), not like she has to take care of him because heâ€™s too emotionally weak, insecure and doesn't believe in himself or his value to her.

So, if a guy can't change and man up, a woman will fall out of love with him and when that happens, breaking up seems like the only option for her.

Sometimes, a woman will hope that the break up will wake the guy up and he'll come back to her, stronger and more confident than ever.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that until it's too late and when they eventually try to get her back, she has moved on and is happy without him.

3. She doesn't want to have to be a helper or support system for her man

A woman is happy to be supportive and attentive if her man is emotionally strong, but if he's always leaning on her for emotional support and needs her to keep propping him up, she will no longer feel like he is her man.

Instead, she begins to see him as a guy that she is being forced to take care of and lift up.

As a result, she stops feeling like a feminine woman around him.

She has to be the strong one, which ruins her sexual desire for him and makes it difficult for her to want to submit to him sexually (i.e. because he's not the more emotionally strong one in the relationship).

Here's the thing!

A woman will sometimes accept a guy who has low self-esteem in the beginning of the relationship because she is enjoying the thrill of falling in love, having sex and doing things with a new guy.

Yet, after the novelty of being with someone new wears off, his low self-esteem starts to annoy her and turn her off.

She then realizes that she has made a mistake and will then want to get out of the relationship.

The truth is, almost all women want a man who is confident and emotionally strong, because it allows them to relax into thinking, feeling and behaving like a feminine woman around him.

So, if a woman gets a sense that she can't do that with her man (i.e. because she always has to be the emotionally strong one and take care of him), she will want to break up with him and look for a replacement guy.

Another reason why a woman might break up with a guy for having low self-esteem is

4. It makes the sex less enjoyable and real

When a woman has sex with a man who has low self-esteem, it can feel weird for her to submit to him.

So, even though physically the sex might feel good at times, it doesn't feel good to her emotionally.

Essentially, she feels stronger than him emotionally, so she's not surrendering fully and completely, because it feels wrong to submit to a force less powerful than her.

Here's the thing!

For a woman to fully and completely surrender herself to a man during sex, she needs to feel that he is more emotionally dominant than her.

When she can sense that he is, she can then fully relax into thinking, feeling, behaving and like a feminine woman during sex and around him in general in the relationship.

In other words, she can get emotional, focus on the love she feels for him, be loving and attentive towards him, open herself up to whatever he wants and fully enjoy being taken by him during sex.

If a woman can't do that with her man and always feels like she's holding herself back, she will eventually become unhappy with him and the relationship.

If there are other problems in the relationship, they will become more annoying and his low self-esteem may just be the final straw that makes her break up with him.

Another reason why a woman might break up with a guy for having low self-esteem isâ€¦|

5. She ends up having to give a lot more love to him than he gives to her

When a guy has low self-esteem, he will often need a woman to give him a lot of love and to feel okay about himself and to feel worthy, happy and secure as a man.

For example: He might repeatedly ask her things like, “Are you still attracted to me?” at which point she has to respond with something like, “Of course, I love you and yes, I feel attracted to you” and for a brief while, he will feel happy and good about himself.

Yet, those feelings never last for him because he lacks real confidence.

So, he asks her more questions, “Can you promise to never cheat on me? I could never deal with that. I love you more than anything” and she might say, “Look, I love you too and I don’t want anyone else” and for a brief while, he will feel happy and good about himself.

Yet, he just can’t accept that and needs more.

So, he keeps trying to get more and more assurance of her love and devotion for him, to the point where it feels emotionally draining for her.

She then thinks something like, “I’m always giving him my love and it’s never enough for him. He’s like a bottomless pit and no matter how much love I throw into it, it never seems to make a difference. This isn’t how it’s supposed to be.”

In the meantime, the more she distances herself from him, the more needy, insecure or clingy he becomes.

Eventually, his neediness for her and insecurity without her reassurance pushes her over the edge and she breaks up with him.

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦|

Although a woman wants to be loved and appreciated by her man, she doesn’t want to feel smothered by his need for her.

So, if you want your girlfriend back, you must show her that even though you still care about her and want her back, you don’t actually need her back.

Show that to her by living your life, having fun without her and beginning to pursue your big goals and dreams with a more focused passion and determination.

When you stop needing your ex girlfriend to give your purpose, direction and self-esteem, you suddenly become the kind of man that she can look up to, respect and feel attracted to.

Then, rather than feeling like you’re draining her emotionally by taking her love, but not giving much back in return, she will start to feel drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

She will see that you are now more confident and emotionally independent, which means that are now capable of giving her the love that she needs, rather than you needing to get more and more of her love to feel okay about yourself.

Another reason why a woman will break up with a guy for having low self-esteem isâ€¦|

6. It makes her feel like she's too good for him, when she really isn't

A woman most enjoys being with a confident, emotionally strong man who believes that he is more than good enough for her, while also treating her well and making her feel wanted, loved and appreciated.

So, when a guy has low self-esteem and doesn't believe in his value to his woman or to the world, it does nothing to maintain and build on her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him.

Instead, she feels turned off by his lack of belief in himself.

She then starts thinking things like, â€œWhy am I wasting my time with a failure like him? Iâ€™m way too good of a catch, to be stuck in a relationship like this. I deserve a much better guy than him. He's not good enough for me.â€

She will then start looking down on him and treating him badly (e.g. she disrespects him and mocks him in front of other people, doesn't take anything he says or does seriously, treats him like he is lucky to even be talking to her).

Unfortunately, that change in her behavior usually causes a low self-esteem guy to feel even more insecure and self-doubting, which in turn makes her treat him even worse.

That vicious cycle will usually continue until she eventually gets fed up, breaks up with him and tries to find herself the kind of man that she believes she deserves.

Yet, hereâ€™s the thing!

Just because a woman thinks she's too good for a guy, itâ€™s not necessarily true.

He is making her feel that way, based on his approach to her.

He is making her feel as though she is better than him, even when she really isn't.

So, if you want your girlfriend back, you first must believe in yourself and in your value to her.

Believe that you are more than good enough for her and then, based on that confidence, interact with her and let her sense that.

She might not believe the change in you right away, but if you talk to her on the phone or in person for a few minutes, she will see that the change in you is real.

As a result, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Back After Being Dumped Due to Low Self-esteem

Everything that you say and do from this point onwards is either going to show your ex that you truly have changed and are now a self-assured, emotionally strong and confident man, or confirm to her that you're still a low self-esteem kind of guy.

If you want to get her back, you've got to allow her to sense that you really have changed.

Here's where other guys mess up when in a situation like yours!

1. Telling her that he's more confident now and ready to make things work

If you overcome your low self-esteem issues, it's unlikely that your ex girlfriend will believe you just because you say so.

This is why you have to make her sense the changes in you as you interact with her on a phone call or in person, rather than telling her that you've changed and hoping that she believes you.

When she can sense the changes in you, she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

When that happens, she will naturally open up to the idea of getting back together again without you needing to push her.

The next mistake that other guys often make in a situation like yours is

2. Not getting to the core reason for his insecurities

A guy doesn't have low self-esteem for no reason at all.

Instead, it usually stems from a deep-seated belief about himself that he may be unwilling to openly admit.

For example: He might

- Believe that his ex is too good for him.
- Believe that he is incapable of keeping a relationship together with an attractive woman.
- Believe that women are hard to get and even harder to keep.

As a result, he naturally feels insecure in a relationship, no matter what he achieves in life or what a woman says to him to reassure him.

So, if a low self-esteem guy tries to win his ex woman back by acting as though he is confident when he isn't, she will be able to find that out.

All she has to do is test him by being bitchy towards him and saying things like, "I never want to see you again" or, "Do you really think I'd ever get back with you? I can do so much better than you" to see how he reacts.

If he crumbles and appears dejected and uncertain around her, she will know that he was only faking confidence and is still the same, low self-esteem guy that she dumped.

A woman will usually then want to cut her ex out of her life completely, which makes the ex back process more difficult for him.

So, if you want to get your ex back, it's essential that you get to the core reasons for your insecurity and low self-esteem.

When you do that and have a solution to overcome it, you will feel a great weight lift off your shoulders.

Your natural, masculine confidence will come flooding back into your mind and you will feel strong.

You will feel worthy of her again and based on that confidence, you will be able to interact with her in a way that creates a spark between you and her again.

Once she feels that spark, you can quickly build on her feelings and get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Keeps Rejecting My Attempts to Get Her Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why your ex girlfriend keeps rejecting your attempts to get her back are:

1. You're asking for a relationship before re-attracting her

Sometimes, a woman will be open to getting back with her ex, but she then changes her mind because he is trying to get her to commit to a relationship before re-attracting her.

In other words, he is attracted to her and wants her back, but she just doesn't feel the same way, so she doesn't want to commit to a relationship.

For example: Before re-attracting her, a guy might:

- Promise her that if she gives him another chance, he will do whatever she wants to make her happy.
- Beg and plead with her to reconsider her decision.
- Send her long love letters, emails or texts telling her how much he still cares for her and how he can't live without her.
- Buy her flowers and gifts as a way of expressing his love for her, in the hope that she will realize how silly she would be to let him go.
- Ask her friends and family to put in a good word for him and help convince her to give him another chance.
- Continually try to discuss the relationship and where they went wrong, as a way of showing her how serious he is about getting her back.
- Tell her that he is willing to wait for her no matter how long it takes.

Yet, in most cases, rather than think, "That's so sweet. My ex really is putting in a lot of effort to make things right between us," she just keeps rejecting his attempts to get her back.

Why?

Simple.

A relationship is the last step of the ex back process, not the first one.

So, if a guy doesn't start the ex back process by reawakening his ex's feelings of respect, attraction and love for him and instead only focuses on getting her back into a relationship with him, she will usually just keep rejecting him.

She might say things like, "Forget about it. I know you mean well, but I don't want to be in a relationship with you anymore. What's done is done and it's time that we accept we're not meant to be together and move on. We had our chance, but it didn't work out. Please just accept that and stop harassing me all the time. It's over between us, okay?"

So, if you want your ex girlfriend to stop rejecting your attempts to get her back, you have to focus on making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you first.

Rather than always using every interaction you have with her to hopefully convince her to give you another chance, just focus on making her feel good to be talking to you again.

For example:

- Use humor to break down her walls and make her smile and laugh with you again.
- Maintain your confidence around her, no matter what she says or does to put you off (e.g. she is being stony and unwelcoming towards you and saying that she never wants to get back together again).
- Be assertive (in a loving way) and show her that you're the more dominant one in the relationship and are not intimidated by her recent rejections of you.
- Flirt with her to build up sexual tension between you and her.

When you take the pressure off your ex girlfriend to give the relationship another chance and instead use interactions to re-attract her, what you wanted from her all along actually starts to happen.

She stops putting up walls every time you interact with her and begins to wonder what it would be like to be in a relationship with you again.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend keeps rejecting your attempts to get her back isâ€¦!

2. She can see that you don't understand what secretly turned her off about you

You might be aware of some of the reasons why she lost feelings for you, but are you aware of all of them?

In almost all cases, a man won't know all of his ex woman's reasons for falling out of love with him and no longer feel attracted to him anymore.

This is because most women don't explain all of their subtle reasons in detail.

They don't want to have to take on the role of teaching their guy how to be attractive.

He either gets it or he doesn't.

If he doesn't, she reacts by feeling turned off, losing interest and falling out of love.

Meanwhile, a guy is thinking, "What is happening to my relationship? She used to love me so much and now she's being distant and cold?"

Before he knows it, she breaks up with him and he is then left wondering what the heck happened.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend to stop rejecting your attempts to get her back, you need to understand her real, secret reasons for breaking up with you.

Then, the next time you interact with her (e.g. on a phone call, or in person) she will be able to pick up (via the way you talk and interact with her) that you truly understand what caused her to feel turned off and are no longer the same guy that she broke up with.

When she can see that not only have you figured out her real, secret reasons for breaking up with you, but that you've also already taken steps to improve yourself, she will instinctively feel herself respecting you once again.

When she can respect you again, she will also start to feel sexually attracted and when she feels those two things, the idea of giving you another chance will start to make sense to her again.

However, if you try to get her back by offering her the wrong things (e.g. to spend even more time with her, when she's already feeling smothered by you, or to do whatever she wants you to do when what she really needs is for you to be more manly and take the lead in the relationship), you will most likely keep getting rejected.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend keeps rejecting your attempts to get her back isâ€¦!

3. She is turned off by your desperation for her

After a break up, a guy might make the mistake of being extra nice to his ex and bending over backwards to please her, in the hope that she will change her mind and give him another chance.

Yet, in most cases, the opposite happens.

Why?

A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy that she can push around and control.

So, if youâ€™ve been chasing after your ex and have allowed her to walk all over you and control you with her moods, itâ€™s very likely that your approach has given her a false sense of power and superiority over you.

In other words, she feels like she is better than you, even though she isn't.

Unfortunately, feeling that way about you only destroys what is left of her respect for you, so she naturally keeps rejecting you.

Don't worry though.

You can begin to undo that and make her want you back by triggering her feelings and building on them, without even asking for another chance.

How can you do that?

You need to start by standing your ground with her and showing her (in a dominant, but loving way) that even though you want her back, youâ€™re no longer dependent on her to feel like youâ€™re good enough as a man.

You know that you are good enough, regardless of whether she says you are or not.

You feel good about yourself, are confident, happy and forward moving in life, with or without her.

Yes, it would be nice if you and her got back together again, but if that doesnâ€™t happen, you know for sure that you will have a happy and fulfilling life without her.

I know, I know.

That's not what you want, but if you want to re-attract her, you've got to be able to feel that way about the situation.

Feeling that way, allows you to think, talk, behave and act in a way that shows her you are no longer emotionally dependent on her, which is attractive.

When she can see for herself that youâ€™re no longer desperate to get her back and that youâ€™re confident and happy and getting on with your life without her, she will automatically begin to see you in a new light.

You will seem more attractive, appealing and likeable.

As a result, she will feel drawn to you in a way that she hasn't in a long time.

Here's the thingâ€¦!

Whether a woman is meeting a guy for the first time, in a relationship or thinking about giving him another chance, she will always be instinctively attracted to his emotional strengths (e.g. confidence, self-belief, the ability to cope with difficult situations in life, drive and determination) and repelled by his emotional weaknesses (e.g. desperation, insecurity, self-doubt, neediness, inability to handle what life throws at him).

So, when your ex realizes that you're no longer desperate to get her back, she will automatically start to perceive you as being more emotionally strong and masculine.

As a result, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again. Her guard will begin to come down and she will think about you and look at you from a new, more positive perspective because you are now behaving like the kind of man that she can actually look up to and respect.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend keeps rejecting your attempts to get her back is!

4. You're trying to get her back via text

When you broke up, if your girlfriend said something like, "It's over between us and I don't want to see you or talk to you again," it probably would have hurt you and damaged your confidence.

So, you might now feel a bit unwelcome to call her on the phone, or meet up with her in person.

As a result, you may have resorted to only interacting with her via text messages.

If that applies to you and your situation, then listen up!

Only using text as your main way of trying to get her back simply won't work.

Why?

If your ex doesn't even want to be in the same room as you right now or answer your calls, what makes you think she will be open to getting back together if you're asking her via text?

It's highly unlikely that she is thinking, "That's so sweet. Even though I've been such a bitch to him and have refused to talk to him on the phone or see him in person, he hasn't given up on trying to get me back via text. He's still hanging in there and persevering, no matter how difficult I am being towards him. Based on that, I can't go on rejecting him, can I? I have to give him another chance, because he deserves it for not giving up. After all, if a guy keeps texting, he is worth keeping!"

Instead, she might be thinking something like, "I can't believe he's already trying to get me back when I still haven't forgiven him for what happened between us. Not only that, he's trying to convince me via text. He's just hiding behind texts and hoping that I will suddenly change my mind and want him back in my life. Well, he's got another thing coming! It's over and he can send me texts until his fingers turn blue, but I am done with him for now. It's going to take a lot more than a bunch of text messages to reawaken my feelings for him. He doesn't get that though. Well, he will when I start moving on."

Remember: It's impossible for a text message on a little screen to have the same impact as words spoken over the phone, or in person where a woman can see your body language and assess your state of mind.

Texts can help, as I explain in the video below, but you shouldn't be using texts as your main way of getting her backâ€¦!

So, if you want your ex girlfriend to stop rejecting your attempts to get her back, make sure that you're not trying to convince her to give you another chance via text.

Instead, get on a phone call or get to an in person meet up right away.

When she can observe your assertive body language and hear the confidence in your voice, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some surges of respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, you won't have to ask her to get back together because it will be something that she wants as well.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend keeps rejecting your attempts to get her back isâ€¦!

5. You haven't made her feel enough of a spark of sexual and romantic attraction for you yet

It's likely that you've tried a lot of ways to convince your ex to get back with you, so chances are, you've made her feel something for you again.

However, if she's still rejecting you, it means that your attempts have fallen short and whatever you're doing is not enough yet to make her feel like it would be a good idea to give you another chance.

So, to turn all that around and make her want to be your girl again, you have to focus on making her feel rushes of sexual and romantic attraction when you interact with her.

How can you do that?

By displaying some of the characteristics and personality traits that women are instinctively attracted to.

For example:

- Being confident and at ease in her presence, regardless of what she says or does to make you feel unsure of yourself.
- Using humor to ease the tension between you and her and making her drop her guard a little bit.
- Flirting with her to create a sexual vibe between you.
- Responding differently to the way she expects you to (e.g. if she rejects you, rather than get upset, you laugh and make a joke about her being a drama queen).

When you start making her feel attracted in the ways that she always wanted, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again, even if just a little bit.

When that happens, her walls come down and getting her back becomes a lot easier.

3 Ways a Guy Can Go Wrong When an Ex Girlfriend Keeps Rejecting His Attempts to Get Her Back

Learn the mistakes of other guys to ensure that you get your ex woman back quicker and easier.

Here's where other guys go wrong when in a situation like yoursâ€¦!

1. Using the same approach on her and expecting a different response

If you keep using the same approach with your ex girlfriend that you've been using up to this point (e.g. being insecure, giving her too much power over you, trying to convince her to want a relationship before you've even re-attracted her sexually and romantically), she will most likely continue to reject you.

So, you need to start creating feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside of her (e.g. by maintaining your confidence around her regardless of how cold she's being towards you, using humor to break down her defenses and make her feel relaxed around you, using flirting to create sexual tension).

When you do that, her feelings of respect and attraction for you will naturally begin to resurface, whether she wants them to or not.

You can then build on those feelings and get her back, without her even realizing she's falling in love with you all over again.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Deciding that if nothing works, you'll have to cut off contact and hope that she comes back on her own

Ignoring an ex woman for 30 or 60 days usually only works if she is still in love with her ex and is secretly hoping they will get back together.

However, if a woman keeps rejecting her ex's attempts to get her back, then it's more than likely she's not still in love with him at the moment.

As a result, him cutting off contact will actually work in her favor.

Rather than come running back to him, she will use the time apart to move on and find herself another guy.

Here's the thing

If you want your ex back, you have to stay in her life (not in a needy, annoying way. In a confident, attractive way) and use every interaction you have with her (e.g. via text, social media, on the phone and in person), to reawaken her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

That is what works on women.

It's not the same for men though.

Women can more easily just cut off contact after a guy dumps them and if he can't get laid or move on, he will usually come back to her.

Yet, if a woman breaks up with a guy that she is no longer attracted to or in love with, she will rarely come running back to him if he doesn't contact her.

What works on women is re-attraction.

You've got to re-attract her, seduce her sexually and get her back on your terms, rather than leaving it all up to her to hopefully come running back to you, even though she doesn't love you or want you.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Not using new attraction techniques to stir up new, more interesting feelings inside of her

Not knowing what else to do to get his ex back, a guy will sometimes decide to just hang around with her and act like a nice, sweet, neutral friend in the hope that she will eventually develop feelings for him and give him another chance.

That can work if the guy is good at flirting and sexually seducing a woman, but if he's just being nice and friendly, it will hardly ever work.

The guy will just end up in the friend zone and she will move on with new guys, leaving him behind feeling lost and heartbroken.

Here's the thing!

If you don't actively re-awaken your ex girlfriend's feelings of sexual and romantic attraction by behaving in new and interesting ways around her, she's just going to have friendly or neutral feelings for you.

So, don't just sit around being a nice, non-sexual friend.

Shake things up by showing her that you are a new man.

Make her laugh and smile.

Stand up to her in a dominant, but loving way.

Flirt with her and make her feel like a real woman around you (i.e. make her feel girly and feminine in comparison to your masculine vibe and approach to conversations and interactions).

The more you do that, the less she will push you away because she will naturally feel drawn to you and want more of you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Said No to Being Friends With Her When We Broke Up. Now I Regret it

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 things that you can now do to get her back:

1. Call her, say that you accept a friendship and are not looking for a relationship

Yes, it was a mistake to not accept a friendship.

It's probably not your fault though.

You may have been told that accepting a friendship was weak and would cause you to end up in the friend zone.

See myth #3 hereâ€¦!

So, if you said no to being friends with her, don't waste any more time beating yourself about.

The longer you take to get in touch with her and start the ex back process, the more time she will have to move on and find someone else.

Get her on a call as soon as possible and say something along the lines of, â€œHey, I just wanted to say that I'm sorry for reacting the way I did when we broke up. I didn't behave in a very mature way. However, I'm over that now and I would like to take you up on your offer to be friends. By the wayâ€¦ before you assume that I'm only saying that so that I can get you back, I want you to know thatâ€¦s not the case at all. Itâ€¦s over between us and I fully accept that. However, I also think you and I can still be friends. So, how about it? Friends?â€¦

By saying something like that to her on a phone call or in person (not via text), not only are you fixing the mistake that you made earlier, but you're also showing her that you're now at a different level emotionally (i.e. you're more emotionally mature), which will automatically begin to spark feelings of respect and attraction inside of her.

By the wayâ€¦!

If your ex is unsure whether or not to open back to you, she might initially play a bit hard to get and say something like, â€œNo, you had your chance and you blew it. I don't want to be friends anymore. It's over between us and you need to accept that. I am happy now and I don't want to open old wounds. Goodbye.â€¦

If she says something like that, it's critical that you do not lose confidence in yourself and give up.

Instead, maintain your confidence, laugh and say in a light-hearted, joking tone of voice, â€œOh, come on! Now you're behaving just like I did before and I know you're better than that. You and I aren't getting back together, but we can at least be friends. That is the mature thing to do.â€¦

Not only will she likely agree because she won't want to seem immature, but also because she will be curious about your newfound sense of confidence and self-worth.

Then, once you pass her initial confidence test and get her to agree to being friends, you need toâ€¦!

2. Get her to meet up with you as friends

Once you have begun to reawaken some of her feelings of respect and attraction on the phone call, you can then suggest a meet up.

So, when she seems relaxed and is possibly even thinking things like, “Well, at least he and I can still get along. Iâ€™m glad he has changed his mind about being friends. I actually missed our conversations and the way he makes me laugh,” you can then ask her to meet up with you to say hello in person.

For example: In a confident, easy-going tone of voice, you can say something along the lines of, “Hey, Iâ€™m so glad we ironed things out between us and can be friends. There’s no awkwardness between us anymore, which is how it should be between exes. We should catch up and say hi in person, even if it’s just one last time as friends, before we only ever see each other on social media. It would be good to say hi in person. I’m sure you agree. Anyway, Iâ€™m pretty busy for the next few days, but I will be free on Wednesday and Thursday? Which of these two days suit you best?”

If youâ€™ve made her feel good during the interaction, she will likely agree to meet up right away and you can then go ahead and make arrangements.

Howeverâ€¦

3. If she says â€œNoâ€ to a meet up, ask for a final meet up as friends and promise to not contact her again after that

Sometimes a woman will play hard to get when an ex guy asks to meet up with her.

She might even say something like, “No, I donâ€™t want to see you again. You had your chance at being friends and you said no. Iâ€™ve accepted that it’s over and so should you. I think itâ€™s now better if we go our separate ways and move on without hanging on to each other anymore, even just as friends.”

In some cases, a woman will do that because she doesnâ€™t want to make it too easy for you, or because she still has some doubts about your motives (i.e. she believes that youâ€™re only asking to be friends to get her back and sheâ€™s not ready to take that step with you yet).

Regardless of her response though, you need to maintain your confidence with her and continue on with the ex back process.

Say, “Okay cool, if thatâ€™s what you want, Iâ€™m cool with it. However, letâ€™s meet up one last time, so that we can part as friends, rather than always remembering each other based on how things ended between us. Then, after that, if you donâ€™t want me to contact you ever again, I promise to respect your wishes and never contact you. So, as I said, I’m busy on Monday and Tuesday, but Wednesday or Thursday is good. Which day works best for you?”

By telling her that you won’t ever contact her again if she agrees to meet up, it gives her an incentive to go through with the meet up.

Pretty much every client that I’ve ever taught that technique to has been able to get a meet up with his ex woman, so try it for yourself.

However, just make sure that you do one very important thing before thenâ€¦

Make sure that you have improved your ability to make her feel attracted to you as you talk to her.

Don’t contact her, get a meet up and then screw up your chances of getting her back because you mess up the meet up.

If you mess up the meet up, she may not ever agree to another one.

So, before you get to a meet up, make sure that you're ready to properly re-attract her.

From there, you need toâ€¦!

4. Re-attract her and get her back when you meet up with her

When you meet up with her, you need to keep building on her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, so that even if she was initially thinking something like, â€œIâ€™m only going to stay for 10 minutes, then Iâ€™m leaving and wonâ€™t ever talk to him again,â€ she quickly starts to change her mind and wants to keep interacting with you.

For example: Some of the ways you can make her feel that way are byâ€¦!

- Making her laugh, smile and feel happy to be interacting with you again.
- Being confident around her, even when sheâ€™s being closed off or cold towards you.
- Using flirting to build up sexual tension between you and her.
- Making her feel feminine and girly in comparison to your masculine vibe, behavior or conversation style.
- Turning her negative feelings about the break up into something you can both laugh about together.

The more she can see that youâ€™re being a confident, emotionally mature guy around her, the more she will naturally begin to think things like, â€œI havenâ€™t laughed and smiled like this around him for a long time. I honestly thought it was over between us, but all of a sudden Iâ€™m not so sure. Why am I feeling like this around him?â€

When she starts thinking that way, she canâ€™t stop herself from dropping her guard a little bit and allowing herself to imagine what it would feel like if you and her got back together again.

As a result, she will open herself up to seeing you more often and you can then confidently guide her back into a relationship with you.

4 Common Problems That Guys Encounter When Trying to Get an Ex Back, After Saying No to Being Friends With Her

When a woman offers to be friends with her ex after the break up, itâ€™s usually her way of letting him down easily.

In most cases, sheâ€™s just trying to be nice about the break up and ending things in a positive way.

So, naturally, when she says, â€œLetâ€™s be friends from now on,â€ and the guy responds by saying, â€œNo. If we canâ€™t be a couple, I donâ€™t want to be your friend,â€ she might feel a bit hurt by his reaction.

She may even think things like, â€œI canâ€™t believe heâ€™s behaving like this! After everything Iâ€™ve done to be nice to him, heâ€™s throwing it back in my face! How immature and selfish of him. Oh well, if thatâ€™s how he feels, then I donâ€™t want to be his friend either. Iâ€™m going to cut him off completely and start to move on.â€

If he then realizes his mistake, starts thinking, â€œI said no to being friends with her when we broke up and now I regret it,â€ and then tries to make it up to her, chances are high that heâ€™s going to encounter some of the following problemsâ€!

1. She is now happy without him in her life and doesn't want a friendship

In some cases, offering to stay friends with an ex is a womanâ€™s way of getting out of a relationship without having to deal with a man reacting badly (e.g. he begs and pleads with her to change her mind, gets angry with her and possibly even becomes aggressive or violent and refuses to let her go).

Yet, even though sheâ€™s okay with being friends with her ex initially, at the back of her mind, she may be thinking, â€Iâ€™ll just be friends with him for a while and then gradually start to fade out of his life. I can then easily move on and find myself a new man to have a relationship with, without having to worry about him getting angry for leaving him so suddenly and not being available to him at all anymore.â€

So, if her ex man doesnâ€™t accept a friendship, she won't be too worried about it.

Instead, she will focus on trying to find herself a replacement guy as quickly as possible, to ensure that she has the added protection of being able to say, â€Sorry, but Iâ€™m happy now and I donâ€™t want to be friends anymore. I have a new boyfriend and out of respect to him, I can't be friends with you anymore. So, please accept that and move on too.â€

Naturally, the ex guy might then start thinking, â€Damn it! I blew it! Now she doesnâ€™t even want to be friends with me anymore. Itâ€™s over. Iâ€™ve lost her forever.â€

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€!

Just because your ex might be saying she is happy without you now, it doesnâ€™t mean that you canâ€™t get her back.

You can.

You just need to maintain your composure around her and use any interaction you have with her (e.g. via text, social media, and especially over the phone and in person), to reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Don't worry about the new guy.

He doesn't matter.

What matters right now is you and her.

You and her are a much better match and you deserve another chance with her.

So, focus on reactivating her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

The more you reactivate her feelings for you, the more she will start thinking of you in a positive light.

Her walls will then come down and she will at least open herself up to being friends with you again.

You can then use the friendship to build on her feelings for you and get her back by getting to a hug, kiss, sex and then back into a relationship.

The next problem that a guy might encounter after rejecting a friendship with his ex, isâ€!

2. She is annoyed by how he reacted when she offered friendship, so she now wants to play hard to get to teach him a lesson

Sometimes a woman might feel bitter or angry at her ex, for refusing to be friends with her after the break up.

She may think something like, â€œHow dare he reject my offer to stay friends! I was being the bigger person by being nice to him and he threw it back in my face! Well stuff him! I donâ€™t care. I donâ€™t need him in my life anyway!â€

If he then suddenly changes his mind and comes back asking for a friendship, she will usually be able to sense that he doesn't just want a friendship.

So, rather than making it easy for him to have access to her as a friend, she will likely make him suffer by being bitchy towards him and saying things like, â€œForget it! Itâ€™s too late now. Iâ€™m not interested in having anything to do with you anymore.â€

If he then gives up on getting her back and walks away, he potentially loses the love of his life.

Another problem a guy might encounter isâ€

3. She acts unsure about whether to meet up with him as a friend, as a way of testing his confidence

Your ex is probably going to test your confidence before she opens herself up to giving you another chance.

So, if you suggest a meet up as friends, after you said no to being friends, itâ€™s possible she might say something along the lines of, â€œI donâ€™t know. You said that you didnâ€™t want to be friends before, so what has changed now? Are you trying to get us back together? If so, I donâ€™t feel comfortable meeting up with you.â€

Essentially, she wants to see how strong of a man you really are and if youâ€™re just going to give up at the first sign of resistance from her.

The important thing for you to remember is that if you can pass her tests and maintain your confidence when sheâ€™s being vague and uncooperative, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you, even if she doesnâ€™t admit it.

She will then drop her guard and open herself up the idea of getting back together.

Another problem a guy might encounter after rejecting his ex woman's offer to be friends, isâ€

4. She says that there's no point being friends now

For example: She might say, â€œYou had your chance and you didnâ€™t take it. Thereâ€™s really no point to us being friends now. Itâ€™s too late. Iâ€™ve moved on and I've realized that Iâ€™m actually quite happy without you in my life. So, I donâ€™t need to be friends anymore. Iâ€™m better off without you.â€

Although hearing her say something like that might hurt and you may even feel that all hope is lost, donâ€™t give up just yet.

Why?

You donâ€™t have to be friends with your ex to get her back.

You simply need to interact with her over the phone (and especially in person) and reawaken her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again.

When you do that, her defenses naturally come down and she then begins to wonder, What's going on here? Why am I feeling this way around him? Why do I suddenly look forward to hearing from him?

From there, you need to build on that spark of attraction and get her back into a relationship with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

4 Examples of How to Bring Back a Lost Love

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you want to bring back your lost love, here are 4 examples of how you can do that:

1. Reach out to her via social media

[image: let her see that you are happy without her]

Social media is a great way to contact an ex, without putting too much pressure on her to get back with you.

Instead, it can be about just saying hello to her as a friend.

However, just make sure that your profile is looking good before you contact her.

Get rid of any recent photos of you on your own and instead, update your profile with photos of you having fun with other people and looking confident and happy around other people.

Once youâve done that, send her a quick message like, âHey ex girlfriend, how have you been? I thought Iâd get in touch and say hello as a friend. How's things?â

If she hasnât heard from you since the break up, chances are high that she will be surprised and will then likely look at your social media profile to find out what youâve been up to.

If she sees that youâve been getting on with your life without her and havenât been stuck at the same level you were at when you and her broke up, she will feel more comfortable about replying to you (i.e. because she wonât feel as though you reaching out to her is necessarily about getting her back).

By the wayâ!

When she responds to you, donât get caught up sending messages back and forth that go nowhere.

Remember: The only reason why youâre contacting her via social media is so you can break the ice.

Once you've broken the ice and she is replying to you, get her on a call to say hi and make her feel attracted to you (e.g. by getting her laughing and smiling).

Then, arrange for you and her to meet up in person.

So, when she replies to a message or two, you can then send her a message like, âBTW: Good hearing from you again. Iâm glad to hear that youâre doing well. I might give you a call sometime so that we can catch up and say hi as friends. Cool?â

She might say, âOkay,â right away, or she might be a bit resistant at first and say something along the lines of, âI donât know if thatâs such a good ideaâ or, âIâm not sure about that.â

Whatever her response is though, just make sure that you maintain your confidence and continue on with the ex back process.

For example: If she seems resistant to talking to you on the phone at first, you can say something along the lines of, âHey, itâs no big deal! ð Itâs just a quick call between friends to say hi. We can do that, right? It might even prove to be fun. After all, Iâm sure you have a lot to tell me and Iâve got some funny stories to tell you too! So, chat soon, okay?â

In most cases, a woman will then say something like, âkâ and you can then just go ahead and call her the next day.

Once you get her on a phone call with you, focus on reawakening some of her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so she will naturally want to see you again in person.

Remember: Face-to-face is where you will fully re-attract her (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you again, showing her that you really are a new man now) and get her to open up to getting back together.

So, make sure that you don't stop at a phone call, or worse, stop at messaging back and forth or texting her.

Another example of how to bring back a lost love isâ!

2. Understand what kind of attraction experience will make her feel compelled to give you another chance

If you want to bring back your lost love, you first need to understand her real reasons for breaking up with you, so you can adjust and change in the ways that will actually matter to her.

For example: When interacting with your ex, ask yourselfâ!

- Am I turning her on right now (i.e. by being confident, emotionally masculine, charismatic or funny), or am I turning her off (i.e. by being insecure, self-doubting, submissive, needy or wimpy)?
- Does she feel relaxed and happy to be talking to me, or does she feel tense, uneasy and like she wants to get away from me as quickly as possible?
- Am I making her feel like an attractive, sexy woman in my presence, or do I make her feel more like a neutral friend?
- Does she feel respect and sexual attraction for me based on how I now talk, act and behave around her, or does she feel like she could get a better attraction experience from another guy?

If you are doing it right, she will naturally start looking at you in a more positive light.

When that happens, her guard will begin to come down and she will feel drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her (i.e. because youâre now giving her the attraction experience she always wanted from you, but didnât get).

She then starts to think, âHeâs different now. He actually seems to understand me so much more than he ever did before. Maybe things would be different between us this time around. After all, heâs not the same man I broke up with. Maybe I should give him another chance, even if just for a little while.â

Then, getting her back becomes easy, because she actually wants it too.

Another example of how to bring back a lost love isâ!

3. Interact with her and let her see that she feels new and exciting types of attraction for you now

For example: Some of the ways you can do that is byâ!

- Maintaining your confidence with her when she tries to put you off by being disdainful or indifferent towards you.
- Showing her via your actions, conversation style and behavior that you've fixed some of the issues that were turning her off before (e.g. if you were too needy before, you are now more emotionally independent and getting on with your life without her. If you weren't ballsy enough before, you're now more confident and capable of standing up for yourself to her and other people).
- Reacting differently to what she says and does, (e.g. if you became nervous and unsure of yourself and your attractiveness to her when she talked about other guys, you now relax and smile and possibly even make a joke about it).
- Being more emotionally masculine around her and making her feel feminine and girly, rather than being too nice and neutral and making her feel like a friend or an acquaintance in your presence.

The more she interacts with you and discovers that you're nothing like the guy she broke up with, the more attracted to you she will become.

Her defenses then start to come down and she then becomes open to talking with you more over the phone and seeing you in person, to see what happens next.

Another example of how to bring back a lost love isâ

4. Meet up with her and get to a kiss or sex to reignite the physical side of your lost love

[image: Bring back lost love]

When bringing back a lost love, the main thing to remember is that the fastest way to make that happen is by actively making your ex have strong romantic and sexual feelings for you again.

That process begins with you talking to her on the phone and making her laugh and smile.

It then continues when you meet up with her in person.

This is why you can't get stuck texting back and forth, or only talking over the phone.

You have to meet up with her in person so you can build on her feelings for you, show her that you're a new and improved man now and then get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

For example: Giving her a warm hug when you see her in person helps break the physical distance between you and her and makes her feel a surge of sexual attraction.

She then starts thinking things like, âThis feels so good. I can't believe I'm even thinking this, but I don't want to leave his arms. I want him to hold me tighter and kiss me. Why am I thinking like this? I thought I was over him. Maybe I'm not.â

How can you get to that point with your ex?

If she is open to you and isn't closed off or distant, you can hug her right away.

Yet, if she is closed off, distant, cold or uninterested, you can hug her at the end of the meet up, after you have reawakened some of her sexual and romantic feelings.

When you and your ex are getting ready to leave, you can say something along the lines of, âCome over here and give me a goodbye hugâ and open your arms and move towards her to initiate the hug.

If you've made her feel good throughout the meet up, she won't resist it and will go along with the hug.

You can then take her in your arms and give her a warm hug that lasts for 5-20 seconds.

If she seems open (i.e. she doesn't pull away quickly and instead, looks up at you and smiles), you can then lean in and give her a kiss on the lips.

Remember: The longer she stays in your arms, the more open she is to hooking up with you sexually.

If you're getting good signals from her, go to your place or hers and reignite the physical side of your love with sex.

Remember: Sex speeds up the process of reconciling the relationship faster than any text, email or phone call.

Sex doesn't fix everything, but it's one part of the ex back process that you need to make sure you include along the way, if you want to bring back your lost love and restart the relationship for real.

4 Common Problems That Guys Encounter When Trying to Bring Back a Lost Love

Sometimes, all a guy has to do is call his ex on the phone, re-spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for him again and get her back.

It's easy in cases like that.

However, in other cases, getting her back is a little more difficult, because he's faced with some of the following problems!

1. She has moved on, so he feels unwelcome to reach out to her

Sometimes a guy is too emotionally hurt to begin the ex back process right away.

So, by the time he does get control of his emotions he then finds out (e.g. via social media, mutual friends) that his ex has already moved on.

He might then think, "Well, I guess it's too late then. I'm sure she wouldn't want to hear from me now. She seems so happy without me. I don't stand a chance anymore," so he never makes the move to contact her or get her back.

Yet, here's the thing!

Even if a woman has fully gotten over her ex and moved on, it doesn't mean he can't get her back.

A guy can get a woman back by making her break up with her new guy, if he successfully reactivates her feelings for him again and then follows through on the rest of the ex back process.

He has to get her on a phone call with him and regardless of how unwelcoming she might sound at first (e.g. she says something like, "What do you want? We have nothing to talk about" or, "Why are you calling me? Don't you know that I have a boyfriend now?"), he needs to confidently use humor to break down her walls and get rid of the negative tension between them.

When a woman is laughing, smiling and having fun talking to her ex, it becomes difficult for her to maintain a cold, distant persona at the same time.

On the other hand, if a guy just gives up without reaching out to her, he may end up spending the rest of his life wondering if he could have gotten her back and recovered the love that he lost.

The next problem a guy might be faced with isâ€¦|

2. Assuming that she would be annoyed if he reached out to her again

If a guy initially tried to get his ex back after a break up and it failed, he might then have decided to leave her alone for a while (e.g. a few weeks or months) to let things calm down between them, or to hopefully make her miss him.

Yet, by cutting off contact with an ex woman, some guys end up feeling nervous about contacting her again in case she reacts in an annoyed or angry way.

For example: He may think something like, â€œWhat if sheâ€™s not happy to hear from me? What if she tells me to get lost? What if she says that Iâ€™m harassing her?â€

As a result, he doesnâ€™t make contact with her and hopes that she contacts him one day instead.

Yet, when she doesnâ€™t contact him and just continues to move on, he loses out on potentially getting her back.

Hereâ€™s the thing â€¦|

Even though your ex might be a bit cold or distant when you call, she wonâ€™t be able to continue feeling or acting that way if you make her feel attracted to the new and improved you on the call, or in person.

So, whatâ€™s it going to be?

Are you just going to wait in the background and hope that she comes back to you on her own, or are you going to make this happen now?

Every day, all over the world, men get ex women back and you can do it too.

Youâ€™ve got to be willing to take the necessary steps though.

If youâ€™re willing to do that, you could be in bed with her next week and she could be looking you in the eyes and saying, “I love you.”

Isnâ€™t that better than living the rest of your life with a feeling of regret, because you didnâ€™t do what it takes to get a woman back?

Another problem a guy might face when trying to bring back a lost love isâ€¦|

3. Trying to bring back the love by talking about love

Sometimes a guy sends a text, email or message to an ex woman and says something like, â€œThe love we had was one of a kind. We had such an amazing connection. How can you just walk away from that? I love you and I want to be with you. I will do whatever it takes to make you see that what we had is worth fighting for and convince you to let me back into your heart. You are still in my heart and will be forever. I love you. Please reconsider.â€

Although the guy is being sincere, saying those kind of things to an ex woman is usually a turn off.

Why?

In most cases, a message like that will be from an ex man that she no longer feels respect and sexual attraction for, so itâ€™s not something that she is eager to hear.

Instead of being swept off her feet by the notion that heâ€™s so being romantic and is still completely in love with her, she closes herself off even more.

Why?

The feelings aren't mutual yet.

He's trying to get her back because he wants her, even though he hasn't even made her want him back yet.

The bottom line is thisâ€¦!

If you want to bring back a lost love, you have to focus on making her feel respect and sexual attraction for you again, rather than trying to seduce her with sweet talk about love.

Women only appreciate sweet, loving, romantic words from a man that they are attracted to.

So, don't skip that part of the ex back process.

Attraction first and everything else after that.

Note: That said, you don't need to send her sweet, romantic words to get the love back.

Get to sex and then allow loving conversations to begin to flow naturally between you and her.

Another mistake that guys often make when in a situation like yours isâ€¦!

4. Re-approaching her in a neutral way

Sometimes a guy will interact with his ex and pretend that heâ€™s only interested in being her friend now (e.g. heâ€™s very nice and polite towards her, doesn't flirt to create sexual tension, acts like heâ€™s totally over her, seems to just want to help her with her life).

Yet, here's the thingâ€¦!

Women aren't stupid (well, most of them anyway).

Most women know when a man is being nicer than he actually is, in the hope that it somehow grants him access inside of her panties (if he's trying to pick her up), or inside of her heart once again (if he's trying to get her back after a break up).

So, don't pretend that you have no sexual interest in her.

When you re-approach your ex to bring back the love you lost, make sure that you are focused on making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you.

When you do that, she will naturally open back up to you and want to explore her new feelings for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Will My Ex Girlfriend Remain Closed Off to Me Forever?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends on the following:

1. Do you know what will make her feel attracted to you again?

Making your ex feel attracted to you again has almost nothing to do with your physical appearance.

Why?

Attraction to physical looks fades, so if you've been with her for a while, she's not going to be impressed by subtle changes to your appearance.

So, before you rush out and get a new gym membership, or blow a months of your salary on buying lots of new clothes, you need to understand that a woman's attraction to a guy is mostly based on how he makes her feel when she's interacting with him.

Of course, there are some women who are more impressed by superficial things like a man's appearance, money or social status.

However, for most women, falling in love and staying in love with a guy is based on how he makes her feel when she's with him, how he behaves around her and the way he thinks and takes action in his life.

So, don't make the mistake of thinking that you need to get a physical makeover to re-attract your ex.

You can improve your physical appearance if you want to (e.g. lose some weight if you need to, build some muscle at the gym, overhaul your wardrobe), but your main focus needs to be on finding new ways to re-attract her emotionally.

By the way!

If you're not sure where to start, here are some questions that will help you get a clearer picture on how to re-attract her in the ways that really matter!

- When you interact with your ex, do you make her feel feminine and girly in your presence, or does she feel more like a neutral friend or worse, does she feel more dominant and powerful than you?
- Are you confident and emotionally strong when you interact with her and believe in your value to her, or do you feel insecure, self-doubting and believe that she's too good for you?
- Are you living up to your true potential as a man, or are you have been drifting through life just doing 'whatever' and not really caring about building a future for yourself?
- Are you emotionally masculine enough to handle her when she tests your confidence (e.g. by throwing a tantrum over nothing, being closed off towards you and saying she will never give you another chance), or do you crumble and become insecure?
- Do you and her want the same things in life (e.g. to settle down, get married and start a family together, or to party and have fun for as long as possible), or are you going in completely different directions in life?
- Is your relationship intelligence at the same level as hers, or do you still need to educate yourself about what it takes to maintain a relationship and keep it together for life?

When you understand what your ex girlfriend really wants, you can start letting her see that you now understand it and have changed (e.g. begin making her feel more feminine around you, start being more emotionally dominant than her or start being more confident and self-assured).

Don't tell her that you've changed; let her sense it and see it based on how you now talk, behave and act around her and in life.

When she can see that you now understand what she really wants, her guard starts to come down and she naturally opens back up to you.

On the other hand, if you try to get her back without changing anything at all, or by offering her the wrong things (e.g. working hard to improve your physical appearance, sucking up to her by being extra nice, offering to do whatever she wants), she will most-likely remain closed off to you forever (or at least until you start re-attracting her in the ways that are actually important to her).

The next thing to consider isâ€¦!

2. If your ex interacts with you, will she be able to sense that you would end up making the same kind of mistakes that lead to the break up?

In some cases, a woman will break up with a guy without telling him exactly what turned her off.

Instead, she will say something like, â€œI don't think we should see each other anymore,â€ or â€œI need a break from being in a relationship for a while so I can focus more on my studies/work/finding myself.â€

Yet, that isn't her real, secret reasons for breaking up with him.

For example, some of the real reasons why she broke up with him could include the fact that:

- She feels turned off by how he lost the confidence she first felt attracted to. He ended up becoming too needy, insecure and clingy in the relationship with her.
- He failed to keep the spark alive between them, so she stopped feeling like an attractive, desirable woman around him. She felt more like his roommate or a neutral friend.
- She initially felt drawn to him because he was nice and sweet, but soon realized that he wasn't manly enough for her (e.g. he sucks up to her all the time, lets her get away with bad behavior), so she feels more emotionally dominant than him.
- He gave her too much power in the relationship. She wants to be in a relationship with a guy who makes her feel like his girl, rather than her feeling like his mother or feeling as though she always needs to help him emotionally.
- He seemed cool initially, but he ended up showing a side of himself that made her feel as though they weren't on the same level socially.

So, if you don't want your ex girlfriend to remain closed off to you forever, you need to make sure that when you interact with her from now on, you show her (via your actions, conversation style and the way you respond to her), that you're no longer making the same old mistakes that turned her off.

For example:

- You're more confident and self-believing.
- You no longer feel unsure of yourself when she's being closed off towards you.

- You're not afraid to flirt with her to create sexual tension between you and her.
- You can now laugh at her (in a loving way) when she creates drama and says things like, â€œI can never trust you again after what happened between us,â€ or â€œI just can't forgive you for the pain you caused me.â€

When she experiences the changes in you first hand (i.e. on a phone call or in person), she won't be able to stop herself from opening up to you, even if only a little bit initially.

Then the more she sees for herself that you really have changed, the more she will start to respect you.

When she respects you, she will also start to feel sexual and romantic attraction for you and from there, it's only a matter of time before she will re-connect with her original feelings of love for you.

On the other hand, if you keep trying to get her to open up to you while making the same old mistakes you made that led to the break up, she will just keep pushing you away and saying things like, â€œI'm sorry, but it's over. We had our chance and it didn't work. You need to accept that and move on.â€

The next thing to ask yourself isâ€¦

3. How would you rate her level of love for you out of 10 after the relationship had settled down?

To answer this question, think about your relationship with your ex and how serious it really was before your break up.

For example:

Were you and your ex girlfriend talking about getting married and starting a family (which means her level of love for you would have been at about a 9 or 10), or were you just seeing each other from time to time (which could mean that her level of love was probably a 7 or less)?

Did you and her have the same values, beliefs and philosophy towards life and the future, or were you complete opposites?

Did you want the same things in life (e.g. a successful career, to travel the world, to help others, to settle down and start a family), or did you want separate things?

Was she always honest and loyal towards you (and you to her), or did she sometimes lie and betray you?

Was she often flirting with other guys behind your back or worse, in front of you?

Did she cheat?

Who was more invested in the relationship, you or her?

By honestly answering those questions, you will have a clearer picture of the depth of your relationship with your ex.

For example: If you and your ex girlfriend wanted different things in life, it's possible that she didn't really believe you were her ideal man.

She may even have been thinking things like, â€œHe's a nice guy and I do enjoy being with him for now, but I can see that we won't be able to stick together in the long-term, because we want *very different things in life.*â€œ

Naturally, after you and her broke up, she will have then closed herself off from you as a way of not giving you hope that you and her could get back together again.

So, if you want her back, you need to interact with her and let her see that you and her are now an even better match than you were before.

When you level up and are able to attract her in new and interesting ways, her feelings automatically start to come back to life.

Then, even if her level of love for you was originally low, it will begin to change and become stronger.

She will feel as though, if she doesn't give you another chance, she might end up regretting it for the rest of her life.

As a result, her walls will begin to come down and she will open up to you again.

Another thing to ask yourself isâ€œ

4. Are you trying to get her to open up to a relationship before you've even re-attracted her?

After a break up, a guy will sometimes rush to try and convince his ex to give him another chance.

For example: He might repeatedly try to discuss the relationship and how heâ€™s willing to do whatever it takes to make things right, so they can get back together again.

Yet, if sheâ€™s not feeling respect and sexual attraction for him anymore, she isn't going to feel motivated to want to get into a relationship.

As a result, she remains closed off and thinks things like, â€œI know that he means well, but I just don't have feelings for him anymore. Besides, him pushing me to commit to the idea of a relationship only proves to me that he still doesn't understand why we broke up in the first place. It's almost as if he believes we can just sweep our problems under the carpet and start over, just because he wants to. What about what I want? He doesn't even make me feel attracted anymore, but he wants me back. Why should I give him another chance? That wouldn't be fair on me. â€œ

This is why, if you sincerely want your ex back, you have to stop trying to get her to open up to a relationship.

Instead, you need to focus on reawakening her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you, by making the interactions that you have with her from now on, feel fun, exciting and interesting.

When you use that approach, she will naturally open back up to you again because you are now something that she wants.

She will worry that if she remains closed off to you, it might cause you to move on with a new woman, which will then cause her to regret it and feel as though she is the one who got left behind.

As a result, she will open up to you and try to make something happen between you and her again.

Another thing to ask yourself isâ€œ

5. How badly did you behave leading up to, during and after the break up?

In some cases, a woman will remain closed off to her ex for a long time (or even forever) due to his behavior before, during and after the break up turned her off.

For example: Some guys mightâ€¦

- Beg, plead and even cry in front of her.
- Throw a tantrum and demand that she change her mind.
- Accuse her of cheating.
- Insult her.
- Say that he never loved her anyway.
- Become aggressive or even violent towards her.
- Demand that she allow him look through her phone, messages and emails.

Although those behaviors can turn a woman off and convince her that she wants to move on, not all of them are unforgivable.

Most reactions can be fairly easily forgiven, unless it was a violent reaction, or extreme stalker behavior reaction.

So, if you behaved in a way that you now regret, donâ€¦ keep beating yourself up about it.

Instead, realize that youâ€¦re not that guy anymore.

You have improved and become a better man already and when you interact with her again, your actions, behavior, vibe and conversation style will prove that to her.

When she sees that you really have changed, she will naturally begin to open up to you, even if just a little bit.

From there, you can show her that falling back in love with each other will be even better than it was the first time.

Don't tell her that though.

Show it to her based on how you talk to her, behave, act and think around her and in life in general.

Let her see that you have changed and that she really does feel differently about you now.

When that happens, she won't want to remain closed off to you anymore.

Another question to ask yourself isâ€¦

6. Have you tried all options to get her back?

Most guys don't use the option of re-attraction because they simply don't know how to do it.

Instead, most guys do all of the usual things like buying flowers and gifts, apologizing and promising to change if she gives him another chance.

Alternatively, a guy might use No Contact and ignore her for 30 or 60 days in the hope that she will start to miss him and open back up to him again.

Yet, none of these things work as well as re-attracting her.

For example: Watch this video to understand the truth about cutting off contact with a woman and hoping that she comes backâ€¦

The same applies to getting a gift for your ex, or trying to suck up with her with flowers, poems or letters.

It just doesn't work.

You've got to focus on re-attracting her sexually and romantically, which is done when you talk to her on the phone and in person.

If you haven't done that yet, then you haven't tried what really works to get a woman back in today's world.

2 Common Problems That Guys Encounter When Trying to Get an Ex Woman to Open Up Again

When a woman is closed off to her ex, she usually won't make it easy for him to get her back (e.g. she won't answer his calls, she will refuse to meet up with him in person, be cold and distant when they talk).

1. She is being stubborn about her decision to not give him another chance

In most cases, an ex woman will only be stubborn because the guy is going about the ex back process backwards.

Essentially, he's pushing her to open up so that they can be a couple again, but he hasn't fully reawakened her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him yet.

Remember: A relationship is the last step in the ex back process, not the first.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend back, don't waste time trying to convince her to open back up to the idea of having a relationship.

Instead, just focus on using every interaction that you have with her (e.g. especially over the phone and in person) to re-spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

The more she starts to associate positive feelings to interacting with you, the more her defenses come down.

You don't have to force it to happen because it will happen naturally, even if she tries to stop herself from feeling it.

She will feel drawn to you and begin to want you back for her own reasons (i.e. so she doesn't regret losing you).

However, if you keep trying to force her to open up to you so you can then convince her to want a relationship, she will remain closed off forever (or at least until you change your approach).

2. Trying to open her back up via text

When a guy is faced with a situation where his ex girlfriend is refusing to interact with him in any other way (e.g. she won't talk over the phone or meet up with him in person), he will often resort to texting her.

It's understandable and it can help, but texting isn't the best option to properly get an ex woman back, as I explain in this video!

You can spark some attraction, but you shouldn't try to use text to get her to commit being with you again.

That approach won't work.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't find this out until it's too late.

As a result, a guy thinks that it's okay to send his ex woman long walls of text where he tries to explain things, convince her to change her mind and get her to understand his point of view.

Yet, to her, his attempts to get her back seem needy, selfish or even annoying.

As a result, rather than make her think, *â€œMaybe he's right about me being too closed off. Maybe I should give him a chance,*â€œ she just closes herself off even more.

Why?

When a woman can't see a guy's body language or hear the tonality of his voice, rather than give him the benefit of the doubt and assume that he's being confident and self-assured, she usually assumes the worst of him based on her past experiences with him (e.g. he used to be insecure/self-doubting/wimpy before).

This is why, if you keep trying to make your ex open up to you via text, you're probably going to achieve the exact opposite.

She will close up and potentially even block your number.

On the other hand, if you get her on a phone call and reawaken some of her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again, it will be a lot more difficult for her to keep pushing you away.

Then, when you meet up with her in person (something that she will be more willing to do after you've made her feel good on a call), you can build on her feelings and bring down her walls once and for all.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Work With My Ex and Want Her Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways you can make that happen:

1. Start projecting a more confident, independent energy

[image: Start projecting a more confident, independent energy]

When a guy is trying to get his ex woman back that he works with, he will often make the mistake of seeming a bit lonely, lost or lacking in confidence now that she has broken up with him.

Don't make that mistake.

Women are naturally attracted and drawn to the confidence in men, so when you begin to project a more confident, emotionally independent energy, she will naturally begin to look at you in a different light.

Let her see that even though you still have feelings for her and want her back, you don't actually need her back to feel emotionally secure, fulfilled and happy again.

Let her see that you are confident, emotionally secure and happy without her.

You're focused on your work, doing well and getting along well with others.

Yes, you want her back, but you don't need her back.

For example: Imagine how a woman would feel if she broke up with a guy that she works with and he then walks around the workplace looking sad, depressed and unable to cope without her.

He also begins letting coworkers know that it's because he has a broken heart and is trying hard to get her back.

Will she be thinking, "Oh, that's so sweet! He's a wreck without me. I feel so flattered now that everyone here at work can see how much I still mean to him. Maybe I should give him another chance because of that," or will she be thinking things like, "Why is he making this more difficult than it needs to be? I'm trying to be nice and professional, but he seems to be acting weird around me. Maybe I should see if I can get a transfer to another department, or convince my manager to transfer him somewhere else?"

So, if you want to re-attract your ex, you need to show her that you're not sitting around feeling sad, lonely and lost without her.

Instead, you are now emotionally independent and feel good about yourself, your job and your life in general.

Don't tell her that, of course.

Instead, simply let her feel that and see that based on how you talk, feel, think, behave and act in the workplace.

Don't overdo it though.

Just let her get the sense that you really are happy, confident, forward moving and emotionally secure.

No need to be loud about it and say, "I'm so happy now that we've broken up. Her breaking up with my was a gift. I'm so much more confident without her."

That won't work.

In fact, it will likely backfire because she will feel as though you are trying to ruin her reputation in the workplace.

So, just let her sense your confidence, happiness and emotional security based on how you talk, behave and act in general.

Then, even though she probably won't openly admit it to you, she will begin to experience surges of respect for you again.

She will be impressed that you are being an emotionally strong, independent man who is handling the break up in such a mature way (i.e. You're not rubbing your happiness in her face or trying to tarnish her name. Instead, you are simply getting on with your work and professionally and confidently interacting with others).

When she starts respecting you again, she will also start to feel some attraction and that is the opening you need to begin getting her back for real.

The next thing you can do to get an ex back that you work with isâ€¦

2. Use in person interactions to flirt discreetly and create a spark

If you want her to have a romantic interest in you again, it's essential that you build up some sexual tension between you and her.

Of course, because you and her are in the workplace, you can't blatantly start acting in a sexual manner because she will likely feel embarrassed about what others might think, or you could get into trouble with management or HR.

Yet, you do need to flirt with her if you want her to have a romantic interest in you again.

So, to avoid getting into trouble, you need to be subtle and discreet about your flirting.

Here's an example â€¦

Imagine that you bump into your ex getting a cup of coffee in the workplace kitchen.

Rather than just say, "Oh, hello. How are you today?" which will do nothing to spark her feelings, you can instead say in a confident, flirtatious tone of voice, "Thanks, I'll have a cup too. You know how I like mine" and have a laugh with her about it.

Now, if your ex has her guard up or is worried about flirting with you in the workplace, she might get a bit defensive and say something along the lines of, "We're not a couple anymore. You can't talk to me like that" or, "Make your own coffee. Why are you even asking me to make you a coffee?"

If she does react in that way, just smile, have a little laugh and say, "Relax. We are coworkers and are allowed to talk to each other and joke around about things. Besides, you always make the best coffee. So, can you make me one?"

She may then say something like, "Oh, okay, but only this once."

You can then continue flirting with her by saying something like, "Of course, you make great coffee, but you can't cook/run/sing (use an example of something your ex doesn't do very well) to save your life" and have a laugh with her about that.

At this point she will likely be smiling, laughing and maybe even saying, "Hey! I'm not that bad at (whatever you said she couldn't do very well)!â€œ or she will just laugh and get on with making the coffee.

As a result, she will be feeling relaxed in your company and will be enjoying the interaction.

She will also be feeling surges of respect and attraction for you being confident enough to flirt with her in that way, while still maintaining the professional boundaries of the working environment.

She can then begin to think, â€œHmmmâ€œI havenâ€œt felt this way about him in such a long time. It feels good to interact with him like this now. I like this feeling and I donâ€œt want to lose it. Maybe we can work things out after all. Maybe I need to open back up to him.â€œ

Thenâ€œ

3. Once she is attracted to you again, build on the tension

Once she is feeling attracted to you based on some subtle flirting, go back to acting like friendly coworkers again for an hour or two (e.g. only talking about business related subjects with her when you run into her).

A little later, go back to lightly flirting with her and using humor to make her feel good to be around you.

Note: If you don't see her that often, then switch between flirting and being friendly every day.

One day, add in some flirting and the next day, just be friendly and professional.

This builds up the exciting feeling of anticipation inside of her and gets her wondering, â€œWhy do I suddenly feel excited about coming to work every day and hoping that I will see him? Why am I disappointed when he doesnâ€œt tease me or make a joke and acts serious and professional with me? Why am I even thinking like this around him? Weâ€œre supposed to be broken up! I really thought I was over him but now Iâ€œm so confused. How can I make him want to flirt with me more? Maybe I need to show him some more interest.â€œ

As a result, getting back together becomes something that she wants to do.

It's no longer about you trying to convince her to hopefully give you another chance.

Instead, you end up allowing her to have another chance with you that she clearly wants.

So, if you've been thinking, â€œI work with my ex and I want her backâ€œ then don't overlook the power of flirting.

It really does work.

Just make sure that you keep it subtle.

Here are some examples of flirting in the workplace that I shared in a video for guys who wanted to pick up new women.

This video isn't about getting an ex back, but it's still about flirting in the workplace, so you will find helpful too.

Here is a video of mine that is specifically about getting an ex backâ€œ

Once youâ€œve built up enough sexual tension between you and her, you can then take the next stepâ€œ

4. Get her to grab a coffee or some lunch with you

After a few days of making her feel attracted again, you can say something along the lines of, â€œHey, letâ€™s grab some lunch/coffee in the cafeteria this afternoon. It'll be good to catch up as friends.â€

Important: Say that to her in person. Don't send her an email.

Many guys get themselves into trouble with ex women by emailing them in the workplace.

The woman then shows the email to her manager or to HR (Human Resources) and the guy gets into trouble for 'harassing' her.

So, don't make the mistake of putting anything in writing.

Say the following in a friendly, easy-going and confident manner when you are talking to her and she has been feeling attracted to you, â€œHey, letâ€™s grab some lunch/coffee in the cafeteria this afternoon. It'll be good to catch up as friends.â€

Don't say it BEFORE you've flirted with her and made her feel attracted to you again.

Make her feel attracted to you again and THEN suggest a friendly catch up for lunch or afternoon coffee.

By the wayâ€

Don't lose confidence in yourself if she initially says something like, â€œNo, I don't think we should do that,â€ or â€œNo. I don't want people at work to see us together and start thinking that we're a couple again,â€ because she will be most likely testing to see if you'll give up and become insecure at the first sign of resistance from her.

She might also initially resist to make sure that she's not seeming too easy to get back into a relationship.

Many women know that if they catch up with their ex guy, he will almost certainly be able to seduce them back into a relationship.

When you say something like, "Hey, let's catch up as friends" she may be thinking, "If I say yes, then I'm going to fall for him again and we're going to get back together."

So, if she initially says, "No" to your request, make sure that you don't lose confidence in yourself, get annoyed, beg and plead with her or worse, give up and think that you can't get her back.

Instead, just remain calm, smile, have a little laugh and say in a joking manner, â€œRelax, you're making a big deal out of nothing. No one will think that we're getting back together again. We're just friends now and we can have some lunch/coffee together if we want to. Besides, it's not like we're talking about having candlelit dinner at some fancy restaurant. It's just a coffee as friends or as coworkers. We can do that.â€

When you catch up for a coffee or some lunch, make sure that youâ€

5. Don't ask for a relationship. Just build up the sexual tension between you and her

If things go well during lunch (e.g. she's laughing, smiling, saying things like, â€œIt's nice to be doing this with you againâ€ or, "You've changed. I like the new you"), you might be tempted to ask her if she will give you another chance.

Don't make that mistake.

If you push to get back into a relationship before she's feeling ready, you will likely cause her to pull away and close herself off once again.

Then, it will be about you trying to convince her to change her mind and give the relationship another chance.

So, don't put that kind of pressure on her.

Instead, just focus on having an enjoyable lunch with her, while building some more sexual tension between you and her.

How can you do that?

By flirting with her a little bit, making her laugh and then going back to interacting with her in a normal, friendly manner.

For example: Imagine that you and her are sitting together at a table in the company cafeteria, or you're out at a local coffee shop having a coffee together.

She happens to be drinking a cappuccino.

To flirt with her, you can say something, â€œHaha! you've got a foam mustache going on! You look so cute! let me get it for you and then lean over and wipe her mouth with your napkin.

She will likely blush and feel a bit self-conscious, while at the same time also feeling drawn to how girly you're making her feel in comparison to your masculinity (i.e. that you have the balls to see her as the girl and you as the man who will take care of her and wipe the foam from the cappuccino off her lip).

Then, lean back and continue talking normally as if nothing happened.

She will be impressed and attracted because she will be feeling girly in comparison to you.

Then, once you sense things have calmed down between you, flirt with her again (e.g. playfully tease her about something, tell her that she smells good, touch her hand in passing or lean forward and gently move her hair out of her face) and then relax back into ordinary conversation once more.

As a result, sexual tension will build up between you and her.

Even if she doesn't openly admit it, she will be feeling excited and will want you to continue flirting and making her feel attracted.

You can then suggest meeting up later when you're both not at work.

When you meet up outside of work, just continue building up tension and get her to the point where she wants you make a move to hug her, kiss her and then release that tension with sex.

You can then go back to your place or hers (if you're not there already), have sex with her and get back into a relationship.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Back in the Workplace

Trying to get an ex back that you work with doesn't have to be difficult.

However, because you risk not only losing your ex for good, but also your job, you need to make sure you donâ€™t make the following mistakes when trying to get her back:

1. Losing confidence at work

If a guy allows a break up get him down, not only will it be difficult for him to re-attract her (i.e. because women are instinctively turned off by emotional weakness in men), but his work will also start to suffer.

For example: If heâ€™s at a meeting and his ex is there too, he might feel nervous and insecure and not have his say like he used to.

Alternatively, if thereâ€™s a project that requires him to work with his ex, it might be difficult for him to co-operate with her effectively, because he feels uncertain and self-conscious around her.

Naturally, if this goes on for too long, it can impact the quality of his work and may come to the attention of his boss, which could result in him being demoted, warned, transferred to another department or even fired.

So, donâ€™t let that happen to you.

Make sure that you maintain your confidence around your ex, regardless of how bad you might feel about losing her.

Not only will she feel respect and attraction for you for staying emotionally strong despite what happened between you, but youâ€™ll also gain the respect of everyone at work who knows about what happened.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

2. Appearing dejected, sad or lonely

[image: Appearing dejected, sad or lonely]

Thereâ€™s a good reason why a lot of companies discourage (and in some cases, forbid) their employees from dating each other.

Essentially, they want to avoid the fallout from when a relationship doesnâ€™t work (e.g. the employee stops pulling their weight at work, they cause coworkers to feel uncomfortable).

So, if a guy walks around the workplace looking sad, dejected and lonely after his break up, it will inevitably start to cause problems.

Firstly, his colleagues and work friends will begin to feel uncomfortable around him and they may begin ignoring him and excluding him from out of work get-togethers.

This will result in him feeling even more dejected and alone.

Then, his ex will likely begin feeling embarrassed by his behavior, which will cause her to distance herself from him even more.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

3. Being afraid to discreetly flirt with her

Sometimes a guy will be afraid to discreetly flirt with his ex, because he assumes that flirting means harassment.

Flirting is not harassment.

Harassment (i.e. begging, pleading, being sexually aggressive) is harassment.

Flirting in a subtle, discreet and professional manner is not harassment.

It's just two, professional, mature human beings communicating with each other in a playful, innocent, friendly manner, with subtly romantic undertones that are not harmful to themselves or others.

Yet, despite that, many guys are still too afraid to flirt in a discreet manner.

So, a guy will only talk to his ex woman in a friendly, professional manner and hope that she somehow changes her mind.

However, in most cases she won't because he's not doing anything to spark her sexual and romantic feelings for him.

He's just causing her to feel neutral around him or worse, turned off even further because there's clearly no spark between them anymore.

So, if he then suggests getting back together she says something like, â€œIâ€™m sorry, but I donâ€™t feel that way about you anymore. Iâ€™m fine being friends and coworkers, but getting back together is out of the question. Please don't ever ask me that again, or I will have to go to management and complain.â€

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, you have to spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you first.

When you do that, she then has a reason to get back with you, or at least catch up with you outside the workplace to explore her newfound feelings.

So, don't go around treating her like a neutral friend and then expect her to feel turned on.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

4. Trying to get her back via e-mail

Using e-mail to get an ex back might seem like the safest option, especially when you and your ex work together (i.e. you don't want to be seen talking to her in person).

Yet, for number of reasons, emailing your ex at work is not as safe as you might think.

The first reason why is that emails at work can easily be seen by management or HR, or be seen by a nosey coworker who is looking over her shoulder at work or happens to look at your screen when you're typing the email.

Not only can that cause you and her embarrassment, but it could even result in disciplinary action (or get you fired).

The second reason why is because emails can easily be misinterpreted in a negative tone of voice, even though you sent it while thinking in a positive tone of voice.

The third reason why is that a woman can assume that her ex is emailing her because he's too afraid to man up and talk to her in person.

She then feels even more turned off by him and more motivated to stay broken up.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

5. Waiting too long to make a move and she then moves on

Sometimes, a guy will assume that because he and his ex work together, it would be better if he takes things very slow with her, rather than trying to get her back within 2-3 weeks.

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

If you ignore her or ‘play it cool’ and don’t actively spark her feelings of romantic and sexual attraction for you, someone else will.

Then, by the time you get around to making a move, she will likely say something along the lines of, *âIâm sorry, but I thought what we had was over. You kept your distance from me, so I took that as a sign to move on. I have a new boyfriend now and Iâm happy, so letâs just keep things professional between us from now on.*â

So, if you want to get her back, make a move.

You can re-attract her, seduce her and get her back.

You have opportunities to do that almost every time you see her at work.

So, make the most of the opportunity you have.

Re-attract her, seduce her and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Using Limited Contact With a Narcissist Ex Girlfriend

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 possible reactions from a narcissist ex girlfriend, when a guy uses limited contact as his approach to get her back:

1. She doesn't care if it's limited or no contact because she has no interest in her ex

Sometimes a guy will use limited contact as a way of hopefully making his narcissist ex girlfriend come running back to him, but it won't work because she simply doesn't care about him anymore.

Yet, he doesn't really think about that.

Essentially, he hopes that if he doesn't call, text or interact with her on social media too often, she will be so shocked at his lack of interest that she will then want to get back with him.

Although that tactic can work if a woman actually cares about her ex and secretly wants him back, it will usually backfire with almost all women (not just narcissists).

Here's why:

Firstly, if a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for her ex and was totally sure about her decision to break up with him, then not hearing from him all that often isn't really going to bother her much at all.

Instead, she's going to focus on moving on and finding another guy who will make her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with him (e.g. attracted, adored), rather than going back to an ex who doesn't.

Secondly, even if a woman does temporarily contact her ex because she doesn't like that he's ignoring her, it won't mean that he has gotten her back.

As soon as she gets his attention again and sees that he still wants her back, she will feel satisfied and then quickly try to move on with a new guy, so she doesn't have to worry about her ex anymore.

So, if your ex girlfriend doesn't have feelings for you anymore, you stand a much better chance of getting her back by interacting with her (via text, on social media and especially over the phone and in person) and reawakening her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, than you do by ignoring her or using limited contact to 'play it cool' and not seem very interested.

What gets an ex woman back fast, including a narcissist, is when you focus on making her have strong sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

That is what always works the best.

This is why, if your plan is to limit your contact with her in the hopes that it will make her come running back to you, it's probably not going to play out the way you think.

In fact, when she realizes that you're not calling, texting, e-mailing or messaging her on social media, her narcissistic mind might even cause her to think, âCool! Iâm happy that heâs leaving me alone, rather than nagging me to give him another chance. Iâm so beautiful and so attractive that I don't need him anyway. Now, I can finally enjoy my life and start sleeping around! I can focus on finding myself another guy who knows how to make me feel the way I want to feel in a relationship, without the hassle of dealing with an ex who can't get the message that I don't want him anymore. He's not good enough for me. I'm way too hot for him. I'm so over him now. Gross. I'm getting a new guy.â€œ

Clearly, you don't want her think about you in that way, right?

This is why, the best way to get her back, is to start making her feel like she has made a mistake by leaving you.

Make her feel as though she won't ever feel right about herself again, unless she gives you another chance.

Watch thisâ€œ

Another possible reaction from a narcissist ex girlfriend when a guy uses limited contact is thatâ€œ

2. Limited contact isn't enough for her, so she opens up to phone calls and in person meet ups

This is good reaction and it sometimes happens, but not always.

In some cases, not hearing from her ex after a break up can cause a narcissistic woman to start thinking things like, â€œHmmmâ€œ|this isnâ€œt what I was expecting. I thought he would be begging me for another chance, but instead I hardly hear from him anymore! This doesnâ€œt make any sense. Why is he being like this? He must want me back, right? I mean, why wouldn't he? I'm so beautiful. Surely, he knows that he won't be able to find another woman like me. So, why isnâ€œt he chasing after me? Whatâ€œs going on here?â€œ

As a result, a woman like that will stop playing hard to get when her ex contacts her, or she will contact him and try to get something going between them again.

For example: She might send him a text saying something along the lines of, â€œHey, Iâ€œve missed you. Why donâ€œt you give me a call sometime? We're not enemies now you know? It's okay to say hi.â€œ

Alternatively, she might wait to hear from him and when he does contact her, she will say hi, be friendly and then suggest that they catch up and say hi.

So, limited contact can work in cases like that, but there's no real guarantee with that approach.

The most guaranteed approach that you can use is to actively make your ex have sexual and romantic feelings for you again, based on how you interact with her.

You can do that with limited contact, but just don't waste time 'playing it cool' or acting like a friend.

Make use of the contact that you have with her to get sparks flying between you and her again.

That's what gets the job done quicker and easier with a woman.

Another possible reaction from a narcissist ex girlfriend to limited contact is â€œ

3. She replies to her ex's limited contact, but moves on with another guy at the same time

For a narcissist, it's all about her.

As long as she is getting what she wants, she doesn't care what happens to other people.

So, if a guy is using limited contact with a narcissist ex girlfriend as a way of getting her back (e.g. he sends her an occasional text or social media message, clicks like on a few of her posts), she may string him along by responding to him from time to time.

Then, while heâs happily thinking things like, *âCool! At least sheâs replying to me. Maybe thatâs a sign that she still has some feelings for me and that she hasnât been moving on. Maybe if I keep this up for a while longer, she will eventually realize that she misses me and we can then work on getting our relationship back together again. Iâve just got to play it cool and stick with limited contact,*â she uses the time apart to find herself a new guy.

As a result, she feels great about herself the whole time, knowing that she has two men who want her, adore her and are available to her, without giving a second thought to how that makes her ex (or her new man) feel.

Hereâs the thing thoughâ!

If your ex girlfriend truly is a narcissist, then sheâs only going to do what feels good to her (even if it means keeping you around for her amusement while she moves on with another guy).

That may sound cruel, but thatâs the way many narcissists are.

Another possible reaction from a narcissist ex girlfriend isâ!

4. She misinterprets your texts as meaning that youâre still totally in love with her

If a woman is a narcissist, then she might see your limited contact as meaning that youâre still in love with her and are hoping to get her back by 'playing it cool.'

So, rather than think, *âWhy isnât he calling me all the time? Could it be possible that heâs moving on? He only texts me every now and then. Maybe heâs over me!*â she will likely be thinking something like, *âHeâs trying to play it cool, but I can see that heâs still totally into me. He just canât accept that weâre broken up and heâs probably just sitting around at home pining for me. Thatâs so sad. Heâs such a loser now. Iâm too good for him anyway. I should go out this weekend and meet some new guys. Why am I even thinking about him? Heâs not good enough for me.*â

That line of thinking allows her to feel good about herself, as she continues to move on without him.

A Better Approach to Getting a Narcissist Ex Girlfriend Back

If you want to get your narcissist ex girlfriend back for real, try this approach instead:

1. Donât worry about what she may or may not think. Just do what will work on her

Whether a woman is a narcissist or not, the same principles of attraction and seduce apply to getting her back.

You need to get her feeling attracted to you again, so she naturally wants to be with you and begins to feel as though she will regret it if she doesnât give you another chance.

So, from now on, stop thinking things like, *âIf I contact her right away, she might think Iâm desperate. She might then reject me to make herself feel good*â or, *âShe always thinks about herself, so maybe if I use limited contact, it will shock her into wanting me back because she will hate that Iâm not chasing after her.*â

Instead, just do what works to get a woman back.

Start by attracting her on a phone call and then meet up with her in person to attract her and seduce her.

Get to a kiss, sex and open the door back up to a relationship between you and her.

Here's the thingâ€¦!

Using limited contact can work on a woman who is still in love with her ex guy, or a woman who is struggling to find a replacement guy.

However, if a woman isn't in love with her ex anymore, or is easily able to move on without him by hooking up with a new guy, she will usually do that, regardless of whether he is using limited contact or no contact.

So, what you need to do is interact with your ex, re-attract her, seduce her and get her back, rather than playing long, drawn out games with limited contact or no contact.

Another thing you can do to get your narcissist ex girlfriend back isâ€¦!

2. Use her narcissism to your advantage

If your ex girlfriend thinks the world revolves around her and that whatever she says and does matters the most, then rather than trying to change her, just use her beliefs to make her want you again.

How?

Let her think that she has the power prior to meeting up with you, but then take back power when you interact with her in person.

For example: Imagine that youâ€¦ are on a call with your ex with the intention of getting a meet up with her.

After using some humor to ease the tension between you and her and to reawaken some of her feelings for you, you can say something along the lines of, â€œAnyway, so we should catch up to say hi sometime this week to say hello as friends. Iâ€™m busy on Tuesday and Thursday, but I'm free on Monday and Wednesday. Which one of those two days suits you best?â€

She might then play hard to get and try to test how much power she has over you, by responding with something like, â€œI donâ€™t think thatâ€™s a good ideaâ€ or, â€œWhat makes you think I want to see you again?â€

You can then laugh and say, “Of course I don't think that. We'd just be catching up as friends. Anyway, if we catch up and you then decide that you hate being there or never want to talk to me ever again, you can leave any time you want. It will be up to you. You can call the shots. If you don't ever want to talk to me again after then, I'll give you my word that I won't ever contact you again. So, which day suits you best, Monday or Wednesday? Itâ€™s your call.â€

She will then likely agree to meet up with you, because she feels as though she has the power.

By the wayâ€¦!

Did you notice that even though youâ€¦ are making out as though she is the one in control (i.e. by saying sheâ€™s the one who is calling the shots), youâ€¦ are actually the one in control (i.e. by making her choose a day that suits you)?

Just by doing that, she instinctively starts feeling some respect and attraction for you (i.e. for being masculine, confident), even though she might not realize it.

Then, when you meet up with her and she tries to get the upper hand over you by saying something like, â€œLook, Iâ€™m only giving you 5 minutes and then Iâ€™m walking out, okay? Make this quick. I nearly didnâ€™t come today. So, say what you want to say and then Iâ€™m going to go,â€ you can take the power back by showing her that her fake drama is not getting to you.

You can see the funny side of how sheâ€™s behaving by laughing and saying something along the lines of, â€œOh, stop being such a drama queen! Take a seat, have a drink and letâ€™s say hello for a minute.â€

Initially, she might be a bit shocked to discover that she doesnâ€™t have power over you like she thought.

However, even if she doesnâ€™t show it, she will be feeling respect and attraction to you for being confident and emotionally strong enough to lead the interaction, rather than letting her walk all over you.

As a result, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from wanting to be around you more and more.

She might try to hide it and may even say, “Hey, it’s not working you know? Whatever you’re trying to do. I’m not falling for it” to see if you panic and feel like you can’t get her back, or that she’s not feeling respect and attraction for you.

You can then laugh and say, “Of course not. There’s no way that you and I would ever get back together. We’re just catching up as friends.”

Since she will be feeling respect and attraction for you in that moment, she will naturally have to ask herself, “But, do I want to only just be friends? Why am I feeling drawn to him all of a sudden? Why do I want to hug him and kiss him again?”

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Should I Get Back With a Cheating Ex?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your ex cheated on you, here are 4 things to consider before you make your decision:

1. Will you really forgive her?

For a relationship to last, a couple must be able to trust each other completely.

If that trust isn't there, it will eat away at the relationship by causing one or both people to behave in unloving, disrespectful ways.

So, the question you should be asking right now is not, “Should I get back with a cheating ex?” but rather, “If we get back together again, will I be able to honestly, truly forgive her and move forward in a new relationship together without me always bringing up what happened in the past or subconsciously holding it against her?”

If you honestly believe that you can forgive her and start over with a clean slate and build a relationship that is better and stronger than it was before (i.e. because you've both grown and matured from the experience), then yes, you can feel justified in making the decision to get back with your cheating ex and give the relationship another chance.

However, if you don't feel like it's possible for you to fully forgive her and deep down, you will always be wondering, “Is she going to cheat on me again?” or, “Did she enjoy kissing him or having sex with him more than she enjoys it with me?” and being suspicious of her actions, then the answer is “No,” you probably shouldn't get back with her because it will just end up causing you more pain and heartache.

The truth is, even though you definitely have a good reason not to want to forgive your ex for cheating on you, if you decide to get back with her, you have to be able to fully forgive her if want the relationship to last.

So, before you get back with a cheating ex, make sure you can honestly forgive her, which will then allow you to stop holding onto the past and focus on the present and future with her.

Another thing to consider is

2. Will you seek to get revenge later on?

You can do that to her if you want to, but will getting revenge by cheating on her when she loves you again get rid of the pain she made you feel, or make you lose the relationship and regret it later on?

It's something to honestly think about.

For example: Sometimes, a guy will consider getting back together with a cheating ex just so he can make her fall in love with him and then cheat on her to get revenge.

Yet, he ends up falling for her charms again and loves her completely and she then goes and cheats on him again, breaking his heart for the second time.

So, before you get back with a cheating ex solely for the purpose of getting revenge on her, ask yourself this question: “Is she really worth wasting more of my time on her?”

You may be thinking that the answer is “No.”

Yet, if you honestly believe that the answer is, “Yes” then go ahead and get her back.

Don’t listen to what anyone else tells you.

If you want her back, get her back.

Enjoy a relationship with her again and then decide what you want to do later on.

Another thing to consider isâ□|

3. Will she do it again?

Although thereâ□□s no excuse that makes it okay for a woman to cheat on her guy and is often her fault, in some cases, it’s the guy’s fault and he has essentially driven her to cheat.

For example: If a woman finds herself in a relationship with a guy who fails to make her feel respect, attraction and love for him (e.g. he treats her more like a neutral friend or big sister than a desirable, sexy woman, or he makes her feel more like a mother figure to him, or he stops paying attention to her and expects her to just stick around and put up with it), she may begin to get bored.

Then, if she happens to interact with a guy (e.g. at work, university, in her hobby group) who gives her the attention that sheâ□□s so desperately craving and makes her feel feminine and girly in contrast to his masculine vibe, it may become difficult for her to remain faithful.

If something like that happened with your ex, then her cheating on you once doesn’t mean she will do it again.

It may have just been a mistake that she now regrets and she never intended to do it.

She just felt bored because you weren’t making her feel the way a woman wants to feel in a relationship, so she stuffed up and fell for some guy’s charm at a bar, party or wherever.

So, if you want to get her back, you’ve got to make sure that you can now make her feel attracted in the way that was missing in the relationship (e.g. if you were insecure, you are now very confident and can make her feel girly and feminine in comparison to your masculine vibe and confidence).

Yet, here’s the thingâ□|

A woman cheating isn’t always the guy’s fault.

There are some women out there who enjoy lying, cheating and breaking a guy’s heart.

Sometimes, women like that do it to make themselves feel better because they were once cheated on.

It keeps happening until they finally meet a guy who makes them want to be totally committed.

You can be that guy, but you have to be willing to try a different approach to attraction and the relationship (i.e. you have to create a dynamic in the relationship where she is trying to impress you and wants to treat you well).

Yet, before you do that, you have to decide whether or not you want to give her another chance.

So, the question isâ□|

Did your ex make a mistake, which she now regrets and desperately wants to make up for, or is she just a woman of bad character?

If you canâ□□t be sure that she will remain faithful to you the next time around and you still want her back, you need to seriously ask yourself why.

Could it be because you lack confidence in yourself and in your ability to find another (even better) woman other than her?

If that is the case, then it's more important for you to start believing in yourself and improving your ability to attract other women as you talk to them (i.e. so you can enjoy your choice of women), than it is to get her back.

Another thing to consider is

4. Have you fixed the things about yourself that turned her off in the first place?

When a woman cheats on her guy, it's often because she is desperate to experience the type of sexual attraction that she feels is lacking in her relationship with him.

For example: If a guy gets into the habit of treating his woman more like his best friend or 'one of the guys,' she will naturally stop feeling like a feminine, girly woman when she's with him.

When that happens, she might start looking outside of her relationship with her guy, to find a man who is more emotionally masculine and can make her feel the way she wants to feel in a relationship (i.e. feminine and girly).

Another example is where a guy wasn't affectionate enough (e.g. he never told her he loved her, he avoided touching or kissing her unless it was during sex).

This type of behavior will cause her to lose respect and attraction for him over time and feel as though they aren't in a loving, supportive relationship.

She will then hook up with a guy who gives her the attention and affection that she craves.

So, if you want to get back with your ex, you should focus on quickly fixing the things about yourself that caused her to cheat on you with another guy.

For example:

- Becoming more emotionally strong if you became emotionally weak in the relationship.
- Becoming more loving and emotionally open, if you became closed off, selfish and aloof in the relationship.
- Becoming more masculine in your behavior, if you fell into the habit of behaving in a less masculine way in the relationship.

3 Mistakes That Some Guys Make When Thinking About Getting Back With a Cheating Ex

Before you make your final decision about whether or not to get back with your cheating ex, be sure to avoid the following mistakes

1. Not blaming her if it really was her fault

If she is a bad woman who can't be trusted in a relationship with any guy, then you shouldn't be blaming yourself for the cheating.

Unfortunately, many guys don't learn what you are now learning, so they blame themselves and try to convince themselves that she really did just make a mistake this one time and would never do it again.

For example: A guy might say, “She really seemed remorseful for what she did. I’m pretty sure that if we got back together again, she wouldn’t do it again. Besides, everyone makes mistakes. That is her mistake and maybe it will even bring us closer together and make our relationship rock solid. After all, when she sees that I am willing to stick with her no matter what, she will see how serious I am and want to commit to me. She will know that she will never find another guy who loves her as much as I do.”

So, the question for you now is this: Do you think it was just a mistake and she wouldn’t want to do that again, or do you think that she is the kind of woman who would cheat on pretty much any man she was with?

If she made a silly mistake, then you can forgive her and not worry about it, but if your gut instinct is telling you that she would do it again, then don’t invest your heart and mind into a relationship with her again.

You can get her back to have sex with her a few more times, but just don’t commit to her emotionally.

The next mistake to avoid is

2. Not blaming yourself if it was your fault (or at least partially your fault)

In a relationship, it’s the man’s responsibility to create a relationship dynamic that makes his woman want to nurture and deepen the love between them.

Based on his approach to the relationship, the woman will either feel motivated to contribute to the relationship and be good to him, or she will feel like pulling away, being closed off and treating him with less and less respect over time.

The fact is that a woman is at her happiest in a relationship when she has a man who is good to her, but who also makes her feel motivated to be good to him, treat him well and make him feel loved.

Where so many men go wrong in a relationship with a woman, is by either putting in way more effort than her into the relationship to hopefully get her to love him and treat him well, or not putting enough effort into the relationship and causing her to feel like she is being taken for granted.

The best approach is a balanced approach where you create a relationship dynamic that causes her to want to be good to you, treat you well, be affectionate and be loving towards you, while you also treat her well at the same time.

When that happens, both of you don’t ever feel the need to break up. You only want to be together with each other in a committed relationship because that’s when you feel the best, most fulfilled, most loved and happiest.

So, what are some examples of a bad relationship dynamic that will bring out the worst in a woman?

Sometimes a guy will become overly controlling and jealous towards his woman, which may then cause her to become angry, resentful and closed off towards him.

She may then start lying to him and doing things behind his back (e.g. interacting with guys on social media in secret, going out after work with friends or colleagues without telling him) because she feels smothered by his jealousy.

He might then try to control her even more (e.g. by forbidding her to go out, checking up on her whereabouts, reading her messages and e-mails, getting her to unfriend any guy on social media that isn't a family member).

As a result, she becomes so angry at him and the dynamic he has created that in the heat of the moment, she cheats on him with another guy as a way of asserting her independence.

How about you?

Is it possible that you pushed your ex to act out in a way that went against her fundamental nature?

Is she a good woman who really wouldn't want to have to cheat on a man in a relationship, but you essentially pushed her to do it by making her put up with an unhappy, annoying relationship dynamic for too long?

If so, then you need to accept some of the responsibility for her cheating.

It's not all your fault of course, but if you did make her feel compelled to do it, then it's good to accept your part of the blame for what unfortunately happened.

Then, if you decide to get back with her, you need to make sure that you're not going to behave the way you did in the past.

You're going to be a new man that she wouldn't want to cheat on and you're going to bring out her good girl side, so she wants to treat you well, be loyal to you and love you no matter what.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

4. Not improving your ability to keep a woman happy in a relationship

If you decide to get back with your cheating ex, you can't just assume that everything will be okay now because she apologized and said she won't do it again.

If you want the relationship to work this time and for her to be faithful, you need to improve your ability to keep a woman happy in a relationship.

The first step is to understand what was missing in your relationship with her (e.g. Were you too insecure or needy? Did you treat her too much like a friend rather than making her feel like a sexy woman? Did you allow her to dominate you emotionally?).

If you don't take that first step and just get back with her, she will almost certainly break up with you or cheat on you again in future.

So, if you want to get her back, make sure that you approach it in a way that increases her attraction for you and makes her feel grateful to be getting another chance with such a great man as yourself.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I'm Pretty Sure That She Was the One, So I Want to Get Her Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 important questions to ask yourself to determine if she really was the one:

1. Was the connection you shared with her more special than you had with any other woman?

If you've dated other women prior to her (and maybe even after the break up) and have found that none of them ever made you feel the way your ex did, then it's only natural that you will want her back.

A big part of wanting to be with a woman is based on how she makes you feel.

In most cases, a man will fall in love with how a woman makes him feel (i.e. confident, in love, proud to be her man, loved, wanted, appreciated, respected, manly) and if that is taken away, it feels as though his life will never be that good again.

As a result, he may begin to think, "I will never find another woman who understands me the way that she did. We had such an amazing, deep connection. She knew pretty much everything about me and still loved me" or, "I can't imagine a future without her in it. I just don't want to be with another woman. I want her" or, "My life feels empty without her in it, so I won't stop until I have convinced her to give me another chance."

Yet, here's the thing!

Even though you might be pretty sure that she is the one and that's why you want her back, none of that really matters if she doesn't feel the same way about you.

Right now, all that counts is how she feels.

She fell in love with how you made her feel and she then fell out of love, based on how you ended up making her feel.

If you want her back, you have to change the way she feels when she interacts with you.

That is what matters the most.

So, if you want her back, you need to be focusing on her feelings for you, rather than on your feelings for her.

You have to actively re-spark the respect, attraction and love inside of her, so she can realize for herself that you and her share a special connection that she now doesn't want to let go of.

Only when that happens, will she truly become open to talking to you, meeting up with you and seeing where things go from there.

Another question to ask yourself to determine if your ex is really the one for you is!

2. Can you see yourself spending the rest of your life with her?

Sometimes, the shock of breaking up can cause a guy to put his ex on a pedestal.

He starts thinking about all the good times and how great things used to be with his ex, versus how terrible it feels now that sheâs gone.

When that happens, itâs only natural that he will start to think of her as being ‘the one.’

Yet, when the initial panic of losing her wears off, some guys realize that their ex woman really wasn’t who he thought she was.

If you think that you’re ex probably isn’t the one for you, then watch this video before you try to get her back:

If you’re still not sure if she is the one for you, ask yourself the following questions:

- Can you honestly see yourself spending the next 20, 30, 40 or even 80 years with her and still love her no matter what (e.g. even if she gets fat/old and wrinkled/has an accident and you need to take care of her)?
- Is she the kind of woman who will be loyal to you throughout the years, or do you secretly believe she might cheat on you if she gets bored, or if the relationship goes through a bad patch?
- Will she always put you first in her life, or are other things much more important to her (e.g. her career, friends, hobbies)?
- Do you and her want the same things in life (e.g. to get married, have children, travel), or are you hoping that over time you will be able to convince her to see things from your point of view?

If you can honestly answer those questions (without making excuses for her faults) and you still believe that she is the one, then you should start doing what needs to be done to get her back.

What needs to be done?

Use any and all of your interactions with her to reawaken her feelings for you (e.g. by making her smile and laugh, flirting with her to create a sexual vibe, showing her via your behavior and conversation style that you really are a new man now), so she can begin to see you as being the one for her too.

Another question to ask yourself to determine if your ex is really the one for you isâ!

3. If you get back together, will you be able to give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants?

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she usually has a good reason for doing it (e.g. she was tired of how insecure he was, or how much he took her for granted and got to the point where she’d had enough).

Although her guy might not be able to pinpoint exactly what her reasons for breaking up with him are, for her, it will be crystal clear.

She will know when and how he stopped giving her the kind of attraction experience she wants in a relationship (e.g. when he stopped being manly and started acting in a childish manner around her, when he stopped treating her as a sexy woman and began treating her like a friend or ‘one of the guys’).

So, if you want to get your ex back for real, one of the most important steps you have to take is to understand her real, secret reasons for breaking up with you.

Then, when you interact with her again (e.g. on a phone call or in person), you can make her feel attracted in the ways she always wanted.

By the way!

If you're unsure of what to look for, here are some more examples of some of the common things that destroy a woman's attraction for a man!

- He goes from being confident and self-assured at the beginning of the relationship, to being insecure, needy and clingy as they spend more time together (i.e. because he lacks belief in his value to her and fears losing her).
- He tries to make her happy by letting her make all the decisions in the relationship and by always getting her way, but she then feels turned off because she feels more emotionally dominant than him.
- He goes from being loving and attentive towards her to taking her for granted (i.e. he put on an act to impress her at the start of the relationship and once things became comfortable he stopped putting in the effort with her anymore).
- He starts off being a confident, fairly manly guy, but ends up becoming emotionally sensitive and she feels as though she has to mother him and take care of him.
- He has no real purpose and direction in his life, causing her to feel insecure about her future with him.

Do any of those apply to you?

If yes, don't beat yourself up about it.

Most guys make mistakes like that in a relationship and women know it.

Women know how difficult it is to find a man who has his stuff together emotionally and is able to build on the love, respect and attraction in the relationship.

So, don't think of yourself as being a failure.

Instead, look at it as a good thing, because when you understand where you went wrong in your relationship with your ex, you can quickly change and improve.

Then, when you interact with her again, you can show her by the way you now talk, think, behave and interact with her that you've learned from the experience and have become a better man as a result.

If she can see that you are now at a level of understand that surpasses most men out there, she will feel compelled to give you another chance.

Another question to ask yourself to determine if your ex is really the one for you is!

4. Was she the most attractive woman you've ever had a relationship with?

If not, was it more about the emotional connection?

If you and your ex had an amazing connection (e.g. you viewed life from the same perspective, you loved each others quirks and odd personality traits, you shared a similar vision for the future, you felt more comfortable in each others company than with anyone else), then it's only natural that it will be hard for you to let go of her and move on.

Yet, even if you believe what you and her shared was unique and special, it doesn't matter if she doesn't feel the same way too.

So, don't go contacting her and telling her all about how special you think the connection that you and her shared was.

That doesn't matter to her right now.

What matters is how you make her feel now, not how she felt with you in the past.

BTW: If your ex was the most attractive woman you've ever had a relationship with, was the sex good all the way, or did the spark die out?

If the spark died out, then you need to be prepared to bring it back to life and keep it alive when you're back together, otherwise the relationship will fall apart again.

If you are okay with that (i.e. just getting back together for a while and then breaking up), then fine, no problem.

However, if you want the relationship to work this time around, then you'd better upgrade your understand about female attraction, so you are able to make her feel satisfied and in love with you for life.

It's easy to do, but you have to know what you don't currently know.

The only way to do that is to keep learning.

Fill in the missing pieces.

Discover the secrets.

On that note!

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get Back an Ex They Feel Sure is the One

Before you rush off and say or do something that might turn your ex off even more, first take a moment to learn the common mistakes to avoid in your situation.

Here's where other guys go wrong when in a similar situation to yours!

1. Thinking that telling her she is the one will make her feel special and give him another chance

Sometimes a guy thinks that if he says, "I made a mistake. I know I stuffed things up between us, but I've now realized that you're the one for me. It's you and only you. I've never loved another woman as much as I love you. I will do whatever it takes to get you back. We belong with each other. I feel it deep within my soul," his ex will then suddenly see the light.

She will then magically respond with something along the lines of, "Wow! You're right! I never realized it before, but we ARE meant to be together for life. It was so silly of us to break up and almost lose what we have with each other. We had the most amazing connection. WHAT on Earth was I thinking by breaking up with you?" and run back into his arms and his life.

That would be nice, right?

Well, it's not how the real world works.

Although that kind of thing might regularly play out on TV shows or in romantic movies, in real life, most women won't rush back to an ex guy just because he tells her that she's the one.

Why?

When a woman has stopped experiencing romantic feelings for her ex, him talking about her being 'the one' just turns her off even more.

Instead of being swept off her feet by the notion of them being made for each other, she perceives his talk about her being the one as a desperate attempt to change her feelings for him.

He has no idea how to re-attract her sexually and make her feel respect, lust and love for him again, so he tries to flatter her into getting back together by talking about 'the one' or 'soul mates' or some other romantic idea.

So, if you don't want your ex to see you as being a desperate, hopeless, romantic who has no idea how to make her feel lust and love again, then don't waste your time telling her that you think she is the one for you.

She just won't care about being 'the one for you' if her feelings for you are currently turned off.

You have to turn her feelings back on first, before she will begin to wonder if you and her are meant to be together, or if she should at least give you another chance to avoid being left behind by you and regretting it later.

Another mistake that a guy might make in a situation like yours, is

2. Talking about his feelings, wants and needs in a long letter to her

Not knowing how else to express himself or get through to her, a guy will often make the mistake of unloading on her with a long, drawn out letter.

He tells her how sorry he is, how much she means to him, how sad he is without her, how seriously he takes their relationship, how he now understands where he went wrong, how much he wants a future with her and then asks her to reconsider her decision.

Yet, a woman is usually thinking, What all he's doing is talking about his feelings, needs, desires and what he wants from the situation. Does he honestly think I'm going to give him another chance based only on his feelings for me? If anything, him trying to manipulate me by telling me all this only reinforces my decision to remain broken up. I don't want to be with a guy who only thinks about himself and what he wants!

Even though the guy had good intentions by sending the letter, a woman won't see it that way.

She will see it as him trying to manipulate her into giving him another chance with cleverly written, romantic lines.

She has no, in person proof that he really has changed or that she feels differently when around him.

It's just a letter, email or long message.

It's not him.

So, whatever you do, don't make the mistake of trying to convince her of things via the written word.

Words can be appropriate in some situations in life (i.e. this article I've written to help you), but words aren't always the best solution to get through to someone.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Waiting too long to get her back and she moves on and is happy enough without him

Sometimes a guy thinks that if he waits long enough, his ex girlfriend or wife will come to the same conclusion as him on her own (i.e. that heâs the one for her).

To hopefully get that result, he will either limit, or completely cut off contact with her and wait to see what happens from there.

Then, when he calls or texts her after a few weeks or months, he will usually be disappointed to hear something like, *âOh, hiâit's you. Well, I initially missed you and thought maybe we could work things out, but you never called or even sent me a text. So, rather than wasting my time pining over you, I focused on moving on. Now Iâm over you and Iâm happy. So, please don't contact me anymore. I wish you all the best.*â

Alternatively, rather than cutting off contact, a guy might stay in contact with his ex and pretend that heâs not interested in getting back together again.

As a result, she thinks something like, *âOh well, if heâs not interested in a relationship, Iâm not going to waste my time waiting for him to make a move. I'm going to go out with my girlfriends and find a guy, or get on Tinder and start going on dates.*â

She then focuses on fully getting over him and moving on.

So, if you want to get your ex back for real, donât waste time waiting and hoping she will coming running back to you one day if you just give her enough time.

Instead, interact with her and actively reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so she naturally feels drawn to you and wants to hug you, kiss you, have sex with you and get back together.

If you donât use that approach, you may end up spending the rest of your life thinking, *âShe was the one and I lost her. Now I will never be happy with another woman again.*â

Donât let that happen to you.

Another mistake isâ

4. Not knowing how to make her feel attracted in new and interesting ways, so she doesn't feel excited by his re-approach

If you try to get your ex back by making the same old attraction mistakes you made before, sheâs just going to keep saying things like, *âNo, Iâm not interested. Itâs over between us,*â or *âPlease stop bothering me. I donât want to get back together again. Maybe you think that weâre meant to be together, but I donât. Just leave me alone. Move on.*â

If you want to get your ex back, you need to use a new and more exciting approach to making her feel attracted.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Wished Me the Best For My Future. Does She Mean it?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will wish her ex the best for the future:

1. She is just being polite as she says goodbye

Sometimes a woman is just a nice, well-mannered person and it's in her nature to want to end things on a good note.

As a result, rather than cause a scene or react in a negative way like some other women do (e.g. being bitchy, throwing a tantrum), she instead does the mature thing and wishes her ex the best for his future.

In her eyes, she's just being polite and doing what she feels is the right thing to do.

Of course, it's understandable that her ex might misinterpret her politeness as a sign that she's not open to a reconciliation and is essentially saying, "Goodbye. All the best."

So, a guy might start thinking things like, "It looks like she's already cut me out of her life and mind because she's wishing me the best for the future. By saying that to me, it must mean that she's not going to stick around in my life anymore, even as a friend. I guess I just need to accept that it's over and that I can never get her back. She doesn't want to be a part of my future."

Here's the thing though!

Even if your ex is only being polite to you and currently isn't interested in getting back together again, it doesn't mean you can't change how she feels.

You can.

When you reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you again (e.g. by using humor to break down her defenses when you talk with her on the phone or in person, showing her that you've moved past the level you were at before, making her feel attracted in new and exciting ways) she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

The love will begin to reawaken in her heart and she will feel drawn to you.

This is something that happens naturally and automatically, even if she didn't feel that way before and even if she had planned on forgetting about you and moving on.

Another possible reason why your ex might have wished you the best for the future is!

2. She is acting like she is fine without you, when she isn't

If a woman is having a difficult time getting over her ex (e.g. she still has romantic feelings for him, she has been secretly missing him, she is struggling to get rid of the pain of breaking up), she might say something like, "I wish you the best for the future," as a way of covering up her true feelings.

She may think, "I don't want to give him the satisfaction of seeing how much this break up has hurt me and have him gloat over it. So, I'm going to pretend that I'm fine with everything that happened between us. I'll show him that I don't care if he moves on and has a great life without me. In that way, he won't get to feel like he won and I won't come across as looking desperate.

Yet, here's the thing!

Regardless of whether your ex means it when she wishes you the best for your future or not, you can always use it as an opportunity to spark some of her feelings for you again.

For example: If your ex says that she wishes you the best for your future, you can respond with something along the lines of, Yeah, I wish you the best for the future too. Of course, that doesn't mean I wouldn't still want my future to have you in it, but I accept that we've broken up. Life goes on and right now, I'm working hard on making some progress on my goals in life, which has been great. However, I do still miss you from time to time.

By saying something like that to her, while maintaining your masculinity and emotional strength, you're giving her an opening to express her true feelings for you as well (e.g. that she has been missing you and hasn't been coping very well with the break up).

Women admire that kind of confident, non-needy honesty from a man who is continuing to move forward in life no matter what happens around him, so your ex will automatically start to feel surges of respect and sexual attraction for you again.

When that happens, her walls start to crumble and she becomes open to getting back together again.

Another possible reason why your ex might have wished you the best for the future is

3. You were just being neutral and friendly with her, so that's an appropriate response

If you're only being neutral or friendly around your ex and not even flirting with her a little bit (e.g. because you're afraid that if you do she will get angry with you and cut you out of her life completely), it's possible that she believes that you're over her and don't want her back again.

So, rather than make a fool of herself in your eyes (e.g. by showing doubts about her decision to break up) she just wishes you the best for your future to hide her true feelings.

However, secretly she may be thinking, Well, this sucks. How sad. I guess he really is over me. Oh well, I just need to be mature about it and accept that we won't be getting back together again and move on. I've wished him all the best for his future. He clearly accepted that, so I guess it's just about both of us moving on now.

Yet, here's the thing!

If your goal is to get your ex back, don't pretend you only want to be her friend, or worse, that you don't have any sexual feelings for her (i.e. you don't find her desirable) anymore.

Of course, it's totally fine to be friendly with her, as long as you make sure you're not pretending to be an innocent friend who isn't interested in her in a sexual or romantic way.

Important: Showing her that you have interest in her doesn't mean that you should pour your heart out to her and tell her that you still love her and want to be in a relationship.

Don't do that!

Instead, focus on making her feel sexually attracted and turned on during interactions with you (e.g. by flirting with her and creating sexual tension), so that she will naturally begin to open up to you and start wanting a relationship again.

Another possible reason why your ex might have wished you the best for the future isâ€¦

4. She has been moving on since the break up

By the time a break up happens, a woman will sometimes have already disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her guy and will be ready to start the process of moving on. Although she might stay in a relationship with him for days, weeks, or in some instances even months before breaking it off, mentally she might have already started moving on.

So, when the break up happens, rather than wasting a lot of time trying to deal with the pain and disillusionment of what happened, a woman like that just focuses on getting over her ex as quickly as possible and moving on.

For example: She mightâ€¦

- Start going out more with her single friends and doing fun things together.
- Open herself up to meeting new men (e.g. by going to bars or clubs, flirting with guys she knows have been interested in her, getting on a dating app or site).
- Get on Tinder and start attending dates with random guys, which might sometimes lead to kissing and sex.
- Focus more on her studies/work/hobbies.

Then, by the time her ex guy contacts her (i.e. if he's been using the ineffective No Contact Rule, which doesn't work well on women), she will have already moved on emotionally and in many cases, physically, because she will have opened herself up to new guys and new experiences.

As a result, she can easily say to her ex boyfriend (or husband), â€œI wish you the best for your future,â€ and mean it because she doesn't feel the need to get back with him at that point and can see a happy future without him.

So, if you want to get another chance with your ex, the main thing you need to remember is thisâ€¦

It's much easier to change how a woman feels when you are actively interacting with her and making her feel attracted to you again, compared to giving her too much time to fully recover and move on (i.e. making the mistake of waiting 30 or 60 days to finally contact her and hope that she wants you back and hasn't been moving on).

Another possible reason why your ex might have wished you the best for the future isâ€¦

5. She wants to end things on a good note

It's a woman's natural instinct to want to protect herself from being physically hurt by a man. So, when it comes to breaking up, rather than risk her ex getting angry and possibly becoming aggressive, or even violent with her, a woman will usually decide to end things in the best possible way.

She might say, â€œI wish you the best for the future. I really hope you will be happy and find a woman who deserves and appreciates you. You're a great guy, but you and I just aren't right for each other. I wish you all the bestâ€ rather than getting into an argument with him, or blaming him for everything that happened.

Hereâs the thing thoughâ!

Although youâre probably not the kind of guy who would get angry or violent in response to a break up, just to be 100% sure, your ex may simply be saying, “I wish you all the best” to make sure that she ends things on a somewhat peaceful, positive note.

By doing that, she has less reason to fear any potential consequences of being mean or cruel to you after the break up.

However, what she said, or why she said it doesnât really matter.

The most important thing is that if you want her back, you use every interaction you have with her from now on (e.g. via text, social media, on the phone and especially in person) to re-spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

That is what really matters.

The more you make her feel good when sheâs around you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel like a desirable woman), the more she will begin to want to be part of your future again, especially if she can see that you’re not pushing for a relationship.

When she feels attracted and sees that you’re not trying to push her into anything, she will naturally begin to think, “HmmmâI like him again now. Should I give him another chance? I don’t want to just walk away now. I feel like I will be missing out on something great.”

When she is thinking that way about you, it’s then so much easier for you to get her back, compared to you trying to convince her or worse, killing yourself with stress while you cut off contact for months in the hope that she will miss you and come running back.

While you cut off contact, you have to deal with the worry that she might be having sex and falling in love with a new man.

Don’t put yourself through that.

Take control of the ex back process and get her back by re-attracting her, making her want you back and not pushing for a relationship.

3 Ways That Guys Go Wrong When an Ex Wishes Them the Best For the Future

Whether she meant it when she wished you the best for your future, is not something you should spend any more time thinking about.

Instead, you need to start asking yourself, âWhat will it take to reactivate her feelings for me and make her want a relationship again?â

The answer is actually pretty simple.

Firstly, make sure you use every interaction with her to spark her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again).

Secondly, don’t push for a relationship once you have re-attracted her.

Thirdly, avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Thinking that “I wish you all the best for the future” means, “There’s no chance of us sharing a future together.”

If a woman is saying things like, “I wish you the best for your future,” there’s it doesn’t necessarily mean that she doesn’t want anything else to do with him.

Of course, it could be her way of saying that she doesn’t want anything else to do with her ex, but even if that is true, it still doesn’t matter.

Why?

The truth is, a woman’s feelings can be changed and brought back to life based on how the man talks, behaves and acts around her.

So, it doesn’t really matter what she said.

What matters is how you make her feel from now on.

For example: If a man talks to his ex woman and he is being confident, making her laugh and smile and making her feel feminine and girly in his presence, then she is naturally going to feel some sparks of respect and sexual attraction for him.

Yet, if he is being insecure, self-doubting and expecting her to take the lead in the ex back process (i.e. help him get her back by explaining what he needs to change, being really nice to him), then her feelings for him are going to remain dormant.

Seeing that nothing has changed, she will feel even more convinced that she made the right decision by breaking up with him.

She will then keep herself closed off and hope that her ex gets the message and leaves her alone.

Here’s the thing!

If you want your ex back, you have to believe in yourself and in your ability to change how she feels.

When you actively re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you, regardless of what she’s saying outwardly, her resolve to move on without you will be breaking down on the inside.

She will start to feel drawn to you again and before she knows it, her words of, “I wish you the best for your future” will start to become something that she regretted saying.

She will then want to start giving you signs that she wants you back, or is at least open to giving the relationship another chance and seeing how it goes.

The next mistake to avoid is!

2. Feeling unwelcome to re-attract her and get her back

Some guys make the mistake of thinking that because a woman is saying, “I wish you the best for your future,” if he then attempts to get her back (e.g. by flirting with her and re-attracting her), she will get angry with him and pull away even more.

Yet, that’s not how it works.

If a guy is not actively making his ex feel respect and attraction for him, his neutral approach is simply going to make her feel nothing for him.

She will then focus on getting over him by finding herself another guy who will make her feel sexually attracted.

Don't let that happen to you.

If you want to get your ex back, you've got to actively make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

So, don't be afraid to flirt with her and make her have feelings for you again.

Remember: A romantic relationship between a man and a woman has to have a basis of sexual attraction and respect.

If that isn't there, it's a friendship at best and it won't last.

On the other hand, when you create sparks of sexual attraction between you and your ex, she then naturally has the desire to want to release that sexual tension with hugs, kisses and sex.

As a result, it becomes so much easier for you to get her back.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Waiting for weeks or months for potential signs from her that she's changed her mind

Some guys lose their ex woman by waiting way too long to get a sign from her that she wants to get back together.

Then, in most cases, the guy is shocked, disappointed and heartbroken when he finds out that she has moved on and already has a new boyfriend that she's happy with.

Alternatively, when he finally contacts her after a long time (e.g. after using the 30 or 60 day No Contact Rule that doesn't work well on women and was originally designed for women who want to get a man back because men usually come back if they are not contacted after a break up), she is completely over him and enjoying the single life.

Here's the thing though!

Right now, it doesn't really matter if your ex is giving you clear signs that she's open to getting back together again or not.

Why?

You can make her change her mind now or within days, by reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you and making her experience new, more interesting emotions for you.

When you interact with her, either on a phone call or in person and make her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with you again, all of her previous decisions about not ever wanting to be with you again start to fade away.

She stops thinking about moving on without you and opens herself up to the idea of giving you another chance based on her newfound feelings of respect and attraction for you.

That is what works on women.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why is My Ex Girlfriend Nice and Then Mean?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 common reasons why a woman will do that:

1. She has mixed feelings about you

Sometimes, a woman will be nice and then mean to her ex boyfriend when she can't make her mind up about being broken up.

Some days, she feels like she is going to move on and on other days, she misses you and feels like she wants back.

So, when she is being mean, it's usually when she is feeling confident without you (e.g. after she's gone out with friends and had a cute guy flirt with her, she accomplished something she knows you would not have supported her in).

When that happens she may start thinking things like, I'm so glad we're broken up. I love being single now. I'm free to do what I want, go wherever I want and hang out with whomever I want and there's no one there to stand in my way. I'm enjoying my sense of freedom.

As a result, she becomes mean and unfriendly towards you because she doesn't want you to ruin the feeling of freedom and confidence that she now has.

Yet, on another day, she may be sitting at home all alone and missing what you and her had.

The loneliness causes her to think things like, I know our relationship wasn't perfect, but I miss being part of a couple. Maybe breaking up with him wasn't such a good idea after all. Maybe if I gave him one more chance we could actually work things out between us. I don't like being alone like this. Maybe I rushed into my decision to break up with him. What if he meets a new girl and moves on? I will feel even worse. I have to contact him.

Naturally, when she's feeling like that, she will usually be nicer to you (e.g. call you to chat, text you to say hi, invite you over for coffee, sound happy to hear from you when you reach out to her).

Of course, this might leave you feeling confused and asking Why is my ex girlfriend nice and then mean?

In many cases, the answer to that question is: She's not quite sure if she should fully go through with the break up and cut you out of her life completely.

As a result, she is hot and cold and continues to go through her life waiting for something to happen that will convince her to either break up with you fully and move on (e.g. she meets a new man who makes her feel attracted in the ways that she wants), or you and her get back together again (e.g. because you re-spark her feelings for you).

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend is nice and then mean is

2. She feels attracted, but you then turn her off again

When a guy gets broken up with, his first instinct is to usually try to convince his ex that he's changed some of the things that turned her off, so she will then give him another chance.

For example: A guy might realize that he was being too insecure in the relationship with his ex girlfriend and this caused him to react by putting her on a guilt trip every time she wanted to do something without him, or if she interacted with other guys and seemed to be enjoying herself (e.g. she laughed, seemed happy).

So, to convince her that heâs changed, he might pretend to be more confident and self-assured when he interacts with her.

Naturally, when his ex girlfriend sees that heâs more emotionally strong than he used to be, sheâs going to feel some respect for him again.

Sheâs going to feel attracted to the new man that she now thinks heâs become and sheâs going to be a little nicer to him.

Yet, because he hasnât really changed and is only pretending to be more confident in himself and in his value to her, he canât maintain the faÃ§ade for very long.

Eventually, she says or does something that sets him off (e.g. she tells him that a guy she knows at work/university asked her out on a date, she talks about how sheâs been having so much fun since they broke up).

He then starts behaving in the same insecure, self-doubting ways that he did in the relationship.

She then feels turned off once again.

As a result, she may then start thinking things like, âHeâs been pretending that heâs changed, but deep down heâs still the same insecure, needy guy I broke up with. I canât believe I fell for his lies! He's not confident! He's just been putting on an act! I need to make sure that I remain broken up with him. He's not yet man enough for a girl like me.â

She then starts being mean and bitchy towards him to get him back for tricking her and making her feel as though he had changed, when he really hadn't.

This is why itâs so important for you to truly change and improve before you interact with your ex.

That doesnât mean you have to become perfect to get her back, but you do have to genuinely make some improvements to yourself so she can see that youâre better now than you were before.

For example:

- Youâre less insecure and self-doubting, so you donât feel the need to get jealous or control her anymore.
- Youâre more emotionally independent, so you donât need her to be gentle and nice with you to feel okay about yourself.
- You're emotionally mature, so you don't feel the need to get into trivial arguments with her and instead, you have the ability to turn a potential argument into something that you and her can laugh about together.

When she experiences those kind of changes in you, she naturally stops being mean to you and opens herself up to the idea of being in a relationship with you again.

She gets the feeling that you really have changed and more importantly, she really does feel differently around you now.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend is nice and then mean isâ€¦!

3. She is testing to see if you will lose confidence in yourself

Whether meeting a man for the first time, being in a relationship with him or interacting with him after a break up, a woman is instinctively attracted to a manâ€™s confidence and turned off by his insecurity and self-doubt.

So, after a break up, a woman will usually test her exâ€™s confidence before she lets down her guard and opens herself up to giving him another chance.

There are many things she can do to test him, but one of the most common ways is to be nice to him one minute and then mean to him the next.

Essentially, she wants to see how strong of a man he really is.

For example:

- Is he going to crumble and start doubting his chances with her just because she isn't being nice all the time?
- Will he beg and plead with her to tell him what heâ€™s doing wrong and why sheâ€™s treating him that way?
- Will he walk away and give up on getting her back just because she's being a little mean?
- Will he be extra nice and sweet to her (especially when sheâ€™s being mean to him) in the hope that she will be nice to him again?

If he reacts in any of those ways, it will prove to her that heâ€™s not really the man she wants to be in a relationship with.

A woman will usually then stop being nice to her ex and focus on being mean as a way of pushing him away for good.

On the other hand, if her ex remains confident no matter what she says and does, or how she treats him during interactions, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect for him as a man.

When she feels that respect, she will then start to feel attracted again and when that happens, her defenses will come down and she will open herself up to reconciling with him and getting back together.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend is nice and then mean isâ€¦!

4. She is stringing you along and doesn't intend to get back with you because she can see that you haven't really changed

If a woman interacts with her ex and gets a sense that nothing about him has really changed since they broke up (e.g. heâ€™s still unsure of himself around her and other people, he hasnâ€™t made any progress on his goals in life, he hasnâ€™t improved his ability to make her feel attracted), sheâ€™s not going to open herself up to him.

Instead, she might string him along by being nice to him at times, so he feels like there is still hope.

Yet, her real motives for being nice are to give herself an ego boost when she sees that he is desperately hoping to get her back (i.e. she feels as though she is the more valuable one in the relationship).

Alternatively, she is doing it to get emotional revenge on him for hurting her, or just for something fun to do until she meets the right guy for her (e.g. she keeps her ex around as a texting buddy and then eventually breaks his heart by telling him that she has met someone else, she really likes him and they are getting serious).

However, to make sure that her ex doesn't get too sure of himself, she will also act mean at times to show him that he isn't quite there yet with her.

Then, if she gets tired of toying with him, or if she hooks up with a new man, she can easily cut him out of her life, without it being that much of a big deal to her.

Of course, not all women are that mean, but many guys do encounter a complete change in their woman after a break up.

This is why you can't leave it up to your ex to call the shots in the ex back process.

Rather than feeling unsure of yourself around her and possibly even thinking things like, "Which version of her will I get today? Is she going to be nice or mean to me?" just stand your ground with her and show her (in a loving, but dominant way) that you're not going to let her push you around anymore.

In other words, take control of your interactions with her and begin sparking some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you again (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, rather than sulking, seeming confused or seeking pity because she is being a little mean to you).

When she can see for herself that you really are a different man now, she will automatically stop wanting to string you along, because it will no longer feel right to her.

Instead, she will want to talk to you on the phone and meet up with you in person, so she can experience the new you for herself and see where things go from there.

So, make sure that you take control of the situation, rather than leaving it all up to her.

Guide her back into a relationship with you, rather than hoping that she guides you back into a relationship and is nice and sweet about it the whole way.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend is nice and then mean is

5. You're misinterpreting her texts

Sometimes a guy will feel as though his ex is being nice if she includes a smiley face or exclamation mark when she sends him a text message.

Additionally, he might also feel as though she is being mean if she replies in a short, unimpressed way, or says something without using emoticons to make him feel good about himself.

For example: If a woman texts something like, "Lol ☺ It's over between us ☹ You need to accept that," with a love heart on the end, or with some additional text saying, "I will always hold a special place for you in my heart, but we can't get back together" it would be a little easier for a guy to accept than if she sent a seemingly 'blunt' or 'cold-hearted' text saying, "It's over. You need to accept that."

With the first text, a guy might think, "Okay, well, she is being nice to me and is even admitting there's a special place in her heart for me. Maybe, over time, she will be able to change her mind and we can then get back together again. After all, she still has a place for me in her heart. She even put in a heart emoticon. Who does that if they aren't feeling some love? Maybe she really does still love me!

In comparison, the second text might seem mean, cold and distant to him and he may feel quite dejected, or as though he doesn't have a chance with her anymore.

Yet, here's the thing!

Texts can easily be misinterpreted because, since you can't hear her tone of voice or see her body language, you have to guess at what tone of voice she would be using or how she would be coming across in terms of her body language and vibe.

She might actually be crying or feeling heartbroken when she sends you a seemingly cold or distant text, but you don't know that.

This is why you shouldn't just stick to text when trying to get an ex back.

You should get to a phone call and in person meet up, as long as you are properly ready to attract her in person.

Don't go to the meet up if you're going to turn her off with nervousness or self-doubt, or if she's going to see that you're heartbroken and really need her back.

Only go to the meet up when you are ready to properly re-attract her.

If you meet up with her and are not able to make her feel attracted, she may decide that she doesn't want to see you again after that, which makes the process of getting her back more difficult.

So, make sure that you are prepared to make her feel attracted to you as you talk to her.

4 Ways That Guys Go Wrong When Interacting With an Ex Girlfriend Who is Nice and Then Mean

Women are instinctively attracted to men who are more emotionally strong and self-assured than to those who are emotionally weak or insecure.

So, when a woman is being nice and then mean to her ex guy, it's often her way of testing him to see if he now has the qualities that she ideally wants in a man.

If he can handle her flip-flopping behavior, she will automatically start to feel respect for him again.

Yet, if he loses confidence in himself and becomes nervous and insecure when he interacts with her, it will only confirm to her that she made the right decision to break up with him and move on.

So, if you don't want your ex girlfriend to feel like she has to move on, you need to make sure you avoid making the following mistakes with her when she's being nice and then mean to you:

1. Seeking pity for how upset or confused she is making you feel by being nice and then mean

As tempting as it might be for a guy to want to say to his ex girlfriend, "Please stop it. Why are you being like this to me? One minute you're all nice and sweet towards me and the next you're being so mean. I don't understand why you are doing this to me. Don't you care about my feelings at all? Do you realize that I care about you, love you and want you back? So, you're just messing with my feelings when you're nice and then mean. Please just stop it!"

itâ€™s usually a bad idea.

Why?

If he tries to make her feel pity for him, she feels turned off by his emotional weakness and inability to handle the feminine nature of a woman (i.e. that women test a man's confidence by changing their mood and behavior).

When she sees that he can't handle a woman like her, it makes her want to move on from him even more.

So, don't bother trying to make your ex girlfriend feel pity for how she's making you feel and focus instead on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

2. Asking her to be more consistent

Sometimes a guy will get so frustrated with his ex's erratic behavior towards him, that he might say something like, â€œOne minute you're nice and then next you are mean. Why are you being like this? Just be one way or the other, so I can know where I stand.â€

Yet, rather than make her think, â€œHe's right, I need to be more consistent in my behavior, so he feels confident about my feelings for him,â€ it usually only makes a woman close herself off even more.

Why?

If a woman breaks up with a guy because he has lost her respect, attraction and love, she usually won't feel motivated to want to help him get her back by being consistent and making things easy for him.

If he can't figure out how to reactivate her feelings for him without her help, then she will just focus on getting over him by moving on with someone else.

Additionally, it's not a woman's role to have to be consistent for a man.

A man needs to be consistent in his reaction to a woman, regardless of her tests of his confidence.

When a man is able to do that (i.e. because he is emotionally strong and emotionally independent), then a woman will be much more consistent because she won't feel much of a need to test him.

She will still test him from time to time, but it will be much less than if she wasn't sure of his ability to remain confident.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

3. Trying to get her to commit to the idea of a relationship via text

In some cases, a guy will assume that he stands a better chance of getting her back if he asks her to give him another chance via text.

For example: He may think, â€œShe's been hot and cold lately, so if I ask her on a phone call or in person, she will likely reject me. Maybe if I ask her to get back together again via text, it will give her enough time to think about it before she replies, so she won't be as mean. I won't be putting her on the spot and causing her to go from being nice to me to being mean, simply because she doesn't know how else to react in that moment. So, I'll just text her and give her a chance to think about it.

Yet, if a woman currently has little or no feelings for her ex, getting a text from him trying to get her to commit to a relationship only makes her close herself off even more.

Why?

Essentially, because she can't see his body language, hear the tonality of his voice, or judge his actions and behavior in person or on a phone call, she judges him based on her past experiences with him (e.g. near the end of the relationship, he may have become insecure, needy, lacked self-motivation, was emotionally wimpy or even fell into the habit of getting angry and irritated with her over trivial things).

She then just assumes that he's asking her for a relationship via text because he hasn't really changed and is too afraid to face her, where she will be able to see it for herself.

Here's the thing:

Texts don't show your true self (e.g. confident, self-assured, at a different emotional level than when you broke up with your ex), so your ex will naturally interpret them based on her current perception of you.

In other words, if your ex girlfriend currently thinks of you in a negative way, she's probably going to look at your texts in a negative way.

This is why asking her for another chance should be done in person and only after you have first reactivated her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

If you want to get your ex back, you have to follow the correct sequence of steps.

Miss a step and it will almost certainly result in a, "No" from her.

You can get her back, but you've got to do it right.

Another mistake to avoid making is

4. Trying to get her to commit to the idea of a relationship even though the feelings aren't mutual yet

You may still truly love your ex and really want her back, but at the moment, she probably doesn't feel the same way about you.

So, if you ask her to get back together again, chances are she's going to respond by being mean and saying something along the lines of, "No. I told you that it's over between us. Why can't you accept that and move on? You're being so annoying. Just leave me alone. I don't want to talk to you about this anymore" or, she might be nice and saying something like, "I know you mean well and I do still care for you, but I just don't see us being a couple again. I'm really sorry."

Here's the thing:

For a woman to commit to the idea of being in a boyfriend/girlfriend relationship, the feelings have to be mutual (or at least close to mutual).

It can't just be about you really loving her and wanting her back for your own reasons.

Instead, she has to feel as though if she doesn't get back with you right away, she will be losing the love of her life.

You can make her feel that way, but it won't happen by asking her for another chance for your own reasons.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Did Everything Right, But it Wasn't Enough For Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will react in that way to a man:

1. She wants a guy who is more of a challenge

Most guys want to treat a woman well and not make her feel like she needs to do anything special to impress them, other than love them and stick with the relationship.

For example: A guy like that mightâ€¦

- Be extra nice and sweet to his woman, regardless of how badly she treats him.
- Shower her with romantic gestures (e.g. buy her gifts, flowers, take her out to restaurants, send her love letters/poems).
- Allow her to always get her way, even if it means giving up things he really wants to do.
- Give her all of his time and attention (e.g. he stops hanging out with his friends, gives up his hobbies or interests, stops pursuing his big goals or dreams in life).
- Text and call her throughout the day to stay in touch, even though he knows sheâ€™s working/in class/catching up with friends/busy.

He may think, â€œAccording to what Iâ€™ve seen on TV/read about in magazines/been taught by my father/mother, Iâ€™m doing everything right to make my woman feel loved and appreciated. As a result, she will be happy and our relationship will last a lifetime.â€

So, when she eventually breaks up with him and says that it's because she's no longer happy with him, no longer attracted to him or no longer in love with him, he is understandably shocked.

He may then think, â€œI did everything right, but it wasn't enough for her. How could she do this? What did I do wrong?â€

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Although he truly believes he was being the perfect man to her, what he doesn't realize is that, although a woman does like it when a man loves her and makes her feel appreciated, she doesn't want to feel like she is the boss, the leader, or the most valuable one in the relationship.

Instead, she wants him to make her feel as though she needs to do everything right to continue impressing him and maintaining his interest, rather than feeling as though she can walk all over him and get away with it.

Some guys don't want to make a woman feel that way and think that it's all a bunch of mind games, but it's not.

It's about what women feel attracted to and appreciate.

Women do want to be in a relationship where they feel loved and appreciated, but they also want to feel the need to continually impress their man, otherwise he will lose interest.

If a guy can't offer her that, she will eventually get bored of always getting her way, or always feeling like the more valuable one in the relationship.

Some women will put up with it (usually unattractive women), but if a woman is attractive, she just won't feel happy about being with a man who lets her walk all over him.

So, she will break up with him, even though he has been treating her well.

At the end of the day, regardless of how nice he has been to her, he hasn't been making her feel the way she really wants to feel (e.g. respectful towards him, attracted and excited to have him as her man, eager to continue pleasing him and impressing).

On the surface, he might feel as though he has done everything right, but in reality, it's not actually what a woman really wants.

After the break up, a woman like that will usually try to find a guy who will be more of a challenge for her to acquire and keep in a relationship.

Another reason why a woman might break up with a guy, even though he seemed to be doing everything right, is thatâ□!

2. She was only ever interested in a casual sex relationship

Sometimes, regardless of how great a guy is, a woman simply won't be interested in more than a casual sexual relationship.

Even though heâ□s doing everything right, she doesn't really care because she's not looking to settle down anyway.

The truth is, in todayâ□s world a woman is continually influenced by what she reads on the internet and in womenâ□s magazines, what she sees on TV in sitcoms and movies and what she hears from friends and acquaintances.

So, when she watches TV and she sees dramatic relationships full of excitement and spontaneous, wild sex, or women dumping guys and moving on to a better life, or female celebrities talking about how much happier they are being single, she might become enticed to live that kind of lifestyle.

If she does, she won't really care about breaking up with a guy and moving onto another one, because sheâ□s living the lifestyle that she has seen other women confidently talk about living.

She feels okay with what she's doing and just wants casual sex and fun times, regardless of whether a good guy that she meets want to settle down with her.

With a woman like that, you have to immediately accept the break up and let her see that it doesn't affect you.

That stops her in her tracks because you can pretty much guarantee that every other guy she has dumped has done the opposite (i.e. pleaded with her to change her mind, asked what he could do to change her mind, sucked up to her).

When you accept the break up and then begin to get on with your life and let her find out about it (i.e. via social media), a woman like her will see that you and her are actually on the same level emotionally and she will feel attracted to you again.

She won't necessarily want to settle down for life if you get back together, but she will feel safer getting into a relationship with you because she will see that you don't beg, plead and whine if she tries to leave.

Another reason why a woman might break up with a guy, even though he was doing all the right things, is thatâ□!

3. She was turned off by his lack of emotional masculinity or emotional toughness

Life sometimes throws curveballs your way, whether you are ready for it or not.

It happens to everyone, even if a guy tries his best to set up a good life, do the right thing and so on.

So, what matters most to a woman is not how great a guy is when things are going well, but rather, how he responds to the more challenging situations in his life (e.g. if he loses out on a big promotion, fails an important exam, has trouble with his car, things don't work out as planned, he gets broken up with).

Will he remain emotionally strong, face the situation head on and work towards a solution like a man, or will he fall apart, feel scared and turn to his woman for guidance and support because he can't cope on his own?

Depending on how he reacts when life gets tough, his woman will either feel more respect, attraction and love for him for being an emotionally strong, masculine man that she can depend on, or she will feel turned off by his emotional sensitivity and weakness.

Here's the thing!

A guy can do most things right in his relationship with a woman, but if she gets a sense that she needs to be the strong one and take care of him because he's too scared, sensitive or insecure to handle the pressures of everyday life on his own, she will quickly lose respect and attraction for him.

When that happens, she will then begin to disconnect with her feelings of love for him and when that happens, she will start to want to get out of the relationship.

Another reason why this might happen to a guy is!

4. While trying to do everything right in the relationship, it made him seem desperate and that turned her off

Although a woman appreciates it when her man values her, loves her and respects her, she doesn't want to take on the role of being his main purpose in life.

So, when a guy is running around trying to do everything right to please his woman and as a result, neglecting other important areas of his life (e.g. his goals, dreams, friends, interests), it doesn't impress her.

Rather than think, âOMG! He's so devoted to me that he doesn't care about anything or anyone else in his life! I am his main reason for living! It must mean that he really loves me! That makes me want to stay with him forever, because I know I will never find another man who loves me as much as he does! she simply feels turned off by what she perceives as his desperation and neediness.

Why?

A woman wants a man who doesn't hide behind her and the relationship, to avoid rising up and reaching for new levels of his true potential as a man (i.e. by following through on his biggest dreams, goals and ambitions).

Most unattractive women will put up with a guy who hides from his potential, but they will still feel annoyed about it.

However, attractive women will not only feel annoyed by it, but they will eventually see it as a major reason to leave him and try to find a man who won't hide from his true potential behind the safety of a relationship with her.

So, if a woman is attractive, she will eventually break up with a hider and look for a man who won't make her his main purpose in life.

A guy might then ask, â€œI don't get it. I did everything right, but it still wasn't enough for her. How could she do this to me? How can women be so mean and coldhearted? After everything I did for her, she just walks away like it all meant nothing.â€

Here's the thingâ€¦

He may have treated her well, but all that doesn't mean a thing if a woman feels turned off at an instinctive level when she realizes that she's in a relationship with a hider.

A woman wants in a good man who treats her well, but doesn't make her the sole purpose of his existence.

Instead, he rises up and reaches for his true potential as a man by actively following through on his big goals, dreams and ambitions in life.

She can then look up to him, respect him and feel attracted to him for being an emotionally strong and independent man, rather than feel like she's doing him a favor by being with him because he can't live or function without her.

Another reason why this might happen to a guy isâ€¦

5. It was enough for her, but she was just testing to see if he'd try even harder due to his lack of confidence about his attractiveness to her

Women feel most attracted to guys who have high self-esteem, confidence and self-belief.

So, when a woman is in a relationship with a guy, she will usually test to see whether or not he truly believes in himself and in his attractiveness and value to her, or if he's just putting on an act.

If he passes her confidence tests, she will be able to fully relax into being feminine and girly around him, knowing that he is more than good enough for her.

However, if he becomes doubtful and starts to question his value to her, she will pick up on it (via his body language and the way he responds to her) and feel turned off at a deep, instinctive level.

As uncomfortable as it may be for some guys to accept, the truth is that the majority of women just aren't attracted to guys who don't feel worthy of them.

Why?

When a guy doesn't feel like he's good enough for his woman, he usually starts saying and doing things that highlight that belief.

For example: A guy might constantly cling to his woman and refuse to do anything apart from her, because he's afraid she might meet someone else better than him and dump him.

He may also look to her for reassurance, by constantly asking her things like, â€œDo you still love me?â€ or, â€œYou wouldn't leave me would you? You know you're my only reason for living, right?â€ or, â€œDo you still find me attractive?â€

He might also shower her with gifts and attention and let her get away with bad behavior because he doesn't want to lose her.

He may think something like, â€œI need to make sure that I do everything right for her, so she will *see how important she is to me. Then, hopefully, she will stick with me for life.*â□□

Yet, women just don't work that way.

The fact is that a woman wants to be with a man who believes in his attractiveness and value to her, regardless of what she says or does to try to make him feel insecure or unsure of himself.

He doesn't have to buy her gifts and suck up to her to hopefully get her to stay.

He just has to believe in himself no matter what.

That is what women respect and feel attracted to the most, even though they will rarely, if ever, admit it to your face.

So, if a woman senses that her guy doesn't feel like he is worthy of her, she will end up feeling like she is doing him a favor by being with him, which will make her start to feel attracted to other men who are more confident in themselves.

He will most-likely notice that she is losing interest and will then try to step up his attempts to impress her (e.g. buying her more gifts, showing her with compliments, trying to make her life as easy as possible, running errands for her and so on).

Yet, the more he tries to do everything right to keep her, the more turned off she feels by his lack of confidence.

She then begins to fall out of love with him and moves towards breaking up with him.

He is then left thinking, "What just happened? I was doing everything right! What else could I have done!? I did everything for her. Will I ever be enough for a woman?"

4 Post Break Up Mistakes That Guys Make After Feeling Like They Did Everything Right

Here's where other guys go wrong when they find themselves in a similar situation to youâ□!

1. Assuming that women must want a bad boy who treats them badly

When a guy feels as though he has done everything right with a woman (e.g. treated her like a princess, always let her have her way, allowed her to get away with bad behavior) and still got dumped, he might begin to believe that to keep a woman, he needs to stop being so nice and start being a bad boy instead.

Here's the thing thoughâ□!

Even though it might look like women are mostly attracted to bad boys, or that women only want a man who is bad or mean, it's just not true.

The ultimate type of man that pretty much all women are attracted to and want to be in a relationship with, is a good man who treats her well, but doesn't allow her to get away with treating him badly.

What a woman really wants is a man who makes her feel as though she needs to be a good girl for him and in return, she will get to be with him and be treated well.

If she is out of line, he puts her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way.

If she refuses to treat him better, he threatens to leave her and if she still doesn't change, he leaves her.

In other words, he is in control of the relationship, not her.

She has to be a good girl, or else she won't get to be with him.

That's what women really want, but will rarely, if ever, admit openly when asked in public.

So, don't make the mistake of thinking that you need to be a bad boy, a bad person or treat her rudely to get her back.

Instead, just show her that you are still the good man that you've always been, but are now so much more confident, emotionally masculine and assertive than before.

When she sees that you have quickly transformed into the type of man she always wanted you to be, she will begin to feel attracted to you in the ways that have always been secretly important to her.

Her guard will then come down and she will start to feel drawn to you in a way that she has never felt before.

Another mistake that guys often make when in your situation isâ€¦

2. Asking her what he can do to make her happy

When a guy feels as though he did everything right and it still wasn't enough, it's only natural that he might want to then understand what he did wrong.

So, he will ask his woman something like, â€œWhat did I do wrong? What did I miss? What didn't I do for you? What would it take for me to make you happy? Please tell me. You know that I will do whatever you say. I love you more than anything, so just tell me and I will do it.â€

Yet, here's the thingâ€¦

When a guy asks a woman to tell him what he needs to do to make her happy, he's effectively telling her, â€œLook, I'm clueless about how to think, act and behave like an attractive man, so can you please teach me? I will then use your advice to get you back, or try to convince you to give a chance to show you that I can be the way you want me to be.â€

Yet, rather than make a woman think, â€œHow sweet. He wants me to guide him and teach him,â€ she feels overwhelmed by the amount of work she'd have to put into change him, transform him and then continually do that for the rest of their lives together (i.e. because your attractiveness to women develops over time. It's not something that you do once and then forget about. You have to be able to be attractive her based on the way that you talk to her, approach life, react to challenges, treat her and get her to treat you).

So, if you want to attract your ex back, don't make the mistake of asking her what she wants you to do to be attractive to her, or to make her happy.

Instead, just show her (via your actions, behavior and the way that you now react to what she says and does), that you're a better, more attractive man than you were before and didn't need her to tell you how to be that way.

When she sees that you really have changed, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for you again.

Then, the idea of giving you another chance starts to feel like something she is open to doing.

Another mistake that guys make in your situation isâ€¦

3. Thinking that women are way too hard to please

After dumped by a woman he loves, a guy might think, â€œI did everything right, but it wasn't enough for her. Women are just too fussy these days. Nothing pleases them, no matter how hard you try. I give up!â€

Here's the thingâ€

Some women are too hard to please and a little bit crazy too, but those women really are the minority. The majority of women aren't hard to please and will only seem hard to please when in a relationship with a guy who continually fails her confidence tests and ends up allowing her to walk all over him.

When a woman can walk all over him, she then begins to come up with what I call Ridiculous Rules (e.g. you can only kiss me if you do this or that, don't call me after 7pm, sit there and be quiet while I watch TV, clean the house or else we're not having sex).

If a man puts up with her Ridiculous Rules, she loses respect for him and as a result, she stops feeling attracted to him.

She then falls out of love with him and in most cases, the guy then tries harder and harder to suck up to her (e.g. buying her gifts, doing more of the housework, letting her get her way all the time), but it's never enough because that isn't why she has fallen out of love with him.

She wants him to continue being a good guy, but to man up and stop allowing her to walk all over him.

Finally, another mistake that guys often make in your situation isâ€

4. Losing confidence in his ability to get her back or keep another woman in a relationship

When a guy tries everything that he can think of to make a woman happy (e.g. shower her with attention and gifts, give in to her every whim, be nicer and more patient with her, make her life as easy as possible) and she still breaks up with him, he might begin to doubt himself as a man.

He may assume that because his 'best' wasn't good enough, then nothing will ever be good enough for women, so he completely gives up on getting his ex back, or even finding himself a new woman.

Here's the thing thoughâ€

When a guy starts thinking like that, it begins to show in the way that he talks, thinks and behaves around his ex and other women (e.g. he doesn't maintain eye contact, he says negative things about himself, he has a defeatist attitude, he feels unworthy, he doubts himself, he seems nervous and unsure of himself), which is naturally unattractive to women.

When he notices that his ex and other women aren't attracted to him, he then loses even more confidence in himself and in his ability to get her back.

Don't put yourself through that unnecessary pain.

Believe yourself!

If you want to do the right thing, then do the right thing by yourself and believe that you are good enough.

You have to believe that you are good enough for her, otherwise neither will she.

Don't go and tell her that you think you are good enough.

Let her sense it for herself, based on the way you now talk to her, react to her, treat her and get her to treat you.

When you do that correctly, she will feel a tremendous amount of respect and attraction for the new and improved you.

As a result, you will suddenly seem more than good enough for her and she will want you back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

4 Reasons Why Breaking Up Can Be a Good Thing

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 reasons why breaking up can actually be a good thing for both you and the relationshipâ

1. It gives you an opportunity to become a better man, get her back and enjoy an even better relationship than before

Have you ever seen couples who've been together for a long time, but all they seem to do is argue, fight, criticize each other, or treat each other like an annoying brother or sister?

If you have, you may have thought to yourself, âThose two just shouldn't be in a relationship. They don't have enough love, respect and attraction for one another. Why do they stay together if they can't get along?â

Now imagine thisâ

They broke up.

The man then took the time apart to change and improve and become a better man.

For example: If he was insecure and self-doubting in his relationship with his ex woman, he focuses on becoming more confident and self-assured as a man.

If he wasn't assertive enough and he allowed his ex to dominate him with her forceful personality, he becomes more emotionally dominant and ballsy.

If he was too nice and allowed her to get away with throwing tantrums to get her way all the time, he now has the balls to laugh (in a loving, but dominant way) at her attempts to intimidate him with her bad behavior.

If he was too emotionally immature (e.g. he was drifting aimlessly through his life), he now has definite goals that he's working towards and making progress on.

So, when he then interacts with his ex and she can see that he has changed, improved and become a much better man than he was before, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

She will naturally feel drawn to him again and become open to getting back together, because she will see that the relationship could now be so much better than it ever was before.

In the same way, you don't have to fear a break up with your woman.

Yes, it's definitely not a nice feeling to get broken up with, but you can use the break up to your advantage by seeing it as an opportunity to level up as a man, get her back and enjoy an even better relationship with her than you did before.

So, if you've just broken up with your woman, rather than feeling sad and hopeless about the situation, start becoming a better man instead and realize that you can turn things around and get her back.

By making attractive adjustments to your behavior and approach to her, she will automatically feel drawn to the new and improved you.

Her eyes will open to the fact that falling back in love after a break up, is one of the most amazing feelings she will ever experience in her life.

As a result, her guard will come down and she will open herself up to giving the relationship another chance.

Another reason why breaking up can be a good thing isâ€¦!

2. It improves your understanding of what it takes to keep a relationship together

Although itâ€¦s usually not intentional, a lot of guys fall into the habit of taking their woman and their relationship for granted.

For example: A guy may think, â€œI love her and she loves me. What more do we need to do? Everything else will take care of itself. She loved me so much at the start and she will always remember that and stay with me because of it.â€

Yet, that's not how it worksâ€¦!

For a relationship to thrive, the love, respect and attraction a couple feels for each other needs to be nurtured and grown over time.

If a man doesn't know how to do that, the love will gradually fade away and get replaced with more negative emotions such as anger, resentment or boredom.

Of course, you may not have realized this during your relationship with her, which is probably why she is now your ex, right?

Don't worry â€¦ many guys make the same mistake and end up taking their woman and the relationship for granted.

The good news is that when you improve your understanding of what it takes to keep a relationship together for life, you will easily be able to get your ex back and keep her in a relationship.

So, what does it take to keep a relationship together?

Here are a few examples:

- You need to maintain and build on your womanâ€¦s feelings of love, respect and sexual attraction for you over time. This does not require a lot of effort. In fact, it's easy to do when you approach it correctly because it results in her doing most of the work to try to impress you and keep you happy. All you need to do then is treat her well and all will be fine.
- You need to maintain your confidence around her, regardless of what she says or does to make you feel insecure, jealous or angry (e.g. she throws a tantrum, says mean things to you, talks about other men that are attractive). If you can maintain your confidence under that kind of pressure, she won't ever want to leave you because she will know that 99.9% of guys just don't have the self-belief that you do. Women are attracted to self-belief in men because it makes them feel safe, protected and assured that he can handle anything that life throws at him.
- You need to believe in your attractiveness and value to her, so can too. If you donâ€¦t feel worthy of her, she will eventually start to feel the same way and want to find a man who does feel worthy of her.
- You canâ€¦t treat her like a neutral friend, a buddy, one of the guys or roommate and expect the sexual spark between you to remain alive. You have to look at her, talk to her and treat her like she is your sexy woman, as well as being your loving friend.
- You need to mature as fast as her, or preferably, a bit faster than her. If she feels like sheâ€¦s maturing faster than you, she will start to feel as though you are holding her back from experiencing new levels in life.

As you can see, there are many ways that you can either build on your woman's feelings or destroy them over time in a relationship.

Now that you and her have broken up, the most important thing for you to do is to learn from your mistakes so that your new relationship with her, really will be so much better this time around.

When you interact with her and she senses and notices the changes in you, not only will she feel compelled to give the relationship a second chance, but she will also begin worry about you losing interest in her now that you are so much more attractive.

Another reason why breaking up can be a good thing isâ€¦!

3. It gives you a chance to catch up to her level of emotional maturity and then start again

Sometimes a woman will mature a lot faster than her guy (e.g. she's ready to stop partying and wants to settle down/focus more on her studies, but he only wants to hang out with his friends, get drunk/play video games/be irresponsible).

If she warns him about that and he doesn't change, she will eventually get to the point where she's had enough and break up with him.

He might see it as something that occurred all of a sudden, but in reality, it's a decision she has building up to for some time.

Here's the thingâ€¦!

Even though it sucks to get broken up with, in some cases, it's the wake up call that a guy needs to become more emotionally mature and focus on building a better, more secure future for himself.

For example: He mightâ€¦!

- Stop hanging out with his single, immature friends and start focusing more on his studies/work/projects.
- Set some long-term goals and start making progress on them.
- Get a better job, or work towards getting a promotion at his current place of employment.
- Move into a place of his own if he was still living with his parents or living with roommates.

When his ex woman sees that he has quickly grown up, matured and is now at a different level to the one he was at when she broke up with him, she will automatically feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

When that happens, her defenses come down and she allows herself to reconnect with the love she once felt for him.

As a result, she will then begin to open up to the idea of giving him another chance because he's now at the same. or a very similar level of emotional maturity as her.

Another reason why breaking up can be a good thing is thatâ€¦!

4. It highlights your strengths and weaknesses as a man

No one is perfect.

So, admitting that you have some weaknesses is not a sign that you're a bad person, an unlovable man or a failure.

Instead, when you know what your weaknesses are, you can then work on turning them into strengths and as a result, become an even better man than you are already.

Start off by making a list of what you perceive as your strengths and weaknesses and then look for ways to turn those weaknesses into strengths.

For example: Maybe one of your weaknesses is that you're too much of a nice guy in relationships with women, so you ended up allowing your ex to dominate you and always get her way.

On the other hand, one of your strengths is that you have a great sense of humor and you can make her laugh.

Now, imagine that you're interacting with your ex (on the phone or in person) and she's throwing a tantrum and blaming you for everything that happened in the relationship.

Naturally, she will be expecting you to respond like you always have in the past, by taking all the blame, treating her as the leader of the relationship and hoping that it pleases her.

However, instead of that, you use humor (i.e. your strength) to stand up to her and turn her bad mood into something that you can both laugh about.

For instance, you might say laugh (important) and say something like, â€œOh yeah! It's all my fault! I'm such a monster aren't I? You poor thing! how did you ever survive? You deserve a medal or something for putting up with me all that time,â€ which will then stop her in her tracks and make her think, â€œHuh? What's going on here? That's not how he's supposed to react. He usually just cowers under my pressure and bends to my will. Why is he so much stronger all of a sudden? Has he finally grown a pair of balls? Whatever the case, I like it. This is how I always wished he would be.â€

In that way, not only have you used your strength (i.e. your sense of humor) to your advantage, but you've also converted your weakness into a strength by standing up to her rather than letting her get the upper hand and dominate you as usual.

As a result, she then can't stop herself from feeling a bit attracted to the new, emotionally stronger version of you who now has the balls to stand up to her.

She then starts to look and think about you differently.

If you think about it, that probably wouldn't have ever happened if you and her didn't break up and you didn't come under pressure to man up.

The break up has literally given you the opportunity to level up and start reaching your true potential as a man.

You start to see that you are actually a lot stronger (emotionally) than you previously realized.

The man in you was there, but he was hiding because he was afraid of how she would react.

Of course, this was just one example of where a guy might have gone wrong and what he needs to change to re-attract your ex.

For example: You might have been very manly and ended up going too far with that, to the point where you treated her badly, didn't care about her feelings and took her for granted.

Re-attracting a woman in a situation like that requires a different approach.

You need to start being a better man to her, but don't do it in a way that makes you come across as being desperate, sucking up to her or turning into a wimp.

You've still got to maintain your manliness, but just be a good man to her at the same time.

4 Mistakes to Avoid After a Break Up

As you may have realized by now, breaking up can be a good thing for you and the relationship.

However, there are also some drawbacks and pitfalls to avoid.

So, to ensure that you are successful at getting your ex woman back, be sure to avoid making one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Falling into a downward spiral of depression

Sometimes a guy allows a break up to ruin his life.

Rather than seeing the break up as a chance to become and be a better man, he begins to feel unworthy of his ex and potentially, unworthy of other women too.

He may begin to think, “I don't blame her for dumping me. If I was her, I would have done the same thing! She's just too good for me, that's all. I don't deserve her and she finally figured that out. Now, I've lost her for ever! I'll never find another woman like her.”

What he probably doesn't realize is that women are attracted to the emotional strength in men (e.g. confidence, self-belief, courage, boldness) and turned off by the emotional weakness (e.g. insecurity, self-doubt, desperation, self-consciousness, timidity).

So, if he interacts with his ex woman and she senses that he has sitting around feeling sad and depressed without her, she will feel turned off by what she perceives as his lack of emotional strength.

He might hope that she will pity for him and want him back because of that, but a lasting, sexual, romantic relationship cannot be based on pity.

It just doesn't work.

So, don't be the sad, depressed ex who ignores life and keeps to yourself now that she has left you.

Lift your chin up, know that you are worthy of her and get ready to re-attract her the next time you interact with her.

Be a man about this and take control of the situation.

She's your woman, so get her back.

Don't leave it all to chance.

Get her back.

The next mistake to avoid is

2. Cutting off contact when you really want her back

In some cases, a guy will cut off contact with his ex, even though he wants her back, because he doesn't know what else to do.

He may think, "If she doesn't hear from me, she might start to miss me and then she'll send me a text, or message me on social media to give me a sign that she's open to us getting back together."

Yet, that almost never happens.

Why?

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, love and attraction for a guy, him not contacting her doesn't come as a big shock to her.

Instead, she just uses the time apart to get over him and move on.

So, unless your ex is still in love with you and wants you back, cutting off contact with her isn't going to make her come running back to you.

For her to come running back, you need to use every interaction you have with her from now on to reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

Some women will get back with a guy right away based on feeling a spark with him, whereas others will require 2-3 meet ups before they completely commit to being back in a relationship.

It really depends on you and your ability to re-attract her as you interact with her.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Comparing other women to your ex

No relationship is the same.

The connection that you share with each woman will always be different and special in its own way, but it will never be the same.

If you focus on comparing any new woman you meet to your ex, chances are high that she will never make you feel the same way because what you and your ex had together was unique.

So, don't put yourself through that.

Know that you can re-attract your ex and enjoy a better relationship this time around and if you don't want that, you can attract other women and enjoy relationships with them instead.

The next mistake to avoid is!

4. Thinking that it's impossible to get her back

When a woman is saying things like, "Forget about ever trying to get me back, because it's never going to happen. My feelings for you are completely dead and you need to accept that and move on," it sounds like the truth.

It sounds like she could never, ever change how she feels.

So, a guy might think to himself, "Well, that's it then. It's over. Her mind is made up and I won't ever be able to change it. As much as I want her back, it's just not possible."

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that by thinking in that insecure, self-doubting, defeated way, he is actually preventing himself from being the kind of man who can attract her back (e.g. confident, self-assured, determined, assertive).

If she senses his self-doubt and insecurity when they interact on the phone or in person, she will feel happy about her decision to remain broken up with him.

On the other hand, if he remains confident in himself and his attractiveness no matter what she says or does, she will naturally respect him for that.

He doesn't ever have to say anything like, "I am confident in my attractiveness to you."

Instead, he needs to project that by the way he talks, behaves and reacts and responds as he interacts with her.

Women can pick these things up and when a guy has that type of confidence in himself, they automatically respect it.

When a woman respects a man, she can then feel attracted to him.

When respect and attraction are in place, the love naturally starts to flow back into her heart.

So, rather than adopting a defeatist attitude and thinking, â€œIt's impossible to get her back,â€ focus on preparing to re-attract her the next time you interact with her.

When you do that, her feelings for you will automatically begin to flick back on.

She will stop trying to move on and will start to realize that breaking up with you was actually a good thing, because you are now a much better man than you before.

Suddenly, the impossible (i.e. her not wanting to get back together ever again) becomes very, very possible and real.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

What to Do When a Woman Breaks Up With You Suddenly

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 optional reactions to being broken up with suddenly by a woman...

1. Accept it, give her 3 to 7 days of space, then re-attract her and get her back

If a woman wants to break up with you, there's usually nothing that you can do to stop her in that moment (i.e. you can't really force her to stay if she's already made up her mind to leave).

So, in most cases, the first thing a guy should do when a woman breaks up with him suddenly, is to accept the break up.

For example: You might say something along the lines of, âOkay, if that's what you want, I accept your decision. I still love you and I would prefer it if we could work things out and stay together, but I respect your wishes. I wish you all the best. Bye.â

Of course, saying that doesn't mean you are going to walk away, forget about her and move on.

Instead, by saying something like that to her, you are sowing seeds of doubt in her mind about her decision to break up (i.e. because you're being so emotionally mature about the break up, so she can't help but feel respect for you because of it).

From there, give her 3 to 7 days of space where you don't contact her at all.

Allow things to calm down between you and her (e.g. she gets a chance to think about her decision, she starts to miss you, she sees that you're not desperately chasing her, she wonders why you accepted the break up so easily and wants to interact with you again to see if you still love her and are missing her).

Important: Don't wait longer than 7 days to reinitiate contact and start re-attracting her because a woman doesn't need longer than that to start missing you.

If you wait longer than a week, it causes her to have to start thinking about moving on or hooking up with a new guy to get over you and move on.

So, after 3 to 7 days of space, call her on the phone and start re-attracting her (e.g. by making her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again).

Then, get her to agree to a meet up with you in person.

At the meet up, focus on showing her that you're no longer the same guy she broke up with (e.g. by being confident and self-assured around her even if she is being cold or distant, using humor to break down her walls, making her feel feminine in contrast to your masculinity), and get her thinking, âI hate to admit it, but I think I may have made a mistake by breaking up with him so suddenly. Being around him again feels so right and being apart feels wrong.â

At that point, you and her will likely get back together right away.

If not, just use every interaction that you have with her from then on to build on her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

The more respect and attraction she feels for the new and improved you, the more she will want to get back into a relationship with you.

Additionally, the relationship will be better than it ever was before because you will have genuinely leveled up as a man in terms of your ability to make her feel respect, attraction and love.

As a result, she will treat you better, love you more deeply and feel more desire to be affectionate and sexual with you.

An alternative reaction you can have when a woman breaks up with you suddenly, is to

2. Accept it, walk away, don't contact her at all and hope that she comes back on her own

This is otherwise called, The No Contact Rule.

I don't recommend the NC rule for most ex back situations and here is why

Some guys want to use the NC rule and that's okay.

So, if you don't want to try to do anything to get her back, you can just accept your woman's decision to break up with you suddenly and then cut off contact.

Here's the thing though

I've been helping new men to get ex women back for many years now and I know what works and what doesn't.

What I've found, time and time again, is that cutting off contact and waiting for her to come chasing you down and trying to get you back only works if the woman is still in love with you and won't be able to deal with not hearing from you anymore.

In almost all other cases, if a woman doesn't hear from the guy she dumped, she will react on one of the following ways

- She won't care because she doesn't have feelings for him anymore.
- She will assume that he's not interested in her anymore and doesn't want her back, so she will then focus on fully getting over him and moving on with a new guy instead.
- She suspects that he's probably angry with her for breaking up with him so suddenly, so she doesn't want to contact him in case he reacts in an aggressive way.
- She uses the time to get over him and find herself a replacement guy.
- She hooks up with another man to get revenge.
- She feels relieved that the guy she dumped, who she is no longer attracted to, isn't bugging her and trying to get her back.
- She sees his lack of contact as meaning that he doesn't care enough about her to get her back.
- She blocks him to avoid him contacting her later on if he starts missing her. She's already felt enough pain by him not contacting her and wants to now close that chapter of her life and try to move on.

So, if what you really want to do is get back with your ex woman, ignoring her forever (or even for 30 or 60 days) isn't the best idea.

In most cases, ignoring an ex just makes it easier for her to get over you and move on, especially if she broke up with you because she was no longer attracted or in love with you anymore.

So, what should you do instead?

Interact with her (over the phone and in person) and actively re-spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you.

Once she is re-attracted (this can take minutes, hours or days depending on the situations), actively guide her back into a relationship with you by getting to a hug, kiss and then sex.

Another reaction you might have when a woman breaks up with you suddenly, is toâ€¦!

3. Accept it, start dating new women to make her jealous, meet up with her, re-attract her and get her back

When a guy gets dumped, he usually doesn't want to start sleeping around with new women, or even talking to new women.

Yet, some guys like this type of reaction and are usually the type of guys who don't have any trouble attracting new women and getting to sex.

So, depending on what type of guy you are, this option might suit you or make you feel sick to the stomach.

It really depends on who you are, how you're feeling after being broken up with, how much you love your ex and how much you know about how a woman's attraction for a man really works.

So, if you are fine with hooking up with new women, a way to react to the break up is to accept it and then go out and find yourself a new woman to have sex with and start dating.

Then, make sure to post up lots of photos of you and your new girl on social media to make her jealous, or rather than posting up photos, just make sure that your ex either sees you with a new girl in public or hears about it through friends.

Some guys worry that this will ruin their chances with their ex, but the truth is that women always feel more attracted to men who can easily attract other women.

It's not something that women go around admitting, but if you pay attention, you will see that the guys that women go crazy over are the ones who can easily attract and sleep with other women.

I know, I know.

Some of the guys reading this don't want to hear that.

Many guys want to believe that women like nice guys the most, or that women will get angry and never want to be with a guy if she sleeps with another woman after she breaks up with him.

Yet, I'm just giving you the cold, hard truth here.

Watch this video for some more examplesâ€¦!

As you will discover from the video above, most women SAY one thing about men and then DO something completely different in their private life or behind closed doors.

This is why you cannot trust the words of a woman when it comes to what she wants in a man.

Women will rarely, if ever, spill the beans and tell the truth about what really drives them to fall madly in love with a man.

Of course, this doesn't mean that you have to sleep with another woman to get your ex back.

It's just one of the optional reactions to a sudden break up.

If you do sleep with another woman after she breaks up with you suddenly, your ex will almost certainly think something like, â€œWow, he has a new girlfriend already? I didn't realize that seeing him with another woman would bother me this much, but it does. It actually makes me miss him. Maybe I made a mistake when I broke up with him so suddenly. I wonder if he'd be open to giving our relationship another try now that he's got someone else? Is she sexier than me? Does he love her? Can I seduce him back into a relationship with me? Why do I want this all of a sudden? I thought I wanted to break up with him. Yet, seeing him with another woman is making him want him for some reason.

Many women don't know how to explain what they're feeling, why or how and instead, they just react to it.

This is why you will see women lusting after a bad boy, getting used by him and then dumped and still being in love with him.

It makes no sense that she would want to be treated in that way, but she just reacts to her intense feelings of attraction and the challenge of trying to tame him.

I explain this concept here

Okay, so back to the option of sleeping with a new woman to make your ex jealous.

As I said, this is an option.

It's not something you need to do to get her back.

If you want to get her back by not sleeping with another woman, watch this

On the other hand, if you want to get her back by sleeping with another woman to make her jealous, then go ahead and do that and then make sure she finds out about it.

When she does, she will either text you or call you to say hello, give you some other sign that she's open to interacting with you again or, she might react by pretending to be angry at you for moving on so quickly.

Whatever you do, don't panic or worry about anything she is SAYING or DOING.

Just remember that women usually say one thing and then do another when it comes to men, dating and relationships.

Additionally, if she doesn't initiate contact, don't worry about that either.

Just call her after a few days to say hi, re-attract her on the call and then suggest that you can catch up for a friendly coffee.

For example: You might say to her, "Hey, just because we've broken up, it doesn't mean we can't be friends, right?" and let her agree.

Then say something like, "So, let's catch up for a quick coffee sometime this week to say hi as friends."

She will likely agree (possibly because she's feeling jealous of your new woman and wanting to see if she can get you back) and you can then arrange a time and place to meet up.

If she doesn't agree and says something like, "No thanks. I see that you have a new woman already," just laugh and say, "Okay, if that's how you feel, I accept that" and then end the call.

She will then be the one left feeling empty.

Even if she doesn't admit it to you, she will feel respect and attraction for the fact that not only have you got a new woman, but you didn't become desperate and start pleading with her to meet up with you when she said no.

As a result, she will likely contact you within the next week or so.

If you don't hear from her after two weeks, get in touch again, have a friendly chat on the phone, get her smiling and laughing and then suggest catching up.

This time, she will almost certainly agree, especially if she regretted saying no the last time.

At the meet up, focus on saying and doing the kinds of things that will reactivate her feelings and make her want to get back together (e.g. maintaining the dominant role when she tries to bully you about moving on so quickly, flirting with her to create sexual tension, using humor to bring down her defenses, making her feel girly in comparison to your masculine approach to the conversation and interaction, being charismatic and charming).

The more respect and attraction you make her feel, the faster she will realize that she made a big mistake by breaking up with you so suddenly.

Then, when the moment is right, go ahead and hug her, kiss her and then move towards hooking up sexually.

When that happens, you and her will then naturally get back together and if you decide not to get back together after having sex, at least you and her will have ended things on a much better note.

Classic Mistakes That a Guy Might Make When a Woman Suddenly Breaks Up With Him

Being broken up with sucks, especially if it happens out of the blue.

When a guy gets dumped all of a sudden by the woman he loves, it can cause him to panic and rush to try to get her back in all the wrong ways.

For exampleâ€¦!

1. Begging and pleading for another chance

This is a very common reaction that guys have to being dumped by a woman.

For example: A guy will begin bombarding his ex with texts, social media messages, e-mails and phone calls to hopefully change her mind.

He might say something like, â€œPlease forgive me! Whatever Iâ€™ve done to make you break up with me so suddenly, I apologize for it. Iâ€™m begging you! Please, give me a chance to make things right. I am willing to do whatever it takes.â€

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

A womanâ€™s attraction to a guy is based mostly on his ability to make her feel as though she can look up to him and respect him as a man.

So, when a guy is begging, pleading and being emotionally weak and needy, she can't look up to him and respect him and therefore, can't feel attracted to him either.

Rather than making her think, â€œAww, heâ€™s taking this so hard. Maybe I should give him another chance,â€ he is simply making her convinced that he's not the right guy for her because she no longer feels attracted to him.

Another mistake that other guys make when they've been dumped all of a sudden isâ€¦!

2. Asking her to explain what he needs to change to make her happy

Although it might seem like a good idea to ask your ex what you did wrong and how to make her happy again, itâ€™s actually something that will turn her off even more. Why?

When a guy asks a woman to tell him what he needs to change to make her happy again, heâ€™s effectively telling her that heâ€™s clueless about how to think, act and behave in an attractive way without her help and guidance.

Rather than feeling flattered that he needs her help, itâ€™s annoying for her to have to explain what women feel attracted to and how he can be like that.

If a woman has to tell a guy how to be the man she needs, she will lose even more respect for him, because she will feel as though he isn't his own man anymore.

Instead, he is following her instructions, which then makes her feel more like his teacher or mother, than his sexy girl.

As a result of him needing her to teach him or help him understand how to get her back, she closes up and focuses on finding a new man who knows how to be attractive without her guidance and support.

So, if donâ€™t ask your what she wants you to change or improve to get her back.

If you want to impress her and make her feel a sudden, strong and renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, it's essential that you figure this out without seeking her help or guidance.

In most cases, a woman just won't want to explain how to get her back and will simply move on.

So, figure out where you have been turning her off, quickly change that, re-attract her and get another chance with her.

Another mistake that other guys make isâ€¦|

3. Constantly texting or calling her to stay on her mind and in her life

When a woman suddenly cuts a guy out of her life, he may begin to worry that she will forget about him and move on.

So, to stay on her mind, he will begin calling her or sending her daily texts, e-mails, social media messages.

Yet, rather than make her think, â€œAnother message? I am so lucky! Thank you, thank you, thank! He must really love me to stay in touch so often like this. Maybe I should give him another chance. Who else is going to contact me this much? He has to be the one!â€ she will just feel annoyed that heâ€™s being so needy and clingy.

As a result, she will feel even more turned off by him.

Remember: Staying in contact with an ex via text or social media messages will not guarantee that she will remain faithful.

If you want her to miss you and want you back, contacting her non-stop isn't going to make her feel that way.

This is what you should do insteadâ€¦|

Another mistake that other guys make after being dumped all of a sudden isâ€¦|

4. Getting angry at her for breaking up with him

For example: A guy might say, “Why are you being like this? You are selfish, self-centered bitch! How can you do this to me? What kind of cold-hearted person are you? What have you been up to behind my back? Are you seeing another guy? Huh? You slut!” and somehow hope that it makes her feel guilty for wanting to break up with him so suddenly and out of the blue.

Yet, as justified as a guy might feel to be angry with her, it just doesn't work to get her back.

Instead, it makes her feel more determined to move on without him just to show him that she is allowed to do whatever she wants, with whomever she wants.

Another mistake that other guys make is

5. Assuming that her decision is final and there's no way he could get her back

If your ex has said something like this to you, “It's truly over between us. My decision is final and I need you to accept that we're never going to get back together again no matter what you say or do” it might make you feel as though her decision really is final.

Yet, the truth is that feelings change all the time.

For example: She once had no feelings for you at all (i.e. because you were a stranger to her) and she then had very strong feelings for you (i.e. because she fell in love with you).

She then fell out of love with you and broke up with you.

Her feelings have changed many times and they can change once again.

When you reactivate her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to the new you again.

Even if she tries to fight it, something inside of her will switch back on and she will feel drawn to you.

She will feel a flood of new, positive emotions for you and then, even though she was sure that it was over, she will realize that she was wrong.

Then, she will open back up to you and you will get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Revive the Love With My Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 examples of how to revive the love with your ex...

1. Interact with her and make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction

Interacting with your ex and making her feel a renewed sense of respect for you is the first step to reviving her love.

After that, she will naturally open herself up to begin feeling sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

Those two steps are so important because a woman won't feel like she is in love with a man, unless she can respect him and feel attracted to him.

So, don't try to skip those steps by just reaching out to her in a friendly way, or worse, pouring your heart out to her in a letter, text or email.

If you want her back for real, you have to focus on reviving her feelings by first making her feel respect for you, then attraction and then the love will come following right behind that.

Watch this for more info! ▶

So, whatever you do, make sure that you ▶

2. Make her feel respect for the new and improved you

When you interact with your ex on the phone or in person, ask yourself ▶

Am I able to maintain my confidence around her, regardless of what she says or does to make me feel insecure, or do I become nervous and unsure of myself around her?

If you become nervous and unsure of yourself around her, she's naturally not going to be able to respect you as a man.

Ask yourself ▶

Do I make her feel feminine and girly by being emotionally strong and masculine around her, or does she tend to take control and lead the dynamic between her and I?

Although some women will put up with a man who is unable to dominate them emotionally and take control of situations, most women won't.

If a woman has broken up with a man because he wasn't manly enough for her and they then interact again after the break up, she will be looking to see if he has manned up, is still the same or has gotten worse.

If you want her to respect you, it's essential that you man up by being the more emotionally strong and dominant one when you next interact with her.

Ask yourself ▶

Can she see that I ▶ve changed and improved on some of the things about me that were turning her off before (e.g. being too emotionally sensitive, being emotionally dependent on her and needing her love and reassurance all the time, not having a purpose or direction in life outside of my relationship with her, lacking confidence in myself and in my value to her, being selfish in the relationship, not treating her well enough, being clingy), or am I still stuck at the same level I was at, when we broke up?

When she sees that you really have changed, she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect for you.

As a result, everything will begin to change automatically, without you having to say or do anything to force it.

She will naturally drop her defenses, open herself up to feeling attracted to you again and begin to feel drawn to you, even if she doesn't admit that she's feeling that way.

Another example of how to revive the love with your ex isâ€¦|

3. Let her see that you now understand how to give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants

Some guys don't have ideal male role models when growing up, so most of what they know about relationships ends up being based on what they've seen on TV shows, in romantic movies and heard random people talking about.

Unfortunately, those sources are not always reliable because the relationships are either fictional, or people are just giving politically correct advice because they can't reveal how they really feel and what they really do behind closed doors.

For example: If a guy believes what he has seen play out on TV shows, or heard female talk show hosts talk about in regards to men and relationships, he might think that the right thing to do to get an ex woman back is to shower her with gifts, flowers and romantic gestures.

The female talk show hosts (usually unattractive women who have failed in their relationship life) love to say that men should treat a woman like a princess because they hope that men will believe it and then start being like that to them.

They're essentially trying to turn men into wimps, so it's easier for them to get a date, get into a relationship and keep a man.

So, if you're one of the men who has been taking what women say about men seriously, think again.

In most cases, women SAY one thing about men and then DO something completely different in their personal life, or behind closed doors.

Unfortunately, a lot of men don't realize that these days, so they believe that showering an ex with gifts, flowers, apologies, compliments or pouring his heart out to her will get her back.

Yet, that's not how getting an ex back works in real life because women only ever appreciate romantic gestures from men that they are romantically attracted to.

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's almost always because she's no longer romantically attracted to him, so the romantic gestures will basically mean nothing to her.

A woman might appreciate the fact that that her ex is making an effort to fix things between them, but it almost always won't change her mind about how she feels.

She will perceive his romantic gestures as being superficial and possibly even a little bit desperate.

She will also be aware of the fact that he isn't getting to the core of the problems between them and is just trying to distract her from the fact that he has no idea how to make her feel attracted anymore.

He's just trying to be nice, suck up to her and hope that it works.

Yet, it doesn't because what he's offering her doesn't change the core reasons why she broke up with him.

This is why, if you want to revive the love with your ex, you have to truly understand the core reasons for the break up and begin to fix those things about yourself, rather than offering her things that don't really matter at all.

If you're not quite sure what the core reasons for the break up were, here are some questions to help you find out!

- Are you still the same confident, self-believing guy that she first met, or did you become an insecure, needy and clingy guy in the relationship with her?
- Did you remain emotionally strong throughout the relationship, or did fall apart over time because you couldn't cope with the day-to-day stresses or challenges of life?
- Were you able to stand up to her in a dominant, but loving way when she tried to create drama (e.g. by throwing a tantrum, disrespecting you, demanding that things go her way or else), or did you submit to her dominance and let her walk all over you?
- Did you build on her feelings of love, respect and attraction for you over time, or did you assume that because she loved you so much at the start, it meant that she would stick around no matter how badly you treated her?
- Did you make her feel feminine and girly by being more emotionally masculine than her, or did she end up wearing the pants in the relationship or feeling more like your mother or big sister?
- Did grow up in the relationship together at the same kind of pace, or did she mature a lot faster than you?

By understanding what she really wants you to change, you can then make the right changes and adjustments to behavior and approach to her.

Then, when you interact with her again, you will be able to give her the attraction experience she always wanted from you, but didn't get (e.g. by being more confident around her, making her feel feminine and girly in your presence, not falling apart when she tries to intimidate you or dominate you, being emotionally strong, being emotionally open without being needy or seeming desperate or soft).

Then, even if she tries to fight it, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling surges of respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, the love that she once had for you automatically begins to revive and come back to life.

Another example is!

4. Focus on making her experience new feelings for you

When interacting with your ex, it might be tempting to want to repeatedly apologize to her for what happened and reassure her that things will be different this time around.

Yet, here's the thing!

She doesn't need to keep hearing your apologies.

In fact, the more you go on about what you did wrong before, the more you're reminding her of the reasons why she probably shouldn't give you another chance.

So, a much better way to go about reviving the love with your ex is by focusing on making her have feelings for the new and improved you (e.g. focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again).

If you do that, she will naturally start to focus more on how good it feels to be interacting with you now and less on how turned off she used to feel with you before.

She will then enjoy being in your presence and it will become difficult for her to continue thinking, "I just don't love him anymore."

Instead, she begins to think things like, "Hmm! I never thought that I'd feel good around my ex again after the way things ended between us, but I'm actually starting to feel sparks of excitement like I used to when we first met. I'm getting butterflies in my stomach just being around him. There is still something here between us. Maybe we can start over and have a better relationship from now on."

4 Ways That Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Revive the Love With an Ex

When trying to get an ex back, everything you say and do is either going to be breaking down the walls around her heart and mind, or strengthening them and making her want to push you away further.

So, when you next interact with her, make sure that you don't end up giving her additional reasons not to reconnect with her feelings of love for you.

For example: Some of the mistakes that other guys make here!

1. Writing a letter proclaiming his love for her

Sometimes a woman will be cold, distant and unwilling to listen to anything her ex has to say.

Every time he tries to apologize to her or tell her that he still loves her, she closes herself off and refuses to listen.

Yet, he doesn't know why.

He thinks that he just needs to try harder to get her to listen and as a result, he then decides to pour his heart out in a letter.

Yet, even though he is trying to show her that his love for her is real, a woman isn't going to care about his romantic gesture because her feelings for him have been switched off.

So, rather than make her think, "Oh, wow how cool! This is so romantic! He really does love me! I've been such a bitch to him. I've been pushing him away and refusing to listen, when all he ever wanted was to tell me how much he still loves me. Awwww, how cute. How sweet! I feel so bad for how I treated him. He deserves a chance and I'm going to give it to him," she will roll her eyes and see his letter as being a last ditch, desperate attempt to convince her to give him another chance.

If you want to convince your ex to give you another chance, don't try to do it via a letter.

It just doesn't work.

I've been helping new men to get ex women back for many years now and I've never heard of a single case where a woman was wowed by a letter.

What works is re-attracting her on a phone call or in person and then getting to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

Hiding behind texts, messages, e-mails, cards or written letters just doesn't work with women.

On that note, here's another classic mistake that modern men make when trying to revive the love with an ex woman

2. Trying to make her love him via text

Naturally, when a woman is refusing to interact with her ex man over the phone or in person, he might decide that the only way to get through to her is via text.

Texting is a good way to create a spark if you add in some flirting, but you have to get past the texts and to a meet up, so you can then get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

If a guy hides behind texts and hopes that he can eventually make her love him, he will almost always end up disappointed.

Soon enough, she will text him saying that she has met someone else, is in love and no longer wants him to text her.

3. Trying to make her feel love through discussions about his feelings for her and how much she means to him

Sometimes, a guy will hope that if he explains exactly how he feels to his ex woman, it will change how she feels about him.

He might say something like, "I just want you to know that my feelings for you are as strong as they ever were. I've never loved a woman the way I love you. Even though we are broken up, I still love you. You mean the world to me. Please don't throw our love away like this. If you just give me one more chance, I will do anything to make you happy."

It sounds good, right?

I mean, I personally feel sorry for a guy in that situation, but a woman doesn't.

A woman doesn't care how much a guy cares for her if she has lost touch with her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for him.

In other words, if the feelings aren't mutual, why should she care what he wants?

In other words, if she doesn't feel attracted to him anymore, why should she get back with him?

For what reason?

Love?

What love?

A woman only feels romantic love when she respects a man and feels sexually attracted to him.

This is why pouring your heart out to an ex, or trying to explain how you feel and how much she means to you doesn't work if the feelings aren't mutual.

So, when a guy tries to get his ex girl to understand how much she means to him, she usually won't care because she doesn't have strong feelings for him (or any feelings for him) anymore.

Rather than being impressed by his declaration of love, it actually annoys her because she sees his actions as being selfish.

Why?

It's all about him and what he wants.

Nothing about his actions show her that he's changed or improved anything about himself since the break up.

He's just going on and on about his feelings and how much she means to him, but he's not reactivating her feelings of respect or sexual attraction for him.

So, if you want to revive the love with your ex, don't waste time discussing your feelings for her because if she's not feeling a lot of respect and attraction for you right now, it's just not going to matter to her.

She will only care if you first reactivate HER feelings.

You've got to make her feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for the new and improved you.

That's what works.

Finally, another mistake that other men make when trying to revive the love with an ex woman is that

4. Not truly understanding the subtle things about him that made her fall out of love before

Sometimes a woman will break up with a guy and give him an excuse like, "I'm really sorry to have to do this, but my feelings have changed, so I don't want us to be together anymore. I don't love you the way I used to. It's not your fault. It's just me. I'm messed up. I need time to work on myself."

Yet, that isn't her real reason for breaking up with him.

She's just saying that it's all her fault (instead of giving him her real reasons), so he won't try to make her change her mind by making promises to change the things she is breaking up with him about.

When a guy has no idea how to re-attract his ex woman because she hasn't given him any clues, he might make the mistake of trying to get her back by offering her things that don't even matter (e.g. buying her gifts or flowers, giving her time to work on herself, being extra nice, being understanding, being there for her).

Yet, that just turns her off even more because it confirms to her that he has no idea what she really wants him to change.

This is why you have to understand her real, secret reasons for breaking up with you and then make those changes without her help.

If you ask for her help, she's not going to tell you because she doesn't want to teach you how to get her back.

You have to figure this out without her assistance.

For example: Some of the subtle reasons why a woman might break up with a guy include:

- He constantly fails her confidence tests (e.g. she rolls her eyes at him, plays hard to get during a conversation, pretends to feel annoyed about things that she doesn't really feel annoyed about) and it makes him feel insecure.
- He's too emotionally sensitive (e.g. he cries, whines about his problems to her) and she feels like she has to take care of him.
- He's too submissive with her (e.g. lets her get her way all the time) so she feels more emotionally dominant than him.
- He lost the confidence and self-belief she originally fell in love with and is now an insecure, needy and clingy guy.
- He treats her more like a neutral friend, so she no longer feels feminine and girly when she's with him.
- He treats her as though she is the more dominant one, so she can relax and feel like a girl around him.

How about you?

What are the subtle things about your behavior or approach to the relationship that turned her off?

Additionally, what are you going to do to quickly change those things, so you can then interact with her, re-attract her and get her back?

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

5 Rules After a Break Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you want to get your ex woman back, follow these 5 rules:

1. Regain control of your emotions

After a break up, a guy will often experience a range of negative emotions (e.g. shock, fear, depression, panic) that can cause him to behave in ways that turn his ex woman off even more.

For example: He might start sending her emotional texts, pleading with her to give him another chance or worse, even crying to her to hopefully get her to change her mind.

When his initial approach to getting her back doesn't work, he will often feel even worse about himself.

He might:

- Put himself down and start thinking, â€œIâ€™m such a loser. I ruined the perfect relationship with my perfect girl. No wonder she dumped me. This is what I deserve.â€
- Blame himself for everything that happened between him and her.
- Believe that he will never get her back.
- Tell himself that what he did was unforgivable.
- Convince himself that no other woman will ever be able to make him feel the way she did.
- Start thinking of her as being perfect in comparison to himself.
- Become depressed and unmotivated (e.g. he refuses to go out and socialize with his friends, spends most of his evenings and weekends avoiding the world).
- Feel angry and betrayed by her.
- Become bitter and negative towards her and women in general (e.g. he might say, â€œWomen are all untrustworthy, unreliable bitches! Who needs them anyway? Iâ€™m better off by myself!â€).

Unfortunately, where a lot of guys go wrong is that they allow negative emotions like that to spiral out of control.

Then, if the guy does interact with his ex girl via text, on the phone or in person, she'll be able to sense the hostility, resentment, insecurity and sadness on his part and it will cause her to keep her guard up and want to continue moving on without him.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Feeling sad about your break up is perfectly normal and to be expected.

You may even temporarily feel a bit depressed and angry about how she has left you.

You might also start to doubt your ability to get her back.

However, you canâ€™t let those feelings and thoughts take over and cause you to turn into an insecure guy who feels unworthy of her.

You have to regain control of your emotions and take control of the ex back processâ€¦!

If you donâ€™t regain control of your emotions before you interact with your ex again, she will pick up on your negative state of mind (e.g. via your body language, by what you say and do when you talk to her) and it will turn her off.

Then, rather than think, “Wow, he is taking our break up badly, so it must mean that he truly loves me,” she will likely be thinking, “I never realized that he’s so emotionally weak. He can’t even cope with a simple break up without falling to pieces. Well, I think I’ve made the right decision by breaking up with him. After all, I need a man who can handle his problems in life no matter how big they are. I need a man with emotional strength and perseverance, not a guy who falls apart like a woman at the first sign of trouble in life.”

So, if you want your ex back, you need to regain control of your emotions, so she can naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you when you next interact with her.

The next rule after a break up isâ€¦!

2. Get clear on what will make her feel attracted to you again

Wanting your ex back is great, but if don’t get clear on what it will take to re-attract her, you may end up turning her off even more (i.e. because she’ll feel as though you still don’t understand her).

So, if you want her back for real, get absolutely clear about what you need to start saying and doing to properly re-attract her.

For example: Consider the following questionsâ€¦!

- What attracted her to you in the first place? Was it your confidence, your ability to make her feel like a feminine woman in your presence, your sense of humor, your drive and ambition?
- Did you continue to display those qualities throughout your relationship with her, or did you slowly fall into the habit of behaving in less attractive ways?
- Did you become insecure about your attractiveness to her and as a result, start to behave in clingy, needy way?
- Did you start treating her more like a neutral friend or ‘one of the boys,’ rather than treating her like a sexy, feminine woman?
- Did you become too serious and stern in the relationship?
- Did you stop focusing on your goals and become too emotionally dependent on her?
- Did you take responsibility for maintaining and building on the feelings of love, respect and attraction between you and her, or did you take it all for granted and assume that she’d always love you because she did at the start?
- Did you take the lead in the relationship, or did you make the mistake of thinking that she would be happier if she was the one in charge?

When you can honestly answer those questions and see where you went wrong, you will have a much better idea about what you need to work on to successfully re-attract her and get her back.

The next rule after a break up isâ€¦!

3. Don’t wait too long to make contact

Sometimes a guy might think that giving his ex a few weeks or even months of space will allow her to calm down after a break up and hopefully start missing him.

Yet, thatâs not usually what happens.

In most cases, when a woman breaks up with a guy, itâs because she has lost a lot of respect and attraction for him as her man.

So, when she doesnât hear from him for a long time after the break up, she doesnât feel too bad about it.

Instead, she usually uses that time to fully disconnect from her feelings for him, move on and find herself a replacement guy.

Alternatively, if a woman is secretly still in love with her ex and is hoping that they can get back together and she then doesnât hear from him, she may decide that he doesnât care enough about her anymore and will then focus on getting over him.

Then, by the time he does make contact with her, she might say, âIâm sorry, but youâre too late. You never once bothered to call me and see how I was doing. Itâs over now. I donât see myself being with a man who is as heartless as you. Please donât contact me again. Iâve already begun to move on and Iâm happy now without you. Goodbye.â

So, donât wait too long to get your ex girl back.

The best approach is to interact with her (on the phone or in person) and make her feel sparks of respect and sexual attraction for you again.

The more you reawaken her feelings for you, the more she will want you back.

On the other hand, if you wait too long, you may discover that she hooks up with a new guy and moves on in the meantime.

Another rule after a break up isâ|

4. Believe in yourself and know that itâs possible to re-attract an ex and start over again

When a woman is saying things like, âItâs over between us. Nothing you say or do is going to ever change how I feel, so just accept it and move on,â itâs only natural that a guy might start doubting himself and his ability to get her back.

He may even say to himself, âIâm such a loser. I ruined my relationship with my perfect woman and now Iâll end up being alone for the rest of my life. Thereâs no way she will ever forgive me and give me another chance.â

Yet, thinking like that doesnât accomplish anything.

In fact, it becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy.

How?

When he interacts with her again, she will pick up on his lack of confidence and self-belief (e.g. via the tonality of his voice, his body language and the way he responds to what she says and how she treats him) and it will turn her off.

Women arenât sexually attracted to emotional weakness like that, especially from an ex.

So, if your ex senses that you donât believe in yourself and your value to her, she might decide that she made the right decision to break up with you because youâre just not man enough for her.

On the other hand, if you honestly believe in yourself and in your ability to re-attract her and get her back, she will sense that confidence and feel respect and attraction for you because of it. As a result, she will naturally begin to open up to you and consider giving you another chance. The next rule after a break up isâ€¦!

5. Interact with her and make her feel sparks of romantic and sexual attraction

If you want to get your ex back, the most important rule is this:

You have to actively interact with her and make her feel sparks of romantic and sexual attraction for you, so she actually has a reason to get back with you.

Getting a woman back can't be all about how much you want her back, how sincere you are to do better this time or how messed up you'll be if she doesn't give you another chance.

It's about how she feels.

If you make her feel sparks of romantic and sexual attraction for you, she will naturally open back up to you.

For example: You can do that byâ€¦!

- Using humor to make her laugh and smile and feel relaxed and comfortable in your presence once again, especially if she is being cold, distant or difficult to talk to.
- Maintaining your confidence when she tries to make you feel nervous or uncertain about your chances with her.
- Being more emotionally masculine than her as you talk to her.
- Behaving in unexpected ways (e.g. you are no longer insecure and now have bulletproof confidence around her, you are no longer emotionally selfish and are now able to make her feel loved and appreciated, without coming across as though you're trying to suck up to her to get another chance).

The more attracted you make her feel during interactions, the more her defenses come down.

She then feels as though there is a reason to give you another chance (i.e. because there is clearly still something between you and her and if she walks away, she is going to be missing you and will likely end up regretting it).

4 Mistakes That Some Men Make After a Break Up

Getting a woman back after a break up is possible and if you do it right, it's actually quite easy and straightforward.

However, if you make one or more of the following mistakes that other guys make, you will find it difficult and maybe even impossible to get her backâ€¦!

1. Trying to get her back via text

If your ex refuses to talk over the phone or meet up in person, sending her a text message might be the only way that you can contact her.

That's fine, to begin with.

However, don't make the mistake of sticking to text as your main method of getting her back.

Why?

When a woman can't hear the tonality of your voice, or see your confident body language and behavior when she tries to make you doubt yourself (e.g. by being unfriendly or distant during a conversation), she will usually just imagine you as being the way you were when she broke up with you, or how you behaved leading up to the break up.

For example: If a guy was insecure, unsure of himself and needy, an ex woman will continue to assume that he is still like that until he proves otherwise to her.

She can't see the changes via text and knows that anyone can act confident, cool or in control via text, even though they are insecure, worried and panicking in real life.

So, a woman usually won't give her ex guy the benefit of the doubt and think, He was an insecure, needy guy with me, but maybe he's changed since then. I should at least give him a chance. After all, he is texting quite well. He seems like he's got it together.

Instead, she's going to be thinking something along the lines of, A leopard never changes its spots. My ex is probably just the same jerk he was before, so I'm not going to even bother wasting my time with him. He can text me all he wants! I'm moving on!

So, if you truly want to get your ex back for real, don't waste time trying to get her back via text.

So many men lose their ex girlfriend or wife simply based on making the classic, but very modern mistake of trying to get her back via text.

If you want to get her back for real, you need to call her on the phone or see her in person, re-attract her and then get to a hug and potentially a kiss and maybe even sex as well.

After you get to one of those levels, your ex's guard is down, she's feeling attracted to you again and it's so much easier to get her back.

Yet, if you stick to text, you'll probably end up with a history of texts between you and her that went nowhere.

Another mistake that other guys make after a break up with a woman is

2. Feeling unworthy of her due to what she said and how she felt when breaking up with him

When a woman reaches the point where she wants to break up with a guy, it's usually because she has disconnected from her sexual and romantic feelings for him.

After a break up, she usually won't be thinking about him in a favorable way and regretting her decision.

Instead, a woman will often say something like, "Sorry, but it's over. I don't want to try anymore" or, "We had our chance and it didn't work", or, if she's a bit more direct and cold about it, she might say, I never want to see you again or, My feelings for you are completely dead or even, I will never forgive you for what you did to me. I hate you now!

Although what she is saying makes it sound final, you have to block that out of your mind to maintain your confidence, otherwise you will won't be able to re-attract her (i.e. because you will be insecure, feel unworthy, try to suck up to her, be too nice and polite).

Remember: Yes, you made some mistakes, but that doesn't make you a bad person.

The truth is, every man makes silly mistakes in a relationship at some point in his life.

However, what separates the successful men from the losers is that the successful men learn from their mistakes and become even better men than they were before.

So, as long as you've learned from your past mistakes and have truly made an effort to become a better man since your break up, then there's absolutely no reason to feel like you don't deserve another chance with her.

You do.

On the other hand, if you allow what your ex said during the break up to make you feel unworthy of her, it will only make you seem even less attractive to her (and to other women).

Why?

A woman likes the idea of being with a confident, emotionally strong man who believes in himself and in his value to her no matter what she says or does during moments of anger or disappointment.

So, when a guy feels insecure and starts to believe that he's not good enough for his ex girl, it actually makes her feel turned off by him and begin to think, "Well, it looks like I made the right decision. I don't feel attracted to him anymore. I did the right thing. I have to move on now."

So, if you want your ex back, make sure that you honestly believe that you are good enough for her (regardless of what she said, or is currently saying) and then take action to re-attract her and get her back.

Another mistake that other guys make after a break up with a woman is

3. Hoping that if he just waits long enough, she will come back on her own

Even though a guy might want to get his ex back right away, he may also be afraid of coming across as being too pushy and scaring her off.

So, rather than contacting her right away (or a few days later), he decides to give her a lot of space in the hope that this will make her miss him and come back to him on her own.

Yet, that rarely happens.

In most cases, rather than running back to a guy that she no longer has feelings for, a woman simply focuses on moving on.

Then, by the time the guy decides he's waited for her long enough and contacts her again, rather than hear her say something along the lines of, "I'm so glad you called! I've missed you so much. Want to meet up?" she's more likely to say something like, "Oh, it's you! Long time no speak. So, what have you been doing? Have you met someone else? I have and I'm really happy now. I hope you have too."

Don't let that happen to you.

If you want your ex back, you need to be active about it (i.e. call her on the phone, or meet up with her in person), not passive (i.e. ignore her and wait for her to hopefully miss you, contact you and want you back).

Women don't come running back to guys that they're no longer attracted to or in love with.

So, if you don't interact with her and re-spark some of her feelings for you, she's almost certainly just going to move on without you.

Of course, if your ex is still in love with you and will miss you like crazy if you don't contact her, then sure cut off contact.

However, don't do that for more than a week.

I've been helping new men to get women back for many years now and I've found that a man never needs to wait more than a week to start the ex back process.

Waiting a few days and up to a maximum of a week proves the point that you're not needy and aren't being desperate.

If you wait any longer than that, most women tend to assume that you're not interested and will often try to make themselves feel better by flirting with and hooking up with new guys to get over you and move on.

Another mistake that some men make after a break up is

4. Not preparing to re-attract her when he next interacts with her

Sometimes, a guy will make the mistake of assuming that his ex woman will give him another chance because he wants it so much and is so sincere about doing a better job this time around.

He doesn't realize that to get a woman back, you have to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new and improved you, so she actually has a reason to give you another chance.

So, if a guy doesn't know that, he will interact with his ex woman and essentially come across as the same guy that she dumped.

As a result, she doesn't feel like it would be fair to her to give him another chance, so she refuses to and just continues trying to get over him and move on.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why Does My Ex Take So Long to Text Me Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why an ex woman will take a long time to text you back!

1. She's testing to see how you will react

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she usually tries to disconnect from any residual feelings of respect, attraction and love that she might still have for him, so she can then move on.

If her ex starts texting her, she usually won't jump at the chance to interact with him, unless of course she's still really in love with him and wants him back.

In every other case, a woman will first test to see if her ex has changed and improved since the break up, before she allows herself to fully drop her guard and open back up to him.

For example:

- Will he become insecure and self-doubting if she takes a long time to reply to his texts, or will he maintain his confidence in his attractiveness to her no matter what?
- Will he give up at the first sign of resistance from her, or will he continue to pursue her in a confident, calm manner?
- Will he get angry or irritated with her for taking so long to text him back, or won't it matter that much to him because he's not emotionally dependent on her to make him feel good about himself?

Another common reason why an ex will take so long to text you back is

2. She's playing hard to get to make you suffer for what you put her through

When a woman is angry with her ex for what happened between them, she might initially be resistant to his attempts to get her back.

So, making the ex back process easy for him by quickly responding to his texts might not be something that she wants to do right away.

Instead, she may want to make him suffer for a while for putting her through the pain that she went through (e.g. he was emotionally unavailable in the relationship, he didn't make her feel appreciated).

She may think something like, "I can't believe that he expects me to get into a sweet, friendly conversation with him via text like nothing ever happened between us. He doesn't realize how angry I am with him for how he treated me. Well, I'm going to give him a big dose of his own medicine now and make him suffer. I'll take my time to reply so he can see how it feels to be treated like you don't matter!"

So, if you suspect that the reason your ex is taking so long to text you back is because she wants to make you suffer, sticking to texting her back and forth whenever she feels like it, isn't going to accomplish anything other than make you feel frustrated.

To speed up the ex back process, you need to call her on the phone or, even better, meet up with her in person, so that you can properly reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

When you reactivate her feelings, it becomes a lot easier for her to forgive you.

On the other hand, if you just stick to texting, it will probably be very difficult for you to fully restore her feelings (i.e. because she can't see your body language, or hear the tonality of your voice).

If she isn't feel enough respect, attraction and love you based on the text exchanges, she will probably continue to make you suffer by taking a long time to text you back.

She might also twist the knife by being cold, bitchy or distant when she does finally get around to replying.

So, if you want her back for real, don't try to achieve everything via text.

You've got to have the balls to get to a phone call and in person interaction.

You then need to properly re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship with you.

Another common reason why an ex will take so long to text you back isâ€¦!

3. You're trying to have serious conversations or discussions via text

Sometimes a guy thinks that in order for his ex to want to talk to him over the phone or meet up with him in person, he first has to show her that he's serious about fixing their relationship problems.

As a result, he will send her loads of texts discussing what went wrong in the relationship and apologizing for his mistakes.

For example: A guy who was a bit too irresponsible with how he approached life (e.g. partying too much, using up his spare time to play video games, rather than working on a better future for him and her, not caring about her feelings and being mean and rude to her).

After getting dumped, he will most likely realize his mistake and want to be forgiven and given another chance.

So, he might text his ex girl something like, I'm really sorry about everything that happened between us. I should have taken things more seriously, but I didn't. I just couldn't stop myself from acting like that, even though I could see it was pushing you away. I now realize that I was being childish and immature and I'm truly sorry about that. I really messed up because I didn't grow up and become the man you wanted me to be. I'm not like that anymore and I really want to make it up to you, so that we can get back together. Will you at least think about it? I'm willing to do whatever it takes to prove to you that I've really changed.

Yet, here's the thing!

When a guy tries to have a serious discussion with his ex via text, it causes her to have to relive the negative emotions that she was feeling during the relationship (e.g. anger, frustration, irritation, disgust, disappointment, resentment).

So, rather than think, Wow, he's being so mature all of a sudden. Maybe he has changed after all. Maybe I should give him another chance, she instead thinks something like, Yeah, he's right! He was childish and irresponsible and I can't believe that I actually put up with it for so long. Now he wants me to believe that he's changed and just give him another chance based on his word. Haha! Whatever! He was never reliable before, so why would I believe him that this time around would be any different? I bet that if I gave him another chance, he'd just go back to his old ways when we settled down again."

Based on her uncertainty about his motives or intentions, she will naturally want to take her time when replying to him, to ensure that she isn't being sucked back into a relationship with him against her will.

So, what should you do instead?

Regardless of whether or not you want to apologize to your ex for what happened between you and her, or prove to her that you really have changed, just don't try to do it via text.

That's a conversation you can have after you've re-attracted her, gotten to a hug and then possibly a kiss.

Get back to that place first, otherwise you will be trying to row a boat upstream.

You don't need to put in all that effort.

Go with nature, rather than against it and things will flow naturally and smoothly for you.

In other words, re-attract her first, get to a hug and possibly a kiss and she will then naturally become open to discussing the relationship, working things out and seeing what happens from there.

When you approach it that way, you easily flow downstream with little effort other than to steer the direction of where you're going.

So, how can you begin to re-attract her via text, so she is willing to meet up with you and then get to a hug and possibly a kiss?

One way to do it is by flirting with her

When you flirt with her and start making her feel attracted, not only will she be more likely to respond to your texts a lot sooner, but she will also want to talk on the phone and meet up with you in person to see how she feels.

On the phone and in person, you can then build on her feelings and get her back for real by getting to a hug, kiss, sex and then back into a relationship.

Another common reason why an ex will take so long to text you back is

4. She doesn't want to look too keen, even though she is interested

Even if a woman still has feelings for her ex and wants to get back with him, she won't always make it obvious.

In fact, quite often, the more a woman wants her ex back, the less keen she'll want to appear to him (i.e. because she doesn't want to show too much interest, only to then be rejected by him and then feel like she is the one who got dumped).

As a result of her fear of being rejected and hurt, she might take a long time to reply back to her ex's texts.

Naturally, this might then cause her ex guy to start thinking, "Well, I guess she's not interested in getting back together. I'm probably just wasting my time with her. Maybe I need to start moving on."

He then tries to move on, without ever knowing that he had a chance to get her back, if he would just grow a pair of balls and get her on a phone call and then get her to meet up with him in person.

So, if you want to get her back, decide now that you are going to be emotionally courageous enough to proceed through the entire ex back process, rather than hiding behind texts and hoping that something happens.

Another common reason why an ex will take so long to text you back isâ€¦!

4. You're texting her too often

Sometimes a guy might decide that the best way to stay on his ex's mind is to text her random things throughout the day.

He hopes that by staying in touch, she won't be able to forget about him and move on with someone else.

Yet, rather than not being able to move on based on his texts, she will most-likely feel annoyed by the fact that he's being so clingy.

So, if you want your ex to get back to you quickly when you text her, don't waste her time by constantly texting her about random things.

Instead, only text her with the purpose of sparking her feelings for you, so you can then get her on a phone call, organize a meet up and then properly re-attract her and get her back.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Texting an Ex Woman

Whatever you say and do from now on is either going to bring you and her closer together, or push you further apart.

So, if you are serious about getting her back, try to avoid the following mistakes that other guys make when in your shoesâ€¦!

1. Sticking to text as the main way to get her back

Although there's nothing wrong with texting an ex (especially if she refuses to talk to you over the phone or see you in person), being too afraid to get her on a call is the fastest way to annoy her and turn her off.

If a woman senses that her ex guy is afraid to call, she will become irritated by his texts and will lose interest in replying to him.

She may think, "What does he want from me? We're going nowhere with these back and forth texts. It's like he doesn't have anything else to do other than bother me with useless messages. I don't even know if he wants me back, because he's not doing anything about it. He's just texting back and forth. It's so annoying. It's also a turn off that he lacks the balls to call me and get me to meet up with him. Oh well, if he doesn't have the balls to be a man and get me back, I'll just have to find myself a new man."

She then focuses on moving on by meeting new men, having sex and falling in love again with someone new.

So, if your main goal is to get your ex back, then don't waste your time (and hers) by endlessly texting back and forth.

Make a move.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

2. Feeling afraid to call her because she might not like it or might not answer

A guy will sometimes stick to texting his ex, because he will be thinking something like, â€œWhat if she doesn't answer my call?â€ or, â€œWhat if she doesn't want to talk to me?â€

Here's the thing!

Even if your ex is standoffish or distant when you first get her on a call, that act of hers won't last long if you focus on rekindling her feelings by making her laugh and smile as she talks to you.

She will naturally drop her guard and begin to open up to talking to you and better still, she will actually enjoy it, which will make her want to open up to seeing you in person.

Likewise, if your ex doesn't answer the first time you call, just call her another time when she's likely to be free (i.e. the next day, a couple of days later).

If she still doesn't answer, text her this: â€œHey, I hope all is well for you. I tried to get hold of you the other day to ask you something quick over the phone, but it looks like you're busy. I'll call again another time.â€

Most women respond to that and ask something like, â€œWhat do you want to ask me?â€

If she texts back, don't reply.

Instead, call her, re-attract her on a call and get her to meet up with you.

BTW: The thing that you want to ask her is to meet up with you, but don't tell her that right away.

Re-attract her first (e.g. by using some humor to get her smiling, laughing and feeling good to be talking to you again).

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Asking her why she is taking so long to reply to your texts

Sometimes, a guy will feel annoyed with his ex for taking so long to text him back and will end up texting her something like, â€œWhy are you taking so long to reply? Are you trying to mess with my head or something? I know that I stuffed our relationship up, but I'm trying my best to make things right between us. Can't you see that? You don't have to keep punishing me like this. Please, just be reasonable here. I want to work things out. I love you.â€

Yet, rather than make a woman think, â€œGee, I never realized I was being such a bitch to him. He's right, he really is trying hard and I haven't been very nice to him at all. I need to make an effort here. I owe him that much after everything we've been through together,â€ she instead feels more turned off by what she perceives as his desperation to get her back.

So, if your ex is taking too long to text you back, just call her on the phone, rather than complaining to her about it, or asking her why she is doing it.

On the call, use humor to break down her defenses and get her to agree to meet up with you, so you can then get her back for real.

The next mistake to avoid is!

4. Thinking that there is a correct amount of time to reply to a text

Sometimes, a guy will feel as though his ex girl should reply to his texts quickly because he loves her, cares about her and wants to work things out.

Other times, a guy will expect quick replies because he will see that as the decent thing to do.

Yet, here's the thingâ€¦|

You and her are broken up at the moment, so she isn't obligated to do anything for you anymore.

I know, I know.

It sucks to hear that, but it's true.

If you want her to care about you again, you've got to focus on making her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

If she doesn't feel that, she's just not going to feel very motivated to reply quickly, or at all, from now on.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Isn't Telling Me the Full Story

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 reasons why your ex might not be telling you the full story...

1. She doesn't want to help you realize what will get her back

It would be great if a woman said, "Look, here's the full story. I'm breaking up with you because" (and she then lists everything you've done wrong in full detail). So, here's what I think you should do so that we can get back together.

Yet, that rarely, if ever happens.

Instead, a woman will usually say something like, "It's not you, it's me. I just need some space," or "It's just not working out between us. We're not connecting anymore," or even, "I need to focus more on my studies/career/family, so it's better if we don't see each other for now."

Naturally, that often leaves a guy feeling confused and thinking things like, "My ex isn't telling me the full story. Maybe if I ask her to explain to me what's really going on with her and why she wants to break up, we can then work on fixing things between us and getting back together. Maybe she wants to see that I'm willing to do whatever it takes to make our relationship work."

Yet, that's not what a woman usually wants after breaking up with a guy that she is no longer attracted to or in love with.

If you she is going to give you another chance, she will want to see that can change and improve without her guidance or instruction.

If she tells you what to change, then the changes in you won't feel natural and will instead feel forced.

Then, in the back of her mind, she will always be wondering, "Is this really what he wants/who he wants to be, or is he only being like this to please me? What if he eventually gets tired of being what I want him to be? Will he suddenly decide to change back to the way he was before? If he switches back to his old self, months or years from now, it might then be too late for me to get out of the relationship because we'd married or would have a child together. I don't want to trap myself like that. I want a man who genuinely wants to change for his own sake as well as mine. I don't want a guy who is faking things just to be with me. That's desperate."

So, if your ex isn't telling you the full story at the moment, make sure that you show her that you're now a better, more attractive man than before, without her needing to tell you how to be that way.

When she sees for herself that you really have changed, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for you again.

Another common reason why your ex might not be telling you the full story is

2. She doesn't want you to react badly if she tells you the real reasons why she broke up with you

[image: Why won't you tell me what's really going on?!]

Women are instinctively programmed to avoid getting into a confrontation of any kind with a man (i.e. in the past, men could beat and kill women and get away with it, so the instinct is hard-wired into women to avoid making a man react in that way).

So, rather than potentially causing to react in a way (i.e. angry, aggressive, controlling, threatening) that will make her feel uncomfortable, or even unsafe, a woman will often use a fake reason to break up with you (e.g. she needs time to think, wants to focus on her career or studies, wants to be alone for a while).

For example: Imagine if a woman broke up with a guy because he was too soft and gentle with her, but rather than giving him a fake reason for ending the relationship, she gave him the full story.

She said something like, "Iâm breaking up with you because you lack the emotional masculinity and toughness I want in a guy. When weâre together you make me feel more like your mother than like your woman. I always feel like Iâm taking care of your emotional needs, rather than the other way around. You're too much of a wimp for me. I need a real man. You lack balls and it makes me feel like I'm tougher than you. I don't want that. I want to feel girly in comparison to the man I'm with. Sorry, but thatâs just the way I feel."

When he hears the truth about why sheâs breaking up with him, he then reacts by getting angry with her for being so selfish and expecting him to be emotionally tougher, after all he has been through in the past (e.g. with his childhood, failed relationships).

He then starts crying to seek pity from her, or begging for her to give him a chance so he can prove to her that he can be emotionally tougher and stronger as a man.

So, to avoid that kind of reaction, a woman will often keep the full story to herself and just use whatever excuse she feels will get her out of the relationship without too much drama.

Another common reason why your ex might not be telling you the full story isâ

3. She doesn't feel obligated to tell you everything

In today's world, a woman is not a manâs property, so she can decide to say and do whatever she pleases.

Even though it might suck to hear this, if your ex wants to break up with you and not tell you the full story, itâs her right to do so.

I know, I knowânot very nice, right?

How dare she be so selfish, what has happened to women, the world isn't what is used to be and so on.

Here's the thing thoughâ

Even though it would be nice if your ex had to come clean and spell everything out for you, the fact is that she doesn't have to if she doesn't want to.

As much as that sucks for you, you need to accept it and not try to force her into telling you what she doesn't want to tell you.

If you keep pushing her to explain everything, rather than getting the full story out of her, youâre more likely to annoy her and cause her to close up even more.

Then, interacting with her so that you can get her back becomes a lot more difficult, because she is refusing to answer your texts, social media messages or calls and she won't meet up with you.

Some guys refer to ex women like that as being stubborn.

Here's a video I made to help men get a stubborn ex woman back...

For now, I recommend that you forget about trying to find out the full story and focus instead on using every interaction you have with her to restore her feelings for you again.

For example: Maintain your confidence with her even if she's being closed off, make her laugh and smile, flirting with her to create sexual tension and make her feel girly in comparison to your masculine approach to conversations and interactions.

When your ex feels sparks of respect, attraction and love for you again, she will naturally open back up to you and not want to lose what you and her now have together.

If she tries to fight it by ignoring you, she will begin to worry that you are going to be the one who got away.

She will go to bed thinking of you and how there seems to be a spark between you and her again and as a result, she will feel compelled to see you in person and see what unfolds between you and her.

When you meet up with her in person, don't try to get the full story from her.

Just focus on building on her feelings and getting to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

Another common reason why your ex might not be telling you the full story is

4. She didn't take the relationship as seriously as you did

Sometimes a guy will invest a lot more into a relationship than the woman does.

For example: He might think, "She's the one for me. I know we are meant to be together. This relationship is for real. I have to show her that I am 100% committed to her. I have to treat her like a princess."

Yet, she might be thinking, "He's a nice enough guy, but I don't think he's the one for me. I'm just going to enjoy what we have for now, but it's not serious for me. If I meet another guy who makes me feel more respect and attraction, I will break up with my current guy and move on."

Then, when she meets a new guy, she might break up with him by saying something like, "I need some space to figure out what I want," when what's really happening is that she needs some time to establish a relationship with the new guy.

[image: Why your ex doesn't want to tell you the full story]

Her boyfriend is then left thinking, "I don't understand why this happened. She's not telling me the full story. I can feel it. Something is up."

When she has established a relationship with the new guy, she will then feel safe to say, "I've met someone else and I'm happy now. Please respect that. I wish you all the best."

Horrible, but some men and women do that to each other at the end of a relationship.

It's not just women.

In other cases, rather than moving on with a new guy right away, a woman will just keep asking her ex for more and more space, in the hope that he eventually gives up and leaves her alone.

Not everyone has the courage to come right out and say, "It's over. I don't want to be with you anymore because I'm no longer attracted to you."

Additionally, sometimes a person will break up a relationship in that way because they don't want their ex to move on before they do.

So, the person will say, "I need space. Please give me that. We can then talk about getting back together after that" and then use that time to move on before their ex does.

Another common reason why your ex might not be telling you the full story isâ€¦!

5. She doesn't want to open up a dialogue with you that could give you ways to convince her to give you another chance

Even if a woman still has some feelings left for a guy, she might still go through with a break up because, deep down, she just doesn't believe that he will ever change and be the man she wants him to be.

So, rather than spell things out for him (i.e. tell him exactly what he's doing wrong) and risk him trying to talk her out of her decision, she breaks up with him and tries to move on.

For example: A woman might want her man to be more focused and goal oriented in his life, rather than just drifting through his life without any real purpose or direction.

However, if she says that to him, he might then start making promises to change and even try to prove to her that he's more focused now than he was before.

She may then give him another chance with her, only to realize that he didn't really change anything at all and that he just said he would change to stop her from breaking up with him.

So, the next time she makes her decision to break up with him, rather than risk him talking her out of her decision again, she simply breaks up with him without telling him the full story and then tries to move on.

Mistakes to Avoid When Trying to Get the Full Story From Your Ex

Whether your ex is telling you the full story or not, to get her back, you need to make sure that your interactions with her from now on are turning her on, rather than turning her off.

To turn her back on, be sure to avoid making the following mistakesâ€¦!

1. Seeking pity for how she is making you feel by not telling you the full story

Sometimes a guy might say to his ex, "How can you do this to me? How can you just walk away from what we had without even giving me a proper explanation of what is going on? I just don't understand how you can be so coldhearted. I know that I stuffed up, but don't I at least deserve to hear the full story after all we've been through? If you ever loved me at all, you owe me that. Please, have a heart. I need to know. Tell me what is going on. Tell me why you are doing this. I love you more than anything. I don't want to break up. If you leave me, you are going to ruin me. You *are what I care about most in this world. Please, tell me what is going on.*â€¦

Essentially, heâ€™s hoping that by making her feel sorry for him, she will change her mind, give him an explanation and make it easier for him to get her back.

Yet, it just doesnâ€™t work like that.

A woman doesnâ€™t want to feel like sheâ€™s being manipulated by her ex, simply because he canâ€™t figure out where he went wrong or what he needs to do to get her back.

Additionally, when a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her ex, a man's whining and nagging for an explanation only confirms to her that she has made the right decision (i.e. because he doesn't know what she wants and needs her to teach him and guide him to be a better man for her).

So, donâ€™t bother trying to make your ex feel pity about not giving you the full story.

Instead, focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

2. Trying to get her to work on having a relationship when she's not even attracted

When a woman breaks up with a guy, her main focus is usually to limit her interactions with him, so she can get over him and move on.

If her ex keeps contacting her, asking her for the full story and trying to work things out based on the details, she will continue making excuses to avoid giving him any hope that she is open to getting back together.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Right now, your ex probably doesnâ€™t care that you want to get her back, how sincere you are or how much you need her.

She likely doesnâ€™t have strong enough feelings for you at the moment, so discussing the relationship and then working things out based on the details is probably the last thing on her mind.

So, if you want her to care, you first have to focus on reawakening some of her sexual and romantic feelings for you during interactions, so she then feels like it's worth it to give you another chance.

On the other hand, if you just keep pushing her for a relationship without first reactivating her feelings for you, sheâ€™s probably going to remain closed off and refuse to give you another chance.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦

3. Thinking that the way to get her back is to dig deep into the full story

Getting all the details, or the full story on why she has broken up with you isn't going to get her back. What will?

Restoring her feelings of respect, sexual and romantic attraction and love for you.

That is what really counts and is what works to get a woman back quickly.

For example: Here are some ways that you can begin to restore her feelingsâ€¦

- Show her how confident you now are, but not feeling nervous or unsure of yourself when she is being cold, distant or even rude towards you.

- Use humor to diffuse a tense situation and get her laughing, smiling and feeling good to be talking and interacting with you again, rather than feeling nervous and trying to be nicer to her in the hope that she feels bad for treating you badly and begins being nicer herself.
- Stand up to her in a loving, but dominant way if she tries to disrespect you during a conversation.
- Make her feel feminine and girly by being more emotionally masculine when you interact with her.

When you focus on re-attracting her, she naturally begins to drop her guard and want to open up to you because it now feels great to interact with you.

On the other hand, if you just keep pushing her to tell you the full story without reactivating her feelings, sheâll probably become even more closed off and determined to keep you out of her life.

So, forget about what she is or isnât telling you and focus instead on what she is and isnât feeling.

Her feelings for you are what will make her want you back.

Focus on that.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Have a New Girlfriend, But I Want My Ex Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 things you should do now:

1. Get clear on what your ex will need to feel to want you back too

Start by asking yourself, What made my ex stop feeling respect, attraction and love for me?

For example:

Maybe you were too indecisive about what you wanted from life or the relationship, so she always felt unsure about her future with you.

Maybe you were too focused on living a carefree life, hanging out with your friends or playing video games, which then caused her to feel as though she was more emotionally mature than you.

Maybe you were too nice and accommodating (e.g. always letting her get her way), so she felt too dominant in the relationship when she actually wanted to be in the one down position in terms of dominance.

Maybe you treated her more like your best friend than a sexy, desirable woman, so she started to feel the need to flirt with other men who would see her that way.

Maybe you felt really lucky to be her boyfriend (causing you to become insecure and clingy due to the fear of losing her), so she ended up feeling smothered by you.

The causes of a break up are always different for each relationship, so you have to find the reasons that are the most relevant to you and your ex.

Here's a video of mine that will give you more insight into where you went wrong and how to fix that and get her back!

Once you know where you went wrong, I recommend that you

2. Test out new attraction methods on your new girlfriend, to prepare yourself to successfully re-attract your ex when you next interact with her or meet up with her

The benefit of having a new girlfriend while wanting your ex back, is that you've got yourself a woman that you test things out on.

For example: If you allowed your ex to be more emotionally dominant than you in the relationship (e.g. make all the decisions, get her way all the time), focus on being the kind of man who takes charge and doesn't allow himself to be pushed around in your current relationship.

So, if your new girlfriend tries to take control of the relationship (e.g. she throws a tantrum or creates drama just to get her way), rather than give in to her like you did in the past, try to react differently (e.g. turn her tantrum into something you can laugh about together).

Initially, she might be a bit shocked that you're not taking her drama so seriously anymore, because she's so used to you giving in to her.

Yet, whether she openly admits it or not, she will be feeling a tremendous amount of respect and sexual attraction for you for reacting that way (i.e. not allowing her to dominate you and take control of the relationship by way of tantrums and emotional outbursts).

At the same time, you will have improved yourself in a way that will be attractive to your ex girlfriend, if one of the reasons why she left you was that you lacked manliness in the relationship and let her gain too much power over you.

Another example is if you treated your ex more like your friend than your lover.

With your new girlfriend, focus on making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine vibe (i.e. talk in a masculine way, behave in a masculine way, touch her while exuding a masculine vibe, look at her while exuding a masculine vibe).

Again, by changing the way you interact with your new girlfriend (i.e. being emotionally masculine), you become the kind of man that your ex will naturally feel attracted to.

Once youâve tested out new attraction techniques, methods and examples on your new girlfriend, you shouldâ

3. Contact your ex and use the new attraction methods to make her see you in a new light

So, if youâre still on speaking terms with your ex (e.g. youâve been texting each other from time to time, or keeping in touch via social media), get her on a phone call with you, or get her to meet up with you so you can catch up and say hi in person.

If you get her on a phone call, be confident and allow her to sense that you have changed and improved some of the things that matter to her.

For example: If she tries to test whether she can dominate you emotionally by saying something along the lines of, *âWhy are you calling me? You have a new girlfriend now. What we had is over,*â use it as a chance to show her the new and improved you.

Rather than taking her so seriously, just laugh and say something along the lines of, *âHey, Iâm just calling to say hello as a friend. We can do that, right? Itâs no big deal. You're such a little drama queen, aren't you?*â and have a laugh with her about that.

Alternatively, if she acts cold and aloof to make you feel nervous and insecure, just maintain your confidence and use some humor to ease the tension.

The more you pass her little tests of your confidence, the more her guard will come down.

Then, when you ask her to meet up with you, sheâll most likely say *âYes,*â because she will want to experience the new and improved you in person.

By the wayâ!

If you haven't had any contact with your ex since the break up or are afraid that she won't answer your call, then just send her this text:

*âHeyâ! how's things? I hope all is well. I know that you and I are broken up and I totally accept that. However, I need to ask you something quick over the phone. Itâs not serious, so donât worry! â Iâll call you in 10 minutes.*â

Then, go ahead and call her in 10 minutes time.

If she texts you back and asks, *âWhat do you want to ask me?*â just call her, rather than replying to her text and explaining yourself.

If she doesn't answer your call, just wait for a few days and then try to call her again.

If she still doesn't answer, text her this:

Hey! I tried calling you yesterday/the other day to ask you something, but you must have been busy. No problem. I'll call again in 10 minutes to ask you this question!

In most cases, a woman will be curious to know what you want to ask her, so she will answer her phone right away.

Once you get her on a call with you, use your new attraction methods (e.g. being emotionally masculine, maintaining your confidence regardless of what she says or does, using humor to break down her defenses, respond differently to the way she's expecting) to begin to reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Then!

4. Meet up with your ex just as friends, but re-attract her and hook up with her

When your ex is laughing, smiling and enjoying talking to you again, you can go ahead and ask her to meet up with you in person.

For example: You can say something along the lines of, Anyway! it's been great chatting with you again. We should catch up sometime this week to say hi as friends. It'll be fun.

If you've re-attracted her properly before asking her to catch up, she will almost certainly agree to meet, even if it's only to see if you really have changed, or if it's just an act to get her back.

At the meet up, focus on saying and doing more of the things that spark your ex's feelings for you (e.g. maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what she does to make you feel nervous or unsure of yourself, using humor to break down her walls, flirting with her to create sexual tension, making her feel feminine in comparison to your masculinity).

If she is feeling attracted to you at the meet up, getting a goodbye hug from her should happen naturally and easily.

Don't skip the goodbye hug part because you're worried about being too pushy, especially if things have been going so well.

Instead, when you and your ex are getting ready to leave, just say something along the lines of, Okay, it was good seeing you again. Bring it in for a goodbye hug.

Then, just take her in your arms and give her a nice, long, warm hug.

If she seems open (i.e. she squeezes you back and looks you in the eyes with a smile), lean in and give her a kiss as well.

In many cases, a woman will then be open to hooking up with her ex sexually that day or night, even though she won't openly admit it.

So, if everything is going well, head back to her place or yours and get it on.

By the way!

If she's unwilling to go any further than a hug or a kiss, don't worry.

The important thing is that you've broken down her defenses and planted seeds of doubt in her mind about her decision to break up with you.

From there!

5. Get her back, leave your new girlfriend and enjoy the new relationship with your ex

Once you've hooked up with your ex and reawakened her feelings, she will naturally become more open to getting back together again.

So, continue to make her laugh and smile and feel good every time you interact with her, until she's the one saying things like, "Maybe we made a mistake by breaking up. Maybe we should try again."

At that point, she will naturally want to get back with you and she'll feel happy and excited about doing it.

Once you and her are back together again, go ahead and break up with your new girlfriend (e.g. "You're a lovely girl and I enjoyed our time together, but I don't want to continue the relationship. I'm still not over my ex and we're going to patch things up between us, so I want to tell you now, rather than seeing both of you at the same time.")

Then, go ahead and enjoy the great times ahead together as a couple with your ex, who will now be your loving girlfriend again.

5 Mistakes to Avoid When Wanting an Ex Girlfriend Back

You can get your ex girlfriend back, but if you make one or more of the following mistakes, the chance will likely slip through your fingers and you will miss out on what could have been!

1. Waiting too long to make a move and she then moves on

In some cases, when a woman sees that her ex boyfriend has moved on and is already seeing another woman, she might decide to remain single for a little while to see if he will change his mind and then try to get her back.

Even if she feels jealous about her ex having a new girlfriend and secretly wants him back, a woman usually won't make it obvious to him.

Instead, she may open herself up to interacting with him (via text, social media, over the phone and in person where possible) in the hopes that something will develop between them again.

Yet, if she notices that he's not making a move and seems happy with the new girl, she might then begin to focus on getting over him; usually by hooking up with other guys.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend back, don't wait too long to make a move because by the time you make up your mind, it might be too late.

The next mistake to avoid is!

2. Not preparing to properly re-attract your ex when you next interact with her

If you try to get your ex back without first improving your ability to attract her in the ways that really matter to her (e.g. putting her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way if she is being rude or selfish, making her feel loved and appreciated, but doing it in a non-needy way), she will feel as though you just don't understand her.

As a result, her guard will remain up and she won't want to let it down to give you a chance to seduce her back into a relationship.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend back, focus on changing and improving what she really wants and then let her experience the new and improved you when you interact with her on a phone call or in person.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦

3. Hoping that she will make all the moves to get you back

Sometimes a guy makes the mistake of thinking that a woman is going to lead the ex back process for him.

That does happen in some cases, but if a woman no longer feels attracted to her ex boyfriend and is quite happy with her decision to leave him, she's just going to move on without him, unless he has the courage and skill to re-attract her and get her back.

Unfortunately, many guys don't realize that until it's too late (i.e. they watch on in disappointment as their ex girlfriend finds a new guy, gets engaged, gets married, has children and completely settles down with a new man).

Here's the thingâ€¦

A woman usually wants to know that her man is confident enough to lead the way and do what needs to be done to get her back.

If he does that, she can then look up to him, respect him and feel sexually attracted to him because he is clearly the man (i.e. he is emotionally fearless and strong).

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't want to do that, or in some cases, they don't know that they should, so they wait around in the hope their ex girlfriend makes all the moves to get him back.

Yet, that approach rarely, if ever works if the woman is no longer attracted to her ex boyfriend.

So, if you want your ex back, you have to be a man about it and take the lead, rather than waiting for her to do everything for you.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

4. Giving up on your ex if she doesn't show a lot of interest when you first contact her

Most women won't fall into their ex boyfriend's arms the moment he tries to get her back, especially if he already has another girlfriend.

Instead, she will wait to see if her ex is serious about getting her back, or if he's just messing around with her (i.e. sending out feeler texts to see if she is still missing him and when she confirms that she is, he feels good about himself and stops pursuing her).

Additionally, a woman will usually also want to make sure that her ex boyfriend really has changed and improved some of the things that caused her to break up with him (e.g. his lack of confidence, his inability to stand up for himself to her and to other people, his emotional sensitivity, his negative attitude, his selfishness, his neediness), before she opens herself up to him again.

So, rather than making it easy for him, an ex girlfriend will often be cold and distant to see how her ex guy reacts.

For example: She might reply to a text with something like, â€œWhat do you want? You already have another girlfriend. Why are you wasting time with me? Weâ€™re finished. Just leave me alone. Thereâ€™s nothing between us anymore.

A guy might then doubt himself and his chances of getting her back and then give up, because he doesn't realize that she is almost certainly testing his seriousness about getting her back and/or his confidence in himself and his attractiveness to her.

So, if you want your ex back, don't give up at the first sign of resistance from her.

As long as you continue to reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you during every interaction, her resistance will crumble and she will open back up to you.

As her feelings begin to turn back on, she will become excited to see you again.

When you are her are getting back together, she will realize that falling in love with you this time around is the best decision she has ever made in her life because youâ€™re now the man she always wanted you to be.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Was My Ex a Serial Monogamist?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Possibly.

If she was, the only thing that will make her stick with a relationship is if she meets a man who can build on her feelings over time, by being the challenge that she needs him to be to remain interested.

Here are 4 reasons why a woman will be a serial monogamist until she meets the right man:

1. Men just don't understand her

When a woman feels misunderstood by men, she's just going to go from relationship to relationship until she can find a man who gets her.

For example: A woman is confident, independent and emotionally strong.

She really wants a man who is confident enough to stand up to her and not allow himself to be walked all over by her strong personality.

Yet, guys don't understand that.

They see that she is confident, independent and emotionally strong and therefore, look at her as being the leader (e.g. he waits for her to decide on things, ask where she'd like to go out on a date, asks for permission to kiss her, seems intimidated by her).

As a result, the spark dies out and she loses interest in pretty much every man she meets or begins dating.

There are many different examples of this (e.g. a woman who just wants casual sex, but guys try to get her to commit to a serious relationship very quickly), but you get the picture.

So, if you suspect that your ex was a serial monogamist, it could be because she has always tried to find a guy who understands her, but most (if not, all) guys don't.

If you can figure out what was missing in the relationship with her (e.g. She wanted a dominant man, but you were too nice and handed over your power to her. She wanted a guy who was a bit of challenge for her to acquire and keep, but you essentially handed yourself to her on a silver platter and said, "I'm yours for life. Where do I sign up?" She wanted a man who felt as though he was good enough for her, but you seem to lack confidence and doubt yourself around her), you can then quickly change and improve those things about yourself so you are ready to re-attract her.

Then, when you interact with her again and she picks up on the changes in the way you talk, think, behave and respond to her, she will begin to realize that you are the one who got away.

As a result, she will open back up to you and, as long as you now know how to build on a woman's attraction for you over time, she will stop with her serial monogamy and stick with you.

Another reason why a woman will be a serial monogamist is that

2. She keeps meeting guys who lack the masculine edge that she is looking for in a guy

The masculinity that most women are looking for is not physical masculinity, but emotional masculinity.

Where a lot of guys go wrong is thinking that if they go to the gym and build some muscles, they will then be the masculine man that women are looking for.

Although thereâ€™s nothing wrong with being fit and muscular, a manâ€™s appearance is not the most important thing that will make a woman feel attracted to him in the long run.

Essentially, what matters most to a woman, is how a guy makes her feel when sheâ€™s with him.

Her attraction to him is based on how he thinks, feels, talks, behaves and acts around her.

For example: Even though modern women are more independent and may go around saying that they can do anything that a man can, they are still instinctively attracted to and respect a man who takes on the alpha role in a relationship.

Of course, that doesnâ€™t mean she wants a guy who is overly domineering and will try to control her or boss her around.

Instead, it's pretty simple.

She just wants a man who is emotionally stronger than her, thereby allowing her the opportunity to relax into feeling, thinking, behaving and taking action like a feminine woman around him, rather than feeling like a mother figure to him, a big sister or a helpful friend.

In other words, when sheâ€™s with her man, she is free to do all of the things (e.g. be girly, get emotional, be in love, be frivolous) that she can't ordinarily do around other people (e.g. coworkers, family, some friends) because she likes to project an image of being an emotionally strong, competent, tough woman.

So, when a guy doesnâ€™t have the masculine edge that a woman is looking to be around in a relationship, she will eventually start to feel like she canâ€™t be her true, authentic self when sheâ€™s with him.

Due to his lack of emotional masculinity (i.e. he is too sensitive, or he is too neutral and behaves more like a friend or a brother), she is unable to be totally feminine in contrast to his masculine vibe.

So, if nothing changes, she will break up with him and start looking for a man who can make her feel the way she wants to feel when sheâ€™s in a relationship.

Her ex man might think of her as being a serial monogamist, but in reality, like most women, she will be trying to find a guy who can give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants in a relationship.

Another reason why a woman will be a serial monogamist is thatâ€¦

3. Men keep failing her tests of their confidence

A lot of guys donâ€™t know this, but most women want a man who believes in himself, no matter what she says or does to try to make him feel insecure.

Of course, women donâ€™t go around telling men that, but itâ€™s what they really want.

So, to avoid getting stuck in a relationship with a guy who is insecure and self-doubting, a woman will just test him to see if he has what she needs in a man.

If a woman is attractive, she won't want to put up with it, but if a woman is unattractive, she won't be happy with it, but will usually put up with it for a lot longer than an attractive woman.

It really depends on the woman, but at the end of the day, a woman is always more attracted to a man who doesn't buckle under her pressure (i.e. a man who can remain confident in himself, no matter what she says or does to try to make him feel insecure).

Here's a classic exampleâ□!

A woman will get a man to fall in love with her (i.e. by being very sweet, nice, loving, friendly, girly) and then suddenly begin pull back her interest to test how he will react.

Naturally, in most cases, the man will then chase her and try to impress her to be able to keep her in a relationship (e.g. he will become extra nice and sweet to her, possibly buy her an expensive gift, send her flowers, sweet texts or and romantic cards or messages).

She might then test him even further by saying that she needs time apart, needs space for a while, isn't sure if she wants a relationship or worse, wants to break up.

If he then becomes desperate (e.g. chases after her and begs and pleads with her for another chance, offers to change whatever she wants him to, asks her to tell him what to do to make her happy) she will then want to go through with the break up because he's clearly a guy who doesn't believe in his value to her.

Why is that important to her?

If an attractive woman gets into a relationship with a guy who secretly doesn't feel like he's good enough for her, he will almost certainly become clingy, needy and controlling later on in the relationship.

If she has had experience with relationships before, she will know that and will want to avoid it like the plague.

She will know that, if a guy is secretly desperate and has no idea how to attract women by choice (i.e. he relies purely on getting lucky), then he is probably going to desperately chase her, pressure her and try to convince her to give him another chance if she attempts to break up with him.

As mentioned earlier, if a woman is unattractive, then she will usually put up with being with a guy who is hopeless at attracting women, because it will make her feel safe in his commitment to her based on his need for her.

However, even an unattractive woman won't be able to continue feeling attracted to a guy who doesn't believe in himself and his value to her.

At the end of the day, a woman just wants to be with a man who can remain confident no matter what she says or does to try to make him feel insecure.

Women feel attracted to that on an instinctive level because it makes them feel like he is the kind of man who could protect them.

He is the sort of man who won't buckle under pressure in life and will instead, stand up strong, take on challenges and overcome them.

This allows a woman to feel like a woman when in a relationship.

She can be his girl, rather than feeling like she needs to be a bit of a mother figure for him and protect him.

When a man can offer her that type of attraction experience in a relationship, she will naturally stop being a serial monogamist and happily take on the role of being a one-man-woman for the rest of her life.

After all, pretty much every woman on the planet just wants to be in love with a man who understands her and is able to give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants.

You might feel as though your ex is different (pretty much every guy does), but she's probably not. She's probably just a normal woman who is trying to find a man who gets her.

You can be that man, but you have to be willing to change your approach to attraction, rather than trying to offer her the same old attraction experience and expecting her to be excited about that.

Another reason why a woman will be a serial monogamist is thatâ€¦

4. The men she meets don't grow with her, so she leaves them behind

In some cases, a woman simply outgrows her men by maturing faster than them.

Alternatively, she wants to take the relationship to a new level emotionally, but the guy can't handle it (e.g. settle down together, buy a house, get married, start a family).

A woman won't immediately break up with a guy for that reason, but it will start to eat away at her respect and attraction for him over time.

If she still feels attracted to him, she might think, â€œMaybe he just needs a bit more time to start wanting the same things in life as me. He's a great guy, so I'll give him a chance.â€

Yet, if he doesn't change or isn't willing to change over the following months or years, she will eventually break up with him and move on to another relationship in the hopes that it works out with the next guy.

3 Mistakes That Some Guys Make With an Ex Who is a Serial Monogamist

Regardless of whether or not your ex is a serial monogamist, if you want her back, you have to make some adjustments to your behavior and approach, so you can then successfully seduce her back into a relationship with you.

To ensure that you succeed at getting her back and keeping her, I recommend that you avoid the following mistakesâ€¦

1. Thinking that her serial monogamy is permanent

A woman can experience multiple monogamous relationships in a row, but that doesn't mean she will never settle down with one guy for life.

In fact, a woman who is a serial monogamist will almost always be looking for a guy who will finally be the guy that she can stick with.

You can be that guy.

When you understand what really made her break up with you and then make some attractive adjustments and improvements to yourself, she will naturally start to question whether or not she made the right decision to break up with you.

She may then start thinking things such as, â€œCould he actually be the one for me after all? Maybe I should give him another chance. Maybe I made a mistake breaking up with him. Maybe we are supposed to be together. He's the only one who gets me. I can't lose him.â€

She then opens back up to you and you can then build on her feelings and get her back into a happy, long-lasting monogamous relationship with you.

On the other hand, if you make the mistake of assuming that her serial monogamy is a glitch in her personality and that she'll never change and settle down with one guy, you may end up losing your ideal woman forever.

So, if you want her back, don't convince yourself that she is a serial monogamist who can't stick with one guy.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

2. Not identifying the true reasons why she really broke up with you and then fixing those things about yourself before attempting to get her back

Sometimes, a guy will say, â€œI can't help it that we broke up. My ex is a serial monogamist and she just gets into relationships and breaks up with guys when she's had enough. There's nothing I can do to change that. It's just how she is. She can't stick with one guyâ€ because he simply doesn't know what really caused her to break up with him, or how he can change that about himself and re-attract her.

Here's the thingâ€¦

If you want to get your ex back into a permanent relationship, you first have to identify her real, hidden, secret reasons for breaking up with you.

Then, you need to make some adjustments to how you talk to her and behave around her, so she can see that you understand her now.

Finally, you are the man who gets her.

You get it, without her having to explain it to you.

So, if you're unclear about why your ex broke up with you, here are some questions for youâ€¦

- Did you have big goals and a life purpose that you were actively working towards achieving, or did she feel like you were drifting through life and depending on her to lead the way for the both of you (e.g. sitting at home watching TV, playing video games while she focused on her career or goals, just wanting to spend all your free time with her, giving up on your goals and ambitions because you got yourself a girl)?
- Were you confident and emotionally mature in the relationship, or did you become insecure, clingy, controlling or jealous?
- Could she depend on you to be the more emotionally dominant one (i.e. be the man), or did you allow her to dominate you with her assertive personality?
- Were you emotionally masculine in a way that made her feel girly and feminine in your presence, or were you too emotionally sensitive to the point where she felt more masculine than you?
- Did you remain confident when she tried to make you feel insecure about yourself, or did you crumble under the pressure she was placing on you (e.g. teasing you about your appearance, saying you weren't man enough, pointing out your flaws)?

By understanding what caused your ex to lose touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, it then becomes easier for you to make the right adjustments to show her that you are the only man who truly gets her and is able to give her the kind of attraction experience that other guys simply cannot.

On the other hand, if you don't truly understand what you need to change, then when you interact with her, you will probably keep making the same old mistakes in your communication style (e.g. being insecure, giving her too much power, being emotionally cagey or on the opposite end of the scale, emotionally needy), which will turn her off.

Additionally, you might end up offering to fix the wrong things about yourself (e.g. telling her that you will treat her better, when what she really wants is for you to man up and stop looking at her as the leader of the relationship).

If that happens, she will just continue her journey of looking for her ideal man.

So, if you want her back, make sure that you honestly understand what really caused her to feel turned off and fall out of love with you.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Giving up on getting her back because your initial attempts failed

Sometimes a guy will try to convince his ex to give him another chance in ways that don't work very well, if at all (e.g. begging and pleading, pouring his heart out to her, cutting off contact and waiting).

A guy will hope that his ex woman will realize how much he cares for her because he's willing to do whatever she wants to get her back, which will then cause her to give up her serial monogamist ways and settle down with him.

Yet, rather than changing her mind about the break up, this type of behavior turns a woman off because it makes the guy look desperate.

Additionally, if she has done the same thing to other guys in the past, those guys almost certainly reacted in the same way (i.e. begging, pleading, promising the world to her, being willing to do whatever she wants to hopefully get another chance with her).

Unfortunately, most guys are so shocked to be getting dumped by the woman they love that they end up behaving completely out of character (e.g. a normally confident, cool guy ends up crying to his woman and pleading with her for another chance).

So, when a guy has tried everything he can think of to get his ex woman back, he might then concede defeat and think, "I guess that's it then. It's over. I have no chance with her anymore. After all, she's probably just a serial monogamist and is never going to settle down and be happy with anyone. So, I need to accept that it's over between us."

He then gives up on the idea of getting her back and ends up feeling depressed, sad and frustrated about it for months or even years after the break up.

Here's the thing

Although things like begging, pleading, ignoring her or telling her how much you love her doesn't change a woman's mind about breaking up, there is something else that does change a woman's mind.

What is that?

Making her feel a resounding, renewed sense of respect, sexual attraction and love for the new and improved you.

That's what works.

Getting an ex woman back (especially one who has broken up a number of relationships in the past) has to be about how you make her feel when she's with you (e.g. attracted, respectful, excited, turned on, in love).

It can't be about you trying to convince her to give you another chance because of how much you want it, how much you love her, how much you care and how sincere you are to do better this time.

It has to be about making her feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for the new you.

So, here's what you need to do!

Get her on a phone call or to a meet up with you, where you can then make her feel respect, attraction and love for you by showing her that you're now the man she always wanted you to be.

No matter how difficult or distant she might act initially when you interact with her in person, if you can maintain your confidence and focus on making her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with you, she will naturally begin to open back up to you.

When she realizes that your confidence is now bulletproof, she will see that you are the real deal.

As a result, her defenses will come down further and she will start to feel excited about getting to be your girl once again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

The Path to Reconciliation With Your Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The path to reconciliation with your ex is as follows:

1. Get clear on the subtle things about you that turned her off

Right now, youâre probably aware of the obvious reasons why your ex broke up with you (e.g. she got tired of arguing with you all the time, it became too much effort to make the relationship work, she fell out of love with you), but it's possible that you're not fully aware of her more subtle reasons for ending the relationship.

For example: A man and a woman might have often argued about him working too many hours and as a result, breaking his promises to her (e.g. canceling dates, coming home late and finding that the dinner she prepared for him is cold, not being available to go to a party or wedding with her).

As such, he will naturally see that as one of her main reasons for breaking up with him.

Yet, what he doesnât realize is that one of her more subtle, secret reasons is that she doesn't like his attitude towards her anymore (e.g. he talks down to her, he doesn't listen when she tries to talk to him and connect with him on an emotional level).

Not knowing that she is feeling turned off by those things, he assumes that the fact he is working too many hours and not giving her enough quality time is the main problem in the relationship.

He then thinks, âWell, sheâs upset now because I didn't go the party with her, but sheâll forgive me because deep down, she knows that Iâm doing this for us and our future happiness together.â

Yet, she's thinking, âNot only doesn't he spend enough quality time with me, but the time we do spend together doesn't make me feel loved, appreciated and happy. He's always putting me down and doesn't listen when I try to have a meaningful conversation with him. It's like I am his last priority all the time. I'm tired of it. I deserve better than this.â

Yet rather than explain exactly where has been going wrong, she will break up with him by using a classic excuse, such as, âThis just isnât working anymore. So, letâs just go our separate ways. We had our chance, it didn't work and now it's over. Goodbye.â

He is then left thinking that the way to get her back is to work less, but that's not the only thing that caused the break up.

What matters to her more is how unloved, unappreciated and unhappy she felt based on his attitude towards her when they did spend time together.

So, to get her back, he has to change his attitude and start showing her that he does care about her, without making the mistake of desperately pleading with her to give him another chance.

Most guys mess this part up.

They go from being careless to being desperate, both of which are unattractive to the woman.

What a man needs to do is be confident, calm and in control of his emotions as he shows her that he does care and is sorry for where he went wrong.

If he makes the mistake of desperately pleading with her to forgive him, give him another chance or take pity on him, she will not only see that as a selfish thing to ask for, but she will also feel turned off by it.

So, how about you?

Do you know exactly where you messed up with your ex?

Are you aware of the obvious and more subtle reasons for the break up?

If you want to reconcile with her and get the relationship back together, you have to be aware of why she really broke up with you and begin to change those things about yourself.

Don't panic and rush to show her that you've changed in an instant.

Be calm as you quickly change and improve over a period of 3 days to a week and then interact with her and let her see that you really are different now.

Don't plead with her to see that you're different.

Let her experience it and decide for herself.

When she sees that you've understood what she wants from you and have already taken steps to change and improve, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

When that happens, her guard starts to slip down and the path to reconciliation opens up before you. Before you interact with her again, make sure that you'

2. Improve your ability to attract her, so she feels a spark when you interact

If you try to get your ex back while making the same old attraction mistakes that you made before she broke up with you (e.g. giving her too much power over you, feeling insecure about your attractiveness and value to her, lacking confidence around her and other people), she isn't going to feel motivated to get back with you.

So, if you want to ignite real sparks of respect and sexual attraction inside of her, you've got to show her (via the way you talk, think, act and behave) that you've become a better man.

For example:

- If you were insecure before, you're now more self-assured and can maintain your confidence around her even when she is pretending like she doesn't feel a thing for you anymore. (Most ex women do that to test your confidence, so be ready for it).
- If you doubted your value and attractiveness to her before, you now know that you're more than good enough for her. As a result, you don't get upset when she tests you by flirting with other guys in front of you, or by talking about guys who are interested in her.
- If you allowed her to dominate you during conversation with her assertive, confident personality, you now laugh (in a loving way) at her attempts to push you around. You no longer feel intimidated by her.
- If you treated her too much like a neutral friend before, you now flirt with her to create sexual tension and make her feel like a girly, feminine woman in your presence.

The more she experiences the new and improved you, the more respect and sexual attraction she will feel and the easier it will be for her to imagine herself feeling happy in your arms once again.

However, if you haven't changed and she can sense that you'd probably make the same mistakes again if she gave you another chance, then sheâs not going to be very interested.

The next step is toâ

3. Build on her feelings when you meet up in person

Building on your exâs feelings of respect, attraction and love for you in person is the fastest path to reconciliation.

So, when you meet up with her, donât make the mistake of thinking that being on your best behavior around her (e.g. being extra nice, polite and considerate) will impress her and make her want you back sexually.

Instead, focus on flirting with her to create sexual tension, using humor to break down her defenses and being a confident guy who believes in his value to her, even if sheâs being closed off towards you.

When she feels attracted to you, she automatically stops focusing on the negatives of the past and starts to feel drawn to the idea of being with you again.

Depending on what kind of woman your ex is, she might make it obvious to you, she might give you subtle signals or she might act like itâs not working on her.

So, you have to be prepared to continue believing in yourself as you interact with her.

Remember: A manâs confidence when under pressure is one of the most attractive traits he can ever display.

Donât ruin your opportunity to attract her by doubting that what youâre doing isnât working.

If you are honestly being confident and it is coming through via your body language, vibe, conversation style and behavior, she will absolutely feel attracted to you, without a doubt.

Women instinctively react with feelings of natural attraction when a man remains confident under pressure.

So, believe in yourself and she will feel attracted to you.

From there, even if she previously said things like, *âI will never give you another chance!*â the idea of reconciling with you will suddenly start to seem like an appealing idea to her.

The next step is toâ

4. Get to a hug and then kiss

If youâve successfully built up your exâs feelings for you during the meet up, getting her to give you a hug shouldnât be too difficult at all.

In fact, if youâve made her feel really good to be seeing you again, she may even be the one who suggests giving each other a hug.

Of course, if she doesnât suggest it, donât doubt yourself and worry.

Instead, just be confident and make it happen by saying something along the lines of, *âItâs good to see that you and I can be friends. Iâm impressed by the way that weâre now able to enjoy each otherâs company as friends, without letting what happened in the past cause us to become bitter towards each other. Itâs all good between us. Friends. Donât you think thatâs an accomplishment that deserves a hug? Come onâ|come here and give me a hug.*â

Then, move closer to her and open your arms.

As long as you have been building up her feelings throughout the interaction, she will almost certainly be more than happy to give you a hug.

So, just go ahead and confidently take her in your arms and give her a warm hug.

From there, if she seems open (e.g. she remains in your arms longer than necessary, she nuzzles into your neck as though you and her are lovers again, she looks up at you and smiles and then looks at your lips), then just lean in and give her a kiss on the lips.

If she enjoys it, you can then deepen the kiss and make it a passionate one that lasts 10-15 seconds or so.

BTW: If she pulls away from your initial attempt to kiss her, don't worry about it at all.

Just maintain your confidence, smile and say something along the lines of, It was a good hug, we should do that again sometime and have a little laugh with her about that.

At that point, she will probably be feeling a bit warm and tingly down below.

As a result, she might then start to think, What's going on here? It felt so good to be in his arms again. Suddenly, I think want us to get back together again. If we don't get back together, I at least want to have sex with him again. Why not? It feels good to hug him again, so we should just do it. I hope he makes a move. I'd better show him that I'm interested in him again.

The next step is to

5. Make her want the relationship for her own reasons, rather than trying to convince her to give you another chance for your sake

You undoubtedly know why you want to reconcile with your ex (e.g. you still love her, you believe she is the one, you and her share a special connection, she's the most beautiful, kind, loving woman you've ever known, you know that you could do a much better job of the relationship this time around).

Yet, regardless of how much you love her or how badly you want her back, trying to convince an ex woman to give you another chance based on how you feel, simply doesn't work.

Why?

The truth is, a modern woman doesn't have to stick with a relationship if she doesn't want to.

If a man stops making her feel the way she wants to feel in the relationship (e.g. loved, appreciated, attracted, respectful), she won't feel obliged to stick with him simply because he cares about her.

Instead, she will focus on taking care of her own personal happiness and well being, rather than remaining a guy out of feelings of guilt or pity.

So, if you truly want to convince your ex to give you another chance, don't make it all about how much you love her and want her back.

Instead, make her want the relationship for her own reasons (e.g. because it feels good to be around you now, she feels like a feminine, desirable woman when she's with you, she respects and looks up to you as a man, she can see a future with you, she feels turned on around you and wants to explore her new, fascinating feelings of attraction for you).

When you approach the ex back process in that way, getting her back becomes easy because she wants it too.

On the other hand, if you try to convince her to give you another chance based on how you feel and what you want, she will almost certainly remain closed up and continue rejecting you.

3 Mistakes That Some Guys Make On the Path to Reconciliation With Their Ex Woman

In most cases, reconciliation with an ex woman is a lot easier than most guys think.

When you say and do the kinds of things that are attractive to her (e.g. you talk to her with confidence even when she is being cold and distant, you make her feel girly and feminine in comparison to your masculine approach to the interaction, you make her laugh and smile even when she is being difficult during a conversation), a woman will quickly change her mind about being broken up with you and open back up to exploring her new feelings for you.

However, if you say and do things that turn her off, she will want to stick to her decision because it just won't feel right to give you another chance.

For example: Here's where some guys go wrong when trying to reconcile with their ex woman

1. Turning her off the idea of reconciling because he tries to discuss the relationship with her in detail

Sometimes a guy will make the mistake of thinking that the path to reconciliation with his ex can only happen if he gets into long discussions about the relationship with her.

He assumes that if he mentions all of his mistakes and asks her for ways to fix them, she will see that he's putting in the effort to fix himself and become a better man for her.

Yet, even though his intentions are good, discussing the relationship problems in detail, only causes her to feel stressed and look at the relationship as being too much hard work.

It's okay to brush over a couple of problems and apologize, but you shouldn't stay on the topic.

As soon as possible, you should always steer the conversation back to flirting, humor and feel good emotions, so she can see that she is feeling good around you and that things aren't so bad between you and her after all.

Another mistake that some guys make is

2. Being overly romantic or expressing his feelings even though the feelings aren't mutual

[image: Want to reconcile because I love you and want you?]

Sometimes, a guy assumes that to reconcile with his ex, he needs to be very romantic and tell her all about how much he still loves her and needs her in his life.

After all, if it works in the movies, why shouldn't it work for him in real life, right?

Wrong, unfortunately.

Although, it would be nice if a guy could buy his ex a bunch of red roses and say, I know stuffed up, but I still love you. Please forgive me and give me another chance, and all would be well again, it usually doesn't work that way in real life.

Here's the thing:

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's normally because she has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for him.

So, when a guy is being romantic and pouring his heart out to her, she might appreciate the attention and display of devotion, but it isn't going to change her mind about being broken up if she doesn't have feelings for him anymore.

For a woman to want to reconcile, the feelings have to be mutual or at least close to mutual.

It can't just be about you loving her and wanting her back for your reasons.

Instead, she has to feel like she will be missing out on a really great thing if she doesn't get back with you.

Another mistake that guys make when trying to reconcile with their ex woman is:

3. Losing confidence when she tests him during the reconciliation process

Your ex is almost certainly going to test your confidence before she opens herself up to give you another chance.

For example: She might:

- Pretend that she's not interested in you anymore to see if you continue trying to get her back, or if you lose confidence give up.
- Be unfriendly towards you during conversation to see if you can maintain your confidence with her, or if you become insecure and nervous.
- Flirt with other guys in front of you, or talk about other guys that are interested in her to test if you will start doubting your value and attractiveness to her, if you will get jealous or angry or if you will maintain confidence in yourself and your value to her.
- Try to mess with your head (e.g. she says that she has missed you, but not enough to want you back).
- Give you mixed signals (e.g. she says that she is interested in getting back together and then, when you show interest in that, she pulls back saying that she's not sure).

Essentially, she wants to see how strong of a man you really are.

Remember: Women are naturally attracted to confidence, so if you can pass her test, she will naturally feel attracted to you, even if she doesn't initially admit it.

When she feels attracted, she will then drop her guard and open herself up fully reconciling with you and getting back together.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex Girlfriend Initiated Contact After Two Weeks. Should I Reply?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, you should reply to an ex girlfriend that has initiated contact with you after two weeks.

Here are 5 reasons why:

1. You don't have to follow the 30 day No Contact Rule to get your ex back

You can get her back now, without having to wait any longer.

Sometimes a guy assumes that he has to ignore his ex girl for 30 days (i.e. follow the No Contact Rule) even if she contacts him during that time.

Here's the thing thoughâ€¦!

Having to ignore a woman for exactly 30 days after a break up is a common ex back myth that usually results in her getting annoyed and moving on without you instead.

See myth #1 in this video for more information on thatâ€¦!

So, if youâ€¦â€¦ve been using the No Contact Rule to get you ex back and she has initiated contact with you, then it has worked for you.

In that case, it means that she is most-likely missing you and wants you back, or at least wants to find out how the heck you managed to go two weeks without contacting her, especially when you were trying to talk her out of breaking up with you before.

So, in your case, the NC rule has worked for now, which as you might know, is actually quite rare because most women just move on when their ex guy (that they're no longer attracted to) doesn't contact them.

Her contacting you can mean different things, but at least she has initiated contact and is opening the communication between you and her again.

So, yes, you should now reply to her.

When she replies to your reply message and seems interested in talking to you, just get her a phone call with you.

Don't ask for permission to call her.

Just call.

On a phone call, make her feel attracted to you by being confident and getting her smiling, laughing and feeling good.

Then, get her to meet up with you in person where you can let her feel attracted to the new and improved version of you (e.g. by maintaining your confidence with her when she pretends that sheâ€¦â€¦s not interested in you anymore, using humor to diffuse the tension between you and her, showing her via your body language that you donâ€¦â€¦t feel intimidated by her when she tries to create drama or blames you for the break up, making her feel girly in comparison to your masculine approach to the interaction).

The more you attract her in ways that she wasn't expecting from you, the less she will be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

When that happens, her guard will come down and she will open herself to exploring her new, fascinating feelings for you.

Another reason why you should reply to an ex girlfriend that has initiated contact isâ□|

2. If you don't reply, she might seek revenge

[image: If you don't call, she might seek revenge]

You might not realize it, but your ex girlfriend probably took a big risk when she initiated contact with you.

She might have even be thinking things like, â□□ Will I make a fool of myself by contacting him first? What if he ignores me? What if he just tells me to get lost, or that heâ□□s met someone else. I'll feel so embarrassed. I'll end up being the one who has gotten dumped because he will have left me behind. Should I do it? Should I text him? If I want him back, maybe I just have to risk it.â□□

She then took the emotional risk to contact you and hoped that you would then take the lead and get her back.

So, if you donâ□□t reply to her, chances are high that sheâ□□s not going to take it very well.

She may assume you are quietly laughing at her for contacting you first and are maybe even thinking things like, â□□ Haha, she still wants me! Why would I even bother replying to her when she means nothing to me anymore? No thanks. See ya!â□□

Of course, that's probably not what you were thinking, but if she is feeling insecure about her chances with you, she might imagine that you were thinking that way.

So, if she feels as though you are snubbing her because you no longer have an interest in her, she will almost certainly try to hook up with a new guy ASAP to save face, avoid feeling rejected and avoid contacting you again and potentially feeling humiliated.

If you want her back, don't let her go through that process out of insecurity or fear.

She took a chance by initiating contact with you, so now itâ□□s up to you to be the man and lead the way to a phone call, meet up, hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

Another reason why you should reply to an ex girlfriend who initiated contact with you isâ□|

3. If you don't reply, she probably won't reply to you when you reach out next time

Have you ever heard of the expression, â□□ tit for tat,â□□ or, "an eye for an eye"?

It's essentially about getting revenge by doing exactly what a person did to hurt you, rather than letting them get away with it.

In the same way, if you donâ□□t reply to your ex girlfriend now, chances are high that sheâ□□s going to give you the same treatment when you finally decide to contact her.

So, rather than wasting time playing silly games with her (and possibly pushing her away even further), just use the opening she has given to start the ex back process and guide you and her back into a sexual, loving relationship.

Be the man and make it happen.

Another reason why you should reply to an ex girlfriend that initiated contact with you isâ□|

4. You can get her back by re-attracting her on a phone call and in person

Most guys don't hear from their ex woman after she breaks up with them because she just moves on.

So, a guy usually ends up wondering things like, Should I text her or call her? or, What if I call her and she refuses to answer?

He might then send her a feeler text in the hope that she will reply to him, but in most cases, she will won't reply and he won't know what else to do.

In your case though, you don't have to worry about things like that.

Since your ex girlfriend has initiated contact, you can now text her and get to a phone call without worrying if she is going to reply or tell you to go away.

Don't get stuck texting back and forth with her though.

On a phone call and in person is where the ex back process really speeds up.

You can quickly and easily re-attract her on a call and in person, but via text, she can easily play hard to get, ignore texts, give one word answers and make the process of getting her back very difficult.

So, don't waste the opportunity that she's handed to you.

Text her initially if you want to, but then get to a phone call or in person meet up ASAP.

Another reason why you should reply to an ex girlfriend that initiated contact with you is

5. She may be signaling to you that she is open to you guiding her back into a relationship

When a woman breaks up with a man, she usually won't have strong enough feelings for him to initiate contact, or simply won't want to get rejected if she contacts him first and he isn't interested.

However, if she really wants him back, a woman will sometimes take the risk of initiating contact with her ex, to hopefully send him a signal that she's now open to interacting with him again.

Of course, that doesn't mean she's going to make it completely obvious that she's open to the idea of getting back into a relationship.

Instead, after making the first move, she will most-likely act casual about the whole thing and just pretend that she is only interested in texting back and forth in a friendly.

By doing that, she can test to see if he is confident enough in himself and in his value to her to do what needs to be done to get her back, or if he will hesitate due to feeling uncertain about what to do next (e.g. Should he reply to her, or wait for another sign before he makes a move? Is she only texting him to mess with his head? Has she met another guy and just wants to text him for a bit and then reveal that to him? Is she only checking to see if he misses her? Is she only texting because she is bored, but doesn't want to get back with him?).

If her ex doesn't take the lead and get her back, she may assume that he really isn't the kind of man that she wants him to be (e.g. confident, emotionally strong, assertive, fearless).

As a result, she may then begin to open herself up to other guys to see what it feels like to be with them instead.

If she meets a new guy who is more confident and emotionally strong than her ex, she will naturally feel more attracted to him and begin to forget about her ex.

Alternatively, in some cases, a woman will see that her ex isn't replying and then block his number, to avoid herself contacting him or him contacting her and making her feel more emotional pain as she tries to move on without him.

3 Mistakes That Some Guys Make When an Ex Girlfriend Initiates Contact With Them

Since she has contacted you, it should be fairly easy to get her back.

However, to ensure things go smoothly, be sure to avoid making one or all of the following mistakes!

1. Thinking that ignoring her will make her want you more and chase even harder

When a guy's ex girlfriend contacts him after a couple of weeks, he might think "Cool! She still has feelings for me. She broke my heart, so I'm not going to make it easy for her to get me back. I'm going to ignore her and let her suffer. This way, I will build up her desire for me and cause her to desperately chase after me. Then, I will be able to easily get her back into a relationship."

Of course, that does happen in some cases (e.g. if a woman is really in love with a guy and is afraid of losing him, she has little or no relationship experience, she fears that she won't be able to find a replacement guy), but in most cases, a woman will have too much self-pride to chase an ex guy that she dumped.

What you have to realize is that some cases, even though a woman has initiated contact after a break up, it doesn't mean that she wants to get back into a relationship.

Sometimes, she is just curious to see what will happen if you and her start talking again.

Will a spark develop?

Will she feel drawn to you as you text her and talk to her on a phone call?

Will you and her meet up and then have amazing make up sex?

Sometimes a woman just wants to explore that to get the answers to those questions, so if you don't reply, she may then decide that nothing is going to happen between you and her and she needs to find another guy to satisfy her sexual and romantic needs.

Additionally, sometimes a woman is only kind of interested in talking to her ex again and feels a bit guilty for how she dumped him.

So, she decides to open herself up to the possibility of him seducing her back into a relationship by contacting him and seeing what happens.

Then, when he ignores her, she feels angry and thinks something like, "Who does he think he is?! Does he think I want him that much? He's kidding himself. I was nice enough to contact him to say hi, even though he's the one who stuffed up and now he ignores me? Well, I'm not going to stand for that kind of treatment. He can now forget about ever hearing from me again, and if he ever tries to contact me, I won't want anything to do with him. From this moment onwards, I'm moving on. He is history! It's now totally and completely over between us. He can try to contact me, but I'm not going to give him anything. He missed his chance with me. I'll get my revenge on *him. He'll see how badly I can hurt him.*â€œ

So, if you want your ex girlfriend back, don't ignore her in the hope that it will make her desperately chase you.

Sometimes that approach does work, but in most ex back cases, especially those where the woman doesn't feel much attraction for her ex anymore, it backfires and she moves on.

She has already given you an opening by initiating contact, so use it to get her back.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€œ

2. Getting into a long, text conversation with her, rather than getting to a phone call or in person meet up

Although it's perfectly fine to reply to your ex girlfriend via text once or twice, getting caught up in a long text conversation with her will usually end up being a huge waste of time and energy.

Text on a little screen doesn't have the same impact as words spoken over the phone, or words said to her in person where she can see your body language and evaluate how you're feeling (e.g. Are you confident and relaxed or are you tense and nervous? Do you believe in your attractiveness to her, or do you feel like she's too good for you?).

Attracting her on a call and in person is a much easier, quicker and more effective way than trying to deal with all of her games via text and then attract her at the same time.

Texts can be so easily misinterpreted (e.g. She thinks you're being needy and desperate, when you're feeling confident and emotionally independent. She thinks you're being aggressive, when you're just joking around with her. She thinks you're being too nice, when you're just trying to keep the texts light and easy-going).

No matter what you say via text, it will rarely be as effective at attracting her compared to what you say on a call or in person.

In most ex cases, a woman will respond back and forth a few times via text and when she realizes that her ex doesn't have the balls to call her or meet up with her in person, she will lose interest and may stop replying completely.

So, while it's fine to text your ex, don't get stuck at that level of communication.

In most cases, sticking to text ensures she will continue to be your ex.

If you want her back, make a move.

On that note, another mistake to avoid isâ€œ

3. Thinking that you need to get crystal clear signals from her that she wants a relationship before you can meet up with her in person

There's no way to know what she was thinking when she initiated contact after two weeks.

You can wait around hoping to get clearer signals from her that she wants a relationship, but that probably won't happen.

In most cases, rather than contact her ex again and make her feelings for him clear, a woman usually just assume that he isn't interested and she will then try to move on without him.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't waste time waiting for a clear signal from her that she wants a relationship.

Instead, be emotionally courageous enough to take the lead in the ex back process and get her back. Get her on a call, or meet up with her in person and show her that she didn't make a mistake when she initiated contact with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Act When I See My Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 tips to help you make your ex feel attracted and want you back when you see her in person!

1. Feel worthy of her, so you naturally project the right type of confidence when you interact with her

If you don't feel good enough for your ex, it will come across in your body language, behavior, conversation style and vibe when you interact with her and it will turn her off.

Women are naturally attracted to men who believe in themselves and their value no matter what anyone says or does, or no matter what challenging situation they are going through in life.

Having this type of confidence is important when meeting new women, going on a date, being in a relationship and is even more important when it comes to getting an ex back.

It's not about being pushy and demanding that she give you another chance because you deserve it.

Instead, it's about being relaxed and having confidence in yourself no matter what challenges she throws your way as you are getting her back (e.g. you're talking to her on the phone and she is being cold or distant, you're talking to her in person and she is acting like she feels absolutely nothing for you anymore).

When she can see that you are in control of your emotions and haven't lost confidence in yourself as a result of the break up, she will naturally and automatically feel respect and attraction for you, even if she doesn't openly admit it.

Re-attracting her by being confident isn't the only thing required to get an ex back, but it creates the right foundation on which to fully re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship with you.

By the way!

It's very important that your feeling of worthiness is genuine.

If you try to pretend that you feel worthy, she can easily test your confidence and find out that you're just faking it (e.g. by pretending to be interested in getting back with you and then changing her mind, by saying that she feels nothing for you anymore, by saying that she's met someone else who is better than you).

If she does something like that, she will pay close attention to how you behave afterwards and if she realizes that you're just pretending to feel worthy of her, she will lose interest in getting back together.

All over the world, women are naturally attracted and drawn to men who can be confident in themselves and their value, no matter what anyone says or does, or no matter what challenging situation they are going through in life.

If you can display that type of confidence, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you.

If you can't, her guard will remain up and she won't want to get back with you unless you can attract her in other important ways (e.g. flirting, making her feel girly in comparison to your masculine vibe and approach to the interaction, building up sexual tension, being charismatic).

If you are able to attract her in other important ways, you might then get a chance with her.

However, it's always best to build off a foundation of complete confidence in yourself and an absolute feeling of worthiness for the woman you are interacting with.

Women love it when guys have that kind of confidence and when you do, it makes everything else that you do so much more attractive and appealing to her.

Another tip on how to act when you see your ex is to

2. Be confident, but also make her feel good about herself

Being confident is an important part to re-attracting your ex, but you have to make sure that you also make her feel good about herself as she interacts with you.

For example: Some guys try to act overly confident to the point where they become heartless or cruel towards their ex woman, which doesn't work.

As he sits and talks to his ex for the first time after a break up, he might say, I bet you thought I'd crumble when you broke up with me, but the joke is on you. I'm doing perfectly fine without you. I bet you can't even find yourself a date yet? I'm right, aren't I? You regret breaking up with me. Well, I don't care. It's over.

Essentially, he's hoping that if he makes her feel bad enough about herself, she will begin to believe that no other guy will ever want her and that she is so lucky that he is still willing to give her a chance.

Yet, making your ex feel bad about herself so you can seem more confident than her, is not the way to go about getting her back.

When a guy uses that approach on an ex, she will usually assume that the only way he can feel good about himself is by putting her down, which will make her look at him as being an insecure guy.

Of course, not all women think like that.

Some women actually do feel bad when their ex puts them down and as a result, the woman ends up feeling hurt, betrayed and angry at her ex for treating her like that.

Then, rather than want to get back together, she simply feels more determined to get over him because he's being a heartless jerk to her.

So, if your goal is to get your ex back, make sure that you make her feel good about herself when she's interacting with you, rather than trying to put her down in anyway to hopefully make her worry that she won't be able to find anyone else who will accept it.

The truth is that the more you make your ex smile and laugh in your presence, the more she will like you and the more confident she will perceive you to be.

She is then free to think things like, I just wasn't sure how he would act when we saw each other again, but I'm definitely surprised. Not only is he more confident and emotionally strong, he's also being so mature about the whole situation. It actually feels really nice to be interacting with him again. I feel good being around him. I don't feel like we have to be distant with each other. I actually kind of want to see him again. Maybe we can get back together, or at least hook up again sexually to see how we feel afterwards. If I don't and he then moves on, I'll probably regret it. So, I'd better show him that I'm interested.

She then drops her defenses and becomes more open to interacting with you and even meeting up with you again to see what happens from there.

The next tip is to

3. Create a sexual vibe between you based on how you talk to her and use your body language

When you meet your ex, you can either act like a nice, neutral friend and pretend that you're not interested in getting her back, or you can create some sexual tension between you and her, so she naturally wants to kiss you, hug you, have sex with you and see what happens after that.

It's completely fine to be friendly towards her, but don't avoid the all-important feelings that come with the build up of sexual tension between you and her.

So, how can you build up some sexual tension?

One way to do it is by flirting with her in a relaxed manner, without giving off serious relationship vibes.

Flirt (verb): Behave as though attracted to or trying to attract someone, but for amusement rather than with serious intentions.

When it comes to getting an ex back, flirting is one of the best ways to break down the walls between you and her and get the sexual juices flowing once again.

It allows your ex to feel attracted to you, without worrying that it means she is agreeing to give the relationship another chance.

It also ensures that you don't end up placing yourself in the dreaded friend zone when you meet up with her.

So, go ahead and flirt with her and when the moment is right, go ahead and hug her, kiss her and then move towards hooking up sexually and getting the relationship back together.

6 Mistakes to Avoid When You See Your Ex

To ensure that you get her back when you next see her, try to avoid making one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Spending a lot of time discussing the relationship problems you had, rather than focusing on making her smile, laugh and feel good around you

Some guys assume that the best approach to a meet up with an ex is to focus in on all the issues and problems in the relationship.

In cases like that, a guy might repeatedly apologize and go on and on about what he did wrong, in the hopes that she will want him back based on how sincere and determined he is to fix the problems between them.

Yet, rather than making her think, "He really seems to be sorry for messing up our relationship, so I suppose it wouldn't hurt to give him another chance. After all, it's rare to find a guy who is so open and willing to discuss relationship problems and work on them," it will usually just turn her off the idea of getting back into a relationship that seems to need a lot of work.

She may think, "Yeah, he's right, he did stuff up. In fact, I'd forgotten about some of those things, but now that heâs reminded me, I donât know if I can forgive him. I think weâre just better off going our separate ways. Maybe it would be easier to just start afresh with a new guy and hope that he is better than my ex.â

She then closes up, wants to leave the meet up and her ex is left thinking, “What just happened? What did I do? I was trying to work things out and she just walked away. What is her problem?”

Her problem is that he wasn’t making her feel attracted and happy to be interacting with her again and was simply stressing her out by focusing on all the problems they’d experienced as a couple.

Of course, there’s nothing wrong with talking about a problem or two if it comes up in conversation, but you shouldn’t dwell on the problem and turn it into something that pushes you and her further apart.

Instead, just cover it briefly and then get back onto making her smile, laugh and feel good to be interacting with you again.

Another mistake to avoid isâ|

2. Acting as though you donât care about her or the relationship, when you really do

A guy might sometimes try to hide his feelings from his ex by acting like heâs completely over her, even though he secretly wants to get her back.

So, when he sees his ex woman and she asks how heâs been, he might say something like, âOh, Iâm doing really well. The break up wasn’t fun, but Iâm completely over you now. Iâve moved on and I feel great about my life. How about you? Have you moved on?â

Secretly, heâs hoping that his words will shock her into saying, âWhat? How can you be over me? I still love you and I want us to get back together again!â

Yet, hereâs the thingâ|

A woman can easily see through an act like that by observing her ex’s body language and analyzing his tone of voice, vibe and behavior as she interacts with him.

She will pick up on the subtleties of his behavior and realize that he is simply trying to make her feel like she has lost him, so she will then chase after him or at least show more interest in him.

Yet, when she knows that he’s just faking it, it will just turn her off even more.

So, if your real goal is to get your ex back, donât act like youâre over her.

Be calm, confident and in control as you get her back, but don’t pretend that you don’t care about her anymore.

Some women might fall for that, but most will simply seek to get revenge by hooking up with another guy and then moving on.

Another mistake to avoid isâ|

3. Being neutral and friendly, rather than making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction

Sometimes a guy will see his ex and pretend that heâs only interested in being her friend now (e.g. heâs nice and polite towards her, doesnât flirt to create sexual tension, doesnât use ballsy humor to make her feel attracted).

Unfortunately, using a 'friends only' approach doesn't work if the woman isn't attracted to him anymore.

If he wants to get her back, he has to actively spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for him, not pretend that he just wants to be her friend.

So, if he uses the 'friends only' approach and then suggests that they get back together (e.g. asks her out on a date), or tries to kiss her, she will reject him because he hasn't created feelings of sexual attraction inside of her.

He will most-likely then feel rejected, dejected and possibly even give up on the idea of getting her back.

Yet, here's the thing!

If your goal is to get your ex back, don't pretend you want to be her friend.

[image: Don't act like you just want to be friends with your ex]

Of course, it's totally fine to be friendly with her, but just make sure you're not pretending to be an innocent friend who isn't interested in her in a sexual or romantic way.

Important: That doesn't mean you should tell her that you want a relationship.

Don't do that.

Instead, focus on making her feel sexually attracted and turned on during the conversation and she will naturally begin to want that.

The way to get an ex woman back is to make her want you back, not to pour your heart out and tell her how much you want her back.

Make her want you and when you do, things will begin to unfold more naturally and easily.

Before you know it, you and her will be kissing again, having sex and getting back into a relationship.

Another mistake to avoid is!

4. Hoping that she will be the one to risk the feeling of rejection by saying that she wants to get back with him

Even if a woman still has feelings for her ex and wants to get back with him, she will rarely open herself up to him (and risk being rejected by him) by telling him how she feels.

Instead, she will wait to see if he's got the confidence and the courage to go through the ex back processes and get her back.

If she notices that he's too insecure and self-doubting to make a move (even though she wants him to), she will eventually decide to cut her losses and focus on getting over him by hooking up with new guys.

So, if you want your ex back, don't make the mistake of waiting for her to make the first move when you see her because chances are she won't.

Instead, be courageous enough to take the lead in the ex back process.

If you do, she will be able to respect you again.

When she respects you, she will naturally start to feel sexually attracted to you again and from there, it's only a matter of time before she will allow herself to let down her guard and be your woman again.

Another mistake to avoid is

5. Appearing desperate to get another chance at a relationship with her

When a guy sees his ex, he might make the mistake of going overboard with his attempt to convince her to get back into a relationship with him.

For example: He might

- Promise that he is willing to do whatever she wants if she gives him another chance.
- Be extra nice and sweet towards her, even if she's being rude, unfriendly or bitchy towards him.
- Agree with everything she has to say, even if he doesn't agree.
- Ask her if she is attracted to him now that he has changed.
- Ask what it would take to get her to agree to a relationship again.
- Appear nervous around her.
- Try really hard to impress her.

In some cases, a guy hopes that when she sees how willing he is to do anything to please her, she will feel flattered and then give him another chance.

Yet, rather than think, "Wow, he's so sweet. I love that he's so desperate to get me back! I want a desperate boyfriend!" a woman will usually just feel turned off by the desperation and want to remain broken up.

The next mistake is to avoid

6. Displaying signs of self doubt or insecurity

What a lot of guys don't know about women, is that almost every woman (including an ex woman), responds positively to a man's confidence.

So, when a guy is being insecure and self-doubting when he sees his ex, rather than think, "He is very confident, but is just feeling a bit anxious now because we've broken up and he really wants me back," she instead feels turned off by his lack of belief in his own self-worth.

Why?

A woman's attraction for a man works instinctively.

If you display traits that a woman feels attracted to (e.g. confidence, charisma, emotional masculinity), she will automatically feel attracted.

Likewise, if you display traits that a woman feels turned off by (e.g. insecurity, nervousness, emotional neediness), she will automatically feel turned off.

So, when a guy is being insecure and self-doubting around his ex woman, her instincts will cause her to automatically feel turned off, even if she was hoping that they'd get back together.

She will then try to close herself off and move on without her ex.

So, make sure that you come across as a man who believes in himself and his value to her when you see her.

When you can remain confident, relaxed and emotionally strong, regardless of what she says or does, she will automatically start to feel some respect and attraction for you.

When that happens, her walls will come down and you can then confidently guide her back into a relationship with you.

On the other hand, if you doubt yourself around her, she will pick up on your insecurity and remain closed off.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 Examples of How to Make Your Ex Curious About You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 examples of how you can make your ex curious about youâ€¦

1. Post photos on social media of you having fun with other people. Set the photos to 'public' so she can see them, even if she has unfriended you

When a woman is no longer answering her exâ€™s texts or phone calls and he has no other way to get through to her, using social media to spark her curiosity is definitely the best option.

Of course, a lot of men who have been dumped by the woman they love, don't want to go out and have fun with other people.

They just want her back.

Yet, if he wants her back, being lonely and not doing anything fun with his life isn't going to help.

Women are attracted to men who are confident in themselves and can get on with life and enjoy it, especially after a break up.

So, if your ex is currently ignoring you, start showing her that youâ€™re enjoying a fun and interesting life without her (i.e. by posting photos of yourself having fun with other people).

Some guys are afraid to do that and wonder, "Won't having fun without her just make her hate me more? Won't she assume that I've moved on and don't want anything to do with her anymore? If she thinks that, I'll never be able to get her back, right?"

Wrong.

Even though a woman usually won't admit it, she will absolutely feel more attraction for a guy who gets on with enjoying his life, compared to a guy who sits around feeling sad, lonely and left out.

So, don't worry if she pretends to be offended, angry or upset that you seem happy without her.

If she does that, it will simply be a test to see if you really are happy without her or not.

If you say something like, "Hey, I'm just enjoying life. What did you want me to do? Sit around and cry? You left me, so it's over. You can't expect me to sit around waiting for you forever. Besides, there's nothing wrong with enjoying life," she will then feel attracted to you for sticking to your guns and not backing down.

She will also feel a bit silly for making it out as though she expected you to just sit around and do nothing.

On the other hand, if she gets angry and says something like, "Oh, so you don't care about me anymore, is that it? I see that you've been enjoying yourself lately" and you then say, "No, I wasn't enjoying myself. I wanted you to be there. It's not the same without you" then she knows that you really aren't happy without her and therefore, she doesn't feel the same kind of pull towards you.

So, just know this: When you post photos of yourself having fun with other people, rather than make your ex hate you more or want to move on, it actually makes her feel curious and want to interact with you again.

All of a sudden, you seem more attractive, appealing and likeable to her, even if she might act like it isn't having any affect on her.

Another way to make your ex curious about you is to

2. Call her, make her feel attracted to you again and then end the conversation to leave her wanting more

[image: Call her, re-attract her and then end the call to leave her wanting more]

For example: Imagine that you're on a call with your ex.

Even though she initially tries to put you off by being cold, aloof and saying things like, "What do you want?" or "Why are you calling me? Did you forget that it's over between us? I don't have anything to say to you," you maintain your confidence with her.

You then cause her to begin dropping her defenses by making her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again.

When she's smiling and laughing while talking to you, it takes away some of the negative feelings she may have been experiencing when she initially heard your voice.

As her guard comes down, she starts feeling relaxed and can begin to think something like, "He seems so different from the guy I broke up with. I'm actually enjoying talking to him now. I wonder what else has changed about him? I can't believe I'm even thinking this, but I hope that he asks me to meet up in person. I'm curious to see what will happen when we do maybe we'll hook up and maybe it will be fun. I want to do it."

Once you have made her feel attracted and cause her to relax and drop her guard, you can then say something along the lines of, "Well, anyway it's been talking to you again, but I've got to get going now. I've got to meet someone in about 20 minutes and I'm running late. Let's do this again though, okay? I'll call you again sometime. Okay, bye," and then hang up the call when she acknowledges that the call is ending (e.g. she says, "Okay, bye. Talk to you later.")

Not only will that make her feel surges of respect and attraction for you, but it will also ensure that the next time you call to ask her to meet up with you, she will want to say "Yes," so that she can then satisfy her newfound curiosity about you.

Another way to make your ex curious about you is to

3. Interact with her in person and let her see that she really does feel differently around you now

Meeting up with an ex in person is an easy way to make her feel curious about you.

Think about it this way

Your ex is most-likely going to come to a meet up with the intention of testing you to see if you really have changed, or if you've just pretending that you have changed to get her back.

She will want to satisfy her curiosity about the new, improved you, but she will also want to make sure that how you are now making her feel is real and can continue if you and her get back together.

For example: If one of the main reasons she broke up with you was due to you being insecure and unsure of yourself around her, she might test you by being cold and bitchy at the meet up.

She might say something like, "Hhhh. This is such a waste of my time. I don't even know why I'm here. What do you want from me? Why are we even here together? You'd better not be hoping that I'll give you another chance. Is that why you asked me here? Ha! Ha! That's so *funny! Why would I ever want to be with you again? Youâre not man enough for me. I can do much better than you, thatâs for sure!*â

Naturally, being on the receiving end of that kind of cold treatment can make a guy feel anxious and he may even start to think, *âSheâll never give me another chance. Itâs too late. Iâve lost her forever. Iâm not good enough for her.*â

Don't think like that.

Instead, simply use her bitchiness as a way of reawakening her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

How?

By maintaining your confidence around her and using humor to break through her defenses and make her laugh and smile.

For example: You might say in a joking, teasing way something along the lines of, *âWow, where did all that come from? I think there must be something in the coffee you just drank. It has turned you into a little drama queen! What a performance you just gave there. I love it! Give me more. Excuse me, waiterâcan we get a refill of the coffee here? I canât wait to see what else you have in store for me today,*â and laugh at her (in a loving way) about it.

Alternatively, you might laugh at her (important! Don't be afraid to do that) and then say, “Well, someone's in a bit of a mood today, isn't she? I like itâyou look cute when you're annoyed” and have a laugh with her about that.

Initially, she might be shocked that youâre not getting upset or doubting yourself around her anymore and may even say something like, “Hey, I'm being serious!” to test your confidence once again.

Yet, deep down, she will be wondering, *âWhatâs going on? Why isnât he falling apart? Why is he so confident and self-assured all of a sudden? Why wasn't he like this before? I like it.*â

By the wayâ!

You can adjust your response to match the situation (e.g. she orders tea instead of coffee, or if you donât meet up at a coffee shop, you can substitute the âcoffeeâ with *âThere must be something in your lipstick.*â)

What matters the most is that you donât react in the way that sheâs expecting you to, so she can then begin to feel curious about you.

When she becomes curious about the changes in you and how good it is making her feel, she then naturally becomes more open to seeing you again.

As a result, you then have an opportunity to continue building on her feelings so you can get her to the point where she wants to be your girl again.

3 Common Mistakes That Some Guys Make When Trying to Make an Ex Curious About Them

There are times where making an ex curious about you can cause her to contact you and want to see you.

You can then use that to create a spark with her, build on her feelings and get her back.

However, there are also times where trying to make an ex curious can backfire and turn her off even more.

Here's where other guys go wrongâ€¦

1. Trying to make her curious via text by telling her what he has been up to since the breakup

No matter how genuine and sincere you are when talking about yourself via text, your ex will usually interpret everything you say based on how she remembers you when you and her broke up.

She will also be suspicious and wonder if you're telling her about all the things you've been up to, in the hope that it makes her feel like she is missing out.

This is why it's best to just post up photos of you having fun with other people.

She can't doubt that and, since you're not telling her about it directly, she can't conclude that you're only doing it to make her jealous.

Another mistake isâ€¦

2. Hoping that cutting off contact will eventually make her feel curious enough to contact him

When trying to make an ex feel curious, a guy will sometimes think something like, â€œIf I cut off communication with my ex for a few weeks or even a few months, she will then become curious about me. She will start to wonder why Iâ€™m not calling her or going to my usual hang out places. Then, she might even start imagining that Iâ€™ve got a new girlfriend. Hopefully that will make her get in touch with me to find out what Iâ€™ve been doing and we can then fix our problems and get back together. So, I'll just cut off communication and wait.â€

He then sits around waiting for his exâ€™s curiosity to get the better of her and make her contact him.

Yet, that rarely (if ever) happens.

In most cases, a woman has lost a lot of respect and attraction for her ex, she just won't care if he doesn't call her and try to get her back.

Even though she might wonder about him once in a while, she won't feel enough motivation to want to get him back because she's no longer attracted to him.

Then, by the time he realizes sheâ€™s not getting curious enough to call him and he then reaches out to her, he is shocked or disappointed to find out that she has moved on and is in love with someone else.

Alternatively, in a case where a woman does call him because sheâ€™s curious about his silence, when she sees that nothing about him has really changed, she will then think something along the lines of, â€œWell, nothing has changed. Now I can truly move on knowing that Iâ€™m not missing out on anything with him and his life. Heâ€™s still the same guy that I broke up with. I feel satisfied that I made the right decision after all. No need to be curious anymore. I just need to keep moving on without him.â€

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

In almost all ex back cases, if a man wants his ex woman back, he has to be active about it (i.e. re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship), rather than being passive (i.e. by cutting off contact and waiting).

So, don't sit around and expect your ex to make the first move if she isn't attracted to you anymore.

If she doesn't have strong enough feelings for you, she will almost certainly just move on without you.

Another mistake that guys make in a situation like yours is

3. Trying too hard to be mysterious when he's texting her

For example: When a guy gets a text from his ex woman asking him, "What have you been up to lately?" he might respond with something along the lines of, "Oh you know a bit of this and that," or, "If I told you, I'd have to kill you, haha" or, "Just hanging out with people, single life is good."

Basically, he's hoping that being evasive or funny with her, she will wonder, "What is he up to? What isn't he telling me?" and then become curious enough about him to call him and say hi, or ask to meet up with him in person.

Yet, that approach rarely works when a woman has lost respect and attraction for a guy because she just doesn't care enough to dig deeper.

Rather than be drawn to his mysteriousness, she feels annoyed that he is trying to mess with her head and then stops texting him.

So, if you want to ensure your chances of getting your ex back, I don't recommend that you waste time playing mind games with her.

The most effective way to make her curious is to show her (via the way you act, think, behave, interact with her on a phone call or in person) that you are a new and improved man now.

When she sees that you're no longer the same guy she broke up with, she will be curious to find out more by spending more time with you.

You can then build on her feelings of respect and attraction for you and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Having Sex With an Ex For the First Time After Breaking Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 tips to make sure that it goes well:

1. Feel worthy of her

If you feel unworthy of your ex because she dumped you, it will come across in your body language and vibe and it will turn her off during sex.

Women are naturally attracted to men who are confident in themselves and their value to a woman, so if you want your ex to enjoy the sex, make sure that you feel completely worthy of her.

Don't doubt yourself in any way.

She wants you.

She loves it.

That's how you need to be thinking.

So, if a guy is trying to have sex with his ex girl while thinking something like, â€œIâ€™m so lucky that sheâ€™s even here. I don't deserve her. Why is she giving me this chance? Does she even want to be doing it? Maybe she doesn'tâ€ it's going to turn her off.

Sheâ€™s going to pick up on his self-doubt, insecurity and nervousness via his body language, vibe, behavior and conversation style and as a result, she will instinctively feel turned off by him.

She then starts thinking things like, â€œWhat am I doing here? This is a big mistake. I thought we could work things out between us, but now I can see that clearly heâ€™s not the right man for me. If I get back with him, Iâ€™ll always feel like I did him a favor and I donâ€™t want to be in a relationship like that. I want a man I can look up to, respect and feel a genuine sexual attraction for. I want my friends to be jealous of what I have, not feel sorry for me because I stuck with a guy out of pity.â€

She then pulls away from the sex and doesn't want to do it anymore, or goes through with it, leaves and then breaks up with him once again.

So, if you want things to go well between you and your ex the first time you have sex after breaking up, make sure you absolutely believe that you are good enough for her.

The next tip is toâ€

2. Show her a new side of yourself, but don't go overboard with it

[image: Show her a new side to yourself]

Your ex is going to be analyzing everything that you say and do to see if you have really changed since the break up, or are still exactly the same as before.

For example: If a guy was insecure in his relationship with a woman, sheâ€™s going to be watching to see how he handles having sex with her for the first time since the break up.

Does he take the lead by confidently building up the sexual tension between them, breaking the tension with a kiss and then following through with touching and sex, or does he approach a hug, kiss or sex in a hesitant, self-doubting way?

Does he turn her on and make the sex happen, or does he nervously wait for her to give him an obvious sign that she's open for sex?

Does he confidently hug her or move in for a kiss, or does he keep asking her things like, â€œIs it okay if I kiss you?â€ or â€œDo you like it when I touch you there/do that?â€

So, if he was insecure in the relationship, she is going to be turned off if he is still the same way.

On the other hand, the more confident and assertive he is, the more she will accept that he really has changed and become a better man already.

As a result, she will be more willing to let go and just enjoy the make up sex.

Yet, if he makes the mistake of going overboard trying to prove to her that he's not insecure anymore (e.g. by being very rough, aggressive, overly domineering, insensitive), it will have the opposite effect.

She will feel weirded out that he is suddenly being so aggressive and will naturally assume that it's just an act to impress her, or it's a side of himself that he has been hiding from her and now wants to unleash on her.

Either way, she won't really like it because it will be too extreme of a change too quickly.

So, while it's fine to level up as a man (i.e. be confident if you were insecure, be more loving if you were heartless), don't go overboard in any direction.

The next tip is to

3. Last longer than usual by taking it slow

[image: Take it slow and enjoy the moment]

Having sex with an ex for the first time after breaking up can feel very similar to having sex with her for the very first time.

You and her are now two completely different people (even if the changes are you are based on both of you having grown from the experience of a break up).

So, even though you're familiar with each other and basically know what you both like in bed, it's best to treat it like you and her are having sex for the first time.

In other words, have the confidence to take things slower, enjoy foreplay and allow things to build up to an enjoyable climax.

Take your time to get to know her body (and her desires) in a whole new different way.

For example:

- Don't think about what she used to like and focus instead on being present in the moment (i.e. When you are present, you respond to what she wants in the moment, not what you remember she likes. You then naturally flow into new directions and spontaneously have sex in interesting positions that you and her may never have tried before. Be confident to get into those positions, without feeling like you need to rush to get the position correct right away. Take your time and enjoy it).
- Enjoy the feelings and experience of having sex with her again, rather than retreating into your head and reliving the past, or over analyzing what you're doing and her responses to you (e.g. is she moaning with pleasure, or is she looking a little bored?).

- Build up the sexual tension by kissing, touching, teasing and playfulness.
- Focus on giving her pleasure, while at the same time enjoying the moment for yourself.

Make it an experience that both of you will remember for years to come.

Don't rush it.

Where some guys go wrong is feeling so excited to be having sex with their ex again that they end up ejaculating too quickly and not allowing her enough time to fall back in love with him during the sex.

The woman is then left thinking, “Was that it? Is that the best we can do? Is that what I should get back with him for?” and feels turned off by what she perceives as his selfishness or lack of masculinity.

She then starts to wonder if getting back together again is actually such a good idea after all.

On the other hand, when a guy takes things slow, is present in the moment and is there in his most masculine form (i.e. being confident and bold enough to take his time and do what he wants), she will feel a type of attraction for him that goes beyond words.

The next tip is to

4. Make her feel attracted before, during and after the sex

Attraction starts long before you and your ex make it to the bedroom together.

For example: If your ex notices that you're feeling nervous or insecure prior when you catch up with her for a coffee, it will ruin her attraction for you and she might then say something like, “I just remembered that I have a busy day tomorrow. I have to go now. Maybe we can do this again some other time,” as a way of getting out of potentially having sex with you again.

So, how can you make her feel attracted before sex?

- Maintain your confidence with her, even when she tries to test you (e.g. by getting you all turned on and then pulling away and saying things like, “I don't think this is a good idea.”)
- Make her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with you again.
- Flirt with her to create sexual tension.
- Touch her and kiss her and then pull away to build up sexual tension.
- Believe in yourself and your attractiveness to her.

Once you've built up enough sexual tension with her, go ahead and release that tension with sex.

When you're having sex, continue making her feel attracted by

- Letting her see that you are confident and relaxed enough to do whatever you want with her.
- Making her feel feminine in response to your masculine behavior, energy, vibe and presence.
- Showing her that you find her sexy and attractive and that it's adding to your pleasure as you stroke in and out of her.
- Touching her with masculine presence (i.e. really being there as you grope her, rub her, caress her. Looking her in the eyes in a confident, relaxed manner as you stroke in and out of her).

After sex, make her feel good about herself.

For example: You might say something like, â€œThat was amazing. Youâ€™re even sexier now than you were before.â€

Then, continue to lightly flirt with her and use laughter to bring you and her closer together.

Make her feel sexy by the way you look at her.

Make her feel loved by the way you treat her (i.e. be a good man to her, but don't go overboard with it to the point where you're sucking up to her. When she senses your lack of desperation or neediness, it makes her value your good treatment of her even more).

As you can see, having sex with an ex for the first time after breaking up is not just about the sex.

Itâ€™s about showing her that youâ€™re now a completely different man from the one she broke up with (e.g. youâ€™re more confident and self-assured, youâ€™re more ballsy and can stand up to her in a loving, but dominant way when she's behaving like a little brat, youâ€™re more emotionally masculine and can now allow her to relax and be a feminine woman around you).

When you make her feel attracted to who you now are as a man, she will naturally feel attracted to you long after the sex is over.

She will begin to fall in love the new you and realize that you are now the kind of man she always wanted you to be.

As a result, she won't want to lose her opportunity to experience a new and improved relationship with you.

5 Mistakes That Some Guys Make When Having Sex With an Ex For the First Time After Breaking Up

Having sex with your ex again after a break up can be fun and enjoyable for the both of you.

It can be an opportunity to mend broken walls, bring you closer together and start over again.

However, itâ€™s also possible to turn your ex off and make her decide that itâ€™s better if you and her stay broken up for good.

So, to make sure that things go well when you and her get it on again, try to avoid making one or more of the following mistakes that other guys make when in your shoesâ€

1. Hesitating to move in for a kiss

If a guy has been building up the sexual attraction with his ex beforehand (e.g. with flirting, laughter and smiling), she will be feeling eager to release the sexual tension with a kiss.

Yet, if he hesitates for too long (e.g. because heâ€™s constantly second guessing himself and wondering, â€œIs this the right moment?â€), the spark will eventually die.

She may then start feeling annoyed with him and think something like, â€œI guess that nothing has really changed about him after all. Heâ€™s just an insecure, self-doubting guy who is pretending to be confident. I guess that I have to accept itâ€™s really over between us and that I can't change him into the man I want him to be. He simply doesn't have it in him to be a real man and make me feel the way I want to feel. He lacks the confidence I want in a man. He just doesn't have it. I've got to end this and move on while I still can.â€

She will then close herself off and become cold towards him, which will make it more difficult for him to get her back.

So, make sure that you don't take too long to make your move.

As long as you make her feel attracted and build up some sexual tension, you have to believe that she will naturally want to release that sexual tension with a kiss.

Not only that, but when you do kiss her, she will feel impressed with you for being so confident and ballsy, which will make her feel even more attracted to you.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Appearing nervous during the sex

A guy might sometimes feel so worried about trying to please his ex during sex, that he will get caught up in his head thinking something like, What if she's had sex with other guys since we broke up and she's now comparing me to them? What if I don't measure up? or She didn't moan when I touched her there. What if she doesn't like what I'm doing? Should I just stop?

She then notices the subtle changes in his body language and vibe and realizes that he's feeling nervous, thinking too much and as a result, is not present in the moment with her.

Rather than having the confidence to enjoy the pleasurable physical and emotional feelings of being with her again, he is feeling nervous, self-doubting and insecure.

That is a huge turn off for women.

As a result, she then starts to feel uncomfortable and the sex becomes mechanical and boring for both of them.

So, what you need to understand is that one of the most enjoyable things for a woman during sex is to be in the presence of a man who isn't worried about a thing.

He is present in his body and in the moment, enjoying the feelings and experience of having sex with her, rather than allowing his insecurities to ruin the experience.

Another mistake that other guys make when in your situation is

3. Asking her what she would like him to do

In the same way that a woman doesn't like when a guy is hesitant about kissing her, she also doesn't like it when he ask her to tell him what to do, to turn her on during sex.

Why?

A woman wants to just let go and enjoy the moment, rather than having to guide a guy through the steps of pleasing her.

Some unattractive women who are desperate for sex don't mind guiding a guy, but most attractive women and most ex woman don't want to have to take on the role of sex teacher when they are hooking up with a guy.

She doesn't want to have to hold his hand, pat him on the back and say, Yes, good boy touch me there, or No, no I prefer it when you kiss me on the neck, not the ears.

She wants him to man up and take the lead by doing whatever he wants, rather than needing her to guide him along.

Also, if one of her secret reasons for breaking up with him was because he was too emotionally dependent on her and always needed her to lead him and tell him what to do in the relationship, she will really feel turned off by him if he needs her help during sex.

As a result, she will not only feel turned off by his lack of manliness in the bedroom, but she will also be disappointed by his lack of self development since the break up.

He is essentially trying to get her back without even having leveled up as a man, which is unfair to her.

Another mistake that guys sometimes make in your situation isâ€¦!

4. Getting too emotional or romantic after the sex

For some guys, having sex with an ex is the culmination of days (and in some cases weeks, or even months) of trying to get her back.

So, after the sex is over, a guy might begin thinking, â€œThis is it! I did it! I got her back! It's done!â€

He might then react by crying, getting emotional or saying romantic things like, â€œI've missed you so much! This is the best day of my life. I thought Iâ€d lost you forever! Iâ€m just so happy you here in my arms again where you belong. Iâ€m never going to do anything to hurt you ever again!â€

Alternatively, he might ask her, “Do you love me? I love you. Please tell me that you love me.”

Yet, hereâ€s the thingâ€¦!

Just because a woman has sex with her ex, it doesnâ€t mean sheâ€s fully made up her mind about getting back together with him.

In many cases, she is still going to continue testing him to see if he has really changed, or if heâ€s still the same as before.

So, when a guy becomes too emotional or romantic after they have sex for the first time after breaking up, it does nothing to convince her that heâ€s the emotionally strong, confident, masculine man that she secretly wants him to be.

As a result, she will then put up her guard again, because heâ€s making her feel unsure about her decision to have sex with him.

Another mistake that guys make in your situation isâ€¦!

5. Making her feel as though the sex is just so he can feel better about himself, rather than it being a shared, enjoyable, love-inducing experience for both of them

Getting broken up with can sometimes leave a guy feeling rejected and like he has completely failed as a boyfriend (fianc  or husband).

To get rid of that pain, he may then decide to focus all of his energy on getting her back.

Then, after they have sex, he might think, â€œThis proves that Iâ€m not a loser after all! I feel so much better about myself now. She gave into me. She wanted me. I've still got it. I don't care if we get *back together for real now. As long as we have had sex again, I'm all good.*â□□

Yet, the problem for him is that women are very good at picking up on a man's body language and sensing his motives when it comes to sex and romance.

So, if his ex then gets the sense that the sex was essentially about making himself feel better, not only will she see it as being selfish, but she will likely also feel angry and used.

As a result, she may then try to seek revenge on him by hooking up with new men, so he can go back to feeling the pain that comes with being left behind and feeling unwanted by an ex.

So, if you want your ex back after you have sex with her, make the sex something that brings you and her closer together.

Make her feel like she would be silly to end the relationship now and just walk away.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why is it So Hard to Move On From an Ex?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why it can be difficult for a man to move on from his ex woman:

1. He tried to get her back in all the wrong ways and failed

When a man gets dumped by the woman he loves, it can cause him to behave out of character and start doing things that make the situation even worse.

For example: He mightâ€¦

- Beg and plead with her for a second chance.
- Apologize to her over.
- Take the blame for everything that happened (i.e. say that it was all his fault) and ask her to forgive him and give him a chance to prove to her that he will change.
- Promise her that he will do anything she tells him to do to make her happy.
- Ask her to tell him how to be a better man in the relationship with her.
- Send her flowers, gifts, or cards.
- Send her loads of text messages, long-emails or letters telling her all about his feelings for her.
- Cry to her and try to make her feel guilty for dumping him.

When all that fails, he might then cut off contact with her for a few weeks or even months in the hope it will make her miss him and want him back.

Yet, cutting off contact and hoping that a woman (who is no longer attracted to you) will come running back is one of the worst ex back strategies a man could ever use.

It works well for a woman who wants to get a man back, but men who want to get a woman back who is no longer attracted to them fail miserably when they cut off contact and just waitâ€¦

When a man's attempts to get his ex woman back fail, he then has to live with that feeling of rejection.

It sticks with him.

He realizes that he has lost the love of his life and nothing he tried to do worked to get her back.

Yet, in most cases, he didn't try thisâ€¦

He didn't quickly level up as a man and then interact with her to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

As a result, she walked away from the relationship feeling as though she made the right decision.

He could have gotten her back, but he went about it in all the wrong ways.

If he knows, deep down inside that they are meant to be together, it will make it all the more difficult for him to move on with a new woman.

He will always have that niggling feeling that he should be with her, rather than with another woman.

He will always find himself imagining being back with her and being happy, but unless he is willing to try a new approach to get her back, he will have to deal with the lingering pain that always seems to sit in the background of his life, waiting for him to think about it again.

When he does remember her, the feelings come back.

The feelings get less painful over the years, but the regret and feeling of being left behind never goes away.

Another common reason why it can be difficult for a man to move on from his ex woman isâ€¦|

2. She was more attractive than the kind of women he usually has access to

Sometimes a guy simply gets lucky in hooking up with a beautiful, confident woman that is ‘out of his league.’

She is only out of his league because he doesnâ€™t have much confidence and doesnâ€™t believe in his value to women, so he usually settles for the kind of woman who will accept him (e.g. unattractive, insecure women).

He is actually good enough for higher quality women, but since he doubts himself, those kinds of women overlook him and try to find a more suitable match.

So, itâ€™s only natural that when a woman that he perceives as being too good for him (i.e. because sheâ€™s more beautiful than any of the women heâ€™s dated before) goes ahead and breaks up with him, heâ€™s probably then going to struggle to move on from her.

He may think, â€œI will never find another beautiful woman like her again. I got lucky with her and now that luck has run out. Iâ€™ve been trying to just get over it and accept that Iâ€™ve been dumped, but I canâ€™t. I know that I donâ€™t deserve her, but I also canâ€™t live without her. I donâ€™t know what to do. Maybe Iâ€™ll never be happy now. Maybe Iâ€™ll never meet a woman who makes me feel the way she does.â€

Unfortunately, that type of thinking just makes him smell of desperation and insecurity, which will not only turn his ex off if he interacts with her, but it will also turn other quality women off as well.

For example: If you interact with your ex and she sees that you have no longer have confidence in yourself and your attractiveness to her, rather than think, â€œWow, heâ€™s falling apart without me. I love that he thinks he canâ€™t find a better woman than me. Maybe I should give him another chance. Heâ€™s going to be the most devoted boyfriend in the world because he thinks Iâ€™m too good for him,â€ sheâ€™s going to think something like, â€œHeâ€™s so nervous and unsure of himself around me now. Heâ€™s doing a good job of trying to hide it, but I can see it. I just donâ€™t want to settle for a guy who feels like Iâ€™m doing him a favor by being with him. I want a man who feels worthy of me so I can look up to him, respect him and feel proud to be his woman. He just isnâ€™t that man. Heâ€™s not good enough for a woman like me.â€

Even though are good enough for her, sheâ€™s not going to believe that if you donâ€™t believe it.

You have to believe it deep down, so you can then sincerely project that confidence in yourself.

Women can smell insecurity and self-doubt like a bloodhound dog can smell blood.

Women have been hard-wired to sniff out insecurity, self-doubt and desperation and avoid it, so you canâ€™t hide it if itâ€™s in there.

Youâ€™ve got to honestly believe that you are good enough for her and then interact with her, make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and get her back.

You can do it, but you have to believe that you can.

If you doubt that you can do it, you wonâ€™t come across in the right way via text messages, on a phone call or in person.

Another common reason why it might be difficult for a man to move on from his ex isâ€¦

3. The connection they shared was so unique and special that he can't seem to find anything like it with another woman

[image: The connection you and her shared is difficult to replace]

If you and your ex had an amazing connection (e.g. you were into the same things, the sex was great, you loved each others individual quirks and odd personality traits, you had the same or similar beliefs about life, politics or love, you shared a similar vision for the future, you got along so easily), it's only natural that it will be hard for you to move on with just any new woman you meet.

Here's the thing thoughâ€¦

Even though you and her shared a unique connection, it doesn't mean that she is the only woman who is perfect for a guy like you.

In reality, there are many millions of different women across the world who can easily be the one for you.

Of course, you probably don't want to hear that right now because you want her back and that's fine.

However, if you want her back after she has left you behind, what you need to understand is that all that really matters from is how she feels.

How much you want her back doesn't really matter to her.

What matters is how she feels about you and her together.

If she doesn't feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for the man you've become since the break up, then it's not going to matter to her that you really want her back.

What matters is how she feels about you and her.

If you want her back, you have to reawaken her feelings for you, so she can realize for herself that there is still something there between you and her.

5 Common Mistakes That Guys When They Can't Move On From an Ex Girl

Right now, you probably just want the pain of losing her to stop, so you can either feel confident enough to interact with her re-attract her, or move on with a new woman and forget about her.

Yet, no matter what you've tried so far, you just can't seem to let her go and move on.

A lot of guys find themselves in your situation and then make one or more of the following mistakes, which rarely solve the problem or result in him getting her backâ€¦

1. Trying to distract himself with hobbies or work

Sometimes, a guy might decide that the best approach to move on from his ex woman is to make himself so busy that he doesn't even have time to think about her.

He will then focus all of his attention on work or hobbies to block out any thoughts of her and what he has lost.

Here's the thing thoughâ€¦!

Although getting on with your life is a good thing and can often result in your ex feeling attracted to you, it won't get her back if you just keep running away and never stop to interact with her and re-attract her on a phone call in person.

If you bury your head in work or distract yourself with hobbies to avoid thinking about it, it just keeps you stuck in a limbo where youâ€¦re not really getting over her at all.

Work and hobbies can only distract you so much, but as you would know, thoughts of her still find time to creep back into your mind.

You might have had a busy day or a busy week, but then you have to deal with laying in bed alone and thinking of her, or looking at happy couples when you're out in public and missing what you once had.

This is why, if you want her back, you should quickly improve your ability to attract her during interactions and then do it.

Interact with her, re-attract her and get her back.

If you don't want her back, then you have to level up your ability to attract women during interactions, so you can then attract high quality women and feel more than satisfied with what you've got.

If you don't level up and end up trying to settle for a girl who is less than your ex, you will never be able to move on.

You might also fall into the trap of treating your new girlfriend (or wife) badly at times, because secretly, you don't really love her or feel attracted to her the same way you felt for your ex.

So, whatever you do, make sure that you level up your ability to attract women, whether that is your ex or a new woman.

You deserve to get what you want, but you won't get that if you are unable to properly attract the women you want.

The next mistake that guys often make in your situation isâ€¦!

2. Comparing every new woman he meets with his ex

Regardless if how great your ex is, comparing her to every other woman you meet won't help you get over her.

The truth is that every woman is different.

Some women will be better than your ex and some wonâ€¦t.

What you and her shared was unique and it can never be replaced or replicated by another woman.

That is true.

However, by comparing every other woman to your ex and avoiding getting to a new relationship as a result, youâ€¦re simply delaying yourself from doing what you really want to do (i.e. get her back).

So, if youâ€¦re finding it hard to move on from your ex, rather than looking and hoping that you might find someone better and then feeling disappointed when no other woman matches up, just focus on getting her back.

Even if you and her don't stay together forever after you get her back, at least you will have gotten her back, enjoyed having sex with her again, enjoyed hanging out and then parted ways on better terms.

However, that said, you'd be surprised at how many times I get contacted every week by men saying that they got their ex woman back and have been back with her for years now.

It's always great to hear that because it lets me know that I'm making a difference in this world.

I hope to make a difference in your life too.

If you want her back, then keep learning from me here at The Modern Man and I will help you do that.

If you want to move on and find a new woman, same thing.

All the answers you seek are right here.

The next mistake that guys often make in your situation isâ□|

3. Having sex with unattractive women because he doesn't feel worthy beautiful women anymore

After getting dumped by the love of his life, a guy will sometimes lose so much confidence in himself and in his value to women that he ends up accepting unattractive women.

He thinks something like, *â□□ This is the best that I can do. My ex was so beautiful and now that Iâ□□ve lost her, I have to settle for what I can get, because no other quality woman will ever want me. I can't even keep a relationship together. My ex was an amazing woman and was patient with me, but even she left me. If I want a relationship to last, I have to accept an unattractive woman. At least she won't leave me.*â□□

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that if he lacks the ability to build on a woman's feelings of attraction for him in a relationship, even an unattractive woman will want to leave him.

Additionally, as I mentioned earlier, since he doesn't truly feel attracted to the unattractive woman, he is less likely to be a good boyfriend or husband to her and will almost certainly end up taking her for granted and treating her badly at times.

This will then result in him getting dumped and being back where he started.

So, just know that wasting your time with unattractive women isnâ□□t the solution to get over your ex and be happy.

In fact, in most case, it makes a guy miss his ex girl even more because no other women even comes close to making him feel how she did.

Another mistake that guys often make in your situation isâ□|

4. Focusing on all of her good qualities and overlooking the bad because of how much he wants her back

One of the most common mistakes that guys make after a break up is to put their ex on a pedestal by focusing on all of her good qualities and ignoring the bad ones.

For example: A guy might think, “She was so perfect in every way. Not only was she really beautiful, but she was also intelligent and was a great person.”

Yet, he doesn’t focus on the things about her that weren’t so perfect.

For example: His ex might have been beautiful, but she may have used her looks as a weapon to make him jealous (e.g. by flirting with other guys, complaining about his physical appearance and saying that she likes guys who have traits that he doesn’t).

Alternatively, she might have been really intelligent, but she may also have been very selfish or lazy.

Another example is that she was good in bed, but was a horrible cook, or vice versa.

By only focusing on her good qualities, it causes a guy to think that he isn’t good enough for her and as a result, he will naturally display self-doubt and insecurity when he interacts with her, which will turn her off.

Another mistake that a guy might make in your situation is that

5. He doesn’t go through the ex back process to get her back for real

Many guys don’t yet know that the secret to getting an ex woman back has been discovered.

The code has been cracked.

It is a set of steps that you follow and when you do, it results in you and her getting back into a sexual relationship and being more in love than you ever had been before.

If you want to learn those steps, continue now!

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Is My Ex My Soulmate?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, but probably not in the way you are imagining.

Why?

Here are 5 things you need to know about soulmates...

1. A soulmate can and will break up with you if the romantic feelings are no longer mutual

[image: A soulmate can and will break up with you if the feelings aren't mutual]

When in a relationship with a woman that he perceives as being his only and only soulmate, a guy might fail to notice her unhappiness because heâs too caught up in the romance of being with âthe one.â

Alternatively, if he does realize that there are some problems between them (e.g. because theyâve been arguing and fighting a lot), he might avoid facing and fixing those issues by thinking, âYes, weâre having some issues right now, but thatâs okay because weâre soulmates. Nothing can come between us. This is just a temporary bump in the road of our long journey together throughout life. We just have to focus on our love for each other and everything will be okay, because soulmates never break up. Itâs just the way it is. Sheâs the one for me and Iâm the one for her.â

It would be nice if that were the reality we live in, but itâs not.

The way that life works is that if a woman doesnât feel enough respect, attraction and love for her guy, then no amount of soulmate talk is going to make her want to stay.

If she does believe in soulmates, she might try harder to make it work (e.g. complaining about her unhappiness in the relationship in the hope that he then changes the things that have been turning her off), but if she realizes that nothing is changing, she will naturally begin to want to leave the relationship.

Hereâs the thingâ!

Unlike in the past where a woman was expected to stay married to a man, regardless of how miserable he made her feel, in todayâs world, a woman wonât stick around in a relationship if the guy canât maintain her feelings of respect, attraction and love over time.

So, even if he firmly believes his woman is his soulmate, if the feelings arenât mutual, sheâs not going to stick around because of his romantic notions of them being made for each other.

If you want to convince your ex to get back together again, it canât be because you believe that you and her are soulmates.

Itâs a nice thought, but itâs not what matters to her and talking about it with her isnât the way to get her back.

If you want to get her back, you have to make her believe that you are soulmates by getting her to fall madly in love with you again.

To do that, you first need to reawaken her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

When you do that, she will naturally begin to reconnect with the love she used to feel for you, except this time, the love will be deeper, more mature and more meaningful than ever before.

When she falls back in love with you, she will naturally begin to believe that you are her soulmate and that life just wouldn't feel right without you in it.

However, if you try to get her back without first reactivating her feelings for you, then saying things like, "I know we can work things out because we're soulmates! We're just meant to be together. I know it deep down in my heart. You and I are meant for each other" just isn't going to change her mind.

Instead, she's going to pull away from you even more because you're going on and on about being soulmates, even though the feelings aren't mutual.

If you approach it that way, she will feel as though you just don't understand how to make a woman love you and want you, which will turn her off even more.

Women don't like the idea of being with a hopeless romantic.

Women love it when a man is able to make the feelings mutual (i.e. they both respect each other, feel attracted and are in love), while also being romantic at times.

If a man is being romantic when the feelings aren't mutual, then it's just not enjoyable for a woman.

The next thing you need to know about soulmates is

2. Any woman that you have a relationship with in this life becomes a soulmate

According to Wikipedia, a soulmate is described as, "a person with whom one has a feeling of deep or natural affinity. This may involve similarity, love, romance, comfort, intimacy, sexuality, sexual activity, spirituality or compatibility and trust."

Based on that, it's quite clear that any woman you have a relationship with becomes your soulmate.

Essentially, every woman you fall in love with becomes part of your journey of self-discovery, your personal story and the meaning of your life.

She becomes someone who was a loving, romantic mate to your soul; someone that you connected with along the way to enlightenment.

So, no matter what happens, a woman that you have a relationship with will always be a part of you because your life and hers have intertwined (even if briefly) and she helped you experience things that would never have happened without her (and visa versa).

For example: Your ex might have taught you how to be more patient, to go after what you want in life, to stand up for yourself, or even introduced you to something you may never have tried without her urging (e.g. sushi, skydiving, hiking, a certain type of music, a new way of thinking).

Likewise, you may have taught her how to relax and be more feminine and to not always be the boss, or maybe you pushed her to be more adventurous in her life and try new things.

Whatever the case, these are things that will stay with you (and her) for life, regardless of whether you remain in a relationship or go your separate ways.

In other words, your ex will always be your soulmate, because she lovingly touched your soul in ways that will stay with you for life.

By the way!

Maybe you can now see that even though your ex is your soulmate, it doesn't have to mean you won't be able to find another woman who will also be your soulmate in this life.

That said, it also doesn't mean that you have to leave your ex behind.

You can get her back if you really want to!

The next thing you need to know about soulmates is!

3. The idea of a soulmate isn't a scientific fact

Although there are many people out there who believe in the existence of a soulmate (i.e. one person who is your true love and is the other half of your soul), the reality is that no one can truly base the notion of a soulmate on actual fact.

The idea of having a soulmate is something that often gets dramatized in movies and romantic books, because it's interesting to fantasize about those things and escape the reality we live in.

However, the idea of there only being one woman for you doesn't work well for men, because they often end up feeling needy for one particular woman, which then turns her off.

Many men don't realize that women desperately want to be in the position where they feel needy for a guy, rather than him feeling needy for her.

Even though many women won't ever admit it in public, they secretly want to be totally engulfed by their feelings of love for a man.

So much so, that the woman then bases her entire life on him and the relationship they have together.

Many modern women like to act like they don't need a man, or as though they only care about their career, but secretly, they dream of being madly in love with a man and basing their life on him and the relationship they have with him.

A woman being madly in love with a man like that doesn't have to mean that he is her one and only soulmate.

The label soulmate can be applied if people want to use it, but most psychologists agree that believing a soulmate exists creates an unrealistic expectation for a relationship that most modern couples simply can't live up to.

For example: When a couple who believes that they are soulmates breaks up, it usually leads to deep feelings of failure or fear.

They worry that they will never find happiness again with anyone else because no one else can be their soulmate.

Sounds a bit silly, right?

If not, then you're one of the men who truly believe in their only being one soulmate for you in the infinite universe and as a result, you're going to end up very disappointed when you notice that she isn't interested in getting back with you based on how much you love her, care about her or want her.

Remember: If the feelings aren't mutual, then the idea of being soulmates quickly loses its power.

Getting your ex back, or even finding yourself another woman, has nothing to do with whether or not she's your soulmate.

What matters is whether or not you can make a woman feel respect, sexual attraction and love for you as you talk to her.

If you can't do that, she's just not going to care.

The next thing you need to know about soulmates isâ€¦!

4. She has her own soul and you need to be relevant to her if you want her to be your mate

If a woman matures a lot faster than her man when in a relationship, she will start to feel as though he is holding her back from her journey of self-discovery.

If she wants very different things from life than he does (e.g. to get married vs. pursuing a career, to go traveling vs. buying a house and settling down together, to have children vs. never wanting to be a parent), the 'idea' of being soulmates isn't going to compensate for not being able to live the life she truly wants.

So, even though you might feel strongly that your ex is your soulmate, if you and her don't have similar long-term goals in life, the relationship won't be able to last.

For a couple to stay together, having mutual goals that they are excited to experience together in the long term is absolutely essential.

That doesn't mean you should live in each other's pockets and not have individual interests, hobbies and even goals that are separate from each other.

Instead, it simply means that overall, you and her should want the same things in the long-term and should be working towards making those things a reality.

So, if you are going to get her back, make sure that you are ready to connect with her about long term goals.

Note: Only do that after you've had sex with her again and are talking about how to make the relationship work.

Try don't to get her to commit to being in a long term relationship with you, even though the feelings aren't mutual.

Make the feelings mutual first, have sex with her again and then, when the relationship is getting back together, start talking about long terms goals that both of you would be excited to work towards.

When that happens, you become relevant soulmates for each other and as a result, there is no need to go your separate ways.

The next thing you need to know about soulmates isâ€¦!

5. Most women aren't seduced by soulmate talk

Sometimes, a guy will hope that if he talks to his ex about her being his soulmate, she will be swept away by the romance of the idea and will feel compelled to give him another chance.

Yet, in the real world, if the feelings aren't mutual, a woman sees talk about being soulmates as a desperate, confused attempt to convince her back into a relationship.

Remember: For romance and romantic notions to be enjoyable, the feelings have to be mutual.

So, if you want your ex to see you and her as being genuine soulmates, you need to focus on reawakening some of her sexual and romantic feelings for you first.

You can do that during your interactions with her via text, on a phone call and in person.

When you do, she will naturally realize that there is something unique and special between you and her, which could mean that you and her are matched at a soul level.

Then, if you talk about being soulmates it may actually be something that she wants to believe, rather than it being something that makes her want to get away from you.

4 Mistakes That Some Guys Make When Trying to Get a Soulmate Back

If you are serious about getting her back, I recommend that you avoid making these mistakes:

1. Writing her a letter or e-mail about being soulmates

Sometimes, a guy hopes that if he pours his heart out to his ex woman in a long letter (or e-mail), she will suddenly start seeing things from his point of view.

So, he'll send her a letter saying something like, â€œI know that you might not want to hear this now that we've broken up, but I truly believe that you and I are soulmates. I feel it deep down in my soul. I feel so connected to you. I can't get you out of my mind and I know that it's a sign that you're the one for me. So, Iâ€™m not giving up on us no matter what. Iâ€™m going to do whatever it takes to make you forgive me and give me another chance. Thatâ€™s just what soulmates do. They donâ€™t give up on love, even when things seem unfixable. So, please just think about this. If you do, youâ€™ll realize that what Iâ€™m saying is true. You will feel it deep down in your soul that you and I are meant to be together.â€

It sounds pretty cool, right?

A nice little speech.

Yet, talking about romantic notions via e-mail, written letter or a series of long text messages rarely (if ever) makes a woman change her mind. Why?

When a woman has stopped experiencing romantic feelings for her ex, him talking about them being soulmates just turns her off even more.

Instead of being swept off her feet by the notion of them being soulmates, she perceives his letter, message, text or e-mail as a desperate attempt to change her feelings for him because he has no idea how to re-attract her sexually.

So, if you donâ€™t want your ex to see you as being a desperate, hopeless, confused romantic, donâ€™t bother writing to her about your belief that you and her are soulmates.

She just won't care about that kind of thing if her feelings for you are currently switched off.

You have to switch her feelings back on first, before she will even begin to care about romantic notions.

Another mistake that guys often make in your situation isâ€¦

2. Saying that she will never find a man who loves her like he does

This is actually true.

No one will ever love your ex like the way you did, but that doesn't mean she can't be in love or be happy with another guy.

So, saying that to her isn't going to change her mind about being broken up (especially if you've done nothing else to re-spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you).

Instead, it will usually just encourage her to try even harder to find herself a replacement guy, just so she can then prove you wrong.

No woman likes to be forced into loving a guy.

So, don't bother telling your ex that your love for her is better than anyone else's and that no other guy will ever love her the way you did.

Another mistake that guys often make in a situation like yours is

3. Not using attraction to get her back

Not knowing what else to do to get his ex back, a guy will often decide to just hang around with his ex and act like a nice, sweet, neutral friend in the hopes that she will eventually realize what she's been pushing away.

Yet, here's the thing

Hoping that your ex will reward your nice friendship with a sexual relationship, will usually end up with you being frustrated in the friend zone and disappointed when she starts dating a new man.

What you must get clear on is that, if you don't actively re-spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction, all she's going to feel for you is neutral feelings at best, or nothing at all at worst.

So, don't act like a nice, neutral friend with your ex if what you really want is to be her man.

Be her friend if you want to, but also make sure you use every interaction you have with her to make her experience strong, irresistible, sexual feelings for you.

The more you do that, the more she will start seeing you as the one for her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me to Focus On Her Studies

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will break up with a guy for that reason:

1. She's just using that as an excuse to not have to tell you that she isn't attracted to you anymore

At one point, she felt enough attraction for you to want to be in a relationship, but that spark has long since died and she no longer feels as though a relationship is necessary.

Initially, when you first met, she may have been thinking something like, "I really like him! He's cool, interesting to hang out with and we have fun when we're together. I feel so good when I'm with him. I think we could be happy in a relationship."

She then opened herself up to being in a relationship with you.

If you then failed to build on those initial feelings of respect and attraction (e.g. because you assumed that she would remain attracted because she felt that way at the start of the relationship), she will have eventually begun to question whether or not she should stick with you for life.

Yet, rather than breaking up with you for real and then having to deal with you trying to talk her out of her decision (e.g. by promising her that you will change, begging and pleading with her to give you another chance, offering to do anything she wants), she went for the classic break up excuse of saying that she needs to focus more on her studies.

By giving you that excuse, you really can't argue with her about it (i.e. because you probably won't want to come across as being an insensitive, selfish jerk who doesn't respect her long-term dreams and aspirations).

As a result, she can then get out of the relationship without you making a big fuss about it.

Another reason why she might have said that to you is because

2. You need too much of her time

Sometimes, a guy doesn't know how to behave in a relationship with a woman (e.g. because he is inexperienced, he never had a strong male role model when growing up, it's his first serious relationship, he has watched too many romantic comedy movies and is copying the behavior of characters from those movies).

As a result, sometimes a guy will assume that he has to spend all of his spare time with her to show her how much he loves her.

If he has any free time (e.g. an hour for lunch from work or university, a day off, evenings, weekends), he insists on spending that time with her, or at least using the time to text her or call her to see what she's up to.

Alternatively, he might send her texts or social media messages to let her know what he's up to, just so she doesn't ever have to worry.

Over time, he also begins to expect her to do the same thing for him and if she doesn't, he starts to worry that she might be straying or losing interest.

He might try to justify his actions by thinking something like, “I never want my girl to feel like she’s not the most important thing in my life. Nothing else matters to me as much as her—not even my career, interests, hobbies or even my old friends. She comes first in my life now and I have no intention of spending any time apart from her unless I absolutely have to (e.g. when I’m at work). Besides, I’ve seen how badly some guys treat their women and I never want my girl to feel insecure about my love for her. I want us to be close. I don’t want anyone else coming between us. So, I have to make sure that we are in constant contact with each other, or are with each other in person whenever it’s possible.”

Although his intentions are good, the truth is that a woman doesn’t want to be a man’s sole reason for living and she doesn’t want to feel responsible for his emotional state in a relationship. Additionally, she doesn’t want to feel as though she is under his control and has to now live up to his strict standards of always being in contact with each other.

She just wants to relax and be in love, even if that means they don’t speak to each other for a day and she then has a chance to miss him and send him a text, rather than always feeling like she has to reply to his never-ending, persistent texts.

So, even though a woman wants her guy to be loving and attentive and make her feel like the most important person in his life, she doesn’t want to feel smothered by him and feel as though he survive without her constant presence in his life.

Naturally, if a woman comes to the realization that her guy is taking up too much of her time due to his neediness or inexperience at being in a relationship, it will begin to turn her off.

She will also begin to resent him when she realizes that she never has time to focus on other things that are important to her.

As a result, she will eventually get to the point where she breaks up with him and takes the time she needs for herself (e.g. to focus on her studies, hang out with friends again).

This is why it’s always essential that you maintain the right balance in a relationship with a woman.

Be there for her, but don’t be everywhere, at all times.

Let her breathe a little.

If you made the mistake of smothering her in the relationship by needing too much of her time, you can fix it.

It’s almost always never too late to fix your issues and re-attract your ex!

Another common reason why a woman might break up with you to focus on her studies is because!

3. The relationship became too stressful

[image: The relationship became too stressful]

For example: Here are some common ways that a guy will make his woman feel stressed in a relationship!

- Not maturing as fast as her and making her feel like she needs to mother him.
- Expecting her to put the relationship with him ahead of her personal dreams, goals and aspirations.

- Being annoying when she does spend time with her (e.g. accusing her of being interested in other guys, getting into arguments with her if she is being distant, being childish when she just wants to relax, unwind and be with a more mature kind of guy).
- Becoming needy and clingy to the point where she feels like being with him is hard work.
- Wanting to spend lots of quality time with her (e.g. going out for long dates, talking for hours and hours in person or on the phone).
- Wanting to hang out and just do nothing, or watch lots of TV when she wants to focus on her studies.
- Making her guilty for not wanting to spend all of her time with him.
- Turning her against her friends, so she stops spending as much time with them.
- Making her feel guilty if she doesn't make him feel loved and wanted all the time.

In situations like that, a woman will eventually will get tired of how much effort seems to be required to be in a relationship with her guy.

So, rather than continuing to deal with the stress, she will break up with him to then focus more on herself and her needs.

Another common reason why a woman might break up with you to focus on her studies is becauseâ"!

4. She just wants casual sex, rather than the responsibilities of a committed relationship

In some cases, a woman might hook up with a guy that she doesn't feel completely compatible with, simply because she likes the idea of having someone available to her for sex, or to go out with when she wants.

However, deep down she may not be interested in taking on the role of being a serious girlfriend to him.

If her boyfriend doesn't understand that, (e.g. he keeps talking about moving in together/getting married/starting a family), she will usually just break up with him.

However, rather than hurt him by admitting that she was with him for a bit of quick fun, she will say something along the lines of, â"I really do care for you, but I need to focus more on my studies. Maybe one day in the future when Iâ"ve graduated from school/university we can look at getting back together.â"

This allows him to hold on to the hope that he may get her back, while she secretly works on finding herself a replacement guy to fulfill her sexual needs, without taking on the responsibilities that come with being in a committed relationship.

Another common reason why a woman might break up with you to focus on her studies is becauseâ"!

5. She wants to find a new boyfriend. She's just saying that she wants to focus on her studies, so you give her space to find a new guy

[image: She is breaking up with you to give herself a chance to find a new boyfriend]

When a woman realizes that she no longer has feelings for her guy, she might decide to start looking for another guy to replace him.

Yet, rather than come out and tell her guy that heâs not the one for her, she gives him the excuse of needing to focus on her studies as a way of letting him down gently.

Essentially, she wants to avoid him trying to stop the break up by saying things like, âJust give me one more chance. I know that I can be the guy you want me to be. Just tell me what you want me to do and I will do it. Iâll do whatever it takes to make you happy. Please donât go! Please give our relationship a chance.â

So, she doesn't say, "Hey, I'm breaking up with you because I no longer have feelings for you."

Instead, she says something like, "I need to focus on my studies. Please give me time and space. We can talk again later, but for now I want to just focus on university. It's important to me."

He will then feel the need to respect her reason for the break up, which will then allow her to quietly begin to find a new guy without the added stress of an ex trying to convince her change her mind about the break up.

4 Mistakes That Some Guys Make When They Get Broken Up With By a Woman Who Says She Wants to Focus On Her Studies

Regardless of the reason why your ex broke up with you (e.g. she sincerely want to focus on her studies, she wants to find a new man, the relationship became too stressful for her), if you want her back, you have to focus on reactivating her sexual feelings for you.

That is what works.

When your ex starts to feel surges of respect and sexual attraction for the new and improved you, she will become more open to finding another solution to her problem (i.e. not having enough time to study), rather than just breaking up with you.

However, for her to get to that point, you need to make sure that everything you say and do from now on is turning her on, rather than turning her off.

Unfortunately, most guys don't realize that, so they end up making one or more of the following mistakes, which only pushes their ex girl away even furtherâ!

1. Saying that he will wait for her no matter how long it takes

When a woman breaks up with a guy using the old âI need to focus on my studiesâ excuse, itâs easy for him to misjudge the seriousness of the situation.

Rather than quickly changing the things that have been turning her off and then interacting with her to re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship, he instead holds onto the hope that once her studies are finished or are under control again, she will come back to him again and everything will be fine.

So, he might say to her, âLook, I understand how important your education is to you and I would never want to stand in the way of you graduating. I love you and I only want whatâs best for you. So, take all the time you need to finish your studies. I promise that I will wait for you, no matter how long it takes.

He's hoping that she will be impressed by his devotion to her and will come running back to him as soon as she graduates.

Yet, rather than feel flattered that he's willing to wait for her, a woman will often feel turned off by what she perceives as his emotional dependence on her.

Here's the thing!

Although a woman definitely does appreciate a man who is loving and supportive of her dreams, she doesn't want him to put his life on hold for her, especially if she is lying about her reasons for breaking up with him.

Additionally, if she knows that he will struggle to attract a new girlfriend (i.e. because he got lucky when he met her), she will assume that he is clinging onto her and willing to wait as long as it takes because he won't have any other options.

That's not attractive to a woman.

Women are attracted to men who can easily attract other women, but are choosing them.

If a guy can't attract other women and is clinging onto the one attractive woman who gave him a chance, she feels as though she has to get rid of him because he is lower value than her.

Women don't like to trade down in terms of the social value of their man, especially if the woman is attractive.

If a woman is unattractive, she will be happy to trade down for a while and then dump her guy.

However, if a woman is attractive, she will feel the need to use her attractiveness to trade up in social value (i.e. have a guy who can easily attract other women because he is confident and charismatic).

So, if you want your girlfriend to give you another chance, don't tell her you're going to wait around for her indefinitely.

Instead, accept her decision (i.e. by being supportive of her need to focus on her studies) and then focus on having a fun life without her.

Note: This doesn't mean that you ignore her for weeks or months and secretly wait around for her to hopefully change her mind.

Instead, immediately begin enjoying your life without her and then let her see how confident, happy and forward moving you are in life whenever you interact with her.

Don't brag to her, of course.

Just genuinely get on with enjoying life without her and as a result, she will naturally see that you are a high value man who is liked by others and has the confidence to enjoy life with or without her in it.

When a guy doesn't understand that about women, he fears that his ex woman will get angry if she sees that he is enjoying life without her.

Yes, she might fake that she is angry, but she won't genuinely be angry.

The fact is that women are more attracted to confident men who don't actually need them.

If you come across as though you need her to be with you, in order for you to feel confident or to feel okay as a man in this world, she will avoid you like the plague.

So, immediately begin enjoying your life without her.

When she can see that you're happy, confident and getting on with your life without her, she will naturally begin to feel drawn to you again, even if she doesn't openly admit it.

Even if she tries to fight it within herself, you will automatically seem more attractive to her and she will then begin to wonder things like, â€œMaybe I can balance my studies and a relationship after all. Maybe we can be together again without me sacrificing my dreams. Why am I feeling drawn to him like this? Why do I suddenly want him back? I don't want to lose him. If I do, I won't be able to concentrate on my studies. I have to give him another chance.â€

Another mistake that guys often make when in your situation isâ€œ

2. Sulking and seeking pity

Sometimes a guy might sulk, whine or even cry about the break up to his girlfriend as a way of hopefully making her feel sorry for him and feel guilty about the pain he is experiencing.

For example: He might say to her, â€œHow could you do this to me? I know your studies are important to you, but does that mean you should discard me like I don't even matter to you? How can you put everything else in your life above me? Don't you even care that I love you and that I have given up everything up for you? Nothing is more important to me than you. Well, now I know the same didn't apply in terms of your feelings about me. I'm clearly an expendable, unimportant thing in your life. Well, thank you for making me feel worthless like this. Here I was giving you my allâ€œand for what? I never really mattered to you at all, did I? I just don't understand how what we shared seems to have meant nothing to you. Well, I won't stand in the way of your dreams. Go ahead and focus on your studies. I hope that you find happiness without me. As for meâ€œI will always love you and care about you. I will always think of you as being the most important person in my life. That's just the kind of guy I am.â€

Yet, rather than make a woman think, â€œDamn, he has a point. I really am being selfish and self-centered to be giving up a man who loves me so much. Why should I focus on myself and what I want? My studies aren't that important. He is the most important thing to meâ€œ she will feel annoyed that he is trying to make her feel guilty for making her dreams and goals a priority.

As a result, she will lose even more respect for him and close herself even more.

So, if you really want to get your ex girlfriend back, don't bother trying to make her feel pity for you.

Instead, focus on reawakening her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, so she naturally feels drawn to you and becomes open to giving the relationship another chance for her own reasons.

Another mistake that other guys make when in your situation isâ€œ

3. Saying that he is willing to only see her once a week or whenever she can

When a woman breaks up with a guy using the reason of, â€œI need to focus more on my studies,â€œ some guys will make the mistake of bending over backwards to accommodate her schedule, in the hope that it makes her give him one more chance.

For example: A guy might say, â€œI understand how important your studies are to you and I would never want to get in the way of that. I want you to realize that I will support you all the way with your dreams. Just because you're going through a tough time with university, it doesn't mean that it has to be the end of us. So, how about we only meet up once a week when it suits you? Iâ€œbe willing to take a back seat to your studies for now. I know that you won't be busy like this forever.

This way, you can focus on getting through school/university and we can still be together. What do you say? Won't you at least consider that? Please think about it. I really can't bear the thought of losing you. I love you more than anything. Please don't end this because you're busy with your studies.

That can work if the woman doesn't really want to break up, but if she is honestly trying to get out the relationship for good and is just using her studies as an excuse, she isn't going to agree to it.

Additionally, a woman doesn't want to be in a position where her boyfriend is so desperate not to lose her that he is willing to see her only when she wants to see him.

If a woman feels like she's holding all the cards in the relationship (i.e. she has control over you), she just won't be able to respect you anymore.

If she can't respect you, she won't be able to feel sexually attracted to you and without those two things, being in a relationship with you doesn't seem that appealing to her at all.

So, don't become a doormat for your ex girlfriend to walk all over as a way of hopefully getting her back.

Another mistake that guys often make in your situation is

4. Getting angry at her for leaving him and walking away from what they had together

In some cases, when a woman breaks up with a guy to focus on her studies, he might get angry at her for putting herself first.

For example: He angrily accuses her of being selfish, loses his temper or sends her angry or irritated texts.

Unfortunately, getting angry with an ex girlfriend doesn't accomplish anything other than to push you further apart.

So, even though you might feel justified to react angrily towards your ex in some way, it's unlikely to make her see things from your point of view.

Instead, she will likely see your anger as another sign that she made the right decision to break up with you (i.e. because you're now coming across as a scary, abusive ex boyfriend and she doesn't want anything more to do with you).

So, if you truly want to get her back, the best way to go about it is by showing her what she will be losing if she doesn't give you another chance.

How?

One way of doing that is by maintaining control of your emotions around her no matter what she says or does.

As a result, she will realize that you are being the kind of man she can look up to, respect and feel proud to be with.

When she realizes that you are in control of your emotions (e.g. you are confident, calm, emotionally masculine and supportive, but not a pushover), she will start to feel drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

She will see that you aren't so bad after all and if she were to leave you behind, she would end up regretting it and then not being able to focus on her studies.

Then, the idea of balancing her studies with a relationship with you will start to be something that she really wants to do.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Should We Get Back Together Even Though it May End Again?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, because getting back with your ex will push you to become and be a better man.

As a result, you and her will benefit from that (i.e. she will get to experience a new, fascinating attraction for you and you will get to experience a new kind of love with her that completely changes your life), no matter what happens down the road.

So, if you are open to giving the relationship with her one more try, here are 4 tips to help you get ready to make it happen:

1. Understand that most relationships experience an ‘almost break up’ or an actual break up

[image: Most relationships experience a break up, or almost break up]

In the past, a man and a woman were expected to stay together for life, even if they were unhappy.

In today's world, a couple no longer has to stay in a relationship with each other to please other people (e.g. family, coworkers, neighbors, friends).

Nowadays, if a man or a woman want to end the relationship, they can go ahead and do it and society and those around them, will usually be encouraging and supportive.

As a result, many modern relationships experience an almost break up, or an actual break up when one or both of the people aren't happy anymore.

Despite that fact, a lot of guys these days end up feeling as though they are a failure as a man because their relationship ended in a break up.

Yet, the truth is, no relationship is perfect at all times.

In fact, these days, it's fairly normal for couples to almost break up several times during the course of their relationship (e.g. the woman says things like, “If you do that again, I will break up with you” or they spend a few days apart after a big argument to calm down).

Some relationships even go through many actual break ups before it eventually works (i.e. they are happy and stay together for life), because the man had to be put under enough pressure by the woman to feel the motivation to change and improve his approach her and the relationship (e.g. he was taking her for granted, he was being too clingy and jealous, he lacked purpose and direction in life and as a result, she didn't feel secure about their future together).

So, don't stop yourself from possibly being with the love of your life, simply because you and her have gone through a break up.

If want to get back together with your ex and give the relationship another chance, even though there is a possibility that it may end again, just go ahead and give it a shot.

You have nothing to lose and everything to gain (i.e. having a long-lasting, happy and fulfilled relationship with your ideal woman).

Even if you and her get back together and it ends a few months later, you will not only have learned from the experience, but you will also have become a better, emotionally stronger man who will know more about how to attract a woman and keep a relationship together.

You literally have nothing to lose and everything to gain.

The next thing that can help you get her back is to realize thatâ€¦

2. Love isn't something to hide from

There are a lot of things in life that can make a person feel afraid (e.g. financial uncertainty, terrorism, political turmoil, the threat of physical violence), but love shouldn't be one of those things.

In fact, love is something to directly embrace and enjoy.

Embracing love and everything that comes with it is a big part of what makes life so interesting, meaningful and rewarding when it comes to relationships.

Additionally, all women respect a man who isn't afraid to face the potential heartbreak that can accompany love.

Here's the thingâ€¦

If you hide from love, you may end up settling for second best in life (e.g. getting into a relationship with a woman who you don't fully love or feel attracted to, but that you know will never leave you).

You won't be happy with yourself for never having the courage to try again with the woman you truly wanted to be with.

As a result, you may spend the rest of your life wondering, â€œWhat if I had taken the risk? Where would I be now? Her and I could be happy and in love right now. I miss that.â€

Essentially, the question you need to answer for yourself is: If you hide from love, what other things will you hide from in life?

For example:

Will you back down from following through on your goals and ambitions because you might fail, or will you take the chance and succeed beyond your wildest dreams?

Will you avoid going out and meeting new friends because you might get rejected, or will you risk that for the chance to develop great friendships that can last a lifetime?

If you get into the habit of hiding from what you really want, your life won't be fun.

You can try to distract yourself with hobbies, work and day to day responsibilities, but you won't be happy if you're hiding from what you really want.

So, if you want her back, don't hide from love.

Take a risk to relight the fire between you and her and experience what comes with it.

3. You will be giving her a priceless gift if you do it right

Falling in love again and experiencing all of the new, exciting feelings that come with, it is a priceless gift that you can give to your ex.

When she feels more attracted to you than she ever has before because you are now giving her the attraction experience she always wanted from you, but never got, she will realize that her love for you is more powerful than she ever knew.

For example: You are now moreâ€¦

- Emotionally masculine, so she feels more feminine and girly when sheâ€¦s with you, rather than like a neutral friend or a big sister.
- Confident and self-assured, so she feels more respect for you as a man, rather than looking down on you or feeling as though you're not strong enough for a woman like her.
- Focused and determined about accomplishing your goals, so she feels safer in the relationship with you, rather than like she couldn't enjoy a safe and secure future with you.
- Confident in your attractiveness and value to her as a man, so she feels like sheâ€¦s winning by being your girl, rather than like sheâ€¦s doing you a favor.
- Emotionally independent and able to get on with things without her support or encouragement, so she feels less smothered and like she has to take care of you because you canâ€¦t cope without her.

This time around, you can show her what love really feels like, because youâ€¦re not the same guy you were before (i.e. You're not making the attraction mistakes that caused her to feel turned off by you. You've leveled up and become an even better man than you already were. You're more than good enough for her now).

When you reawaken her feelings and then build on them, her walls come down and she literally wants to be back in your arms again.

She wants to put in the effort to make things work this time around because she feels like itâ€¦s worth it.

It feels right.

Then, not only does she want to get back together, but she also wants the relationship to last, rather than ending once again.

Of course, all of that is going to feel great for you too.

So, if you want her back, donâ€¦t deprive her, or yourself of that incredible experience.

Falling back in love and experience an even better relationship than before is a priceless gift that you can give her.

4. You can make the relationship work this time around

[image: You can make the relationship work this time around]

If your relationship ended mainly because you were unable to maintain and build on her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, there's no reason why that has to happen again.

You can do things differently this time around and as a result, the relationship will naturally work.

Other guys find themselves in a situation like yours and they are able to get their woman back and keep her.

How?

As long as a guy learns from his past mistakes and focuses on becoming a better man as a result of what happened between him and her, the relationship will feel better for both of them.

For example: If he used to get angry and annoyed at her when she was being unreasonable and argumentative, he now laughs at her and uses her tantrum as a way of building on her feelings of respect and attraction for him (i.e. by being an emotionally strong man and allowing her to behave like a girly woman).

If he used to fear losing her, which caused him to be clingy, needy or controlling, he now realizes that a woman is not a man's property and that holding onto her only makes her want to pull away even more.

So, rather than clinging on in an overly-protective manner, he relaxes and focuses on being loving and supportive, while at the same time going after his own goals and purpose in life.

This makes him attractive to her because he's now behaving like a confident, forward moving man that she can look up to and respect.

In the same way, if you get back together with your ex, it will most likely work out this time around, because you're not going to be the guy that you were before.

Where Some Guys Go Wrong When Thinking About Getting Back Together With an Ex

Getting back with an ex that you truly love can often be one of the best decisions you make in life.

As long as you approach things correctly, the relationship will be better and she will feel more respect, attraction and love for you than she ever has before.

That's good for you and it's good for her.

Unfortunately, most guys don't search around and find what you're reading now, so they often end up making one or more of the following mistakes:

1. He feels afraid of what might go wrong, so he waits too long and then misses out on an enjoyable, life-changing experience

[image: What if things don't work out and I end up getting hurt again?]

When a guy is in a situation like yours, he might make the mistake of continually thinking things like, "What if it doesn't work out this time? I'll end up getting hurt again. Maybe it's better to just give up on us being together. We tried and it didn't work out, so maybe it can't work. I can't change anything about my approach to her, so it's just going to be the same result. She knows me too well. I can't change. I can't do anything differently. If I tried, it wouldn't work. I'd end up getting dumped by her and I don't want that. Maybe I just have to accept that it's over and I have no chance to have a happy relationship with her now."

He then closes himself off and lets his ideal woman walk out of his life forever.

Then, by the time he realizes that he made a mistake, it's often too late and his ex has moved on and is now in love with someone else.

Do you want that to happen to you?

If you've read this far into the post, then you probably don't want her to move on without you.

So, would you rather play it safe and miss out on getting another chance with her, or take a chance, enjoy a new, more amazing relationship with her and become an even better man as a result?

If you hide from what might happen, you may never fully discover the greatness of a love that has endured and reformed to be better, stronger and deeper than ever before.

Yes, you might get back together and yes, it might not last for life, but at least if you follow through and get her back, you will know the right answer (i.e. She is the one for you, you and her are meant to be together, it was just a temporary break up, your love is now stronger than ever, you have both become better people as a result of the temporary break up and now the relationship is so much better).

However, if you don't take a chance, you might always be left asking yourself, "What if she was the one?"

Another mistake that a guy might make in your situation is!

2. He gets into a new relationship, but never truly loves her because he fears that it might end one day

Sometimes a guy might decide getting broken up with again by his ex, just isn't worth the risk. So, rather than get back with her, he tries to move on by getting into a relationship with a new woman.

He might then choose a woman he doesn't fully love, knowing that if things don't work out between them, it won't matter that much to him, so he won't be very hurt by it.

He may say to himself, "This isn't so bad. We get on well and we have fun together. At least I'm not single and lonely."

Yet, deep down, he always feels that something is missing.

He knows that he's not living up to his true relationship potential, because he's settled for second best.

He doesn't really love his new woman.

He is kind of happy to be with her, but he doesn't love her in the same way that he loves his ex girl. Secretly, he wishes he could have his ex girl back, but he didn't do anything about it, so she moved on.

Don't let that happen to you.

Another mistake that a guy might make in a situation like yours is!

3. He distracts himself with hobbies or work to avoid having a relationship with his ex or with a new woman

He misses his ex woman, but doesn't have the courage to do anything about it.

He finds other women attractive, but is too afraid to get hurt again, so he avoids them.

He might then justify his actions by thinking, "I'm just too busy right now to think about a relationship. At some point, things will calm down and then I'll start dating again, or maybe even consider getting back with my ex if I feel like it. For now, I'll just focus on my work (or hobbies)."

Yet, what may not realize is that his behavior could be one of the subtle, secret reasons why his relationship with his ex didn't work out in the first place (i.e. because every time he was faced with a hard decision in life, rather than take a risk, he avoided taking action by distracting himself with other things).

If that is true about him, it would have caused his woman to wonder things like, “Is this the kind of man I want to be with? If he can’t face the difficult choices in life now, he probably never will be able to. He’ll always run and hide, rather than face life head on. I want a man, not a boy. I need someone stronger than this. I don’t want to continue on feeling uncertain about a future with him. I need certainty. I need to feel protected. I need a man.”

As a result, she gradually began to lose respect for him, which then contributed to her overall decision to break up with him and try to find a new man.

Here’s the thing!

You can’t distract yourself from life.

It’s always there, waiting for you to level up.

Throughout life, you will always be faced with difficult decisions and the sooner you can accept that and get into the habit of facing your challenges head on, the better your life will be.

Another mistake that a guy might make in your situation is!

4. He develops deep insecurities that ruin his relationships with women for the rest of his life

[image: Developing insecurities about relationships due to never facing challenges head on and getting the result you want]

Sometimes a guy is so hurt and emotionally damaged after a break up, that he begins to feel insecure about his value to his ex and to other women.

For example: He might!

- Start believing that his ex is too good for him.
- Lose confidence in his attractiveness to other women, because he begins to see them as hard to get, or hard to keep.
- Begin thinking that he will never be able to get his ex back, so why bother trying.

Don’t let that be you.

Be a man of action and get her back now.

Be strong.

Face your life challenges head on and get the job done.

If you wait too long because you keep wondering things like, “Should we get back together, even though it may end again?” you may end up losing her because she gets tired of waiting for you to make a move.

You might also end up losing confidence in yourself around women, because you secretly worry that you won’t be able to keep a relationship together.

So, make sure that you don’t become one of those guys who are afraid of being in a committed relationship with a woman.

You can make it work with your ex if you really want to.

Believe in yourself.

Take action and get her back.

Youâ□□ll thank yourself for it when you and her are back together and the relationship and sex is better than it ever was before.

On the other hand, if you donâ□□t take the chance, you may end up losing your ideal woman and it may eat away at you for the rest of your life.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Just Texted My Ex to Say That I Miss Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 things you should do next:

1. Get ready to re-attract her if she replies

Start by replacing any negative thoughts running through your head with positive ones.

For example: If youâre saying to yourself, *âSheâs probably laughing at me right now for still missing her,*â replace that thought with something like, *âTelling her that I miss her is not a sign of weakness, but rather of strength. I am confident and emotionally strong enough to say that to her, so she will respect me for that.*â

Likewise, if youâre worried that sheâs going to ignore you, change that thought and start imagining her texting you back and saying things like, *âI miss you too,*â or *âHow about we meet up sometime to say hello as friends?*â or, *âHey, how are you? Long time no hearâ|howâs things?*â instead.

If youâre afraid that sheâs going to be cold, bitchy and maybe even respond with something along the lines of, *âGood! Iâm glad youâre missing me. I hope youâre miserable. Just for the record I donât miss you!*â then imagine yourself using humor to break down her defenses and make her open back up to you.

Whatever negative thoughts might be going through your mind, focus on replacing them with positive thoughts.

Why?

To be attractive to a woman, you have to be confident.

Women arenât attracted to self-doubt, insecure and fear in men.

So, just imagine that she is now feeling very happy about getting the text from you.

Imagine her getting your text, smiling and thinking to herself, *âCool! Iâm glad he reached out to me. Iâve been missing him too. Maybe we can meet up and see how things go from there. Iâll text him back!*â

By thinking in a confident way, you will then be much more likely to respond to her texts in a more confident way, which will be more attractive to her.

However, something to bear in mind is thisâ|

2. Donât get stuck in a texting conversation that leads to nowhere

When a man sends his ex woman a text saying that he misses her and she then responds, itâs only normal for him to feel relieved and happy about it.

As a result, he might then think to himself, *âThis is great! As long as sheâs responding to me, thereâs no need to rush things and maybe end up scaring her away. So, Iâll take it one day at a time and then call her when the time is right.*â

Yet, even though she initially seems keen to text back and forth, her interest fades away until she begins to not reply to some texts or not reply to any at all anymore.

Why?

Women hate it when men hide behind text.

If a man doesn't have the courage to call her, she will feel turned off by it and begin to lose interest.

Likewise, if a man doesn't have the motivation to call her, she will feel as though he's only just using her to feel good about himself again.

As a result, she will stop giving him that gift by ignoring his texts, or even getting to the point where she blocks him to teach him a lesson.

So, make sure that when your ex texts you back, you don't get stuck talking about random things via text in the hope that it will someone lead to getting her back.

Instead, focus on getting to talk to her over the phone or meet up with her in person, where you can fully re-attract her and get her back.

If you don't have the courage or motivation to get to that level with her and just want to remain behind the safety of text messages, you will almost certainly be disappointed.

I say that based on my many years helping men to get women back.

Men who hide behind text almost always get left behind by their ex woman and end up disappointed when they find out that she's seeing someone else and is happy without him.

Men who get to a phone call and in person meet up almost always get their ex back, or at least get to a kiss and sex with her again.

So, with that in mind, something else that you can do after texting your ex to say that you miss her isâ

3. Get her to meet up with you

[image: Imagine things going well with your ex, now that she knows you miss her]

The quickest way to get an ex back is by meeting up with her and re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

So, regardless of how she responds to your text, just focus on steering her towards a meet up.

For example: If your ex replies to your text with something along the lines of, âHey, I miss you too,â you can then call her, use some humor to put her at ease and then invite her to meet up with you for a quick cup of coffee.

If she resists when you suggest catching up for coffee and says something like, âIâm not sure if thatâs a good idea,â you can respond by saying, âHey, itâs not about us getting back together again of course. Itâs just about catching up as friends. We can do that, right? We can be friends and have coffee without it being a big deal. So, let's catch up tomorrow or the next day to say hi."

In most cases, an ex woman will agree and you can then arrange a meet up.

On the other hand, if your ex responds with something more negative like, âGood for you. I donât miss you at all,â donât let it ruin your confidence and cause you to doubt yourself.

Instead, remain confident, have a laugh at her pretending to not miss you at all and say, âIs that really true? ð I bet thereâs something about me you still miss.â

She might then say, âNo.â I don't miss anything about you,â and you can reply with something like, “Not even my awesome foot rubs/my famous lasagna/the way I used to pull the back of your hair during sex/the way I used to make you laugh?”

By mentioning something that she really liked about you, it causes her to have to think about it.

When she genuinely thinks about it, it will most likely make her smile, which then breaks down her walls a little bit.

If she is going to make it a bit easier for you now, she might then say, “Okay, maybe I do miss that, but nothing else.”

You can then build on that and get her to meet up with you by saying something along the lines of, “Haha...okay, well, at least you can admit that” and then attempt to get her to catch up with you, if you’re too afraid to call her and ask.

Important: It’s so much easier to get an ex to agree to catch up with you if you talk to her on a phone call.

Women are 10x more likely to say, “No” to a date request if it’s asked via text, compared to on a phone call.

Why?

On a phone call, she can hear the confidence in your voice and feel attracted to that and you can hear her laughing in response to any humor you use, which then makes you feel even more confident.

Yet, via text, she can play hard to get and pretend not to be interested to test your confidence.

If you fail her confidence test by doubting yourself, you then turn her off.

So, once again, don’t hide behind text.

Always get to a phone call and in person meet up as soon as you can.

Just click call and deal with it.

You can do it.

When you meet up with her, you can then

4. Re-attract her and get her back for real

For example:

- Show her that you’re much more confident than you used to be.
- Use humor to bring down her guard and make her feel good to be seeing you again (especially if she is initially being closed off or cold towards you).
- Flirt with her to create a sexual vibe.
- Turn her negative feelings about the break up into something you can both laugh about together.

The more she can see that you’re being a confident, emotionally mature guy around her, the less she will be able to hold on to her negative opinion about you.

She won’t be able to stop herself from dropping her guard a little bit and allowing herself to imagine what it would feel like if you and her got back together again.

From there, she will begin to realize that falling back in love with each other will be one of the most amazing experiences of her life.

As a result, she will open up to it and you can then confidently guide her back into a relationship with you.

By the way

If You Just Texted Your Ex to Say That You Miss Her, Try to Avoid Making These 3 Mistakes

There's nothing wrong with texting an ex to say that you miss her.

In fact, it can often be the opening she has been waiting for to get back with you.

However, what you do after that initial text can make or break your chances of getting her back.

So, to make sure that you do get her back, try to avoid making any of these mistakes

1. Losing confidence and hope about getting her back, if she doesn't reply

It's only natural that a guy is going to feel a bit rejected if he sends his ex girl a text to say that he misses her and she doesn't reply at all.

He may begin to think, "Damn it! I really stuffed up this time. She's probably laughing at me right now and thinking that I'm such a loser! Maybe she has even moved on with a new guy and now know that I'm still missing her. I guess I tried, but it's over now. She's not interested and I need to accept that I won't be getting her back, ever. I've ruined it. I've shown her how I feel and she isn't interested."

Yet, thinking like that only causes him to lose confidence in himself and in his value to her.

He stops believing in his ability to re-attract her and gives up on the idea of getting her back.

What he doesn't realize is that he's the one giving up, not her.

Yes, she might have ignored his text, but that doesn't mean she's not interested in getting back together.

There are many reasons why a woman might not reply to an "I miss you" text from her ex.

For example: She might be testing him to see if he has the confidence to pursue her even when she's being cold and unresponsive.

Alternatively, she might not want to make it obvious to him that she's happy to hear that he's missing her (i.e. because she misses him too) in case he then says, "Oh, you misunderstood me. I miss you, but I don't want you back. Sorry if I gave you the wrong idea."

Another reason for her not responding could be because she's waiting to see if he has the balls to follow through on his text (i.e. call her on the phone, meet up with her and re-attract her).

Alternatively, she might not know what to reply to a "miss you" text and will have to think about it for a few days or a week before she is ready to reply.

By that time, she might feel insecure and think, "It's too late to reply. What if I reply and he then ignores me? I'll just wait until he texts me again."

As you can see, there are many reasons why a woman might not respond to your text and doesn't always mean that she isn't interested.

So, if you lose confidence and hope when she doesn't reply (or does reply, but doesn't seem very interested), youâll never find out the truth.

You might miss your chance of getting her back all because you didnât believe in yourself enough to keep going.

Donât make that mistake.

Believe in yourself and get her back, even if she doesn't initially make it obvious that she is open to getting back with you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

2. Being afraid to get on a phone call

As the man, itâs up to you to initiate the ex back process.

Donât be afraid to call your ex on the phone, so you can then begin to re-attract her and make her want you back.

Yes, she may be a bit resistant or reluctant initially, but once you spark some of her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you over the phone (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again), her guard will come down and she will naturally being to open back up to you.

On the other hand, if you wait too long to make a real move (i.e. talk to her on the phone or in person), you might eventually discover that sheâs moved on and is now madly in love with a new guy.

Don't let that happen to you.

If you want her back, you have to be bold and take the actions required to get her back for real.

Donât be afraid to contact her.

Do whatever needs to be done to get her back.

Get her on a phone call with you, start re-attracting her and get her to meet up with you.

At the meet up, build on her feelings of attraction and then get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

That's how a real man gets his woman back.

He doesn't sit around waiting in the background hoping that she makes all the moves, or hoping that she never moves on.

He does what it takes to get her back now and then enjoys an even better relationship with her than before.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

3. Only feeling confident if she replies and says she wants to get back together

Every woman is different.

Some women want to test a guy to see if he remains confident when she isn't very open about her feelings, or when she doesn't show much interest.

Some women will say, âI miss you tooâ and then expect you to follow through and get her back.

Some women won't reply at all, because you haven't re-sparked her feelings for you first, so the feelings aren't mutual yet.

Some women will reply and just be friendly because they will be afraid to show too much interest in case you reject them.

Whatever happens, just make sure that you don't base your confidence level on how she responds (i.e. only feel confident if she replies and says that she wants you back).

If you want her back, you have to be confident enough to make it happen.

In almost all ex back cases where a woman has broken up with a guy, she won't be the one who tries to get him back.

She will wait to see if he has what it takes to re-attract her and get her back and if he doesn't, she will move on.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Should I Make Peace With My Ex?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, you should make peace with your ex.

Here are 5 reasons why you should do it ASAP:

1. You can then get her back

[image: Making peace with your ex]

If you don't make peace with your ex, you both might continue feel negative emotions when you think about each other (e.g. anger, annoyance, resentment, disappointment, betrayal, sadness, regret), which can then negatively affect your chances of getting each other back, or ruin your happiness in your next relationship with someone else (i.e. because you will be missing your ex, or still feel regret about how things went down).

On the other hand, if you make peace with your ex and you both genuinely forgive each other, it will wipe the slate clean for both of you.

Both of you will be able to look at each other in a new light and see each other for who you are now, rather than who you used to be.

From that clean slate, you can then start rebuilding her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and get her back.

So, to make your ex begin to see you in a more positive light, start by apologizing to her (preferably face-to-face) about what happened.

For example: You might say something along the lines of, "I just want to say that I'm sorry for what happened between us. I now realize that the way I handled things was wrong and I could have done a much better job of it. To help us both heal from the break up, I feel as though it's in both of our best interests to make peace with each other, so we aren't carrying the emotional baggage into any new relationship we have with someone else. I want both of us to be free to be happy again. If you think about it, you will realize that what I'm saying is true. If we don't make peace with each other, you probably won't fully trust other guys in the future, which won't be good for you. So, how about it? Can you let go of the past so that we can both move forward without holding onto old negativity and grudges? Let's make peace with each other, so we can let go of any negative feelings and get on with our lives in a more positive way."

By encouraging her to let go of what happened between in the past, it helps her to begin to see you for who you are now; a new, improved and more mature man.

If you also make her feel attracted to you as you talk to her (e.g. be very confident, make her laugh, flirt with her), something interesting happens.

She doesn't want to let go of you.

Suddenly, she stops thinking of you as her horrible ex and starts seeing you as a man who is now emotionally mature and confident enough to make peace with her and allow her to move on and enjoy her life without you.

When that happens, her defenses come down and she becomes more open to feeling attracted to you again and to saying, “Yes” if you ask her to catch up for a coffee to say hi.

If you don’t ask her to catch up after saying something like that to her, she will go away feeling drawn to you and may not know why.

As a result, you will almost certainly get a text from her.

In most cases, a text from an ex woman in a situation like that will be her subtle way of trying to tell you, “I want more. Please text with me, get me on a call, make me smile and laugh and then ask me to catch up with you. Please” “I miss you.”

Of course, you don’t have to look at her text in that way.

You can be insecure if you want to and assume that she is texting you for no reason, or just to be nice.

However, I don’t recommend that you think in an insecure way if you want to get her back.

When it comes to attracting women, it’s always best to think in a confident way, so you can then take confident action, rather than hesitating, doubting and missing out on the great opportunity that is presenting itself to you.

Always remember that women are naturally attracted to confidence, so it’s never a good idea to be insecure or self-doubting around a woman.

If you want your ex back, then be confident, believe in yourself and attract her back.

Another reason why you should make peace with your ex is because

2. You will clear your conscience

[image: Making peace with an ex and getting her back]

Making peace with your ex allows you to clear your conscience (i.e. feel free of guilt).

Not making peace with your ex causes you to live with regret, worry, stress, disappointment and sadness about how things ended between you and her.

For example: Months or years from now when you’re still not over her, you may find yourself thinking something like, “I should have made peace with my ex. I handled the situation in such an immature and childish way back. I still feel embarrassed by it. I wish I could go back and fix things between her and I. I wish I could apologize and get her to forgive me. I hate living with regrets, but it’s too late to fix things with her now.”

It’s not too late.

There is always time for forgiveness, but if you want to get your ex back, it’s better to get it done sooner than later.

If you leave it too long, you or her might completely move on with new people and there won’t be an opportunity to talk and make peace with each other.

So, go ahead and do the right thing while you can.

Regardless of whether your ex accepts your apology and forgives you, or even says something along the lines of, “I don’t care what you have to say. I hate you and I will never forgive you!” you will at least have a clear conscience knowing that you tried to make peace with her.

If she reacts in a negative way like that, it will then be her who has a heavy conscience and wants to make peace with you.

If she reacts in a positive way, make sure that you believe in yourself and get her to meet up with you in person, so you can re-attract her, seduce her and hook up with her again.

After that, you and her can decide what to do from there.

Another reason why you should make peace with your ex is becauseâ€¦!

3. She will be impressed by your maturity

[image: She will be impressed by your maturity]

All over the world, women are instinctively attracted to certain qualities in a man.

For example: A woman will almost always choose a confident, emotionally strong, emotionally mature man over an insecure, emotionally weak, childish and immature man.

Itâ€™s just how her instincts work.

So, when you take the initiative and make peace with your ex (especially if she is initially being closed off and difficult), even if she wonâ€™t admit it, she will secretly be impressed by your emotional maturity.

She can then begin to think things like, â€œMaybe Iâ€™m being too hard on him. After all, it takes a mature and emotionally strong man to admit his mistakes and apologize like that. Maybe he really has changed after all.â€

She then drops her guard a bit and becomes open to talking to you again over the phone, or seeing you in person.

Then, the more you interact with her, the more chances you have to restore her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and get her back.

Another reason why you should make peace with your ex is becauseâ€¦!

4. She's probably hoping that you make peace with her

[image: She is probably hoping that you make peace with her]

It would be nice if your ex came out and said, â€œLook, I know you feel bad about what happened, so let me make it easy for you by telling you that all is forgiven. I am no longer angry about anything, I love you and want us to get back together.â€

Yet, most women just don't make it easy for their ex like that.

Here's the thingâ€¦!

Even if your ex is still in love with you and is secretly hoping you and her will become a couple again, in most cases, she'll wait (and hope) that you are man enough to take the lead by making peace with her.

Essentially, she wants to see if youâ€™ve got the emotional courage (i.e. balls) to apologize to her for your past mistakes and make things good between you and her again, even though she isn't making things easy for you.

If you can do that, she will naturally feel respect for you again.

When that happens she will also feel sexually attracted to you and with those two things in place, itâ€™s only a matter of time before she reconnects with the love in her heart.

So, don't waste time waiting for a sign from her to make a move and wondering, Should I make peace with my ex?

Instead, contact her right away and do it.

Remember to maintain your confidence with her regardless of what she says and does to put you off.

Focus on actively making her have feelings for you again (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, showing her the new and improved version of you).

If you do that, you and her will naturally get back together.

Another reason why you should make peace with your ex is because

5. It gets rid of the negative feelings she has about you

Regardless of whether you and your ex get back together again, or just decide to move on and date other people, it's always better to go forward with a clean slate.

Not only will making peace with your ex erase a lot of her negative feelings about you, but it will also allow you and her to be friends as well.

If you are 'friends' with her, it means you can communicate with her via text, on the phone and even in person.

and you know what that means?

You have the perfect opportunity to re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship with you.

It's up to you whether you want to be in the friend zone with your ex or not.

You are in control over how much or how little attraction she feels for you.

3 Mistakes Guys Make When Trying to Make Peace With an Ex

As you may have realized by now, making peace with your ex is a good idea.

However, if you approach it in the wrong way, it can cause your ex to close up and feel even more negative emotions towards you.

So, to make sure that you get the job done correctly, be sure to avoid these mistakes:

1. Trying to make peace via text, e-mail or letter

When an ex is being stubborn and won't answer your calls or agree to meet up with you, it might seem easier to just apologize to her in writing (e.g. via text, e-mail or letter).

However, rather than make her think, Well, at least he is making an effort to make peace with me. Maybe I should forgive him after all, it usually annoys an ex woman even further.

Why?

She can't see your body language or hear the tonality of your voice, so rather than giving you the benefit of the doubt and assuming that you're being confident and mature, an ex woman will usually think negatively about the approach you are using (i.e. you're too afraid to call her, you're being wimpy and pouring your heart out via e-mail because you're needy and lost without her, you are being way too soppy and romantic towards her even though the feelings aren't mutual at the moment).

Of course, if your ex is totally in love with you and is hoping for any sign that you want her back, then a letter won't ruin your chances with her.

Yet, in pretty much every ex back situation where a guy needs help, his woman is no longer attracted to him anymore and doesn't want to get back together.

In those situations, trying to make peace via a series of texts, a written letter, an e-mail or a long-winded social media message, is not a good idea.

If you want to make peace with her for real, get her on a phone call with you, or better yet, get her to a meet up and talk to her face-to-face.

She will respect you for that.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

2. Trying to make peace in a way that she will see as selfish

Sometimes a guy might try to make peace with his ex by telling her all about his feelings, regrets, needs and wants.

For example: He might say things like, âI feel so terrible for what Iâve done. I canât even sleep or eat thinking about how much I hurt you. I feel so bad all the time. I regret how I handled the end of our relationship and how I treated you near the end. I need you to forgive me so I can stop hating myself. Please just give me a chance to apologize and clear my conscience. It's really weighing me down.â

Essentially, the only reason he wants to make peace is to feel better about himself.

All she's going to be hearing is, âMe, me, me!â which is going to make her resent him even more, rather than give him the gift of forgiveness.

So, if you want to make peace with your ex, focus on doing it in a fair and balanced way.

She needs to feel as though it is of benefit to her to forgive you and make peace with you, rather than it only being about you getting what you want.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

3. Thinking that making peace with her is the main part of getting an ex back

Making peace with your ex is only one part of the ex back process.

To get her back after that, you need to make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you as you talk to her, so she then wants to get the relationship back together for her own reasons.

So, by all means make peace with her, but don't stop there if you want her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Will My Ex Always Think of Me Based On How I Behaved During the Break Up?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends.

Some women will hold onto that negative memory, some will modify the memory over time and not see it as being so bad and other women will miss their ex and want him back regardless of how badly he behaved during and after the break up.

Of course, you don't have to sit around and hope that by some chance, she will be one of those women who miss you.

You can take action now and actively change how your ex thinks about you.

Here are 5 things you can do if you want her back:

1. Get clear on her reasons for ending the relationship

Yes, you didn't react well when she broke up with you, but that's not why the relationship came to an end.

She had other reasons that were compelling her to go through with a break up and then try to move on from you.

So, if you focus on apologizing for how you behaved during the break up, you will be missing the point entirely.

When you apologize, she might then say, "Look, I accept your apology and thank you for saying that. I know you didn't mean to do all those things when we broke up. However, I'm still not interested in us getting back together. We gave it a shot and now it's over. You need to accept that and move on."

She will say that if she can see that you don't really understand why she wanted to break up with you in the first place, or you do understand, but have no idea how to change and improve to re-attract her. So, how about you?

Do you understand your ex's secret, subtle or deeper reasons for ending the relationship?

If you're not quite sure, here are some questions to ask yourself to gain clarity:

Did you pretty much always treat her well (i.e. with respect and love), or did you slip into a habit of treating her badly (e.g. you became too emotional/aggressive/abusive/controlling/selfish) when things didn't go your way or she annoyed you?

Did you keep your promises to her to be a man that she could rely on, or did you often go back on your word (e.g. forget to call, unavailable when she needed you)?

Did you remain emotionally strong and independent in the relationship, or did you end up becoming too clingy, jealous, possessive or needy?

Were you nice and loving towards her in public, but critical or emotionally distant when you were alone?

Were you emotionally fearless, or were you emotionally closed off and unavailable to her because you feared falling in love and getting hurt?

Were you able to maintain her feelings of attraction, or did you become insecure and stop being the cool, confident guy that she met originally?

Once you know where you went wrong, focus on showing your ex that you've moved past the level that you were at when she broke up with you.

When she experiences the new you (i.e. you are now behaving and responding a completely different way to the way she remembers), her guard will naturally come down and she will start thinking of you in a more positive light.

She will feel drawn to you and want to explore her new, fascinating feelings of attraction for you.

The next thing you can do to get her back is to

2. Prepare to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you

If you're asking, "Will my ex always think of me based on how I behaved during the break up?" the answer can either be yes or no, depending on how you approach things from now on.

Yes, if you continue to talk and interact with her in a way that doesn't make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you (e.g. begging, pleading, shouting, getting into arguments, sucking up to her, acting like just a friend, seeming to feel unworthy of her now).

No, if you make her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new and improved man that you've become since the break up.

So, if you want the answer to your question to be, No, it's essential that you prepare yourself to make your ex feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you when you next interact with her.

How can you do that?

Firstly, by changing and improving some of the things that matter to her (e.g. becoming more confident, emotionally open, not taking everything so seriously anymore), so she can naturally feel some respect and attraction for you based on you quickly learning from your mistakes and becoming a better man as a result.

Secondly, stop putting yourself down.

The more you keep thinking things like, "Will my ex always think of me based on how I behaved during the break up?" or "I stuffed up so badly, she will never be able to forget that," the more it will come across in the way you think, act and behave when you are with her (e.g. you're nervous and insecure around her, you put yourself down in front of her, she can sense that you feel unworthy of her now, your body language is now awkward and tense around her).

Rather than feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she will feel even more turned off by you and will want to end the interaction.

So, to fully regain her respect and attraction for you and get her back, you have to believe in yourself and your ability to re-attract her.

Stop assuming that your ex will always be thinking negative things about you and start imagining how happy and surprised she will be when she encounters the new and improved you.

Believe in yourself.

The next thing you can do to get her back is toâ€¦!

3. Get her on a phone call

If things ended badly between you and your ex, you might feel nervous about calling her.

Itâ€™s even possible that youâ€™ve tried to call her already and sheâ€™s not answering your calls.

However, you canâ€™t make any real progress with her until she can interact with you and hear the tonality of your voice (e.g. do you sound confident and self-assured, or do you sound nervous and insecure?).

On a phone call, she can quickly determine for herself that some changes have already taken place.

So, donâ€™t avoid calling her.

If youâ€™ve already tried that and sheâ€™s refusing to answer your call, text her this:

â€œHey! I tried to give you a call earlier/yesterday, but you must have been busy. I just want to ask you something quick over the phone. Donâ€™t worry, itâ€™s nothing serious and I do accept that weâ€™re broken up. Itâ€™s just a quick question. Iâ€™ll call you in 10 mins.â€

If she responds right away and asks something like, â€œWhat do you want to ask me?â€ just call her back right away. Donâ€™t text back!

Alternatively, if she doesnâ€™t respond to you at all, just call her 10 minutes later.

If she still doesnâ€™t answer, leave it for a day and then try to call her again.

If she still doesnâ€™t answer, text her this:

â€œHey! I tried calling you yesterday to ask you this question, but I assume that youâ€™re really busy at the moment. No problem. I might try to get hold of you some other time so I can ask you this question.â€

At this point, she will most likely be curious and wondering what you want to ask her.

She may then either call you to find out what you want, or text you to say that sheâ€™s available for you to call her now.

Then, just pick up the phone and call her.

Once you get her on a call with you, make sure that whatever youâ€™re saying and doing is restoring her feelings of respect and attraction for you again and getting her to think things like, â€œWhat is going on here? Why am I laughing and smiling when I should be telling him to get lost? Iâ€™m actually enjoying myself. I feel so confused. Maybe it's not over between us.â€

From thereâ€¦!

4. Get her to meet up with you

When your ex seems relaxed and open (e.g. after a few more minutes of conversation where youâ€™re making her laugh and smile), you can say, â€œHey, it was good chatting to you again.

Anyway, what I wanted to ask you is for us to catch up for a quick cup of coffee sometime this week.

Of course, Iâ€™m not asking for us to get back together again. I just think it would be nice to catch up as friends to say hello. So, let's catch up this week. I'm going to be busy on Monday and Wednesday, but Tuesday and Thursday are open at the moment. Which of those days suits you best?â€

By the way!

Some women won't instantly agree to meet up with their ex guy, so don't get disheartened if she says something like, "No, I don't think that's a good idea," or even, "Why would I want to do that after the way you behaved during our break up?"

Instead, just maintain your confidence with her and say, "Hey, it's just a coffee. I know that I stuffed up and our romantic relationship is over, but that doesn't mean we can't at least be friendly and share a cup of coffee one time. If you never want to see me again after that, I'll accept your decision and leave you alone."

She will then likely agree (especially if you've been making her laugh and smile during the conversation with you), because she will want to see for herself if you really have changed or not. Then, when you meet up with her!

5. Re-attract her and start a new relationship with her based on her new feelings for you

[image: Re-attract your ex and get her to forget about how badly you behaved during the break up]

At the meet up, focus on showing her (not telling her) that you really have changed and are no longer the guy she broke up with.

For example:

If she is being cold and unfriendly towards you and saying something like, "I shouldn't have come here. This is such a waste of time. Let's just get this over and done with, okay?" rather in a completely different way than you normally would.

For instance, if the old you would react by getting upset, angry, defensive and would then start doubting himself around her, the new you uses her negativity to make her laugh and relax.

When she sees for herself that you really are a new man now, she will naturally start to feel more respect and attraction for you (even if she tries to hide that from you) than she did over the phone.

She will then stop focusing on your past mistakes and start focusing on things about the new version of you that she does like.

As a result, her guard will then come down and she will open back up to you, rather than continuing to push you away because of how you behaved during the break up with her.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Woman Back After Behaving Badly During the Break Up

It's not only you who behaved badly when you got dumped.

Many guys have made the same mistake.

Yet, just because you messed up during the break up, it doesn't mean that you can fix things now.

Unfortunately, most guys don't ever read what you have read here today and as a result, they may end up making one or more of the following mistakes!

1. Feeling unworthy of his ex because of how he behaved during the break up

For example: A guy who behaved badly during the break up with his ex might start thinking things like, “If I was in her position, I’d never forgive me for how I behaved during the break up. I don’t deserve a woman like her. I’m not good enough for her. I will never be able to get her to forgive me and give me another chance. It’s over. I’ve ruined it. I have no chance.”

Yet, what he doesn’t realize is that feeling unworthy of her love only makes him seem less attractive to her (and to other women).

Why?

A woman likes the idea of being with a man she can look up to and feel proud to call her guy based on his confidence, high self-esteem and self-assuredness.

So, when he doesn’t believe in his value to her, everything about him (e.g. his body language and the way he talks, acts, thinks and behaves) comes across in an unattractive way (i.e. nervous, unsure of himself, needy, insecure, low self-esteem).

As a result, his ex feels even more turned off than before.

So, if you want to get your ex back, you have to believe you ARE good enough for her, regardless of the mistakes you made in the past.

If you can’t get to the point where you genuinely believe that you deserve her, neither will she.

Another mistake that guys often make in your position is

2. Assuming that a woman’s feelings can’t be changed

If your ex said something like, “It’s over between us. I will never be able to forgive you for how you behaved during the break up. You killed my feelings for you and nothing you say and do will ever change that,” you might then think, “My case is hopeless. She will never change how she feels and give me another chance. I have no chance. I can never get her back.”

Yet, here’s the thing

Feelings change all the time.

Think about it

There was a time when you and her were complete strangers and she didn’t feeling anything from you.

Then, there was a time when you first started interacting with each other and she began feeling stirrings of attraction and respect for you.

Then, she became your girlfriend and her feelings grew and intensified into love.

Her feelings were constantly changing in a positive direction.

Yet, when you got into a relationship, things gradually started to fall apart bit by bit and her feelings headed along a negative direction.

By the time she decided to break up with you, she was regularly experiencing emotions such as anger, disappointment and regret.

As you can see, your ex’s feelings for you have changed multiple times in the past and they can easily be changed again.

You might feel uncertain of your ability to re-attract her and get her looking at you in a positive light, but you really can do it.

Other guys have gotten their ex woman back after saying or doing much worse than you said or did during the break up.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

3. Waiting too long to make a move and get her back

When a guy really stuffed things up during the break up, he may start to think, â€œMy ex is probably too angry with me at the moment to even consider giving me another chance. So, if I give her some space for a few months, maybe she will calm down and stop thinking of me based on how I behaved during the break up. Then, she might be more open to forgiving me and we can possibly meet up and see where things go from there.â€

Here's the thing thoughâ€¦!

Sometimes a woman can miss her ex and come back to him, simply based on him not doing anything other than giving her space and time to think.

However, in almost all ex back cases that I've seen over the years, if a guy doesn't take action to actively re-attract her and get her back, a woman will focus on getting over him by finding herself a replacement guy.

This is why, if you want your ex back, you shouldn't waste time waiting for her to possibly forgive you and come running back one day.

You can do that if you don't care about getting her back or not, but if you really do want her back, you need to actively interact with her and change how she thinks of you based on how you're behaving now.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex is the Female Version of Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

6 common reasons why this can happen in a relationship between a man and a woman:

1. You have a similar energy

Having a similar energy with a woman can be a good thing, if one of you is clearly masculine and the other is clearly feminine (e.g. you're a cool, masculine guy and she's a cool, masculine girl).

However, if the man and woman are fairly neutral in their energy (e.g. the man is reserved, doesn't express his masculine side and the woman is also reserved and keeps her natural feminine side hidden), the sexual spark will die out and they will feel more like friends.

[image: Losing the spark due to becoming too similar in energy and behavior]

When that happens, a woman might find herself feeling bored in the relationship and wondering why she no longer feels attracted to her man.

Then, when another guy comes along and sparks some of her feelings of sexual attraction again (e.g. a male coworker or a guy that she meets at a club or a party, who is able to bring out her feminine, girly side and make her feel turned on easily), it highlights to her what is missing from the relationship.

As a result, she might then decide to break up with her guy (even though he is the male version of her and even though they get along so well), so she can hook up with a new man who makes her feel attracted and turned on, rather than making her feel boring, neutral emotions all the time.

Of course, this doesn't mean that her ex can't get her back!'

In many cases, because they were so close and got along so well, it's easy to get the relationship back together.

He just needs to know how to create a sexual spark with her again and then know what to say and do to get her back into a relationship with him.

Another legitimate reason why you might feel as though your ex is the female version of you, is!'

2. You have the same, or a very similar level of academic intelligence

Being on the same level academically is one of the main things that draws a couple together, because it allows them to easily connect in a way that suits their level of intelligence.

This is why you will often see two doctors or two lawyers in a relationship with each other, but won't often see a doctor married to a plumber, or a lawyer married to a school teacher, unless of course the man is the lawyer and the woman is the school teacher.

So, one of the reasons why your ex might seem like the female version of you is because she is on the same, or a similar level of intelligence as you are.

However, just because you and her are on the same level academically, it doesn't mean that you will then match up perfectly in other areas of your life (e.g. religious views, family values, future plans).

If there were a lot of those differences between you (e.g. you wanted to keep partying and she wanted to settle down, or vice versa), it could have contributed to the break up.

Of course, that doesn't mean you and her can't work things out.

In fact, having a common base (i.e. a similar academic intelligence) is a good start for getting a relationship back together, because she will know that it will be difficult for her to find another guy who is like you.

There might be other intelligent men out there and they might be cool in other ways, but they won't be intelligent in the way you are and they won't be cool like you.

She will know that and when you interact with her and make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again, she will naturally feel like the relationship probably deserves another chance.

If she doesn't give you another chance right away and you accept that and walk away (important: you have to re-attract her first for 'walking away' to work), then she will regret it and will be missing you.

As a result, she will either contact you or will be open and friendly when you contact her.

Another possible reason why your ex might seem like the female version of you is

3. You and her are about as cool as each other

[image: You and her are about as cool as one another]

For example: You or her might both be

- Confident, self-assured and comfortable in social situations, regardless of what other people think of you.
- A leader in your group of friends, or at work.
- Socially intelligent.
- Easy going and relaxed.
- Comfortable and at ease with who you are as a person.
- A forward thinker who has goals and ambitions that you're working towards.
- Able to stand up for yourself, for others and for what you believe in, while also being respectful to those you're standing up to.
- Well-liked and admired by others.

Alternatively, you or her might both be

- Insecure, self-doubting and always worried about what other people will think or say about you.
- A follower.
- Socially uncomfortable.
- A whiner and complainer.
- Afraid to stand up for yourself and what you believe in.
- Lonely because you don't have many (or any) friends.
- Drifting through life without a plan.
- Anti-social.

There are so many different options, but you get the picture.

You and her might be alike in many ways, which makes you seem as cool as each other.

As a result, you and her would have both been attracted to how similar you were to each other.

You would have felt good that there was someone else like you out there.

Everyone needs that, in order to feel like they are sane, okay and cool, rather than always feeling down on themselves as a result of comparing themselves to everyone else.

Everyone is different.

No one is perfect.

Yet, amongst the millions and billions out there, you and her found each other and got along so well.

Will you find another girl like her?

Only time will tell.

If you want her back, then get on track to making it happen.

Another possible reason why your ex seems like the female version of you is thatâ€¦!

4. You are at the same or similar level of emotional maturity

[image: You are at the same level in terms of maturity]

Being on the same level in terms of emotional maturity makes a couple feel as though they are at the same level in life and understand each other better than other people do.

For example: They might bothâ€¦!

- Be serious about their career and investing in their future.
- Want to settle down, get married and start a family.
- Enjoy going to parties, having fun and living a carefree life, rather than being too serious about life.
- Enjoy traveling and exploring new places and cultures.
- Enjoy taking risks and trying new and exciting things.

So, if you and your ex were at the same level of maturity when you first hooked up, or if you adapted to each other in the relationship to be more similar to each other, then itâ€¦s only natural that you would think sheâ€¦s the male version of you.

However, itâ€¦s also possible that somewhere along the way, your ex matured faster than you (e.g. she got tired of partying and living a carefree life and wanted to focus more on her career or on settling down and starting a family, while you stayed the same), which would be one of the reasons why she decided to break up with you.

Another possible reason why your ex may seem like the female version of you isâ€¦!

5. You and her want the same, or very similar things from life

[image: You and her want the same or similar things from life]

When a man and a woman want the same things in life (e.g. a fulfilling career, to settle down and have a family, to pack everything up and travel the world, to party for life) they will naturally feel attracted to each other and feel as though they are similar in many ways.

Yet, wanting the same things in life doesnâ€¦t guarantee that a relationship will last for life.

For example: Imagine that a couple enjoy traveling and are possibly even travel writers with a travel blog.

This similarity draws them together and makes them feel so much more connected to each other than they've felt with other people.

They then start traveling the world together and writing about it for their blogs.

Yet, as time goes by, the guy starts becoming very insecure, jealous and controlling of the woman.

This behavior starts to annoy her and she gradually starts to lose respect and attraction for him.

Despite their very specific similarities, the relationship falls apart because the guy is unable to maintain control of his emotions and be the kind of man that she can always look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love.

Another possible reason why your ex seems like the female version of you is thatâ

6. You might be ignoring some of the subtle, but fundamental differences between you and her

It's great to have things in common, but it's also the fundamental differences in you and her that make a relationship more interesting, appealing and enjoyable.

For example: If a woman is feminine and girly, she needs her man's masculine direction to allow her to fully relax into being a real woman around him.

She doesn't need is a guy who is gentle and soft and emotionally docile, or who ends up behaving more like her over time.

Initially (i.e. during the first couple of months or even years), it can be fun to be very similar, but after a while, the sexual spark will die out if the guy ends up being more like her and there is no clear, masculine/feminine difference in their individual behavior and energy in the relationship.

For a feminine, girly woman to remain attracted, her man needs to remain confident and manly in his behavior, thinking, actions and attitude.

If he can't do that, it won't matter how many similarities they have or how much fun they once had.

What will matter is that there is no longer much of a sexual spark, which then begin to tear the relationship apart day by day.

Another example is if a woman is very confident and self-assured.

A woman like that needs a man who is more emotionally dominant than her, so she doesn't end up pushing him around and as a result, lose respect and attraction for him for not being man enough for her.

If you try to be the same as your ex, or if you want you and her to be the same in every way except gender, then one of you will gradually lose interest in sex because it will become too predictable and boring.

Remember: It's the subtle differences between you and her that creates the sexual and romantic spark that keeps the respect, attraction and love between you alive for life.

2 Mistakes That Some Men Make When Trying to Get an Ex Woman Back Who is the Female Version of Themselves

Here are 2 mistakes you should avoid making if you want to get an ex back who is a very similar person to you:

1. Trying to convince her to give the relationship another chance because of how well you and her get along as friends

When a woman is saying, *â€œI donâ€™t think we can work things out between us. We should just accept that weâ€™re wrong for each other and move on,*â€œ a guy might then try to convince her that their love is worth fighting for by reminding her of the connection they shared as a couple, or even as friends.

For example: He might say, *â€œYes, weâ€™ve had some problems, but if you just take a minute to think about it, you will see that you and I have so many things in common that you won't be able to find anywhere else. In some ways, you are like the female version of me. We like the same things and feel the same way about pretty much everything in life. Weâ€™re more than a couple, weâ€™re also best friends and soul mates. You're not going to be able to find that anywhere else. I get you and you get me. We're meant for each other.*â€œ

Yet, even though what he is saying might be true, itâ€™s not what will make her want to be in a sexual relationship with him.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

The less feminine and girly a woman feels around her man (i.e. because he ends up thinking, behaving and acting a lot like her, or she ends up copying him), the less sexual attraction she feels for him and the less she wants to be with him.

So, if you want to get your ex back, donâ€™t try to convince her that she should give you another chance based on your friendship and unique connection, because that simply wonâ€™t be enough for her.

For her to truly want to be with you again, she needs to feel more than that.

She needs to feel like a sexy, desirable woman when she interacts with you.

She needs to feel a new, fascinating spark of sexual attraction for you, based on how you now talk to her, behave around her and get her to behave around you.

Thatâ€™s what works.

If you only focus on how well you get along as friends and how similar you are to each other, then there wonâ€™t be a strong, compelling reason for her to want you back sexually and romantically.

Instead, she might say something along the lines of, *â€œYouâ€™re right. We are great friends and I enjoyed what we used to have. Yet, I think we should just focus on just being friends from now on. What we had is over. I can't see us ever being able to get back together.*â€œ

She will say that based on the fact that you're not making her feel sexually attracted and turned on as you talk to her.

So, if you want her to want a sexual relationship, you need start flirting with her and making her experience feelings of respect, sexual attraction, arousal and romantic love for you again.

If you do that, she will then be able to say, “Well, maybe we can try again. I’m not sure, but we can try. Let’s just take it slow” and you then get to a kiss, sex and back into a relationship with her because she will have opened herself up to it to see how she feels.

The next thing you know, you and her will be back in a relationship and happier than ever before, because you will now have an improved ability to make her feel the kind of respect, attraction and love that will keep your relationship together.

Another mistake the guys make in your situation isâ€¦|

2. Thinking that the secret to a happy relationship is to be the same

It’s great to be in sync with the woman you love (i.e. understand her, connect with her, grow with her), but it’s not great to be the same as her.

A man has to be a man and allow his woman to be a woman, rather than trying to make both of them be pretty much the same as each other.

For example: A woman can be very emotional and she might even cry or get upset when sheâ€¦s under stress, or even for no reason at all and itâ€¦s perfectly okay for her to do that.

In most cases, her man wonâ€¦t look at her getting emotional and think, “Sheâ€¦s so wimpy. Thatâ€¦s so unattractive to me. I want a woman who is emotionally strong and doesnâ€¦t lose control of her emotions for no good reason. I want a confident woman who controls her emotions like a man!”

Instead, he will understand that she is a woman and let her express her emotions like a girl.

However, the same isnâ€¦t true for a woman if she sees her guy crying.

It’s politically correct for women to say, “It’s okay for men to cry” when asked in public, but privately, almost all women are turned off when a man cries in response to life getting tough or him being emotional about something trivial that happened in his life.

She will lose respect and attraction for him as she thinks, “Why is he being so emotionally sensitive? Doesnâ€¦t he realize that crying when life gets tough isn’t what real men do? His wimpy behavior makes me feel like I have to be the more emotionally stronger one in this relationship and take care of him. I don’t want to be ‘the man’ in the relationship. I want to be the girl and see that he can be the man. I want a man that remains confident, emotionally strong and emotionally secure no matter what happens in life. When he cries like this, it just convinces me that weâ€¦re just not compatible. Even though weâ€¦re alike in many ways, itâ€¦s just not enough to make me want to stay with him. I have to get out of this relationship and find a man who doesn’t break down when life gets tough.”

As you can see, it’s fine to have similarities with a woman in a relationship, but it’s not a good idea to end up thinking, behaving or acting like her.

Likewise, it’s not a good idea to push her to think, behave and act like you if you are a very manly guy.

You’ve got to let her be a girl, while you get on with being the man.

Most women will never admit that in public, but it’s what they want.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 Examples of How to Get Your Ex Girlfriend to Talk to You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 examples of how you can get your ex girlfriend to talk to you again:

1. Call her and if she doesn't answer, text her thisâ€¦!

In terms of re-attracting your ex girlfriend, talking to her on a phone call will get you much quicker results than if you just texted her.

So, try to call her and if she doesn't answer, text her thisâ€¦!

â€œHeyâ€¦I accept that weâ€¦ve broken up, but I want to ask you something quick over the phone. Donâ€¦t worry, itâ€¦s nothing serious of course. Iâ€¦ll call you in 10 minutes.â€¦

Then, try to call her 10 minutes later.

If she doesnâ€¦t answer, donâ€¦t keep calling again and again.

She will probably text you that day or the next, but if she doesn't, just wait for a day or two and then try calling her again.

If she doesn't answer and then texts you something like, â€œWhat do you want?â€¦ or, â€œI donâ€¦t have time for this! Just ask what you want via text and be done with it,â€¦ don't panic or worry.

Just call her.

If she still wonâ€¦t answer, text her this:

â€œLook, I know youâ€¦re really busy, but what I need to ask you is best done over the phone. Iâ€¦ll call you in 5 minutes. After that, if you decide that you donâ€¦t want anything more to do with me, I promise I wonâ€¦t bother you again.â€¦

Then, just pick up the phone and call her.

If she has been reluctant to get on a call, but notices that you're not backing down, she will naturally be curious to find out what you want to ask her, so she will want to answer the phone.

BTW: What you want to ask her is to meet up with you in person, but you canâ€¦t ask her that right away.

Instead, when she answers your call, start off by using some humor to break the ice and bring down her defenses a bit.

For example: You might say something along the lines of, â€œWow! Getting a phone call with you is harder than getting through to the president!â€¦ or, “Finally! Okay, I wanted to order a pepperoni pizza. This is Pizza Hut, right?” or, “Oh, you finally answered! I was about to give up and sent a stripogram (a service where you can send a stripper to someone's house to do a bit of striptease at their door and deliver a message) to your house instead” or, “Well, someone is difficult to get on the phone isn't she?” and have a laugh with her about that.

From there, continue to focus on making her laugh and smile so she starts feeling good to be talking to you again.

She might pretend to be annoyed at you initially just to maintain her self image of not wanting to talk on the phone, but don't be put off by that.

Just relax and open up a conversation that feels light-hearted, easy-going, but also mature and sensible at the same time.

It's okay to add in some humor, but don't go overboard to the point where you're just being silly the whole time.

Just add in humor like you'd add in pepper to a dish you're cooking, or sugar in a coffee if you add sugar (I personally don't. I drink black coffee with nothing added, or Americano style with added water).

Anyway, just make sure that you aren't afraid to talk a little, rather than panicking and feeling like you're under a lot of pressure to say everything in 5 seconds.

Kind of like I did there when I mentioned how I take my coffee.

I don't normally do that in articles, but I thought I would here to let you know that it's okay at times.

However, if a person feels like you are wasting their time by continually talking about things that aren't relevant, they will then get annoyed.

So, when you talk to her on the phone, be confident enough to withstand her potential frustration of having to talk to you.

Don't let her disinterested attitude make you panic and rush through everything you want to say in 10 seconds.

Instead, break the ice by making her laugh and then try to keep the conversation light-hearted and easy-going and then get to what you wanted to ask her (i.e. to meet up with you).

If she initially says, "No" it will often be a test to see if you will lose confidence, or it will be her trying to pretend that she wouldn't meet up with you, so she doesn't look too easy initially.

Just remain confident, easy-going and light-hearted and get her to meet up with you no matter what.

Another way to get your ex girlfriend to be interested in or open to talking to you again, is to

2. Post photos on social media of you having fun with other people, so she can see that you're not desperate without her

Many men make the mistake of trying to appear lonely, sad or lost after a break up, in the hopes that it makes his ex woman feel sorry for him and realize that, unlike other guys, he is completely dedicated to her no matter what.

It sounds like he is doing the right thing, but he isn't.

Women are attracted to men who are confident, happy and forward moving in life with or without their woman.

When a woman sees that her ex man is happy and getting on with his life without her, it actually makes her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

Some guys worry that it will annoy her or make her angry and yes, in some cases it does (i.e. she is angry that she no longer has control over him and annoyed that she no longer has as much power over him as she once thought she did), but what those guys don't realize is that she will ALSO feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him at the same time.

Being able to handle a woman's initial anger, tantrum, frustration or complaints is one of the keys to maintaining the position of power in a relationship.

If a man is afraid of his woman's potential reaction, then she won't be able to feel proper attraction for him.

She will always secretly resent him for fearing her reaction and placing her above him in terms of dominance.

As a result, she will feel attracted to other men who aren't afraid of her reactions and who seem to have the ability to be able to maintain the position of power in a relationship with a woman.

So, if you want to make your ex girlfriend feel open to talking to you again, don't be afraid to make her jealous via social media.

If she isn't your friend on social media or isn't following you, just make sure that the photos are public so she can see them from the outside.

BTW: This approach also works if your ex has blocked your phone number.

Pretty much every woman will check on her ex from time to time by looking at his social media profiles.

If she stops by and sees that nothing is going on in your life, she will feel happy and confident about herself as she moves on without you.

On the other hand, if she sees that you're happy, confident and enjoying life by hanging out with new people and doing new things, she will naturally feel drawn to you and want to talk to you again.

So, make sure that you update all of your social media profiles and avoid posting sad, lonely photoâs of yourself or loads of memes about random things that show that you've got nothing to do and are simply wasting time at home alone.

Another example of how to get your ex girlfriend to want to talk to you again isâ

3. Use humor to get her laughing via text, then call her

One of the biggest mistakes that guys make is being too serious (i.e. discussing the relationship, being too polite, trying to work things out) or desperate (i.e. asking for another chance, pleading with her to change her mind, pouring his heart out) with their ex woman via text.

Texts are so damn easy to send that it almost seems like it's the right way to communicate about everything these days.

Texts are great when someone likes you (i.e. a girlfriend, a friend or a family member), but when someone doesn't like you (i.e. an ex girlfriend, an enemy), texts are not a good idea.

Texts can easily be misinterpreted in a negative light and if someone has negative feelings towards you, they will almost always look at your texts as being annoying, as causing them stress and as being unwanted.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that when texting their ex girlfriend.

For example: A guy might try to have a serious conversation with her via text as a way of showing her that heâs committed to fixing things between them and getting her back.

Alternatively, he might send her desperate messages like, âPlease just talk to me. I need to explain to you what went wrong,â or âI can't fix things between us if you won't talk to me. Please give me a chance to make things right. Stop being like this! Just talk to me! After all we've been through, don't turn your back on me like this. I love you. Please just talk to me!â

Texts like that make a woman not want to talk to her ex.

She thinks something like, “Why won’t he leave me alone? Can’t he see that I don’t want to talk to him? He’s being so whiny and desperate that it only highlights to me even more that he’s not the guy I want to be with.”

So, if you want your ex girlfriend to talk to you, focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good when she is texting with you.

She can then begin to think something like, “This is interesting. I’m actually laughing and enjoying texting with him. I like hearing from him now. Maybe I should talk to him again on the phone or in person to see if he has really changed, or if it’s just an act via text.”

She then becomes more open to the idea of talking to you on the phone.

On a phone call and in person, you then properly re-attract her by allowing her to experience the new and improved man that you’ve become.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex to Talk Girlfriend to Them Again

Getting an ex girlfriend to talk to you again and getting her back is possible (and often easy), but if you make one or more of the following mistakes, then the process becomes more difficult.

Here’s where other guys mess up when in your situation!

1. Cutting off communication and waiting for months or years for her to hopefully contact him

Sometimes, when a guy is trying to get his ex girlfriend to talk to him and she’s ignoring him (i.e. by not answering his calls, or responding to his texts, e-mails or social media messages), he might make the mistake of thinking that if he ignores her back for 30 to 60 days, she will eventually start to miss him and make her reach out to him.

Yet, in most cases, that tactic just doesn’t work.

Why?

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it’s usually because she has lost respect and attraction for him over time.

So, unless she’s secretly still in love with him and is hoping that they’ll get back together, or if she’s having a difficult time finding a replacement guy, him ignoring her for weeks or months isn’t going to make her lose any sleep.

If she cares a little bit, she might think to herself, “I wonder what’s happened to my ex? He was so desperate to talk to me and now he’s suddenly gone quiet. That’s weird.”

However, if she believes that he can’t or won’t change and become a better man (i.e. the kind of guy she can look up to, respect and feel proud of) she’s just going to focus on moving on quickly and finding herself a replacement guy who can make her feel like that.

Here’s the thing!

If your ex girlfriend doesn’t have romantic feelings for you, then cutting all contact with her for a long period of time isn't a good idea.

Why?

In most cases, it's just going to make it easier for her to fully get over you, move on, hook up with another guy and even fall in love again.

If you don't want that to happen, don't make the mistake of ignoring her and hoping that she comes back.

Get in touch with her, re-attract her and make her want you back.

No matter what she does to put you off, just maintain your confidence around her and focus on using every interaction you have with her to quickly reawaken her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

As a result, her guard will come down and she will feel drawn to you again, which will make her want to talk to you.

That approach works better than ignoring her, because ignoring her means that you run the risk of her moving on to make herself feel better.

Then, if she meets a new man that she finds more attractive and interesting, she will simply continue moving on with him.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Annoying her via text

Texts can be annoying when the person who is sending you texts isn't someone that you like.

You might have good intentions and be a good guy, but it just doesn't matter to a woman when she's no longer feeling respect, attraction and love for you.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that, so they end up annoying their ex girlfriend via text and then either getting blocked, or causing her to say something like, "Leave me alone. I don't want to be with you anymore."

For example: Here are some of the ways a guy might annoy his ex girl via text

- Texting her too much.
- Talking about the relationship.
- Being too nice and sweet to her.
- Appearing insecure and doubtful.
- Asking her too many questions.
- Trying to have an in-depth conversation via text.

She ends up thinking something like, "This is so annoying. Why is he bothering me like this? Can't he see that I don't want to talk to him anymore? He just can't get it through his head that I'm not interested in anything he has to say. If I wasn't convinced about the break up before, I am now. His behavior has proven to me that I made the right decision to break up with him. He doesn't know how to make me want him. He has just become so annoying and off-putting. Maybe I should block him and just get on with my life."

So, if you don't want to end up annoying your ex girlfriend, don't waste time trying to work things out with her via text.

The main reason you should be texting her is to get her on a phone call with you, so you can then re-attract her and get her to meet up with you in person.

On a phone call, it's so much easier for her to see that you've changed and improved since the break up.

As she listens to you talk and is smiling and laughing at times, she realizes that things are good between you and her and you're not pressuring her into giving you another chance.

Instead, you and her are just enjoying talking to each other like you back when things were good between you and her.

As a result, she becomes more open to seeing you in person and exploring her new, fascinating feelings for you.

Another mistake that guys often make in your situation is

3. Asking her why she won't reply to him anymore

When a guy doesn't get an answer from his ex, he might text her to ask, "Why won't you respond to me anymore? What did I do wrong? Please talk to me."

If she doesn't reply, he might then say, "Why are you being like this? I love you. I want to work things out. Why aren't you replying to me?"

She then feels more turned off by him because he is essentially saying, "Hey, I don't know how to make you feel enough respect and attraction for me to want to communicate with me via text. Please tell me what I need to do to change that."

Yet, rather than make her think, "I owe him an explanation. I'm going to call him so that we can talk. I have to explain what has been turning me off, so he can then fix that and get me back" it usually only makes her close herself off even more.

Why?

If a woman breaks up with a guy because he lost her respect, attraction and love, she usually won't feel motivated to want to help him get her back.

If he can't figure out how to get her respect, attraction and love back, she will just get over him by moving on with someone else.

Another mistake that guys make in your situation is

4. Not talking to her on the phone or in person, so she can experience the changes in him for herself

No matter how much easier it might seem to text your ex girlfriend, if you don't get her on a phone call and then meet up with her in person, getting her back will be very difficult.

Until she can hear the tone of your voice, see your body language and experience your confidence in relation to how she behaves and responds towards you during a conversation (e.g. when she's being bitchy, cold, telling you that she hates you), she won't believe that you have changed.

In most cases, a woman will continue ignoring you until you can convince her (based on the changes you've made and how that makes her feel when she interacts with you) that seeing you again is going to be worth her while.

You can't make her feel all that via text.

You've got to do it on a phone call and in person.

When you're in person with her, you can quickly re-attract her, build up sexual tension between you and her and then at least get to a hug and possibly a kiss.

Once that happens, she naturally starts to feel drawn to you and wants to explore her new, fascinating feelings for you.

Before you know it, you and her are back together, in love and happier than ever.

Every day, all over the world, men get their ex woman back by approaching it in that way.

Do you think you can do it?

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get My Ex to Look Past My Mistakes and See That I'm Different Now

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 things you can do to make that happen:

1. Understand her secret reasons for breaking up with you

When a guy is asking, â€œHow can I get my ex to look past my mistakes and see that Iâ€™m different now?â€ he usually thinks that he already knows what he did wrong to cause her to break up with him.

Yet, in almost all ex back cases, a guy will only know some of his exâ€™s reasons for breaking up with him, but not all of her reasons.

Quite often, a woman will nag about obvious things in the relationship that are turning her off, but will never mention the smaller, subtle things that annoy her just as much or even more.

For example: A guy might lack direction and focus in his life.

He doesnâ€™t have any goals that heâ€™s working towards and as a result, he doesn't strive to achieve anything in his spare time.

He likes to waste his time watching TV, playing video games, drinking, getting high or hanging out with friends.

There's nothing wrong with a guy doing any of those things and almost all women will accept it, as long as the guy is also making real progress towards his goals and dreams in life.

So, if a guy isn't making a lot of progress in life and is happy to just live paycheck to paycheck, it doesn't give a woman a lot of confidence about a long-term future with him.

As a result, this may lead to her nagging him and start arguments by saying something like, â€œWhy don't you take like more seriously? Canâ€™t you see that we need some more structure and security in our life? I don't feel like I can depend on you, because youâ€™re basically going nowhere in life. If you donâ€™t start improving your life and getting serious about things, Iâ€™m going to break up with you soon. I just canâ€™t take this uncertainty anymore. Itâ€™s driving me crazy. My girlfriends have a boyfriend or husband that is making progress in life and rising up to new levels. All you seem to do is pass levels in a video game/drink and relax on the weekends/hang out with your buddies. You have to start making changes, otherwise I am leaving.â€

Although that will be one of her main reasons for breaking up with him, it won't be the only thing that is annoying her.

For example: She might also be turned off by the fact that he lacks the ability to stand up for himself during arguments.

When sheâ€™s being unreasonable and creating unnecessary drama about something, he gets flustered, lets her walk all over him and says things like, â€œIâ€™m sorry! You know I hate upsetting you. Just tell me what you want me to do to make you happy and Iâ€™ll do it.â€

Yet, what he doesnâ€™t realize is that when he says something like that to her, it just annoys her even more.

She doesn't want to be with a guy that she can walk all over.

She wants a good man who will treat her well, but who also knows how to put her back in her place (in a dominant, but loving way) if she is out of line.

So, if he can't ever offer her that ideal relationship experience, she will secretly feel resentful towards him about it.

In many cases, a woman won't want to admit that to the man she is breaking up with, in case he gets the wrong idea and starts trying to put her back in her place in a dominant, unloving way.

The way that most women approach relationships is that they try to find a man who understands how to be a man, so she can then get on with being his loving, devoted woman.

If a man doesn't get it, she will nag, complain, lose interest in being affectionate and pull away in the hope that he feels motivated enough to go and learn, change and start being the kind of man that she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to, love and be completely devoted to.

If he doesn't change, she will break up with him and when she does, he might then assume it is due to the obvious problem that she has been unhappy about (e.g. his lack of direction in life).

He might then promise to start aiming to get promoted, start the project he has been putting off or go to night school to learn the skills he needs to level up in life, but it won't impress her because there are other, usually more important, subtle things that have been turning her off.

By the wayâ€¦!

This is why, in Get Your Ex Back Super System, I explain the more than 70 secret reasons why a woman will break up with a man and how you can get her back, by understanding what she wants, making the change and then re-attracting her.

So, if you want to successfully re-attract your ex and get her back, you first need to understand her hidden reasons for breaking up with you (e.g. you weren't manly enough in your behavior, you became too emotionally sensitive, you weren't able to give her the kind of attraction experience she really wanted because you were afraid of fearlessly expressing yourself).

When you understand what actually matters to her and make those changes, she then feels understood, surprised and curious to explore her new feelings of attraction for you.

As a result, you can get her to look past your mistakes and see that you really are different now.

Another way to get her to see that you're different now is toâ€¦!

2. Fix the subtle things about you that still turn her off

Some guys try hard to get their ex woman back by going to the gym and working out, buying new clothes or being extra nice to her.

Yet, if she is turned off by more important, subtle things, then improving your appearance or being nicer to her isn't going to get her back.

For example: If one of the secret reasons why a woman broke up with her man was because he was too serious all the time and couldn't relax and have a bit of lighthearted fun, she might test to see if he's changed by telling him of all the silly things she's been doing since they split up.

If he looks disapproving or uncomfortable and maybe says something like, â€œYou're just messing around with your life. You always want to just be silly and not take things serious.

Meanwhile, Iâ€™ve doing my best here to change and improve so we can have a chance at a better relationship. Donâ€™t you care? Why don't you stop acting like a child and start being a grown up. We've broken up and all you seem to want to do is be silly with your friendsâ€” she will know he still hasn't changed.

On the other hand, if he laughs at her frivolousness and says something along the lines of, â€œCool! Sounds like youâ€™ve been having fun. Iâ€™m sorry I missed it. Maybe you can take me with next time you go do that,â€” she can then think something like, â€œHmmmâ€”thatâ€™s odd. He never said that to me when we were together. Could it be possible that heâ€™s actually lightened up and become a more relaxed and easy-going guy? Is he just putting on an act to get me back? Either way, I like the new him.â€”

Another example is where a woman broke up with a guy because he was too nice to her and as a result, allowed her to dominate him emotionally (e.g. she could easily order him around, she always got her way, she treated him badly and demanded nice treatment from him in return and he gave it to her because he feared losing her).

To see if he is still an emotional wimp that she can walk all over, she might say something like, â€œIâ€™m sorry, but I canâ€™t see myself with you again. I just canâ€™t look past the mistakes you made in the relationship. I'm done.â€”

If he then begins to apologize and beg and plead with her to see that really is different now, she will know that she is still more emotionally dominant than him and as a result, will continue to feel turned off by him.

On the other hand, if he just laughs it off and doesnâ€™t get rattled like he used to, she will realize that he really has changed and she will naturally drop her guard and allow herself to open up to him again.

For example: He can laugh and say, “I can't see myself with you either. All those mistakes you made in the relationship are just unforgivable. You were the worst girlfriend ever!” and then have a laugh with her about that.

If he remains confident as he says it and as she reacts to it, she will see that he has already begun to man up and isn't the emotionally wimpy guy that she dumped.

So, in your situation, when your ex can see that you not only understand the subtle things that were turning her off, but have already changed them, she will automatically feel respect for you, even if she doesnâ€™t openly admit it.

When she feels respect for you, she will naturally become open to feeling attracted to you again as well.

When that happens, you can build on her feelings of love for you and guide her back into a relationship.

The next thing you can do to get your ex to look past your mistakes and see that youâ€™re different now, is toâ€”

3. Interact with her and attract her in new ways

If you don't interact with your ex on a phone call or in person, you won't be able to get her to truly experience the changes in you, feel attracted to them and then look past your mistakes.

So, regardless of how worried you are about her potentially not wanting to, make sure that you get her on a phone call, or preferably meet up with her in person, where you can let her experience the new and improved version of you for herself.

When youâ€™re interacting with her, ensure that whatever youâ€™re saying and doing is sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you, rather than turning her off.

For example: Ask yourselfâ€”

Do you make your ex feel respect and attraction by maintaining your confidence around her regardless of how difficult she being, or do you turn her off by being self-doubting and insecure?

Do you make her feel feminine and girly by being emotionally masculine around her, or does she dominate you because you let her call the shots or lead the dynamic between you and her?

Do you make her laugh and smile when you interact with her, or does she feel tense, annoyed or bored?

Do you laugh at her (in a loving way) when she brings up your past mistakes and blames you for everything, or do you put yourself down and become gentle and submissive around her?

Can she see that youâ€™ve changed and improved some of the things about you that were turning her off (e.g. insecurity, lack of confidence, inability to stand up for yourself), or are you essentially still stuck at the same level you were at when you broke up?

These are the actions and behaviors that will convince your ex that you are different now and make her become interested in being a couple again.

So focus on that.

The next thing you can do to get your ex to look past your mistakes and see that youâ€™re different now is toâ€”

4. Stop trying to get her to want a relationship and just focus on making her feel sexual and romantic attraction

The main reason why you want your ex to look past your mistakes and see that youâ€™re different now is because you want her back.

It's about you getting what you want.

Yet, if you want your ex back, you have to focus on allowing her to get what she wants from her interactions with you (i.e. a renewed feeling of respect, attraction and love for you, a new desire for you, a feeling of being drawn to you again and wanting to explore her new feelings for you).

So, if you want her back, you have to take the pressure of her to commit to the idea of having a relationship with you and instead, focus on making her feel re-attracted to you and drawn to you for her own reasons.

If you donâ€™t rebuild her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you first, she will just keep saying things like, â€œForget about it. I donâ€™t want to be in a relationship with you. It's over. Whatâ€™s done is done and itâ€™s time that we accept that weâ€™re not right for each other and move on. Please just accept that and stop pushing me to give you another chance. Goodbye.â€

So, donâ€™t make the mistake of pushing your ex for a relationship and making her feel as though you're just trying to get what you want.

If you really want her to give you another chance, then focus on making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

You can do that by maintaining your confidence around her, regardless of what she's saying and doing to push you away or make you doubt yourself.

When she sees that you remain confident in yourself no matter what, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and will wonder how you are managing to maintain such control over your emotions.

You can show your maturity and self-control by saying something along the lines of, Hey, I'm glad that we're friends now and nothing else. It's so much easier to get along with each other now without all the pressure to be a couple, don't you agree?

By behaving in those ways, you're taking the pressure off her to give you another chance right away and are allowing her to experience the new and improved you for herself, at her own pace.

She then stops putting up walls every time you interact with her, because she doesn't feel like you're forcing her to get back together.

This allows her to stop being so defensive around you and start seeing you with fresh (more positive) eyes.

As long as you continue to build on her feelings of respect and attraction for you during every interaction, without pressuring her to give you another chance, she will drop her guard and even start to feel open to the idea of being in a relationship with you again.

3 Mistakes That Some Guys Make When Trying to Convince Their Ex That They Are Different Now

It is entirely possible to get your ex to look past your mistakes and see that you're different now. However, for that to happen, you have to focus on doing the types of things that will bring down her walls and open her up to feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, rather than making her close off even more.

For example: Here are common mistakes that guys make in your situation:

1. Thinking that the ex back process is all up to her

Sometimes a guy might feel so bad for what happened between him and his ex girl, that he allows her to call the shots after the break up.

He may think something like, I stuffed up so badly that I don't know if she can ever forgive me. I don't have any right to expect to be forgiven. I'm the one who ruined things, so it will have to be up to her to decide if she can ever look past my mistakes and give me another chance. Hopefully when she sees how sincere I'm being, she will feel sorry for me and give me a chance to prove myself to her.

Yet, here's what he doesn't understand:

A man actually has a lot of control over the ex back process if he focuses on making his ex woman have sexual and romantic feelings for him for again.

When she feels that way, she naturally begins to want him back for her own reasons (i.e. She worries that if she doesn't give him a chance, she will regret it. She feels curious about her new feelings for him and wants to explore them. She feels turned on by the new way he approaches conversations and interactions with her and doesn't want to ignore that).

He can then get her back much more easily because she is open to being seduced by him and seeing what happens.

On the other hand, if a guy focuses on trying to convince her to give him a chance by promising that things will be different, he will have little to no power over the ex back process.

So, don't make the mistake of thinking it's all up to your ex whether you get back together.

If you want her to give your relationship another try, you have to be courageous enough to take the lead and get her back.

Another mistake that other guys make in your situation is

2. Trying to explain everything in a letter, e-mail or series of texts messages

Many guys try to apologize and explain what went wrong in the relationship or in their approach with her, in a long letter, e-mail or series of text messages.

He hopes that it will make her think something along the lines of, "I love that he's sending me long letters/e-mails/texts to explain himself. It's all so romantic. It's like being in a movie where the hero pours his heart out to a woman and she realizes that he really does love her."

"That's all I've really wanted from him, for him to tell me that he cares. It's now clear that he is truly sorry for what happened, so I can forgive him and put all my negative feelings behind me. All of his past mistakes mean nothing compared to the love he has for me via text/email/letter. I see that now. This changes everything! I want him back!"

Yet, here's the thing

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, anything that he says to her via letter, e-mail or text will generally be taken the wrong way.

Instead of believing that he has changed, a woman will usually assume the worst (e.g. he was feeling insecure when he wrote it, he's a wimp for not saying that to her in person before, he's trying to trick her into feeling sorry for him, he is only saying that he understands, but in reality, he is still exactly the same guy who would make exactly the same mistakes).

Rather than give him the benefit of the doubt (i.e. because she doesn't have feelings for him), she will instead read the message and imagine it coming from the exact version of him that she recently broke up with.

So, if you want to make your woman change her mind about breaking up with you, it's essential that you talk to her on a phone call in person, rather than making the mistake of hiding behind letters, e-mails or texts.

In person or on a phone call, you can more easily re-attract her by allowing her to experience the new and improved man that you are now.

Another mistake that guys often make in your situation is

3. Appearing desperate or needy for another chance

Women don't want to reward emotional weakness and desperation with love, affection, sex and devotion.

Women are instinctively programmed to be attracted to emotionally strong men who have the confidence and determination to get what they want in life, without groveling or begging for it.

So, when her ex guy is being desperate and needy, her instincts will naturally cause her to start thinking things like, “He’s too emotionally wimpy for you. He doesn’t have the emotional strength needed to make you feel protected and safe in a relationship. It’s good that you broke up with him. Keep it that way. Move on.”

On the other hand, when a woman’s ex guy is in control of his emotions and is able to be confident and self-assured as he interacts with her, her instincts naturally cause her to feel respect and some attraction to his behavior.

As a result, her guard comes down a little and if he knows how to immediately build on her feelings as he talks to her, her guard will come down further.

She will then know for herself that he really is different now.

As a result, she will open herself up to her new feelings and see what happens.

At that point, a man has to know what to say and do to get another chance with her.

If he does, the relationship will get back together.

If he doesn’t, she will continue saying, “I just can’t look past what happened. We had our chance and it’s over now.”

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Removing Ex Safety Net: 5 Ways to Do it

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you've become your ex's safety net, it's best to take that away from her and cause her to feel like she has to give you another chance now, or else she will lose you.

Of course, you don't just say that to her because giving an ultimatum of, "Be with me in a relationship or nothing" doesn't work on a woman who isn't attracted to you anymore.

You have to approach the ex back like a man for it to work on a woman.

So, here are 5 things you can do to stop being her safety net and start being her number one man:

1. Stop looking at yourself as her back up plan

You're not.

You are her number one option.

You are the best option for her and other guys just don't compare.

That's how you need to think about yourself.

Don't tell her that, because telling a woman that she should see you as her number one option doesn't work.

Instead, you have to believe it and then based on that belief in yourself, you will exude the type of confidence that will make her feel attracted and see you as a man that she still really wants to be with.

So, if your ex has been keeping you around as her safety net, it's probably because you've been giving her the impression that you are willing to be a back up plan.

You're so afraid of losing her and you think that she is more valuable than you are, so you are willing to accept whatever she is giving you, just so you can stay in contact with her and hopefully get another chance with her.

That doesn't work on women.

Women are turned off by desperation and neediness in men.

So, you need to stop looking at yourself as a back up plan and start believing that you are the best man she could ever find.

Don't place yourself in the friend zone with her by thinking that you're not good enough for her.

You are.

You are more than good enough for her.

Unfortunately, most guys out there don't search around and find the information that you are reading now, so they end up accepting the position of being a 'maybe' option for her, rather than making her feel compelled to give him another chance right now.

For example: A guy might think, "If I just let her have her freedom for a while, she might date a couple of guys, get hurt and then realize what she had with me wasn't that bad after all. Then, she'll come back to me where she knows it's safe and we start again."

That plan could work, but what if it backfires?

What if she falls in love with a new guy, gets into a serious relationship with for years and doesn't ever want to go back to you?

Then what?

Are you just going to wait around for many months or even years, hoping that she will come back, while dating women that you're not as attracted to?

Are you going to spend the next 3-5 years of your life feeling miserable, missing her and wishing that you did something about getting her back, rather than accepting being her safety net?

Here's the thing!

Even though it might feel nice to be her safety net right now, it's not going to feel nice when she moves on.

Additionally, by allowing her to use you as a back up option, you're actually making her lose even more respect and attraction for you as a man (i.e. she feels like she's more valuable than you, she feels turned off by your desperation for anything she can offer you).

As a result, you reduce the chance of getting her back and you end up making yourself feel horrible the whole time.

So, if you want to get your ex back for real, stop looking at yourself as her back up plan and start seeing yourself as being the love of her life.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by!

- Becoming more confident and self-assured about your attractiveness and value to her, rather than feeling insecure and anxious around her.
- Seeing yourself as more than good enough for her, rather than thinking she's better than you and accepting any crumbs of attentions she's willing to throw your way.
- Adding to your strengths and improving your weaknesses, rather than staying the same and expecting her to be happy with it.
- Improving your ability to make her feel like an attractive, sexy woman in your presence, rather than like a neutral friend.
- Being more manly in how you think, behave, talk and act, rather than allowing her to dominate you with her confident personality.
- Stopping the pointless, friendly texting conversations that you have with her and getting to a kiss, sex and back into a relationship by talking to her in person and making her feel attracted to you again.

When you start making her feel sexually attracted to you again, it then gives you the confidence to say, "No," when she tries to use you as her back up plan (e.g. she calls you she's lonely and asks if you will talk to her, she asks you to attend an event with her so she isn't alone, she asks you to be a good friend to her and help her with her bills, an errand or something else that she's struggling with). When you have the confidence to not accept the scraps that she is giving you, something amazing happens.

Not only do you feel better about not being your ex's safety net anymore, but you instantly become more attractive to her as a result.

She stops thinking of you as her good, old reliable, boring ex who she can push around and starts to see you in a more positive light (i.e. because you're being an assertive, masculine man).

She then starts to feel surges of respect for you again.

When that happens, she feels attracted again and when she respects and feels attracted to you, her guard comes down and she opens herself up to being your girl again for real.

Of course, if she's like most women, she will want to test whether the changes in you are real.

So, be prepared for her to initially act like she is angry or disappointed with you for no longer being the way you were before.

She might even threaten to never speak to you again and if she does, you need to just laugh and say, "Okay, if that's what you want, no problem. Goodbye."

She will then realize that you're no longer willing to be pushed around by her, but you are still a good, loving guy.

As a result, she will regret being so selfish, feel respect for you for not backing down and feel attracted to you for handling the situation like a man.

She will then text you, call you or reach out to you on social media and try to get things going between you and her again.

By the way!|

If the thought of that scares you and you are worried of potentially losing her if you stop being her helpful friend or back up plan ex, then you're doing it wrong.

Remember: Women don't respect guys who are afraid of them. Women don't feel attracted to guys who are desperate and needy for them.

You have to understand those truths about women and act upon them.

If you don't, women will never truly respect you or feel attracted to you and you will always end up getting rejected or broken up with.

You have to see the current break up that you're going through as a perfect opportunity for you to improve yourself as a man.

See it as a wake up call that is urging you to stop allowing yourself to be walked all over by women and start being the type of man that women respect, feel attracted to and love.

When you accept that challenge and rise up to meet it, you will not only re-attract your ex and get her back, but you will end up being such a better version of yourself that you can then feel proud of.

Your life will change in so many positive ways.

All you have to do is be willing to level up as a man.

If you are willing to do that and then quickly begin doing it, everything will change for you in so many positive ways.

You will see.

Another thing you can do to take away your ex's safety net is!|

2. Confidently interact with her and make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you

The best way to make an ex woman want you back for real, is to interact with her and actively make her feel sparks of respect and sexual attraction for you.

Allow her to experience the new and improved version of you for herself and she will then drop her defenses and begin to reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again.

How can you do that?

Imagine that you're on the phone with your ex and she starts telling you about a new man she's interested in.

The old you (i.e. the safety net guy), would listen to her without complaint and possibly even offer a few words of advice here and there, as a way of showing her what a nice, reliable guy you are and how much you care about her happiness and well-being.

Yet, being a nice friend to her like that doesn't re-attract her.

Rather than making her think, "My ex is actually the perfect guy. He's always there for me. Why have I been wasting my time with losers!? I know what I want now and it's him. He's the best guy for me because he is nicer, more generous and more caring. I want us to get back together again!" she'll think something like, "Cool I get to have the best of both worlds. My ex still wants me, I can sleep with this new guy and if I'm ever feeling down, I can reach out to my ex and he will show me that he still cares and is waiting for me."

She then gets to move on without ever feeling the pain of the break up.

What her ex doesn't realize is that a big part of getting her back is making her feel the pain of losing him.

The way to achieve that is not about cutting off contact.

That doesn't work on most women.

The way to do it is to interact with her, re-attract her, only maintain limited contact and don't ever try to push her into a relationship.

She will be feeling attracted, missing you and imagining getting back with you, but will realize that you're not pushing for it.

So, she will then start hinting at the fact that she is open to getting back together.

At that point, you just have to maintain your cool and agree to catch up in person just as friends.

Of course, it won't be just as friends because you will make her feel even more attracted to you and she will then want to get to a hug, kiss and then sex.

After that, you and her will naturally get back together.

So, if you're talking to your ex on the phone and she starts talking about a new man that she's interested in.

You can create a spark of attraction inside of her by reacting in a different way that she is expecting you to.

For example: You might say (in a light-hearted, joking way) something like, "This is such excellent news! I can finally get rid of you! You've been such a burden to me all this time. I've been having sleepless nights because I was worried that no other guy would take you off my hands. Finally, I'm free of you! Phew! What a relief!" and then have a laugh with her about that.

She will almost certainly laugh because of the way that you're playfully teasing her and she'll probably also be a bit shocked that you're not being Mr. Sweet and Reliable like she was expecting you to be.

All of a sudden, she realizes that you're not the same guy she broke up with.

You've leveled up as a man.

As a result, she will feel surges of respect and attraction for you and may begin to think, â€œWhatâ€™s going on here? Why isnâ€™t he responding like he always does? He sounds so confident and sure of himself all of a sudden. I donâ€™t know why, but I feel attracted to him again. What is happening to me? I thought it was over between him and I. Why do I want him back all of a sudden? Is it because he's being a bit of a challenge? Is this change in him real? Maybe it is. If I don't give him another chance, other women are going to feel attracted to him. He might meet a new girl soon and fall in love with her. I have to stop that from happening. I have to see him. I have to give him another chance. I don't want to regret losing him.â€

Another thing you can do to take away your exâ€™s safety net isâ€¦

3. Tell her that you accept the break up and have moved on emotionally

For example: You might say something along the lines of, â€œHey, I know that itâ€™s taken me a while to come to terms with our breakup, but I just want you to know that I now completely accept that weâ€™re broken up and that itâ€™s for real. Iâ€™ve stopped waiting around in the hope that you will somehow change your mind about us and come back again and Iâ€™ve moved on emotionally. We can now both move on and be happy, without feeling like weâ€™re holding on to the past anymore.â€

By saying that to her, youâ€™re letting her know that youâ€™re no longer going to sit around and allow her to use you as her safety net.

This causes her to begin to look up to you and respect you again (i.e. because youâ€™re being a real man, rather than a pushover).

As a result, she will then begin to feel sparks of attraction and love for you and will start to feel the pain of losing you.

She will then begin to consider the possibility to getting back with you, rather than just keeping you around as a maybe option, safety net or back up plan.

Another thing you can do to take away your exâ€™s safety net isâ€¦

4. Show her that you are living a fun life without her

One of the best ways to re-attract a woman and stop her from using you as her safety net, is to simply get on with your life and let her find out about it or see it (i.e. on social media).

The more you enjoy your life without her, the more drawn to you she will become. Why?

When a guy is allowing himself to be used as a safety net, it signals to her that he is desperate for her attention, lacks confidence in his attractiveness to her and probably doesn't believe that he can attract other high quality women.

Those are qualities that turn women off.

On the other hand, when a guy is happy and moving forward in his life, regardless of whether his ex is with him or not, itâ€™s a sign that he is emotionally strong, confident and self-assured.

Those are qualities that make women feel attracted.

So, when you genuinely feel happy and fulfilled without your ex, something interesting happensâ€¦

Suddenly, you seem more attractive to her and she begins to want you back for herself.

Rather than enjoying the idea of keeping you around as her safety net, she starts to feel insecure about losing you to another woman.

Suddenly, dating other guys doesn't seem that appealing to her anymore and she starts to worry that you might actually be the right guy for her and she will never know that if she moves on, or if you move on and don't look back.

Another thing you can do to take away your ex's safety net is

5. Stop giving her the impression that all you really want is a relationship

The more she senses that you want a relationship, the less she wants to give it to you.

Why?

A woman's natural instinct is to get away from a man who displays clingy, needy behavior.

A woman wants to be with a man who loves and wants her, but doesn't need her to feel confident about himself.

He has independent confidence, so no matter what she says or does, or if she is in his life or not, he always feels confident, happy and is able to continue making progress in life.

A woman doesn't want a man who needs her to lift him up and make him feel safe.

Women don't want to take on that kind of motherly role in the life of their boyfriend or husband.

So, if you want your ex back, make sure that you focus on re-attracting her and making her feel like she is losing a great man (i.e. because you're enjoying life without her), rather than trying to pressure her into deciding whether or not she wants a relationship.

3 Mistakes That Some Guys Make While Being a Safety Net For Their Ex Woman

Being your ex's safety net is a mistake in itself, but here are 3 additional mistakes that guys make when in this position with an ex woman

1. Cutting off contact and hoping that it will get her back

Sometimes a guy might think to himself, I'm tired of being my ex's safety net. I need her to see me as her man, not her back up. Maybe if I cut off all contact with her and ignore her for a few weeks or months, it will shock her into realizing that I'm the man she really wants to be with. She will then come back to me and we can be a couple again.

Yet, here's the thing

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, him not contacting her doesn't really matter that much to her.

Sure, she might feel a bit annoyed that her safety net is gone, but in most cases, it will just motivate her to fully move on and find Mr. Right.

Sometimes a woman will worry that she is losing her safety net, but if she was only using her ex as a fake back up plan to keep him around and make him continue showing interest in her so she could feel good about herself, then she's almost certainly not going to get back with him if he stops contacting her.

It can work in some cases, but in most cases, a woman who has been keeping her ex waiting in the wings, will already have one or more men who are interested in her, or will already be dating and having sex with a new guy and trying to get a relationship started.

You can run the risk of just cutting off contact and hoping that it makes her come running back, but from what I've seen over the years, most women just move on if their ex (that they no longer feel attracted to) disappears from their life.

On the other hand, I've found that most guys are able to get another chance with their ex woman if they actively re-attract her, but don't push for a relationship.

Another common mistake that guys make when in your situation isâ€¦!

2. Sulking and seeking pity by saying that he refuses to be safety net option

For example: A guy might say, â€œHow can you treat me like this? Don't you care about my feelings at all? Doesn't it matter to you that I love you more than anything? How can you be so cold and heartless? Well, if that's the way you're going to be, then I'm not going to stick around and let you treat me like that anymore. I won't be anyone's safety net. I deserve more than this.â€

It sounds like a good little speech there, right?

It sounds like it would work.

Yet, women don't like to be emotionally blackmailed (i.e. made to feel guilty, forced into giving a guy a chance out of pity) into a relationship.

If she is no longer attracted to him and can see that he has no idea how to re-attract her, then she's not going to care much about losing him as her safety net.

Instead, she will feel more determined to quickly start sleeping with new men so she can find herself a new relationship and then rub it in her ex's face.

Hereâ€s the thingâ€¦!

A woman wants to be with a man because it feels right (i.e. she naturally respects him, feels sexually attracted and loves him), not because sheâ€s doing him a favor.

So, if you want to make your ex reconnect with her feelings of love for you again, don't try to achieve that by making her feel sorry for you.

Instead, focus on making her a renewed sense of feel respect and attraction for you (e.g. by maintaining your confidence around her, talking to her as though you and her are friends and are totally cool with each other, having the courage to playfully tease her and mess with her during conversations, flirting with her to create a sexual spark between you and her and built up some sexual tension, behaving with the kind of confidence that you'd have if you knew for sure that she felt attracted to you and wanted you sexually and romantically).

Approaching interactions in those ways will spark her feelings for you and make her open up to the idea of getting back together again.

However, trying to guilt-trip her back into a relationship is a surefire way to continue getting rejected, being kept in the background as a fake safety net option and eventually being heartbroken when she says that she's in love with a new guy and has been sleeping with him and enjoying it.

Another mistake that other guys make when in your situation, isâ€¦!

3. Thinking that he needs to date other women to make her want him

In some cases, dating other women is a great strategy (e.g. the woman still has feelings for her ex guy and panics when she sees him moving on), but it's usually not something that needs to be done to get an ex woman back.

The best results happen when you simply interact with your ex and make her have new, exciting, compelling feelings for you.

She then naturally wants to give you another chance for her own reasons, rather than reacting to a negative emotion such as jealousy or panic and then changing her mind once the initial, painful feelings wear off.

The truth is, respect, sexual attraction and love are much stronger and long-lasting emotions than jealousy or panic.

So, focus on building and maintaining those feelings in your ex and she will naturally feel compelled to give you another chance.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 Signs That a Breakup is Permanent

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Most breakups don't have to be permanent because a guy can almost always get his ex woman back by re-attracting her and then seducing her back into a relationship.

However, here are 3 signs that a woman is not going to want to get back with her ex anytime soon:

1. She gets married and starts a family with her new man

[image: She gets married and starts a family with her new man]

When a woman falls in love, gets married and starts a family with her new man, chances are pretty high that she's not going to want to get back with her ex.

There is always the possibility that their marriage will end (i.e. an approximate 50% divorce rate), but chances are high that she won't be running back to her ex anytime soon after getting married and starting a family with someone else.

This is why it's so important that if you want to get your ex back, you don't waste time ignoring her for months and giving her a chance to meet, fall in love with and settle down with a new man.

It's a huge ex back myth that you have to give her a month or two of space, before you try to get her back.

You don't.

In most cases, you only need to give a woman a week of space to prove the point that you're not desperately chasing her down to get her back.

During that week, you need to rapidly improve your ability to attract her and then, when you interact with her again, you need to re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship with you.

It's only when you re-attract your ex and let her experience new, exciting feelings that she opens back up to being with you again.

Even if she said that her decision was final and she was never, ever going to get back with you, all that changes when she feels a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

When that happens, she begins to feel sparks of romantic love for you again and starts to fear that she could be making a mistake.

At that point, it's easy to get to a hug, kiss, sex and then back into a relationship.

However, if you don't focus on reactivating her feelings for you and just stay out of her life, she will almost certainly move on and may possibly end up getting married and starting a family.

If that happens, the break up will be pretty much permanent, but of course, there will always be the chance that her marriage could end.

It really depends if you want to wait around in the background all that time.

Waiting around isn't good for your mental and emotional health.

The best thing to do if you want your ex back, is to take action and make it happen before it's too late.

Another sign that a breakup is permanent is ifâ□|

2. The man turned her off and has absolutely no idea how to re-attract her

Every woman has her reasons for breaking up with a guy.

However, in most cases, the main reason for a woman breaking up with a guy is because some aspect of his thinking and behavior caused her to lose respect and attraction for him over time.

For example:

- He stopped being manly and started becoming emotionally sensitive.
- He stopped being loving and started becoming a bit of an asshole towards her.
- He stopped making progress on his goals in life and wasted most of his spare time doing things that weren't making their life better, or securing a better future for them.
- He didn't know how to maintain a relationship with a woman (e.g. because he didn't have many good male role models when growing up), so he ended up becoming clingy, needy and emotionally dependent on his woman, which then caused her to feel smothered and turned off.
- He tried to buy her love by being extra generous to her (e.g. buying her expensive gifts, always taking her to fancy restaurants, paying all the bills). No matter how badly she treated him, he kept trying to buy her love.
- He spent too much time hanging out with friends, partying and living a carefree life, rather than getting serious about his future and giving her a sense of security and stability about their future as a couple.
- He became irresponsible and broke his promises to her on a regular basis.
- He didn't support her in reaching her goals in life and possibly even put her down and killed her confidence whenever she wanted to achieve something big or new in her life.

Of course, no one is perfect and even if a guy stuffs up pretty badly in a relationship, a woman will usually give him a few chances to change and improve before she eventually decides to breakup with him.

Yet, when she sees that nothing is changing, she is forced to just go through with a break up and see what happens.

In most cases, the guy being dumped will begin pleading with his ex, promising her that he will change and offering to do anything she wants if she will just give him another chance.

When he pleads for another chance, even though he has no idea how to re-attract her in the ways that really matter to her (e.g. she wants him to become more manly, rather than being so emotionally sensitive, she wants to feel genuinely loved and appreciated, rather than feeling like someone that he is just using for now), she feels justified in breaking up with him.

It feels like she has made the right decision and now needs to start looking out for herself.

So, she tries to move on and if her ex doesn't work out how to re-attract her and get her back, the break up will end up being permanent.

Another sign that a breakup is permanent is ifâ□|

3. The man became violent, physically hurt her and now she doesn't want anything to do with him

[image: Permanent breakup due to physical violence or abuse]

It goes without saying that if a guy is violent in his relationship with a woman and hurts her physically or emotionally, then she's not going to want to stick around him for very long.

Of course, there are exceptions.

Some women do go back to men, even though the man has been abusive.

I'm not saying that abusing a woman physically is a good thing.

Instead, I'm just pointing out the fact that sometimes, a woman loves a man so much and just wants to be with him, that she will forgive his abuse and give him another chance.

I talk about that at the start of this video!

I've been helping new men to get women back for many years now and it's no longer a surprise to me how many men get their ex woman back.

If you approach it correctly, the chances are very high that you will get her back.

Of course, not every guy can get his ex back in cases where he has been physically abusive, but even in extreme cases like that, many guys do get another chance with their ex.

That said, being physically violent towards a woman isn't ever the answer in a relationship.

You can always diffuse the situation with humor, talk things out or walk away if she has lost control of her emotions and is beginning to get physical with you.

Women want to know that they can get angry with a man and not have to end up getting hit or even killed as a result.

It shows a lot of character and intelligence on a man's part if he is able to maintain control of his emotions, even when a woman is being annoying, throwing verbal insults at him or even threatening him with violence.

On the other hand, if a man loses control of his emotions every time his woman does something to annoy him and then lashes out at her, he is never going to be able to have a loving, easy-going, enjoyable, lifelong relationship with a woman.

It's always going to be chaotic, stressful and out of control.

So, if a woman breaks up with a guy who is unable to control his emotions and has always been physically abusive to her, the break up will be permanent in many cases.

It's possible that a guy who has been aggressive on occasion, or lashed out and hurt her once or twice, will fairly easily be forgiven.

However, some women just don't forgive physical violence of any kind and in cases like that, the break up can be permanent.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get Their Ex Back After a Breakup That Seems Permanent

If you are a good guy and have good intentions with your ex, then you don't have to accept the break up and just walk away.

Thereâs actually a lot you can do to get her back.

To ensure that you do get her back, try to avoid making one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Assuming that because she said it was over, she can't ever change how she feels

If a woman is saying things like, *âItâs over between us and nothing that you can say or do will ever change that. Just go away and leave me alone. I hate you now!*â itâs only natural that a guy will feel that his chances of getting her back are slim at best.

Yet, what a lot of guys donât realize, is that a womanâs feelings can be changed and brought back to life based on how the man talks, behaves and acts around her.

For example: If a man talks to his ex woman and is being confident, making her laugh and being charismatic, she is naturally going to feel some sparks of respect and attraction for him, especially if the interaction started with her being cold or distant.

However, if a man talks to his ex woman and is being insecure, neutral and self-doubting, then she's not going to feel a spark for him and will end up feeling annoyed that he is wasting her time.

Unfortunately, many guys out there don't realize that they can take control over how much attraction a woman feels for them.

So, rather than actively re-attracting her, a guy like that might then just give up and walk away, thus potentially losing out on being with the love of his life.

Hereâs the thingâ

If you want your ex back, you have to believe in yourself and in your ability to change how she feels.

When you re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you, her perception of you will automatically begin to change.

For example: If you interact with your ex over the phone or in person and she senses that youâve changed some of the things that were turning her off before (e.g. you are more confident now rather than being insecure and self-doubting, you are more emotionally independent now rather than clinging to her for emotional support, youâre loving and attentive rather than taking her for granted, youâre more supportive and encouraging of her wants and needs, rather than putting her down), then she wonât be able to stop herself from feeling sparks of attraction for the new and improved you.

She might try to ignore those feelings or make you doubt yourself by being cold towards you, saying that it doesn't matter how much you've changed or acting unimpressed.

So, you have to be ready to maintain your confidence no matter what she says or does.

If you do, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling sparks of respect and attraction for the new and improved you.

She may have once said that the break up was going to be permanent, but when her feelings change, her thinking will also change.

The next to avoid is mistake isâ

2. Trying to get her back by cutting off contact

A pretty common reaction that guys have when they get broken up with, is to cut off all communication with their ex, in the hope that this will shock her into coming back.

For example: A guy might think to himself, "She's too emotional right now to be able to think rationally about our relationship. So, if I give her a few weeks or even a few months of space, she will calm down. Then, she will hopefully realize how much she misses what we had together and will come back to me."

He then ignores her for 30, 60 (or even more) days.

Then, when she doesn't contact him, he decides to text her or call her to reopen the communication between them.

He is then disappointed when she says something like, "Oh, hi. I hadn't heard from you in such a long time that I thought you were out of my life for good. I hope you're doing well and life is good for you. I've met someone else and I'm really happy now. All the best. Bye."

He is then left feeling shocked that his ploy to get her back by ignoring her ended up backfiring and may have resulted in the break up now being permanent.

This is why I don't ever recommend that a guy just ignore his ex woman as his main method for getting her back.

It's such a low success rate approach.

What I recommend you do is stay in touch with her by any means possible (e.g. via text, social media, over the phone or by seeing her in person) and use every interaction to restore her feelings for you.

The more respect and sexual attraction you make her feel when you interact with her, the more drawn she will feel to you.

You can then use those feelings to meet up with her and get to a hug, kiss and then sex.

After that, you can discuss getting back into a relationship, or just agree to see each other again and see how things go.

Either way, that approach works better than simply ignoring a woman who isn't attracted to you anymore and hoping that she comes back for some reason.

The highest success rate approach to getting an ex woman back is to actively re-attract her and then seduce her back into a relationship.

Women respond better to that approach because women are naturally wired to submit to the confident leadership of a man, when it comes to romantic and sexual relationships.

If you know how to re-attract her and know the remaining steps to take to get her back, you will be able to do it.

I hear back from new guys every day who have seduced their ex woman back into a relationship.

If you want to do that, keep learning now and then use my techniques to get her back.

On that note, another mistake to avoid if you want your ex back!

3. Not improving your ability to attract her when you next interact with her

Sometimes a guy is so worried about losing his ex woman that he rushes to try to get her back, without even realizing that the most important part of getting a woman back is re-attracting her.

So, he just starts to pursue her relentlessly and hopes that she will cave in to the pressure and give him another chance.

For example: He might send her flowers and cards, buy her meaningful gifts, send her loads of text messages to apologize and ask for forgiveness, turn up at her door and beg or plead for another chance, or be extra nice to her and offer to help her with her life (e.g. run errands for her, help to pay her bills), so he can get to remain a part of it.

Yet, she just ends up feeling turned off by his desperation.

Women don't want to be with a guy who seems desperate. It just doesn't feel right to a woman.

She wants to be with a guy who makes her feel so much respect, attraction and love based on how he talks to her and interacts with her, not based on what he buys for her or what he can do to help her live her life.

It has to be about that sexual, romantic spark that brings a man and a woman together and keeps them together.

That is what really matters.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ□|

4. Asking her if she will ever change her mind

When a guy asks his ex woman if she will ever change her mind, she will answer him based on her current feelings for him (i.e. turned off, no longer in love, wanting to get away from him).

She might lie and say, "Maybeâ□|please, just give me some time to be by myself" to get him to leave her alone, but inside, she will know that she won't want to get back with him unless he really changes and is able to attract her in the ways that matter to her.

So, don't ask her if she wants to give you another chance.

Make her want to give you another chance by fully reactivating her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get My Ex to Kiss Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 essential tips to get your ex to kiss you:

1. Make sure that you activate sparks of sexual and romantic attraction when you interact with her

[image: Lean in and kiss your ex after building up sexual tension]

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she usually disconnects from her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for him and goes cold, or becomes emotionally distant.

This is why you have to reactivate her feelings for you first, otherwise, she just won't feel like kissing you.

At the beginning of your relationship with her, she most likely felt a lot of sexual and romantic attraction, but over time, those feelings were replaced with more negative emotions (e.g. anger, annoyance, disappointment, frustration), so she stopped feeling drawn to you.

So, if you want to get your ex to kiss you, you have to start by reawakening her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so it feels right for her to be seduced into kissing you, having sex with you and getting into a relationship with you again.

Make her feel the way she did when she first fell in love with you (e.g. 'butterflies' in her stomach, blushing, wanting you to touch her, feeling turned on, feeling excited about the sparks flying back between you and her, wanting to be around you).

How can you do that?

One great way to do it is to use ballsy humor to get her smiling, laughing and feeling good to be interacting with you again.

The more laughter you can share together, the less she is able to hold onto any negative feelings she might still have about you.

Then, rather than think things like, "This feels so awkward. I just shouldn't be here. Maybe we had something between us before, but there's no spark between us anymore," she will be thinking things like, "Wow! This feels so good. I can't believe that I'm feeling attracted to him again like this. It almost feels like it did when we first met."

She then relaxes her guard and opens herself up to seeing where things go from there (i.e. a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship with you again).

For example:

You're talking to her in person and she says, "So, how have you been?" and you jokingly respond by saying, "Sorry, I can't reveal that information to you. I don't want to hurt your feelings" and then have a laugh.

When she presses for more information, you can say, "Just kidding! I was eating [insert her favorite food] yesterday and it was so delicious. I felt bad because you would have loved it. It was the best [her favorite food] I've eaten in a long time."

Initially, she most-likely would have thought you said that you "didn't want to hurt her feelings" because you were seeing a new woman, but you then turned it into a joke by saying that you were eating her favorite kind of food and it was extra delicious.

Many guys don't have the balls to mess with their ex woman like that because they are afraid that she'll get angry, or not want to talk to him anymore.

So, it takes balls to mess with her in a playful way as you talk to her.

Women are attracted to guys who have the balls to be like that, especially when the woman is acting emotionally distant or playing hard to get.

If you have the courage to playfully mess with her, it will create sparks of attraction inside of her and she will naturally begin to feel drawn to you and be more open to hugging, kissing and potentially even having sex.

Of course, there's a lot more to re-attracting an ex than just creating a spark with some humor, but it's a start.

You've got to create a spark and get the attraction flowing inside of her.

The next tip is to

2. Build on her attraction by creating sexual tension

[image: Kiss your ex girlfriend or wife]

To get your ex to the point where she's yearning for you to kiss her, it's important that you create and build up some sexual tension between you and her first.

You can do that over the course of a few minutes, or even hours if you want to, as you interact with her.

How long it takes depends on how good you are at making her feel attracted and how high her guard is up around you.

If her guard is up, you will need to bring it down by displaying confidence, being charismatic and making her laugh around you.

If her guard is down, you just need to create a spark of attraction, build on it for a few minutes and she will naturally be yearning for you to touch her, hug her or kiss her.

So, how can you build up sexual tension?

First you need to understand that sexual tension rises when a man and a woman feel attracted to each other, but there is something blocking them from kissing or having sex (e.g. they're ex's and are unsure if they should, they work together and have to be professional).

So, to build up sexual tension, start by flirting with her and making her laugh during a conversation and then go back to interacting in a normal, friendly manner.

Then, once you sense things have calmed down between you, flirt with her again and then relax back into ordinary conversation once more.

The tension will build up and she will want you to keep going back to the flirting and attractive style of conversation.

She will also want to kiss you or at least hug you, or she will be hoping that you make the moves to kiss her or hug her.

So, imagine this

Imagine that you and your ex are sitting at a quiet table in a corner of a coffee shop.

You've been chatting to her for about 10 minutes and the tension is building up between you.

You then take her hand in yours and touch your lips very lightly to her wrist and whisper something like, â€œHmmmâ€¦ I know that weâ€™re broken up and all, but you smell so good. Your skin is nice and soft tooâ€¦ and then give her wrist a light kiss and let go of her hand.

She'll most likely blush and feel flattered, or she will act like she didn't enjoy it because she's embarrassed and doesn't want to show so much interest so quickly.

Regardless of how she reacts, just relax, lean back and continue on with whatever it was you and her were discussing before (e.g. â€œBy the wayâ€¦ when are your exams starting?â€¦ or, â€œBy the wayâ€¦ how's things going at work now that your old boss left?â€¦).

After a few minutes of normal conversation, you can then look deeply into her eyes say something along the lines of, â€œYou knowâ€¦ you still have the most beautiful eyes Iâ€™ve ever seen. I just love the way they light up when youâ€™re smilingâ€¦ there it isâ€¦ just like youâ€™re doing right now.â€¦

Then, once again pull back and continue talking about other things.

By this stage, she will naturally be feeling rushes of sexual desire for you and will be thinking things like, â€œWhy am I feeling so drawn to him all of a sudden? Would it be wrong for us to hook up? Why am I thinking about what it would be like if he kissed me, or if we had sex? I need to stop this! Heâ€™s my ex. I shouldnâ€™t be thinking this way about him, but I just canâ€™t help it! I want him again. This is going to be fun.â€¦

She then hopes that you make a move to sit next to her, hug her or move in for a kiss.

In some cases, some women will just get up and sit next to their ex guy, or if she is sitting next to him already, she will cuddle into him and hope that he kisses her.

Alternatively, some women will get close to their ex, look him in the eyes and then move into start kissing him.

It really depends on the woman.

If you think that your ex is a going to be a bit shy or reluctant to make the first move, then make sure that you don't chicken out when the opportunity presents itself in front of you.

You can do it, so make a move, kiss her and get her back.

By the wayâ€¦!

Donâ€™t be like one of those guys who think, â€œI wouldn't be able to do any of that. Besides, what if I try to flirt with her and she gets angry and storms out, or slaps me? Not only will I miss out on getting her to kiss me, she might even decide not to see me again and then Iâ€™ll lose her forever. So, I have to play it safe. I have to just talk to her as a friend and be nice.â€¦

No, no, no.

You have to make her feel sexual and romantic attraction for you, based on the approach that you are using during the interactions you have with her.

You have to create a spark, build on it and get to a kiss and then sex.

You can't achieve that by just being neutral or nice.

You have to have the courage to create a spark and make it happen.

If you just approach her in a neutral or nice way, she almost certainly won't feel a spark for you and the distance between you and her will remain.

So, don't be so serious about everything.

Relax, be confident, flirt and create some sexual tension between you and her, so she naturally has a strong desire to be kissed by you, or to even move in for a kiss herself.

The next tip for getting your ex to kiss you, is to

3. Hug her for a few seconds, pull back, look her in the eyes, wait a couple of seconds and then kiss her

[image: How to kiss your ex girlfriend or wife]

If you've built up enough sexual tension between you and your ex, then she is almost certainly going to be open to a hug.

Why?

Hugging allows some of the built up sexual tension to be released as you hold each other.

It doesn't get rid of it, but it allows some of it to be used to feel good as you hug each other.

So, after you've flirted with her a little bit, lean towards her and say, "Hey chatting again is kind of fun, isn't it?" and let her agree.

Then, say something like, "I think you deserve a hug for being such a cool ex. Come here and give me a hug" and lean in to make the hug happen.

Then, hug her, give her a warm, firm squeeze and hold her in your arms for a few seconds.

Then, pull back, look into her eyes (in a confident, relaxed manner) and smile.

If you have been making her feel attracted prior to that moment, she will probably lean in for the kiss.

If she doesn't lean in because she wants you to do it, or because she is afraid of giving you too much power in the interaction, don't be afraid to lean in a couple of inches and let her close the distance and kiss you, or lean in and when you see that she isn't moving away, close the distance, meet her lips and begin to kiss.

4 Mistakes That Some Guys Make When Trying to Get a Kiss From an Ex

To avoid getting rejected when you try to get a kiss from your ex, be sure to avoid the following mistakes:

1. Being neutral and expecting her to want to kiss

Sometimes a guy doesn't want to come across as being too forward with his ex woman, so he will act like just a friend.

Instead of flirting with her and building up sexual tension, he spends the entire time pretending he's not interested in anything other than being her nice, neutral friend.

She then feels nothing or close to nothing for him, in terms of sexual and romantic attraction, so she has no desire to want to get to a kiss.

Here's the thing!

If you want to get your ex to kiss you, you can't pretend to be her neutral friend and then expect it to happen.

She's got to know for sure that you're attracted to her in a sexual, romantic way and that you're open to being with her in that way.

So, don't act like Mr. Nice Guy, Mr. Plain or Mr. Neutral around her.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should be sexually aggressive and come on too strong, because that may cause her to clam up and feel the need to reject you.

Instead, what you need to do is focus on making her experience sexual and romantic feelings for you as you talk to her, so she naturally feels the desire to get to a hug, kiss and potentially sex after that.

The next mistake is!

2. Asking her if she wants to kiss

In life, whenever you ask for something, you always stand the chance of getting a No.

So, if you don't want to hear your ex say, "No" to your request to kiss her, then don't make the mistake of asking permission to kiss her.

Here's the thing!

Not only is being asked for a kiss not romantic for most women because it suggests that the guy isn't attracted enough to her, to want to just grab her in his arms and kiss her, but it also makes him appear as insecure and self-doubting, which is unattractive.

So, if things are going well with your ex (i.e. you've been sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you), don't blow it by asking her if you can kiss her.

Just do it.

If she's not ready to kiss you, she will turn her cheek or say, No, and you can then respect that.

Alternatively, you can laugh and say, "Oh, well, I guess I read your signals wrong. I thought you wanted to rip my clothes off and jump on for a ride" and then have a laugh with her about that.

If saying something like that is a bit too much for you, then you really need to man up and stop worrying so much about how women will react.

Remember: If you fear her reaction, she won't feel attraction.

Women are naturally attracted to good men, who have the balls to say and do what they want around them.

This doesn't mean you should be bad to women, rude, mean, selfish or anything like that.

It means that you should be the good man that you are, but also have the balls to say whatever you want, without worrying about how she is going to react.

If you are only joking, then you have nothing to worry about.

If she can't take the joke (most of the time she will just be pretending to be offended), then you can turn it back on her by laughing (important! Don't forget to laugh), smile and jokingly saying, "You take things too seriously girl. You need to lighten up. You're way too sensitive" and then have a laugh with her about that.

If you're not confident enough to jokingly talk to a woman like that, then you're always going to struggle to make women respect you.

Remember: If you fear her reaction, she won't feel attraction.

Be a good man, but don't hold back from playfully messing with a woman because you fear her potential reaction.

The same rule applies to kissing her.

If she wants to kiss and you then fearfully ask for her permission, she will almost certainly lose respect for you for not having the balls to take the initiative and just do it.

As a result, she will probably reject your kiss or say something like, "No, I don't think that's a good idea" because your self-doubt turned her off.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Having stressful conversations about the relationship and then expecting a kiss

When seeing your ex again, it might be tempting to want to have a detailed, emotional conversation about what happened between you and her in the relationship.

For example: A guy might say, "Iâ€¦ Iâ€¦ I'm so sorry for hurting you. I know I stuffed things up between us, but I really have changed and I'm not like that anymore. I was so selfish and just cared about myself, but I now know that being like that is wrong. You deserved so much better from me. I would always get angry at you and expect you to just put up with it. I never really cared about how you felt and I'm sorry. I believe that we can work things out between us if you give me a chance to prove myself to you. I still love you and believe that you and I are so right for each other. Yes, we had some problems, but I know that itâ€¦ is nothing we canâ€¦ resolve if we really wanted to. So, how do you feel about us trying again? Would you be willing to give it a go? Will you give me a chance to prove to you that I can make happy now?"

Here's the thing thoughâ€¦!

Getting into stressful conversations about the relationship isn't the way to create feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside of her.

Instead of feeling excited and turned on, she feels annoyed, stressed and frustrated and starts to focus on all the things about that you she didn't like when in a relationship, rather than on the things she does like about you.

If you're talking to her in person, she then starts to think things like, "This meet up was a bad idea. I thought we might have had a chance to work things out, but now I realize thereâ€¦ is too much baggage between us to be able to have an actual relationship again. I have to move on. It's over."

If you don't want your ex to be thinking like that, avoid getting into serious, stressful conversations about the relationship.

Instead, just focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you again.

The more relaxed and attracted she feels when she's with you, the less she will remember the things about you that turned her off in the past.

Her guard will come down and she will then open up to hugging you, kissing you and potentially having sex with you again.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

4. Turning her off by appearing nervous, tense and unsure

Women can easily notice and sense nervousness and self-doubt in men and it's a huge turn off.

This is why you need to make sure that you feel completely confident in yourself when around her.

You need to know how to attract her again and believe that it's working, otherwise, you might end up doubting yourself and missing out on a great opportunity to kiss her and get her back.

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

Women donâ€¦t like having to reward emotional weakness with kissing, sex and love because they are instinctively programmed to be attracted to and reward emotional strength in men.

If your ex senses that you are unsure about yourself, she will naturally close herself off and possibly decide there and then, that itâ€¦s time for her to find another man.

So, when you meet up with your ex, focus on having confident thoughts about yourself and your value and attractiveness to her.

Imagine her wanting to kiss you because you are a confident, emotionally strong, emotionally masculine man.

Believe it.

When you believe in yourself, she will sense it (via your body language and the tonality of your voice) and she will automatically feel respect and attraction.

As a result, she will naturally want to kiss you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 Reasons Why You Can't Seem to Convince Your Ex to Feel the Same Way You Do

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you've been trying to convince your ex to feel the same way as you do about her, but she is being stubborn and closed off, today is the day that you will change that.

To turn things around, here's what you need to understand...

1. Words mean nothing to her if she isn't attracted to you

[image: Words mean nothing if she isn't attracted to you]

When a guy is still in love with his ex and wants her back, he might try to convince her to change her mind by explaining how sorry he is, telling her how much he cares and asking her to just give him a chance to prove that things can be different.

For example: He might say things like, "I'm so sorry for the way I behaved. I know that I hurt you and you have every reason not to want to talk to me, but I honestly believe if we can just sit down and discuss things, we'll be able to work things out between us because I really have changed. Not only that, but I still love you more than anything, despite the fact that we have broken up. I've never loved a woman as much as I love you. However, I can't show you that unless you give me the chance to prove myself to you. Please think about it. You have always been such a good person. Please give me another chance. I promise that you won't regret it."

If that approach doesn't work and she just keeps saying things like, "No, I don't believe that you've changed. Please accept that it's over between us," he might add, "Please! I love you. I need you in my life. You were the best part of me and I'm lost without you. Please give me one more chance. I know I can make you happy now."

Essentially, he's hoping that by saying that to her, she will think something like, "He sounds like he's really making an effort to fix things between us and he also still loves and needs me so much. Based on that, how can I say no to him? Our love deserves another chance. I am so lucky to have a man who loves me as much as he does" and then they can get back together.

Yet, it rarely (if ever) works that way.

Why?

If a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, his words mean next to nothing to her.

Rather than being convinced to change her mind based on his explanations and promises, she is more likely to think, "He still doesn't get it. He doesn't realize that I don't have feelings for him anymore and nothing he says is going to change that. As far as I'm concerned, it's all just a bunch of empty promises. Even though he's saying that he has changed, it's obvious that he hasn't. He's just being desperate, insecure and needy and that's not attractive to me."

So, what should he do instead?

Start interacting with your ex on the phone or in person and show her (don't tell her) that you truly have changed and improved.

The more attracted you make her feel to the new and improved you, the more she will want to give you another chance to see how she feels.

Yet, if all you do is talk, talk, talk (or worse, text, text, text) her in a friendly way or in an annoying way where you're asking for another chance, all she's going to say is, â€œNo, no, no.â€

Remember: If you haven't reactivated her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction first, your words and promises are going to be next to meaningless to her.

In other words, if you don't make her want you back first for her own reasons, she's not going to care about your reasons for wanting her back or how much you care about her or love her.

The next reason why you can't seem to convince your ex to feel the same way that you do is

2. Your feelings are largely based on wanting her back

Lately, you may have been thinking things like, â€œI want her back so badâ€ or, â€œI need to get her backâ€ or, â€œI miss her so much! I can't live without herâ€ or, â€œI don't want any other woman. I just want her. She is the one for me! I have to get her back. I don't want to fall in love with another woman. I just want her love. She makes me feel so amazing. She is what I want.â€

Essentially, you're thinking about how you feel and what it's like not having your ex in your life right now (i.e. life sucks, you feel lonely, you feel like you're being left behind, you fear the idea of having to get out there and start dating again, you just want her back so your life can go back to normal).

Yet, here's the thing

While you're thinking about your feelings, you've overlooked one important thing: Her feelings.

To get an ex woman back, the only thing that matters is how you make HER feel.

Your feelings are pretty much irrelevant and unimportant to her now.

She cares about herself and what she wants and will only start to care about you and what you want, if you first MAKE HER CARE by reactivating her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

So, while you're thinking about how much you miss her and how bad it feels not to have her around anymore, she's busy thinking about all the ways she feels you stuffed up and how that made her feel (e.g. angry, disappointed, frustrated, stuck).

She is using those negative feelings to help herself get over you and move on.

So, to convince your ex to give you another chance, you first have to close the gap and make the sexual and romantic feelings mutual, or at least close to mutual.

In other words, you need to make her feel the way that you feel about her, or at least get her to begin experiencing sparks of those kind of feelings.

You can't achieve that by explaining things to her (e.g. â€œI've changed. I now know where I went wrong. I can make you happy now. Please, just give me another chance to prove that to youâ€) or having deep and meaningful discussions about life and relationships.

The most important thing at this point is how she feels, not how much you want her back, how much you need her or how sincere you are about making things right between you and her.

The next reason why you can't seem to convince your ex to feel the same way that you do is

3. Women aren't attracted to desperation or neediness in a man

[image: Women aren't attracted to desperation or neediness in a man]

When a guy is going on and on about his feelings and how much he needs his ex back, rather than feel flattered by his desperation, a woman usually feels even more turned off.

She then starts thinking things like, “Doesn't he realize that his behavior is unattractive to me? The more he tries to convince me to give him another chance, the less I want to be around him. He's just highlighting to me that he can't be an emotionally strong, independent man on his own without leaning on me for guidance and support. I have to be alone now and start moving on. Surely there will be other men out there who understand how to attract a woman and make her remain in love. Surely I don't have to settle for a relationship that requires so much struggle and stress. Surely there is an easier way to be happy in a relationship. I'm certain that there are men out there who are confident, self-assured and know how to be an emotionally strong man for a woman to look up to, respect, feel attracted to and remain in love with. That's what I've got to find.”

The fact is that women just don't feel attracted to neediness and desperation in men.

It doesn't work for them.

Some women try to stick with a guy who is needy and desperate, because many women don't want to have to go through with a break up, but no matter how much they try, they just can't feel attracted to it or accept it.

Women feel attracted to men who have the confidence and emotional strength to get on with enjoying life, with or without her around, or with or without her emotional support when in a relationship.

So, acting like you can't live without her and as though your life is at a standstill until she gives you another chance, isn't going to make her feel attracted to you and want you back.

To convince her that you're an emotionally strong and independent man (which will make her feel some respect and attraction for you again), she needs to be able to see that you're living a happy and fulfilling life without her.

That's what really makes a difference and allows a woman to relax and open back up to her ex, rather than being afraid that he's obsessing over her and unable to stand on his own two feet.

Just don't waste months doing that to prove to her that you're happy without her.

Get that done in the next few days to a week and then begin the ex back process.

If you leave it for too long, she will almost certainly just move on.

3 Mistakes Guys Make When Trying to Convince an Ex to Get Back Together Again

If you want her back for real, be sure to avoid the following common mistakes that guys make when in your situation:

1. Writing a long letter, e-mail or message on social media to explain how much she means to you

[image: Writing her a long letter or email to explain how much she means to you]

In situations where an ex woman is being closed off and refusing to listen to anything that her ex is saying to her, he might decide that the only way to get through to her is to explain everything in a long letter or e-mail.

He may think, “If she won’t meet up with me in person, or talk to me over the phone, then I will e-mail her. At least she won’t be able to ignore me then. She will be forced to read it and will then know how I feel about her. Maybe then she will be convinced to listen to me and give me another chance.”

He will then write to her and tell her how much he still loves her, how important she is in his life, how sorry he is for hurting her and how promises to do anything and everything to make it up to her.

Yet, he doesn’t realize that rather than making her think, “Oh, how sweet. He still loves me. Maybe I should at least give him a chance to explain,” she instead thinks something along the lines of, “Oh right! So, I’m supposed to forgive him and give him another chance with me based on the fact that he loves me and needs me. Well, what about how I feel? Doesn’t he care or even realize that I’m still not attracted to him? Doesn’t he have a clue that I won’t care unless he first re-attracts me? Nothing about his letter is making me feel like he’s changed and improved as a man and will now be able to make me feel attracted in the ways that actually matter to me.”

Here’s the thing!

A letter or e-mail doesn’t give a woman any first hand, real life evidence that you have changed.

So, in most cases, a woman will just assume that you’re still the same guy she broke up with.

For example: She can’t hear your confidence in the tonality of your voice, so as she reads your letter or e-mail, she imagines that you are feeling insecure, nervous and unsure of yourself.

She can’t see your confident body language, so she imagines that if you said those things to her in person, you would probably be nervous and unsure of yourself.

This is why it’s never a good idea to hide behind texts, letters or e-mails with an ex woman.

If you want to convince your ex to feel the same way you do about her, the best way to go about it is by letting her fully experience the new you in person.

When she can see your body language and the way you maintain your confidence around her regardless of what she is saying or doing to put you off, she won’t be able to stop herself from feeling some respect for the new and improved you.

When that happens, she also starts to feel attracted again.

From there, her walls come down and her feelings for you begin flooding back, even if she tries to stop them or hide them.

Another mistake that guys make when in your situation is!

2. Trying to convince her to understand his point of view, rather than being so stubborn and sticking to hers

[image: Why can't you understand things from my point of view?]

When a guy is pouring his heart out to his ex and she is saying things like, “Forget it! I don’t want to hear about how you feel about me. I just don’t care! Please get it into your head that it’s over between us and stop harassing me about your feelings for me,” it’s understandable that he might feel like she is being stubborn.

He may even say to himself, “Why won’t she listen to me? All I want is for her to see things from my point of view. After everything we’ve been through, she could at least make the effort to see things my way. She’s like a completely different person. She’s so damn stubborn now.”

Yet, here’s the thing|

She’s only being like that because he hasn’t been doing anything to spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him.

All he has been doing is pleading, whining, convincing and going on and on about how he feels for her.

He’s not making her feel anything for him in return, other than annoyed and more turned off.

So, if you want to get her back, don’t waste time trying to convince her to see things from your point of view.

Instead, just focus on using every interaction you have with her (e.g. via text, on social media, over the phone, in person) to restore her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

The more you spark her feelings for you, the more interested she becomes in exploring a new, even better relationship with you now.

However, if you keep pushing her to listen to you and just give you a chance based on your explanations and promises, she will remain closed off.

The next mistake that other guys make in your situation is|

3. Thinking that she will love him if he can just get her to understand that they share a unique connection

Even if you and her once talked about being together forever, none of that matters anymore if she isn’t feeling respect, attraction and love for you now.

That was then and this is now.

If a woman no longer feels the same way anymore, she doesn’t have to stay with a guy just because they once shared a special connection.

So, rather than trying to convince your ex to try again based on the connection that you and her once shared, you have to allow her to experience new surges of respect and attraction for the new and improved version of you.

When you interact with her and she experiences the new, improved man that you have become, her feelings about you will automatically begin to change.

She will start to feel respect and attraction for you again and her will guard comes down.

Then, you won’t have to convince her to feel the same way you do because she already will.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Regret Divorcing My Wife

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 things you can do to get your wife back:

1. Refresh your understanding of what it takes to maintain a happy relationship

Couples who have been together for years and who are still completely in love with each other:

- Love and accept each other for who they are: They understand that no-one is perfect and accept that mistakes will happen sometimes. When a mistake is made, they are patient with each other, while the person who messed up makes an effort to change and improve. This might sound idealistic or even impossible to some men, but it's how happy, loving relationships are. I know that because I'm happily married and I've helped many men to achieve the same with their wife.
- Always strive to improve and become better for each other: Happy couples understand that when you love someone, you want to be the best person you can be for them. You do that because you love them, love yourself and love and appreciate the amazing relationship you have.
- Support each other emotionally: Whether it's to help each other through a difficult time, or to pursue a big goal or dream, they are there for each other no matter what. What is most important to them as a couple is that both of them feel good, enjoy life and get to experience and achieve what they want.
- Don't take things too seriously: In happy, long-lasting relationships, laughter really is the best medicine. Rather than getting upset over everything and making a big drama about it (which can then lead to arguments, anger and a buildup of resentment), a happy couple will turn an emotionally charged situation into something that they can laugh about together. This does take some practice, but it really does work. You get into the habit of not getting into wars with each other over trivial things and instead, laughing about it all and enjoying each other's company as you go through the events of daily life.
- See each other as being more than enough: Naturally, there are other attractive people in the world, but a happy couple doesn't feel like they're missing out by not hooking up with those people. Instead, they feel lucky to have each other and no matter how beautiful another woman is, in his eyes, a man's wife is the most beautiful woman in the world to him. Likewise, she looks at him as being the man that she only has eyes for.

So, if you regret divorcing your wife, decide now that you are going to quickly get prepared to re-attract her and have an even better relationship with her this time around.

If you do that, you will not only turn yourself into an even better man than you already are and be so much happier with yourself, but you will make her happy and make her feel lucky and grateful that you have come back into her life.

So, if you are up for getting her back!

2. Get ready to re-attract her when you interact with her

One of the best ways to re-attract your wife when you interact with her again, is by shocking her (in good way), by being a new and improved man.

For example: If one of the main reasons for your divorce was due to you being too emotionally closed off, to convince your wife that you've changed, you need to take the risk of being more fearless with your emotions.

Important: I don't mean that you should become a sensitive wussy or anything like that.

I'm talking about being fearless with your emotions like a man (i.e. maintaining your composure and masculinity, while also expressing some emotions without fearing the consequences).

Having the guts to say something like, "I'm happy to see you. You look amazing" rather than being closed up emotionally and saying, "Hey, how are you doing? You look nice."

Big difference.

Of course, if you go from being an emotionally closed up man to being emotionally fearless, she might be a bit confused initially and wonder if it's real, or if you're just putting on a bit of an act initially.

So, she might test you by saying something like, "Hey, I just want to be clear that we're only meeting up as friends today. I'm happy to see you, but don't get the wrong idea."

If you then react by clamming up and thinking to yourself, "I knew I shouldn't have exposed my feelings to her like that. Look where that got me! she rejected me and threw it in my face. It was a big mistake," she'll know that you were only opening up emotionally to hopefully impress her, but haven't sincerely become emotionally fearless.

An emotionally fearless man would laugh at what she said and say something like, "Don't get the wrong idea? Who said that we weren't meeting up as just friends? You're the one thinking other things" and then have a laugh with her about that.

In other words, he doesn't let her take control of the situation by making it out as though he is hoping to score with her.

Instead, he turns it back on her by saying something like, "Of course. We're just meeting up as friends. Don't get the wrong idea. I know I look handsome today, but my body is off limits. You can look, but don't touch" and then have a laugh with her about that.

Another example is if your wife divorced you because she felt you were taking her for granted.

Although at the beginning of your relationship you were very loving and attentive, over time you fell into the habit of putting other things first in your life, ahead of your relationship with her (e.g. work, bills, your family, friends, hobbies, procrastination).

To show your wife that you've changed and won't fall into that trap again, you need to focus on making her feel loved and appreciated all the time.

When she can see that you really have changed, her guard will naturally come down and she will open up to the idea of giving your marriage another chance.

Once you've prepared yourself to re-attract her, you need to

3. Contact her to say hi and focus on re-attracting her

When you feel ready, make contact with your wife and start making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to the new and improved you.

For example: If youâve been texting each other from time to time, you should now proceed to getting her on a phone call with you to say hi.

Once on the call, make sure that you add in some humor to ease the tension between you and her and make her feel happy and relaxed to be talking to you again.

For example: You might call her and say something like, âHey Michelle, I thought Iâd just call and say hi. How's your day going today?â

If things are still quite awkward between you and her, she might start off by being cold and aloof towards and say something like, âFine,â or âOkayâ nothing special.â

You can then use that as an opportunity to make her laugh and feel attracted, by saying something like, âMy day has been great so far and itâs about to get 100 times better.â

Sheâll likely then ask, âWhy?â and you can then say, âWell, Iâm about to arrange a catch up for a coffee with a really beautiful woman.â

If she thinks that you're talking about another woman, she might get annoyed at you and say something like, âWhy are you calling me to tell me that? Do you think I care who youâre dating? Well, I donât!â

You can then say, âWell you should care. Youâre that beautiful woman and I'd like to ask you to catch up for a coffee this week to say hi as friends,â and laugh with her about that.

She will then laugh about getting caught out with your joke and may also feel flattered that you still think of her as a beautiful woman.

As a result she will begin to wonder what has brought about such a sudden change in you.

She will feel curious about your newfound relaxed, confident and emotionally strong attitude towards her, which will naturally make her feel some respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, she then opens herself up to the idea of talking to you again and seeing you in person.

Note: Most women are savvy enough to know that you're talking about them when you say that you're about to arrange a catch up for coffee with a beautiful woman.

If your wife gets the joke right away because she's a bit savvier than the average girl, you can then say, âSo, let's catch up for a coffee sometime this week to say hi as friends.â

By the wayâ!

If youâve had no contact with your wife since the divorce, you can text her or send her a private message via social media, or start a text conversation on the phone.

However, before you do that, I recommend that you use the techniques from my program to warm her up first. For more information, check out Get Your Ex Back Super System.

Once youâve broken the iceâ!

4. Get her to meet up with you to say hi as friends

After youâve reactivated some of your ex wifeâs feelings of respect and attraction for you

(i.e. by making her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again on a phone call), ask her to meet up with you in person.

For example: You can say, “It’s good to see that we can be still be mature adults and have a chat” and let her say whatever she wants to add to that.

Then say, “Let’s catch up for a coffee sometime this week. Of course, it wouldn’t be about us getting back together. It would just be a relaxing cup of coffee to say hi to each other as friends.”

In some cases, an ex-wife won’t immediately say, “Yes” because she will be worried about having feelings for her ex-husband again, even though he hasn’t fully changed.

So, she might say something like, “Look, it’s nice of you to ask, but I don’t think it’s such a good idea. We’re divorced now, so let’s leave it at that.”

No matter what she says, maintain your confidence and don’t fall into the trap of doubting yourself and your ability to seduce her back into a relationship.

Relax and confidently say something along the lines of, “Hey, look it’s just a quick cup of coffee as friends. I know that we’re divorced and I accept that completely. Yet, even though we aren’t together anymore, we can at least catch up to say hi once as friends. So, what do you say? Are you in for a quick catch up tomorrow or the next day?”

At that point, she will probably agree and you can then go ahead and arrange a suitable day and time.

Just remember: When you meet up with her, you must be ready to say and do the types of things that will reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. maintain your confidence around her regardless of her attitude towards you, ease the tension by making her laugh and smile, let her see some of the changes in your behavior and attitude that were lacking in the marriage), so she naturally begins to open up to the idea of getting back together again.

4 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want to Get Your Wife Back

[image: Getting your ex wife back after a divorce]

If you want to ensure that you get your ex wife back, be sure to avoid the following 4 common pitfalls:

1. Thinking that it’s not possible to get her back

Sometimes, when a guy regrets divorcing his wife, he might start thinking things like, “I screwed the whole damn thing up. I let the divorce go through and now it’s over. It’s all my fault. I’ve lost her forever. Even though I now realize that I love her and she’s the only woman I want to spend the rest of my life with, there’s nothing I can do about it. We’re divorced. No one gets back together after a divorce. It’s done. I can’t do anything now. We signed the papers. The papers mean everything.”

Paper is just paper.

It seems fancy because there are lawyers involved, but what you need to understand is that when your ex wife feels a renewed sense of respect, sexual attraction and love for you, those divorce papers will become meaningless.

What happened in the past will seem like a mistake and she will realize that you and her are supposed to be together.

She will rationalize the divorce as something that needed to happen, so you would change and become the man you are today.

You and her are meant to get back together.

2. Feeling unworthy of her

When a man feels like he is to blame for the divorce, he might fall into the trap of thinking of his ex-wife as being a perfect angel who didn't do anything wrong at all.

Before the divorce, all he could see were her faults (e.g. she was a nag, she was always throwing tantrums, she created drama over insignificant things to annoy him, she didn't give him enough time on his own to do his own thing), but now all he can see is how perfect she really was for him (e.g. she was beautiful, she was supportive of his dreams, she took good care of him and their home, she put up with his bad attitude).

As a result, he then starts to put himself down in comparison to her, How could I have been so blind not to see that the problem in our relationship was me? She was perfect and it was me who messed everything up. I am such a loser why am I like this? Why do I ruin relationships with people who love me? What is wrong with me? Even if she wanted me back, the truth is, I don't deserve a woman like her. She is just too good for me.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that feeling unworthy of his wife's love only makes him seem less attractive to her (and to other women).

Why?

A woman likes being envied by other women by being in a relationship with a man who is always confident and believes in himself no matter what happens.

The more emotionally strong her man is, the more she is able to respect him, feel attracted to him, love him and feel proud to be with him.

So, when a guy is feeling sorry for himself and putting himself down, rather than make her feel happy that he values her more than he values himself, she feels turned off by his lack of confidence.

3. Not improving his ability to make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction during an interaction

Where many ex-husbands go wrong is that they make promises to change, suck up to their ex wife by being extra nice or pour their heart out and explain how much they regret the divorce.

None of that means much to a woman if you first don't reactivate her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

You have to do that first, otherwise your attempts to get her back will seem selfish and one-sided.

Here's the thing:

Right now, your wife has likely disconnected with her feelings for you and is working on completely getting over you and moving on with her life.

If you want to stop her in her tracks and get her to turn around and come back into your life, you have to focus on making her feel rushes of sexual and romantic attraction when you interact with her.

Don't try to get her back by promising to change, being really nice or seeking pity from her.

Those approaches don't work.

Likewise, just being a neutral friend doesn't work either.

You have to get the spark back between you and her and then turn it into a passionate fire of love.

That might sound difficult to you, but really it's one of the easiest and most fun things you will ever do in your life.

Reawakening a woman's feelings after a break up or divorce and the reconciling is enjoying for you and her.

Finally, another mistake to avoid if you regret divorcing your wife and want her back is

4. Waiting for years in the hope that she comes back on her own

Sometimes, a man might wait around for months or even years for his ex wife to forgive him and realize her mistake.

Yet, he then watches on in disappointment as she moves on and seems happy and content without him.

So, if you want your ex wife back, don't waste anymore time hoping that she will come back on her own.

If she hasn't come back on her own by this point, she probably won't ever come back.

Instead, she will move on without you.

If you want her back, you have to step up and make it happen.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

5 Ways to Make Your Ex Like You Again Over Text

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways to make your ex like you again over text:

1. Make her smile

[image: Make her smile]

One of the best ways to make a woman reconnect with her feelings of love, respect and attraction for you is by making her smile when you interact with her via text.

When she is smiling, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to hold on to her negative feelings about you (e.g. anger, annoyance, frustration, disappointment).

As a result, she then drops her guard and opens up to looking at you in a more positive light.

She can then start to think things like, â€œHe sounds so confident and fun in his texts all of a sudden. Maybe he really has changed. Maybe it would be nice to talk to him over the phone again, or even in person.â€œ

So, if you want to make your ex like you over text, make sure that your messages are making her smile, rather than roll her eyes in annoyance.

If youâ€™re too boring or serious, sheâ€™ll most-likely remain closed off towards you and she may even begin wondering, â€œWhy is he texting me? Doesâ€œt he get it that weâ€™re broken up? What does he want? What is he up to?â€œ

For example: A guy might text his ex with something like, â€œHey, how are you? I just wanted to say hello. Having a good day so far?â€œ

She might then reply with something along the line of, â€œIâ€™m fine thanks. Busy as usual. What are you up to?â€œ

He might then reply with, â€œSame old, same old. You know how it goes.â€œ

That type of message isnâ€™t going to spark any sexual or romantic feelings inside of her.

Instead, she will likely be rolling her eyes and wondering why on earth he is wasting her time with pointless text messages.

So, using the example above, if your ex says, â€œIâ€™m fine thanks, just busy as usual. What are you up to?â€œ you can then reply with something like, â€œIâ€™ve just found something that I think is perfect for you.â€œ

She might then reply with, â€œOh really? What?â€œ or, â€œTell meâ€œ and you can then say, â€œI was reading through the paper and found an ad looking for models and instantly thought of you.â€œ

She will likely feel flattered that you still think sheâ€™s beautiful enough to be a model and she might then reply with something along the lines of, â€œHaha! Thanks,â€œ or if sheâ€™s quite shy and modest she might say, â€œThatâ€™s nice of you, but I donâ€™t think Iâ€™m pretty enough to be a model.â€œ

You can then reply with, â€œYeah, theyâ€™re looking for hand models to advertise gloves and I thought, why not you? Your hands look great in gloves! Lol! :Pâ€œ

At that point, she's probably going to smile and laugh because she initially thought you were suggesting a fashion modeling job, or a beauty model.

As she smiles and has a little laugh, she will then begin to think of you in a more positive way.

Her guard will come down and she will become open to interacting with you again, talking to you on the phone and even meeting up with you in person.

The next way to make your ex like you again over text, is to make sure that youâ€¦

2. Don't show insecurity or self-doubt

[image: Don't show insecurity or self-doubt]

Chances are, your ex isn't going to be very warm and friendly towards you right after a break up, or if it has been a while and you haven't re-attracted her yet.

So, you might find that is a bit cold, distant or even unfriendly towards you initially.

Why?

Firstly, you haven't started reactivating her sexual feelings for you yet, so she's still going to be closed off towards you as a boyfriend option.

Additionally, it's a woman's natural instinct to test a guy to see if he is able to remain confident and secure even if she doesn't make things easy for him as she talks to him.

So, if you maintain your confidence no matter what she says or does and have the courage to turn her coldness into smiles and laughter, she will automatically drop her guard and begin feeling surges of respect and sexual attraction for you again.

On the other hand, if you become nervous, insecure and start doubting your ability to attract her again, she will pick up on that (e.g. because your texts will be too polite, formal or friendly, because you start apologizing to her if she says that she's busy or because you seem to take a long time to reply because you're over-thinking things) and feel even more turned off.

This is why it's very important that you take control of your confidence by always imagining things going well every time you text (call, or meet up with) your ex.

For example: Imagine that you've sent your ex a text and she responds in a cold, unfriendly way.

Instead of thinking, She hates me. There's no way I can make my ex like me again over text, realize that she's only testing you to see if you can remain confident, so she can then feel respect and attraction for you.

Rather than feeling insecure and beginning to doubt your ability to attract her, just use her coldness as an opportunity to re-spark her feelings for you.

Respond to her in a way that turns her coldness into something to smile and laugh about together.

She will then naturally warm up to you and begin to feel happy to be interacting with you again.

Then when you call her on the phone and suggest catching up to say hi, she will be much more likely to agree.

Another way to make your ex like you again over text is toâ€¦

3. Write brief, witty texts

Texts can break the ice between you and your ex and pique her interest enough to want to talk to you on the phone or meet up with you, but you shouldn't rely on only texting her to get her back.

Watch this!|

If you are going to text her initially, make sure that your texts are short and witty, so she doesn't get bored or annoyed to be texting with you.

Another way to make your ex like you again over text is to make sure you!

4. Don't try to discuss the relationship

Sometimes a guy will assume that to make his ex like him again, he first needs to show her how sincere he is about fixing what went wrong in their relationship.

So, as soon as he establishes contact with her via text, he starts bringing up their relationship, what went wrong and how he plans on fixing things between them.

For example: He might text her things like, "I know I stuffed up and I'm really sorry about it. I was (runs through a list of his faults, e.g. insecure, unmotivated, immature, unstable) and I made your life miserable. I know that I can't say it enough times, but once again, I really am sorry for hurting you. I want to work things out between us. Please, can we just talk about this? I have changed and all I'm asking for is a change to work this out."

Yet, here's the thing!

The more a guy keeps bringing up the relationship and all his mistakes, the more it makes her relive all the negative emotions she experienced at the time (e.g. anger, mistrust, disillusionment, heartache, disappointment).

So, even though your intentions are in the right place by wanting to fix things with her, if you want to make your ex like you again, I highly recommend that you avoid discussing the relationship in detail with her over text.

Instead, just leave what happened between you and her in the past (both the good times and the bad times) and focus on re-attracting her in a whole new and exciting way.

Another way to make your ex like you again over text is to!

5. Be a challenge

[image: Be a challenge]

When a guy wants to get his ex back, he usually makes the mistake of being on his best behavior around her, or at the very least, just being friendly and nice towards her.

For example: A guy might be extra sweet and nice to her, puts up with her coldness or rudeness and essentially allows her to call the shots.

He may think, "I can't be too demanding with her, because if I stand up to her she'll get annoyed and cut me off completely. Then I won't be able to get her back."

Yet, what a guy like that doesn't realize is that a woman doesn't want to feel as though she is more valuable or powerful than him.

She wants him to make her feel as though she needs to be on her best behavior around him and try to please him, rather than him being no challenge to her at all.

She doesn't want to feel as though she can push him around and treat him like dirt without him doing anything about it.

So, if you want to make your ex like you again, be a bit more of a challenge to her via text, rather than being a good little boy who never says anything to upset her.

Youâ€¦d be surprised to see how effective a bit of cheekiness can be in making a woman feel surges of respect and attraction for you again.

5 Mistakes Guys Make When Trying to Make an Ex Woman to Like Them Again Over Text

Texting can help you get your ex back, but it can also cause you problems if you make one or more of the following mistakesâ€¦

1. Trying too hard to appear happy without her

Donâ€¦t make the mistake of pretending to be happy without your ex (e.g. texting her things like, â€¦Iâ€¦m having so much fun now that Iâ€™m single!â€¦ orâ€¦ Life is so great. Ahh, relaxing at the beach!â€¦ or â€¦Iâ€¦ve been out every night this week. Good times!â€¦), if you are secretly feeling miserable without her.

Why?

All it takes for her to catch you in a lie, is to show some interest in you again and then quickly pull back the interest back to see how happy you really are without her.

For example: She might text and say that she misses you and that sheâ€¦s been wondering if you and her can work things out.

She may then ask you, â€¦Do you miss me too? Would you consider giving our relationship another chance, or do you think itâ€™s too late for us? You seem so happy without me now, so Iâ€™m not sureâ€¦ to see how you are really feeling.

If you then quickly text back with something like, â€¦No, itâ€¦s not too late! Of course I want you back. I miss you every day. I was hoping that you would say something like thisâ€¦ she will then know that youâ€¦ve been lying about being happy without her, which will make her close off and play much harder to get.

The next mistake isâ€¦

2. Trying to have a discussion via text, rather than hitting 'call' and talking to her

Sometimes a guy decides to stick to texting, because he believes that his ex will let him know when sheâ€¦s ready to talk over the phone.

For example: He hopes that he can just text back and forth with her for a few days, weeks or even months and she will eventually text him something like, â€¦Okay, enough with this talking to each other via text. Give me a call. I miss you and I want to hear your voice.”

Yet, thatâ€¦s just not how the majority of women react.

Rather than making the ex back process easy for him, a woman will usually be passive and wait for her ex man to have the balls to make something happen.

If he doesn't make a move, she will eventually get tired of having pointless discussions with him via text and may then say something like, â€œLook, Iâ€™ve met someone else and he doesnâ€™t like me texting you like this. Iâ€™m sorry, but we need to stop our texts. I wish you all the best. Goodbye,â€ so she can get rid of him.

As a man, you need to take responsibility for guiding both you and your ex back into a relationship, rather than being passive like her.

You need to have the courage to call her on the phone, where you can spark some of her feelings for you again and make her want to see you in person.

So, donâ€™t make the mistake of hiding behind texts and hoping that she will tell you that she's ready to talk on the phone, because most women don't make it that easy for their ex guy.

You need to have the courage to make a move.

Another mistake that other guys make in your situation isâ€

3. Believing that she wouldn't like it if he called

Many guys come up with the excuse that their ex woman prefers to text.

It doesnâ€™t matter what she prefers.

You have to do what works and what works is attracting her on a phone call and in person and then getting to a kiss, sex and opening the door back up to a relationship once again.

Sticking to only texts is a surefire way to lose your ex girl and be disappointed and hurt when she eventually breaks the news to you that she's been seeing a new guy, is in love and no longer wants you to text her.

Additionally, you have to understand that for a lot of women, texting back and forth with an ex takes up a lot of their time and mental energy and it can quickly become a stressful, annoying thing to be involved in.

So, if you want her back, don't hide behind the safety of text messages.

It might feel easy and nice for you, but it's not the best way to get an ex woman back and in many cases, it's not fun for the ex woman.

Get to a phone call and in person catch up and then get to a kiss and sex.

Get her back.

The next mistake that other guys make in your situation isâ€

4. Worrying that she might not answer if he calls

Itâ€™s only natural that a guy might feel nervous about calling his ex woman for the first time after a break up.

He might even catch himself thinking things like, â€œWhat if she doesnâ€™t answer? What will I do then? If I call her again, will it make me look desperate? Will she see it as annoying or stalkerish that I keep calling? What if she is with friends or family and they tell her not to answer? What will I do then?â€

So, rather than calling her on the phone, he remains stuck in limbo where he wants to call, but is too afraid of what might happen if he does.

As a result, she has more time to get over him and begin properly moving on, while he is left looking over their text messages and wondering how she could be feeling.

Don't worry about how she 'could' be feeling.

Instead, make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again on a phone call and in person.

That's how a man handles the ex back process and gets his woman back.

By the way!

A question you need to ask yourself is this: What will happen to you if she doesn't answer your call the first time?

The answer is! nothing.

Sure you might feel a bit disappointed, but that doesn't have to mean the end of the road for you and her just because she didn't answer a call.

Heck, she may have been in the shower, felt nervous about answering and then regretted not answering, or she might have been hanging out with friends and didn't want them interfering.

So, if you decide to call your ex and she doesn't answer, don't worry about.

Just call her later that day or another day.

Get the job done.

Get her back.

Another mistake to avoid is!

5. Asking if it's okay to talk to her on the phone

After a bit of texting back and forth, a guy might decide that it's time to get his ex on a phone call with him.

He will then make the mistake of asking her if it's okay to call her.

He might say to her, "We seem to be getting along well over text. Is it okay to call you and have a talk?" or, "Can I call you?"

He hopes that she will feel flattered that he's being so gentlemanly and considerate of her wants and needs, but the reality is that most women feel turned off by that type of hesitant, wimpy behavior.

Why?

Essentially he's giving his power over to her, asking her to take on the position of the boss and expecting her to be attracted to it.

Most women don't want to feel like they can dominate a guy emotionally, so when asks for her permission to call her on the phone, she's going to feel turned off by his lack of balls.

Then, rather than starting to like him again, she feels justified in breaking up with him and feels even more determined to move on with a new guy instead.

So, if you want to call your ex, just do it.

If you don't feel ready to call her yet, then keep learning from me right now and I will give you the confidence to do it.

You can get her back.

You can do this.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Said She Will Find Happiness With Another Guy

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 possible reasons why your said that she will now find happiness with another guy!

1. She can see that you haven't changed

[image: She can see that you haven't changed]

In most relationships, a woman doesn't just decide to break up with her guy the first time he makes a mistake.

Instead, she will usually give her man multiple chances to change and improve himself before she decides to finally go through with the break up.

Unfortunately, many guys end up ignoring the warning signs from their woman until it's too late.

For example: Sometimes, a guy will think, "She's mad at me right now, but she loves me, so she will get over it. She knows that we are a good couple and there's no reason to break up. She always forgives me and knows that I love her, so everything is fine."

[image: On the verge of a break up]

Yet, when he doesn't change, she starts to lose respect for him and thinks something like, "No matter what I say or do, it never seems to get through to him. If he does change, he only changes for a little while and then once things have calmed down between us, he reverts back to his old behavior again. He's taking me and my love for granted. I shouldn't be putting up with this. I think I have to break up with him."

Then, before he knows it, she breaks up with him and he realizes that she wasn't bluffing after all.

She was serious and it had gotten so bad that she eventually decided to just end the relationship.

Naturally, when a guy gets broken up with for this reason, his first instinct is to usually rush into saying and doing whatever he thinks will convince his ex to give him another chance (e.g. he promises her that he really has changed this time, tells her how much he loves her, breaks down and cries to her).

Initially, she might feel sorry for him and decide to at least meet up with him one more time to see if he's improved since the break up, or if he now understands how to make a woman feel happy and in love in a relationship.

Yet, if she meets up with him and realizes that he hasn't changed (e.g. he appears insecure and self-doubting when he's around her, he still reacts in the same way as he did before when she says or does something to press his buttons), then she will close off from him and do her best to move on as quickly as possible.

She may then think something like, "I was hoping that this time would be different, but once again, nothing about him has really changed. I'm not going to fall for his empty promises anymore. I don't believe that he can change, or even that he wants to change. He's a lost cause and I will simply have to find happiness with another guy. It sucks, but that is life. I have to try to move on."

The guy is then devastated and can't understand why she won't give him another chance.

Here's the thing though!

If you want your ex to give you another chance, the first step is to make some changes to yourself to attract her in the ways that are important to her (e.g. you're so much more confident and emotionally strong now, you're more supportive of her dreams and ambitions, you're more emotionally masculine and as a result, she feels like an attractive woman around you rather than a neutral friend).

When she experiences the changes in you first hand (i.e. on a phone call or in person), she naturally drops her guard and opens up to giving the relationship another chance, rather than looking to find happiness with another guy.

On the other hand, if you keep trying to get her back without changing the things that matter to her, she will just keep pushing you away and saying things like, I'm sorry, but it's over. We had our chance and it didn't work. You need to accept that and move on.

Another possible reason why you may have said that she will find happiness with another guy, is!

2. You were trying to get her back by ignoring her and it has backfired

[image: You were trying to get her back by ignoring her and it backfired]

Sometimes a guy might think to himself, She's being so unreasonable at the moment that she won't even give me a chance to explain to her what went wrong. Maybe if I ignore her for a few weeks or a month or two, she will start missing me and then when her defenses come down, we can discuss our relationship and how we can work things out again.

He then cuts off all contact with his ex and ignores her for 30 or 60 days, in the hopes that this will convince her to give him another chance.

Yet that rarely, if ever works.

Watch this!

In almost all cases, if a woman has disconnected from her feelings for a guy, him ignoring her for a month will only add more negative feelings (e.g. anger, annoyance, resentment) to her already volatile emotions.

Rather than making her think, OMG! I miss him so much! Why is he ignoring me? I can't deal with this! Is it possible that he's over me? Now that he's not in my life anymore, I've realized how much I still care for him. I don't want to lose him! I must contact him right away and get him back before it's too late, she will instead be thinking something like, So, now he's ignoring me? How childish and immature. By not contacting me, he's showing me how little he cares about my feelings. He might not realize it, but he's actually doing me a favor by giving me the time and space to get over him and move on. He's not the right man for me, so I need to focus on moving on and finding happiness with another guy.

As a result, by the time he contacts her again (after 30 or 60 days), she's usually built up so many walls to protect herself that she doesn't even want to talk to him over the phone anymore.

A guy might then ask himself, Why has this happened? What did I do wrong? Why isn't she running back to me? I thought she would miss me like crazy if I didn't contact her. Did I mean anything to her? How could she just stop caring?

The reason why is that he didn't do anything to reawaken her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for the new and improved him, so she didn't have anything to miss.

She was turned off by him and wanted out of the relationship leading up to the break up and was also turned off by his reaction to her breaking up with him, so she no longer thought of him in a positive way.

She was easily able to remember the bad times and the reasons why she broke up with him and it stuck with her.

He didn't do anything to change it either.

He simply ignored her and hoped that her negative feelings for him fade away enough over time, to the point where she should eventually want him back.

Yet, here's the thing!

For a man to get a woman back after the break up of a serious relationship, he almost always needs to be active, rather than passive about it.

Sometimes a guy can get his ex woman back by just waiting (about 5% of cases), but pretty much every guy loses his ex girlfriend or wife forever by cutting off contact and waiting.

This is why I always recommend that a guy be active about the ex back process, rather than being passive (i.e. at least interact with her on the phone or in person and actively make her feel strong surges of respect, attraction and love for the man he has become since the break up).

If he just ignores her for a month or two and then tries to get her back, she will either have moved on already, or she will be over it and won't want to reopen old wounds.

Another possible reason why your ex said that she will find happiness with another guy, is that!

3. You took her for granted and now she wants to hurt you by moving on and being happy

[image: You took her for granted and now she wants to hurt you by moving on and being happy]

Sometimes a guy makes the mistake of believing that the love between him and his woman will last for life because it was so good at the start of their relationship.

Yet, that's not how a relationship between a man and a woman works.

For a woman's feelings of respect, attraction and love to grow, develop and strengthen over time, she needs to know that she is loved and appreciated all the time, not just at the beginning of the relationship.

For example: At the start of a relationship, a guy might have been very loving and attentive towards his woman.

He may have told her that he loved her, told her that she's beautiful and that he appreciates the efforts she puts in to look attractive for him.

She will have felt appreciated, loved and wanted.

Yet, over time, he began to take her efforts for granted and just expected that she look good, treat him well and remain in his life because things used to be great between them.

A guy like that may think, She already knows how I feel about her, so why do I have to remind her about it? She'll probably get tired of me repeating myself like that all the time and she may even think I'm being needy and insecure.

However, in most relationships, a woman rarely gets tired of hearing her man tell her that he loves and appreciates her, or how beautiful he thinks she is.

Of course, there are some guys who can go overboard with compliments to the point where they come across as being needy and insecure.

Yet, that doesn't mean a guy should avoid complimenting or appreciating his woman.

The fact is that if a guy shows genuine affection and appreciation towards his woman when appropriate (e.g. she's dressed up to go out, she's cooked a special meal for him), it will make her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him grow stronger over time.

On the other hand, if a woman starts feeling taken for granted by her guy, she will begin to feel resentful and gradually disconnect from her feelings of love for him.

Initially, she might drop hints about his lack of emotional support, in the hopes that he will pick up on her unhappiness and make some changes.

However, if he doesn't change, she will eventually break up with him and look for another guy who can give her the love that she needs to feel happy, loved and appreciated in a relationship.

Another possible reason why your ex might have said that she will find happiness with another guy, is that

4. She wasn't able to be happy in the relationship with you

Sometimes a woman might get into a relationship with a guy because the sex between them is really great and he's fun to hang out with.

Then, over time, she comes to realize that the only thing that was holding them together was the initial spark of a new romance and that deep down, they're actually not compatible in the things that matter to her.

For example: A woman might want to pursue her career and then once she's established herself professionally, settle down and start a family, but her boyfriend (husband) might be the kind of guy who likes to go with the flow and doesn't believe in being tied down, either professionally or emotionally.

Alternatively, a woman might be very close to her friends and family and likes to spend time interacting with them on a regular basis.

Her boyfriend (or husband) on the other hand is a loner and resents it when she takes time away from hanging out as a couple to hang out with her friends, or visit her family.

As a result of these differences, the love between them doesn't develop over time and instead starts to fade away.

When a woman realizes that even though she felt attracted to her man initially, she now feels as though she can't fully relax and be herself with him and that she doesn't feel happy anymore, she will begin to doubt her ability to stick with him for life.

Here's the thing

Most women know that being compatible with each other is essential for a relationship to last for life.

It's not enough for them to feel attracted sexually or have fun when together, but then disagree on the more fundamental issues that keep a relationship together for life.

4 Mistakes to Avoid Making if Your Ex Said She Will Find Happiness With Another Guy

[image: No other man will ever love you as much as I do]

Hearing your ex say that she will find happiness with another guy definitely will hurt.

You might end up imagining her having sex with the new guy, being in love and enjoying herself so much that she will never want to come back to you.

As a result, you might feel a bit desperate to convince her to give you another chance, before it's too late.

Yet, approaching the ex back process in a desperate way just doesn't work when it comes to women. You've got to gain control of your emotions and do this properly.

So, to ensure that you successfully get your ex back, first make sure that you avoid making one or more of the following mistakes!

1. Telling her that no guy will ever love her as much as you do

In the hope of changing her mind, a guy will sometimes say something like, "You can try to find happiness with another guy, but I promise you, no man will ever love you the way I do. Right now, you might be angry with me, but the truth is that I love you more than anything and it kills me that you don't seem to care. Yes, I made mistakes, but I'm willing to do anything to make it up to you and be the man you want me to be. Do you think another guy will love you like that? I doubt it! No one will ever love you as much as I do. I love you more than I love myself."

Essentially, he's hoping by saying that to her, she will fear that she won't ever be able to find a man who loves her as much as he does and is as dedicated to her as he is.

Yet, rather than making her come running back to him, it just makes her more determined to move on and prove him wrong.

The next mistake to avoid is!

2. Asking her to remember the good times and forget about the recent bad times

Although it would be nice if you could make your ex feel attracted to you again simply by bringing up all the good times that you and her shared together, it just doesn't work that way.

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, being reminded of how good things used to be just highlights to her how bad things are right now, or how bad things became near the end.

If you want to convince your ex that she can be happy with you again and get her back, you have to actively make her have feelings for you based on who you are now.

What happened between you in the past doesn't count anymore.

How you make her feel right now and from now on is what really counts.

So, don't bother wasting time rehashing all the good times from the past and focus on building new, happy memories now.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Not actively making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction

No matter how much you try to convince your ex that you can make her happy again, sheâ€™s not going to believe you unless you re-spark her feelings for you first.

Where a lot of guys go wrong is by thinking that if they hang around their ex long enough and pretend to be her nice, platonic friend (i.e. heâ€™s not interested in getting her back), she will eventually think something alike, â€œWow, I never realized what a great guy he really is. All this time, heâ€™s been here for me and heâ€™s never once pushed me to get back together again. That makes me want to be his girl again. He deserves it!â€ and rush back into his arms.

It just doesnâ€™t work that way.

If a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect and attraction for a guy, sheâ€™s not going to change her mind just because heâ€™s being nice to her and isn't pushing her to get back together again.

Instead, sheâ€™ll usually accept his friendship and all the perks that come with that (e.g. heâ€™s available to help her run errands, she has a shoulder to cry on when she feels down, she has an emergency date when she needs one), while in the background, she will continue to move on by finding herself another guy that she can have a happy and fulfilling relationship with.

So, if you want to get your ex back, it's essential that you actively make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you whenever you interact with her.

If you donâ€™t reawaken her feelings, she will almost certainly move on and find happiness with another guy and youâ€™ll end up thinking, â€œHow did this happen? I thought she was changing her mind about us! We were getting along so well. What happened?â€

What happened is that her ex guy just made her feel friendly feelings, which isn't enough to make most women come back into a sexual, romantic relationship.

In almost all ex back cases, a guy needs to actively spark and reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings based on the way he now talks to her, behaves around her and gets her to behave around him.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

4. Becoming clingy and needy

When a woman says that she will find happiness with another guy, her ex might start feeling a bit insecure about himself as a man.

He may begin to wonder, â€œWhy is she saying that? Was I not man enough for her? What will I do without her? Will I ever be able to get another woman like her? Maybe I won't. I have to get her back. I'll never find someone like her again. I have to try to convince her not to move on. I have to get her to understand how much I love her and want her back.â€

However, the big problem with thinking in an insecure way like that, is that it automatically begins to change a man's behavior and actions.

For example: He will find that, all of a sudden, he canâ€™t stop himself from becoming clingy or needy (e.g. he bombards her with texts to stay on her mind, he keeps asking, â€œAre you seeing anyone else yet?â€ or he keeps coming up with excuses to call her or even see her).

Although he may tell himself that he has good reasons for texting, calling or showing up at her place uninvited, the fact is this type of behavior makes a woman pull away even more.

Why?

Insecurity, clinginess and neediness are not qualities that women find attractive in men.

Rather than make a woman think, “He’s really taking our break up badly. This just proves to me that he must really love me. Maybe I should give him one more chance because he clearly needs it.” she will usually just think something like, “I thought he was emotionally stronger than this when I first started dating him. What happened to him? Why did he change into an insecure, needy guy who can’t accept that it’s over between us? If he thinks this kind of behavior is going to make me change my mind about being broken up though, he’s sadly mistaken. If anything else, he’s just convinced me that I really do need to move on and find happiness with another guy. He’s just not the type of man I can look up to, respect and love for life. He doesn’t know how to be the kind of man I need. I don’t want to wait any longer for him to hopefully learn that and be it. He’s just going to have to deal with losing me. I’m going to have to find a guy who knows how to make me happy.”

Here’s the thing!

If you want your ex to see you as a better option to any other guy, you need to show her via the way you now talk, act, think, behave and interact with her that you are now the kind of man she always wanted you to be.

Don’t say, “Look, I’ve changed! Please give me another chance.”

That doesn’t work because it comes across as desperate and gives her too much power over you, which she doesn’t want.

Instead, you have to let her experience it for herself when she talks to you on a phone call, or in person.

When she realizes that she can respect you, feel attracted to you and love you again, her desire to find a new guy will fade away.

You will be her number one option and she will feel compelled to explore that option and see how it goes.

Then, as long as you know how to keep the relationship together, she is going to be yours once again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Said She Likes Who She is Without Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why an ex girlfriend will say that she likes who she is without you:

1. She was never able to be her true self around you

[image: She was never able to be her true self around you]

If a woman is normally very confident and sociable, but her boyfriend ends up becoming shy and introverted, it can cause her to feel as though she's not being her true self anymore.

Another example is where a woman is usually a bit feisty or challenging, but finds that she has to suppress that side of herself because her boyfriend is too emotionally sensitive and starts to sulk and complain if she isn't nice, sweet and gentle with him all the time.

[image: Girlfriend not able to be her true self]

Another example is when a guy lacks drive and ambition in life and encourages her to be the same.

She then holds herself back (e.g. doesn't aim to get a promotion at work, doesn't get the degree she always wanted, spends most of her time relaxing, drinking, getting high, browsing social media, hanging out with him and his friends), because she doesn't want to make her boyfriend feel as though she is leaving him behind in life.

By suppressing her true self (i.e. the ambitious, forward-thinking side to herself), she ends up settling for being less successful than she would be if she was on her own, or if she were in a relationship with a different man.

If she realizes that she isn't being her true self in the relationship, she might get to the point where she resents her boyfriend for holding her back or making her be someone that she doesn't want to be. She then breaks up with him, so she can be free to be who she really wants to be.

Her ex boyfriend might then say to her, "Why are you doing this? I still love you. Please let's try work things out between us again. How can you just turn your back on me/on us?" only for her to reject him, by saying something along the lines of, "Sorry, but I like who I am without you. I haven't felt this happy in a long time."

Here's the thing|

For a woman to want to stay in a relationship with a man, she needs to feel as though he is bringing out the best in her, not the worst.

If a guy can't do that, she will eventually break up with him at some point.

If a guy can change and allow her to be her true self, she will be happy with him again and won't want to leave.

Likewise, if a man has been dumped by his ex girlfriend in a case like this, he can get her back by interacting with her and letting her see that she can now be her true self around him.

He should not say something like, "I will let you be your true self" or anything like that.

Instead, he has to interact with her on a phone call or in person and let her see for herself that she really does feel differently when she talks to him now.

She likes who she is with him now and she wants more of it.

Another possible reason why an ex girlfriend will say that she likes who she is without you is becauseâ€¦!

2. You and her got into the blame game

[image: The blame game in relationships]

Most relationships have their ups and downs, but the couples who stay together are the ones who understand that no-one is perfect and that arguments, disagreements and mistakes will happen along the way and it's not a reason to turn and run from the relationship.

When a couple doesn't have that mutual understanding, they will often end up blaming each other for the problems in the relationship, until one or both of them end up feeling tired and stressed from the relationship and wanting to leave.

Eventually a woman might start thinking things like, â€œI hate who I have become in this relationship. Weâ€™re always nagging, whining and blaming each other. Thereâ€™s just no peace and understanding between us anymore. I'm not the happy go lucky woman I used to be. I used to be so sweet, nice and loving. Now, I just feel like crap. Maybe it's because of him.â€

She may decide to just walk away and try to find a new man, rather than putting up with a relationship has become emotionally toxic.

So, if your ex is saying that she likes who she is without you, it could be because you and her kept making the same mistakes over and over again, without either one of you taking responsibility for your actions (i.e. getting into the blame game).

To get her back, you need to be the more mature person and show her (via your actions and the way you interact with her) that youâ€™re not that guy anymore.

Let her see that you have learned from your past mistakes and are a better man now.

Another possible reason why an ex woman will say that she likes who she is without you is becauseâ€¦!

3. You were too controlling

[image: You were too controlling]

Women do like to be with a man who is dominant, but they don't like to be with a man who is controlling to the point where she ends up feeling as though she's not her true self.

For example: A woman's boyfriend might stop her from seeing her single friends, he might check her phone/e-mail/social media to see who she is interacting with, forbid her to talk to/hang out with any guys at work and even insist that she wear only the types of clothes that he approves of.

Sometimes guys do that because they are insecure and sometimes they do it because they just don't know how else to behave when in a relationship with a woman.

For example: A guy might think, â€œThis is how my father treats my mother and they've managed to stay together. Yes, they aren't the happiest, most in love couple in the world, but they are together, so I should be doing the same thing. Besides, isn't being jealous a clear sign of how much I love her? She should be flattered that I care so much about what she does, what she wears and who she hangs out with. She is lucky that I love her this much. She needs a man like me to take care of her.

Without me, her life would be a mess. â€œ

Yet, here's the thingâ€œ

A woman will always be happier, more in love with, more respectful of and more attracted to a man who lifts her up and trusts her, compared to a man who brings her down and is suspicious of her.

Whether a man is being controlling because he is insecure and is worried about losing her, or because he doesn't know how else to behave in a relationship, it really doesn't matter to the woman.

What matters to a woman is how she feels in the relationship.

If a woman doesn't feel like she can respect her man, then she won't be able to feel attracted to him anymore and as a result, she will fall out of love with him.

It won't matter how much he tries to control her, or how much he tries to suck up to her after she breaks up with him.

If she can't respect him as her man, the whole thing falls apart.

This is why, to get her back, your first priority must be to regain her feeling of respect for you by interacting with her on a phone call or in person and letting her see that you really are different now.

So, if your ex girlfriend is saying that she likes who she is without you because you became too controlling, you can recover from that.

How?

By turning your past controlling behavior into something you and her can laugh about together and as a result, she will naturally begin to believe that you really have made some changes to your thinking and approach to her and to women in general.

For example: If she says, *â€œI like who I am without you,*â€œ you can jokingly say, â€œWhat are you talking about? Do you mean to say you didn't like being controlled by me, told what to wear and who to hang out with? Who wouldn't want that?" and then have a laugh with her about that.

By using humor to laugh at yourself and your past behavior, it shows her that you now understand where you went wrong.

It also allows her to feel some respect and attraction for you again for having the balls to acknowledge your past mistakes (i.e. your controlling behavior), rather than acting like it was fine or it never happened.

She then begins to think to herself, *â€œWow, he's actually admitting that he was controlling in the relationship with me. I can't believe I'm thinking this, but maybe he really has changed. Maybe if I did end up giving him another chance, things would be different this time. Am I crazy to be thinking this way? Should I see him? Why do I feel like I want to?"*â€œ

She will then drop her guard a bit and allow herself to interact with you some more (over the phone and in person) to test whether you really have changed, or if you were just putting on an act and will quickly return to your old, controlling ways.

Another possible reason why an ex woman will say that she likes who she is without you is becauseâ€œ

4. One of you is a lot more mature than the other

At the beginning of a relationship, a couple will usually overlook obvious flaws in each other (e.g. they are very different people, one is more of a jealous type than the other, they don't get each other's sense of humor, they don't have the same kinds of friends, one of them seems to be a bit selfish or self-centered), because the spark of new love and lust is so strong.

So, rather than look at the other person with a more critical eye, a man and a woman will usually think something like, â€œHe/she is okay! We don't see eye to eye on some things, but I'm sure we can iron that out in the future as long as we love each other enoughâ€œ or, “We're not a perfect match, but this is fun for now. Besides, we both enjoy the sex, so why not?”

Yet, after the initial thrill of being with someone new wears off, the flaws or unappealing traits of the other begin to become more obvious and sometimes even annoying.

For example: If one person matures a lot faster than the other, they will naturally start to grow apart and one or both of them will realize that they're no longer a good enough match.

So, if a woman matures faster than her man (e.g. she stops partying all the time and wants to focus more on her studies or career, whereas he prefers to hang out with friends and be more carefree. She becomes more serious and goal oriented, while he prefers to do things day-by-day. She wants to get outside and do things on the weekend with friends who are in relationships too, but he just wants to stay home and drink or get high and play video games or watch TV), she will eventually begin to feel that she is being forced to suppress her true self for the sake of the relationship.

Before long, she will start to resent him for not growing up and reaching for experiences at different levels of life (e.g. getting promoted at work, having children, getting married, getting a house together, hanging out with friends who are also leveling up in life).

If he doesn't listen to her when she expresses her dissatisfaction to him, then the respect, attraction and love that she originally felt for him will begin to fade away.

Of course, sometimes it happens the other way around.

For example: A man might grow up and mature faster than his woman and that may cause him to try to change her (e.g. by forcing her to be more responsible than she wants to be, expecting her to follow along with him even though she doesn't want to, pressuring her to get married or get pregnant, pushing her to work harder to get a promotion at work).

Either way, there comes a point where a woman may start to think, “I used to feel good around him, but now it just feels horrible. I'm not happy anymore. I can't be my real self with him. It's so forced. I have to leave him. I have to take care of myself and how I feel. I've had enough of this.”

She then breaks up with him and focuses on being the person she wants to be, rather than the person she was being forced to be when with him.

3 Common Mistakes to Avoid in Your Situation

Regardless of what your ex is saying right now, you have to understand that you really can change how she feels.

You really can reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you, make her love the new you and make her miss being in a relationship with you.

To ensure that you are successful at getting her back, try to avoid making one or more of the following mistakesâ€¦

1. Asking her if she will ever change her mind

If a guy hears his woman say that she likes who she is now without him, it can be a real punch in the stomach.

It's like he has no value in her life anymore and is no longer necessary.

So, when a guy is feeling like there is no hope, or if he doesn't actually know that he can actively change her mind by reactivating her feelings, he might ask her something like, â€œDo you think that you will ever be able to change your mind and give me another chance? Can you at least promise youâ€™ll think about it before you decide to move on forever?â€

Deep down, he hopes that she will realize how much he cares for her and then agree to get back with him again based on that.

Although it would be nice if a woman's psychology worked in that way, it doesn't.

When a woman doesn't have feelings for a guy and he isn't doing anything to fix that (i.e. by interacting with her and reactivating her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him), she won't feel motivated to change her mind.

In fact, she will probably try to move on from him even faster to avoid being pulled back into a relationship out of feelings of guilt for the pain he is experiencing.

So, if you want your ex to change her mind, you have to make her change it by reactivating her feelings for you.

The more you interact with her and make her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you again, the more she will naturally begin to miss you and want to be around you.

However, if you just sit back and do nothing to change her mind about you, she will probably move on with a new guy and forget about you.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€

2. Telling her that you will wait for her

When a woman says that she likes who she is without her ex boyfriend, he might think she's just going through a phase and will eventually snap out of it and come back to him.

So, he might say to her, â€œThat's fine. You deserve to have time to yourself. I promise that I will wait for you no matter how long it takes.â€

Yet, once again, that's not what a woman wants to hear.

Him waiting for her is not going to change how she feels (i.e. turned off by him).

If he wants her back before she falls in love with a new guy and gets into a serious relationship that last for years or a lifetime, he has to do something about it, rather than taking a back seat and hoping that she comes back on her own.

Sometimes a woman will come back on her own, but it's such a low success rate approach that it's not recommend for men who actually want to get their woman back quickly and keep the relationship together.

If a guy doesn't care about getting her back, then great â€ just wish her the best and if she comes back on her own, you can then decide if you want to give her another chance.

Yet, the chances of a woman going back to a man that she no longer fully respects, feels attracted to or loves is pretty much close to zero.

So, if your ex girlfriend isn't going to be missing you like crazy and running back to you, it's important that you make her feel attracted to you again, so she actually has something to miss.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Asking her what you need to change to make her happy to be with you

When a guy has no idea how to re-attract his ex-girlfriend, he will often make the mistake of asking her to tell him what he needs to change.

Asking a woman what you need to change is the worst thing you can do.

Why?

When a guy says, â€œJust give me a chance. Tell me what you want me to change and Iâ€™ll do it, I promiseâ€ what a woman actually hears is something like this, â€œPlease teach me how to be the man that you want me to be, because I donâ€™t have a clue. I need you to take the lead me through the ex back process, so I can get you back. Tell me what to do and how to do it. I will then be a good little boy and do whatever you say. You have all the power now. I will do whatever you want.â€

The woman then feels turned off by his desperation, cluelessness about how to attract a woman and lack of masculinity (i.e. inability to come up with a solution, or learn a solution and then use it to fix the problem between him and her).

She then says something like, â€œYou just don't get it. Please, just accept that it's overâ€ and then stops wanting to talk to him anymore.

A guy might then feel angry and ask himself, â€œWhy canâ€™t she just tell me what to do? Wouldnâ€™t it make things easier for both of us? She would get what she wants from a man and I wonâ€™t be annoying her or turning her off anymore. Why can't she just tell me? She has the answers. Why won't she help me?â€

One of the main reasons why is that a woman doesn't want to have to try to make things work with a guy who doesn't yet understand how to be a man.

She wants to be able to relax and be a feminine woman who is naturally in love with her man, rather than having to teach him, help him and guide him until he eventually becomes one.

Additionally, if she has girlfriends who are happy in their relationship, she will know that there are men out there who understand how to be the man in a relationship and make a woman feel happy, in love and attracted.

She doesn't feel like it's fair that she has to be stuck trying to help her guy man up or create a more enjoyable relationship dynamic.

So, if you want to convince your ex to give you another chance, you need to change and improve some of the things that turned her off before you interact with her again.

Don't waste months doing that.

Get it done in the next few days and then contact her and start the ex back process.

If you waste time and just hope that she comes back, you will almost certainly be disappointed when you see that she is happy and in love with a new guy.

She is your woman, so do something about it.

Get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Got Dumped and it Hurts

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 ways to stop the pain and then get her back:

1. Understand that getting dumped is normal and happens to most guys at least once in their life

Getting dumped is a horrible experience for most guys.

Yet, the longer they spend thinking about how much it hurts, the worse their mindset about women, relationships and themselves becomes.

For example: A guy might start thinking, “There must be something seriously wrong with me,” or “Good guys don’t get dumped, so I must be a real jerk for it to happen to me,” or “It’s all my fault. I stuffed things up so badly that she couldn’t stand to be with me anymore. Why would she ever want me back? How will I ever get another quality woman like her to love me?”

Here’s the thing!

Although it definitely hurts to get dumped, you need to realize that it’s not the end of the world.

Couples break up all the time.

You’re not a bad person because you got dumped and even though it might seem like it now, it really isn’t all your fault.

Mistakes happen in relationships.

You made some mistakes and so did she.

If you play your cards right with her, you will be able to get back into a relationship that is even better than it was before.

So, rather than dwelling on the pain and maybe even start thinking that there’s something seriously wrong with you because of what happened, you need to understand and accept that break ups are normal and happen all the time.

In fact, according to some statistics, up to 70% of couples break up within the first year of a new relationship.

The good news however, is that as much as 50% of those couples get back together again and end up being happier than before.

The statistics are a lot higher for men who follow the steps of my program (Get Your Ex Back Super System) as well.

So, you definitely have a strong chance of getting her back.

You and your ex can be one of the couples who get back together.

If you want the pain of being dumped to go away, start focusing on the fact that you can get her back and are going to feel amazing when it happens.

2. Understand that it is possible to get her back

[image: Understand that it is possible to get her back]

When a woman is saying things like, *â€œItâ€™s over between us! I donâ€™t love you anymore. Just accept that and leave me alone,*â€œ itâ€™s understandable that a guy might believe he no longer has a chance with her.

He may then start thinking things like, *â€œThereâ€™s nothing I can do to change her mind. She doesnâ€™t want me anymore and I just have to accept that Iâ€™m never going to get her back. Itâ€™s hopeless. I got dumped and it hurts. Iâ€™m alone now. I have no chance with her. What we had is over. I will always miss her and want her back, but I canâ€™t get her back because she said that she doesnâ€™t want me.*â€œ

Not only can a guy drive himself crazy thinking like that, but it can also get him into a frame of mind that will turn his ex off if he happens to talk to her or interact with her (i.e. she will pick up on his insecurity and self-doubt and feels even more turned off by him as a result).

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Getting an ex back is a lot easier than most guys realize.

If you interact with your ex in a way that sparks her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you (e.g. you maintain your confidence even though sheâ€™s telling you she doesnâ€™t want you anymore, you use humor to break down her defenses, youâ€™re more emotionally dominant than her during interactions so she feels more feminine with you now) while also letting her see that youâ€™re not desperately trying to get her back into a relationship, her guard comes down.

Even though she may have firmly believed that nothing could ever make her get back with you again, she now finds herself thinking things like, *â€œHe really has changed. I enjoy interacting with him now. What is happening to me? I feel drawn to him again. Maybe itâ€™s not too late for us. Maybe this is going to be the love story of my life. Maybe if I donâ€™t give him a chance, I will regret it and miss him for life. I have to give him a chance! I have to see what happens when I do.*â€œ

You can then get her back and build on her newfound feelings for you, so she doesnâ€™t ever want to leave you again.

On the other hand, if you donâ€™t believe that itâ€™s possible for your ex to want you back, then you wonâ€™t be able to convince her to give you another chance because she will feel turned off by your self-doubt and insecurity.

Thatâ€™s why itâ€™s so important that you believe in yourself and in your ability to get her back.

If you donâ€™t, neither will she.

She will accept your self-doubt and see you as a guy who was once good enough for her, but isnâ€™t anymore.

She will then try to move on by flirting with new guys who are more confident than you around her.

Soon enough, you will become a distant memory.

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

Confidently re-attract her and get her back.

Believe in yourself!

Know that you can do it!

Another thing you can do to stop the pain and get her back isâ€¦

3. Regain control of your emotions and confidence

[image: Regain control of your emotions]

Let's face it

Getting dumped is an awful thing to go through.

It hurts deep down in your soul and you can also feel the pain in your body.

Your body heats up, your stomach churns and you feel stressed.

It's not a nice thing to go through at all.

However, you can't let those feelings take control of you and bring you down.

Why?

When you're feeling down, it's very easy to say and do the wrong things around your ex and cause her to feel even more turned off by you than before (e.g. seeking pity from her, behaving in an insecure way, giving her too much power, appearing to be emotionally weak, getting angry at her).

The reality is that your emotional state is either going to be attracting your ex back to you, or turning her off even further.

For example: When a guy has just been dumped, he might feel hurt, desperate, or shocked.

He may then do things that he wouldn't do under normal circumstances (e.g. cry, beg and plead, send his ex desperate texts, e-mails and messages via social media declaring his love for her).

He may also start doubting in himself and his value and attractiveness to her.

Although he is only behaving in that way because of the pain he is feeling, in most cases, his ex doesn't see it that way.

She starts thinking, "Eeeew! I can't believe how he's reacting to the break up! Not only is he being needy and desperate now, but he is showing me that he is a lot less confident than I ever believed he was. I feel relieved that we're broken up. I would hate to be stuck with an emotionally sensitive and weak guy like him for life. I can now move on without any doubts that I made the right decision. I am going to find myself a real, confident man who I can respect and admire."

So, even though you're feeling hurt about getting dumped, make sure that you regain control of your emotions and your confidence, before you attempt to contact your ex again.

You don't have to wait a long time to do that.

In most cases, giving yourself 3 to 7 days is enough time, especially if you are getting help from me by watching, Get Your Ex Back Super System.

When you watch the program, you will quickly regain control of your emotions, feel confident and ready to interact with her and more importantly, know exactly what to say and do to get her back.

Another thing you can do to stop the pain and get her back isâ€¦

4. Get clear on what will make her want you again

[image: Get clear on what will make her want you back]

One of the easiest ways to regain your ex's respect, attraction and love is by showing her that you understand her real, secret reasons for breaking up with you.

Not only will she feel understood when you show her that, but she will also see that you're now at a different level as a man than before.

She will then find it a lot more difficult to hold on to her excuses for not wanting to be with you anymore, because those reasons no longer exist.

So, before you do anything else to get her back, make sure that you get clear on what will actually make her want you again.

For example: Ask yourself

- What was it about my thinking and behavior that turned her off (e.g. Did I become too insecure and emotionally dependent on her? Was I too emotionally sensitive and ended up behaving like a bit of a woman rather than an emotionally strong man? Did I put her first in my life or did she feel like she was less important to me than my work/friends/family/hobbies? Did I start out treating her well, but end up treating her with less and less respect and love?)?
- What do I think was missing from our relationship (e.g. Did I make her feel feminine and girly when she was with me, or was she more like my friend or roommate? Did I maintain the spark of attraction between us, or did it die out? Did we still enjoy a healthy sex life, or did the sex become too boring, or even fade away completely?)?
- Did she want me to behave in ways that I wasn't aware of (e.g. Did I end up giving her too much power over me? Did I have a clear purpose and direction in life, or was I just living moment to moment? Did I give her the love and attention she needed, or did I take her for granted?)?
- Did I try to get her to accept things about me that just aren't attractive (e.g. my lack of self belief, my jealous or controlling behavior, my needy dependence on her)?

When you get clear on where you went wrong, you can then change and improve the things that will actually matter to her.

Then, when you interact with her, she will be able to see that you've put in the effort to become a better man and will automatically feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

On the other hand, if you try to get her back without changing or improving anything about yourself, she will almost certainly continue to push you away by saying, It's over. Just accept that and move on. I'm not giving you another chance. Please leave me alone.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Back After Being Dumped

Even though it hurts that you've been dumped, you don't have to remain stuck in that place emotionally and waste time feeling like crap as she moves on without you.

Instead, you can quickly make some changes and improvements to your thinking, behavior and the way you respond to her and then get her back.

To ensure that you do get her back, try to avoid making one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Keeping painful thoughts in your mind, rather than focusing on the positives of the situation

It's normal to ask yourself questions, Why did this happen? What did I do wrong? after getting dumped.

Asking questions like that can help you understand where you went wrong, so you can then change in the ways that will impress your ex and make her want to give you another chance.

Unfortunately though, in a lot of cases, rather than use the information for his own good, a guy simply gets stuck in a web of painful, negative thoughts (e.g. It's all my fault, I've lost my ideal woman and I will never get her back, my life is over. Nothing is worthwhile without her) and wastes precious time after the break up, which then allows her to get over him and begin to move on.

Rather than focusing on the positives of the situation (e.g. he now knows where he was going wrong, what it takes to keep a relationship happy and how to attract her back), he allows his negativity drag him down and stop him from doing anything to get her back.

Then, by the time he contacts his ex again (e.g. after weeks or months), she may have moved on and gotten into a relationship with a guy that makes her feel happy and in love.

Don't let that happen to you.

Yes, you got dumped and it hurts.

However, ask yourself this: Is it better to dwell on the pain of the situation for weeks or months and run the risk of her moving on without you, or quickly do what needs to be done to get her back?

You probably already have the answer.

So, make sure that you focus on the positives of the situation (i.e. you have been able to learn where you went wrong, you have quickly made improvements to your ability to attract her and it has caused you to become a better man) and then re-attract her and get her back.

The next mistake is

2. Feeling like you're not good enough for her anymore

[image: Feeling like you're not good enough for her anymore]

One of the first thoughts that a guy might have after getting dumped is that she dumped him because he isn't good enough for her and never could be.

What he doesn't realize is that feeling unworthy of her love only makes him seem less attractive to her (and to other women). Why?

Women are attracted to men who believe in their attractiveness and value to women, even if the man isn't rich, successful or handsome.

You may have noticed that in your life, when you've seen women in love with men and thought, "What does she see in him?"

What she sees in him is his belief in himself and it attracts her.

So, if a woman's ex guy doubts his value and attractiveness to her, she picks up on that and starts to think, If he doesn't believe that he's good enough for me, maybe he's right. Maybe I can do better.

She then starts to look for a new guy who believes in himself and makes her feel the kind of attraction that every woman wants to feel around a man.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

3. Discussing the pain with friends and family

Although itâ€™s natural for a guy to want to discuss his pain with his friends and family, it usually only makes things worse.

Why?

Most of the advice is usually things like, â€œOh, don't worry...you will get over it one day,â€ or â€œDon't worry, you'll find a nice girl one day who is right for you,â€ or â€œThere are plenty of fish in the sea. No need to worry about herâ€ or, â€œIf she loves you, she will come back. If not, don't worry, you will find another girl.â€

None of that helps because he wants her back.

Hearing things like that only makes him feel more alone and like no one understands.

So, do yourself a big favor and stop discussing what happened with anyone else.

You know what you want, which is to get her back, so just focus on making it happen.

Youâ€™ll get much better results using that approach, compared to going round in circles talking about the pain with friends or family.

When you take positive action (i.e. properly reactivate your exâ€™s feelings of respect, attraction and love for you), your pain will automatically start to vanish.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

4. Seeking pity from her

Sometimes a guy will try to make his ex woman feel sorry for the pain that he is experiencing, in the hope that she then feels guilty enough to want to give him another chance.

He might say to her, â€œHow could you have dumped me the way you did? Itâ€™s like I was a piece of garbage to you. I never would have imagined you could be so cold-hearted like that. Didn't what we had mean anything to you? Well I hope youâ€™re satisfied. If making me suffer was what you wanted, then congratulations, youâ€™ve achieved your goal. I haven't been able to eat or sleep properly and have been running into problems at work because I can't concentrate. If that's the effect you wanted to have on me, then you achieve that. Thanks for ruining my life.â€

Yet, in most cases, rather than make her change her mind, it just makes her more determined to not give in to his emotional blackmail and move on with a new man.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

A woman wants to be with a man because it feels right (i.e. she respects him, feels sexually attracted and loves him), not because she feels sorry for him because heâ€™s too emotionally weak to cope with a break up or be on his own for a while.

So, if you want to reawaken your exâ€™s respect and attraction for you, seeking pity from her is not the way to go about it.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

5. Cutting off contact and hoping that she will come back, even though she doesn't want you anymore

In some cases, a guy will simply fade into the background after being dumped by completely cutting off contact with his ex.

He may think, “I need time to heal from the pain of being dumped and in the meantime, she will get a chance to miss me. When she realizes what she lost by dumping me, she will then come back to me.”

Yet, that almost never happens.

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy (enough for her to actually dump him), not hearing from him usually isn't going to cause her any sleepless nights.

Instead, she will assume that he got the message that the relationship is over and is now trying to move on without her.

As a result, she will focus on moving on by going out with friends, hooking up with other guys and going on dates with the one or two guys who may have been hanging around her waiting for her to break up (e.g. at work, at university, through friends).

So, if you want your ex back, don't wait for her to come to you one day.

In most cases, ignoring her by cutting off contact will only speed up the process of losing her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Talking With My Ex Again, But She is Guarded

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 common reasons why an ex woman will be guarded when she begins talking to her ex again

1. She senses that you want her to commit to a relationship

[image: She senses that you want her to commit to a relationship]

When a man is able to begin talking to his ex woman again, he may think, “Okay, this is good! We’re talking again! That’s the first step to us getting back into a relationship.”

Yet, here’s the thing

Just because you’re keen to get back into a relationship with her, it doesn’t necessarily mean that your ex feels the same way.

She might just be curious to talk to you to see how she feels, but isn’t thinking, “I want to get back into a relationship.”

So, if she senses that you’re secretly hoping to get back into a relationship (e.g. you’re being very nice to her, are trying to get her to go on a date with you, you keep wanting to discuss the relationship and how and her can fix things between you), it can cause her to be guarded because she doesn’t want to make you think that you’ve already won her back and she is ready for a relationship.

If you want your ex to drop her guard and open up to the idea of getting back together again, you to avoid making her feel like she is under pressure to commit to the idea of being in a relationship with you.

You need to stop thinking about every conversation that you have with her as your last chance to get her back into a relationship with you and instead, just focus instead on having fun together.

The more that you make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again, the more she will be able to relax her guard and open herself up to reconnecting with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

Then, getting back together will happen naturally, because it will feel good for both of you.

On the other hand, if she senses that your number one focus is getting her to commit to a relationship, she will continue to keep her guard up.

Another possible reason why your ex is guarded around you is because

2. She’s not fully re-attracted to you yet

[image: She's not fully re-attracted to you yet]

In a lot of ex back cases, when a guy starts talking to his ex again, he makes the mistake of being too neutral with her (i.e. talking in a friendly, straightforward manner and avoiding flirting with her or creating sexual tension).

He may try to convince himself that being neutral is the way to go, by saying to himself, “I need to take things slowly with her so I don’t scare her off. I’m just going to be a good friend to her by being there for her. Doing that will show her that I care and that she can always rely on me.”

Yet, rather than making her think, â€œAww, heâ€™s being so sweet to take things slow with me and just being there for me,â€ a woman will usually think, â€œThings feel weird between me and him now. We talk, but there is no spark. I donâ€™t know what he wants from me. Does he just want to be my friend? Should I start dating other guys then? Maybe I should date a new guy to see how my ex reacts. If he doesnâ€™t care, then he just wants to be my friend, but if he does, then clearly he has been acting like a friend just to stay on my mind.â€

Obviously, you donâ€™t want that to happen right?

If not, make sure that you do more than just talk to your ex in a neutral, friendly way.

If you want her back for real, youâ€™ve got to actively make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

Another possible reason why your ex is being guarded when talking to you, isâ€

3. She is testing to see if you will lose confidence in yourself

[image: She is testing to see if you will lose confidence in yourself]

Many women will test their exâ€™s confidence by being guarded and not making it easy for him to win her back.

A woman wants to see if he will maintain his confidence, or if he will start feeling insecure and unworthy of her love.

Will he give up and walk away because she isnâ€™t making it obvious that she wants him back, or will he persevere until he has her back in his arms and hears her say, “I love you” once again?

Will he realize that sheâ€™s just testing his confidence, or will he take it as a sign that heâ€™s not good enough for her anymore?

If he canâ€™t pass her confidence test, she will perceive him as being emotionally weak and unable to cope with the challenges that life throws at him.

As a result, she will lose respect for him and wonâ€™t be able to feel safe with him as her man.

On the other hand, if he can maintain his confidence even though she is being guarded, she will start to feel surges of respect and attraction for him again.

Sheâ€™ll then drop her guard, open back up to him and he can then get her back.

The next possible reason why your ex is being guarded when youâ€™re talking to her, isâ€

4. She doesnâ€™t want to seem too keen in case you change your mind or lose interest in her

[image: She doesn't want to seem too keen, in case you lose interest in her]

A woman will sometimes keep her guard up around her ex, because she doesnâ€™t want to open herself up to the possibility of getting hurt.

For example: Imagine that a woman broke up with a guy and then, after a few days, he starts texting her again or talks to her on the phone and sounds like heâ€™s interested in working things out between them.

In her heart, sheâ€™s glad that heâ€™s making the effort to interact with her and get the relationship back together.

She may even be thinking things like, â€œMaybe I made a mistake breaking up with him. Maybe we can make things work between us. I really want to believe that we can be together again.â€

Yet, at the same time, she may begin to worry, â€œDonâ€™t let your guard down so easily! What if he changes his mind and says that he isn't interested in getting back with you? You will then be the one who got dumped. So, be on your guard. Don't show too much interest!â€ or â€œWhat if this is just a ploy to make me fall in love with him again, so he can dump me to get revenge for breaking up with him? Youâ€™ll get hurt. You need to be careful!â€

As a result, she remains guarded and doesn't want to show too much interest.

Another possible reason why your ex is being guarded when you talk to her, isâ€¦!

5. She doesn't believe that you've really changed

Sometimes, an ex woman will be able to see that her ex is still pretty much the same guy she broke up with.

Heâ€™s still thinking, acting and behaving in the ways that caused her to break up with him in the first place (e.g. he's insecure, needy, emotionally wimpy, unsure of himself and his value to her), so she doesnâ€™t see any point in opening up to him and giving him another chance.

She may think, â€œItâ€™s pointless to waste time with him again. He hasnâ€™t changed and if I drop my guard and allow myself to have feelings for him again, Iâ€™m just going to end up getting hurt one more time. Iâ€™m better off staying closed off and focusing on finding myself a new guy who can give me what I needâ€! I've got to find someone to move on with.â€¦

So, if you want your ex to drop her guard and be open back up to being with you again, you have to make some changes to how you communicate with her and behave around her (e.g. be confident, rather than being insecure, flirt with her, rather than just being neutral or nice, make her laugh, rather than having straightforward conversations all the time or worse, trying to discuss the relationship with her all the time).

When you do that, she will begin to notice that real changes have been made (e.g. youâ€™re now more confident and self-assured, youâ€™re more emotionally mature than before, you no longer allow her to dominate you with her assertive personality, youâ€™re able to make her laugh and smile even though sheâ€™s being closed off and distant towards you) and as a result, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from opening up a little bit more.

5 Mistakes That Some Guys Make When They Start Talking to Their Ex Again

[image: Mistakes guys make when they start talking to their ex again]

Getting an ex to drop her guard and have feelings for you is a pretty easy thing to do.

Yet, if you make one or more of the following mistakes, it won't be as easyâ€¦!

1. Sticking to text, rather than getting on a phone call

In many cases, a guy will assume that his ex won't like it if he calls her, or he will worry that he might end up feeling rejected and hurt if she doesn't answer his call.

So, rather than get her on a phone call where it's easier for him to make her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with him again, he just sticks to the comfort and safety of text messages.

Here's the thing though!

If the only interaction a woman is getting with her ex is via text, she can't fully feel attracted to him because she's unable to hear his voice and get a real sense of how confident he is now.

Texts are okay for getting a conversation started, but you have to transition to a phone call or an in person meet up as soon as possible.

Otherwise, you run the risk of getting into text conversations that go nowhere, or her losing interest in texting you because it takes too much effort and she doesn't get enough reward from it (i.e. she's not feeling sparks of respect, attraction and love and instead, is feeling a bit annoyed, turned off and bored by all the texts).

Another mistake is!

2. Trying hard to impress her via text, by joking around too much or putting way too much effort into each reply

Where some guys go wrong is by thinking that they can make an ex woman drop her guard by being funny or by always saying 'the right thing' to her via text.

For example: A guy might think to himself, â€œMaybe if I joke around with her more, she will realize that I'm not being all serious or pushy with her and she will then relax and open up to me.â€

Alternatively, he may become obsessive about what he texts her and spend a lot of time over-analyzing his every reply to her.

Secretly, he's hoping that if he says the right thing, she will feel reassured that he's being sincere and will then start thinking, â€œHe's being so thoughtful and considerate. I guess I'm being unreasonable to feel so guarded around him. His texts are great! Clearly his intentions are good and I should trust him again.â€

It would be nice if women were that dumb, but they're not.

Women are intelligent, feeling human beings just like men are and in most cases, they don't fall in love with an ex again just because he is sending nice texts.

In most cases, because a woman can't see her ex guy's body language, or assess his state of mind by analyzing his tonality and behavior, she will think negatively.

For example: If he continually jokes with her, she might think, â€œWhy is he acting so goofy? It's actually quite cheesy that he's joking around with me all the time. He was never like this, so it's obvious that he's trying to impress me or something. Either that, or he's not taking what happened between us very seriously. If he thinks that cracking a few jokes via text will make me forget everything and give him another chance, he's got another thing coming.â€ or â€œDoesn't he realize I can see that he's sucking up to me by saying what he thinks I want to hear? It's easy to hide behind text messages, but I bet if he were face-to-face with me, he wouldn't be able to hide his true self from me. He probably hasn't changed at all and is just trying to convince me that he has by texting what he thinks I want to. Unless I talk to him in person, I'm not going to believe that he has changed.â€

As a result, she remains guarded, even though he is saying all the 'right things' or putting in an effort to make her smile and laugh.

That is why you shouldn't rely 100% on texts to get your ex woman back.

If you truly want her to stop being guarded, you need to interact with her over the phone and in person, where she can hear, or see for herself that you truly have changed and become a better man since the break up.

When you do that, her guard naturally comes down and from there, getting her back becomes a lot easier and quicker.

Another mistake isâ€¦!

3. Not making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction when he talks to her on the phone or in person

One of the biggest mistakes guys make, is being on their best behavior around their ex (e.g. heâ€¦s too nice and polite, he doesnâ€¦t flirt, he pretends that he isn't interested in a relationship with her and only wants to be friends, he does whatever she wants him to do).

He may think, *â€¦I have to keep things neutral and friendly to not scare her off. In this way, I can slowly regain her trust and then, when the moment is right, I can let her know that I still love her and want her back.*â€¦

Yet, hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

If a guy isnâ€¦t actively re-sparking his exâ€¦s feelings of respect and sexual attraction, sheâ€¦s not going to feel very motivated to drop her guard and agree to see him in person or give the relationship another try.

Instead, in a best-case scenario, she may begin looking at him as a friend and quietly start moving on without him.

Alternatively, she may think, *â€¦Iâ€¦m not stupid! I know why heâ€¦s being so sweet and nice around me! He thinks Iâ€¦m going to fall for his Mr. Nice Guy act and give him another chance because of that. Well, he can forget about trying to trick me into forgiving him. Itâ€¦s going to take a lot more than him sucking up to me for that to happen!*â€¦

As a result her guard remains up and it becomes more difficult for him to get her back.

So, if you want your ex to relax and open up, you need to make her have positive feelings for you again (e.g. respect, sexual attraction, love) while also letting her see that you're not desperately seeking a relationship with her.

The more you spark romantic and sexual feelings inside of her without putting pressure on her to commit to a relationship, the more her guard will come down.

She will then want to be around you, hug you, kiss you, have sex with you and get back into a relationship.

Another mistake that other guys make in your situation, isâ€¦!

4. Giving off the energy of needing a relationship from her

After a break up, many women remain guarded and play the â€¦Letâ€¦s wait and see what happens,â€¦ game when talking with their ex.

The ex guy can get her back, but it all depends on how he approaches interactions with her (i.e. if he makes her feel attracted during interactions or not).

So, if a woman gets the sense that her ex guy is simply trying to push her into a relationship before she's fully ready, it's only natural that she will close herself off and be guarded when talking to him.

A woman doesn't want to be pressured into getting back together again, just because a guy wants it.

She wants to feel like it's her decision and her choice, because it feels good to her.

So, if you truly want your ex to drop her guard around you, just relax when talking with her and focus on having fun together, rather than giving her the sense that you're secretly, desperately hoping to hear her say that she wants a relationship with you again.

Another mistake is

5. Interacting with her in ways that turned her off in the relationship

In many cases, a woman's real reasons for the break up will be subtle things that she hasn't told her ex about (e.g. him giving her too much power, him being too understanding or being too nice when she actually wanted him to have more of a backbone).

Those things are more important to her than anything else, but she doesn't want to tell him about it because he will then say, "Okay, cool! I will change those things for you! Give me another chance!"

So, rather than telling him everything, a woman will just break up with a man and then, if he understands why on his own and is able to re-attract her by changing those things, she will open up and give him another chance.

Yet, if he doesn't change and is essentially the same guy who is going to make the same mistakes, she will remain guarded and will quietly begin to move on without him.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Is My Ex Lying When She Says She Still Loves Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The honest truth is that it doesn't matter if the answer is yes or no.

What really matters is this...

Are you making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction when you interact with her?

If yes, then she will naturally feel love for you.

If not, then she will naturally feel turned off by you and not want to get back with you.

All that said, here are some possible signs that she could be lying to you when she says that she still loves you:

1. She never really felt a strong love for you during the relationship and was just with you for something to do

[image: She never felt a strong love for you during the relationship]

Sometimes a woman will get into a relationship with a guy even though she doesn't have strong feelings for him and doesn't plan on staying with him for life.

For example: This can happen when a man and a woman spend a lot of time together (e.g. at work, university, hang out together in the same social circle).

Over time, the guy might develop strong sexual and romantic feelings for her and because of that, he might begin trying to convince her that they should be more than just friends.

Initially, she might resist getting into a relationship with him because she doesn't feel a lot of attraction for him.

However, if he persists for long enough, she might eventually reach a point where she thinks, â€œMaybe this can work. Maybe my feelings for him will grow if we date for a while. Besides, Iâ€™ve got nothing better to do. All my friends are in relationships and it sucks going out with couples when youâ€™re the single girl or tag along. If I start dating him, Iâ€™ll have someone too and if it doesn't work out, I can always break up with him and find someone else. So, why notâ€ | I'll give him a chance.â€œ

She then gets into a relationship with him, even though she doesn't have strong feelings for him.

In other situations, a woman will get into a rebound relationship (i.e. the relationship a woman has right after getting out of a serious, long term relationship), as a way of forgetting about her ex.

Although it might seem fun at the start because she is excited to be kissing and have sex with someone new, those feelings can fade pretty quickly when a woman realizes that her new guy doesn't have the qualities that she really liked about her ex.

It doesn't mean that the relationship can't work though.

If a guy understands how a woman's attraction really works, then he can use that to his advantage to make her feel more attraction for him than she did for her ex.

However, if he isn't aware of how to read a woman's attraction levels and build on them, or if he just assumes that she must love him because she is enjoying the kissing, sex and dates, then she will eventually lose interest.

In the back of her mind, she will always be planning to break up with him at some point (e.g. if she meets someone who seems like a better match, if she gets bored of hanging out with him).

When that happens, rather than come out and say something like, â€œLook itâ€™s over between us. I just donâ€™t have feelings for you and to be honest, I never did. Sorry. Goodbyeâ€ and hurt his feelings, she will instead try to let him down easy by saying something along the lines of, â€œYouâ€™re a great guy, but Iâ€™m not the right woman for you at the moment. I still love you, but for now, just accept that itâ€™s over between us, okay? I just need some space to sort things out in my head and then we can see what happens.â€

Unfortunately, the guy might then spend weeks, months or even years holding on to the hope that she will come back to him because she said that she still loves him.

He may then ask, â€œIs my ex lying when she says she still loves me? Why isnâ€™t she coming back? She said that she loved me. What do I need to do? Give her more time? Do women come back if they love you? What do I do?? How can I get her back?â€

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

If you want your ex back, donâ€™t waste time worrying about what she said when she was being nice.

Instead, just use every interaction you have with her from now on to fully reactivate her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you.

When you do that, she wonâ€™t be lying when she says, â€œI love you.â€

Another sign that your ex might be lying isâ€¦!

2. She has a history of lying to men and stringing them along

[image: She has a history of lying to men and stringing them along]

There are some really nice, honest women out there.

Yet, there are also some mean, vindictive, cold women who just can't be trusted.

For example: Sometimes a woman is a person of bad character and gets a thrill out of messing with guys feelings (e.g. by telling them she loves them to keep them interested in her while she moves on, constantly breaking their heart, making them do lots of nice things for her to hopefully get some affection from her or to spend some time with her).

[image: She enjoys lying to men and messing with their feelings]

In a case like that, no matter what a guy does, or how nice, loyal or loving he is, a woman like that will simply use his devotion to make herself feel good because thatâ€™s just the kind of person she is.

The only kind of man that she will stop behaving like that for is a man who makes her feel a lot of attraction, but doesn't put up with any of her games.

In other words, he is in the position of power and she knows it.

That's what makes a woman like her be a better woman, but the reality is that if she is a very bad person at her core, then that will always be lurking there inside of her.

She will always have the capacity to become that woman again if the man is unable to maintain the position of power in the relationship.

Another sign that she might be lying isâ€¦!

3. She can see that you haven't moved on and is trying to use your desire for her to feel good about herself

In some cases, a woman will enjoy seeing her ex struggle with the emotional pain of trying to get over her.

Even though she doesn't really want him back, the thought of him still thinking about her, missing her and wanting her back makes her feel good about herself.

She may even think, â€œWell, at least I know that if I don't find anyone else, my ex will still be there waiting for me,â€ which makes her feel confident about herself and happy that she is wanted, desired and loved.

To keep those feelings alive, she will keep him hooked on her by staying in contact with him and saying things like, â€œI still love you. Just give me some time. Maybe we can get back together again.â€

As a result of her emotional manipulation, he just can't ever seem to get over her and find himself another woman.

Meanwhile, she goes out into the world every day feeling confident and happy about herself and her life.

This allows her to feel good about herself while she moves on with her life and meets new guys.

It's a nasty thing for a woman to do to a man, but the truth is that many men do that to women after a break up as well.

If you don't want to be in that position, you need to reactivate her feelings of respect, sexual and love for you for real and then let her see that you're not chasing her.

That's what changes the dynamic and makes her want you back.

4 Mistakes That Some Guys Make When an Ex Says She Still Loves Him

You definitely can get her back, but for that to happen easily, just make sure you don't make any of the following mistakesâ€¦!

1. Taking her words too seriously

Whether a woman is saying, â€œI still love you,â€ or â€œI never want to see you again,â€ doesn't really matter that much, because she is simply basing her words on how she feels about you in the present moment.

Additionally, sometimes a woman will say things just to be nice or to avoid an argument.

For example: If a woman realizes that her ex is struggling to come to terms with the break up, she might say something along the lines of, â€œI know that it's not easy to accept we're broken up, but for now, I think it's the best for both of us. I still love you though, okay? So, don't *ever think badly about yourself. I will always care for you and maybe one day in the future we can try again.*â□□

Yet, although her words seem promising, it doesnâ□□t necessarily mean that she wants to get back with him again.

It could, but there's no guarantee that she is being 100% honest.

In other cases, a woman might still be holding on to what caused her to go through with the break up (e.g. he didnâ□□t put enough effort into creating feelings of love, respect and attraction in her so she lost interest in being with him, he stopped making her laugh and feel good when she was with him, he treated her more like a neutral friend than a desirable, feminine woman).

So, even though she might say, "I still love you," it doesn't mean that she is saying, "I still love you and want to be with you."

Instead, it could actually mean, "I love you, but I'm not going to get back with you because you don't know how to make me happy in a relationship. I can see that you haven't changed and probably aren't going to be able to change, so I am going to move on."

Of course, most women aren't going to say that because it could then lead to an argument, to him begging and pleading for another chance or worse, to him becoming aggressive with her.

So, even though your ex is saying that she still loves you, her words donâ□□t really count in this situation because you donâ□□t really know what her motives are for saying it.

The solution is to stop worrying about what sheâ□□s saying and focus instead on making her have real, strong and unforgettable feelings for you from now on.

When that happens, the idea of losing you suddenly begins to bother her.

She starts to feel differently about the relationship and the possibility of getting back together.

On the other hand, if you donâ□□t reawaken her feelings and make her really want you back, then sheâ□□s probably going to keep saying whatever it takes to let you down easily (e.g. "I still love you, but I need more time. Please give me space"), so she can move on without causing a big scene.

The next mistake to avoid isâ□!

2. Assuming that she is the leader of the emotional connection in the relationship

Sometimes a guy will waste a lot of time over-analyzing everything that his ex says to him.

In his mind, he believes that she is the one holding all the cards and is in the power position.

As a result, he talks to her as though he is trying to get a chance with her and makes her feel like she will either have to keep rejecting him, or get back with him out of pity for a little while.

Yet, that approach just causes a woman to lose even more respect, attraction and love for her.

She can see that he doesnâ□□t believe in himself and in his value to her and it turns her off.

Remember: A woman wants to be with a man she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love (i.e. a guy who is confident and emotionally strong enough to take the lead in the ex back process and get her back).

She doesn't want a man who looks at her as being in the power position and tries hard to meet all of her wants, needs and expectations to hopefully get a chance with her.

So, make sure that you're not trying hard to get her to approve of you by being extra nice to her.

That doesn't work.

You've got to awaken her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and romantic love for you and then, let her see that you're not desperately trying to get another chance with her.

That is what works.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

3. Feeling unworthy of her

Itâ€™s only natural that when a woman breaks up a guy with, his confidence might take a bit of a hit.

He may even start to think, â€œShe says that she still loves me, but I don't know if I truly deserve her. I stuffed things up between us so badly that maybe itâ€™s better if I let her go so she can find a guy who is truly worthy of her. I don't deserve her.â€

Yet, thinking like that not only makes him seem less attractive to his ex (which then makes it more difficult to get her back), but it also makes him unattractive to other women because they can sense his lack of confidence and self-worth.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

A woman likes the idea of being with a confident, emotionally strong man who believes in himself and in his value to her.

So, when a guy is being insecure and feels unworthy of her, it does nothing to spark her feelings for him.

If you want your ex to love you for real, you have to believe in yourself and in your attractiveness and value to her completely.

Then, based on that belief, you need to take action to build up her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you so you can then get her back for real.

On the other hand, if you interact with her and she senses that you feel unworthy of her, she will decide that she made the right decision to break up with you and will then focus on fully getting over you and moving on.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

4. Not being able to notice the difference between friendly love and sexual, romantic love

Sometimes a woman will tell her ex that she still loves him and he will then take that as a sign that she wants to get back together.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that there are different kinds of love and when an ex woman says, â€œI still love you,â€ it doesn't always mean love in a sexual and romantic way.

Instead, she might have strong, friendly feelings for him and itâ€™s her way of telling him that she still wants him to be a part of her life as a nice, platonic friend.

Similarly, your ex might not be lying when she says that she still loves you, but itâ€™s possible that she feels friendly, neutral love for you, while you feel sexual, romantic love for her.

Thankfully, whether your ex loves you in a sexual way or loves you like a friend, the course of action that you need to take to get her back is the same.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex is Moving On Faster Than Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex is moving on faster than you:

1. So she can avoid the pain of the break up

[image: So she can avoid the pain of the break up]

Some women find it difficult to deal with the pain of being broken up.

In fact, according to a study published in Evolutionary and Behavioral Sciences, women experience more emotional pain than men after a breakup.

So, rather than face lonely nights and weekends, or deal with the memories of her failed relationship, a woman will usually try to start dating other guys as quickly as possible (in some cases even a few days or weeks after the break up).

Here's the thing though!

Just because your ex is moving on faster than you, it doesn't mean you can't get her back if you really want to.

The most important thing now is that you don't allow negative thoughts, such as, â€œDid our relationship mean nothing to her?â€ or â€œDid she ever love me at all, or was everything we had just a lie?â€ stop you from getting her back.

Thinking that way will only cause you to lose confidence in yourself and potentially delay your attempts to get her back.

If you want her back, you have to do something about it.

You have to actively interact with her (e.g. via text, e-mail, on social media, the phone and in person) and reawaken her feelings for you again.

The more respect and attraction you make her feel for you, the less she will want to move on with someone else.

She will then start wondering, â€œWhy am I feeling like this all of a sudden? Why am I thinking about him all the time? Why does the idea of being with someone else make me feel regret now? Maybe I made a mistake by breaking up with him,â€ and she opens herself up to the idea of getting back with you.

Another possible reason why your ex is moving on faster than you, is because!

2. You didn't re-attract her after the break up, so she didn't feel any motivation to want to get back with you

Regardless of how badly a guy stuffed up in the relationship, a woman can and usually will change how she feels about him if he attracts her.

A man can interact with her and get her respect back, make her feel attracted and she will then begin to feel sparks of love for him again.

Unfortunately, most guys don't know how to go about doing that.

A guy will try to get her back by telling her how much he still cares about her, apologizing to her over and over again for his past mistakes and promising to do anything she wants if she will just give him another chance.

Yet, that isn't what re-attracts a woman and motivates a woman to want to get back into a relationship with a guy that she is no longer attracted to.

What will?

Interacting with her and showing her that you are now a new and improved man (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more emotionally independent, more able to stand up for yourself), so she can naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction.

Of course, just showing her that you've changed doesn't get the relationship back together by itself, but does make her think about you in a more positive light.

She then starts to feel differently about moving on with another guy and instead begins to consider the idea of getting back with you.

The next possible reason why your ex is moving on faster than you, is because

3. You have been waiting for her to want you back, rather than going through the ex back process and getting her back

[image: You have been waiting for her to want you back, instead of taking action to get her back]

Sometimes, a guy might think to himself, "If I give my ex enough time apart and allow things between us to calm down, she will start to miss me. She will then get in touch with me, we can fix our problems and get back together. So, the biggest mistake I can make right now is put pressure on her in any way and cause her to close herself off from me even more. When it comes to getting an ex back, slow and steady wins the race. I will cut off contact and wait."

He then sits around waiting for a sign from his ex that she's ready to give him another chance, only to be shocked when he realizes that she's been moving on.

Here's the thing

If you want your ex back, you have to be active about it, rather than passive by cutting off contact and waiting.

Don't sit around waiting for her to give you permission to begin the ex back process.

Get her back.

If you're not texting, e-mailing, private messaging, calling and meeting up with her in person and reactivating her feelings of respect and attraction for you, then another guy make her feel attracted and take her away from you.

If she has started to move on though, don't worry.

It's not too late to get her back.

Just start interacting with her and interrupting the process of her moving on, by making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

For example: Call her on the phone, or meet up with her in person and then focus on:

- Making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

- Making her feel feminine and girly in your presence, rather than treating her like a neutral friend.
- Flirting with her to create a sexual vibe, rather than being neutral or being on your best behavior around her to not scare her away.

The more sexual and romantic feelings you spark inside of her, the less she will want to cut herself off from you.

Suddenly, she will feel drawn to you in a way that feels good to her and will go back to looking at you as a potential boyfriend again, rather than focusing on moving on without you.

Another possible reason why your ex is moving on faster than you is becauseâ€¦!

4. She never really felt a strong enough attraction or love for you

A woman will sometimes date a guy even though she doesn't feel fully attracted or compatible with him, simply because she doesn't like being single.

Additionally, sometimes a woman will get into a rebound relationship (the relationship a woman has right after getting out of a serious, long term relationship) with a guy who isn't her ideal man, just to help herself get over her ex man and not go back to him.

In both cases, a woman will usually justify her decision to date a guy that she's not fully attracted to by thinking something like, â€œHe's a nice enough guy. I should at least give him a chance. Maybe he will grow on me over time.â€

If the guy can then build on her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him (i.e. grow on her), she will change how she feels about him and she begin thinking of him as her ideal man.

However, if he fails to build on her feelings for him, she will never fully commit herself to being his girl.

She will always secretly be planning to break up with him at some point, even though she will act like she is happy during the relationship.

She will know that when she is ready, she will break up with him and he will be heartbroken.

Then, when she eventually breaks up with him, it will be easy for her to move on because she never felt the kind of attraction and love for him that would cause her to struggle to get over him.

Of course, the good news is that feelings are never set in stone and can and do change.

Even if your ex never felt strong attraction or love for you before, it doesn't mean that you can't make her feel like that now.

In fact, when you interact with her and reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you, making her feel like a sexy, desirable woman by being more emotionally masculine than her), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

Even though she may have previously just thought of you as her â€œgood enough for nowâ€ guy, she will suddenly start imagining what it would be like to stick with you for the long term.

She will realize that you have leveled up as a man and have now become what she always wanted you to be, so if she doesn't give you another chance, it will be her who loses out.

As a result, she will feel drawn to you and will want something to happen.

So, don't let it bother you that your ex is moving on faster than you at the moment.

Just interact with her, reawaken her feelings for you and all of that will change.

Another possible reason why your ex is moving on faster than you, is because

5. She got lucky and found a replacement quickly

In some cases, a woman meets a new guy pretty quickly after her break up who fills in the gaps she felt were lacking in her relationship with her ex (e.g. he's more confident, he makes her feel like a feminine woman around him rather than like a friend, he doesn't give her too much power over him).

If she is lucky to find a guy like that right away, she will use him to get over her ex and move on.

Yet, here's the thing

Just because she is happy with him now, it doesn't mean that he is the one for her, or that you can't get her back now.

You can get her back.

So, call her on the phone or meet up with her in person, reactivate her feelings for you and she will immediately begin to doubt her decision to move on so quickly without you.

3 Common Mistakes That Guys Make When They Realize Their Ex is Moving On Faster Than Them

Although it doesn't feel nice to see your ex moving on while you're still missing her, you need to maintain control of your emotions and interact with her in a way that makes her want you back, rather than turning her off and causing her to want to continue moving on without you.

So, to avoid making it easier for her to get over you, be sure to avoid making one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Asking her if she ever loved you

Simply asking a woman, "Did you ever really love you?" causes her to feel turned off and naturally want to say something like, "I don't know maybe. I'm not sure."

Why?

When a man is insecure about his attractiveness and value to a woman and has to ask whether or not she sees him as being good enough, a woman loses respect and attraction for him.

Women are not attracted to men who need a woman to reassure them of their love or devotion, in order for him to feel confident, worthy, happy or secure about himself and his place in her life.

Women are attracted to men who believe in themselves no matter what a woman says or does.

When you are that type of guy, women automatically love you.

However, when you have ask them, "Do you still love me?" or, "Are you still attracted to me?" or, "Did you ever really love me?" then you're the kind of guy who automatically ruins a woman's feelings for you.

So, don't put yourself in that position.

Just believe in yourself and know that she loved you.

Thinking or saying anything else automatically causes women to lose respect and attraction for you and then question whether or not they really loved you.

Based on the lack of respect and attraction she will be feeling, the answer that will come through for her will be something like, "Well, now that you askâ€¦ maybe I didn't really love you. It took you asking me that to realize it."

Unfortunately, many guys don't realize that and mistakenly ask their ex woman something like, â€œHow could you move on so quickly? Are you really that shallow? Didn't our love mean anything to you? Did you even love me, or was it all a big joke to you?â€

Although he is being honest about his feelings, his lack of belief in himself will turn her off.

Additionally, trying to make her feel guilty about moving on, isn't going to make her want him back.

Rather than think, â€œHe's right. I am shallow for moving on so quickly! I have to get back with him right now!â€ she will feel annoyed with him for being so weak minded, doubting himself and trying to make her feel guilty for moving on without him.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

2. Thinking that you have no chance to get her back now that she is moving on

When an ex is moving on, a guy might begin to think, â€œWellâ€¦ I guess Iâ€ve lost her then. Thereâ€s no way I can get her back now. I should just accept it. Even though I still care for her and want her back, sheâ€ll never be mine again. Itâ€s over between us.â€

By thinking in that way, he's actually preventing himself from moving forward and becoming the kind of man who can attract her back (e.g. confident, determined, a go-getter, emotionally masculine).

If he then happens to interact with his ex on a phone call or in person and she senses his defeatist, self-doubting attitude (i.e. that he's given up on the idea of attracting her back, feels unworthy of her now), she will see it as a sign that she made the right decision to break up with him and will continue to move on.

Hereâ€s the thingâ€¦

Even though itâ€s difficult to watch your ex moving quickly, you shouldn't allow your feelings to paralyze and stop you from doing what you need to do to get her back.

If you don't take action (e.g. by changing and improving, interacting with her and reawakening some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you), not only will you continue feeling depressed, but you also lessen or ruin your chances of getting her back.

Why?

While you sit around assuming you don't have a chance with her anymore, you're just giving her more time to get over you and possibly even fall in love with another guy.

So, if you want her back, stop focusing on the pain of the situation and focus instead on what is actually required to get her back.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

3. Losing confidence in his value to her and other women

Naturally, seeing his ex moving on while heâs not can really dent a manâs confidence and self-esteem.

For example: He might say to himself, âShe was the only woman who truly wanted me and now that sheâs gone, Iâm lost without her. She doesnât want me and I will never be able to get myself another beautiful woman like her. If Iâm honest with myself, Iâd have to admit that my chances of starting over with another quality woman like her are close to zero. Most women these days arenât interested in ordinary guys like me. They only want very good looking guys with big muscles, lots of money and fancy cars. I just canât compete with that. Iâm never going to find another woman. Iâm going to end up single and lonely for the rest of my life. Itâs hopeless.â

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

A womanâs attraction to a manâs physical appearance isnât as powerful as her emotional attraction to him.

What matters most to a woman is who he is when sheâs interacting with him and that makes her feel (i.e. is he confident or insecure, is he charismatic or awkward, is he emotionally masculine or emotionally sensitive?).

Thatâs what really matters.

So, donât waste a lot of time sitting around putting yourself down because your ex is moving on faster than you.

You have to believe yourself and your ability to re-attract her.

Even though she has been moving on, when she experiences the new you, she will naturally begin to feel like she made a mistake to leave you.

When her guard comes down, you can then build on her feelings and get her back.

So, donât waste any more time doubting yourself and focus instead on doing whatever you need to do to get her back.

Are you in?

Are you ready to do this?

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Ex Girlfriend Got Me Fired

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 things you should do now:

1. Decide whether or not it was completely her fault

It's only natural that if your ex girlfriend got you fired, you would be currently feeling a range of negative emotions (e.g. angry about what she did, stressed about having to now find a new job, betrayed by the woman you thought you knew).

What has happened to you isn't a nice thing to be going through.

However, before you do anything else, it's very important that you get to the bottom of what really happened and why.

Although you might feel justified in blaming your ex girlfriend for everything and thinking something like, "It's all her fault! She was being a complete bitch about our break up, which is why she got me fired," it might be possible that you are also partially responsible for what happened.

For example: Ask yourself the following questions!

- Did you create too much drama at work after being dumped (e.g. by telling all your co-workers what happened and then forcing them to pick sides, badmouthing her to her colleagues or to management)?
- Did you threaten to cause problems for her (e.g. by spreading rumors about her character, releasing nude photos, telling people her secrets, ruining her reputation)?
- Did you interfere with her ability to get her work done (e.g. by following her around and trying to get her to talk to you, pleading with her to give you another chance in front of her colleagues, sending her loads of emails to hopefully get her to change her mind)?

[image: Did she lie and get you into trouble?]

On the other hand, was it all her fault?

- Were you completely professional and didn't do anything wrong, but she went and spread lies about you or told management that you were threatening her, even though you weren't?
- Was she bitter about the break up and then sought revenge by getting you fired?
- Did she create drama in the workplace and drag you into it?
- Did she start crying and looking helpless in front of others, to make you seem like a bad ex boyfriend who was harassing her, even though you weren't?

Here's the thing!

If you were partly to blame for what happened, you might want to apologize for your part in it and get her to forgive you, so you can then begin to re-attract her and get her back (if you want to).

Alternatively, if you feel that it was all her fault, you can then decide to

2. Get revenge by getting a better job

If getting fired was your ex girlfriend's fault, then letting it get you down will only cause her to win.

Don't give her the satisfaction.

Rise above the circumstances that she has pushed you into, by getting an even better job than you had before.

Rather than letting the event of getting fired hold you back or take you down, use it as a stepping stone to better yourself and rise up even higher in life.

Do whatever it takes to find yourself an even better job than before (e.g. at a company that your ex girlfriend always wanted to work for, with more pay and with better perks) and then make sure that she finds out about it.

For example:

- Post about it on social media where you know she will probably see it, "Very happy with my new job. I'm now working at _____ and it's the best. Great times ahead!"
- Tell previous co-workers about it, so they can spread the gossip to her.
- Tell mutual friends and let her find out about it eventually.

When she finds out, not only will she be annoyed that her plan to hurt you backfired, but she will also feel attracted to you (of course, she probably won't admit that) for being an emotionally strong, confident man who doesn't lose it when things get rough.

You rise up to the occasion and come through as an even better man than before.

When she realizes that you're risen up to the challenge and are loving your new life, she may then start wondering things like, "Why was I such a bitch to him? What was I thinking? He's not a loser. I'm the loser. Why did I get him fired? Will he ever forgive me for what I did?" and she might then try to contact you to rekindle things between you and her.

You can then decide if you want her back, or if you'd prefer to move on and find a new woman.

3. Get ready to re-attract her if you want her back

Based on what happened between you and your ex, it's almost certain that there's probably not a lot (or any) remaining feelings of respect, attraction and love between you.

To re-spark those feelings, you need to make sure that every time you interact with her from now on, you make her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again.

You want her to be thinking, "This feels so good. I can't believe we had so much drama before. He's so different from the person he used to be. Why did I get him fired? That was a mistake. I was just being stupid. I feel so drawn to him now. I want him back. Will he give me another chance?"

How can you do that?

By changing the things about you that caused her to break up with you in the first place, so she will encounter a very different man from the one she knew before.

For example:

If you allowed her to dominate you emotionally and boss you around in the relationship, you now laugh at her when she gets pushy and you say things like, “Hey, stop being such a control freak. I can make up my own mind about things, thank you very much!” and have a laugh with her about it.

Alternatively, you can say, “Well, someone’s a Little Miss Bossy today, isn’t she? Well, I’ll make my own decisions now, thank you very much” and have a laugh with her about that.

If you were too nervous to stand up to her when she was being disrespectful towards you in the relationship, you no longer tolerate her bad treatment of you and either tell her to stop and behave herself, or laugh at her and hang up the phone (or walk away).

If you felt she was too good for you and put her above you in terms of value while in a relationship, you’ve now realized that she is lucky to have you and actually needs to put in a bit more effort to please you, rather than you having to do more to please her.

When you level up and start attracting her in ways that she wasn’t expecting, she won’t be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

4. Meet up with her and forgive each other’s mistakes

For you and your ex girlfriend to be able to start a new relationship together, you have to forgive each other for past mistakes.

What she did was horrible, but if you want her back, both of you are going to need to get it that at some point.

So, if you’ve re-sparked some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you on a phone call, get her to meet up with you in person.

At the meet up, you can say something along the lines of, “I know that we didn’t handle our break up as well as we should have. We both made mistakes and things definitely weren’t very nice between us for a while as a result. Yet, rather than hold grudges and end up feeling bitter and angry towards each other, we can accept it as a lesson learned and move forward in more mature way. We can forgive each other and just be friends now. So, what do you say? Are you open to clearing the slate between us by forgiving each other and then just being friends?”

By saying something like that to her, you allow her to let go of her negative feelings about you and what happened.

She can then open back up to you, rather than having her guard up because she is holding onto guilt for getting you fired and anger for how you treated her.

When that happens, she stops thinking about all the drama that happened between you and her and starts seeing you as a confident, emotionally strong man who has the courage to forgive her, even though she got him fired.

Without even realizing it, she then stops being on her guard around you and begins to feel good about forgiving you and seeing what can now evolve between you and her.

You can then

5. Hook up with her sexually

Once you and your ex girlfriend have forgiven each other and she’s feeling respect and attraction for you again, you can then progress to giving her a hug and if she doesn't pull away, give her a kiss as well.

From there, if she's open, you can go to your place or hers and hook up with her sexually.

From there, you just need to continue showing her that you've transformed yourself into the kind of man that she can now look up to, respect and feel attracted to (e.g. confident, emotionally masculine, assertive, driven).

As you do that, she will naturally begin to fall back in love with you.

You and her can then get back together in a relationship that is 100% better than the last one.

4 Mistakes That Some Guys Make After Getting Fired Because of Their Ex

Getting fired by an angry or malicious ex girlfriend is no joke.

It sucks and it's a horrible thing to go through.

However, regardless of how much it sucks, make sure that you don't make any of the following mistakes:

1. Getting extremely angry at her, to the point where she is afraid to ever meet up with you again

[image: Did you threaten her and try to cause problems for her?]

For example: A guy might lose his temper with her and say things like, â€œYou're such a bitch! I can't believe what you did! How can you live with yourself now? If you were hoping to push my buttons, then you've succeeded. Congratulations, you've ruined my life! If I had you in front of me right now, I'd wring your little neck, you bitch!â€

Naturally, threats like that cause a woman to become fearful and worry about getting hurt.

So, when he eventually calms down (e.g. 1-2 weeks later) and suggests a meet up, she refuses to see him.

Here's the thing!

There's no excusing your ex's behavior for getting you fired from your job, but regardless of what she did, make sure that you don't make the mistake of stooping to her level and being very nasty in return.

Getting angry is understandable, but taking it out on her and possibly even threatening to hurt her just isn't going to help the situation.

The only thing that losing your temper will accomplish is to make her lose even more respect and attraction for you as a man, which will make getting her back much more difficult.

The next mistake to avoid is!

2. Sending her abusive texts or e-mails

In the same way that getting angry with her doesn't accomplish anything other than to drive a wedge even deeper between you and your ex, so does sending her nasty, abusive texts.

Even though you might be tempted to text her in an angry way, other than the temporary satisfaction, it won't really accomplish anything for you.

Getting angry via text can result in her blocking you on her phone and on social media.

You can also end up coming across as a scary, abusive ex boyfriend and she will pass that information onto others.

Also, when you calm down you realize you want her back, getting her to forgive you and unblock your number will be more difficult than if you had handled the situation in a more emotionally mature way from the beginning.

The next mistake to avoid is

3. Taking all the blame yourself, even though it was really her fault

If it was her fault, then don't beat yourself up about getting fired.

You simply got involved with a woman who turned out to have a bit of a nasty side to her.

So, don't take all the blame if you don't need to.

For example: Sometimes a guy will try to get his ex woman back by taking all the blame for what happened between them, even though she was the one responsible and was being immature, selfish or destructive just for fun.

He thinks, "If I take the blame, she might relax a bit and we can work things out between us. As long as we can clear the air, it won't matter that she was to blame for everything and that she got me fired. I don't want to annoy her any further, so I will just make it out like it was all my fault. That way, she might even take pity on me and give me another chance because she'll feel guilty."

Yet, here's the thing

Taking the blame when you did nothing wrong is the worst thing you can do.

Not only are you rewarding your ex girlfriend for her bad behavior, it will also cause her to lose respect for you for not being able to stand up to her when you know she was clearly in the wrong.

Rather than think, "Oh, wowwww! He's being so sweet to take the blame for me when he knows I stuffed up. That makes me feel so much respect for him! I want a guy who puts up with my crap and lets me destroy his life!" she'll be thinking, "What a sap! Not only did I get him fired in a nasty way, but he's actually taking the blame for it. That's so weak-minded! How could I ever look up to him and respect him when I can treat him like crap and he won't do anything to stop me? What a loser. I don't want a weak, wimpy guy like that. He's not man enough for me. He shouldn't have told me that I was wrong for doing that, but also been a good enough of a man to not lose control of his emotions and get angry or aggressive. Then I could have respected him and felt guilty and wrong about what I did. Yet, him taking all the blame like a sap, just makes me realize that I made the right decision to leave him. He's too much of a wimp for a girl like me."

So, if your ex girlfriend got you fired because she was being childish, immature or purposefully destructive, don't reward her by taking the blame.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should be nasty towards her, blame her or treat her badly.

Continue being the good man that you are and let her see that, even though you don't excuse her behavior, you're willing to forgive her and focus on rebuilding the trust, respect and love between you and her from now on.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

4. Not making a clear decision about whether or not to get her back

Itâ€™s easy to fall into a trap where youâ€™re either missing your ex and wanting her back, or feeling angry and resentful towards her and never wanting to lay eyes on her again.

The problem is that until you can decide what you really want from her, youâ€™ll be stuck in relationship limbo.

You will avoid other women, feel depressed and down about your situation and end up letting her win.

So, make sure that you make a decision right now.

If you know in your heart that your ex girlfriend is a petty, immature and vindictive person and will likely do something malicious again when you and her have a disagreement in future, then itâ€™s time to cut your losses.

Stop thinking about her and what she did and focus instead on going out and meeting new women.

Before long, you will have found yourself a better, more beautiful and loving woman and your ex girlfriend will be a distant memory.

However, if you feel that your ex girlfriend getting you fired was something you brought on yourself via your behavior and attitude, then decide to forgive her and get her back.

Focus on reactivating her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you during interactions and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Added Me On Facebook

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible reasons why your ex girlfriend added you on Facebook:

1. She wants to see if you have moved on without her

[image: She wants to see if you have moved on without her]

Sometimes a woman will worry about her ex guy moving on before sheâs had a chance to hook up with another guy first.

So, she will add him on Facebook as a way of checking up on him.

Based on his posts, she might be able to find out ifâ

- He has been going out and having fun with other people, or has been spending a lot of time alone.
- He has only hanging out with his single male friends and doesn't appear to have been around any new women.
- Has been hanging out with new women in different situations.
- He is still single, or if he is dating a new girl.

Essentially, she will be trying to find out if she still has time to move on before he does.

She will be hoping to see sad, lonely posts from him, so she can feel better about herself and know that he is struggling without her.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend added you on Facebook isâ

2. She wants to see if the new you will make her feel attracted and want you back

Even if the break up felt right to her when she did it, a woman will often end up missing her ex and wanting him back, especially if she can't find a suitable replacement guy to move on with.

When she misses her ex, she might begin to think, âI wonder if he has changed at all since we broke up? Maybe if I add him to Facebook, Iâll be able to see if he has. Then, if he has changed and improved, it might be possible for us to get back together again. I might want to see him again and get him back.â

She then adds him on Facebook to see what happens.

Imagine thisâ

A guy was very insecure and overly dependent on his girlfriend during the relationship.

As a result, he became clingy and needed her constant reassurances to feel good about himself and his value to her (e.g. always asking if she loved him, telling her to promise to never cheat on him or leave him, checking her phone to see if she was chatting with anyone else).

She then dumped him because she couldn't deal with his insecurity anymore.

Yet, since dumping him, she has kind of missed him and is now wondering if he has changed.

So, to test him and see if he can make her feel attracted again, she adds him on Facebook and waits to see his reaction.

Will he jump all over any small sign of interest from her (e.g. by quickly trying to initiate a conversation with her, or immediately sending her a private message saying things like, â€œIâ€™m so glad youâ€™ve added me on Facebook again! Iâ€™ve missed you so much. Does this mean youâ€™ve forgiven me for stuffing things up between us? I hope it does, because Iâ€™ve really felt lost without you. I miss you. Please, let's talkâ€), or will he remain calm and relaxed?

Will he feel unworthy of her and ignore her because he doesn't know what to say, or will he believe in himself and confidently make her feel attracted to him again (e.g. by using humor, being charismatic)?

Depending on his response, she is either going to get a sense that he has become a new and improved man since the break up (e.g. more confident, self-assured, easy-going, emotionally independent), or that he's continuing to be the insecure, needy guy he was in the relationship.

If he can make her feel attracted via Facebook and then progress to talking to her on the phone or in person, she will drop her guard and open up to potentially being with him again.

However, if he turns her off in the same old ways, she's going to keep her guard up and possibly even unfriend him or block him and then try to move on.

In the same way, your ex girlfriend may have added you on Facebook to test you and see how you would react.

She wants to see whether or not you've changed and improved and are now able to give her the attraction experience she always wanted from you.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend added you on Facebook is â€œ|

3. She wants you to check out her new photos and miss her more

Sometimes, a woman will add her ex on Facebook to let him know what she's been up to since the break up.

If she currently hates him, she may want him to see that she's been having a fun time and moving on without him, rather than feeling sad or depressed about their break up.

He might then feel jealous that she's moved on so quickly and regret hurting her.

On the other hand, in a case where a woman still has some feelings for her ex, she may be hoping that when he sees photos of her having fun without him, he'll miss her even more and possibly make a move to contact her so that they can meet up.

Remember: The way that women behave doesn't always make sense.

Sometimes a woman really likes a guy and acts like she doesn't like him, to hopefully get him to try harder.

This is why you shouldn't ever worry so much about what a woman is saying or doing.

What you need to focus on is being attractive as you interact with her (e.g. being confident, emotionally masculine, funny, charismatic) and then having the courage to make a move and get you and her to the point where you hug, kiss, have sex and get into a relationship.

Some women make things a lot easier than others, whereas some women act a little weird due to their insecurities.

This is why you always need to believe in yourself as a man and take action to get you and her to the next level, rather than waiting for her to lead the way.

So, your ex may have added you to Facebook because she is hoping that you feel jealous and start chasing her.

Alternatively, she might have added you because she wants to rub her happiness in your face.

Either way, the solution is the same: Interact with her, make her feel attracted to you, get her to meet up with you, build on her attraction at the meet up, hook up with her and get her back.

4. She's trying to send you a signal that she's open to you getting her back

After a break up, many guys feel trapped between wanting their ex back and not knowing what to do to make it happen.

For example: A guy might think, â€œI really want her back, but when we broke up, she told me to never talk to her again. So, if I try to contact her, sheâ€™ll get annoyed and hang up on me. I feel so stuck. I do want to work things out between us, but I donâ€™t know how to go about making contact with her without causing her to hate me even more. Itâ€™s a hopeless situation.â€

So, rather than sending her a text to say â€œHi,â€ or calling her on the phone to spark some of her feelings for him again, he doesnâ€™t do anything.

Essentially, heâ€™s waiting for his ex to send him a very clear sign that sheâ€™s open to talking to him again, so he can then make a move.

In most instances, this doesnâ€™t happen because many women are insecure and don't want to get rejected by their ex and end up feeling hurt, or because she doesn't want to seem desperate for pursuing him after breaking up with him.

Rather than contacting him and helping him get her back, she just focuses on moving on without him.

However, if she really wants him back, a woman will sometimes take the first step of adding her ex to Facebook, to hopefully send him a signal that she's now open to interacting with him again.

Of course, that doesnâ€™t mean sheâ€™s going to make it overly obvious that sheâ€™s open to the idea of him getting her back.

Instead, after making the first move (i.e. adding him on Facebook), sheâ€™s just going to wait for him to take the lead in the ex back process.

In a way, sheâ€™s testing him to see if he is now man enough to do what needs to be done to get her back, or if he will sit around feeling unsure of himself and waiting for her to lead him by the hand.

If he doesnâ€™t take the lead like a man, she may assume that he hasnâ€™t changed in the ways that are important to her (e.g. become more confident and assertive) and she will continue trying to move on without him.

In some cases, she will see his lack of action as meaning that he isn't interested, so she will unfriend him and possibly even block him.

So, if you want her back, don't waste time wondering whether or not you should contact her.

No matter what her reasons are for adding you on Facebook, you should look at it as the opening you need to get her back.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Attract an Ex Back Via Social Media

Facebook and other social media sites and apps are a great way to re-attract an ex woman after a break up.

Yet, rather than use this resource to their advantage, many guys ending up turning their ex off even more and convincing her she made the right decision by breaking up with him.

To avoid turning your ex off, ensure that you don't make one or more of the following post break up, social media mistakes:

1. Not posting up any photos of yourself having fun with other people

Sometimes a guy doesn't want his ex to see that he's having a good time without her because he worries that it will cause her to seek revenge by doing the same.

So, even if he's going out with friends (e.g. to clubs, bars, parties), doing fun and interesting things (e.g. has joined in on fun activities in his local area, is taking a new nighttime course) and is generally enjoying his life without her, he avoids putting up any proof of that on his Facebook page.

In his mind he's thinking, “If she realizes that I'm having a fun life without her, she will assume that I don't want her back. She will then focus on moving on and finding herself another guy. I can't let that happen. So, I'm going to make sure that I don't post any photos of myself having fun with anyone else. Hopefully, this will give her the message that I'm not moving on without her and she will be more open to interacting with me. We can then work things out between us.”

Yet, the opposite is true.

Even though women don't go around openly admitting it, they are more attracted to guys who are confident, happy and enjoying life with or without them.

Although a woman wants to be loved and appreciated, she doesn't want to be responsible for her guy's emotional security, sense of identity or be his reason for living.

If a woman has to do that, she feels more like his mother or big sister and not like his girl.

So, if a guy posts photos of himself having fun with other people, rather than make a woman want to move on (i.e. because he doesn't need her to make him feel happy), it makes her want him even more.

He seems more attractive, appealing and likeable now.

Some guys don't understand why because they assume that a woman's attraction is based on what she SAYS.

A woman might SAY that she would be annoyed if she saw him having fun, but that's not what actually happens to her.

When she realizes that he is being an emotionally strong man without her, she automatically feels attracted to him, even if she doesn't want to.

It's not something that she can turn off.

Women are naturally attracted to men who don't base their identity or actions on a woman's fake demands of his behavior (i.e. “Don’t have fun now that we’ve broken up. If I see you having fun, I will move on”).

Of course, most women won’t ever say something like that, but that’s what guys fear she will say. Remember: Fears and what actually happens in reality are usually two completely different things altogether.

Likewise, a woman’s attraction for a man doesn’t always make logical sense (e.g. how women are more attracted to guys who don’t really try hard to impress them, even though women go around SAYING that they want a really nice guy who treats her like a princess and is very patient).

So, don’t be afraid to show your ex that you’re that emotionally strong, confident man by positing photos of yourself having fun with other people.

She will feel attracted to you because of it, even if she SAYS that she is annoyed, angry, disappointed or whatever.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

2. Appearing sad, lonely or insecure in photos

Sometimes, a guy will use Facebook (or other social media apps like Instagram or Snapchat) as a way of letting his ex girlfriend know how devastated he has been feeling since the break up (e.g. by posting photos of himself looking sad and lonely).

Secretly, heâ€™s hoping that when his ex sees how bad heâ€™s feeling without her, sheâ€™ll think something like, â€œWow, I never realized how much he needed me. Heâ€™s really falling apart now that weâ€™ve broken up. I feel so bad for the pain Iâ€™m causing him. Maybe I should give him another chance,â€ and come running back to him.

Yet, that rarely, if ever happens.

Why?

Firstly, a woman doesn’t want to be manipulated into giving her ex another chance simply because he can’t deal with the idea of being dumped by her.

Secondly, emotional neediness is not an attractive trait in a man and simply confirms to a woman that she made the right decision to break up with him.

Thirdly, when a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her ex, him feeling sad and lonely without her doesn’t really matter to her anymore.

She has to take care of her own feelings now and focus on her own life, rather than spending time and energy trying to make her ex (that she’s no longer attracted to) feel better about himself.

In some cases, where a woman is really angry with her ex, seeing him appear sad and lonely might actually make her think something like, â€œGood! Iâ€™m glad heâ€™s suffering! He deserves to be miserable after the way he treated me.â€

So, if you want your ex to feel motivated to interact with you now that sheâ€™s added you on Facebook, make sure you don’t turn her off by appearing sad, lonely and helpless without her.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Posting up selfies or lonely photos

Just like posting sad, lonely photos of yourself turns a woman off, so does posting a lot of selfies. Why?

Although a guy might think a selfie is neutral and not rubbing what he's been up to in his ex's face, it actually has the opposite effect.

When a woman sees a lot of selfies of her ex on Facebook and social media, her first reaction is usually to wonder why he's always alone and not hanging out with friends.

She might then make assumptions like:

- He's not moving forward in life and is stuck at the same level he was at when she broke up with him.
- He's not doing anything fun.
- He's lost some of his friends since the break up.
- He's hoping that she sees it and takes pity on him.
- He's a confused guy who doesn't understand that emotional weakness and loneliness isn't sexually attractive to women.

Of course, none of those things might be true about him, but when a woman has broken up with a guy and no longer feels attracted to him, pretty much everything he does will be perceived in a more negative way.

So, if you're going to post photos on your Facebook account, make sure that you include some of you smiling and looking happy with other people.

Don't post lone selfies because they will not help you get her back.

The next mistake is

4. Posting â€œpity meâ€ status updates about life and relationships

A guy might post things like, â€œFeeling really depressed today,â€ or â€œLife is so dull these days! Hate being single!â€ or â€œNothing to do this weekend once again. Binge watching Netflix and eating a lotâ€ on Facebook as a way of letting his ex girlfriend know that he's not moving on without her.

He's hoping that she will feel sorry for him and then send him a message, saying something like, â€œHey, how are you? You don't seem to be doing well. Why don't we meet up sometime?â€

Yet, here's the thing

A woman doesn't want to feel like she's doing her ex a favor by being with him.

She wants to feel like he's the kind of guy she can look up to, respect and be proud to call her man (i.e. because he has changed and improved and taken control of his life), not like she has to take care of him because he's too emotionally weak, insecure and lost without her.

So, if you want to make your ex girlfriend reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, don't try to make her feel sorry for you at all.

Instead, focus on re-attracting her by showing her that you're now the man she always wanted you to be (e.g. confident and emotionally strong, emotionally independent, determined and focused to succeed).

The next mistake that many guys make isâ€¦!

5. Waiting for her to message him

A guy will see that his ex girlfriend added him on Facebook and will then wait for her to message him so they can start interacting again.

Yet, more often than not, a woman will wait for her ex to make the first move and start a conversation.

Essentially, sheâ€™s waiting to see if he has the balls/confidence to start the ex back process without any additional help from her (i.e. because in her mind, sheâ€™s already done enough by making the first move and adding him on Facebook).

If he can contact her and spark some of her feelings for him again, she will then drop her guard and allow herself to meet up with him to see where things go.

On the other hand, if he does nothing, she may assume that heâ€™s not man enough for her and will then focus on finding herself a replacement guy and moving on without him.

The next mistake that other guys make isâ€¦!

6. Sending her way too many messages and getting unfriended again

Sometimes a guy is so happy that his ex refriended him on Facebook that he goes overboard by sending her endless messages every day.

Heâ€™s hoping that by bombarding her with messages, she will realize how much heâ€™s missed her and that he still loves her and wants her back.

Yet, what he doesnâ€™t realize is that being too available and eager will turn her off and make her guard go up.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

A woman wants a guy to make her feel as though she needs to impress him and maintain his interest (at least a little bit), rather than him chasing after her like a lost little puppy.

If she gets a sense that she can treat him badly and he will still continue messaging her and hoping to get a chance with her, she wonâ€™t be able to respect him and as a result, she won't feel attracted to him.

So, if you want to get your ex girlfriend back, make sure that you approach interactions with her in a way that causes her to feel attracted to you, rather than turned off by you.

When you do that, she will naturally open up and you can then get her on a phone call or meet up with her in person and get the relationship back together.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why Can't I Let Go of My Ex?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why you can't let go of your ex are:

1. You know that she's the one for you

One of the most common reasons why a guy will find it difficult to let go of his ex woman, is that he realizes that she really is the one for him.

Naturally, this realization may cause him to feel both guilty for messing things up with her and panic at the thought of having lost her (possibly forever).

As a result, he becomes frozen in limbo where he doesn't know what to do to get her back, but he also can't let go of her and move on with a new woman.

Don't let that happen to you.

If you know for sure that your ex is the one for you, then you need to understand that you don't actually have to let her go just because the relationship ended in a break up.

If you interact with her via text, social media, a phone call and especially in person and reactivate some of her feelings of respect and attraction (e.g. by making her smile, laugh and feel good to be in contact with you again), getting her back becomes possible.

Suddenly, she stops thinking about you in a completely negative way and opens herself up to the idea of giving the relationship another chance, or at least catching up with you and possibly hooking up with you to see how she feels.

Be warned though!

If you try to get her to commit to the idea of having a relationship before re-sparking her feelings for you, then she's probably going to keep pushing you away and saying things like, "Sorry, but it's over between us. You need to accept that and let me go. I've moved on and you need to as well. Goodbye."

So, make sure that if you're going to get in contact with her, you are ready to seduce her back into a relationship with you.

Another possible reason why you can't let go of your ex, is!

2. She dumped you and it really hurt. Now, you want her back so you can feel good about yourself again, rather than continuing to feel rejected

[image: You want her back to make yourself feel better]

Getting broken up with can leave a guy feeling rejected, left out, lonely and even as though he's just not good enough for women anymore.

He might start to think, "I'm such a failure as a man. I was so lucky to have a beautiful, amazing woman like her and then I went and ruined it all. It's all my fault that our relationship is over. I always do this. I always stuff things up in life and make people change the way they feel about me. No wonder I can't let her go. I know that I will never find a woman like her again. She was one in a million, one in a billion and I messed it up. I'm on my own now. All on my own!"

sucks!â€¦

So, to get rid of the pain, a man might focus all of his energy on getting her back.

Yet, the problem for him is that women are very good at picking up when a guy is feeling desperate.

Women don't like desperation and don't want to reward it with sex, love and devotion.

If his ex gets the sense that he needs her back to feel better about himself because he's in pain without her, she will feel turned off by his desperation.

Of course, some guys are better at hiding it than others and many guys can get their woman back when secretly feeling desperate.

Guys like that are good at attracting and seducing womenâ€¦!

Another possible reason why you can't let go of your ex isâ€¦!

3. You have found it difficult to attract other beautiful women of your choosing since the break up

After a break up, a guy might initially try to get over his ex by hooking up with new women.

For example: He might go out with his single friends to clubs or bars where there are many single attractive women, or accept invitations to singles parties to try his luck.

Some guys might even go on Tinder, or online dating sites to hopefully score some dates that lead to sex.

That can work to make a guy feel better about himself, but if a guy doesn't get anything or only gets unattractive women, he is naturally going to start missing his ex.

He then might begin to think that it's just too hard to attract quality women these days and he's better off with his ex.

As a result, he can't let go of her.

She is always in the back of his mind and he always wishes that he could somehow make her want to be with him again.

If he is smart like you, then he will find my site, follow the steps to get her back and enjoy a new relationship with her.

However, if he's the sort of guy who goes around in circles saying, "Why me? Why is my life so hard?" rather than focusing on a solution to get her back, then he's going to end up feeling depressed as he misses her for the next few months, years or even decades of his life.

I've heard from guys who have missed their ex for decades and haven't ever dared to take any action to get her back.

Crazy, right?

If you want your ex back, don't be like those guys.

Be one of the smart men who focuses on a solution to get her back and then get her back!

You really can do it.

Another possible reason why you can't let go of your ex isâ€¦!

4. You know that you could do better this time around if you got her back

[image: You know that you could do better this time around if you got her back]

Every man makes mistakes at some point in his life.

The greatest men in the world are those who learn from their mistakes and come back better and stronger than before.

So, if you have changed and improved since the break up with your ex (e.g. you've become more focused in your life, have more confidence in yourself, are more ballsy and you no longer allow her or other people to push you around), you have become a better man already and you should give yourself some credit for that.

You're not like other guys who remain stuck at one level of life for decades.

You are one of the rare men who level up.

That is a good thing and something you should be proud of.

Now that you've changed and improved, you know that you could do a much better job of the relationship this time around, right?

You would be able to give her the kind of attraction experience she always wanted with you (e.g. you're so much more confident now and won't be insecure like you were before, or you're so much more loving and kind now and won't be the asshole you eventually became in the relationship).

As a result of knowing that you really could do better, you can't let go of your ex.

You want one more shot at a relationship with her.

If that's how you feel, then don't sit around feeling sorry for yourself anymore.

Take action.

Call her on the phone and re-spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again, making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your emotional masculinity) and get her meet up with you in person, where she can fully experience the new and improved you.

Another possible reason why you can't let go of your ex is

5. The connection you shared with her was perfect for you

[image: The connection you shared was perfect for you]

If you and her had an amazing connection (e.g. you liked the same things, you and her had the same plans for the future, you shared the same values and ideals, the sex was great, you loved hanging out together), it's only natural that you'd be struggling to let her go.

You may even be thinking things like, There's no other woman out there who I could share that connection with. It was unique to us. What we had was one of a kind. She's my soul mate. I know it.

Yet, here's the thing

Even though you and her shared a really special connection, it doesn't actually mean that she's your one and only soul mate.

In life, a person has many possible soul mates.

You could literally match up with millions of different women from across the world and hundreds of thousands in your country.

Of course, you probably don't want to hear that, right?

I know.

I get it.

You just want her back.

I am helping you do that and I will ensure that you do get her back, but just be clear about something first!

For relationship between a man and a woman to last for life, the feelings have to be mutual.

[image: Were the feelings mutual, or did it end up being a very one sided relationship? Did you end up loving her a lot more than she loved you?]

Were the feelings mutual, or did it end up being a very one sided relationship? Did you end up loving her a lot more than she loved you?

Even though you might firmly believe that both you and her shared a special connection, for her to break up with you, it means that she didn't feel the same way in the end.

She might have felt that way at the start, but the start means nothing if the relationship gradually falls apart and becomes one-sided.

So, if you want to get her back, you have to start the process by bringing her feelings up to a level that is at least close to mutual (i.e. make her respect and feel attracted to the new and improved you).

When you do that, she will then see that there is still something between you and her.

It's not over.

So, make sure you reawaken her feelings first, before trying to get to any talks about having a relationship.

Ideally, it's best to get to a hug, then kiss and sex and then talk about having a relationship.

That approach works best and avoids her having to say things like, "I'm not sure. We haven't been together for a while and you suddenly reappear in my life and want a relationship. You're moving too fast."

So, just get to a hug, kiss and sex and she will then naturally want to talk about having a relationship.

3 Mistakes Guys Make When They Can't Let Go of Their Ex

Many guys find themselves in your situation.

The difference is that some guys take action and get her back, while others make one or more of the following mistakes!

1. Not even knowing that it's possible to re-attract her and get her back

If a woman is saying things like, "It's over. I don't have feelings for you anymore and nothing you say or do will make me change my mind. Please accept that and let me go," a guy might simply give up hope of ever getting her back.

He may start thinking things like, â€œItâ€™s hopeless. She doesnâ€™t want me. Itâ€™s over. Iâ€™ve lost her.â€

Yet, thatâ€™s not how feelings work.

Just because your ex doesnâ€™t have feelings for you right now, it doesnâ€™t mean she will feel that way a week from now when you are face to face with her, having a laugh and getting to a hug and then kiss.

You really can change how she feels and get her back, if you want to.

So, donâ€™t sit around thinking, â€œWhy canâ€™t I let go of my ex?â€ and doing nothing about it.

Make a decision today that you are going to actively change how she feels about you, by interacting with her and making her feel good to be around you again.

When you do that, you go from being an almost forgotten ex, to someone that is pulling at her heart strings.

If you donâ€™t hook up with her sexually the first time you meet up, but do get to a hug, she will be thinking about afterwardsâ€”especially if you had been flirting with her and building up sexual tension during the interaction.

She will then be open to texting back and forth with you, getting on a call and meeting up again.

When you meet up again, you will almost certainly get her back, or at least hook up again sexually and see how you both feel afterwards.

Another mistake that other guys make when in a situation like yours, isâ€”!

2. Hoping that she will come back one day, even though he hasnâ€™t done anything to re-attract

If she hasnâ€™t come back on her own already, sheâ€™s not going to.

Many guys make this mistake.

They give their ex woman space in the hope that she misses him, gets in contact and asks for another chance.

It rarely happens.

Rather than running back to a guy that she is no longer attracted to, she simply opens herself up to meeting new guys who do make her feel attracted.

Then, by the time her ex builds up the courage to contact her, rather than hear her say something along the lines of, â€œIâ€™m so glad you called! Iâ€™ve missed you so much. Want to meet up?â€ itâ€™s more likely that, after a bit of small talk, she will say, â€œIâ€™ve met someone else and weâ€™re in love. How about you? Have you met someone yet?â€

He is then heartbroken and suddenly realizes that giving her that much space was a big mistake.

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

Interact with her over the phone or in person, so you can instantly begin reawakening her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

If you donâ€™t interact with her and sheâ€™s over you at the moment, sheâ€™s almost certainly just going to keep moving on without you.

Another mistake that other guys make when in a situation like yours, isâ€¦!

3. Allowing the break up make him feel unworthy of her and other quality women

It sucks to be broken up.

It hurts initially and then, that feeling of hurt, turns into sadness and possibly even feelings of loneliness and abandonment.

It's not a nice set of feelings to go through regarding the woman you love.

Unfortunately for some guys, they allow the pain of the break up to destroy their confidence with women.

As a result, he ends up feeling unworthy of his ex and of other quality women.

What he may not realize is that feeling unworthy only makes him seem less attractive to her and other women.

Why?

A woman likes the idea of being with a confident, emotionally strong man who believes that he is more than good enough for her, while also treating her well and making her feel wanted and appreciated.

So, when a guy is being insecure and doesn't believe in his value to his ex, it does nothing to spark her feelings for him if they happen to interact.

She feels turned off by his lack of belief in himself, doesn't feel drawn to him and feels good about her decision to have been broken up with him all this time.

So, if you want your ex back, you have to absolutely believe that you are good enough for her and then take action to re-attract her and get her back.

On the other hand, if you don't believe in yourself, she will pick up on that and feel turned off and then, getting her back will become very difficult.

Believe in yourself.

You can do it.

You ARE good enough for her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Won't Make Time to See Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex won't make time to see you are:

1. She knows that you're going to want to discuss the relationship

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she will usually try to cut herself off from him completely, to allow herself to move on, rather than being seduced back into a relationship.

If her ex keeps contacting her and asking to see her and gives her the impression that he's hoping to discuss the relationship and work things out, she will usually just continue making excuses to avoid seeing him.

In her mind, she will be thinking something like, "I know why he wants to see me. He wants to talk about our relationship and make me feel guilty for not giving him another chance. I don't want to talk about the relationship and I don't want to teach him how to be the man I want him to be. If he really wants me back, he needs to figure that out by himself and make the necessary changes first. If he can do that, then I would be okay with meeting up with him to see how I feel. However, based on his interactions with me so far, I can tell that nothing has really changed. So, hopefully, if I just keep avoiding him, he will eventually get the message and leave me alone."

Here's the thing:

If you want your ex to make time to see you, you have to stop giving her the impression that you want to discuss things and try to come to an agreement, so you can get her back.

Instead, you need to focus on reawakening some of her sexual and romantic feelings for you first during interactions (e.g. over the phone), so she actually feels like there is still something between you and her.

For example: Call her on the phone and rather than getting into serious discussions about your relationship, or begging and pleading with her to make time to see you, just focus on breaking down her defenses.

You can do that by using humor, especially when she is being cold and distant.

You can be easy-going and light-hearted about everything to put her at ease and making her feel good to be talking to you again.

The more relaxed she feels talking to you over the phone, the more her guard will come down.

Then, when you suggest a meet up, she will be more likely to think, "Talking to him over the phone hasn't been that bad and maybe seeing him in person will actually be nice. So, I guess I will agree to meet up."

By the way:

At the meet up, make sure that you don't scare her off by talking about the relationship and trying hard to work things out.

Leave serious discussions for after you have at least hugged, kissed and had sex again, if possible.

If you don't feel confident to get to that point with her, then at least leave serious discussions for after you have made her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

If you're good at attracting and seducing women, you can achieve that during a few minutes of conversation.

On the other hand, if you're a bit rusty or a bit out of touch with how to attract, flirt and seduce women, you should improve your abilities before interacting with her.

Another possible reason why your ex won't make time to see you, is because

2. You haven't re-attracted her yet

When a guy gets broken up with, his first reaction is usually to quickly try and get her back before she moves on.

Rather than stopping and thinking about her real, hidden reasons for breaking up with him, he instead starts texting, messaging or calling her to get her to meet up with him right away.

He thinks, "The sooner I can get her to see me, the quicker I'll be able to convince her that our breakup is a mistake and we can then sort everything out and get back together again."

Yet, the more he begs and pleads with her for a meet up and then says things like, "Please just give me one more chance. I still love you and all I ask is for you to make some time to see me, so we can talk things out. For the sake of what we once had together, can you please just consider it?" the more closed off she becomes.

Why?

A woman doesn't care how much a guy cares for her, if she has lost respect and attraction for him (i.e. if she doesn't really care about him in a sexual or romantic way anymore).

Unless the feelings are mutual or at least close to mutual, she's just not going to feel much or any motivation to work things out and give him another chance.

So, him begging, pleading and talking about his feelings for her only annoys her even more because she just doesn't care.

She may then even think things like, "He's being so selfish! All that matters to him is what he wants. He hasn't even stopped to consider how I feel and what I want! I'm not giving him another chance. He hasn't even changed! He doesn't even know what I really want from him! I have to move on."

She then closes herself off from him and continues to make excuses not to see him.

Naturally, this may confuse him because from his perspective, all he's doing is trying to show her how much he cares about her and how he's willing to do anything to work things out between them and get her back.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that she just isn't going to care about what he wants or how he feels, until he makes the feelings mutual or at least close to mutual between them.

So, if you want your ex to make time to see you, don't keep trying to convince her by nagging, begging, pleading, or telling her that you care about her.

If she's not feeling a lot of respect and attraction for you right now, it's just not going to make her change her mind.

What will persuade her is if you re-spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you again. When you make her feel that way, the idea of seeing you in person doesn't feel like such a bad idea to her anymore.

Instead, she feels curious to see if you really have changed and she then makes the time to see you to find out for herself.

Another possible reason why your ex won't make time to see you, is because

3. She doesn't believe that you will ever change

[image: She doesn't believe that you will ever change]

Sometimes, based on her past experiences with a guy, a woman simply doesn't believe that he will ever change (e.g. because he's promised to change before and has either been too lazy to follow through, or he didn't actually know how to change and was just trying to hang on to the relationship as long as possible).

Rather than wasting more of her time, a woman will make excuses not to meet up with her ex again up and focus on finding a new guy to move on with.

So, if you want your ex to make time to see you again, you first need to make some attractive changes to your way of thinking and behavior.

Then, when you are ready (it should take more than a few days to a week), get in contact with her, re-attract her on the call and get her to meet up with you in person, so can fully experience the changes in you and how good it now makes her feel.

On the call, if she can sense that you really have changed and improved some of the things that matter to her (e.g. you've become more confident and self-assured, you're more emotionally mature than before, you're less easily manipulated by her and stand up for yourself when she's being out of line, you're able to make her laugh and smile when she is being cold or distant), she will be more open to seeing you in person.

However, if you rush to interact with her and end up coming across as being the same as before, she's not going to be keen waste more time on a relationship that won't work.

Another possible reason why your ex won't make time to see you is because

4. She hates how she has so much power over you

After a break up, a guy will sometimes make the mistake of being on his very best behavior around his ex (e.g. by being extra nice to her, bending over backwards to accommodate her schedule, doing whatever she wants) in the hope that she will feel sorry for him and then agree to meet up with him.

He might say to himself, "If I want her to make time to see me, I need to do things her way, or she will keep saying no. So, I'm going to let her call all the shots and show her that I'm willing to do anything for her. She will then realize how much I still care for her and agree to meet up with me."

Yet, in most cases, the opposite happens.

Here's the thing

A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy that is willing to submit and follow her orders like a good, little boy.

A woman might give a guy the impression that she wants to be in control, but she's not going to respect him if he actually falls for it and submits to her demands, regardless of how ridiculous she is being.

For example: A woman might say to a guy, “I’m sorry, but I don’t have time to see you right now. I’m busy with a big project at work. Maybe my schedule will clear up next month and we can discuss catching up then. In the meantime, please just leave me alone so I can get my work done.”

If he backs off and after a month and then contacts her to ask, “How is your project going? Do you have time to see me now?” rather than think, “Oh, how sweet! He’s so considerate of my needs. I should meet up with him now. He has earned it!” she’s just going to feel turned off by his lack of balls for not standing up to her when she placed a ridiculous demand on him (i.e. to not contact her for a month).

The fact is, regardless of how busy a woman is at work, she will always make time to meet up with a guy she feels respect, attraction and love for.

Even if it’s a 10-minute catch up, or an hour together to get something to eat, she will make time for it because she doesn’t want to lose him.

So, if your ex is saying that she’s too busy, what it really means is, “Hey, I don’t feel attracted to you anymore. Therefore, I don’t care if I lose you. Leave me alone. Go find someone else. Goodbye.”

Of course, she’s not going to say that because she doesn’t want her ex to start begging and pleading her for another chance.

She just wants to create a month of space for herself to be able to find a replacement guy and move on.

So, if you want your ex to make time to see you, make sure that you don’t lose even more of her respect by handing over your power over to her and putting up with her unreasonable requests.

Of course, that doesn’t mean you should be rude or a bully towards her if she makes excuses not to see you.

Instead, you need to stand your ground with her and show her (in a loving, but dominant way) that you’re not going to let her push you around anymore.

For example: You can laugh at her in a loving way and say, “A month? Hah! Come on! you have 10 minutes to catch up for a coffee. I’m not asking for anything more than that and a 10 minute coffee isn’t going to prevent you from getting your work done. So, let’s meet up tomorrow night or the next night to say hi over coffee for 10 minutes. If you want to leave after that, I promise to not try to stop you. All I am asking for is a quick catch up to say hi. That’s it.”

In other words, take control of the situation in an assertive manner, but still be a good guy about it.

Don’t make the mistake of waiting for your ex to make time for you because if she doesn’t currently have feelings for you, she’s almost certainly not going to go out of her way to arrange a meet up.

Another possible reason why your ex won’t make time to see you, is because

5. You’re asking her via text

Texting is easy to do, but it’s not a very effective way of getting an ex back.

It’s a lot easier for a woman to reject you when she can’t see you or hear your voice and is only getting text messages from you.

Via text, she can’t see your body language or hear the tonality of your voice, so she will think things like, “Why should I even bother to make time to see him? He doesn’t even have the balls to call me and ask me over the phone. I’m just going to be wasting my time if I say yes to a meet up. I’ll be better off putting him behind me and moving on with my life. What’s done is done and he and I are old news now. Nothing about his behavior is convincing me that it’s worth my while giving him a second chance.”

She then stops replying to his texts, or begins to reply in a cold, distant way.

He might then make the mistake of texting her and asking, “What’s wrong? Is everything okay? Was it something I said? I’m sorry. Please just meet up with me so we can talk.”

Yet, even though his intentions are good, he comes across as being desperate and giving her too much power over him, which causes her to lose even more respect and attraction for him.

Here’s the thing!

In most ex back cases, you can’t completely change how a woman feels by texting back and forth with her.

Texts can help, but you shouldn’t use them as your number one way of getting her back.

If you stick to texts, all she has to do is keep saying, “No. I can’t meet up with you. I just don’t have the time right now,” and there’s nothing you can really do about it.

However, if you get her on a phone call and spark some of her feelings for you first (e.g. by making her smile and laugh, making her feel good to be talking to you again, by maintaining your confidence when she tries to reject you), it will be a lot more difficult for her to brush you off.

Then, when you meet up with her in person, you can build on her feelings and get her back.

3 Common Mistakes That Guys Make When Trying to Convince an Ex to Meet Up

It sucks that she currently won’t make time to see you.

However, you need to maintain control of your emotions and avoid making one or more of the following mistakes that other guys make!

1. Pleading with her to spare some time for him

For example: A guy might

- Send her loads of text messages or long e-mails begging her to make some time to see him.
- Get friends, co-workers and family to put in a good word for him and encourage her to meet up with him.
- Pour his heart out to her on a phone call in the hope that she will feel sorry for him and agree to see him.

Essentially, he’s hoping that when she sees how desperate he is to see her, she will feel flattered and agree to meet up with him.

However, that rarely (if ever) happens, because most women feel turned off by the desperation and use it as a reason to avoid seeing him again.

Another common mistake that guys make when in your situation isâ€¦!

2. Making her feel like she is his number one purpose in life

Although a woman appreciates it when a guy values her, loves her and respects her as his woman, she doesnâ€™t want to take on the role of being his main purpose in life.

Rather than think, â€œOMG! Thatâ€™s so sweet! He only cares about me! He doesn't care about anything else in life! I am his reason for living! It must mean he truly loves me! I will never find a man who loves me as much as he does!â€ she simply feels turned off by his neediness.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Neediness and desperation are qualities that women all over the world, find unattractive in a man.

If you want your ex to see you again, it's fine to let her see that you do care about her, but don't give her the impression that she is your number one purpose in life or reason for living.

Women hate that.

Another mistake isâ€¦!

3. Making her feel as though he needs her back so he can feel whole again

Sometimes a guy will try to get his ex woman back by telling her how lost he feels without her and how much he needs her in his life.

For example: A guy might say, â€œPlease baby, canâ€™t you see that Iâ€™m a broken man without you? I simply canâ€™t function properly without you. I need to see you. Please have a heart and meet up with me at least once. Youâ€™re everything to me and without you, my life is meaningless. I need you in my life to feel whole again. Please make some time to see me.â€

Yet, in most cases, rather than feel flattered that her ex is so emotionally dependent on her, she just feels even more turned off by him.

Why?

A woman doesnâ€™t want to be responsible for supporting a guy emotionally and making him feel worthy, confident and happy in his life.

She wants him to be those things on his own and for his own reasons, rather than needing her to give him that feeling.

It's too much of a burden for a woman to have to carry a man throughout life, continually patting him on the back and essentially saying, “Good boy. You can do it” or, “It's okay, I love you. Keep your chin up. Everything will be okay. I'm here. It's okay.”

A woman wants a man who is happy, confident and forward moving in life, regardless of what she says or does.

So, if a woman senses that her ex canâ€™t feel whole without her, she will perceive him as being emotionally weak and it will cause her to lose respect and attraction for him.

If you want your ex to make time to see you, focus on getting to the point where you truly believe that you can be happy, even if you never see her again.

I know, I know.

You do want to see her again and I am going to make sure that you do see her and get her back.

The point is that you need to get yourself to a place emotionally where you really, truly don't need her in your life to feel happy and confident.

You can achieve that within hours or a couple of days.

It doesn't have to take long at all.

Then, when you interact with her, she will sense your lack of neediness and feel attracted to the new approach you are taking to conversations and interactions with her.

Her guard will then come down and she will want to see you again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Will Dating New Women Make My Ex Want Me Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Not necessarily.

Every woman will react differently.

Some women will want their ex back if he dates new women, whereas others will seek revenge and hook up with new guys and then move on.

So, to be clear, here are 4 possible reactions that you might get from your ex:

1. She doesn't care because she's not attracted to you anymore

[image: She doesn't care because she's not attracted to you anymore]

Sometimes a guy will start dating new women in the hope that his ex will get jealous and want him back.

That can work if she actually cares about him and secretly wants him back.

Watch thisâ€¦!

However, if a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for her ex and really did want to break up with him, then him dating other women isnâ€¦t really going to bother her much at all.

Instead, sheâ€¦s going to focus on moving on and finding another guy, rather than going back to a guy who probably hasn't even changed or improved the things about himself that turned her off in the relationship.

So, if your ex is over you and doesn't want you back at all, you stand a better chance of getting her back by interacting with her (via text, on social media and especially over the phone and in person) and re-sparking her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

The more respect and sexual attraction you can make her feel during interactions, the more open she will become to getting back with you.

However, if your plan is to start dating new women in the hopes that it will make her come running back, it's probably not going to play out that way.

In fact, when she finds out that you're dating other women, she might even think, â€œCool! Iâ€¦m happy that heâ€¦s dating other women rather than trying to convince me to give him another chance. I can now focus on finding myself another guy who knows how to make me feel the way I want to feel in a relationship, without worrying that my ex might be trying to get me back. I'm going out tomorrow night with the girls to find a guy to sleep with.â€œ

Another possible reaction that you might get from your ex, if you start dating new women isâ€¦!

2. She does care and wants you back because she now sees your value as a man

[image: She does care and wants you back because she now sees your value as a man]

Sometimes, all it takes for a woman to realize that her ex was the guy she wants to be with is for her to suddenly be faced with the idea of losing him to another woman.

For example: She might see him out at a party, bar or club having fun with another woman and hugging and kissing her.

Alternatively, he might post photos on social media of himself doing fun things with new women.

She may even hear about how heâs dating new women from mutual friends.

Whatever the case, the knowledge of him being with other women can cause her to realize that he is valuable and she was lucky to have him.

She may then start to think, âI never realized it before, but I donât like the idea of him being with another woman. I donât know why, but it makes me miss him and want him back. I also feel like I missed something about himâmaybe he wasnât so bad after all. If other women like him and want him, what did I overlook? I donât want him to get into a serious relationship with a new woman, only for me to realize that he was the man for me and that I made a mistake by breaking up with him. I need to get back with him before itâs too late.â

Suddenly, the idea of losing her ex causes her to then text him, call him or reach out to him via social media in an attempt to get him back.

By the wayâ

This only works if the guy is genuinely moving on with other women.

If all heâs doing is pretending to be dating and having fun as a way to make his ex jealous and she finds out that the women werenât even interested in him in a sexual or romantic way, it will cause her to lose even more respect and attraction for him.

Then, getting her back will become a lot more difficult because she wonât trust him anymore.

Another possible reaction that you might get from your ex, if you start dating new women isâ

3. She is impressed because the new woman youâre dating is attractive. She also thinks that it will be fun to steal you away from her

[image: She is impressed because the new woman you are dating is attractive]

Some women love the thrill of chasing the unattainable (i.e. pursuing a guy that they canât have, or canât ever seem to tame or control, taking a guy away from a woman who he loves and wants to be with).

So, if your ex sees you with a woman who she believes is more physically attractive than her, she might decide that getting you back will be fun and enjoyable for her.

Of course, even though you will achieve your goal of getting your ex back by dating new women, something important to remember is this: If you havenât changed or improved some of the things that turned her off before, sheâs just going to break up with you again when sheâs ready.

For example: If a woman broke up with a guy because he was too wimpy and he allowed her to dominate him and get away with bad behavior (e.g. being disrespectful towards him, throwing tantrums over nothing), she will be looking to see if he has changed since they broke up.

If he still thinks, acts and behaves in the same old ways, she will quickly lose interest in him again and leave him.

So, in the end, even though dating new women made his ex want him back, he couldnât hold onto her and got dumped again because he failed to change and improve the things that truly mattered to her. This is why you need to make some real changes, so when you do get her back, you keep her and she doesn't ever want to leave you again.

Watch thisâ€¦!

Another possible reaction that you might get from your ex if you start dating new women isâ€¦!

4. She is disappointed that you dated new women rather than trying to get her back

A risk to dating new women to make your ex want you back, is that the whole plan backfires completely.

Instead of making her think, â€œOh no! Heâ€™s moving on with a new woman. I donâ€™t want that to happen! I still care for him and I want him back! I need to contact him right away before itâ€™s too late and I lose him forever!â€ she thinks something like, â€œSo, this is how much our love meant to him? Here I was missing him and hoping that he would try to get me back and heâ€™s already moved. Well, I guess I didnâ€™t matter to him after all. My mother (or friends, or coworkers) were right about him. So, if he can move on and start dating other people, then so can I. I have plenty of guys who want to date me and I am about to get started.â€

She then focuses all her energy on fully getting over you and moving on by going out with her single friends and hooking up with other guys, or by dating one or more of the guys who have been hanging around and hoping to get a chance with her.

Thatâ€™s not what you want, right?

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Dating new women to make your ex want you back definitely can work, but it can also be a waste of time because while youâ€™re focusing in going out on dates and entertaining another woman, youâ€™re not focusing on reactivating your exâ€™s feelings for you and seducing her back into a relationship.

It's actually pretty easy to get a woman back after a break up in most cases.

Most guys use my methods to get their ex woman back right away, within days or within a week or so, without having to date new women.

It's fine to date new women if you want to, but just understand that you don't actually need to do that to get her back.

If your #1 goal is to make your ex want you back, the best way to go about it is to interact with her (via text, on social media, over the phone and most importantly face-to-face) and make her laugh, smile and feel good to be in contact with you again.

The happier she feels when sheâ€™s interacting with you, the more her defenses will come down and the more open she will become to the idea of getting back together.

It's actually pretty easy to do in most situations.

However, if you try to use other women to get her back, you run the risk of her forcing herself to get over you and hooking up with new guys to take your place.

So, if you want her back, just go ahead and do it.

If you focus on re-attracting her during interactions, she will drop her guard, open back up to you and you can then guide her back into a relationship.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want to Make Your Ex Want You Back

Although dating new women can work to make your ex want you back, it can also cause her to lose even more respect and attraction if you make one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Dating a woman that she sees as being less attractive than her

Dating a less attractive woman will make her feel good about herself and make her feel turned off by you.

She will think something like, “Haha! He’s obviously struggling to find himself another, attractive woman, so he had to settle for whatever he could get. It seems that I made the right decision by breaking up with him, because he’s not the kind of guy that women actually want. If I stayed with him, I’d essentially be doing him a favor and that’s not the kind of relationship I want to have with a guy. I want to be with a man who can have his pick of attractive women, but chooses to be with me, not a guy who has to settle for me because he can’t get anyone else.” Here’s the thing!

Although women don’t go around admitting it, they are more attracted to men who are desired by attractive women.

It’s just how it works.

So, if you’re going to date another woman to make your ex want you back, make sure that the new girl is more physically attractive than your ex in some ways.

The more attractive your ex sees the new girl as being, the more valuable your ex will perceive you to be and the more she will want you back.

So, be picky about the new women you date.

Make sure that the new women are physically good looking, thinner, have perkier breasts, better hair and so on.

When your ex sees that, she will be forced to admit that you must be attractive because other attractive women desire you.

As a result, she will begin to want you back.

However, if she has too much self-pride to contact you and try to get you back, she will try to move on instead.

If that’s the case with your ex, you need to be aware that it’s going to be your responsibility to lead the ex back process and guide her back into a relationship with you.

The next mistake to avoid is!

2. Either completely hiding the fact that he’s dating new women unless she asks, or going to the other extreme and verbally bragging about it to her

Don’t be afraid to let her find out about it, but at the same time, don’t try to rub it in her face either.

Women are attracted to men who are desired by other women, but women don't like it when men become too arrogant to the point where they brag to hopefully seem cooler or more valuable.

Just be matter of fact about it if she asks you.

Feel free to post photos on social media of you having fun with new women, but don't add comments saying, "My life is so much better now" or anything like that.

Just be cool, natural and easy-going about it all.

If your ex gets the sense that you're trying hard to seem wanted by other women to hopefully get her back, she will feel turned off by your insecurity.

However, if she senses that you are genuinely happy without her and moving on without feeling the need to brag, she will feel attracted to you.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Waiting too long to try to get her back

Even if your ex does feel jealous about you dating new women and wants you back, chances are sheâ€¦s not going to make it obvious to you.

Instead, she might decide to remain single for a little while in the hopes that you notice sheâ€¦s not moving on and then make a move to get her back.

If she realizes that youâ€¦re not doing anything to get her back, sheâ€¦ll then focus on fully disconnecting from her feelings for you and finding herself a replacement man.

So, if you want your ex back, donâ€¦t wait too long to get her back.

What matters most when getting an ex woman back is whether or not you are actively making her have feelings for you again when you interact with her.

When you interact with her, either on a phone call or in person, you need to have the courage and confidence to actively make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

You need to have the confidence make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you, rather than being neutral and on your best behavior to avoid saying the wrong thing.

You need to make her feel like a feminine, girly woman in contrast to your masculine vibe, rather than being neutral or acting like just a friend.

The more you reawaken her feelings for you, the more she will want you back.

So, donâ€¦t waste anymore time thinking about whether or not you can get her back.

You can.

You can get her back without even having to date new women.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Thinks She's Not Good Enough For Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

6 possible reasons why a woman will say that to her ex:

1. To see if he will hand over his power to her

A woman will sometimes say that she doesn't feel good enough for her ex to see how he will react. Will he remain confident and emotionally strong and hold onto his position of power in the relationship, or will he crumble and hand all his power over to her in an attempt to get her back?

[image: To see if he will hand over all of his power to her]

If he tries to reassure her by saying things like, "No, that's not true! You're the perfect woman for me. What can I do to convince you that you're the woman I want? You are more than good enough for me and I'll do whatever you want me to do to prove it to you," it will actually turn her off.

Why?

In most cases, a man in this situation is usually a cool, confident guy and that's one of the things that really attracted her to him in the first place.

She always liked how she had to be on her best behavior and try to impress him to maintain his interest.

Yet, now he's essentially saying, "Okay, the chase is over. I'm yours. I will do whatever you want, just as long as you don't dump me. I can't handle being dumped. Please don't do that!"

She then feels turned off by how weak he now seems and suddenly, the idea of trying hard to impress him and maintain his interest feels unnecessary.

In fact, she might even start to think that she is better than him and he was lucky to have her all along.

That's not what she wants.

What she wants is a confident, good man who doesn't get tricked by her mind games or power plays in a relationship.

If a guy gets caught up in her fake drama, she will lose respect for him for not being able to handle her simple test of his dominance and power in the relationship.

If he's that easy to topple, then she doesn't feel very good about submitting to him as the leader or boss of the relationship.

On the other hand, if the man is confident enough to laugh at her and refuse to play her petty, little games, she will naturally look up to him and respect him as the leader/boss of the relationship.

In the case of getting an ex back, when a man does that, his ex woman will begin to feel sparks of sexual attraction and love for him and will open herself back up to getting back together again.

So, the next time your ex says, "I'm not good enough for you," don't let it get to you.

Instead, try to see the funny side of how she's behaving, rather than getting sucked into the fake drama that she is creating.

For example: You can laugh and say, “You’re such a little drama queen, aren’t you? Oh, I’m just not good enough for you!” Oh, you deserve someone better!“ahaaaaha!” that’s so funny,“” and then laugh at her, and with her about it.

Initially, she might be a bit shocked that you’re not falling for her little games anymore.

However, even if she doesn’t show it, she will be feeling attracted to you for being confident and emotionally strong enough not to get sucked into her fake drama.

She will then realize that you really are the man she’s been looking for all along and won’t be able to stop herself from reconnecting with her original feelings of respect, attraction and love for you once again.

Another possible reason why a guy’s ex said that she’s not good enough for him, is because!

2. She knows that he could do better than her and is worried that he will eventually act on that knowledge

[image: She worries that he will leave her for another woman]

Most people experience moments in a relationship where they question whether or not they’re good enough for the person they’re with.

This usually happens when one person feels as though the other is more valuable or attractive than them.

In your case, if your ex felt as though the value gap between you and her was too wide (e.g. because you and her are from very different social backgrounds, you have a better education than her, you are more financially successful than her, you are cooler than her, you have more friends), then it’s only natural that she might have felt a bit insecure.

What a lot of guys don’t understand is that in most cases, women are a lot more insecure than men are.

For example: According to a global study conducted by Dove Cosmetics, 96% of women don’t consider themselves to be beautiful and feel insecure about their physical appearance.

Additionally, according to the National Institute of Mental Health in the U.S.A., women are reported to experience depression at twice the rate of men.

So, even though your ex might have seemed like she was well put together and totally confident in herself, chances are high that she was more insecure, anxious and prone to feelings of depression than you ever realized.

If you failed to make her feel like an attractive, desirable woman in the relationship, it’s only natural that she would have begun to worry that you’d eventually dump her for a woman who is more on your level.

To get her back, you can’t just say, “Hey, that’s not true. You are good enough for me. You’re just being silly about this. I said that I love you!” isn’t that proof enough that I am serious about you? Please don’t be like this! because it’s unlikely going to get rid of her insecure thoughts.

For her to believe that you truly value her and want to be with her, you’ll need to show her via your actions and the way you treat her and respond to her, both in private and in public (e.g. if you were unwilling to hold her hand in public, now is a great time to start doing that at times).

From now on, you've got to be aware of the fact that she's probably always going to have a bit of an insecurity about how fully committed you are to her.

You can calm that down over time and get her to relax and trust in you and the relationship, but you need to be patient about it.

Whatever you do though, don't try to show her how committed you are by being desperate about it.

Be calm, confident and easy-going about it, rather than rushing and panicking to show her how much you care.

Women aren't attracted to that kind of desperation, even though the guy has good intentions while doing it.

You still have to remain being the cool guy that you are, but just pay a bit more attention to making her feel valued and wanted.

Another possible reason why a guy's ex said that she's not good enough for him, is

3. She believes that he accepted her, rather than selected her

[image: She believes that he accepted her, rather than selecting her]

Some guys will accept pretty much any half decent woman that they can get because they just don't know how to pick up women they find attractive.

So, if a woman gets the sense that her guy accepted her because he couldn't get anything else, she will develop insecurities about his commitment to her.

Of course, just because your ex might secretly believe that you accepted her rather than selected her, it doesn't mean that it's the truth.

For example: A guy will sometimes sincerely get into a relationship with a woman for many reasons other than just her looks.

Although she might not be as pretty as some of his previous girlfriends, or the type of women who are interested in him, his reasons for selecting her may have been more than just about her physical appearance (e.g. she is a good person, she is supportive of his dreams and encourages him to be the best man he can be, she is loyal, she has a great sense of humor and makes him laugh and smile when he's with her, she would make a good mother if he decided to start a family with her, she gets along well with his family, she is responsible, but fun at the same time).

If this is the case between you and your ex, it's up to you to make her see herself through your eyes.

In other words, if you did willingly select her, rather than just accept her because you couldn't pick up any other women, you need to make her feel as though you sincerely selected her and honestly want her.

Once again though, don't try to convey that in a desperate, "Please believe me!" kind of way.

Be cool about it and just focus on making her feel happy, attracted and wanted when around you.

For example:

- Use humor to break through her insecurities and make her feel good to be around you.

- Flirt with her to create sexual tension and make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman in your presence.
- Make her feel like a feminine woman by being more emotionally dominant than her during conversation.
- Compliment her on some things, but also tease her and be challenging like you always have.

The more that you build on her feelings for you and the relationship during interactions, the more her doubts about staying with you will begin to fade.

Suddenly, she will begin seeing herself through your eyes (i.e. as though she is good enough for you). When that happens, she will stop feeling insecure and start wanting to be your girl again, before another woman comes along and takes you.

Another possible reason why a guy's ex said that she's not good enough for him is because

4. He didn't make her feel loved

Sometimes, a guy assumes that the love between he and his woman will last for a lifetime because it was so good at the start.

He might even think, "She knows that I love her, so I don't have to tell her that I love her anymore. That's what couples who are insecure about each other do to convince themselves that the relationship is good. She knows that I love her because I'm still with her. After all, if I didn't love her I would've broken up with her by now."

Unfortunately, he is wrong.

Women are more insecure than men and do need to hear that they are loved, even if it's just once a month.

She needs to know that her man is still committed to her, even if they live together, have children together or go on lots of fun holidays together and always have a great time.

Her insecurities will creep up on her, tap her on the shoulder and ask, "But, what if he doesn't really love you and is just using you for now? Why doesn't he say that he loves you anymore? Is he planning on leaving you?"

For a man, a woman's thinking might sound a little crazy and he might feel annoyed that women need to be reminded that they are loved.

Yet, it's not just women.

Insecure guys behave in exactly the same way about their women.

What causes that type of thinking is insecurity, so if your ex is insecure about her value to you, she's going to think like that.

Here's the thing

What often happens in relationships is that a guy starts off being loving and attentive, only to gradually fall into the habit of taking his woman for granted once the initial thrill of being with her has worn off (i.e. when he gets bored of having sex with her and isn't really trying anymore).

Although there are some women who will accept being in a relationship with a guy who stops giving her the love and appreciation she craves (e.g. because she fears that she won't be able to find a replacement guy), most women won't stick around for very long in a situation like that.

If a woman realizes that she loves her man more than he loves her, she will begin to feel unhappy and will start disconnecting from her feelings of love for him.

If he doesn't pick up on her feelings of unhappiness and start making some changes, she will eventually break up with him and try to move on and find a new man who can make her feel loved and wanted.

Note: You don't need to constantly be reminding your girl that you love her.

You just need to be more aware of it and remember to make her feel that way from time to time.

Going overboard with it and doing too much will actually backfire and cause her to feel as though she is probably too good for you, or it will cause her to start acting like a little brat and demanding you do more for her.

It's about maintaining a healthy balance where she feels lucky to be with you, but she also feels wanted, loved and appreciated.

Another possible reason why a guy's ex said that she's not good enough for him is because

5. He regularly pointed out her faults or flaws

Sometimes a guy will get into the habit of criticizing his woman every time she does something wrong, or regularly pointing out things that he doesn't like about her physical appearance.

In most cases, it's not because the guy is actually a bad person who wants to be hurtful to his woman, but rather because he thinks he's doing her a favor by highlighting to her the areas where she can improve herself.

Even though his intentions might be in the right place, no one wants to be regularly criticized or belittled by the person they love.

When a woman gets a sense that her man is making her feel weaker and less valuable, she will begin to resent him.

Eventually, his criticism will wear her down and rather than remain stuck in a relationship where she feels like she's not good enough for him, she will break up with him and try to move on.

Another possible reason why a guy's ex said that she's not good enough for him is because

6. She has always noticed his wandering eye

A guy might be out at a nice restaurant with his woman and spend a lot of time looking at (and possibly even flirting with) the waitresses.

Alternatively, if they're at a club or bar together, he might spend a lot of time watching the other women around him and on the dance floor, rather than focusing on his woman.

In most cases, a guy won't follow through on his wandering eye (i.e. cheat on his woman), but noticing how he always seems to stare at other women doesn't make his girl feel the way she wants to feel in the relationship with him.

Here's the thing

It's perfectly normal for a guy to look at other attractive women and even feel attracted to them. It's also perfectly normal for a woman to do that if she looks at men that she finds attractive. However, this is a difference between just looking at attractive women and staring at them, wishing you were with them instead.

Women can tell the difference based on how a guy looks at other women.

So, if a woman is in a relationship with a guy who is secretly wishing he was with other women, she will notice.

It might then cause her to feel jealous, insecure and even begin to behave in ways that she doesn't want to (i.e. tell him not to look, get angry at him for wanting to cheat, accuse him of cheating, check his phone to see if he's chatting with other girls).

She then reaches a point where she thinks something like, "I don't like who I am when in a relationship with him. I don't like behaving like a jealous girlfriend. That's not me. Yet, I can't stop myself from doing it because he's always looking at other girls. I hate that feeling. I want to be with a guy who makes me feel like I'm the most beautiful woman in the world to him. I don't want to be with a guy who is always on the look out for someone better. I've got to leave him."

She will then break up with him and say something along the lines of, "I think it's better if you and I go our separate ways. I'm clearly not good enough for you, so we should just accept that and move on. There's no point in us being together. I would never last, so I don't want to waste my time. Goodbye. I wish you all the best."

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making When Trying to Get an Ex Back Who Doesn't Think She is Good Enough For You

If you want your ex back, the most important thing to focus on is making her feel like she is good enough for you, without making yourself come across as desperate to get another chance with you.

From now on, whatever you say and do will either make her change how she feels and want you back, or strengthen her resolve to remain broken up.

With that in mind, make sure that you avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Buying her gifts to show how much you care

[image: Trying to convince her of his commitment with gifts]

When a guy doesn't know how else to show his ex that she's good enough for him, he might try to convince her by showering her with gifts.

He's hoping that she will think, "I must be good enough for him if he's willing to spend so much money to spoil me. I was just being silly to feel that way. He clearly loves me. We should get back together again!"

Yet, what a guy like that doesn't realize is that a woman doesn't choose to be with a guy because of what he can buy for her.

A woman chooses to be with a man based on how he makes her feel when she's with him (e.g. attracted, in love, safe, turned on, excited about the future, relaxed, happy, light-hearted).

So, rather than buying her gifts, just focus on making her have strong feelings for you, based on how she feels when she talks to you and interacts with you.

That's what really counts.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

2. Desperately pouring your heart out to her

If a woman says, *â€œIâ€™m not good enough for you. Itâ€™s better if we both just accept that and move on,*â€œ a guy might decide that the only way to convince her that she is wrong is by repeatedly telling her how much she means to him.

He might say things like, *â€œNo, no, no. Please don't say that. Canâ€™t you see how much I love you? You mean the world to me and I donâ€™t want any other woman. All I want is you. What we had together was so special and Iâ€™m shocked that you would see it so differently. I honestly believe that we belong together. Do you really want us to break up over something that isnâ€™t true? I promise you that you are good enough for me. Youâ€™re all I want in this world. Please think about it and letâ€™s give our relationship another chance. I've never loved a woman as much as I love you. Please don't leave me like this.*â€œ

In some cases that can work, as long as the guy isn't being desperate about it.

However, if a guy is being desperate and essentially pleading with her, he loses the coolness that attracted her to him in the first place.

So, make sure that you don't mess things up by pouring your heart out via email, text or in person.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Giving her too much power over you

When a woman is saying things like, *â€œI donâ€™t think Iâ€™m good enough for you,*â€œ some guys will make the mistake of promising the world to her if she just gives him another chance.

For example: A might say, *â€œNo, donâ€™t say that! You ARE good enough for me. In fact, you are probably TOO GOOD for me. What can I do to prove it to you? Iâ€™ll do anything for you! Iâ€™ll be your slave for a week if you asked me to do it. That's how much I care. Isnâ€™t that enough proof to show you that Iâ€™m devoted to you and that I donâ€™t want any other woman than you on my life? Please baby, don't walk away from me. I need you.*â€œ

Yet, rather than make a woman think, *â€œWow, well, I guess Iâ€™ve been a real fool for thinking that Iâ€™m not good enough for him. Clearly he values me and Iâ€™d be silly to let him go,*â€œ she loses respect for him for being so desperate and not being able to hold onto his position of power in the relationship.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

If you hand your power over to a woman, she wonâ€™t be able to respect you anymore.

If she canâ€™t respect you, she wonâ€™t be able to feel sexually attracted to you and without those two things, being in love with you becomes next to impossible.

She might care for you and think of you as a sweet, neutral old friend, but she wonâ€™t be able to see you as her sexy boyfriend/husband.

So, donâ€™t let your ex control you by threatening to continue walking away because she doesn't feel good enough.

Maintain your cool and focus on seducing her back into a relationship with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

4 Examples of How to Ask Your Ex to Hang Out

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 examples of how you can ask your ex to hang out:

1. Hang out as friends

[image: Hang out as friends with your ex]

Of course, when you catch up, you won't actually be acting like a friend.

You will be actively making her feel sexually attracted to you again, so you can seduce her back into a relationship.

However, it's best to refer to it as just catching up as friends rather than catching up to discuss the relationship.

This is why you should always be open to being so called 'friends' with your ex, rather than saying that being friends would be too difficult to handle for you, or that you only want to speak to her again if she wants a relationship.

You have to be more subtle and smart about it.

When you are 'friends' with your ex, you then have a good excuse to interact with her via text, e-mail, social media, over the phone and of course, in person, without her feeling like you're pressuring her to get back together again.

So, if your ex doesn't want to get back together right away and is unsure about hanging out with you, here's what you can do:

Remain confident and in a friendly, easy-going way say to her, "Hey, look – I accept that we're broken up and it's fine by me. However, even though we're not getting back together, we can at least catch up and say hi as friends. So, let's do that today/tomorrow."

She will most likely say, "Okay, I guess," because you're taking the pressure off her to get back together again by saying that it's just about catching up as friends.

As I mentioned earlier, don't act like a friend when you hang out.

You've got to focus on making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again, rather than placing yourself in the friend zone by being nice, neutral and friendly.

If you waste the time you have with her by being on your best behavior (e.g. remaining neutral around her, pretending you don't want her back, being extra polite and considerate, not flirting), she's not going to feel motivated to change her mind about being broken up.

Instead, she might enjoy a non-sexual friendship with you, while at the same time, she will secretly focus on finding and hooking up with a new guy who does make her feel sexually and romantically attracted.

So, make sure that you actively make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction when you meet up with her.

Then, if you and her are feeling attracted to each other, initiate a kiss, have sex and get the relationship back together.

Another example of how to ask your ex to hang out is toâ€¦!

2. Catch up to say hi

[image: Catch up with your ex to say hi]

One of the best ways to ask an ex to hang out is by suggesting you and her catch up to say hi.

For example: When chatting to her on the phone and after getting her to smile and laugh for a bit, you can say, â€œHey, we should catch up for a coffee sometime this to say hi. Of course, itâ€™s not about us getting back together or anything like that. Instead, it will be good to just put the past behind us and catch up to say hi. So, what do you say? Let's catch up tomorrow or the next day to say hi.â€

By asking to meet up in that way, it makes it a lot more difficult for her to refuse, without making herself come across as being emotionally immature and as though she is holding grudges.

So, to seem mature, a woman will usually say â€œYes,â€ to catching up to say hi.

You can then go ahead and make arrangements to meet up with her as soon as possible.

Of course once again, don't waste the meet up by being Mr. Nice Guy or Mr. Neutral around her.

Use the opportunity to spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you and get her thinking things like, â€œWow, I was kind of nervous about seeing him again, but this turned out better than I thought. He has changed so much since the break up. I don't know what has gotten into me, but Iâ€™m starting to wonder if maybe we can work things out between us after all.â€

When she starts thinking that way, her walls come down and you can then guide her back into a relationship with you.

Another example of how to ask your ex to hang out, is toâ€¦!

3. Catch up to say goodbye and then not speak anymore

[image: Catch up to hang out, say goodbye and never speak again]

In a situation where a woman is saying things like, â€œNo, I don't want to hang out with you,â€ or â€œPlease stop asking me to catch up. I don't want to see you again. It's over. Please accept thatâ€ you can suggest meeting up to say goodbye.

For example: You might say to her, â€œOkay, I get it. You want to close the door on our relationship and move on. I totally accept that we have broken up. All I want is for us to catch up one last time to say goodbye in person. That's all. After that, we never have to speak to each other again. Think of it as a way for both of us to get closure, or at least a way for us to end the relationship in a more mature way.â€

In most cases, a woman will agree to it to avoid appearing childish or immature compared to how you are handling the situation, or to finalize the relationship and have an excuse to reject you from then on.

Yet, what she doesn't realize is that at the meet up, you're going to be saying and doing the type of things that will reawaken her feelings for you.

You're going to make her laugh and smile and feel good to be hanging out with you again.

You're going to flirt with her and make her feel like a feminine woman in your presence.

When she starts experiencing the kind of feelings that she thought sheâ€¦d never feel for you again (e.g. respect, attraction, excitement, love), her guard will naturally come down and she will want to hang out more to see where things go from there.

[image: Hang out with your ex and make her want you back]

So, don't worry about saying that it's a meet up to say goodbye.

It won't be goodbye because you will re-attract her and she will want to see you again, or possibly even get back with you right then and there.

Another example of how to ask your ex to hang out, isâ€¦!

4. With a promise that you will never contact her again after that

Only use this approach if your ex currently hates you and doesn't want to see you ever again.

For example: You might say to her, â€œOkay, I get it. You hate me and you want me out of your life for good. So, lookâ€¦I promise that if you meet up with me this one, last time, I will completely leave you alone and never contact you again. So, letâ€¦s meet this week and you can then be done with me forever. It doesn't have to be a long catch up. All I'm asking for is 5 minutes. It's a simple coffee to catch up, say hi and say goodbye to each other. Then, I will never, ever contact you again if that's what you want.â€¦

Then use this 'last meet up' to re-attract her so she actually does want to see you again.

Of course, if your ex really hates you at the moment, then she might try hard to prevent you from being able to re-attract her.

For example: She might try to make you lose confidence byâ€¦!

- Acting bored and disinterested during the conversation.
- Calling you insulting names and blaming you for all the problems in the relationship.
- Looking at you with cold eyes when you make a joke.
- Rolling her eyes at you as though you're wasting her time.
- Pretending to be very happy without you.

Essentially, she will try to make you crumble under pressure, so she can then feel turned off by your lack of confidence.

When she's feeling turned off, she can then say, â€œOkay, youâ€¦ve had your meet up. Now leave me alone. I never want to see you again. Goodbye!â€¦

The tests are going to come, so make sure that you're ready to face her with confidence and a calm, easy-going, light-hearted attitude.

Donâ€¦t panic and start thinking things like, â€œOh, no! Itâ€¦s over! Sheâ€¦s just not interested! Sheâ€¦s going to walk away from this meet up and Iâ€¦m never going to see her again. Itâ€¦s hopeless!â€¦

If you do, she will see the panic in your eyes and it will turn her off.

Remember: Women are always attracted to confidence in men and turned off by insecurity and self doubt.

So, to regain her respect and attraction, you need to remain emotionally strong no matter what she says and does to throw you off.

The more you maintain your confidence around her regardless of how she's behaving, the more respect and attraction she will feel for you, even if she doesn't want to.

You can then build on those feelings and make her feel like it would be good to catch up again.

From there getting her back becomes easier, because you will have another chance to build on her feelings and kiss and hook up sexually.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making When Asking Your Ex to Hang Out

Asking an ex to hang out is a great approach to getting her back.

The more you can interact with her face-to-face, the more you will be able to regain her respect.

When she can respect you, she will automatically feel attracted to you again and with those two things in place, reconnecting with her feelings of love becomes easy and natural for her.

That's how it's supposed to work.

Unfortunately, many guys mess up their chances to get a woman back by making one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Asking her via text

Sometimes when a woman isn't very open to interacting with her ex (e.g. she only texts him once in a while, or responds to him via social media), a guy might make the mistake of thinking he can initiate a meet up via text.

For example: A guy might think to himself, "She hasn't given me too many obvious signs that she wants to talk to me on the phone. So, I'll just play it safe and ask her via text. That way, she won't feel pressured. She will be able to think about it in her own time and give me an answer when she's ready. She'll also be grateful to me for not being pushy or putting her on the spot on a phone call, so she will be more inclined to say yes to catching up."

Yet, in most cases, the opposite is true.

Rather than think, "Awww! She's being so sweet by asking me to catch up via text," she will likely think, "He wants to hang out, but he doesn't even have the balls to ask me directly. He's just hiding behind texts and hoping that I'll make it easy for him. This only highlights how insecure and self-doubting he is, which convinces me even more that he's not the right guy for me. He doesn't even have the balls to call me. What's he scared of? That I will say no? Where is his backbone? He's just not confident enough anymore." I'm over it. I need a more confident man.

Here's the thing:

A text message is only a bunch of words on a screen.

It's not you.

It's just words on her phone, or on her computer if you're messaging her that way.

She knows that you could be saying one thing and feeling another, so she will be naturally suspicious of anything you text her.

Rather than giving you the benefit of the doubt and assume that you were feeling confident and emotionally strong when you sent her a text to ask her to hang out, a woman will usually think about you based on how she felt when you and her broke up.

For example: If you were a bit insecure, self-doubting and needy in the relationship, she will likely assume that youâre still the same guy.

She will assume that you still lack confidence and doubt yourself, which is why youâre asking her via text, rather than calling her on the phone.

Of course, some guys think, “She probably doesn’t want to talk to me on the phone. She prefers text. I just want to do what she wants.”

No.

No excuses.

You’ve got to do what works.

If you just text her, she is more likely to reject you or play hard to get.

It’s also so much easier for her to assume the worst about you (i.e. that you’re needy now, have lost a lot of confidence in yourself) and refuse to meet up with you because of that.

So, if you want to get her to hang out, don’t hide behind texts and hope that she makes it easy for you.

Most women don’t make it easy for an ex that they’re no longer attracted to.

On a phone call, you can make her feel so much more attraction and then, she is less likely to say no, or to play hard to get when she’s smiling, laughing and enjoying talking to you.

Of course, that doesn’t mean you can’t ever text her.

A text or two can definitely help to get her smiling and laughing a little bit so she will be more open to talking to you over the phone, but it usually won’t do enough to guarantee a meet up.

If you want to ask her to hang out, it’s much better done on a phone call.

When she can hear the confidence in your voice (especially if sheâs being cold and aloof towards you), her guard will come down and she will want to see you in person to confirm for herself that you truly have changed.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

2. Asking her if it’s okay to catch up

Just like how a woman doesn’t like when an insecure guy asks if it’s okay to kiss her, a woman also doesn’t like it if an insecure ex asks if it’s okay to meet up with her.

Why?

A woman wants to know that the man sheâs with is confident enough to take the lead and guide them both back into a relationship, without her guidance and support.

A woman doesn’t want to hold a guy’s hand and pat him on the back and say, “Yes, good boyâthat’s it. You can do it.”

She wants him to man up and take the lead, without needing her to push him along.

So, what should you do instead?

Be a good guy and be respectful, but be assertive.

Tell her to catch up with you in a confident, easy-going manner.

If she says that she isn't sure, just tell her that it's totally fine for ex's to catch up and say hi.

If she still resists, you can say that the catch up can be a way for both of you to get closure and completely end the relationship.

If she still says no, tell her that if she agrees to meet up, you promise to never contact her again.

Essentially, be confident, be assertive and be a good guy as you try to get you and her to meet up to have a quick catch up as friends.

Then, when you catch up, re-attract her and if she is feeling open to you again, you can then get her back.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ□|

3. Letting her sense that you donâ□□t actually want to hang out and secretly want to have a serious relationship

When a woman is at a point where sheâ□□s not interested in even thinking about getting back together with her ex, sheâ□□s going to be suspicious about anything he suggests.

If he puts pressure on her to hang out, she will begin to wonder things like, â□□Is this a trap to get me to go out with him again, so he can then convince me to give him another chance? Is he trying to force me into a relationship with him again? Will the catch up turn into a long, drawn out deep and meaningful conversation where he pleads with me to give him another chance?â□□

If she gets that sense, she will almost certainly say, "No" to catching up and will try to move on without him as quickly as she can, to avoid getting dragged back into a relationship with a guy who hasn't even changed.

So, if you want your ex to be open to hanging out, make sure that she gets the sense that you're not going to be pushing for a relationship.

Then, when you hang out with her, focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you.

When she feels that way, she will naturally drop her guard and open back up to you.

Before you know it, you and her will be kissing, having sex and then laying in bed talking about how good it is to be back together.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

You Will Always Find Someone Better. True or False?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

False.

The truth is that you will always find someone different, but they won't necessarily be better.

The new person may be good for you, but the one you lost might have been better for you or they may have been worse.

Whether a man gets his woman back really depends on the approach that he uses after getting dumped.

Watch the video above for 5 of the most common ex back myths, which can cause a man to miss out on the opportunity to get his ex woman back.

As you will discover from the video, many guys could have gotten their ex back, but they wasted too much time waiting and hoping that she would come back on her own.

In most cases, a woman doesn't come back to a guy that she is no longer attracted to anymore.

So, if you want to get your ex woman back, rather than having to always hope that might find someone better, then continue reading.

All the answers you are seek are right hereâ€¦!

The Best Approach to Take to Get Her Back

[image: The best approach to get her back]

Not every guy approaches the process of getting his ex woman back in the same way.

As a result, each man will get a different outcome and may eventually regret that approach he used.

Read through these 3 examples and you will realize which is the best approach to use to get your ex woman back.

Man #1 doesn't improve the things about him that caused the woman to dump him

Man #1 is the type of guy who thinks that getting an ex back is about begging and pleading with her for another chance.

He talks to her and says things like, â€œIâ€™m so sorry for hurting you. Please forgive me. I know I stuffed up, but I truly love you and I promise if you just give me one more chance, I really will change this time. Iâ€™ll do whatever you want me to do to make things right again. Just tell me what will make you happy and Iâ€™ll do it. You are the only woman I want and the idea of losing you makes me feel hopeless. Please donâ€™t walk away from what we had together. I really will change. Please give me a chance.â€

To hopefully get her to take pity on him, he might also begin to shower her with flowers, gifts and attention.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that not only is he not addressing the real reasons why she broke up with him in the first place (e.g. his lack of confidence and emotional strength, his inability to stand on his own two feet, his lack of focus and direction in life), he's actually making things worse by behaving in ways that are naturally unattractive to women (e.g. begging, pleading, asking her to tell him what to do, sucking up to her with gifts).

She then either acts cold and bitchy towards him and refuses to talk to him, or she says something along the lines of, “Look, Iâ€™m not ready to get back together at the moment. Give me some space to figure things out in my life. Then, we can see what happens after that.”

He then either gives up and walks away feeling sad and rejected, or he gives her a few weeks, months or even years of space in the hope that she will come back to him on her own.

Yet, she simply uses the time apart to get over him and move on.

Then, when he finally does contact her, she says, “Sorry, but Iâ€™ve met someone else and Iâ€™m happy now. Itâ€™s over between us. Please accept that and move on. Goodbye.”

He is then left feeling rejected and wondering, “Why did this happen to me? Why am I always getting dumped by the women I love? Maybe it was her fault. Maybe sheâ€™s just a selfish bitch who only cares about herself. I donâ€™t need to change, she does!”

He then decides to not change anything about his approach to relationships and see how things go with a new woman.

Eventually, the same thing happens to him again where he is dumped by a woman he really loves. Rather than taking responsibility for the outcome of the relationship, he blames women and thinks something like, “Itâ€™s not my fault that the women Iâ€™ve been dating are all crazy/ demanding/ bitches. I just have to keep looking. Eventually I will find someone better. Most women are crazy. Iâ€™ll have to be lucky to find a good one who will be loyal and never leave me.”

Man #2 does improve the things about him that caused the woman to dump him, but he doesnâ€™t try to get her back

Man #2 is the type of guy who stops to ask himself, “Why did this happen to me? What aspect of my thinking and behavior caused her to lose respect, attraction and love for me? What can I do to change and improve and become a better man?”

He then goes about trying to improve himself, so he can avoid getting dumped again in future.

For example:

If he discovers that one of the things that turned her off was his lack of motivation to do something with his life, he then focuses on setting himself some big goals and working towards achieving them.

If he lacked confidence in himself, he focuses on building up belief in himself and in his value as a man.

If he was too much of a loner, he makes an effort to go out and make friends and begin to enjoy being a more social person.

If he was a pushover in the relationship with her, he decides to be more emotionally dominant and masculine around women from now on.

The bottom line is this: He learns from the experience and becomes a better man.

Yet, he doesnâ€™t try to get his ex back because he assumes that itâ€™s too late.

Even though heâ€™s a new and improved man and could potentially have an awesome, new relationship with his ex, he will never know because he doesnâ€™t ever give it a try.

Of course, he will most likely meet another woman soon enough and might have a good relationship with her, but he will miss out on being with the love of his life because he didn't bother to get her back after he changed.

The next approach a guy might take is

Man #3 improves himself, gets her back and enjoys an even better relationship with her than he did before

[image: Improve, get her back and enjoy an even better relationship than before]

Man #3 is the type of man who understands that it is possible to get a woman back after a break up, even if she wants nothing to do with him initially and seems certain to want to move on without him. He knows that by making some adjustments to his thinking and behavior, he can re-attract her and get her back.

So, rather than wasting time ignoring her, or wasting energy trying to convince her to give him another chance by telling her how much he still loves her, he focuses on actively making her have sexual and romantic feelings for him again.

For example: Some of the ways he does that includes

- Making her feel happy to be around him again by getting her to smile and laugh, especially if she is trying to be cold, distant or rude to throw him off.
- Making her feel feminine and girly in his masculine presence, rather than acting like a neutral friend or worse, sucking up to her by being extra nice or polite.
- Behaving in a more attractive way around her (e.g. being more confident and emotionally strong and passing her tests, laughing at her attempts to make him feel nervous around her, using humor to diffuse a tense situation).
- Flirting with her to create a sexual spark between them, rather than being neutral like a friend.

By making those adjustments to his behavior and way of thinking, his communication style and how he responds to her, she automatically starts to see him in a different light.

He opens her eyes to the fact that falling back in love after a break up is one of the most amazing feelings she will ever experience in her life.

She then begins to think, He really has changed. He now makes me feel attracted in ways that I always wanted, but never got from a relationship with him. Maybe we can make things work between us after all. Maybe this relationship is worth saving.

As a result, her guard comes down and she opens herself up to giving the relationship another chance. However this time around, rather than making the mistake of assuming that the relationship will take care of itself, the man focuses on maintaining and building on his woman's feelings of respect, attraction and love for him over time.

As a result, they fall more in love with each other every day and enjoy a long-lasting and happy relationship.

Where Guys Go Wrong When Trying to Get an Ex Back

If you want to get her back, be sure to avoid these common mistakes that other guys make, which cause them to avoid their ex for too long, or turn her off even further!

1. Losing confidence in his value to his ex and other women

Getting broken up with can sometimes ruin a guy's confidence in his attractiveness to his ex and to women in general.

He might then start thinking things like, "I had the perfect woman and I ruined it. I'm such a loser. How could I have messed things up so badly? I don't deserve a beautiful woman like her anymore. I probably got lucky with my ex and won't get another woman like her ever again. How could I have been so careless to cause her to leave? If only she would give me another chance, I would do anything she wants to make sure that she is happy."

Then, when he interacts with her on a phone call or in person, keeps putting himself down, focusing on what he did wrong in the relationship and asking her what he could do differently to make her happy.

There's nothing wrong with acknowledging mistakes, but continuing to put himself down and then ask her what she wants him to change to give him another chance doesn't work.

Why?

She wants him to figure out (without her help) what went wrong in the relationship, improve himself and then get on with making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him, based on who he has become.

If he can do that, she will be able to look up to him and respect him again.

On the other hand, if she sees that he has no confidence in himself anymore, she will likely think, "Why should I give him another chance if he doesn't believe in himself and in his value to me? I need to be with a man who feels worthy of me, not a guy who feels like I'm doing him a favor."

The next mistake to avoid is!

2. Accepting a less attractive woman because he believes that she will stay with him for life

[image: Accepting a less attractive woman, so she hopefully won't leave you]

Not knowing that it's possible to improve his attraction and relationship skills and avoid ever getting dumped again, a guy might decide that he just has to accept an unattractive woman and put up with it.

He might begin to think, "Beautiful women aren't trustworthy. They think they can get any guy they want, so it's easy for them to just break a guy's heart and leave him without feeling any remorse. Well, I'm not going to let that happen to me again. I'm going to find myself a woman who isn't very attractive, so she will feel lucky to have a guy like me. She will be loyal and devoted to me and she will never think about leaving me or breaking my heart."

Yet, in reality that's not how it works at all.

In most cases, even a less attractive woman won't stay in a relationship with a guy who can't make her feel the way she wants to feel (i.e. attracted, respectful of him, in love, feminine).

So, rather than being safe by accepting a less attractive woman, a guy like that ends up getting dumped again, only this time after wasting months or years of his life with an unattractive woman.

He then loses more confidence in his attractiveness to women and as a result, finding a quality woman becomes even more difficult for him.

Why?

Attractive women want a guy with confidence, so they don't end up in a relationship with a guy who will become insecure, jealous and controlling due to him feeling as though she is way better than him.

Attractive women want a guy who feels like he is more than good enough for them.

So, wasting time with unattractive women because you hope they won't dump you isn't the solution.

You've simply got to start being the confident, emotionally masculine man that women are naturally attracted to, as well as improving your relationship skills, so you don't end up making the same mistakes as last time and ruining another relationship.

Another mistake that guys make after being dumped by a woman they love, isâ€¦!

3. Accepting a woman that he doesn't truly love, so he doesn't have to emotionally commit to the relationship

Sometimes, a break up can cause a guy to become emotionally closed off from women.

He doesn't want to fall in love again and have his heart broken, so he avoids getting into relationships with a woman that he senses might be the one for him.

Instead, he gets into relationships with women who aren't 100% compatible with him (e.g. they want different things in life such as a career vs. a family, they have different values, they're interested in very different things, they don't meet all of his standards and he secretly plans to cheat or break up at some point), so he doesn't have to risk getting hurt if she breaks up with him first.

By closing himself off from true love, he's stopping himself from finding real happiness with a new woman, or with his ex woman.

Remember: It's almost never too late to get your ex back and have another try at the relationship.

It's too late when she is happily married with children, but if your ex isn't that far gone yet, you really can get her back.

4. Giving up on his ex too easily

Most women won't fall into their ex's arms the moment he tries to get her back.

Instead, a woman will first wait to see if her ex really has changed and improved and become the man she wants him to be (e.g. more confident, determined, emotionally dominant, no longer selfish or controlling).

For example: When a guy meets up with his ex woman for the first time since they broke up, he might try to get her to commit to the idea of giving him another chance.

Yet, rather than making it easy for him by saying â€œYesâ€œ right away, a woman will usually say something along the lines of, â€œI don't think that's a good idea. It's just too soon for us to be talking about getting back together again. I don't feel like I've healed enough yet from *what happened between us. I need more time.*â€”

A guy might then doubt himself and his chances with her and decide to stop pursuing her.

He might then give up, walk away and miss out on an opportunity to be with the love of his life once again.

The truth is that sometimes you might find someone better after a break up and sometimes you won't.

However, you'll never truly know if your ex was the right one if you just give up and walk away.

So, if you want her back, don't give up just yet.

Get her back and give the relationship one more try.

It's actually pretty damn easy to do!

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Choked My Girlfriend Out of Anger and She Dumped Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 things you can do now to fix the problem:

1. Understand that even though she was annoying you, physical abuse is never the solution

Sometimes, a man will try to justify his actions, by saying that a woman brought the anger out of him because she was hitting him or being annoying.

Yet, what the man usually doesn't realize is that he has other options to handle annoying behavior from a woman.

For example: He can laugh at her and tease her as she tries to be tough and intimidate him.

He can smile, laugh and say, "Ohhh, you're so tough" and have a laugh with her about that. Be loving about it as you laugh and say, "Let me see your muscles. Ooooh scary!"

If she is being physically aggressive or ridiculously unreasonable, he can also break up with her, get her to leave his house or leave the house to walk away from the situation until she cools down.

However, what he must not do, is react by becoming violent towards her every time she does something to annoy him or get under his skin.

Here's the thing:

Although there is nothing wrong with a guy getting angry at his girlfriend if she is out of line or is treating him badly, losing control of himself and becoming violent is the quickest way to ruin her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

Rather than think, "It's okay that he choked me. I'm partly to blame for what happened between us. I pushed him into reacting like that," a woman will usually think, "A real man would never behave in that way towards a woman, no matter what she's saying or doing to him. If he can't control himself with me now, how will he react if he is faced with something even more serious in our relationship in future? What if I stepped out of line in a way that he doesn't like, such as flirting with another guy? Would he then beat me, or worse, kill me, because he can't control his anger? He's just too emotionally immature right now and I can't risk staying with him under these circumstances. I could get seriously hurt or even killed, so I have to leave him."

The fact is, if you want to get your ex back, you need to get to the point where you fully understand that violence is not the answer.

You're not a bad person for having choked her.

You made a silly mistake.

Everyone makes silly mistakes at some point in their life.

However, you've got to get to the point now where you honestly acknowledge that using physical violence against a woman isn't the solution to your relationship problems.

There is always a better way to handle the situation and approach the relationship.

For example: Watch this video that I made about creating a more positive, easy-going and light-hearted dynamic in a relationshipâ€¦!

If you can honestly acknowledge that there are better ways to handle an annoying woman, then you're already a better man right now.

You have learned from the experience, leveled up as a man and as a result, you deserve more respect. In terms of interacting with your ex girlfriend from now onâ€¦!

No matter what happens between you and her from this point onwards and no matter how much she pushes your buttons and tries to set you off, tell yourself now that youâ€¦re not going to react by getting physically aggressive with her.

When she can see for herself that regardless of how much she tries to trigger your anger, you remain cool, calm and collected and use humor and an easy-going attitude to turn the situation around, she wonâ€¦t be able to stop herself from feeling some respect for you again.

You can then build on those feelings and get her back.

The next thing you should do isâ€¦!

2. Calmly, sincerely and briefly apologize to her if you haven't done so already

Naturally if you havenâ€¦t already apologized to your girlfriend for your behavior, make sure that you do so right away.

Hereâ€¦s an example of what you might say to herâ€¦!

â€¦I just want to say that Iâ€¦m truly sorry for the way I behaved. My behavior was inexcusable. I donâ€¦t expect you to forget about it or forgive me just because Iâ€¦m apologizing to you. However, I want you to know that I am completely aware that I made a terrible mistake. I have obviously learned from the experience and would never do something like that again. Once again though, I don't expect you to believe me or forgive. I just want to say that I am sorry for reacting in such a silly, unloving way by choking you. It's actually pretty embarrassing to think that I behaved like that. I guess we all live and learn though. I've learned my lesson from it and know that it was a stupid, immature thing to do and I'm sorry.â€¦

She can then stop focusing on how badly you stuffed up and begin to consider that you might have actually learned a lesson and changed.

As a result, her guard starts to come down a little and she becomes more open to talking to you over the phone and seeing you in person.

The next thing you need to do isâ€¦!

3. Prepare yourself to be ready to react in different ways from now on

From now on, your ex is going to test you to see if you really have changed, or if youâ€¦re just saying that you have changed to quickly get her back.

For example: She might be cold and bitchy and say things like, â€¦Forget about it! Iâ€¦m never going to forgive you for choking me! Youâ€¦re crazy, you're out of control and Iâ€¦m never going to be able to forget that,â€¦ or â€¦You must think Iâ€¦m stupid if you believe that I would ever forgive you and give you another chance after what you did to me. I hate you now and I never want to see you or talk to you again! Just go away and leave me alone. You scare me. Leave me alone!â€¦

She might then become angry and aggressive towards you (e.g. swear at you, push you, hit you, call you names) as a way of testing whether youâll get angry and retaliate by hitting her back or choking her once again.

She might also bring a friend with her when meeting up with you, to make you feel guilty for causing her to feel so afraid to be alone with you.

Yet, just remember...

Whatever she does to set you off (even when you might be justified in getting annoyed), you must find a way to react differently to her.

For example: If sheâs being cold and bitchy towards you, you can use humor to break through her defenses and make her laugh and smile.

Alternatively, if she says that she will never be able to forgive you for what you did, you can calmly and confidently say, âHeyâI understand how you feel and Iâm not going to push you to feel anything else. However, you and I are both mature adults and Iâm sure, deep down, you know that you would only be hurting yourself by not forgiving me and holding a grudge against me for life. At some point, youâre going to realize that I made a stupid mistake and I learned from it and became a better man. You will remember that I was sorry about it and felt like a real idiot for doing it. Me being sorry and regretting the stupid thing that I did doesnât take it away, but hey â we all live and learn. We all make silly mistakes at some point in our life and we can learn from that and become a better person. So, if you donât want to forgive me now, I understand that and accept. Yet, I know that you will forgive me later on when you realize that I was just being stupid and immature and I then changed as a man and grew up as a result.â

If she hits you or becomes violent, you can just walk away and say something along the lines of, âClearly youâre not ready to talk right now. Iâll call you in a couple of days when youâre feeling calmer and we might be able to talk then.â

The important thing to remember is that regardless of what she says or does to make you angry or annoyed, you show her that youâre not that kind of guy anymore.

By making some adjustments to the way you talk to her, interact with her and respond to her, she naturally begins to look at you in a more positive light.

As a result, she naturally becomes more open to being around you.

You can then build on her willingness to be around you by fully reawakening her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

When that happens, she will want to give you another chance to avoid losing the opportunity to be with you again.

However, make sure that youâ!

4. Only attempt to get her back if you know for sure that you arenât going to react violently anymore

If youâre currently thinking, “Yeah, of course! I would never do that again” then great â you should get her back.

However, if youâre thinking, “Well, I donât knowâI tend to get pretty angry at her when sheâs being a pain in the butt. I probably could hit her or choke herâI donât know” then give yourself some more time to change, before you attempt to get her back.

You might want your girlfriend back right now before she moves on, but if you can't stop yourself from reacting in a violent way when she pushes your buttons (e.g. says things to annoy you, becomes verbally or even physically abusive towards you), then maybe you need to accept that you're just not ready to handle a woman like her.

The fact is, when a man and a woman are right for each other, they bring out the best in each other when in a relationship, not the worst.

For example: In a happy, healthy, long-lasting relationship, a man and a woman will:

- Make each other laugh and smile (even when things get tough), rather than taking everything too seriously.
- Want the best for the other person, rather than just trying to take love from the relationship (e.g. get compliments, support, affection) and give nothing or not much in return.
- Stand by each other when things get difficult, rather than getting annoyed at the other person for not being able to handle a particular situation.
- Help the other person improve and become a better person, rather than bringing that person down.
- Be willing to change and improve themselves, rather than thinking that they are perfect and everything wrong in the relationship is the other person's fault.

So make sure that when you try to get your girlfriend back, you're 100% ready to react in a new way around her.

Let her experience it for herself by interacting with her and presenting a new, improved and more mature version of yourself.

When you do that, she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Don't try to push for a relationship at that point though.

Just let her experience it, want you back and naturally begin to head in that direction with you.

If you push for a relationship too soon, she will probably say something like, "I'm not sure I need more time I'm still scared I just don't know if I can trust you."

So, make sure that you focus on re-attracting her in person and allowing the relationship to naturally come back together.

5. Contact her and attempt to get her to meet up to have a chat as friends

If you're going to convince her that you really are a different man and would never react by choking her during an argument, you're going to have to do it face-to-face.

So, pick up the phone, spark her feelings of respect for you on the call and get her to agree to meet up with you in person.

For example: Start off by using a bit of humor to make her smile and laugh and break the ice between you and her.

Then, once she's feeling more relaxed and open you might say to her, "Hey, I accept that we've broken up, but let's meet up for a quick coffee to say hi this week as friends. It's not about us getting back together again of course. I obviously ruined my chances of that with my immature behavior recently. Instead, catching up to say hi is just about us trying to move forward as friends, *rather than enemies. Afterward, if you decide you never want to talk to me again, Iâll respect your decision and never contact you again.*â

Chances are high that she will agree to meeting up, even if it's because sheâs currently hoping that you will leave her alone after that.

Yet, when you re-attract her at the meet up, she will drop her guard and become open to seeing you again.

In many cases like yours, a guy will get his ex girlfriend back the first time he meets up with her.

However, just make sure that you are 100% prepare to re-attract her at the meet up.

Don't try to attract her in the same old ways that caused her to feel turned off by you or bored by you in the relationship.

To ensure success, I recommend that you use a new, more interesting and appealing approach to attraction, so she has a reason to get back with you.

Watch the video above for some examples of how to level up and re-attract her.

3 Mistakes to Avoid if You Want to Get Her Back

[image: Stop getting angry when she tests you by being annoying]

Believe it or not, in most instances, a woman will forgive a guy for almost anything if he shows her that heâs truly changed and become a better man as a result.

So, if you want your ex to forgive you and open herself up to the idea of getting back together again, make sure you donât make any of these classic mistakes:

1. Apologizing over and over when she has already heard your apology

[image: Don't keep apologizing over and over again]

Sometimes a guy feels so shocked by his behavior, that he canât stop apologizing to his ex about it.

Heâll go on and on saying things like, *âIâm sorry! Iâm so sorry for what I did! I canât believe I behaved like that. You cannot begin to know how much I regret what I did to you. Please forgive me!*â in the hope that she will see his remorse and forgive him.

Yet, apologizing over and over again doesnât actually get to the core of the problem.

Although he is being 100% sincere about his regret for hurting her, nothing else about his behavior is making her feel like if she gives him another chance, things really will be different this time.

Heâs just apologizing, but heâs still at the same level that he was at when she broke up with him.

She canât see any obvious changes in him, other than constant apologies, so she looks his apology as being just empty words.

She fears that if she gives him another chance, the same thing will happen weeks, months or years from now.

So, rather than risking it, she just continues trying to move on without him.

Hereâs the thingâ!

If youâve sincerely apologized to your girlfriend for choking her out of anger, then thereâs no need to keep apologizing to her.

Once is enough.

After apologizing once, itâs much more important to then show her, via your actions, behavior and the way you respond to her when she tests you, that you no longer react the way you did before.

When she can see that you now have full control over your emotions, it will make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Then, the idea of giving you another chance starts to feel like something she may be willing to do.

However, if you just apologize to her repeatedly in the hope that she will think, âAwwwâ! I feel sorry for him because he's so remorseful and totally regrets his mistake. He keeps apologizing, so he must be telling the truth. I should give him another chance,â youâll be very disappointed because she will likely just move on without you.

Remember: Actions speak louder than words.

Apologizing once is fine, but you then need to get on with making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new and improved you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ!

2. Going to 'anger management therapy' when you don't actually need it

Some guys definitely do need help from a therapist or anger management counselor (e.g. if a guy has a long history of losing his temper often and becoming aggressive or violent towards women) and in cases like that, a guy should get help.

However, in most cases, especially where a guy has choked his girlfriend out of anger and has instantly realized his mistake and regretted it ever since, a guy does not need to go to a counseling session.

Most guys just need to honestly realize that reacting with physical violence when a woman is being annoying isn't the answer.

There are always more loving ways to react and respond to a woman who is being angry, aggressive or annoying (i.e. use humor, walk away from the situation, break up with her).

As long as have learned your lesson and know in your heart that you wonât ever want to choke your girlfriend (or another woman) again, then thereâs no need to rush off to a therapist or get counseling so you can prove to her that you are serious about changing.

In fact, women hate it when a guy goes to therapy or counseling and then tells her all about it and wants her to be part of his journey to become a better man.

A woman just wants you to get on with being a better man, without needing her to hold your hand along the way or pat you on the back about any progress you make.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ!

3. Feeling unworthy of a relationship with her, or other women, because of a silly, immature mistake

Every man makes silly mistakes at some point in his life.

The greatest men of all learn from their mistakes and become even better men than they were before.

So, if you have learned from your mistake, are sincerely sorry for doing it and know that you won't ever hurt a woman like that again, then it's a valuable lesson.

It wasn't the right thing to do of course, but everyone makes mistakes.

Don't put yourself down because of what happened.

It was a silly mistake.

It doesn't mean that you're a bad person, or that you don't deserve to get your girlfriend back (or be with another woman).

It simply means that you stuffed up.

Let it go and just focus on being a better man.

Once you are ready, contact her, interact with her, re-attract her and guide her back into a relationship with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Moved On After Two Weeks. Did She Ever Love Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends.

Not all women are the same.

Some women move on quickly for reasons other than not loving you, whereas other times it's because she never really loved you.

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will quickly move on after a break up:

1. To avoid being drawn back into a relationship with you

[image: She moved on to avoid getting dragged back into a relationship with you]

After breaking up, a woman can still have some feelings for her ex guy, but deep down, she also knows that he's not going to change and become the guy she really needs him to be.

She has likely given him plenty of chances to change and improve in the past and although he always promises to change and better, he eventually reverts back to his old way of thinking and behaving.

So, this time around, rather than risk being drawn back into a relationship with him, she quickly moves on and starts dating other guys as a way to stop herself from being tempted to give him another chance.

It's not that she didn't ever love you, but rather that she doesn't want to keep experiencing the same problems with you over and over again.

She might actually still love you very much, but she currently can't trust that you will actually change and become the man she needs you to be.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend back, don't go about it in the same way you have in the past (e.g. promising her that you will change, asking her to tell you what she wants you to do to make her happy, begging and pleading for another chance).

You have to actually change this time and let her experience it on a phone call or in person.

Remember: Actions speak louder than words.

You need to show her via the way you think, talk, behave, interact with her and respond to what she says and does, that you really have changed this time.

Then, when you interact with her and she encounters a very different guy to the one she broke up with (e.g. more confident and self-assured, more able to stand up for himself, more emotionally independent, more loving, more honest and real, more charismatic and interesting), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

You can then build on her feelings of respect and attraction for you during interactions and get her back.

However, if you try to get her back without making some improvements to the things that really matter to her, she's just going to say, âSorry. It's over between us. I've moved on and you need to do the same.â

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend moved on after two weeks isâ€¦!

2. To avoid having to deal with the pain of a break up

[image: She moved on to avoid having to deal with the pain of a break up]

If a woman is inexperienced with break ups and this is her first serious relationship, she may not know how to handle the pain that comes after a relationship ends.

For example: According to a study published in Evolutionary and Behavioral Sciences, women experience more emotional pain than men after a breakup.

Your ex might not shown that to you, but chances are high that she would have been experiencing a lot of emotional pain after the break up.

So, rather than sitting around feeling sad, crying and missing you for weeks, she may have simply decided to quickly move on as a way of distracting herself from the painful feelings.

The good news for you is that when you interact with her and make her feel the way that she really wants to feel in a relationship (e.g. respectful of you, attracted to you, feminine and girly around you in comparison to how masculine you think, talk and behave), her feelings will automatically change.

She will start to feel drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

She may then think something like, â€œHmmmâ€¦ something has changed. Suddenly the idea of moving on without him doesnâ€™t feel right to me anymore. I miss him. Maybe I made a mistake breaking up with him. Maybe we can actually work things out between us after all. What am I doing with this new guy? I have to go and see my ex. I canâ€™t stop thinking about him now.â€œ

As a result, getting her back becomes easy for you, because itâ€™s something that both of you want, rather than it only being something that you want and you are trying to convince her of.

So, I recommend that you stop focusing on why your ex girlfriend moved on after two weeks and wondering, â€œDid she ever love me?â€œ and concentrate on using every interaction you have with her from now on (e.g. via text, e-mail, social media and especially over the phone and in person), to spark her feelings for you again.

The more respect and attraction you can make her feel for the new and improved you, the more she will want to be with you rather than the new guy.

On the other hand, if you interact with her and turn her off even more (e.g. by being desperate, by trying to make her feel guilty for moving on so quickly), her defenses will stay up and she will convince herself that sheâ€™s doing the right thing by moving on.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend moved on after two weeks isâ€¦!

3. To show her family and friends that she doesn't sleep around and just wants to be in a happy relationship

In todayâ€™s world, a lot of women enjoy being single and sleeping with many different men without getting into a serious relationship.

Although thereâ€™s nothing wrong with that, there are still some people who regard women like that as being slutty.

In the case of your ex girlfriend, she might fear that if she remains single for too long, her family and friends will start thinking that sheâ€™s a careless woman who sleeps around.

So, rather than being seen in that way, she moves on quickly to show the people in her life that she is a responsible, sensible woman who only wants to be in a happy relationship with one guy for life.

The next possible reason why your ex girlfriend moved on after two weeks isâ€¦|

4. She wasn't truly in love with you yet

Sometimes a woman might hook up with a guy that she doesn't feel 100% compatible with, simply because she doesn't want to be alone.

For example: She might think to herself, â€œI don't feel very attracted to him right now, but he's quite sweet and treats me well. Maybe if I give him a chance, he will eventually grow on me and we can be happy together.â€

If she then finds that her feelings don't deepen and decides to break up with him, it will be easy for her to move on because she was never really committed to him in the first place.

However, even if this was the case between you and your ex, the good news is you can still change how she feels.

In fact, the more you spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you during interactions (e.g. by making her smile and laugh, making her feel like a desirable, sexy woman), the more drawn to you she will feel.

She will then begin asking herself, â€œWhy am I feeling this way about him all of a sudden? Did I fall in love with him and not realize it until now? Could I have made a mistake by breaking up with him? Is he the one for me after all? Why don't I just give him another chance? I miss him now. I want him.â€

She then becomes so much easier to seduce and get back into a relationship.

So, don't waste any more time thinking, â€œMy ex girlfriend moved on after two weeks. Did she ever love me?â€

Instead, focus instead on making her love the new and improved you.

Call her on the phone or meet up with her in person and spark her feelings for you, so she has a reason to get back with you or at least hook up with you to see how she feels.

The next possible reason why your ex girlfriend moved on after two weeks isâ€¦|

5. She prefers being in a relationship than being single

Some women simply hate the idea of not being in a relationship because her main goal is to secure a man for life and get on with having a family.

A woman like that will go from relationship to relationship really quickly, until she meets a guy who can maintain and grow her feelings of respect, attraction and love over time.

When she does find a guy like that, she will remain faithful to him and be a committed and loving woman for life.

So, if your ex girlfriend has moved on two weeks after breaking up with you, it may be because she's looking for a guy that she can permanently settle down with.

That guy can still be you, of course.

When you start giving her the attraction experience she always wanted from you, she will automatically start to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Her defenses will come down and the idea of investing in a relationship with a new guy that might actually end in a break up will begin to seem wrong to her.

At that point, you can use your new and improved attraction skills to re-attract her and get her back.

For some tips on how to re-attract her, be sure to watch the videos that I've included on this page for you.

Now, let's look at where guys mess up when their ex girlfriend moves on quickly after a break up!

4 Mistakes to Avoid Making if Your Ex Girl Moved on Quickly After Breaking Up With You

It sucks that she moved on quickly, but to get her back now, you need to be in control of your emotions, so you can talk, behave and act in a way that will re-attract her.

For example: Make sure that you avoid the following mistakes that show you are hurting and are not in control of your emotions!

1. Asking her how she could move on so quickly

It's normal for a guy to feel hurt or annoyed at his ex girlfriend for moving on so quickly after their break up.

Feeling rejected, betrayed or like she had fooled him into thinking that everything was fine, he might start to feel angry and want to know what the heck she was thinking.

As a result, he might text her, call her or talk to her in person and ask (in an annoyed, angry or suspicious manner), "How could you move on so quickly? Did you ever love me? Was our relationship fake? Did I mean anything to you?!"

Even though he has a right to ask for an explanation from her (after all she was his girlfriend), she probably won't agree and will get annoyed at him.

For example: She may think, "How dare he ask me why I'm moving on so quickly? Does he think he owns me or something? Well, I'm not his property and I don't have to explain myself to him. He's just jealous that I moved on easily and he can't. He's lost so much confidence in himself that other attractive girls don't want him. Well, that's his bad luck. I don't have to sit around being single just because he isn't moving on."

She then closes herself off from her ex and focuses on trying to make her new relationship work.

So, if you don't want to push your ex girlfriend further away, don't ask her why or how she could move on so quickly.

Instead, just focus on reactivating her feelings for you.

The more attracted and respectful you make her feel about the new and improved you, the sooner she will be back in your arms.

Another mistake to avoid making is!

2. Seeking pity from her

Sometimes a guy might sulk, whine or even cry about the situation to his girlfriend as a way of hopefully making her feel guilty for what she has done to him.

He might say, â€œHow can you do this to me? How can you move on after two weeks? Did you ever love me or was it all a lie? Well, for me it was 100% real and I canâ€™t just move on as though nothing happened. What happened between you and I was real. I wish I could just forget about you, but I canâ€™t. Maybe Iâ€™m just a fool for loving you so much. I actually care about what we had together. It means so much to me. I just donâ€™t understand how what we shared seems to have meant nothing to you. Two weeks!? Thatâ€™s all it took for you to forget me and move on? Iâ€™m stunned. Iâ€™ll never be able to recover from this. Yet, thatâ€™s what you wanted all along, right? To see me suffer like this? To break my heart? Well you got your wish. I hope youâ€™re happy.â€

Heâ€™s secretly hoping that she will feel sorry for him, take pity on him, leave the new guy and get back with him.

Yet, it rarely (if ever) works like that.

Although a woman might feel sorry for her ex and feel a bit guilty about moving on so quickly, she wonâ€™t allow those feelings to force her into a relationship that doesnâ€™t make her happy.

In fact, when she realizes that her ex is simply trying to manipulate her by making her feel guilty, she will lose respect for him and will feel happier with the new guy.

So, donâ€™t bother trying to make your ex girlfriend feel pity for you.

Instead, focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you, so she naturally feels drawn to you and becomes open to giving you another chance.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

3. Calling her names or insulting her

[image: How could you move on so quickly?!]

When feeling angry, a guy might decide to just accuse his ex girlfriend of being a slut, a bitch or a liar because she moved on so quickly.

He might say, â€œYouâ€™re such a lying slut. You used to tell me that you wanted to be with me forever! Lies! You never wanted to stay with me. Well, I hope you get what you deserve. I hope your new guy dumps you and shows you that youâ€™re not worth being loyal to. After all, youâ€™re not loyal to anyone but yourself! You will get your dose of karma. What goes around comes around, bitch!â€

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Although it might feel right in the moment, due to how much anger he is feeling, itâ€™s just not going to help him get her back at all.

Instead, it will only cause her to lose even more respect for him for losing control of his emotions and showing an angry, unloving side of himself that almost all women on the planet donâ€™t find appealing.

In some cases, a woman will begin to feel scared that if her ex had gotten that angry over the phone, he might become even angrier and more aggressive if she saw him in person.

As a result, she might block him on her phone, unfriend him on social media or continually reject his attempts to get her to meet up with him.

So, what should you do instead?

Simple: Continue to be a confident, good man who only has good intentions with her.

I'm not saying to be really nice to her.

Don't get me wrong.

You won't gain any points with her by becoming a super nice guy.

Instead, be a confident, good man who has the balls to joke around with her, flirt with her and have a good time when talking to her.

If you do that, she will feel a renewed sense of respect for you, for being able to handle the situation like a man.

When she feels respect, she will also be able to feel sexual and romantic attraction and when that happens, she will begin to question her decision to move on so quickly without you.

On the other hand, if you just insult her, she will move farther away from you and then, getting her back will become more difficult.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ□|

4. Thinking that you have no chance to re-attract her and get her back

Itâ□□s understandable that when a guy sees his ex girlfriend has already moved on after two weeks, he might begin to think that he can't ever get her back.

He may even say to himself, *â□□ Well, I guess itâ□□s truly over between us then. She obviously never loved me and Iâ□□m just a fool for missing her and wanting her back. I better accept it and move on too, because itâ□□s too late to get her back. I donâ□□t stand a chance with her anymore.*â□□

Yet, thinking like that only makes him lose confidence in himself and in his value to her.

Then, when he interacts with her (e.g. via text, e-mail, on social media, on a phone call or in person) and she picks up on his insecure, self-doubting vibe and feels turned off by him.

Rather than see things from his point of view (i.e. that heâ□□s hurting because she moved on after two weeks), she instead sees him as an emotionally weak guy who canâ□□t handle life's challenges like a man.

This makes her lose even more respect for him and convinces her that moving on was the right thing for her to do.

So, if you want to get your ex girlfriend back, you have to believe that you can do it and that you are worthy of her.

If you don't believe itâ□□s possible for her to feel attracted to you again, you wonâ□□t be able to convince her to give you another chance because she will be turned off by your self-doubt and insecure.

[image: You have to believe that you can get her back]

If you want her back, you have to believe that you can get her back.

The more you believe in yourself, the more that your confidence will come through in your actions, your conversation style and the way you respond to her.

All it takes is a little seed of doubt in her mind, for her to begin to wonder, “Did I make the right decision by moving on from my ex so quickly? What if he’s actually the one for me? Will he give me another chance after what I did to him?”

She then contacts you or replies or answers when you contact her.

You can then meet up with her, re-attract her and show her that getting back together with you is the best thing for her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Can I Get My Ex Back if She Won't Even Speak to Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How can you get your ex girlfriend or your ex wife back if she won't speak to you?

You want to reach out to her, you want to discuss things and try to work things out, but she's not interested.

So, what should you do in a situation like that?

Well, what I've found is that when a guy gives his woman about a week of space, he will usually find that she either contacts him or when he contacts her, she's more open to communicating with him.

He can then talk to her on the phone, get her to meet up with him, attract her in person and get the relationship back together.

However, there are some situations where a guy doesn't hear from his ex after a week or he contacts her after giving her a week of space and he still gets nothing.

She either doesn't reply at all or she replies in a cold way and tells him to go away.

So, if your ex woman doesn't currently want to talk to you, it's best to give her a week of space.

[image: Give her a week of space to prove that you're not being needy or desperate]

The reason why is that it proves to her that you're not being needy and desperate and chasing her down.

You are in control of your emotions.

Giving her that week of space is more than enough in almost all situations.

If you give your woman too much space, for example, 30 or 60 days, what I've found is that the woman usually just moves on from the guy.

So, in your situation where your ex doesn't want to talk to you anymore, it's best to give her a week of space, but don't just give her a week of space and do nothing.

What you need to do during those 7 days is ensure that you are improving your ability to attract her when you interact with her again.

Don't wait 7 days and then interact with her using the same old approach to attraction that has been turning her off up until this point.

For example, if a guy got dumped because there was no spark in the relationship anymore with his woman.

He then gives her a week of space and contacts are in a neutral way.

He contacts her asking something like, "Hey, how's it going? How's work? How's things?" or something like that.

As a result, she doesn't feel a spark with him.

It's not something that is going to make her feel attracted and excited and turned on by him.

So, when you do talk to her again, make sure that you are ready to make her feel a spark of attraction for you.

Make sure that you are ready to cause her to feel sexually or romantically attracted to you so she actually has a reason to continue talking to you.

To get an ex woman back, you have to make sure that the feelings between you and her are mutual or close to mutual.

It can't be about you trying to get her back because you love her so much and you care about her so much and you're so sincere about doing a better job this time around.

To get her back after she's broken up with you, it has to be about making her feel attracted to you, making her feel like she wants to give the relationship another chance.

Where Guys Go Wrong

So, let's have a look at where guys go wrong when they finally get to speak to their ex, whether that's after 7 days, a couple of weeks or a little bit more.

1. Asking for a relationship before re-attracting her

[image: Asking for a relationship before re-attracting her]

As I've just mentioned before, you have to make sure that the feelings are mutual or at least close to mutual.

It's pretty obvious that you want to have a relationship with her again.

She knows that and if you are trying to get her back on the basis of getting the relationship back together and doing better this time, then she's almost certainly going to say no about that.

You have to first re-attract her.

You have to make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you.

So, say for example, a guy was very confident in the relationship in the beginning.

However, over time he lost confidence in himself and his woman gained a lot of dominance and power in the relationship.

She ended up having too much control over him and that turned her off.

Then, when he catches up with her, they meet up and he goes to give her a hug and she gives him a bit of a side hug, rather than hugging him directly, face to face.

She doesn't fully commit to the hug.

Now, if he wants to create a spark of attraction inside of her, he needs to show her that he is the confident guy that she used to feel attracted to and love.

So, as he moves in to give her a hug when they made up, if she gives him a bit of a side hug, he needs to smile and say, "What's that? A side hug. Come here, give me a proper hug. Bring it in," and get her to give him a proper hug.

He's showing her that he's confident, he's masculine and he can take control of the situation.

He's no longer the self-doubting guy that he became in the relationship.

Is that going to get her back right then and there?

Well, not in most cases.

He's going to probably need to prove himself a little bit more.

So, when he's talking to her throughout the interaction, he's going to need to create more sparks of attraction.

He's going to need to get her laughing and smiling and showing her again and again throughout the interaction that he is the confident guy, the masculine guy that she used to like.

He's no longer the self-doubting, insecure guy that he became in the relationship.

So, with number 1 here (asking for a relationship before re-attracting her), a lot of guys really mess this part up.

[image: Just give me a chance to prove to you that things will be different]

A guy finally interacts with his ex, whether that is via text, on a phone call, in person or by social media and he immediately starts trying to get the relationship back together.

He tries to work things out immediately and get the relationship back together and as a result, her guard goes up.

The reason why is that to get an ex woman back, you have to make the feelings mutual or at least close to mutual first rather than trying to get the relationship back together first.

You have to give her a reason why she would want to get back with you and that reason is her feelings.

If she's feeling sexually and romantically attracted to you and is feeling sparks of love, it's only natural that she's going to want to open up to the relationship and give you another chance.

So, another way that guys mess up when they finally get to speak to their ex is...

2. Asking her to tell him what she wants him to change

[image: Tell me what you want me to change and I will do it]

A woman doesn't want to be a guy's teacher in life about how to be a man.

What a woman fears is that if she is in a situation where she has to teach a guy how to be the type of man that she wants, then she's going to need to keep doing that throughout the rest of her life.

It's going to be more like a teacher-student or mother-son type of relationship rather than a relationship between a man and a woman where there is a clear difference between the masculine and feminine energy.

he man is clearly the man and the woman is clearly the woman.

So, where guys mess up is in finally getting to talk to their ex again and either subtly or very directly asking her what she wants him to change.

He's essentially saying, "Hey, tell me what you want and I'll do it. I'm willing to do whatever it takes. I'm serious. I love you. You mean the world to me. I'm willing to do anything."

Although the guy is a good guy and he has good intentions, it's just not the right approach to use if you want to get your ex woman back.

3. Letting her be the dominant one in a conversation

A woman will often test her ex guy with this type of approach to a conversation.

She will seem irritable, she will seem like she's feeling annoyed and doesn't have the patience to be talking to him.

She wants to see whether or not he is going to crumble under that type of pressure.

Can he handle it?

Is he going to lose control of his emotions?

Is he going to doubt himself and feel like she is too good for him and he can't get her back and the whole situation is out of his control?

Is he going to start sucking up to her and trying to be really nice to hopefully not annoy her?

This is a test that women put men through to see how confident a man really is, how in control of his emotions a man really is.

If you understand how a woman's attraction for a man works, you will know that a man's confidence is extremely important to a woman.

It is absolutely essential to her ability to feel sexually and romantically attracted to him.

If a guy can't handle her pressure, then she feels stronger than him and as a result, she feels turned off.

Finally, another area where guys go wrong when they finally get to speak to their ex is...

4. Hoping to get her back just via text

Texting is very common form of communication these days and it's very important for some people.

Some people really rely on it.

However, when you're trying to get an ex woman back, you should not rely on text as your main method to get her back.

One of the reasons why is that it's very easy for a woman to play hard-to-get via text.

She can start being a little bit bitchy, a little bit cold, distant, not replying to your texts, pretending to not understand what you're saying and trying to get you to explain yourself to see how desperate you are to impress her and so on.

There's so many games that can be played via text when a woman is testing her ex guy.

So, it's okay to use text, but what I recommend is that you get past text and you get to either a phone call or an in-person interaction.

When you're talking to her on the phone or in person, it's much easier and quicker to make her feel attracted to your confidence, humor, charisma, emotional masculinity and so on.

She can experience those traits much more easily and as a result you make her feel more attraction quicker and easier.

So, if you're currently in a situation where your ex won't talk to you, I recommend that you give her a week of space and see what happens.

Don't wait longer than that, though.

So many guys mess up where they don't hear from their ex after a week and then decide to give her another week...and another week...and another week.

Eventually, the guy finds out that she has moved on and she's happy with someone else.

What you need to do is give her a week of space, but during that week, make sure that you are improving your ability to attract her.

That way, when you do interact with her again, you are actually going to make her feel a spark of attraction for you.

You're going to make her start to feel drawn to you and open up to you and want to give the relationship another chance.

Learn More?

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn exactly what to say and do to make her want to talk to you again, want to interact with you in person, feel attracted to you and give the relationship another chance.

She will end up feeling as though she wants the relationship more than you do, which then puts you in the position of power. You decide to give her another chance with you.

She Will Calm Down and Open Back Up to You

[image: She will calm down and open back up to you]

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that just because your ex won't speak to you today, it doesn't mean that she won't speak to you in a few days, in a week or in a couple of weeks for extreme situations.

I've been helping new men get women back for many years now and I've heard about all the types of situations that guys find themselves in.

Every guy's situation is different, but what each guy needs to understand is that emotions aren't set in stone.

Emotions change.

She might be angry at you at the moment, she might be annoyed, she might be completely turned off and she might be feeling as though she never wants to talk to you again.

However, that can and will change.

There are ways to speed up the process which I teach in my program.

There are subtle techniques that you can use or you can give it a bit of time.

You can give her a week of space and see if she contacts you and if she doesn't, you can contact her and make her feel attracted when you text her, when you get around the phone, when you see her in person and you can then hook up with her and get the relationship back together.

So, don't lose hope if your ex currently doesn't want to talk to you.

You can either turn it around by using techniques and being active about it or you can give her some space and then contact her and see how you go, but you are going to be able to talk to her again.

It's not the end of the world, she's not going to never talk to you again.

You can interact with her again, you can make her feel attracted and if you do, she's going to drop her guard and open up to you.

From there, you can build on her new feelings for you and make her feel attracted to you in new and exciting ways.

When she's feeling attracted and she's feeling in love, she's going to want to speak to you.

It's going to be in her best interest to see you again and explore her new feelings for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 Tips on How to Get Your Ex Back if She Has Blocked You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How can you get your ex back if she has blocked you on her phone, on WhatsApp or social media?

If you tell someone that your ex has blocked you, they're pretty much always going to say things like, "Oh, just let her go. It's over. Leave her alone. You can't do anything about it. Just wait. Maybe one day she'll unblock you and maybe one day she'll come back to you."

As you would most likely agree, it's pretty annoying to hear that sort of thing when you want to get your ex back now or very quickly.

So, how can you do it? How can you get your ex back if she has blocked you?

1. Understand the real reason why she has blocked you

[image: Understand the real reason why she blocked you]

When a guy gets blocked by his ex girlfriend or ex wife, pretty much everyone assumes that it's his fault.

Sometimes it is, but sometimes a woman blocks a guy for other reasons.

For example, here are some common reasons why a woman will block her ex after a breakup.

1. She knows that he could attract her back into a relationship so she is trying to avoid him.
This often happens when a guy is very confident and he knows how to attract women and the woman knows that she can fall for his charm.
He can seduce her back into a relationship. So, she's trying to do the old out of sight, out of mind thing, keep him out of a life and try not to be focusing on him and try to move on.
2. She's seeing someone new and doesn't want her ex interfering or finding out.
Some women have a replacement guy ready to go before they break up with their boyfriend or husband.
It's actually pretty common.
So, sometimes a woman will block her ex boyfriend or ex husband because she doesn't want him to interfere with her new relationship and mess it up by getting angry at the guy or constantly texting her or calling her or she doesn't actually want him to find out.
She doesn't want to have to deal with the drama of him contacting her and asking her why and trying to get another chance with her.
She just wants to start dating the new guy, see how she feels and if she doesn't want to stay with the new guy, she can then unblock her ex and open back up to him if she wants to.
3. He was being needy, aggressive or argumentative.
4. He wouldn't stop texting or calling her to try and work things out.
5. He still doesn't understand how to attract her in the ways that she really wants.
6. She doesn't want him posting anything on her social media which then might embarrass her in front of her friends, family or co-workers.
7. She did it to test him.

The final reason there (she did it to test him) is actually a very common reason why a woman will block her ex after a breakup.

She wants to see how he will react.

Will he get angry?

Will he start begging and pleading with her?

Will he use the only method of communication that is left for him, for example, e-mail to constantly send her e-mails or to pour his heart out via e-mail?

Will he panic and show up at her workplace or at her home?

Will he lose control of his emotions?

She wants to test him to see how he will react.

Over the years what I've found is that in cases where a woman has blocked her ex to test him, she will usually unblock him within a few days or up to a couple of weeks.

In most cases, a guy won't wait any longer than that and he will find that his ex unblocks him.

What she may do then is text him to see how he's going to react now or she might just unblock him and see if he contacts her.

She wants to see when he contacts her that he's being confident, he's calm and he's in control of his emotions.

If he contacts her and he's panicking or he's trying to suck up to her, then she's going to lose respect and attraction for him and she may block him again.

Okay, so with this first tip (understand the real reason why she has blocked you), it's important that you understand the real reason why she has blocked you.

If your ex has blocked you because she thinks that you're easily going to be able to re-attract her and get her back, then getting her back is actually going to be pretty easy for you.

When you can communicate with her again, interact with her, make her feel attracted, meet up with her, hook up with her sexually and get her back. Those are the easier type of cases.

A more challenging type of case is where a woman has blocked her ex guy and she doesn't feel attracted to him anymore.

She is not secretly in love with him, she is not secretly hoping that they get back and she is hoping to move on.

She doesn't want to get back with him at all.

If that applies to you, then you really need to watch tip number 2.

2. Before attempting to contact her, you must change your communication style

When you get your ex to unblock you or when she unblocks you herself, you have to use a different communication style with her.

If you use the same old communication style that turned her off in the first place and led to you getting dumped, then she's not going to be turned on and attracted and wanting to communicate with you further.

So, you need to make sure that you change your communication style with her.

Do not use the same approach that you've been using up until this point.

You have to talk to her in a different way and text her in a different way. You have to do it differently. Here are some examples.

If your communication style has been needy, then you need to change it to be relaxed and easy-going.

If you've been too neutral where you're being boring, plain and you're not really creating a spark with her, you need to be funny and flirtatious.

If you've been angry and argumentative, you need to be relaxed, easygoing and positive.

If you've been too soft where you're being too much of a nice guy or you've given her too much power when you communicate with her, you need to start being dominant in a loving way.

So, let's have a look at an example...

We'll use the example of a guy who has been neutral and has been a bit boring when he's been communicating with his ex girlfriend or ex wife.

He needs to level up and start being a bit more funny and flirtatious so she can feel a spark with him.

In this example, the woman has been missing him during the week that she blocked him.

She then unblocks him and sends him a text.

She texts him, "Hey, how are you?" and he replies, "Hey, ex girlfriend. I'm good. How about you?"

She then replies, "Ex girlfriend? LOL. Okay then."

He replies, "Okay...let me say that again. Hey, pretty ex girlfriend, how's things?" 🗨️🗨️🗨️

She then replies with, "LOL, that's better." 🗨️🗨️🗨️

He then doesn't reply to her last text.

Now, remember this is an example where she was missing him during the week that she blocked him.

So, she actually wants something to happen.

[image: Communicate with her in a way that sparks attraction]

She's hoping that there's going to be a bit of a spark between them and she might be able to get him back.

As a result, she texts him again, she says, "So, what are you up to today?"

He replies, "Just finished having pizza with some buddies. Delicious. Sorry, I didn't save you a slice."

She then replies with, "Lol, no probs. I'm not hungry anyway. Pizza sounds good though."

He then replies, "Cool. So, when are you taking me out for pizza?" 🗨️🗨️🗨️

She then replies, "Never! Lol..." and he replies, "LOL. Okay. No pizza for you then." 🗨️🗨️🗨️

She replies with an LOL.

He then replies, "Hey, I have to get going now, but I'll give you a call sometime soon to say hi." She replies, "Okay, have fun!"

Now, if he is being boring and neutral in the past and that was one of the main reasons why she broke up with him because there was no spark between them, she's going to feel differently now.

She's going to start feeling drawn to him because he's actually able to make her laugh and feel good when he's texting back and forth with her.

She then assumes that if they caught up in person, she would probably end up laughing and having a good time with him.

So, she becomes open to meeting up and actually hopes that he calls her.

In this scenario, the guy then calls her the next day.

He calls her up and she says, "Hey," and he says, "Hey. So where's my pizza?" and has a laugh.

He then says, "I want a Hawaiian pizza. How about you? What pizza are you getting?"

At that point, she's most likely going to be laughing or she's going to agree with his choice of pizza and say that she wants it, too.

He can then change the subject because he has gotten her to laugh and he has started the conversation off in a way that is making her feel good.

It's not the same old boring, neutral approach that he used to use with her.

He's actually able to get her laughing now and create a bit of a spark between them.

So, he says, "Anyway, so how are you?"

He then has a chat with her, gets her to meet up with him, re-attracts her at the meet-up and gets back with her.

Now, it's important to point out that he wouldn't have got that result if he had continued to interact with her in a neutral and boring way.

For example, with that first text that she sent him, "Hey, how are you?" replying in a neutral and boring way would be something like this...

He replies, "Hey, I'm good. How are you?" and replies, "Yeah, good."

He then says, "So, how's work?" and she then says, "Good, I suppose."

He then says, "Cool. Yeah. I've been working hard, just got home now."

She then feels bored and loses interest in communicating with him and either stops replying to his messages or blocks him again and tries to move on.

So, when your ex unblocks you or when you get her to unblock you, make sure that you change your communication style to something that is going to be attractive to her.

For example, if one of the reasons why a guy got dumped was that he was too soft with his woman and gave her too much power in the relationship, he needs to change his communication style to show her that he's changed.

He doesn't need to tell her that he has changed or that he will change if she gives him another chance.

Instead, he just needs to change and allow her to experience it for herself, allow her to see that she really does feel differently around him now.

Say for example, they catch up and they're walking into a cafe or restaurant where they're going to sit down and have a chat.

If he would normally ask her something like, "Oh, where do you want to sit?" and be soft like that, he needs to show that he has changed by choosing where they're going to sit.

So, as they walk into the cafe or restaurant, he needs to just have a look and say, "Yep, let's go sit over there,” and walk over there, sit down and don’t even ask for her opinion on where to sit.

Additionally, if he’s sitting down talking to her and he cracks a joke or two, but she isn’t smiling, he needs to be dominant in a loving way by calling her out on that.

He needs to let her see that he doesn’t allow her to get away with treating him badly anymore, but he’s still being a good guy.

He’s being dominant, but in a loving way.

So, if he cracks a joke that is funny and she should really have a smile or have a bit of a laugh and she would have in the past, he needs to address that.

He needs to say something like, “Come on, girl. That was funny. You can at least have a smile. It’s okay to smile. It’s okay to have a bit of a laugh. We’re exes, we’re not enemies. So, relax. It’s okay to have a bit of a laugh.”

If the guy has been soft in the relationship and gave her too much power, she is going to feel a renewed sense of respect for him at that point.

She’s also going to feel some attraction for the fact that he is much more confident now.

He’s dominant, but he’s also being a good guy.

He’s not being an asshole about it.

He’s not saying, “Well, why aren’t you smiling? Why aren’t you laughing? Like, we’re not enemies, we’re exes. We can talk and have a laugh” in angry, defensive or sulking manner.

He’s not losing control of his emotions or whinging like that.

He is being dominant, while also being loving.

So, with tip number 2 here, what you need to make sure that you do is change your communication style in a way that is going to be attractive to her.

Don’t use the same old approach to communication and attraction that turned her off in the relationship and led to you getting dumped.

When you do get to interact with her again, make sure that you are using a communication style that is going to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

If you don’t and you use the same old approach that turned her off, then she’s either going to block you again or she’s going to tell you that she’s not interested and wants you to leave her alone.

Now, something important to point out here is that a woman usually won’t say that sort of thing (i.e. “I’m not interested...leave me alone”) because it’s impossible for you to get her back.

She will say that sort of thing if you are using an approach that isn’t making her feel attracted.

When a woman breaks up with you, it’s usually because she doesn’t feel enough respect, attraction and love to justify being in a relationship.

You want her back, you feel attraction and love for her, you want to get something happening, but she’s not feeling the same way.

That’s why you need to use an approach to communication that is going to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

When you do that, the feelings start to become mutual or at least close to mutual.

It starts to feel like a good idea for her to get back with you.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys aren't unaware of that.

When a guy's woman unblocks him or when he gets her to unblock him, he communicates with her in a way that turns her off or causes her to block him once again.

So, to make it very clear for you, I'll give you these three examples...

1. A guy gets unblocked, then he tries to work things out via text. He discusses the relationship with her. Her guard goes up, she feels stressed or pressured into getting back into a relationship with him, so she stops communicating with him or blocks him again.

2. A guy gets unblocked and uses an unattractive communication style. For example, he goes from being a very confident cool guy to now being a self-doubting guy who is on his best behavior.

Those two approaches don't work because with number 1, the woman isn't feeling attracted yet.

She doesn't feel like she wants to give him another chance and he's already trying to discuss the relationship or get another chance with her.

As for number 2, the guy isn't using an attractive communication style, so he is killing her motivation to want to get back with him.

He's not giving her a reason to want to get back with him and instead is giving her reasons to continue moving on.

So, with the third example here...

3. A guy gets unblocked. He then uses a communication style that makes her feel attracted to him. For example, he's being very confident, he's using humor, he's being emotionally masculine and flirting with her to build up sexual tension between them.

That's what works.

So, make sure that when you get unblocked, you're not trying to work things out via text or suck up to her and be on your best behavior.

What you need to do is use an approach to communication that is going to make her feel attracted to you.

When she is attracted to you again, she then has a reason to get back with you.

3. Decide whether or not you are willing to use risky techniques to get yourself unblocked

[image: Decide whether or not you are willing to use risky techniques to get unblocked]

For example, a woman has blocked her ex on the phone, on WhatsApp and on Facebook.

She then unblocks him on her phone and texts him, but he doesn't reply.

She waits a couple of days, texts him again and he still doesn't reply.

As a result, she then unblocks him on Facebook to see what's going on.

For example, has he moved on with a new girl? Is he over her now or something?

That type of approach can work, but it can also backfire.

Sometimes a woman will only ever send one text and if she doesn't get anything back, she will block her guy again and try to move on.

One of the main reasons why is that when a woman breaks up with a guy, she's usually in the power position.

She usually gets to walk away, feeling pretty good about herself.

She wasn't the one who got dumped.

She broke up with him.

He wanted to be with her, but she said, "It's over," and she walked away.

So, she isn't hurting as much as he is after the breakup.

However, if she contacts him and he's not replying to her, she can then start to feel rejected.

If she keeps trying to contact him and starts chasing him, but he doesn't give her much or anything back, she can feel like she has been the one who got dumped.

She has lost him.

So, rather than putting herself in that situation, a woman will usually not contact her ex at all.

She will only be open to getting back with him if he has the courage and the confidence to pursue her if he is the one who is willing to risk a potential rejection by contacting her and trying to get her back.

In other cases, the woman will text once or twice and if she's not getting any replies or her ex is being cold, she will either block him or just not reply to him anymore, not try to contact him anymore and she will then begin to move on.

She might then try to make herself feel better by going out and hooking up with a new guy, or getting on Tinder or some other dating app and lining up a whole lot of dates, where she can easily kiss new guys and have sex with new guys and make herself feel better.

So, it's a risky technique to ignore her attempts to contact you.

That's otherwise known as the no contact rule.

The no contact rule is essentially about not contacting your ex for 30 or 60 days and also not replying to any attempts from her to contact you or interact with you.

Other risky techniques include hooking up with other women to make her jealous. That can work, but it can also backfire.

Another risky technique is moving on and getting into a new serious relationship and waiting for her to hopefully want you back.

Obviously, that's a bit of a risky technique because it can take a lot of time to develop a new relationship and if she notices that you're happy without her, she will most likely move on herself and get into a relationship.

Finally, another risky technique is not doing anything and just waiting and hoping that she comes back to you for some reason someday.

If you're serious about getting your ex back, then you're going to understand why that will be a risky technique.

You're going to be essentially doing nothing and just hoping that she doesn't meet any new guys that she finds attractive and for some reason she unblocks you, she wants you back and she comes back to you.

So, you need to decide whether or not you're willing to use risky techniques like that.

Risky techniques can work, but they can also backfire.

If you want to learn my best techniques that take away the risk and make your ex want to contact you and meet up with you, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program you will learn how to get her to unblock you, how to make her want to communicate with you again, how to communicate with her in an attractive way, how to make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again, how to make her want to meet up with you, what to say and do at the meet-up, how to get her to hug you and kiss you at the meet-up and how to get her to want to hook up again sexually.

You will also learn how to keep the relationship back together after you and her have had sex again, how to make her respect you and feel attracted to you and be in love with you again once you're back in a relationship.

Getting Blocked Doesn't Mean That You're a Bad Person

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that just because she blocked you, it doesn't mean that you're a bad person.

Sometimes it's the woman overreacting.

Sometimes a woman is playing games with their ex and yes, sometimes a guy has been a pain in the butt and that's why he has gotten blocked.

You may have made some communication mistakes with her and you may have stuffed up, but that doesn't make you a bad person.

In fact, you have learned a lot since the breakup.

You have already become a much better man since the breakup.

You're continuing to become a better man each and every day.

So, don't beat yourself up over the fact that you've been blocked.

Don't look at yourself as a guy who is a complete turn-off to your ex and you're a hopeless case and you can't do anything about it and you're just going to have to accept your fate of being dumped and left behind.

The fact is when you interact with her again, you are going to make her feel attracted to you.

She is going to feel a spark of attraction.

She's going to feel respect and she's going to feel love for the new you.

That might seem impossible to you if your situation is one of those where your ex hates you and doesn't want anything to do with you, but let me tell you...

I've heard back from so many guys who have turn their situation around when it seemed hopeless.

So, you've got to be confident, you've got to believe in yourself, you've got to believe in the power of attraction.

You've also got to focus on what matters to her and that is her feelings.

Don't try to get her back by telling her how much she means to you and trying to convince her to give you another chance.

That doesn't work, especially when you're being blocked.

What works is when you interact with her and you focus on making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

You make her have feelings for you.

Some guys watching might be thinking, “Yes, I want to do that, but how am I going to do it if she has blocked me and I can’t interact with her?”

What I’ve found is that most guys get unblocked and it usually takes around about a week or two.

Sometimes it can take a little bit longer, but if a guy wants to speed up the process, that’s what the techniques in my program are for.

Just to let you know, when I recorded my program, I didn’t just record it out of nowhere.

What I did is that I coached more than 100 phone coaching clients and help them get their ex woman back.

In about 20% of the cases, the guy was blocked.

So, I know all about the blocked situation and I know how difficult it can be for a guy to deal with.

That’s why in the program, I explain how to get her to unblock you, how to get her to re-friend you on Facebook, how to get her to open up to text you, how to get her to feel happy to be talking to you on the phone and how to get her to meet up with you.

I also then explain what to say to her at the meet-up to get her to give you another chance, how to get to the point where she gives you a hug, she gives you a kiss and she wants to hook up sexually.

You can do that.

In your situation, you might get unblocked by not doing anything or you might need to use other techniques to get yourself unblocked, but just know that you can do it.

Just because she has blocked you, it doesn’t mean that it’s over and it doesn’t mean that you can’t get her back.

Men all over the world get unblocked by their ex girlfriend or ex wife and are able to get her back.

The way to do it is to make sure that when you do get her to unblock you or she unblocks you herself, that you use an approach to communication that creates a spark inside of her.

She feels attracted to you and starts to feel sparks of love.

Don’t use an approach to communication that is going to turn her off such as focusing on trying to fix things between you and her and sort things out and get the relationship back together via text.

Alternatively, don’t try to suck up to her now by being on your best behavior.

Make sure that you are being confident, make sure that you’re interacting with her in a way that is going to create a spark of attraction inside of her.

When you do that, you give her a reason to want to communicate with you further, meet up with you and give you another chance.

When you meet up with her, you’ll be able to build on her feelings for you and make her really want to get back with you.

You will be able to make her open back up to hugging you, kissing you, having sex with you and getting back into a relationship with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

5 Tips on How to Make Your Ex Love You Again

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How can you make your ex love you again?

How can you make her feel like she's totally in love with you and wants to be with you and only you?

Here are my 5 tips...

1. Get clear on why she stopped loving you

[image: Get clear on why she stopped loving you]

Recently, I was at a barbecue with my wife and I was talking to a friend of mine.

He introduced me to a friend of his who had been dumped by his girlfriend.

He was saying things like, "She's so special to me. She's so unique. There's no other girl like her. When I'm with her, I feel amazing. I love her so much. I just want to have her back."

I then say to him, "That's great. She sounds like an awesome girl, but the most important question here is, how did you make her feel? That's how she made you feel. How did you make her feel?"

The guy then stopped for a moment and started to realize what I was asking him and he said, "Yeah. Well, maybe I didn't make her feel like that."

That's really an important part of understanding how to make your ex love you again.

The way that it works is that you really love how the other person makes you feel and how you feel when you're around them.

You love your ex so much because of how she makes you feel, the value that she brings into your life and the way that your experience of life is so much better when she's a part of it.

However, you've got to think about how you're making her feel.

When she's around you, are you making her feel amazing?

Does she feel like her experience of life is so much better because you're a part of it or does she feel like you are dampering her experience?

Does she feel like you're annoying her, stressing her out, or turning her off?

So, anyway, I got to chatting to the guy and he explained that some of the things he was doing that would've caused her to stop loving him included him being insecure, being controlling, not really treating her as well as he did in the beginning and essentially taking her presence in his life for granted.

He was enjoying his life when she was a part of it.

She was adding to his experience, she was making him feel happy, she was making him feel like more of a man, he was proud to have her as his girlfriend, but he wasn't offering her the same type of experience in return.

He was essentially just taking her presence in his life for granted.

For example, she was complaining about how he was being insecure and a bit too jealous at times, but he didn't really take that on board and change.

He just thought, "Well, she'll put up with it because of how amazing the love is and how great our relationship is and I want it more than anything. She knows that. She knows that I care about her, so it doesn't matter."

Unfortunately, in the end, it did matter to her because as it turned out, she was giving him warnings and complaining about things for months on end, but he wasn't changing and she eventually got to the point where she had enough of it and broke up with him.

So, it's very important that you understand why she stopped loving you.

It's not because you're not a lovable person.

It's not because she can't love you.

It's not because the love between you and her wasn't real or wasn't good enough.

It's simply because of how your approach to her and the relationship was making her feel.

She was feeling turned off, annoyed, stressed, or overwhelmed, for example.

As a result, she wasn't getting a good experience from the relationship.

She couldn't remain in love with that.

It's not about you not being lovable or not being good enough.

You can actually make her love you again, but you have to change your approach to her and the relationship.

2. Prepare to attract her in new and exciting ways

[image: Prepare to attract her in new and exciting ways]

When a guy is trying to get his ex woman to love him again, he often goes about it in all the wrong ways.

He starts telling her how much he loves her, how much she means to him, how much he cares about her and how serious he is about changing and improving.

That's all his stuff.

How much he wants her, how much he cares her, how committed he is and so on.

It doesn't have anything to do with how he is making her feel in the moment.

Alternatively, some guys don't go down that path.

Instead, they just cut off contact and ignore their woman.

The guy hopes that by not contacting her and staying out of her life, she's going to somehow fall in love with him again and want him back.

In some cases, that approach can work, when the woman can't get over her ex and she can't find a new guy to enjoy a relationship with or she just can't handle the pain of the breakup.

However, most women can handle it and most women are fine with moving on and easily hooking up with a new guy.

So, the approach of just cutting off contact and waiting doesn't work for most guys.

What works is when you interact with your ex and you make her feel attracted to you in new and exciting ways.

For example, if a guy got dumped because he was a bit too nice, a bit too soft and gentle with her and she essentially walked all over him.

What's going to be new and exciting for her is if he interacts with her and he's now so much more confident.

He's actually a bit ballsy with the way that he uses humor.

He messes with her a little bit and isn't afraid of her anymore. He's still being a good guy, he's still treating her well, but he's so much more confident now.

He's using some ballsy humor to make her laugh and let her see that she really does feel differently around him now.

For example, he catches up with his ex girlfriend and they're at a caf   or coffee shop.

She's playing hard to get as usual and testing his confidence to see if he is going to allow her to dominate him and walk all over him.

She says something like, "I don't even know why I came. This is a waste of my time."

The old version of him would try to appease her and try to say to her, "Hey. No, no. It's fine. Look. We can work things out. We're just having a chat. Let's just hang out and talk and don't worry about it," and try to appease her in that type of way.

The new, more confident and ballsy version of him would smile and confidently say something like, "Come on, you know why you're here. You miss me. You missed me, didn't you?"

She'll then start smiling.

He'll then point out the fact that she's smiling and laugh and say, "Look, it's all over your face. You're smiling. You're admitting it. You can't hide the fact that you have missed me, haven't you?"

Then, she starts laughing and she enjoys being around him.

She enjoys the fact that he has leveled up as a man.

He is now much more confident and as a result, she feels attracted to him.

When she feels attracted to him and she can respect him for the fact that he has levelled up like that, she can then start to love him for the experience that she gets when she's around him.

When she's around him, she gets to feel attracted.

She gets to feel feminine, she gets to feel like she's having a good time and enjoying being around a guy that she's attracted to.

As a result, she loves him, she loves being around him.

3. Allow her to experience a new, more satisfying love for you

[image: Allow her to experience a more satisfying love for you]

Where guys go wrong in this area is that they try too hard to suck up to her and please her.

The guy is essentially doing whatever she wants, agreeing with her, giving more and just trying to be the best boyfriend, or if it's a husband, the best husband that he can be for her.

He's trying to do everything for her and hopefully make her happy for that reason.

Yet, that approach just doesn't work with women.

The most satisfying type of love for a woman is when she's really attracted to you and she can see that you are attracted to her, too, but you're not chasing the relationship.

You're not trying to suck up to her.

You're actually in the position of power.

She's in the position where she needs to continue to impress you, to please you.

It's not about treating her badly or not being a good guy or anything like that.

You'll still be a good guy to her and you'll still treat her well, but you are in the position of power.

You are the more valuable one in the relationship.

That doesn't mean she isn't valuable, but it means that you are the more valuable one.

You don't go and SAY that to her though, because that's just rude and it won't work.

Instead, you let her decide that for herself based on the dynamic that you create when you're interacting with her.

She knows that she's very attracted to you and you're attracted to her, but she also knows that she needs to keep impressing you and maintaining your interest, otherwise you could lose interest in her.

Otherwise, you could go and select another woman.

Again, you don't go and tell her that! ☹️

She just gets that impression based on the approach that you use with her.

Be subtle about those things.

Let your body language, behavior and vibe do all the talking.

Saying that you are happy without her, or that you are more valuable than her and she is lucky to have a guy like you interested in her just doesn't work.

So, be subtle about it and she will realize those things on her own.

Next...

4. Build on her new feelings for you

[image: Build on her new feelings for you]

What this is about is giving her a next level experience.

You give her a next level experience in terms of how much respect, attraction and love she feels for you.

Don't try to get her back and hopefully get her to love you by offering her the same type of experience she was having with you before.

That doesn't work.

Additionally, don't try to make her love you again by sucking up to her or desperately chasing her and hoping to get her to give you another chance.

That doesn't work either.

What you need to do is give her a next level experience in terms of how much respect you make her feel, how much attraction you make her feel and how much love you make her feel.

5. Get her to look up to you and respect you as her man

[image: Get her to look up to you and respect you as her man]

For a woman to truly love a man, she has to be able to respect him and look up to him.

Where guys go wrong when trying to get their ex woman to love them again is by interacting with her and coming across in a way that naturally makes her lose respect for him.

For example, he is giving her too much power in the conversation.

He's talking in a way that displays insecurity and self-doubt.

He is talking in a way that displays emotional sensitivity.

He's too sensitive, he's too vulnerable, he isn't strong enough.

Alternatively, he's on the other end of the spectrum where he's way too arrogant, way too angry and irritable and selfish.

As a result, she cannot look up to him and respect him.

So, if you want your ex to love you again, you must interact with her in a way that makes her respect you and look up to you.

When you do that, she will naturally start to feel attracted to you again and she'll then love you.

She'll love being around you.

She will love how you make her feel.

You'll make her feel respect, attraction, admiration, happiness, joy and other positive emotions.

When she's around you, she gets to feel amazing.

That's how to get your ex to love you again.

Learn More?

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn my best techniques for interacting with your ex and making her feel attracted to you again.

When you follow the steps of the program, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She will then begin to fall back in love with you.

When you continue to use the techniques from the program, she will fall more in love with you and you will keep the relationship together.

Giving Her the Ultimate Gift

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that you are going to be giving her a gift by getting back with her.

Truly falling back in love with a guy who is making her feel so much respect and attraction is one of the most amazing experiences a woman will ever have in her life.

It's the sort of thing that women buy movie tickets to go and see on the big screen.

It's also the sort of thing that women read in romance novels and imagine happening to them.

The thing is, your ex might be confused at first because she was sure that she didn't want to get back with you, but her heart will be full of new, exciting feelings for you that she simply cannot ignore.

When you approach it in that way, your ex falls back in love with you and you get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Do I Convince My Ex to Listen With Her Heart, Instead of Her Mind?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's how to do it...

1. Stop trying to discuss the relationship with her

If you're wondering something like, *â€œHow do I convince my ex to listen with her heart instead of her mind?*â€œ it means that youâ€™ve probably trying to talk her into giving you another chance, right?

You may have been saying things to her like, *â€œLookâ€¦ I know that I stuffed up and Iâ€™m sorry. I know that youâ€™re angry with me at the moment and itâ€™s hard for you to see past what happened, but if you just listen to your heart for one minute, you will realize that what we had together is worth fighting for. This is just a bump in the road for us. It doesn't have to be the end. We can work this out. I promise you that I can be the man you want me to be. Just tell me what you want me to do to make you happy again and Iâ€™ll do it. I promise. I am willing to do whatever it takes because I love you. Please donâ€™t throw away what we have.*â€œ

It sounds really sweet and sincere, but it's not what a woman wants to hear.

In fact, discussing the relationship in that way forces her to think logically and rationally.

If you are talking to her about everything that went wrong and how you can make it right if she just gives you a chance, she will focus on how badly you messed up.

As a result, she will begin running through a list of things about you that turned her off (e.g. you were too emotionally sensitive, you needed her emotional support to cope when problems arose in your life or the relationship, you were too clingy and needy, you took her for granted, you didn't change when she kept asking you to).

Even if her heart says, *â€œHeâ€™s right. You did have some good times together. Maybe the relationship is worth saving,*â€œ her logical mind will interrupt and she will think, *â€œYes, but there were more bad times than good ones. Do I really want to give him another chance and then end up being miserable for the rest of my life? What if I get pregnant by him? Will I be able to happily raise a child with him, or will I be miserable because he will just get worse and worse? I know heâ€™s saying that he will change, but he doesnâ€™t even know what to change. He wants me to teach him how to think and behave like the man I need him to be. I'll end up living with two children instead of one. Donâ€™t be stupid girl! You broke up with him for a good reason. Donâ€™t crumble now. Remain broken up and move on. Don't look back.*â€œ

[image: Let's talk about this please]

When she is thinking like that, she's not going to listen to her heart because her mind's reasoning is going to be too convincing.

So, what should you do instead?

Don't put any pressure on her to decide whether or not she is going to give you another chance.

Instead, just focus on making every interaction that you and her have together, feel fun and pleasurable.

Add in humor, be playful and easy-going and get her laughing and smiling, so she can naturally begin to listen to her heart (i.e. listen to her heart that is feeling happy, joyful and open around you now).

So, just try your hardest to forget about all the drama that has happened between you and her and focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you again.

The next thing you can do to convince your ex to listen with her heart instead of her mind, is toâ€¦!

2. Start creating sparks of sexual and romantic attraction during interactions

[image: Create sparks of attraction during interactions]

If a woman isn't feeling attracted to her ex, she isn't going to listen to his attempts to convince her to give him another chance.

Instead, sheâ€™s usually going to say things like, â€œNo. You and I aren't right for each other and the sooner we both accept that, the better off weâ€™ll be. We had our chance and it didn't work out. Now it's over and Iâ€™m tired of arguing and debating it with you. It's time for you to let me go and move on.â€

Why will she respond in that way?

Simple.

He's trying to convince her mind to give him another chance by giving her reasons why she should.

He's not actively focusing on making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to him again by using an attractive approach.

He's just pleading with her, discussing things and trying to get her to understand his point of view.

Approaching it in that way only makes her focus more on what her mind is thinking, rather than how her heart could feel.

So, if you want your ex to give you another chance, you have to focus on making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

When you do that, she will automatically begin to listen to her heart.

How can you make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again?

One way (of many) that you can do it is by not taking everything she says and does so seriously.

Instead, turn her coldness or rejection into something you can both laugh about together.

Watch this video for some examplesâ€¦!

Another way to make her feel attracted is to show her that you are absolutely confident in your attractiveness to her.

You know that she loved you before and you also know that when you reawaken her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again (by showing her that youâ€™re a new and improved man), she will open her heart to you again.

Itâ€™s not a matter of if she opens her heart to you, but rather of when she opens her heart to you.

Hereâ€™s an example of how you can do itâ€¦!

Imagine that you are talking on the phone with your ex and she says something along the lines of, â€œStop telling me to listen to my heart instead of my mind. My heart is closed off to you now and I have no intention of letting you back in. Just leave me alone. Canâ€¢t you see that I donâ€¢t want you back?â€¢

Naturally, hearing her say something like that might make you feel upset and doubt your chances with her.

Yet, if you doubt yourself, it will come through in the tone of your voice (i.e. you may sound sad, disappointed or dejected) and that will turn her off because women aren't attracted to self-doubt and insecurity in men.

So, instead of letting her angry or cold outbursts get to you, just use it as an opportunity to make her feel attracted to you by using humor in a confident manner.

If she says, "Canâ€¢t you see that I donâ€¢t want you back?â€¢" you can laugh and say in a joking manner, "Actually I can't. My doctor recently told me that I have unique eye condition. Apparently itâ€¢s called â€¢seeing the world through rose tinted glasses.â€¢ Essentially, itâ€¢s impossible for me to see that you donâ€¢t want me back. I can only see you and me happy together. Iâ€¢m sorry, itâ€¢s not my fault. Itâ€¢s a serious medical condition" and have a laugh.

Then, continue on by saying something like, "Iâ€¢m afraid that youâ€¢re going to have to put up with it, because thereâ€¢s no known cure for it" and have a laugh.

Then, ask her, "Soâ€¢ when can we catch up for a coffee my love?â€¢" and have a little laugh with her about that.

By approaching a potentially serious conversation in a funny way, sheâ€¢s more likely to relax, smile, laugh and be more open to meeting up with you in person.

Using humor to get her laughing creates some positive feelings inside of her, which stops her from only focusing on the negatives about you.

Even if she tries to fight the feelings in her heart, she won't be able to fully stop herself from feeling attracted to you for having the confidence to make her laugh and smile in a serious moment like that.

When that happens, her guard will come down and she become more open to interacting with you further.

The next thing you can do to convince your ex to listen with her heart instead of her mind, is toâ€¢

3. Be more of a playful challenge during interactions

Up to now, youâ€¢ve likely been on your best behavior around your ex and she can more or less guess what youâ€¢re going to say or do during interactions with her.

True?

You're going to listen to her, be caring, be understanding, be nice and be willing to put up with her cold behavior just to get to talk to her.

When a woman knows how a guy is going to react, it becomes very boring for her very quickly.

As a result, she doesn't feel attracted to him or to the idea of being around him.

She's rather be doing something else with someone else.

If a woman keeps feeling that way for months or years, she will either break up with a guy or cheat on him and then break up with him.

This is why you should pay attention to the approach that you're using with a woman.

You need to make sure that, for the most part, you are using an attractive approach.

If you do, your woman will stick with you and if you don't, she will leave you.

In the case of your exâ€¦|

If she doesnâ€¦t feel attracted to you, then sheâ€¦s not going to feel motivated to reconnect with the love in her heart.

As a result, getting back together again becomes difficult, if not impossible.

So, from this moment onwards, you need to try to make some adjustments and improvements to the way youâ€¦re interacting with her.

If you've been very predictable to her up until this point, you need to start reacting differently to what she says and does.

For example: If your ex calls you on the phone and says something like, â€œI have a box of your stuff here. What do you want me to do with it?â€ and you would normally be predictable and say something like, “Oh, I will come over and get it” try to react in a different way.

You might jokingly say something like, â€œYou can bring it right over. Iâ€¦ll be here for the next hour or so. Oh...and you canÂ pick up a pepperoni and mushroom pizza for me on the way? Iâ€¦m feeling a bit peckish.â€

She might then say, “How rudeâ€” and you can then add, â€œYouâ€¦re right. That was rude of me. Get a pizza for yourself if youâ€¦re hungry as well.”

You can then laugh and say something along the lines of, â€œIâ€¦m only joking.Â Iâ€¦ll try to stop by sometime next week when youâ€¦re available to pick up my stuff. Iâ€¦ll let you know when Iâ€¦m free so that we can make arrangements.â€

If you've been a predictable guy up until that point, she is going to be full of interesting emotions (e.g. shock that youâ€¦re not responding to her in the way sheâ€¦s expecting you to, respect and attraction for you for being confident enough to tease her in a serious moment like that, excitement about the man you have become since she broke up with you and curiosity about why she suddenly seems to be interested in talking you more).

She thinks to herself, â€œHmmmâ€¦this isnâ€¦t how he normally behaves. He's usually falling all over himself to please me. Yet, heâ€¦s being so playful and cheeky all of a sudden. I like it. Why am I feeling this way? Could there still be something between us? Does it have to be over? Could we give it another chance?” and she then opens herself up to the idea of getting back with you.

Thatâ€¦s what you want.

[image: Make your ex fall back in love with you]

From there, all youâ€¦ve got to do is to continue saying and doing the types of things that attract her and you and her will naturally get back together.

Before you know it, you will be kissing, having sex again and she will be saying, “I don't know what came over meâ€¦I thought I was over you, but clearly I'm not.”

4 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want Your Ex to Open Her

Heart to You Again

When you interact with your ex, you're either going to be saying and doing things that are sparking her feelings for you, or saying and doing things that will convince her that she made the right decision to break up with you.

In other words, you're either going to be turning her on or turning her off.

If you want to avoid turning her off, try not to make any of the following mistakes!

1. Explaining your feelings to her in a long letter, e-mail or series of text messages

If your ex won't listen and give you another chance, you might feel as though writing her a long letter (e-mail or text) to explain your feelings and how much you care, will convince her to change her mind.

Yet, it rarely works out that way with women.

Firstly, when a woman has switched her feelings off for a guy, him telling her now much he cares for her doesn't impress her.

In fact, many women see the old 'love letter to an ex' approach as being selfish, because it's usually all about what the guy is feeling and what he wants and needs.

Sure, he may be talking about how wonderful she is and how he can't live without her, but that means nothing to her, because the sexual and romantic feelings aren't mutual.

Secondly, when you simply write things to your ex, she has no proof that you really have changed.

As a result, she will assume that you're still the same guy she broke up with (e.g. insecure, needy, emotionally sensitive, afraid to stand up to her) and wouldn't be able to make her feel the kind of attraction she really wants.

So, the letter really means nothing to her and just turns her off even further.

This is why it's never a good idea to hide behind letters, e-mails or text messages with an ex woman.

If you really want her to listen, you have to call her on the phone or meet up with her in person so she can experience the new you for herself.

When she can see that she really does feel differently around you now, her guard will come down and she will listen to her heart.

The next mistake to avoid is!

2. Telling her to listen to her heart and not her mind

Women don't like it when men get too sensitive and start talking about listening with the heart, being soul mates or anything else like that.

What women find the most attractive is a man who is confident in his ability to attract her and then confidently attracts her (i.e. by being emotionally masculine, using ballsy humor, being a challenge).

Women don't like it when a man tries to talk like a woman and get all sensitive about hearts, minds and soul mates.

It just doesn't work for a woman.

A woman will put up with some of that talk when she's madly in love with a guy, but she will secretly hope that he doesn't keep going on and on about it.

She hopes that he's just being sweet and will stop trying to be so sensitive about things to hopefully impress her, or worse, because he actually likes being more feminine and discussing feelings, soul bonds and so on.

That's one part of itâ€¦!

The other part of it is the fact that if you keep telling your ex to listen to her heart and not her mind, she will actually see you as being selfish.

She will see that youâ€¦ are just trying to make her see things from your perspective (i.e. the relationship can be better, you can work things out, you love her and want her, she is special to you and you're willing to do whatever it takes), but youâ€¦ are not really interested in hearing her views (i.e. she is turned off by the approach to attraction that you've been using in the relationship).

For example: Maybe she wants you to be more confident and ballsy around her, but you just want to be insecure and really nice to her.

That's what you want and not what she wants.

So, when a woman feels as though sheâ€¦s not being heard or listened to, the idea of listening to her ex and giving him another chance just doesnâ€¦t appeal to her.

Instead, she becomes more closed off and stubborn and refuses to listen to anything he has to say.

He might then try harder to convince her of how much he loves her, how much he's willing to change and how special their bond is.

Yet, he doesn't actually understand what she wants.

He knows what he wants, but either doesn't care what she wants, or doesn't understand how his approach to attraction has been turning her off.

As a result, she closes up even more.

So, if you want your ex to open up to you, stop telling her that she needs to listen to her heart and not her mind.

Ask yourselfâ€¦!

What does she want?

What will she get out of listening to what I have to say?

Whatâ€¦s in it for her if we get back together again?

When you look at things from her perspective, youâ€¦ll be able to offer her what she wants (e.g. for you to be more manly around her), rather than what you think she wants (e.g. for you to be even more considerate, compassionate, caring and nice).

When she sees that you understand her, feelings of respect, attraction and love will flood back into her heart.

As a result, listening with her heart will happen by itself because she will know that you have her best interests in mind, rather than only trying to get what you want from her.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

3. Asking her to give you another chance because of how much you love her

Sometimes, a guy hopes that if he pours his heart out and tells her how much she means to him, a woman will feel guilty and give him another chance.

Yet, in almost all ex back cases where a woman no longer feels attracted and in love, she doesn't change her mind based on how her ex feels.

She only changes her mind if she feels differently about him (i.e. if he starts attracting her in new and interesting ways).

So, if you really want to make your ex listen to her heart instead of her mind, make sure that focus on reactivating her feelings for you, rather than asking her to give you another chance because of how much you love her.

The next mistake to avoid isâ

4. Telling her to remember the good times

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, she doesn't really care about how good things used to be.

She cares about how she feels now.

So, if her ex says, *â Just take a minute to remember how happy we used to be and you will realize that our love is worth fighting for,*â she isn't going to suddenly say, “Ohhhh! How silly of me! I forgot!”

Instead, she's going to think (or say) something like, “Well, that was before and this is now. I don't feel the same way about you anymore.”

She's essentially trying to tell him that if he wants her back, he has to change how she feels about him, rather than trying to change her mind by hopefully getting her to remember that things used to be good.

So, if you want to make your ex listen with her heart instead of her mind, don't waste time and energy trying to get her to focus on the past and how good it was.

What matters is how you make her feel now and from now on.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.