Use the so-called 'friendship' as your easy, convenient way to interact with her and re-attract her.

[image: Getting back to kissing, sex and real love]

Before she knows it, she will be in love with you again, kissing you and having sex with you.

She won't just want to be friends.

So, don't worry about being friends with your ex for now.

Little does she know that her saying she just wants to be friends is actually helping you to get her back!

Remember: Don't act like just a friend.

Focus on making her have sexual, romantic feelings for you again.

If do that, you and her won't be just friends.

She will be back with you in a relationship and you and her will be happier than ever before, because you will be attracting her in ways that she always wished you would.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Has Her Guard Up Around Me and Won't Even Look At Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex has her guard up around you are...

1. She doesn't fully trust you anymore

[image: She doesn't fully trust you anymore]

There are many reasons why a woman can lose trust in a guy.

For example:

- He was too jealous and controlling in the relationship with her, which caused her to lose trust in his ability to be a good guy and treat her well.
- He took her for granted by doing whatever he wanted (e.g. getting angry at her often, playing video games all the time and expecting her to just stick around in the background of his life, treating her with a lack of respect and expecting her to still respect him).
- He made promises to change and improve things that she complained about, but he always went back to his old behavior.
- He was disrespectful towards her and possibly even mentally or physically abusive, rather than being a respectful, loving, supportive boyfriend (or husband).
- He cheated on her.
- He wasn't a man of his word.
- He was too emotionally weak and sensitive, so she felt that she couldn't depend on him to be the strong one in the relationship.

Do any of those reasons apply to you and your relationship with her?

Don't worry if you made some of those mistakes.

You can recover from it, impress her and get her back.

If you want her to drop her guard and open back up to you, it's essential that you prepare yourself to properly re-attract her when you interact with her.

You've got to be able to let her sense and pick up on the fact that you really have changed.

You're not just putting on an act.

You really have changed and she really does feel differently around you now.

That's what counts.

The thing is, when a woman loses trust in a guy, she will keep her guard up around him and think things like, "He hurt me once, so what will stop him from doing it again? I'd be a fool if I let him get close to me after what he did. I have to keep my distance. I just don't trust him. I saw how he changed in the relationship and I don't believe that he's any different. So, I'm going to steer clear of him."

She will then keep her guard up, avoid her ex and potentially even avoid looking at him altogether. She doesn't want to give him the impression that she is open to getting back with him, because she doesn't have any evidence to prove that he has changed.

In her mind, he's still exactly the same guy she dumped and he hasn't changed a thing.

So, if your ex has lost trust in you because you behaved in ways that turned her off during the relationship (or after the break up), you have to show her that you've really changed those things about yourself.

Another possible reason why your ex might have her guard up is

2. She is testing your confidence

Women always test men to see how confident they really are.

For example: If a woman broke up with a guy because he was too insecure, needy and self-doubting in the relationship, she will want to see if that has changed since the break up.

One way to do that is to keep her guard up, not show any interest and even avoid looking at him altogether.

If she discovers that he's now more confident and emotionally strong (e.g. he confidently walks over and talks to her and clearly believes in himself, even though she is being cold and distant), she will begin to drop her guard and open back up to him.

However, if he seems anxious, nervous, insecure or shows fear when talking to her, she will realize that nothing about him has changed and if anything, he's actually gotten worse.

As a result, opening up to him again simply won't feel right to her.

So, if your ex has her guard up around you and won't even look at you, it might be because she's testing your confidence.

She wants to see how you react now that she's not making things easy for you.

What kind of man are you really?

Are you confident no matter what?

Do you need her to be nice and supportive in order to feel confident?

Does she need to help you get her back, or do you have the confidence to get it done no matter how cold or distant she is being.

In some cases, a guy will be very confident in the relationship, but after getting dumped, he might feel insecure and self-doubting about his value to his ex.

If that happens, she will feel turned off by him even more because women are attracted to emotional strength, not weakness.

He might then make the mistake of appearing sad, lost, insecure, rejected or confused because she is being so cold and distant.

Secretly, he hopes that she will notice how upset or lost he is, feel guilty and then start talking to him again.

Yet, she doesn't because his reaction to her withdrawal is not attractive.

What she needs to see is him being confident, happy and forward moving with his life, with or without her.

She also needs to see that he has the balls to walk over and talk to her in a confident, easy-going manner, without expecting her or needing her to be really nice, open and friendly to make him feel confident.

He is confident no matter what she says or does.

Of course, most guys don't realize that, so they end up appearing sad, rejected or lost without her.

For example: A guy might say to himself, â€œWhy is she doing this to me? What am I doing wrong? Iâ€™ve apologized to her but nothing seems to be getting through to her. She always has her guard up around me and she wonâ€™t even look at me. How can I get her back if she wonâ€™t even give me the time of day? Iâ€™m losing her and I donâ€™t know what to do to make her open up and give me a chance. Why doesn't she care? It's like she has turned into a completely different person. She's not the sweet, loving girl I used to know. This is so unfair.â€

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

By thinking in that way, he loses confidence in himself and makes the ex back process harder for himself when it doesn't actually need to be.

For example: As a result of thinking in that way, a guy might feel unwelcome to approach his ex and talk to her when sheâ€™s ignoring him.

Not knowing what else to do, he might turn to her family or friends for help, or send her e-mails, letters and text messages trying to get her to understand his point of view and express how much he cares for her.

Yet, rather than make her think, â€œAwww, he must really love me if heâ€™s willing to do anything to get me back. I guess Iâ€™ve been too hard on him,â€ a woman will feel annoyed that he doesn't have the balls to talk to her on the phone or in person and re-attract her.

Here's the thingâ€¦!

For a woman to feel motivated enough to want to give her ex another chance, she needs to feel like she will be getting something better than what she lost.

For example: A confident, emotionally strong man she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, rather than an insecure, needy guy that she essentially has to take care of emotionally by being the stronger one in the relationship and leading the way to better times.

So, if your ex has her guard up around you and wonâ€™t even look at you, rather than get upset or annoyed about it, just use it as an opportunity to trigger her feelings for you.

Remain calm and relaxed and show her that you are a confident man who isnâ€™t going to get nervous and fail her tests.

When she sees for herself that youâ€™re not crumbling under the pressure she is applying to you (i.e. by ignoring you, having her guard up, acting like she doesn't even care about you anymore), she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from looking at you with more respectful eyes.

When that happens, her guard comes down and you can then guide her back into a relationship.

Another possible reason why your ex might have her guard up is thatâ€¦!

3. She has lost respect for you

[image: She has lost respect for you]

For a woman to want to remain in a committed relationship with a guy, she needs to be able to respect him as her man.

She needs to see that heâs an emotionally strong, honest man that she can depend on to lead the way to a better future for both of them.

A better future is not all about financial security.

Instead, itâs about the potential of their future happiness, love, security, experiences and overall well-being if they stick together.

In other words, does it seem as though their life going to get worse over time and become stressful, unloving and unhappy, or does it seem like their life will get better and better over time?

Is he the sort of man that can guide her through all stages of a relationship and then keep it together for life, or is he only able to get the relationship to work and then has no idea how to stop it from slowly falling apart?

Is he a man that she can truly rely on, invest her time with and be totally in love with for life, or is he one of the guys who have no real idea how to keep a relationship happy, in love and committed for life?

That's what really counts overall.

How about you and your relationship with your ex?

Were you able to maintain her respect in the relationship, or did you slowly chip away at it over time, until she pretty much lost most or all respect for you?

Here are some examples to help you understand...

Some of the main reasons why a woman will lose respect for a guy are:

- He isn't confident around her, her friends or other guys, which makes her feel like she has to take care of him in social situations.
- He feels as though he got lucky with her and doesn't really deserve her, so he fears losing her. As a result, he becomes clingy, needy and controlling.
- He cried to her during the relationship, or cried when she was breaking up with him.
- He stopped behaving in a manly way and ended up being a bit boyish, or he became emotionally sensitive like a woman.
- He desperately begged and pleaded with her to not break up with him.
- He bombarded her with texts, phone calls or social media messages after the break up.
- He regularly lost control of his emotions in the relationship (e.g. getting very angry at her).
- He needs her back so he can feel better about himself, because his life really doesn't have much purpose or meaning outside of the relationship with her.
- He took her for granted in the relationship (e.g. treated her however he wanted to and expected her to just put up with it).

As you can see, there are many things that can cause a woman to lose respect for her man.

[image: Why do I have to be so confident and emotionally strong?]

To some guys, it seems unfair that a man needs to be so well rounded to be respected by a woman, but that is life.

We men have to be strong, not women.

We are the ones with the balls.

We are the real leaders of the human race.

Women have always just going along with us, doing their thing (e.g. getting pregnant, raising children, cooking, cleaning).

Yet, as far back as you look into history, you will see men risking their lives to lead the way.

If you look around you right now, you will notice that pretty much everything practical that we humans use has been invented by men (e.g. phones, cars, the internet, TV, mass production of goods).

It's only recently that women have been able to get involved and contribute because the world is a much safer place for them.

Women have made an amazing contribution to the modern world (i.e. getting men to be more loving, tolerant, understanding, fair, caring) and will continue to, now that they are playing a more equal part.

However, for almost all of human history, they have simply come along for the ride with us.

Women haven't been leading the world and deciding which direction to head.

That has always been the responsibility of men.

So, don't forget who you are.

You are a man.

It is not your role to follow a woman and hope that she is nice to you.

You have to lead the way and make things happen by using your confidence and emotional masculinity.

Don't expect your ex to start looking at you, approaching you and talking to you, being really nice to you and helping you get her back.

You have to stand up and take control of the situation.

Remember who you are, at all times.

You are the man.

[image: Remember that you are the man]

As a man, it is your responsibility to be someone that a woman can look up to, respect and follow when in a relationship.

What a woman really wants (many modern women are embarrassed to openly admit this) is a man who knows what he wants and where he is going, so she can relax into his masculine direction.

She doesn't want to have to think of everything herself, be the strong one and be consistent like a man.

Of course, that's not to say that women are hopeless without men.

Women are just as intelligent as men and are perfectly capable of doing whatever they want in life.

However, when it comes to romantic, sexual relationships, a woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect.

She wants to be able to relax into his masculine direction, rather than having to be the leader of the relationship.

If you can't offer your masculine direction to a woman (and be so emotionally strong and consistent that she relaxes and follows your lead), her sexual and romantic feelings for you will naturally begin to fade away.

It doesn't matter how intelligent, successful or independent she is; her instincts will cause her to feel turned off if you are unable to be the kind of man that she can look up to and respect.

That's just how life works.

You've got to be the man if you want a woman to be the woman and stick with you, love you, respect you and feel attracted to you for life.

So, rather than thinking, "Oh, it's all too hard. Women have it so easy. Why do men have to be the strong ones? Why do we have to be consistent?" you need to harden up.

Man up.

Accept and embrace your position as a man in this world.

As a man, you need to be able to handle the challenges of life (including the confidence tests that a woman puts you through in a relationship by throwing tantrums to see how you will react), without crumbling under the pressure and saying that it's all too hard.

If you can be a man that your ex can now look up to and respect, she will naturally feel attracted to you and want to be in a relationship with you.

She will know that you are one of the rare men who actually know how to be a man and aren't going through life whining and complaining about it, hoping that someone will take pity on him.

No.

You're not like that.

You're an emotionally strong, emotionally masculine man and as a result, you are more than worthy of a woman's respect.

So, if your ex to drop her guard and open back up to you and the relationship, you must begin by getting her respect back.

The more respect you make her feel, the more attracted she will feel.

When her feelings come flooding back, keeping you at arms length becomes very difficult for her because a little voice in her head is telling her, "Come on! He's not that bad after."

You're being too hard on him. Just give him a chance to show you that he really has changed. He's obviously not the same as he used to be. There is a difference and you feel it. Let this happen."

However, if you don't get her respect back and just try to convince her to give you a chance (e.g. by seeking pity from her by saying things like, "How can you do this to me? I feel like I'm on trial around you! and nothing I say or do is going to please you. I'm trying my best, but you won't even look at me or give me a chance"), she will just continue to keep her guard up around you and try to move on without you.

Of course, right now you might be asking, "How do I get my ex's respect back if she

wonâ€¢t even look at me?â€¢

You need to use every interaction that you have with her from now on (e.g. via text, e-mail, social media, on a phone call and in person) to show her that you really have changed since she broke up with you.

It's not about telling that you've changed, writing about it in a letter or texting it to her.

It's about showing it to her.

Interacting with her and letting her sense and pick up on the changes in you, based on how you now communicate with her, behave, react to her and the overall vibe you give off.

When she senses the changes, her guard will naturally begin to come down and she will be more open and willing to communicate with you and be around you.

Another possible reason why your ex might have her guard up is becauseâ€¢

4. She knows that you don't understand what she really wants

If a guy doesn't know what his ex woman really wants him to change (and she can see that), she will keep her guard up around him, rather than explaining how to get her back.

If he can't work it out for himself, she feels as though he's either not capable of being the kind of man she wants, or he can't be bothered putting in the effort and just wants another chance because he loves her and cares about her.

For example: When talking to his ex girl, a guy might say, â€¢*Why are you being like this? I just want to talk to you. Why wonâ€¢t you even look at me? Just give me a chance to make things right. Tell me where I went wrong and I promise that I'll change and fix it. I am willing to do whatever it takes. Just tell me what you need me to do and it's done. I want to make things right between us. I want to make this work. I love you. Please.*â€¢

Yet, that approach rarely, if ever, convinces a woman to change her attitude towards her ex.

Instead, thinks something like, â€¢*Why is he whining to me about his feelings and what he wants? Heâ€¢s doesnâ€¢t even understand what I want. Doesn't he realize that getting me back is going to require giving me what I want, without needing my help to make that happen? Doesn't he realize that a woman hates having to teach a guy how to be a man? He doesn't get it. Heâ€¢s just hoping that I will take pity on him and give him another chance because he loves me so much. What he doesn't realize is that his feelings don't matter anymore. It's about me now. It's about how I feel. If he can't make me feel what I want to feel, then I don't see any reason why I should give him another chance. If I give him another chance, he will just be making me feel turned off in the same old ways as before. He doesn't get it.*â€¢

She then puts her guard up even more and tries harder to move on without him.

So, rather than asking your ex things like, â€¢Why do you have your guard up around me?â€¢ or â€¢Why wonâ€¢t you even look at me?â€¢ just focus on changing how she feels by making her feel attracted in ways that she actually cares about.

For example:

- Does she want you to be more manly and stop giving her so much power over you?
- Does she want you to stop being so serious and start making her smile, laugh and feel good around you again?

- Does she want you to become more emotionally independent, rather than being so clingy of her love and attention?

Those are the kind of things that really count to a woman.

So, start by asking yourself questions like:

- Was I too jealous and controlling?
- Did I take her for granted?
- Did I become too annoying?
- Could she depend on me to be the man in the relationship, or did she feel like she had to take care of me and make most of the decisions?
- Were her expectations of the relationship being fulfilled, or did we want different things (e.g. she wanted to get serious and settle down, whereas I wanted to take things slow)?
- Did she get tired of all the fighting and arguing?
- Did I stop making her feel appreciated and just expect her to put up with whatever way I treated her?
- Did I give her too much power in the relationship to the point where she no longer looked up to me as her man?
- Did I turn the relationship into more of a friendship and as a result, the spark died out and she lost interest in me in a sexual, romantic way?
- Did I become too irritable, moody or emotionally sensitive?

Do any of those apply to you and your relationship with her?

If so, that's what you need to focus on fixing about yourself.

You don't need to be perfect in each of those areas though.

Instead, you just need to be a lot better, so she can pick up on and sense it as she interacts with you.

She will be able to detect the changes based on the difference in how you now speak, behave, react to her and your overall vibe and approach to interactions and conversation.

As a result, she will automatically begin to feel respect and attraction for you again.

Her guard will come down and the idea of giving you another chance will begin to make sense to her again.

She will realize why she loved you in the first place and feel excited about her new, more developed love and attraction for you.

Finally, another possible reason your ex might have her guard up is

5. She wants you to get angry at her, so she can use that as a reason for wanting to remain broken up

[image: She wants you to get angry at her]

Sometimes a woman might not know how to get her ex to leave her alone and move on, so she starts behaving rudely towards him to hopefully get him to react in an angry way.

When he does, she can then say that she is afraid of him and doesn't want to speak to him anymore.

Here's an example:

A woman is nervous about coming right out and saying, "Look it's over between us. I don't want to get back with you and I want you to respect my feelings and leave me alone," so she acts cold and distant around her ex in the hopes that he might give up and leave her alone.

If he continues trying to get her back, she might then start getting angry at him and change into a completely different woman than he once knew.

She might say, "Leave me alone! Why you keep contacting me? It's over! I feel nothing for you and I never did!"

She's hoping that he reacts angrily to her saying that she felt nothing for him.

If he does react in an angry way, she can then say something like, "Oh my! Look at how you're behaving. You're out of control. I can't be in a relationship with a guy who gets so angry all the time. I'm afraid of you now. I mean, what's to stop you from getting really angry and hurting if we get back together again? What will happen if I dare to disagree with you about something? Will you get angry and hit me? I'm not going to let that happen to me. You're out of control. So, you need to leave me alone now."

She can then walk away knowing that it will be difficult for him to defend himself after the way he behaved.

If he tries to apologize for getting angry, she can say, "It's too little too late. You've shown me your true colors. I'm scared of you now. Stop contacting me and leave me alone."

So, whatever you do, make sure that you don't lose your temper and get really angry at your ex (e.g. for ignoring you, talking disrespectfully to you).

Instead, show her that her actions are not affecting your confidence.

Let her see that you're an emotionally strong, mature man who doesn't get angry when a woman is being silly.

Rather than getting angry or annoyed, just use interactions that you have with her as an opportunity to make her smile, laugh and feel good in your presence.

When you do that, her guard will come down and you can then get her back with you where she belongs.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Says That She Loves Me, But Wants to Be On Her Own For a While

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why she's saying that she loves you, but wants to be on her own for a while, are:

1. She loves you as a person, but isn't in love with you in a romantic, sexual way

There are many different types of love.

For example: There is the love between a parent and a child, the love between friends, the love between a sports team and its fans and then there's also romantic love between a man and a woman.

If your ex loves you as a person, but isn't in love with you, it means that she no longer feels sexually attracted to you, or doesn't feel enough sexual attraction to justify remaining in a relationship with you.

[image: When a relationship feels more like a friendship]

In a relationship, if there is love without attraction, it stops feeling romantic and starts to feel like a friendship.

So, if your ex said that she loves you, but wants to be on her own for a while, it's much more likely that she just doesn't feel a spark with you anymore.

So, how can you make her feel that spark again?

The best way is to make her feel feminine and girly in comparison to how masculine you think, talk, behave and take action around her and in life.

Essentially, you make her feel like your girl, rather than making her feel like your friend or like she is the more dominant one in the relationship.

Here's the thing!

It doesn't matter how smart, successful or independent a woman is, she still wants to be able to feel girly and feminine in comparison to her man.

A lot of modern women are embarrassed to admit that, but just pay attention from now on and you will notice that the women who are the happiest and most in love with their man are the ones who get to feel girly around him.

When a woman ends up feeling like a friend to her guy, or feels like the more dominant one in a relationship, you will see a distinct change in her energy, attitude and happiness.

A lot of people aren't comfortable talking about the whole masculine vs. feminine thing in today's society.

It's more politically correct to just pretend like men and women are the same.

Yet, they're not.

For a man and a woman to continually feel sexually attracted to each other in a long term relationship or marriage, their energy has to be completely different to each other.

In other words, the man has to clearly be masculine (e.g. emotionally tough, driven by the desire to reach his true potential as a man and fulfill his purpose, practical and able to get things done) and the woman has to clearly be feminine (e.g. emotionally sensitive, driven by love, free to be silly and helpless at times like a girl).

So, if a guy makes the mistake of treating his girlfriend (fiancée or wife) more like a friend, her sexual feelings for him will gradually fade away.

She will then start to focus on things about him that she doesn't like (e.g. he's too needy and clingy, he breaks his promises to her, he puts her in second place to his work/friends/family).

She will then begin thinking things like, "I don't really know why, but our relationship doesn't feel right anymore. I know that I still love him, but something is missing. The spark has gone. I just don't feel the same way about him as I used to. Maybe it's a sign that we're not meant to be together."

She will then break up with him by saying something along the lines of, "I love you, but I want to be on my own for a while."

Her guy might then try to convince her to give him another chance by explaining that he will try harder, but it just won't feel right to her.

The spark just isn't there, so she doesn't feel the need to give him another chance based on the promise that things might get better later on.

She wants to feel sexual and romantic attraction now, not later and not maybe later.

She wants it for sure.

She wants to feel it when she talks to him now.

If it isn't there, she just has to leave.

Here's the thing!

Unlike in the distant past where a woman had to endure a sad, lonely, sexless, unhappy relationship for life (because it was shameful to break up), today's woman can do whatever she wants.

She is free to leave a relationship if she's not feeling the way she wants to feel (i.e. attracted, feminine, girly, respectful towards her man, in love).

So, if your woman is saying that she loves you but wants to be on her own for a while, it may be because you stopped making her feel like a feminine, sexy woman and treated her more like a friend or a buddy.

Even though she may still love you as a person, she's no longer in love with you in a romantic, sexual way.

The good news is that you can change how she feels.

If she felt desire and sexual attraction for you in the past, then you can definitely make her feel that way again.

You simply need to change the way you interact with her from now on.

For example: Stop being so nice and sweet and stop being afraid to flirt with her and build sexual tension between you and her.

Make it happen.

Make her experience sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you again.

How?

One way to do is to maintain your confidence around her, no matter what she says or does to make you doubt yourself or feel unworthy.

Another way to do is to making her laugh and smile, especially when she is being cold or distant.

Another way to do is to make her feel feminine and girly in your presence, by being very masculine in the way you talk, feel, behave and act around her.

The more respect and attraction you make her feel, the more she begins to think, *â€œI feel different now. Why don't I want to be on my own anymore? When weâ€™re not together I miss him too much. I want us to be together again. What has changed? Why am I feeling this way? I don't want to lose him. I want him back.*â€œ

On the other hand, if you continue treating her like a neutral friend and fail to create sparks between you and her, she will simply use the time apart to get over you.

Then, when another guy comes along and sparks her feelings of sexual attraction, she will hook up with him and leave you behind wondering, *â€œWhat did I do wrong? Why did she leave me? How could she do this to me? She said she loved me!*â€œ

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

If you want her back, you have to change her friendly feelings of love to romantic, sexual feelings of love.

If you do that, she will naturally want to get back with you.

Another reason why she might have said that she loves you, but wants to be on her own for a while isâ€œ

2. She is going to try and move on without you

[image: She is going to try to get over you and move on]

She won't tell you that, but she will do it.

She will use the time apart to get over you and try to move on as quickly as she can.

Why?

Sometimes a woman decides that she wants to move on from a relationship, but doesnâ€™t want to get into a deep debate or discussion about it with her man.

So, rather than saying something like, *â€œI want to break up with you because I donâ€™t think you and I want the same things from this relationship,*â€œ and risk him trying to talk her out of her decision, she will say something like, *â€œI do still love you, but I want to be on my own for a while. Can you give me some space to sort myself out? Then, after I've sorted out my issues, we can discuss getting back together again. I would really appreciate that.*â€œ

By saying that to him, he is then left thinking something like, â€œOkay, I don't like it, but at least she isn't fully breaking up with me. She said she still loves me and just wants some time on her own. I can give her that. In fact, if I stay out of her way and donâ€™t try to change her mind, it will show *her what a loving, understanding guy I really am. She will come running back to me again sooner rather than later.*â□□

He might then give her 30 (or even 60) days of space where he doesn't contact her at all.

He hopes that she will get bored of being on her own, call him and want to get back together.

Yet, in most cases, a woman simply uses the time on her own to get over her ex guy and move on.

So, should you give her any space at the moment?

Yes.

There's nothing wrong with giving her a bit of space, but anything longer than 3 to 7 days is usually a bad idea.

Giving her more than a week of space (before you start re-attracting her and getting her back) just provides her with too much time to get over you and find a replacement guy.

Many guys assume that their woman would never hook up with or start dating a new guy right after their relationship, but they're wrong.

If a woman is saying things like, "I love you, but I just need some time on my own" it means that she's no longer romantically attracted.

If she happens to meet a new guy who makes her feel attracted, or if she has secretly been flirting with a new guy behind his back, she's just going to move on without him.

Loyalty to the relationship goes out the window when sexual and romantic feelings are dead or too weak to justify sticking around.

A woman may even promise her guy not to hook up with any new guys and to remain completely faithful, but she doesn't actually have to stick to that promise.

Believe me, I've heard all the horror stories.

I've been helping men get women back after a break up for years now.

I've heard all the things that women say to guys during and after a break up.

Your girl might seem sweet, innocent and loyal to you and the relationship, but if she wants to be on her own, she's almost certainly going to be opening herself up to feeling attracted to new guys.

She doesn't want to tell you that though because it would only cause unnecessary drama and potentially make you start pleading with her to give you another chance.

So, if your woman has said that just wants to be on her own, don't assume that she will remain alone.

She could go out and party with her girlfriends, go on a date with the guy at work (or university) who has a crush on her, get on Tinder or start flirting with random guys she meets.

If she meets a guy who makes her feel sexually attracted, she is within her rights to go ahead and do something with him.

That would suck, I know.

Yet, you have to prepare for the reality of this situation.

That's why I don't ever recommend that a guy give his woman more than a week of space, before he begins re-attracting her and getting her back.

Another reason why a woman might say that she loves you, but wants to be on her own for a while isâ□!

3. She doesn't think that you will ever understand the kind of attraction experience she really wants

[image: She doesn't think that you will ever understand the kind of attraction experience that she really wants]

What are her real, erotic desires?

Were you able to get her to bring out her honest sexual identity in the relationship, or did she only show you half or even less of who she really wants to be in the bedroom?

What kind of behavior does she really want to experience from a man inside and outside of the bedroom?

Will she be happy with a normal, good guy who treats her in a fairly neutral way, or does she really want to be with an edgy, good guy who treats her like his girl and makes her feel submissive because he's so masculine in his behavior and approach to life?

These are the kind of things that you really need to think about it.

You might not care about that because it's not important to you, but what about her?

When getting a woman back, you have to focus on making her feel the way that she wants to feel.

You can't just expect her to get back with you because you want it and then offer her the same kind of attraction experience that didn't inspire her before.

It's not about being someone that you're not.

Instead, it's about rising up to the challenge and showing her that you are capable of being the kind of man that she secretly wants, but is too embarrassed to admit.

That is what gets an ex woman's attention.

You might just want her to love you for you (i.e. because you're a good guy, you're smart, you have good intentions), but that isn't fair to her if she isn't getting what she really wants from the relationship.

Another reason why she might have said that she loves you but wants to be on her own for a while is becauseâ€¦!

4. You've been pressuring her to get back with you before changing what she secretly wants you to change

One of the most common reactions that guys have to a break up is to try and convince their woman to change her mind.

He will try to engage her in long, deep discussions about the relationship, in the hope that he can understand her.

Yet, trying to understand a woman is a losing game.

Why?

Most women don't even understand themselves and those who do, tend to change their mind about what they want from day to day, month to month or year to year.

The secret to success with women is not about following them and trying to understand them.

If you do that, they will lead you around in circles that go nowhere and get frustrating for both of you.

The secret is to lead the way by actively making her have feelings for you.

When a woman respects you, feels attracted to you and is in love with you, she doesn't want to leave you.

She might change her mind all the time about what she wants to do with her life, what she is interested in outside of work and so on, but she will consistently remain in love with you and committed to you.

That's how it works.

If a woman is feeling attracted and in love, she doesn't feel the need to get away from her man.

Yet, if her feelings for him are dying or dead, she will want to be 'alone' for a while, so she can get over him or find a replacement guy and move on.

It's as simple as that.

So, don't waste time trying to convince your ex to change her mind about leaving you if you haven't even fixed some of the things that have been turning her off about you.

If you're not sure what those things might be, ask yourself the following questions and see what you come up with.

For example:

- Did you and her grow apart (e.g. because you wanted different things in life, the sexual attraction between you fizzled out, you didn't see each other often enough)?
- Did you spend too much time with her to the point where you ended up making her feel smothered by the relationship?
- Did you stop giving her the emotional support that she really needed from you and just expect her to be strong like you (i.e. like a man)?
- Did you cause her to lose trust in you by breaking your word to her on many different occasions?
- Did you become insecure or too emotionally sensitive?
- Did you become clingy, needy, jealous or controlling?
- Were you too serious and tense about the relationship all the time and as a result, she couldn't relax and feel happy around you anymore?

If you answered yes to any of those questions, then you should now have a pretty good idea of what she wants you to change about yourself.

What you need to do now is get to work on those things, so you are prepared to re-attract her when you next interact with her.

A final reason why she might have said that she loved you, but wanted to be alone for a while is because

5. How you behaved near the end of the relationship really turned her off, so she now wants to see if time apart will change her feelings towards you

When a guy notices that his woman is close to breaking up with him, it may cause him to become even more insecure, clingy, jealous and controlling.

As a result, it simply speeds up the process of her wanting to break up with him.

When she begins to break up with him, he might start begging and pleading with her, offering to change whatever she wants and telling her how much he loves her and needs her in his life.

Heâs hoping that if she sees him falling apart at the idea of losing her, she will realize how much he cares for her and will then choose to stay in the relationship.

Yet, rather than make her change her mind and think, âHow can I do this to him when he loves me so much? Iâm just being silly. Heâs a nice guy and he cares about me so much. That should be enough. Okay, I will stick with himâ she will usually be thinking something like, âAll of his begging, pleading, crying and going on and on about the same old things is making me want to be on my own even more. I want a man that I can look up to, respect and depend on, not someone who is so emotionally sensitive and weak that he falls apart when things get a bit challenging in his life. I need a break from him for a while. Maybe being apart will change how I feel, but based on my feelings right now, I think itâs over between us. We'll have to wait and see. For now though, I want to be on my own.â

She will then tell her guy that she wants to be on her own for a while, to see if her feelings towards him will change.

Not knowing what else to do, a guy might try to win her back with gifts, holiday offers, or offers to be a helpful friend in her life if she needs him for anything.

Alternatively, he might try to guilt her back into a relationship by showing her how sad and depressed when she contacts him.

Yet, in most cases, rather than make a woman change her mind and come running back, seeing him behaving in such an emotionally weak and desperate way only convinces her more that she made the right decision to end the relationship.

By the wayâ

If you behaved in ways that were unattractive to your ex leading up to and after the break up, donât worry about it.

Thatâs all water under the bridge now.

What matters now is how you make her feel from now on.

You need to interact with her and change her friendly, neutral feelings of love into romantic, sexual, passionate feelings of love for you.

When you do that, she won't want to be on her own.

She will want to be with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Convince My Ex to Attend Counseling to Fix Our Relationship

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 things you can do to convince your ex to attend counseling to fix your relationshipâ€¦!

1. Show her that you have already improved some of the things she wants, but isn't telling you about

[image: Show her that you've already improved some of the things that she wants]

If a guy keeps nagging his ex to go to counseling with him, but she can see that he still hasn't changed, she's not going to feel like going.

Why?

Going to counseling will feel as though she is helping him to overcome his issues to get her back.

In other words, it's all about him getting what he wants.

Rather than think, â€œOkay, maybe counseling will help him improve, so he can then get me back,â€ she will most likely think, â€œHe doesn't even know how to fix his own problems. It shouldn't be this difficult. Other couples get along so well and stay together, without having to go to counseling. Why would I want to help him get me back when he doesn't even really know how to be the kind of man that I want anyway? No thanks. He can go to counseling if he wants, but he can count me out. I'm not interested. I'm going to find myself a man who doesn't need a counselor to help him understand how to make me happy or keep a relationship together. He needs help, but I'm not going to be the one who helps him. I'm done.â€

It might seem like she is being selfish by not attending, but she isn't.

She is an individual and can do whatever she wants.

Regardless of how close they were in a relationship or if she promised to stick with him for life, she is still an individual at the end of the day.

If she is getting what she wants from a relationship, she can decide to change her mind and leave.

Here's the thing...

[image: She has had enough of trying to make it work]

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she usually doesn't do it over night.

In most cases, a woman will have tried to make the relationship to work for a long time and it eventually gets to a point where she's just had enough of it.

She's tired of all the stress and hard work that is required to keep the relationship together.

So, she ends it and walks away.

After ending it, she doesn't want to now attend counseling to help him understand how to be a complete man in a relationship and get her back.

From her perspective, she has done enough.

So, at this point, he has to figure that out on his own and if he can't, she will move on.

Of course, you don't have to figure this out on your own.

I am here to help.

Watch this video to understand how you can impress your ex and let her see that you really have changedâ!

She is going to be way more impressed if you can improve without seeming to get any help from other people.

Just let her see that you have changed and don't go on and on about how much you've been learning, or how messed up you are and how much help you need.

She doesn't want to hear that.

What does she want?

She wants to naturally feel respect, attraction and love for who you are now.

She doesn't want to have to listen to you go on and on about your problems or issues and feel like she needs to help you through it all.

She doesn't want to help anymore.

She just wants you to get on with being the kind of man that she can naturally respect, feel attracted to and love.

Here's an example of where a guy went wrong and what he would need to change to re-attract her...

A guy became very insecure in the relationship and as a result, he began to display unmanly behavior around his woman.

He became jealous, clingy and controlling and started to need her to reassure him of her love and commitment to him, which really turned her off.

She eventually got to the point where she'd enough of feeling like she had to take care of him, so she left the relationship.

So, how can he get her to go to counseling and fix the relationship?

To begin with, he needs to interact with her and let her experience the changes in him.

He has to be able to show her that he's no longer the insecure, emotionally sensitive guy that she left and he has now become an emotionally strong man.

To be clear: He has to show it to her, not tell her.

It's not about saying things like, "Hey, I'm not insecure anymore, I promise. I'm confident now."

Why?

She doesn't want to have to take care of him by saying, "Oh, good on you. I'm proud of you" and give him a pat on the head about it.

She just wants him to get on with being the kind of man that she can naturally respect, feel attracted to and be in love with now.

When a woman can see that her ex guy understands where he went wrong, without needing her to explain it all to him, she feels respect for him.

When she also sees that he's made an effort to improve on those things, she will begin to relax her guard a little.

She will then stop being stubborn about not wanting to attend counseling and will just open up to giving it a try.

After all, he has been making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him, so she is starting to feel a bit more hopeful now.

In summary, if you want to convince your ex to attend counseling to fix your relationship, you need to show her that it is worth her while and isn't all just about you.

How?

- Understand what she really wants you to change but isn't telling you about (e.g. Did she feel like you weren't giving her the emotional support she needed? Did she feel more like a neutral friend than a feminine woman around you? Did you and her grow apart because you wanted different things in life? Did the spark die out because you ended up treating her more like a friend than your woman?).
- Begin fixing those things about yourself so she will be able to sense that you've changed when you next interact with her on the phone or in person.
- Improve your ability to attract her (e.g. focus on making her smile and laugh, make her feel girly and feminine in your presence), so you can reactivate her feelings when you next interact with her.
- Make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, so she feels willing the next time you bring up the idea of attending counseling together.

In other words, don't make it all about what you want (i.e. you want her to attend counseling to you can fix the relationship problems and get her back).

Instead, make it all about her feelings.

Actively make her have feelings for you.

If you do that, she will naturally want to give you and the relationship another chance.

When your ex is feeling attracted to you again, she will begin to miss having you around and being with you in a relationship.

She will start to focus her memories on the good time and on your good qualities.

As a result, her excuses about not wanting to attend counseling will begin to fade away and she will go along with it to avoid losing you completely.

Another thing you need to do if you want to convince your ex to attend counseling to fix your relationship is to

2. Give her an out

In a relationship, a woman doesn't want to feel trapped into making a decision that she's not ready to make.

So, when a guy is saying things like, "Please, let's just go see a counselor together. Maybe he can help us work things out," his ex woman may think, "What makes him think that I want to work things out? What if I'm happy being broken up? I'm not even sure if I ever want us to get back together again. He's pushing me into something I'm just not ready for"

*right now. So, I have to stand my ground and refuse to go to counseling. He needs to learn to respect me and my needs.*â□□

This is why, the best approach to convince your ex to go to counseling is by making sure she doesnâ□□t feel pushed into doing it just because you need it.

It has to be something that she feels compelled to do because she is experiencing renewed feelings of respect and attraction for you.

So, how can you put her mind at ease and let her know that you're not forcing her into it?

Say something along the lines of, *â□□Hey, I donâ□□t want you to feel like Iâ□□m pushing you into something that youâ□□re not comfortable with. I tell you whatâ□□| if we do one session and you don't want to do another, we will stop right then and there. We can fully break up for good if thatâ□□s what you really want. I promise to then stop contacting you completely if that's what you want. You have my word on that. So, let's just do one session. It's either going to go well and give us something to work with, or we will decide to break up. Whatever happens, I promise to accept it.*â□□

By saying something like that to her, you should see an immediate shift in how she reacts to your suggestions.

It takes the pressure off her because she has an exit strategy now.

If she attends the counseling session and decides that she wants to remain broken up, she has your word that you will leave her alone.

Of course, she's not going to want that because you are going to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

You are going to continue making her feel relaxed, open and attracted and as a result, she's not going to want it to be the last time you and her talk.

She is going to open back up to you and be willing to catch up with you again.

Of course, that's if you approach it correctly.

If you want her to open back up, you need to make sure that you are prepared to properly re-attract her.

Don't go using the same old approach you've used in the past and expect her to be excited about it.

You've got to approach attraction in a new and interesting way now, so she feels interested in you again and compelled to explore the new feelings she now has for you.

Another point to remember when trying to convince your ex to go to counseling to fix your relationship is toâ□□|

3. Stop making it seem like a stressful event

Right now, you might feel as though the only way to get her back is to convince her to go to counseling with you.

Yet, try to look at it from her point of view.

Imagine what goes through a womanâ□□s mind when she has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her ex and he is desperately trying to talk her into attending counseling with him.

Can you imagine it?

She is feeling turned off by him and doesn't want to give him another chance.

Yet, he is pleading with her to attend counseling, so he can work out how to get her back.

It just doesn't feel right to her.

For example: He's begging and pleading with her to go and saying things like, "Please babe. Just give it a shot. A professional counselor will help us fix our problems and get back to where we used to be. We used to be so happy. Please don't throw what we had together away. I care so much about you and I want us to work. I mean, think about it! It doesn't me wanting to go to counseling prove to you how sorry I am for everything? Doesn't it show you that I'm 100% committed to doing whatever it takes to get you back? I'll even pay for the counseling session if you want. Please just give me a chance. Just attend one session. I beg you. Please."

Alternatively, he might get angry at her for not wanting to go and say something like, "How can you be so heartless and cold?! I'm trying to fix our relationship here and it's like you don't even give a crap. Why am I the only one who cares about us? Why are you being such a bitch? You should be grateful that I'm even willing to go to counseling. Most guys would just say to hell with it and forget about trying to make things better. I'm not like that. I love you more than anything and I am willing to do what it takes to fix any issues we've been having. I know we can make it work. How about you? You don't even seem to care. It's like what we had meant nothing to you. So, come on! After all we've been through together as a couple and all the love we shared, you owe it to me to go to counseling and just give our relationship a chance."

She then feels like he is pressuring her into counseling because he needs it so badly.

Without counseling, he feels lost and has no idea how to make her happy.

This annoys her because it confirms to her that she's been with a guy who doesn't even know what she wants.

He's just been doing whatever he wants and hoping that she would put up with it and not leave.

Now that she has left him, he wants to get a professional to help him in front of her.

He doesn't realize how unattractive that can be for a woman.

Why?

When a man and a woman go to a counselor and it's the man who wants her back, what do you think will happen?

In almost all cases, the counselor will blame everything on the man and tell him that he needs to be nicer or more understanding.

The counselor won't say things like, "Hey, you're being too much of a wussy with her. You need to man up and start putting her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way. You're letting this woman walk over you."

That would be politically incorrect of the counselor to say, so the advice is pretty much always, "It's your fault. She's innocent and perfect. You need to do a whole bunch of things to hopefully make it up to her. If she doesn't want you after you've done all those things, then you have to accept it and leave her alone."

This is why I never recommend that guys take an ex woman to counseling as the main plan of attack to get her back.

[image: Couples counseling usually ends up being an attack on the guy]

Why?

A counseling session almost always ends up being an attack on the guy.

The counselor makes it out to be all his fault, or pretty much all his fault, which turns his ex woman off even more as she realizes how ineffective of a boyfriend (fiance or husband) he has been.

However, if you are determined to go to counseling, then you are free to go ahead and do that.

It's your choice.

I'm just telling you what I know after helping 100s of men to get their woman back.

I've heard all the different approaches that guys have used to try to get their woman back and I've never heard positive things happen after a session with a counselor.

It's up to you though.

If you really want to get her to go to counseling with you, then let's keep talking about thatâ"|

Here's what you can do to get her to relax and open up to counselingâ"|

Instead of always having serious, stressful, emotional conversations about the relationship and how important it is to get counseling, just try to start turning things into something to laugh about together.

For example: If your ex says something along the lines of, â"I just don't know if I'm ready to go to counseling right now,â" rather than getting upset about it, you can laugh and say (in a joking way), â"Okay, so you're not ready right now...how about 30 seconds from now? Will you be ready then? Maybe we need to give you 5 minutes to be ready."

Then laugh and say, â"Hey, look, we don't have to decide right now. Let's just stop talking about counseling for now and think about it later. It's fine.â"

If you are talking to her in person in that moment, continue to make her laugh and smile (e.g. use more humor, tickle her, play wrestle her onto the bed or couch and tickle her and then kiss her, tell her that she has something stuck to the back of her pants and tell her to turn around and then spank her on the butt and laugh).

Just get her attention away from the stress of trying to fix things with you.

Make getting back together feel fun, natural and easy, rather than making out to be a huge ordeal that will require you and her sitting down with a professional to talk through your issues.

Be more playful with her.

Make her feel good.

Of course, that doesn't mean you can't ever take anything seriously, or that you have to constantly crack jokes around her.

Instead, it simply means that you're getting rid of stressful emotions and replacing them with more enjoyable emotions, so she can relax and open up to you again naturally.

When you can make your ex smile, laugh and drop her guard around you, she will be less likely to say, â"Noâ" to attending counseling.

She will begin to think something like, â"At least we can still have a laugh together. Maybe attending counseling to fix our relationship is not such a bad idea after all. Maybe itâ"s not too late to actually work things out between us.â"

Of course, that's if you still want to go to counseling.

Remember: Counseling usually ends up being an attack on the guy because all counselors are too politically correct to speak the truth.

In today's society, it's frowned upon to blame anything on women.

Women are made out to be perfect, innocent princesses who can do no wrong, even though, in most cases, they make just as many mistakes as men do in relationships.

Don't expect a counselor to take your side though.

You are trying to get her back and to protect the counselor's reputation and business, he/she will almost always take the woman's side to protect her safety.

So, go to counseling if you want.

However, if you want to get her back in an easier, quicker and more natural way, thenâ€¦!

4. Get the relationship back together first and then decide if you and her need counseling

Every day, all over the world, guys get their girl back without going to counseling.

You can do that too.

How?

By using every interaction that you have with her from now on as an opportunity to trigger her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

Don't ask for her to give you another chance and don't start going on and on about your issues and how you're seeking help on your own.

Just get on with being the sort of man that she can naturally feel respect, attraction and love for.

That's how it's done.

Unfortunately, most guys don't ever find that out until it's too late.

For example: When a guy feels as though he has tried everything to get his ex back and it hasn't worked (e.g. he begged and pleaded, he offered to change whatever she wanted, he bought her gifts, flowers and in some cases even paid for her bills and expenses), he might then assume that his only option is to get her into a counseling session.

He hopes that the counselor will be able to talk to some sense into her, make her see that he is a good guy and get her to give him another chance.

Yet, that's just not how it works.

[image: A counselor often makes your ex aware of other problems in the relationship that she wasn't even thinking about]

In addition to mostly (or totally) blaming the guy for what went wrong in the relationship, a counselor will also begin to dig up other problems in the relationship that she wasn't even thinking about.

This just causes the woman to want to get out of the relationship even more.

For example: The counselor points out that a real man makes his woman feel appreciated by doing this or that, which then reminds her of the fact that her ex guy wasn't doing that for her.

Alternatively, the counselor digs deep into the guy's psychology and starts talking about his childhood issues, which makes him feel upset and emotionally sensitive.

She then feels even more turned off by him and feels like he needs a lot of work before he will be capable of being a real man for her or for any other woman.

So, you can go to counseling with her if you want, but I don't recommend it.

What do I recommend?

Getting her back in an easier, more natural way.

How?

Actively make her have feelings for you again.

Interact with her and get her to feel sparks of respect, sexual attraction and love for you based on the way that you now talk to her, behave around her and react to her.

When you do that, she will naturally start to relax her guard and allow herself to begin reconnecting with the love she used to feel for you.

You can then build up the sexual tension between you and her and make her begin to have strong, romantic feelings for you again.

It's very easy to do.

You simply have to rise up to the challenge and attract her in the ways that really matter to her.

Don't go offering her things that she doesn't care about (e.g. offering to be nicer or to buy her things, when she really just wants you to be more ballsy and make her feel like a girl who is in love again).

You have to interact with her and get her feeling attracted to you in ways that actually matter to her.

When you do that, she will automatically relax her guard, open back up to you and go along with it when you guide her back into a relationship.

Every day, all over the world, guys get their girl back by using that approach.

It's up to you though.

You can go to counseling if you want.

However, be warned: The counselor will almost certainly make it all your fault and bring up problems between you and her that you didn't even know existed.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Seems to Get Upset at Anything That I Say to Her These Days

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex seems to get upset at anything that you say to her these days:

1. She is annoyed that you take her tantrums so seriously

[image: She is annoyed that you take her tantrums so easily]

Most women hate it when a man puts her in the position of power in a romantic, sexual relationship. Women are totally happy to be in the position of power at work, but when in a romantic relationship with a man, she actually wants to be in the one down position.

So, if a woman's ex guy is being on his very best behavior and sucking up to her to hopefully get her to take pity on him, it's not going to work.

She's going to be turned off by the fact that he looks at her as being the leader of the relationship and is hoping that she will gentle, nice and take pity on him because he's such a good guy.

It seems like it should work the opposite way though, right?

The nicer you are to women, the nicer they should be in return, right?

Wrong.

That's not how a woman's feelings of respect, attraction and love are built over time in a relationship and it's also not the way to re-attract her after a break up.

If you want her back, you need to have balls.

You've got to have the balls to laugh at her fake annoyance, rather than taking it so seriously.

As long as you laugh at her and the situation in a loving way (rather than a demeaning way), she will respect you for having the balls to do so and feel attracted to you as a result.

However, if you are worried that she might get annoyed at something and then cower when she does, she will lose even more respect for you and as a result, won't be able to feel attracted to you.

Of course, most guys don't know that about women, or they just don't know what else to do other than be nice and try to treat her with the utmost respect.

For example: A guy might say to himself, "If I want another chance with her, I need to be nicer, sweeter and more polite to her than ever before. No matter how rude, mean or cold she is being, I need to keep being as nice as I can and she will eventually feel guilty for treating me badly. She will realize that I am willing to do anything for her. I'm even willing put up with her bad moods, tantrums or selfish behavior. She will see that and it will dawn on her that no other guy could ever love her as much as I and she will want me back."

Yet, that's just not how women work.

Here's the thing!

A woman will act like she wants a guy to take her temper tantrums seriously, but in reality, she's not going to respect a guy who falls for her brattish behavior and rewards her by being extra nice, sweet and submissive around her, no matter how ridiculous she is being.

Why?

It's directly linked to her breeding instincts, which is what attraction is based on.

If he can't stand up to her in a dominant, but loving way and put her back in her place, then how can she rely on him to stand up to other people who are being mean to him in life?

Will she have to be the stronger one in the relationship and be the one who fights their battles?

Will he have the capability to get other people to respect him, without having to get into a fight or argument about it?

Does he have what it takes to make her feel protected and safe?

If not, she isn't going to be able to respect him and as a result, she won't feel attracted to him.

Her breeding instincts will tell her, "This guy can't protect you. Run. Find a real man. He's too soft. You need a stronger man than this."

It won't matter what he says to her, how nice he is or how much more of her BS he puts up with.

She just won't feel the kind of attraction that is required to sustain a relationship between a man and a woman, so she will want out.

Here's an example of a guy not being strong enough for a womanâ€¦

A guy calls his ex on the phone to apologize and ask her for another chance.

He says, "I'm so sorry for what happened. I stuffed up badly and I regret hurting you. Please forgive me. Just tell me what you want me to do to make it up to you and I will."

She then says, "Sorry? Is that the best you can do? Well, it's too little too late for that and I don't want to hear it! How dare you ask for my forgiveness after what you did. Do you really think saying you'll do anything I want you to do is going to change how I feel about you? You don't get it. It's over. Leave me alone."

He then feels shocked by her reaction and think something like, "Why is she being like this? What did I do wrong? I was just trying to make things right between us. She just seems to get upset at anything I say to her these days. Maybe I need to apologize more, or just continue being extra nice and sweet to her until she snaps out of her bad mood and gives me a chance."

As a result, he might then apologize to her further and ask her to please listen to him and let him explain.

She then loses even more respect for him for letting her walk all over him like that.

So, if you want your ex to stop getting upset at you, then stop letting her get away with bratty behavior.

You don't have to be mean to her and demand that she stop.

Instead, you simply need to have the balls to not take her drama so seriously.

A good way of doing that is to show her you're not intimidated by her by using humor to guide the conversation back to smiling, laughing and other feel good emotions.

For example: You call her and she says, "Look, I don't know why you are calling me. It's over. I'm not getting back with you" and you then laugh and say something like, "Okay, let's agree to never get back together. Before we part ways though, can you at least cook me up one of your beef stir-fries again? I'm hungry" and have a laugh with her about that.

Alternatively, you apologize to her and she says, “Sorry? Is that the best you can do? Well, it’s too little too late for that” and I don’t want to hear it! How dare you ask for my forgiveness after what you did” and you laugh and say, “True. How dare I ask for forgiveness. I’m the worst ex boyfriend in the world” and have a laugh at her for being such a drama queen about things and making you out to be worse than you actually were.

Remember: A woman wants to be with a man she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love (i.e. a guy who is confident and emotionally strong enough to stand up to her, reactivate her feelings and get her back), not a guy who annoys her by looking at her as though she is the leader of the relationship.

She doesn’t want to be the leader or feel like you are sucking up to her and always bending to her will.

You are the one with the balls, not her.

She wants to bend to your will because you deserve it (not because you force her too).

A woman will bend to a man’s will if he is a man that she can genuinely look up to and respect (i.e. because he is always emotionally strong, isn’t intimidated by anything or anyone and at the same time, is a really good man who loves her and cares about her).

So, man up and stop looking at her as being in control of the situation.

She hates it when you look at her in that way.

You have the balls, not her.

So step up to the plate and be the man at all times.

Even though she might be acting upset at anything you say these days, she secretly wants you to believe in yourself and use your confidence to guide you and her back into a relationship.

She will try to mess with your confidence and make you feel unworthy along the way, but that’s her job as a woman.

Her instincts are driving her to align herself with the most emotionally strong, emotionally masculine man she can find.

So, don’t sit around expecting her to suddenly stop throwing tantrums and start being Miss Sweetie or Little Miss Nice all the time for you for no reason.

It’s not going to happen.

She wants you to man up, rather than expecting her to soften up and make things easy for you.

Ironically, when you do man up, a woman slowly softens up and becomes more and more girly and sweet around you.

You get to see a side of her that other guys can never bring out of her because you are a real man.

That’s what a woman really wants.

She wants to be free to be the woman she really is, rather than having to put up with an insecure guy who can’t handle the pressure she applies to him.

When you offer her that, the amount of tantrums and bad moods will begin to diminish.

They won’t ever go away completely though because a woman will always be a woman and test her man.

However, when she has enough consistent evidence that she can trust in you, she will gradually soften up and stop being so hard on you.

The ultimate benefit though is that she will know that she cannot find another man like you out there, so she will respect you, feel attracted to you, love you and stick with you for life.

When she interacts with other guys, she will see very clearly that they simply do not have the kind of emotional strength and emotional masculinity that you have.

She will know that letting you go will be the biggest mistake of her life.

As a result, she never will.

Another reason why your ex may be getting upset at pretty much anything you say or do lately is thatâ€¦

2. She just doesn't respect you enough at the moment

[image: She doesn't respect you enough at the moment]

Being able to respect her man is essential for a woman.

Without it, she cannot feel attracted to him or be truly in love with him.

So, if you want to get her back, you must first get her respect back.

Here's the thingâ€¦

A woman usually doesn't break up with a guy on a whim.

It's almost always something that builds up over time and she eventually decides to pull the plug.

Over time, she loses respect and attraction for him (i.e. because certain things about his thinking and behavior are turning her off, such as him being too insecure or emotionally sensitive) and then falls out of love with him.

She eventually gets to the point where she can no longer justify staying in a relationship with a guy that she doesn't respect, feel attracted to or truly love anymore, so she ends it.

This is why, if a guy wants to get an ex back, he has to first get her respect and attraction back before she will open up to the idea of giving him another chance.

So, if your ex seems to get upset at anything you say to her these days, it may be because the way you're talking to her, interacting with her and coming across to her, isn't triggering those feelings inside of her right now.

Here are some examples of what can cause a woman to lose even more respect and attraction for her ex guy:

- He begs, pleads or even cries for another chance.
- He tells her that he hasn't been able to eat or sleep properly since the break up, or is having trouble concentrating at work or university.
- He tells her that she is his reason for living and without her, life seems pointless and not worth living.
- He sulks, throws tantrums and acts like a little boy when she doesn't listen to him.
- He pours his heart out to her in long letters or e-mails, going on and on about his feelings, wants and needs.
- He tries to make her feel guilty or feel pity for him by telling her how hurt he is about her leaving him.

- He does whatever she orders him to do (e.g. you can call me, but only once a week and we will only speak for 5 minutes) and hopes that she will take pity on him because he's being such a good boy.
- He gets angry or frustrated at her and accuses her of being stubborn, being a bitch or being selfish.
- He sucks up to her by being on his very best behavior.

When a guy is offering that to a woman after a break up, it only highlights to her that she made a good decision for herself to leave him.

After all, he has no idea how to be an emotionally strong man and re-attract her.

He's just begging, pleading, explaining, guilt tripping, hoping, pleading and needing.

He's not offering her anything that she can feel rushes of sexual and romantic attraction for.

Nothing.

So, it's no surprise that she remains closed off and gets annoyed or upset at pretty much anything he says or does.

She's just had enough of it.

She wants a man who understands how to be the kind of man who she can respect, feel attracted to and love.

If he can't be that man for her, she has to move on for her own benefit, rather than remaining stuck with a guy who just doesn't know how to make her happy.

So, if you want your ex to stop getting upset with you, you have to give her a reason to look up to you and respect you again as a man.

You can do that by adjusting the way that you talk to her and interact with her from now on (e.g. reacting differently to what she says and the way she behaves).

When you interact with her in ways that spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you, her attitude towards you will naturally change.

Rather than getting upset with anything you say to her, she will begin to calm down and enjoy talking to you again.

It will feel good to her to be interacting with you.

She will feel the urge to hug you, kiss you and have sex with you once again.

Before long, you and her will be back in a relationship, in love and enjoying great times together once again.

On the other hand, if you continue to interact with her in ways that turn her off, then she will feel the need to get away from you.

When you interact with her, she will continue taking everything you say in the wrong way and getting upset, because you're not saying and doing things that are making her have sexual or romantic feelings for you.

So, make sure that you approach her correctly from now on.

No more turning her off with your old approach.

Change up your approach, re-attract her and get back.

Another possible reason why your ex seems to get upset at anything that you say to her these days is becauseâ€¦!

3. She's just testing to see if you will panic

[image: She is just testing to see if you will panic]

For example: A guy calls his ex on the phone and asks, â€œHow have you been?â€

In most instances a woman will respond with something like, â€œFine,â€ or â€œFine thanks and you?â€

However, to test her ex, she might say something like, â€œWhy are you asking me that? It's none of your business.â€

A confident guy will realize that she's testing him and will playfully say something like, â€œGee, well someone is a great mood todayâ€ and have a laugh at her for being so snappy.

He might also add in, â€œYou're funny when you're in a bad moodâ€ just to mess with her and make her question why.

She might then ask, â€œWhy?â€ and he can say, â€œYou just look funny when you frown or seem annoyed about something. You have a funny looking faceâ€ just to mess with her even more.

He's saying that in a playful way of course.

The point is that he has the balls to get her out of her bad mood and into a more playful, light-hearted mood, rather than getting scared and starting to suck up to her in the hopes that she begins to be nice to him on the call.

That's what woman really wants to experience from a guy when she's being a bitch to him.

She doesn't want him to bow down to her, suck up to her or tip toe around her like a wussy.

She wants him to have the balls to put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way.

Not in a dominant, angry way.

Dominant, but loving.

You're still being a good guy.

You're not being an asshole about it or trying to intimidate her with your masculine anger.

That's not what a real man does.

A real man has the balls to lead a situation, while still being a good man.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't fall into the trap of being guarded or scared to say what you really want to say in any given moment.

Show her that you are a confident, emotionally strong guy, by having the balls to say or do whatever you want, while still being a good guy.

This is especially important when she is testing you by playing hard to get or acting upset at things you say or do (when she really isn't).

When you have the confidence to calmly do whatever it takes to get her back, regardless of what she says or does, you tap into her instinctive nature which tells her, â€œHe's a real man. No matter how much I test him and try to make him lose his cool, he just laughs and stays in control. He's the kind of man I can look up to, respect, love and feel attracted to. I have to stick with him. This is the kind of man that women struggle to find. I don't want to struggle to find a new man and waste time. I already have him and he's now so much more of a man. I've got to give him a chance.

She then begins to soften up and open back up to you and as a result, getting her back is an easy, natural process.

Another reason why your ex might be behaving in that way is because

4. She doesn't feel attracted to you anymore

If a woman stops feeling attracted to her ex and believes that he won't be able to make her have feelings for him again, she will feel as though it's just a waste of time to remain in contact with him.

As a result, she will then start behaving in a cold, distant way to make him lose interest in interacting with her.

If he continues calling her (or if they happen to work together, or go to the same university) and keeps trying to make her listen to him, she might get upset and say things like, I don't want to hear what you've got to say. We are broken up. It's over. Don't you get it? Just leave me alone.

Naturally, a guy may feel hurt and confused by her behavior and feel as though she is being selfish, stubborn or unreasonable.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that if she doesn't feel sexual attraction or respect, she will disconnect herself the love she used to feel for him and do whatever she can to push him away.

If a woman feels like her ex doesn't have what it takes to change and re-attract her, she will usually just cut off communication or be very difficult to talk to, until he eventually decides to leave her alone.

She might also become rude, cold or mean as a way of getting him to react in an angry or insecure way, so she has more reasons why she wants to remain broken up.

So, if you're serious about getting your ex back, you have to make sure that you maintain control over your emotions from now on, to ensure that you are making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

You can do that by always being confident and never feeling insecure when she tries to make you doubt yourself or feel unworthy.

Don't do that in an arrogant way though.

Just be easy-going and relaxed about your unbreakable belief in yourself.

That's what women respect.

When a guy can be confident at all times, while also being a good guy, women can't hold anything against him because he's not doing anything wrong.

He's just being a good guy and displaying the all-important trait of confidence, which she can't help but feel attracted to.

You can also make her feel attracted to you by using humor to get her out of her bad mood, rather than feeling nervous or unsure of yourself and getting upset with her for being in a bad mood, talking to you in a mean way or being difficult.

Let her see that you are a strong, good man and she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you, even if she tries to hide it from you.

When you trigger her feelings of sexual attraction for you by being a confident, emotionally strong, masculine man around her, regardless of what she says and does, she starts to see you with different eyes.

It happens naturally and automatically whether she wants it to or not.

She starts to think, “Why am I feeling attracted to him all of a sudden? Why do I miss having him in my life now? Why do I look forward to talking to him? Why am I worried about him finding another girl now?”

She then stops trying to push you away and becomes open to the idea of getting back together again.

The final reason why your ex seems to get upset at anything that you say to her these days is because

5. You don't understand the type of attraction experience she wants

Generally speaking, a woman will break up with a guy because something about his behavior caused her to lose respect and attraction for him as a man.

For example: He became very insecure and as a result, started being controlling, jealous and selfish in his behavior.

Alternatively, he became too arrogant and as a result, start taking her for granted, treating her badly and expecting her to just put up with it.

In most cases, a woman will put up with it for a while because a woman's natural instinct is to try to make a relationship work, rather than having to sleep with additional men.

Yet, when her guy doesn't change or just gets worse over time in other ways (e.g. in addition to being jealous, he now starts to take her for granted or makes her feel like a mother figure in his life rather than being a manly man for her), she eventually breaks up with him.

How about you?

Where did you go wrong with your ex?

What did you do, or what kind of guy did you become that eventually made her feel like she'd had enough and just had to leave you?

It's important that you get really clear on what turned her off, so you can then adjust, improve and change the correct things about yourself.

When you do that, you will be able to effectively re-attract her because you will be offering her an attraction experience that actually connects with her and what she really wants.

Where some guys go wrong is by offering a woman things that she doesn't want or care about, as a way of hopefully getting her back.

For example: A guy might decide to improve his physical appearance to attract her back.

He might change his style of dress (e.g. from t-shirts and jeans to wearing designer pants and shirts), get a new haircut, lose some weight or go to the gym and build some muscle.

Heâs hoping that the next time his ex sees him, sheâll think, âWow! Heâs so much hotter and sexier now! I canât believe that I let him go. Iâve been such a bitch to him since the break up. I need to apologize to him right away and give him another chance.â

Yet, she doesn't.

Why?

While she might appreciate the effort that he put into improving himself physically, if he has neglected to improve himself emotionally (e.g. the way he thinks, acts and behaves), then the changes to his physical appearance are not going to really count.

She will feel turned off by him emotionally (e.g. because he's still insecure, still giving her too much power) and as a result, she will look at his physical appearance in a negative light.

Even though his new haircut might be the latest style or his shirt might be very expensive, she will look at it as dorky, try hard or feel as though it just doesn't look good on him.

Not knowing what else to do, a guy might then try to make her feel pity for him by saying something like, âI did all this for you. I didn't want to buy new clothes or get my haircut, but I did it anyway. I want to show you how much I care. I want to show you that I'm putting in the effort.â

Yet, that only annoys her even more because she realizes that he has no idea how a woman's attraction really works.

He's trying to attract her with his improved appearance, which is what a woman needs to do to get a man back.

To get a woman back, you have to attract her with your improved emotional attractiveness (e.g. you're so much more emotionally strong now, you're able to take charge and be the man, you're more charismatic now because you're not suppressing your personality out of fear of being judged).

So, make sure that you're focusing on the right things.

Additionally, make sure that you're not giving her the impression that you're trying to manipulate her into getting back with you (e.g. by wearing new clothes, acting nicer than you actually are).

A woman doesn't want to feel like she is being manipulated into giving a guy another chance with her.

She wants to see that he now truly understands the type of attraction experience she really wants from a man and is now able to give it to her.

For example: He thinks that she wants him to be even nicer to her, but she actually wants him to be more real and manly and stop putting up with bad behavior.

She wants him to put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way, but he thinks she wants him to suck up to her even more and essentially beg for another chance.

If you want her back for real, you've got to truly understand what she really wants and start offering that to her when you interact with her from now on.

For example: Don't tell her that you can't live without her when she really wants is for you to be more emotionally independent.

Give her what she really wants.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex is Playing Hard to Get. How Can I Get Her to Stop the Games?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If she's playing hard to get and won't give you another chance, just use these 5 tips and she will change back to how she used to be with you!|

1. Stop chasing her and start joking around with her

[image: Stop chasing her and start joking around with her]

You've tried chasing her and pursuing her to get her back, right?

She doesn't like that approach.

It's too stressful and it doesn't make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you.

In fact, all of your efforts to hopefully convince her to give you another chance, end up making you appear desperate (even if you're not).

As you may know, women aren't attracted to desperation in men, so stop chasing in a hurried, "Please give me another chance!!" kind of way.

What should you do instead?

Use every interaction that you have with her as an opportunity to make her laugh, smile and feel good talking to you.

Don't try to get her back.

Just get her laughing, smiling and feeling good every time she interacts with you and she will the naturally want you back.

She will see that you're not desperately chasing her, while also realizing that she misses you when you and her aren't interacting.

She will then start to question why she is missing you and conclude that it must be a sign that she is supposed to get back with you.

As a result, you get her back without having to pressure her into it.

Here's the thing!|

Sometimes, a guy becomes so desperate to get his ex back that he starts acting out of character and being someone he's not.

For example: He might!|

- Beg and plead with her to give him a chance to make it up to her and do better this time around.
- Apologize to her over and over again.
- Keep asking her if they can start over again and just forget about the mistakes he made.
- Send her loads of texts about random things as a way of staying on her mind and hopefully stopping her from moving on.
- Tell her how much he still cares for her and how lost he feels without her.

- Pour his heart out in a letter and explain that he will never be able to love another woman the way that he loves her.
- Tell her that no other guy would love her the way he does.
- Show up at her home or work and demand that she speak to him.
- Send her emotional, needy texts to hopefully make her feel sorry for him.

and the list goes on.

Yet, rather than make her think, “Aww” that’s so sweet. He’s really trying hard! So, I should stop messing him around and just give him another chance, a woman will think something like, “He’s driving me crazy! He’s like a leech that won’t get off me. He is always crying, whining and being sad and wimpy like a girl. Doesn’t he realize that nothing about his behavior is making me want to talk to him again, let alone give him another chance? Doesn’t he realize that this isn’t about him anymore? It’s about me. My feelings. Not his. He doesn’t get it. He doesn’t even realize that he has to make me have feelings for him first. He just wants me back so he can feel better about himself. I’m over it! I’m sick and tired of having to be nice to him.”

So, even though you might feel desperate about wanting to get her back, don’t show her that because it will turn her off and push her away even further.

Remember: Before your ex decides to give you another chance, she first wants to see that you have changed and improved some of the things that caused her to break up with you in the first place.

For example: You were too controlling because you doubted your value to her and feared losing her, you were disrespectful towards her views and opinions about things or you became too emotionally sensitive and stopped being manly enough for her.

Have you changed, improved or adjusted the things that turned her off?

That’s what really matters.

It’s not about telling her that you’ve changed though.

You have to let her experience it, rather than telling her that you’ve changed.

So, if you’ve been pursuing her in a way that has been turning her off and annoying her, you need to stop using that approach from now on.

What should you do instead?

Just focus on making her laugh, smile and feel good around you.

When you do that, the conversations and interactions will flow more easily and she will be able to pick up on the fact that you have changed.

For example: While talking to you, she will notice that you’re not insecure like you used to be, or that you’re not trying to control her like you did in the past.

You won’t even need to tell her that you’ve changed.

She will be feeling good, looking at you in a positive light and noticing the changes for herself.

As a result, her guard will come down and she will stop playing so hard to get with you.

The next thing you can do is to

2. Attract her in the ways that she really wants

[image: Attract her in the ways that she really wants]

Do you know the real reasons why your ex broke up with you, or did she give you some vague excuse like, “I need some space to sort things out in my life,” or “I’m just not ready to settle down right now,” or “I just don’t have feelings for you anymore?”

Most women give vague excuses or reasons for the break up, without ever really explaining the actual things that are turning her off and what a guy would need to change, adjust or improve to successfully get her back.

Why?

She doesn’t want to give him instructions on how to get her back.

Why?

At the point of the break up, a woman has usually had enough.

For example: During the relationship, she may have tried to hint and give her guy clues as to what was turning her off.

She may have said, “I need you to accept me for who I am and stop trying to change me into someone I’m not,” but the guy didn’t listen.

He kept being controlling, insecure and unloving and just expected her to put up with it because they had great sex, or used to be so in love.

Yet, she didn’t want to just keep putting up with it.

As a result, she started to change into a moody, grumpy or nagging girlfriend (or wife) and stopped being as affectionate and loving as she used to be.

In reaction to her change, the guy then became more angry, irritable, controlling and demanding.

She then became even less loving, interested and involved in the relationship.

The downward spiral continued on until she eventually said something like, “Enough! I don’t want this anymore. I’m leaving you.”

Each relationship will break up for subtle things that turn into bigger and bigger problems over time, so it’s important that you understand where you really went wrong with her.

When you truly understand where you went wrong, you can then make the correct changes to your thinking, behavior and approach to her and the relationship from now on.

When she can sense those changes in you, it will be like a breath of fresh air for her because you finally get it.

She doesn’t need to explain all the fine details to you and try to get you to understand the subtle things that had been turning her off.

You know it now and are able to attract her in the ways that she really wants (e.g. if you became too insecure and emotionally sensitive in the relationship, you are now so confident and emotionally masculine).

Attracting her in the ways that she really wants is what works to get a woman back.

So, don’t waste time on any other method.

If you do, you will just waste your time and energy, get rejected by her and end up feeling more hurt and disappointed than before.

For example: A classic mistake that some guys make is using relationship advice that they picked up from watching TV or movies, as a way of getting his ex back.

For example: A guy mightâ€¦|

- Send his ex a bunch of flowers with a card saying something like, “Iâ€¦m so sorry! Please forgive meâ€¦ or, I love you so much. Please give me one more chance. xoxoxo”
- Get her favorite radio station to play ‘their song’ on air when sheâ€™s likely to be listening.
- Blow up hundreds of balloons and place them around the exterior of her house or apartment with the words, â€¦Iâ€¦m sorryâ€¦ or, I love youâ€¦ printed on them.
- Arriving at her home or work with flowers, chocolates, a teddy bear or some other gift to hopefully show how much he cares and how sorry he is.
- Write her a long love letter or e-mail, explaining his feelings, expressing his sorrow, apologizing, asking for forgiveness and asking for another chance.

That sort of thing works well in the movies, but not in real life.

In real life, no matter how flattered a woman may feel initially, none of these things show her that he has changed the things that really matter to her.

For example: If a woman wants her guy to be more manly, him sending her flowers, playing love songs or decorating her yard with balloons isn’t going to work.

She will think something like, â€¦Does he really think that being more romantic and expressing his feelings is what I want? He doesn’t get it.â€¦

Yet, if she’s the sort of women who wants to play games with her ex and mess with his head, she might say something like, â€¦Oh, wowâ€¦ thanks. That’s really nice of you. You didn’t have to do that. It’s very thoughtful of youâ€¦ to make him feel like he has a chance with her.

Hearing words like that is enough to make most guys think, “Cool! She’s being nice to me! She is open to getting back with me. I’m nearly there!”

Then, when he suggests a meet up, she says something along the lines of, â€¦How easy do you think I am? Do you think that flowers or balloons are enough? Youâ€™re going to have to do a lot more than that to get me back.â€¦

He might then feel angry that she showed interest after he was so nice to her, but then rejected his offer to catch up 1 on 1 and hang out.

Yet, she doesn’t feel like she’s done anything wrong.

Why?

He isn’t attracting her in the ways that really matter to her.

He’s just copying what he’s seen on TV, in movies and in advertisements.

It’s just superficial things (e.g. flowers, balloons, a card) that he has bought and is presenting to her.

Alternatively, it’s just an e-mail or a letter that he’s typed up or written.

It’s not him interacting with her and making her feel attracted in the ways that really matter to her (e.g. she wants him to be more masculine and ballsy, she wants him to be more driven in life, she wants him to stop giving her so much power).

He might think that she is being a bitch and needs to stop, but she thinks that he needs to stop being a sappy romantic actor and start attracting her in ways that actually matter.

So, make sure that the next time you interact with your ex, you clearly understand her real reasons for breaking up with you and are able to attract her in the ways that actually matter to her.

Don't try to gloss things over with romantic gestures, or distract her with deep and meaningful conversations about how much you feel for her and how sorry you are.

She will see that as you being selfish, because it's all about you getting what you want from her.

So, if you want her back, you've got to focus on making her have feelings for you by attracting her in the ways that actually matter to her, rather than trying to change her mind by talking about your feelings, your realizations and your wants and needs.

When you make her feel heard and understood, you gain back one of the things that a critical for a successful relationship between a man and a woman; respect.

If she respects you, she will then allow herself to feel attracted to you again and from there, getting her to reconnect with the love she used to feel is simply a matter of time.

For some couples, it happens right away and for others it takes days for the love of the woman to come flooding back.

Next tipâ□!

3. Don't take her games so seriously

[image: Don't take her games so seriously]

You literally need to laugh at her and be more playful when she is being a pain in the butt by playing hard to get.

Just use it as an opportunity to create some laughter and feel good emotions between you and her, rather than taking her behavior so seriously.

For example: If you ask her to catch up and she says, "I'm not sure. I need more time" you can laugh and say, "Okay, I'll call you back in 10 minutes" and then hang up the phone.

Then, call her back in 10 minutes and say, "So, do you need another 10 minutes?" and have a laugh with her.

Then say something like, "Anyway, let's just catch up and say hi" and continue on from there.

Don't get angry, upset or frustrated if she plays hard to get.

Remain confident and lead the way to you and her getting back together.

This is what she will be looking for from you.

She wants to see if you have the balls to handle the pressure.

So, one of the worst things that a guy can do when his ex woman is playing hard to get, is to get caught up in her fake drama and become upset, angry or disheartened.

Women hate seeing that.

Why?

A woman wants to see that a man can maintain control of his emotions and guide a situation to the outcome he wants, without the help or support of a woman.

This is why women always test men by being difficult, changing their mind all the time and throwing tantrums.

She wants to see what kind of man he really is.

If he regularly fails her tests, then she loses faith in his ability to handle himself out there in the world.

As a result, she stops feeling safe with him and starts feeling attracted to other men who seem more manly and grounded than her boyfriend/husband.

She doesn't want to have to leave him and find a new guy, but she will if she has to.

Her instincts will tell her to leave if she doesn't feel safe with him as the leader of the relationship.

A lot of guys don't know that and mistakenly demand that a woman be nice, gentle, sweet, consistent and logical all the time, rather than testing him by being difficult.

Yet, she can't stop.

It's her natural instinct to align herself with a guy who is emotionally strong enough to handle the challenges that life throws at him, without sulking, seeking pity or losing control of his emotions.

So, what are some of the mistakes that guys make when their ex woman is playing games with them?

Mistake 1: Asking her to be serious and stop playing games

A guy might get annoyed and say, â€œWhy won't you just be straight with me? Just grow up and stop playing games! If you want to get back together then just say so. If you don't, then stop messing me around. Just tell me what you want.â€œ

Yet, here's the thing!

In most cases, she is just testing to see if he can remain confident and believe in himself when she is being cold, bitchy or playing hard to get.

No matter how strongly he demands that she stop playing games, she never actually will.

Mistake 2: Saying how much it hurts him that she is playing games with him

A woman's breeding instincts prevent her from feeling sorry for a guy who can't handle her kind of pressure.

She will put up with it for a while in a relationship if she is otherwise happy and in love, but if he doesn't level up and become an emotionally stronger man, her instincts will be too hard to ignore anymore.

She will begin to feel turned off by him at a deep, primal level and eventually break up with him.

So, after the break up, she isn't going to want to take pity on her ex, unless she is really missing him and having a hard time living without him.

If she's doing fine and doesn't really care about leaving him, then his pleas for her to stop hurting him by playing games will be secretly laughed at by her.

Many guys don't know that though, so they try to seek pity from their ex woman for how badly she is making him feel.

For example: A guy might say, “How can you be so cold and heartless? Don’t you remember how in love we used to be? Doesn’t anything I’ve ever done for you count now? You’re acting like what we had didn’t mean anything to you. Can’t you see how much you’re hurting me with your actions? You have ruined my trust in relationships. I will never care about another girl the way I care about you. I love you with all of my heart and I’ve done my best to be the best boyfriend/husband I could and this is what I get?”

He’s hoping that if she notices how much her actions are making him suffer, she will feel sorry for him and then stop messing him around.

Yet, she doesn’t.

Her instincts are telling her, “He’s not strong enough for a girl like you. You won’t feel safe with him. Find a stronger man. Move on.”

Mistake 3: Ignoring her texts to hopefully beat her at her own game, but it then backfires when she ignores him even more

When a guy can’t get his ex to stop playing games with him (e.g. being friendly one minute and cold and distant the next, texting him things like “I miss you” and then, when with something like, “I miss you too. Let’s meet up,” she then ignores him for days), he might decide to give her a taste of her own medicine by ignoring her back.

Yet, in most cases, when a woman has stopped feeling respect, attraction and love for a guy and he hasn’t actively done anything to make her reconnect with those feelings, she’s just not going to care much about the fact that he isn’t contacting her anymore.

Instead, she might think something like, “Let’s see which one of us lasts out longer, you, or me. I’m betting you want me back a lot more than I want you. So, go ahead and ignore me. Sooner or later I know you’re going to crack. Let’s see how long you can last before you text me again.”

Then, while she is ignoring him, she starts going out with her single girlfriends, using dating apps like Tinder and potentially dating a guy from work (or university) who has been interested in her for a while.

Soon enough, she’s having sex and possibly even falling in love with a new guy and forgetting all about her ex.

So, from now on, you need to stop taking her games so seriously.

See her mind games for what they really are; tests.

She’s testing to see if you will crack under the pressure she is applying to you now.

To pass her tests, you need to remain confident and believe in your attractiveness and value to her, no matter what she says or does to try and make you feel insecure or unworthy.

4. Make her miss you

Making an ex woman miss you is not about ignoring her for weeks, or even months at a time and hoping she will wake up one morning and say to herself, “What has happened to me? I haven’t heard from my ex in such a long time and I really miss him. What if he’s met another woman and moved on? OMG! I better call him up right away before it's too late!!!

It would be nice if getting an ex woman back was that simple, but it's not.

The truth is that if a woman doesn't have feelings for her ex guys anymore and he starts ignoring her, she will usually just use that time apart to move on and forget all about him.

She might miss him a little bit in the beginning, but if her feelings for him aren't strong enough, she will soon forget about him and begin to move on.

So, what should you do instead?

Interact with her, re-attract her and build up some sexual tension between you.

Then, once you've got her thinking things like, "This is really so nice. I never thought I'd feel this way about him again. I'm actually happy and excited every time I hear from him now," back off for a few days (nothing longer than 3 to 7 days) and then get in touch with her again.

Whenever she interacts with you, she feels attracted now and because you're leaving gaps of 3 days in between, she gets to miss you and want to hear from you.

As a result, she may even contact you and suggest meeting up or even getting back together.

However, if your ex is a bit of hard case and is refusing to open up to again, just repeat the process again until her walls come down.

5. Hook up with her and let her experience the new and improved you

At this point, your ex will probably be feeling a lot of sexual attraction for the new and improved you.

She may be thinking, "I'm tired of playing hard to get. I want us to stop the games and get back together and I think he's ready for that too."

She may then start giving you signs that she's open to hooking up again, (e.g. she suggest you and her go out for a drink at night, rather than meet for coffee in the afternoon, she invites you to her place for dinner, she sends you a sexy photo of herself, she keeps complimenting you on being different now and telling you how much she likes it).

Whatever the case, if you and her are hanging out together and she seems attracted and open, just lean in and give her a quick kiss.

If she doesn't pull away, deepen the kiss and either suggest you go to her place or yours, or if you're there already, proceed to having sex.

From there, the most important thing to do is keep building her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

The more you build on her feelings, the less she will want to play games with you, because she will genuinely begin to fear the idea of losing you.

You will have her back and she won't want to play games anymore.

She will just want to be with you and be a good girl for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Does Your Ex Secretly Want You to Fight For the Relationship?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

After a break up, a woman will often hope that her ex man will rise up to the challenge, re-attract her and get her back.

She won't make it very obvious to him though, but she will give him signs and hope that he picks up on them, takes action and gets her back.

Here are the 7 signs to look out for...

1. She is still open to talking to you or texting with you

When a woman does this after a break up, it's usually because she is hoping that you have what it takes to reactivate her feelings of respect and sexual attraction and then guide her back into a relationship.

If you are able to make her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she will feel compelled to give the relationship another chance because it won't feel like she is over you anymore.

She will feel drawn to you in a sexual and romantic way, so the thought of leaving you and never seeing you again will just be too painful for her at that point.

So, if your ex is still open to communicating with you, it's important that you look at it as a sign that she might secretly want you to fight for the relationship and get her back.

It doesn't mean that she has forgiven you for your mistakes, or is still very attracted to you and in love with you.

Instead, it just means that she is open to the possibility of you re-attracting her and getting her back.

If she was trying to avoid that possibility, she would delete your number, block your number, unfriend you from social media and ask you to leave her alone and never speak to her again.

If she is open to communicating with you, she is almost certainly open to getting back with you if you can play your cards right.

Essentially, she's looking out to see:

- If you have made some changes and can now give her the kind of attraction experience she always wanted, but never got from you.
- If you have the confidence and emotional courage to get her back, especially when she's being cold, distant and doing her best to discourage you.
- If you can read between the lines/pick up on her subtle hints that she does want you back, but simply isn't being very open about it at the moment.

This is why, when getting a woman back after a break up, you always have to be confident and look at her actions as a sign that she secretly wants you back.

There's no point doubting yourself because it will turn her off and make you hesitate to take action when you need to.

If you hesitate (e.g. you don't call, you don't push for a meet up, you don't hug her or kiss her at the meet up), you will most likely lose her, even though she was secretly hoping that you would fight for the relationship and get her back.

So, you just have to be confident about this and do what it takes to get her back.

Confidence is so important.

It's one of the core personality traits that women find irresistibly attractive in men.

It's kind of like how attracted we are to physical aspects of a woman, such as her breasts, thigh gap or feminine looking face.

A woman's physical appearance is attractive to us men as a man's confidence is to women.

In fact, in most cases, a woman would rather be with a confident, average looking guy than a good-looking, insecure guy.

Confidence in a man is so important to women, so make sure that you have got truckloads of confidence to offer her during the ex back process.

Don't be offering her insecurity, self-doubt and nervousness and expecting her to want you back.

That's not how it works.

You've got to be confident.

The more confident you are from now on, the more naturally attractive you will be to your ex.

If you want to be confident, you have to believe in yourself no matter what she says or does to make you feel insecure.

If you can do that, you will be able to effectively use every interaction with her, whether over the phone or via text, to re-spark her feelings for you (i.e. because you're being very confident) and get her back.

However, if she secretly wants you to rise up to the occasion and fight for the relationship, but you're sitting around doubting yourself, then soon enough, you will watch on in disappointment as she moves on with another guy and is happy with him instead.

So, if you want to avoid losing your opportunity with her, just rise up to the challenge, get her back and then enjoy the great times ahead with her.

Another sign that your ex might be hoping that you fight for the relationship and get her back is thatâ

2. She likes your posts on social media

[image: She likes your posts on social media]

There are several reasons why a woman might click like on her ex's social media posts.

For example: A woman might do that becauseâ

- She wants him back and is trying to signal that to him by liking his social media posts.
- She is a nice person and is trying to make her ex feel better after the break up.
- She's trying to show him that she's not holding a grudge against him for what happened and still thinks of him in a positive way.

- She wants to still be friends on social media, even though theyâ€¢re not together anymore.
- She wants to mess with his head (e.g. he begins asking himself, â€¢What does it mean when she likes my social media posts? Is she still interested in getting back? What should I do? Should I post more? Should I contact her? Do I need to wait until she gives me a clearer sign?â€¢).
- She wants to make him contact her, so she can then reject him again and get emotional revenge on him for what happened between them.

As you can see, there isn't just one possible reason why your ex will click like on your social media posts.

She could be up to no good and just trying to mess with your head.

Yet, focusing on the potential negatives isn't going to help you feel confident enough to contact her and get her back.

So, what I recommend is thisâ€¢!

If your ex likes one or more of your social media posts, you should believe that the #1 reason why she did it is because she wants you back and is encouraging you to take action and fight for the relationship.

You could be wrong, but it doesn't matter.

What matters the most when getting a woman back is that you interact with her and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you.

Even if she was initially intending just to mess with your head, she will quickly change her mind about you because you will have changed how she feels by making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

All of a sudden, she will begin thinking things like, “Why do I miss him so much all of a sudden? After we spoke on the phone the other day, all I’ve been doing is thinking about him. Maybe this is a sign that we’re meant to get back together. I’ve got to follow my heart and stop messing with him.”

Seconds later, you get a text on your phone and she's saying hi.

From there, you've got to follow through and get her to meet up with you in person, so you can properly re-attract her and get her back.

Another sign that your ex might secretly want you to fight for the relationship isâ€¢!

3. She contacts you to ask how you're doing

When a woman doesn't have feelings for ex anymore, sheâ€¢s usually not going to care about what happens to him or what heâ€¢s going through.

Instead, sheâ€¢s going to be thinking something along the lines of, â€¢I hope he misses me and feels horrible for what he did,â€¢ or â€¢I hope heâ€¢s really suffering,â€¢ or even, â€¢I hope his heart is broken and he never finds another woman like me.â€¢

Harsh, I know, but that's relationships for you.

After a break up, things change.

Women can become very nasty, rude, mean and cold.

There are reasons for that though!

So, if your ex is calling you up and asking things like, Are you okay? Have you been taking care of yourself? it's most likely because she still has some feelings for you.

Don't doubt it.

Doubting your attractiveness to her only makes you come across as insecure, which is unattractive to women.

You've got to see it as a sign that she really does have some remaining feelings for you and felt the need to contact you because she was thinking about you and missing you.

So, what you need to do is use the interaction as an opportunity to spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love.

If you do that, she then finds it even more difficult to remain broken up with you.

She feels drawn to you and wants you back.

Another sign she might be hoping that you fight for the relationship and get her back is

4. She tries to keep you in her life by asking you to help her with random things

Yes, your ex may be a manipulative bitch who likes the idea of keeping you around, giving you hope that she might want you back and then using you to be her personal slave, but chances are, she isn't.

Right?

She's not that evil, right?

Hopefully not!

In most cases, women aren't bitches like that, so if your ex is still contacting you and asking you to help her with random things, it should mean that she's simply looking for excuses to interact with you.

This is a good thing!

She's hoping that you see through her actions and realize that she really is missing you and hoping that you are confident enough to get her back.

Think about it this way!

After a break up, most women cut off communication with their ex guy and don't want to see him, hear from him or think about him again.

They do that to help themselves move on with less pain and heartache after a break up.

[image: Coming up with excuses to see you]

So, if your ex keeps you around with excuses like, You know that I'm hopeless with DIY stuff. I need to hang a painting on the wall of my new apartment. Can you please come over and take care of it for me sometime? I wouldn't bother you if I could do it myself. I also don't have anyone else that I can ask to help me. So, can you do that for me? it may be a sign that she secretly wants you to fight for the relationship and get her back.

The key is to use every opportunity you get to be around her as a way of reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Don't make the mistake that so many guys make with an ex and think, "I mustn't do anything that might scare her off. I have to behave like a nice, sweet, platonic friend when we're together and simply focus on making myself so helpful that she will realize how much she needs me and we can then get back together again."

No.

If you want your ex back, you have to make her feel strong sexual and romantic feelings for you based on the changes you've made to yourself since the break up (e.g. you're more emotionally masculine now, you have the confidence to use ballsy humor, you're more charismatic).

You also have to have the courage to flirt with her and create some sexual tension between you.

When you approach the ex back process in that way, it's so much easier and quicker to get a woman back.

On the other hand, if you focus on being on your best behavior and treating her like a friend, she may think, "There's no spark between us anymore and he probably feels that too. Maybe that's why we haven't gotten back together yet. I should forget about a relationship and start to move on. It's over now."

Another sign to look out for!

5. She talks positively about good times that you and her shared

As always, there is no guarantee that when a woman is saying things like, "We sure did share some good times together, didn't we?" or "Remember the time our car broke down in the rain and we both got soaked wet while trying to hitch a ride home? That was fun. We shared a lot of those great moments together," that she wants to get back together.

However, it's possible, right?

Of course it is!

She could be trying to hint to you that she is looking at your relationship in a positive light and is hoping that you do something to get you and her back together.

The question is though!

How are you going to view it?

Are you going to think about it in an insecure way and say to yourself, "Nah! She's just being nice. It doesn't really mean anything," or are you going to say, "Ha! She's clearly still not over me. I can get her back. I'm going to use every opportunity from now on to show her that her feelings for me are real and only getting stronger?"

Remember: The more confident you are about your attractiveness and value to her, the more naturally attracted she will feel to you.

Be warned though!

It's not about telling her that you feel confident though.

Don't tell her.

Just let her sense it based on how you talk, behave and react to her.

[image: Re-attract her with your confidence]

She will pick up on it and it will naturally make her feel more attracted to you.

If you tell her, you are putting her in the position where she essentially has to say, “Oh, good on you. I’m proud of you,” which then makes her feel like a mother or big sister figure in your life.

If you just show her and let her experience it, she then feels like your girl.

and that’s what she ultimately wants.

Another sign that she might be hoping that you fight for the relationship and get her back is

6. She doesn’t want to talk about her dating other guys, or only talks about it briefly and then changes the conversation

Again, there is more than one reason why a woman might avoid talking about dating other guys with her ex.

For example:

- She’s not sure if she wants to move on, or try to patch things up with her ex.
- She wants to fully secure a relationship with a replacement guy before she tells her ex about it.
- She doesn’t want him to move on before she does.
- She’s only just opened herself up to dating again and it feels weird discussing it with her ex.
- She’s still angry with him for what happened and doesn’t want to open up to him.
- She doesn’t want him to become angry about it, or potentially turn violent.
- She doesn’t feel like she has to tell him about it now that they’re no longer a couple.

Alternatively (and this is reason that you should believe is true for you), she doesn’t want to talk about dating other guys in case her ex starts believing that she’s over him and then decides to move on and find himself another woman.

Rather than discouraging him by saying she’s dating again, she may simply avoid talking about dating other guys and if he pushes her for an answer, she might say something like, “Yes, I’ve been on a few dates, but it didn’t work out. I’m not ready for a relationship yet.”

So, if your ex is doesn’t want to discuss the topic of whether she is dating other guys and hasn’t moved on yet, just look at it as a positive sign that she secretly wants you back.

Finally, another sign that your ex might want you to fight for the relationship is

7. She regularly asks if you’re seeing anyone new

Of course, your ex may just be asking if you’re seeing anyone new because she doesn’t want you to move on first.

Alternatively, she might be curious to find out if you have been able to move on, or if you’re struggling to find a girl after having your confidence destroyed when she dumped you.

There are many different potential reasons for her asking about it.

However, what I've found by helping 100s of men to get women back is that, more often than not, when a woman asks her ex if he's seeing any women, it's usually because she is missing him and secretly hoping that they get back together.

So, what should you do if your ex asks, "So, are you seeing anyone new?"

Rather than saying, "No," to make her feel sorry for you, or saying, "Yes," to hopefully make her feel jealous, just use it as an opportunity to spark her feelings for you.

How?

Turn it into a joke and make her laugh and smile.

For example: You might say in a joking way, "Of course not! I'm just sitting home alone pining for you. I haven't taken a shower in weeks and I've put on about 200 pounds/kilos from emotional eating," and have a laugh with her about it.

Alternatively, you might say, "Yes, I've got 5 new girlfriends. Is that okay?" and then have a laugh to show her that you're joking.

Alternatively, you might say, "Yes, I got married last week. We eloped to Vegas and had a drive through wedding" and then have a laugh to show her that you're joking.

Approaching her question in that way ensures that you are doing the most important thing of all.

What is that?

Making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She feels respect for you for having the balls to joke around in a moment like that, rather than feeling like you need to be totally serious and be on your best behavior.

She feels attracted to you because you have the ability to make her laugh, smile and enjoy talking to you.

As you may have heard many women say, "I like a guy who can make me laugh."

This is especially important in stressful or uncomfortable situations.

It takes balls and confidence to take a risk to joke around in a moment like that.

A woman might test her ex by pretending to not find it funny and saying, "Be serious. This isn't a time for joking around."

What should he do then?

Laugh at her for being so serious and say something like, "Oh, Little Miss Serious Pants. Okay, let's be serious. Everything needs to be so serious. Now that we've broken up, there can be no laughing, no smiling and especially no feeling good. We've got to be serious, unhappy and not ever smile. Oh, okay," and then have a laugh.

In other words, he doesn't let himself get bowled over by the fake anger of his ex woman.

He doesn't crumble under her pressure and start sucking up to her.

He remains confident and believes in his attractiveness to her.

That is what works.

Wasting Precious Time

The biggest mistake that I see men make when they want to get an ex woman back is that they waste time.

A guy will waste days, weeks or even months wondering, â€œDoes my ex secretly want me to fight for the relationship? Is she giving me signs that Iâ€™m not picking up on?â€œ

Meanwhile, as each day passes, she becomes happier without him and begins to forget him for days without even thinking about him.

She moves on.

Yet, he is waiting around, wasting time and not doing anything to get her back.

When she doesn't come running back after days, weeks or months, he hopes that it's because she doesn't miss him yet and all he needs to do is stay out of her life for a bit longer (e.g. 30 or 60 more days).

Yet, that time passes too and she still doesn't come back.

Not knowing what else to do, a guy might then say to himself, â€œMaybe if I give her another month or two of space, it will give her a chance to really miss me. She will then contact me and make it obvious that she wants me back.â€œ

Yet, in almost all ex back cases where a guy is trying to get a woman back (who no longer feels attracted to him) that just doesn't happen.

She simply moves on without him.

She gets used to not having him in her life, meets new guys, has sex and possibly falls in love with a new guy.

How about you?

Have you been wasting time hoping that she will come back on her own?

Ignoring a woman for 30 to 60 days works on some women who can't deal with the pain of losing their man, but most women have no trouble at all moving on and finding a replacement man to fulfill their sexual and emotional needs.

So, if your gut instinct is telling you that your ex might secretly want you to fight for the relationship, you need to be the more emotionally strong one of the two of you and just do what it takes to get her back.

[image: Do what it takes to get her back]

You need to do what it takes to get her back even if she initially gives you mixed messages, or is a little distant and closed off.

Don't expect her to be nice and easy and give you super obvious hints, such as suddenly sending a text message like, “I miss you so much. Can we talk?”

That would be great to get such an obvious, direct text from your ex, but after helping men to get ex women back for many years now, I rarely come across cases where a woman makes it that easy.

In most cases, the woman doesn't want to make it easy because she wants to test her guy's confidence, avoid looking desperate herself or avoid getting rejected if she shows interest when he has lost interest and no longer wants her back.

This is why you just need to be strong and do what it takes to get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Can I Get My Ex to Stop Being So Indecisive and Just Make a Decision to Be With Me or Not?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

6 possible reasons why your ex is being indecisive:

1. You're not making her feel enough respect and attraction to give her certainty about a future with you

[image: Should I get back with him?]

To make your ex stop being so indecisive and just make a decision about being with you or not, you have to make it worth her while.

Get her to the point where she's thinking, "I would be crazy to let him go now because he really has changed. If another woman meets him, she will like the new him and maybe I'll then lose him forever."

How can you do that?

By showing her that you really have changed, rather than promising that you will change or that she will feel differently if she is just patient with you.

Make her feel as though moving on without you will be a huge mistake that will come back to haunt her in the long term.

Don't tell her that.

Make her feel it.

For example: When you interact with her and she's saying things like, "I don't know what I want," or "I'm not sure if I want to get back together again," stay calm, cool and in control.

Rather than getting upset and saying something like, "Hey, I'm tired of you messing me around. How long do you plan on stringing me along? Just make a decision one way or another so that we can both get on with our lives. Stop being so indecisive," you just need to focus on making her have feelings for you in that moment.

How?

By showing her that regardless of how confused she might be feeling, you always remain confident in yourself and in your attractiveness and value to her.

You don't get upset, you don't doubt yourself and you don't panic and worry that you're losing her.

You know that you're more than good enough for her and that she is going to give you and her another chance, so you remain confident and relaxed as you talk to her.

So, if she says something like, "I'm not sure I want to get back together again. I need more time to think about it," you can say in a joking way, "Sure. How long do you need? 10, 20, 30 years? Will that be enough? Let's make it 60 years. By then you'll be old and grey and covered in cobwebs, but maybe I'll be into collecting antiques at that point. Who knows," and have a laugh with her about it.

By maintaining your confidence under pressure like that, she won't be able to help herself from feeling respect and attraction for the new you.

She will then begin to wonder, â€œMaybe he is the right guy for me after all. Maybe we do have a future together. I like how I'm feeling. I don't want to lose him now.â€

On the other hand, if you get upset and demand that she stop being so indecisive and just make a decision to be with you or not, she almost certainly won't obey you.

Instead, she will just keep giving you vague answers until you and her drift apart, or she meets someone else and can then say to you, â€œSorry, but I've met someone else and I've made my decision. It's over between us.â€

So, don't put yourself in that unfortunate position.

If you want her to change her mind, then focus on changing how she feels whenever you interact with her from now on.

Focus on making her feel attracted, not annoyed.

Focus on making her feel respect, not resentment.

Focus on making her feel love, not hate or indifference towards you.

When you focus on making her feel positive, desirable emotions, she will naturally decide that she wants to be back with you or at least give you another chance to see how it goes.

Another reason why your ex might be indecisive at the moment is that

2. You're not giving her any space to miss you

[image: You aren't giving her any space to miss you]

Sometimes, a guy will remain in constant contact with his ex after a break up.

For example: He texts her multiple times in a day, sends her long e-mails, messages her on social media and calls her on the phone as a way of staying on her mind and making his intentions (i.e. that he wants to get back together again) absolutely clear to her.

He wants to make sure that she knows exactly how much he feels for her, how serious he is about getting her back and how destroyed he would be if she didn't give him another chance.

In some cases, a guy might even try to make her feel pity for him by sending her messages like, â€œWhy are you doing this to me? Are you having fun messing me around like this? Don't you realize how much I love you? Being apart from you like this is killing me,â€ as a way of trying to guilt trip her into making a decision about the relationship.

Yet, rather than make her think, â€œOh, no! He's right. I'm being so unfair to him! He deserves an answer on my decision right away,â€ she just feels pressured and this may cause her to become even more confused about what she wants.

Why?

The pressure he is applying seems desperate to her.

Women aren't attracted to desperate men.

So, if she still had feelings for him and he then began to ruin them by being desperate, she would begin to feel confused.

On one hand, she would feel like she wants to give him another chance, but on the other hand, she would be thinking something like, “Why do I suddenly feel turned off by him? Why does he look different to me all of a sudden? Why am I actually starting to feel glad that we’ve broken up?”

Why?

Simple.

He is ruining her feelings of respect and attraction for him and as a result, she starts looking at him in a negative light.

She is no longer looking at him through the eyes of attraction, so he just doesn’t seem so appealing and interesting anymore.

The more he pleads, panics and appears desperate, the less sexually and romantically attracted to him she feels.

So, if you want your ex to stop being so indecisive and just make a decision to be with you or not, what you need to do is make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for the new and improved you.

Interact with her and let her experience.

Don’t go on and on about how much you’ve changed, what you’ve changed or what you’ve learned.

Just let her experience the changes in you.

If you do it that way, she won’t see you as being desperate and as a result, she will naturally be able to feel respect and attraction for you.

Then, when she’s feeling attracted and thinking things like, “I’m enjoying interacting with him again. It feels good,” you need to stop contacting her completely (i.e. no texts, e-mails, social media messages, or even just clicking like on her posts, and no phone calls) and give her a few days of space to miss you.

Note: 3 to 7 days of space is enough time to make her miss you.

Any longer than that is usually a waste of time, because it just gives her more time to get over you.

So, don’t give her weeks or months of space.

Don’t go overboard with it.

After 3 to 7 days of space, you need to contact her (preferably by calling her on the phone) and continue sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by using humor to break down her defenses) and then get her to meet up with you in person.

[image: Make her smile, laugh and feel good whenever she interacts with you from now on]

At the meet up, focus on making her smile, laugh and feel happy to be around you again, to the point where she’s saying, “I’ve made up my mind. I want us to be a couple again.”

Another reason why your ex is being indecisive about being with you or not might be that!

3. You’re trying to get her to make a decision via text

Maybe your ex has asked you to give her some time to think about what she wants, or maybe sheâs refusing to answer your calls at the moment.

Alternatively, maybe you're worried that she might not want you to call her, especially after how badly the break up went.

Whatever the case may be for you, something important that you need to know is thisâ!

Trying to get your ex to make a decision about whether she wants to be with you or not via text, is one of the quickest ways to turn her off and make her say, âIâve made up my mind and haveâ decided that itâs over between us.â

Why?

If your ex currently only feels a very small amount of attraction and respect for you, she won't look at your texts in a positive light.

So, sending her a text like, âWhy are you being so indecisive? Why canât you just make up your mind? Either you still love me and want to be with me, or you donât. How difficult can that be?â is just going to annoy her.

Rather than make her think, âWow, what an amazing text! I want to be with him again now. Everything about the way that he thinks, acts and behaves makes me feel so much respect and attraction for him now. Iâm afraid that if I waste another day trying to make my decision, I might lose him forever,â she will think something like, âDoes he honestly believe being pushy and demanding via text is actually going to make me want to be with him again? The more he texts me, the more I'm convinced that itâs over between us.â

Her ex might think that he is making progress because she is reply to his texts, but a reply to a text doesn't mean much at all in an ex back situation.

In most ex back cases, a woman just doesn't feel enough respect or attraction via text to make a decision to want to be with her ex again.

Why?

She canât hear his tonality, see his body language or watch his behavior to determine whether or not he really has changed.

So, when you ask your ex to make a decision via text, she can't base it on how she feels about the new you.

The new you is holding a phone and texting her.

She's getting your words via text, but isn't getting to experience the new and improved you on a phone call or in person.

So, what does she do?

She bases her decisions on how she felt for the old you.

She imagines that you're still the same and still don't know how to make her feel the way she really wants to feel in a relationship.

As a result, she doesn't feel like making a decision to get back with the old you and keeps giving you mixed messages.

Eventually, she stops being indecisive and just texts back something like, "It's over, okay? Stop texting me. We're not getting back together. Bye!"

Thatâs not what you want, right?

If not, then make sure that you're not trying to get her back via text.

When it comes getting an ex woman back, text really sucks.

It's great when you're dating a new girl who really likes you and when you're in a happy relationship, but not when you're trying to re-attract your ex.

Here's the thing!

What you need to realize that you have a lot of control over how much or little respect and attraction your ex feels for you.

For example:

- Texting = Little to no attraction.
- Calling her on the phone = A good amount of attraction.
- Meeting up with her in person and letting her experience the new you = Strong feelings of attraction.
- Sex after the meet up = Maximum attraction.

So, don't waste anymore time texting your ex and getting frustrated when she responds with something like, "I still don't know," or "I'm just not sure what I want. Please give me more time."

What you need to realize is that she's just waiting to feel enough of a spark to let down her guard.

So, get her on a phone call with you right away and blast her doubts away with your confident, charismatic, new and improved approach to interactions with her.

Let her be amazed by how much she now feels for you.

That is what works.

Another reason why your ex is being indecisive about being with you or not might be that!

4. She doesn't believe that you can instantly change and give her the kind of attraction experience she wants

Right now, your ex isn't seeing anything to make her believe that you're no longer the same guy she broke up with, so she's stalling.

She doesn't want to get caught up in a bad decision (i.e. get back with you and then have to deal with things being the same as before, which will likely only lead to her breaking up with you again) and waste more of her time.

She is waiting for some real evidence that you truly understand her now and are giving her the kind of attraction experience she wants when you talk to her and interact with her.

For example: You're more emotionally independent now and not as controlling or jealous as you used to be.

You're more driven and focused now, rather than being immature and wasting your time on unprofitable hobbies and distractions (e.g. watching too much TV, playing video games too much, going to the gym too much, hanging out and doing nothing with your friends too often).

You're more assertive in social situations now, rather than being a quite, shy or timid pushover type of guy.

There are many subtle things that can turn a woman off and lead to a break up, so make sure that you really get clear on where you messed up with her.

You can then make the right changes in the fastest amount of time possible (most guys can adjust, improve and change in under a week) and then naturally re-attract her.

The faster your ex can see that you've changed, the quicker she will make a decision to just open back up to you and give you one more chance.

She will begin to think something like, “Finally. This is what I've wanted from him all along. He really does understand me now and has taken steps to be the man I want him to be. So, I have no problem making up my mind now. It's a yes. I want to give this a try and see how it goes.”

She then stops being so indecisive and allows herself to just follow her heart and give you another chance.

Another more reason why she's being so indecisive is because!

5. She doesn't want to have to teach you what she needs from a man

When a woman is struggling to make up her mind about getting back together with her ex or not, the guy might say something like, “Just tell me what you want me to do and I'll do it. I'll do anything to help you make up your mind.”

He's hoping that she will then say, “Okay, I need you to do these 5 things and I will give you another chance. We can then get back together again and everything will be perfect.”

Unfortunately, that's not how it works.

A woman rarely, if ever, wants to be a guy's teacher about how to be the kind of man that she needs.

So, when a guy is asking her to tell him what to do, she doesn't think, “Okay, great! A willing slave. I can now get him to do whatever I want. I own him now. I can control him! Yayyy!”

Instead, she feels turned off by the fact that he doesn't even know how to attract her in the ways that are important to her.

For example: He hopes that says something like, “Okay, treat me nicer, take me out to dinner more often and listen more” and he can then do that and everything will be fine.

Yet, that's not what is important to her.

What is really important to her is to be in a relationship where she can naturally respect her man as the leader of the relationship.

Alternatively, she might secretly want to be in the kind of relationship that makes her want to do good things for him all the time (e.g. cook for him, clean, suck him off, compliment him all the time).

Yet, he just doesn't bring that side of her out.

and she resents him for it.

She hates how equal their relationship or how she is usually the one in the power position and he's just doing whatever she wants him to do.

She's not going to tell him that though because he'd then begin promising to do it and it would feel fake or forced to her.

Here's the thing:

Women know that there are men out there who know how to manage a relationship like a real man and make a woman feel like a real woman as a result.

So, she doesn't feel like it would be fair for her to have to teach, instruct and guide her guy on how to be that kind of man.

She fears that might put all that work into improving him and he may then cheat on her and leave her when he notices that other women are so much more attracted to him now (e.g. because he's more emotionally masculine, charismatic and charming).

So, rather than waste more time or risk being cheated on or treated badly if he improves his emotional attractiveness, she just wants to get away from the relationship.

How about you?

Have you been asking your ex what you can change to make her happy?

If so, you need to stop putting that kind of pressure and responsibility on her.

It's not a woman's responsibility to do that for a man and in many cases, she has no idea on how to teach him or help him.

She just knows that something isn't right in the relationship, she's not feeling attracted and she should probably just leave.

If her ex puts pressure on her to make a decision, he will be asking her to make a decision at a point where she doesn't really feel enough respect, attraction and love for him to want a relationship.

Eventually, she will just say something like, "I've decided what I want and it's not you. I want to be on my own now. You and I are not getting back together. You need to accept that now and leave me be."

Another reason why your ex might be feeling indecisive about being with you or not is that:

6. You're giving her more power over you than she actually wants

When a woman is being indecisive about giving the relationship another chance, a guy might make the mistake of being on his best behavior around her (e.g. being extra nice, doing whatever she wants, being generous, listening to her problems and basically sucking up to her) to hopefully show her that he's a great guy and she will regret losing someone like him.

Yet, although a woman might temporarily enjoy how much power she has over her ex, it's not going to make her feel sexually attracted to him.

Instead, she will feel turned off by his desperation.

She might string him along for a little while to enjoy watching him suck up to her and do whatever she wants, but she won't want him back.

So, what should you do instead?

Stop giving her so much power over you.

Realize and understand that you have a lot of control over how much or little attraction you are making her feel.

For example: If you're being insecure, self-doubting and unsure of yourself, then you are making her feel turned off by you.

On the other hand, if you're being confident, self-assured and believing in yourself no matter what she says or does, then you are making her feel attracted to you.

Your ex doesn't want to see you in a state of desperation where you hand over all your power to her and hope that she takes pity on you and gives you another chance.

[image: You know you want me back]

She wants to see you rise up and meet the challenge that she has placed on your confidence.

Let her see that you know that she is feeling attracted to you again and aren't worried that she is being indecisive at the moment.

You know that she is going to want you back today, tomorrow or the day after that.

You know that you've re-sparked her feelings for you and she is going to sleep at night thinking about you, missing you and want you back.

As a result, you exude the type of confidence that is naturally attractive to her and pretty much every other woman on the planet.

So, don't wait for her to tell you that it's okay to believe in yourself and be confident.

Rise up to the challenge by believing in yourself no matter what she says or does.

If you do that (in a relaxed, easy-going way), you will see that she naturally changes her mind because you've changed how she feels about you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

When I Asked Her For Another Chance, She Said That it Was Too Late

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why she said it was too late when you asked her for another chance:

1. You used an unattractive approach (e.g. begging, pleading) when trying to get her back

When a guy gets dumped by the woman he loves, he will often feel a desperate need to get her back right away.

As a result, he may make the mistake of begging and pleading with her for another chance.

For example: A guy might start sending his ex endless walls of text, or long e-mails, saying things like, â€œIâ€™m so sorry for what happened. Please forgive me. I just canâ€™t bear the thought of you being gone from my life forever. Just give me one more chance and I promise that this time things will be different. Please don't throw our love away. You are so special to me and I love you more than anything. The times we shared were so precious to me. I will do anything to make it up to you and prove to you that things really can be different this time around.â€

Alternatively, he may call her up on the phone and say, â€œI'm so sad. I canâ€™t take this anymore. Being without you is the worst feeling Iâ€™ve ever experienced in my life. What do I have to do to make you give me another chance? Do you want me to get on my knees and beg, because I will? I will do anything for you. Just tell me what you want me to do to make you change your mind.â€

Sounds like something from a romantic movie, right?

So, it should work in real life then, right?

No.

Soppy, hopeless, desperate male characters in movies get the girl that way because that's how the script was written and how the actors have to act.

In the real world, women respond much differently to desperate pleas from a guy they've broken up with.

Why?

Women aren't flattered or amazed by it, even if the guy has good intentions with her.

[image: Can't you see that I love you and I'm sorry?]

When heâ€™s begging and pleading for another chance, rather than looking at him and thinking, â€œWow, he must really love me if heâ€™s willing to do anything to get me back. I am so lucky!â€ she will think something like, â€œThe more he begs and pleads, the more he ruins any feelings I might still have had for him. Doesn't he realize that women aren't attracted to desperation in men?â€

For a woman, one of the most important parts of being in a relationship with a man is knowing that she can look up to him, respect him and feel attracted to him at all times.

She can't do that if he falls to pieces and starts begging, pleading or losing control of his emotions when challenged by her or by life.

So, when a guy is begging, pleading and acting like he's hopeless without her, it doesn't cause feelings of trust and security in her.

Instead, she starts to feel more emotionally dominant than him, which turns her off.

It also makes her feel like she needs to be gentle, understanding and take care of him now, which just isn't what a woman wants from a relationship with a man.

A woman wants a man to be emotionally strong no matter what life throws at him.

She doesn't want to be with a guy who needs her to make things easy for him because he's so emotionally weak or sensitive.

Of course, there are some women out there who love it when a guy begs and pleads as a way of getting her back (usually insecure women who need an emotionally weak man to feel better about themselves), but most women feel turned off by it.

So, if your ex is saying that it's too late to get her back when you ask her for another chance, it might be because you begged or pleaded with her, or that you used some other unattractive way to get her back (e.g. sending her long letters explaining your feelings, bombarding her with emotional texts).

Don't worry if you made that kind of mistake though.

You can recover from it and make her feel respect, attraction and love for you again.

So, even though she's saying that it's too late right now, when you change your approach and re-spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you, she will naturally begin to change her mind.

She will stop focusing on how badly you messed up and start focusing on how good she feels whenever she interacts with you now.

As a result, she will start to feel drawn to you again and the idea of losing you will feel painful to her.

So, don't beat yourself up about what happened in the past (e.g. you begged and pleaded, you tried to get her back via text messages or letters, you annoyed her by trying to have long, deep and meaningful discussions to get the relationship back together).

All that is in the past.

What you do from now on is what matters the most.

As long as you focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new you whenever you interact with her from now on (e.g. by being confident and emotionally strong even when she is being cold and unfriendly towards you, making her laugh when things seem tense), it won't be long before she stops thinking, It's too late, and starts thinking, Maybe we have a chance after all.

Another reason why she might have said that it was too late is

2. She didn't think you could instantly change and give her the kind of attraction experience she secretly wants

[image: I don't believe that you can change]

When in a relationship, most women want to feel the following:

- Loved, appreciated and taken care of.
- Feminine and girly in contrast to her man's masculinity (e.g. he's so emotionally strong, while she is emotionally sensitive).
- Proud that she can look up to and respect her man.
- Sexually attracted based on how confident he is.
- Safe that her man is guiding both him and her to a better life in the future.
- Proud that her man has a big purpose and goal that he is striving to achieve that is outside of his relationship with her.
- Happy they both want the same things in life and are going in the same direction.

So, if a woman gets a sense that many of those things are missing from her relationship with a guy, she will gradually start to question her reasons for sticking around.

This is what usually causes a couple to go from being all loving and intimate in the beginning of a relationship, to arguing and feeling angry with each other once the initial thrill begins to wear off.

Essentially, all the things a woman was willing to overlook because of her feelings of new love and lust, suddenly become glaring problems that she's not willing to ignore any longer.

She then starts to change and be less loving, caring and affectionate.

At that point, a guy might feel confused and wonder, "What happened? Why is she always so moody these days? I don't get it. What's wrong with her?"

What he doesn't realize is that certain behaviors are starting to cause her to lose respect and attraction for him (e.g. he's too insecure now, he is wasting time hanging out with her all the time rather than following through on big goals, he is too controlling of her, he has become too emotionally sensitive).

If he understands where he has been going wrong and makes changes, she will automatically begin to change and go back to being a loving, caring, supportive and affectionate woman.

On the other hand, if he just continues repeating the same mistakes over and over again, she will lose too much respect and attraction for him to want to stick around anymore.

At that point, she will break up with him and try to move on because she doesn't believe that he is capable of changing.

If he tries to ask her for another chance, she will say something like, "It's too late. We had our time and it didn't work out. I'm over it now. You need to let me move on."

A guy will then feel confused at how she could so easily leave him and just want to move on without him, when he really is sorry and really wants to do better.

Yet, being sorry and wanting to do better is not enough.

A woman needs to feel as though her ex really has changed already and doesn't need her to be patient with him anymore.

She can interact with him and feel the difference in how he makes her feel now.

So, when a guy gets broken up with, it's essential that he immediately begins the process of fixing his issues and improving himself.

For example: If he had become too insecure in the relationship, he needs to immediately begin understanding how confidence works and how to be confident at all times.

She will need to sense that he remains confident and in control of his emotions, no matter how difficult she is behaving or how cold or rude she is being when he tries to talk to her.

If she talks to him and he conveys insecurity and self doubt, she will know that he hasn't changed and getting back into a relationship would mean pretty much more of the same old, same old.

So, if you want your ex to give you another chance, don't say to her that you will change when you get back together again.

You need to already have changed the things that are important to her, before she will consider giving your relationship another shot.

If you try to get her back before changing what is important to her, she will likely just think, â€œHe hasn't changed anything about himself and he doesn't even know what to change. I don't believe he can be the man I want him to be and give me the attraction experience I really want. Giving him another chance will just be a waste of my time.â€

As a result, she will insist that it's too late for you and her and you just need to move on without her.

Another reason why she might have said that it was too late is because

3. She's already interested in a new guy who is giving her the attraction experience she wants

[image: She is already interested in a new guy]

In some cases, a woman might say that it's too late to give her ex another chance if she's already found herself a replacement guy, but doesn't want to admit it yet.

For example: Some of her reasons for not admitting it to her ex might be:

- She's afraid that he might get angry with her and possibly even become violent.
- She's worried that he might get into an argument, or even a physical fight with her new guy.
- She wants to keep her ex around for a little while longer, until she's fully over him and in love with the new guy.
- She doesn't want to deal with him becoming overly emotional and potentially even crying to her about it.
- She doesn't want to explain to him why she's more attracted to the new guy than she is to him.

So, rather than create unnecessary drama for herself, she simply prefers to let him down easy by telling him that itâs just too late for them to get back together.

Where a lot of guys go wrong at that point, is thinking that the only possible solution now is to give her 30, 60, or more days of space so that she can come to her senses and miss him.

Yet, giving a woman months of space in a situation like that usually only allows her to get over her ex and move on happily with her new guy.

So, donât make the mistake of getting out of her life and hoping that she will come back, even though sheâs no longer attracted to you or in love with you anymore.

Watch this video to understand whyâ

By the wayâ

If your ex has found herself a new guy, it doesnât mean you canât get her back.

It simply means the new guy is potentially giving her the kind of attraction experience she always wanted from you.

It doesnât mean that heâs perfect or better than you though.

Heâs just filling in the gaps that were missing in your relationship with her (e.g. If you were insecure, heâs confident. If you didnât get along with her friends and family, he does. If you were a loner, heâs got a big social circle of friends that love him).

With that much of a difference, it might seem like thereâs no hope for a guy in that situation, right?

Wrong.

Over the years, Iâve continually seen men re-attract their ex woman from a guy who she seemed so happy with initially.

Why?

The new guy wasnât perfect and in most cases, he wasnât really a good match for her overall.

For example: If your ex has a new guy, then itâs highly like that he lacks a lot of your attractive traits (e.g. Heâs childish and immature, whereas you are driven and responsible. Heâs nice to her in public, but treats her mean in private, whereas you always gave her the respect that she deserved. He is arrogant and selfish, whereas you are confident and kind).

If thatâs the case, itâs only a matter of time before she realizes that he isnât so good for her after all.

However, donât wait a long time for that to happen.

You donât need to wait on the sidelines and hide away from her until she dumps him.

If you do that, you could be waiting for 6 months or a year or more and by that time, you will probably lost a lot of confidence in yourself.

Additionally, she might leave him and get right into a new relationship with another guy.

So, donât put yourself in that unfortunate, depressing position where youâre just waiting for her to come back, even though sheâs no longer attracted to you.

If your ex has a new guy, you need to understand the things that attracted her to him in the first place and then quickly add those traits to what you can offer her.

For example: If he is more confident than you, then get help to quickly level up your confidence.

If he is more emotionally masculine than you, then get help to become more ballsy and emotionally tough.

Then, interact with her and let her experience that.

If you do, you will interrupt the process of her moving on and she won't be able to stop thinking about seeing you again.

All of sudden, she will begin to wonder things like, â€œWhy am I feeling more attracted to my ex than I am to my new guy? Iâ€™m not sure if I made the right choice. Maybe I need to just see my ex again and give him a chance. I don't like the idea of losing him now. I still want him.â€

Another reason why she might have said that it was too late is becauseâ€¦

4. She has given you plenty of chances before and nothing has ever really changed

What a lot of guys don't realize is that every time he interacts with his ex girlfriend (fianc  or wife) after the break up (e.g. via text, social media, on a phone call and especially face-to-face) she is essentially giving him another chance.

Just by responding to him, picking up the phone, or agreeing to meet up with him, she's basically saying (without using words), â€œOkay, let's see if you've changed, or if you're still the same guy that I broke up with.â€

If a guy understands this, he will use every opportunity he has with her to reawaken her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him by showing her that he really is a different man now (e.g. by being confident, even when she is being cold and distant and making her smile, laugh and feel good to be interacting with him again).

On the other hand, if a guy doesn't realize that every interaction is his chance to get her back, he will waste the opportunity by making some of the following mistakes.

Mistake 1: Explaining his deep feelings for her via e-mail, letter, social media message or text

Why doesn't this work?

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, she stops caring about how he feels or what he wants.

It doesn't matter if he explains how much she means to him, what he loves about her, what he cherishes about their time together and what he hopes for their future.

He is now a guy that she doesn't have feelings for, so she just doesn't need to care.

If she cares, then she will be getting back into a relationship with a guy who has no idea how to make her feel the way she really wants to feel.

So, rather than giving him another chance, she just thinks something like, â€œYou may still love me, but I don't feel the same way about you anymore. I've already given you plenty of chances and you blew every single one. Now it's just too late.â€

Another mistake guys make isâ€¦

Mistake 2: Trying to get her back via text, rather than letting her experience the new and improved version of him on a phone call or in person

Why this doesn't text work to get an ex back?

A text message is simply a bunch of words on a screen.

It doesn't truly convey a man's confidence or emotional strength.

He can act that way via text, but it doesn't mean that he'd be the same way in person.

and she knows that.

So, rather than giving him the benefit of the doubt and assume he's changed and become a better man, a woman will usually just think the worst of him.

She will assume that he's just acting confident, cool and collected, when in fact, he's insecure, nervous and emotional.

When she imagines that, she will feel turned off and close up even further.

If he continues to text her, she will imagine the insecure version of him plotting and planning to win her back via text.

In most cases, a woman will just roll her eyes at the texts and think, "Nice try, but no thanks. It's too late."

So, what should he do instead?

Get her on a phone call and let her experience the changes in him (e.g. via the tonality of his voice, his conversation style, the way he responds to her).

Once she is feeling some attraction and being more relaxed and open to the conversation, he needs to get her to meet up with her in person.

At the meet up, he can then fully reactivate her feelings for him and get her back.

That's how it's done.

So, if your ex is currently saying that it's too late, it may be because she feels that she given you enough chances already and you haven't yet given her any real evidence (on a phone call or in person) that you can now make her feel differently.

You may have tried to reason with her or explain your point of view, but that isn't what she needs.

Reasoning and explaining doesn't make a woman feel sexually attracted and turned on by her ex.

What does?

Displaying traits and behaviors that naturally attract women and that are very important to your ex (e.g. Does she want you to be more ballsy when talking to her? Does she want to feel feminine in comparison to your masculine energy, tone of voice and behavior?).

You have to focus on making her have sexual feelings and when you do, she will naturally begin to have romantic feelings for you too.

So, from now on, just remember that every interaction you have with her is actually another mini chance to get her back.

If you get her on a phone call with you and you make her laugh, you're one step closer to getting her back.

On the other hand, if you get her on a phone call and turn her off (e.g. because you're too nervous and insecure, are trying to get into a discussion about the relationship), it will be another mini chance that youâve just lost.

Finally, another reason why she might have said that it's too late for you and her is thatâ

5. She's already had enough time to get over you and now wants to move on

If she has moved on already, this might be because you used the No Contact Rule (i.e. cut off all communication with her for 30 to 60 days), in the hopes that she would miss you and want you back. Unfortunately, ignoring a woman who has disconnected from her feelings, usually only gives her the time she needs to fully get over the break up and move on.

She doesn't really care anymore and as a result, she opens herself up to new guys and actively tries to move on without her ex.

Regardless of your exâs reasons for saying that itâs too late for you and her to get back together again, something you may not realize is that itâs never too late to get an ex back.

When you re-spark your ex's feelings of respect and attraction for you again, everything changes.

She canât hold on to her old ideas about it being too late for you and her, because she no longer feels turned off by you.

Essentially, the guy that she said, "It's too late" to isn't who you are now.

You have changed.

The old you doesn't exist anymore.

The new you is making her feel respect, attraction and love.

That's who she is thinking about and missing when you interact with her and reactivate her feelings.

Guys all over the world are able to easily get their ex woman back that way.

So, stop worrying about the fact that said it was too late.

Just make her fall in love with the new you every time you interact with her from now on.

Soon enough, she will be back in your arms again and will have forgotten all about what she said to you before.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me Because I Wouldn't Commit

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are the 5 steps to get your girlfriend back after she broke up with you because you wouldn't commit!

1. Don't offer your commitment in a desperate way now

[image: Don't desperately propose to her]

When a woman breaks up with a guy because he wouldn't commit, he will often panic and think something like, "Oh no! How could I let this happen? I ruined a perfectly good relationship with my ideal woman because I didn't want to give her anything more than we had together. What am I going to do now to get her to see that I will commit?"

He might then make the mistake of classic desperately trying to show her how much she means to him and how willing he now is to commit.

For example: "Please baby, don't do this to us. What we had was so special. You can't just throw that away. I was a fool not to realize sooner that you are the most important person in my life. I know it now though and I want to make it up to you. Whatever you want, I'm willing to go along with it. Let's move in together/get engaged/get married. I'm 100% committed to giving our relationship my all from now on. Please, give me another chance. I beg you! Please."

Yet, rather than make a woman happy that she is finally getting what she wanted from him, she feels even more turned off and annoyed with him.

Why?

Firstly, women never feel attracted to desperation in men.

[image: Please don't leave me! I will do anything to make it up to you!]

So, when a guy is begging and pleading to a woman, it might temporarily make her feel good that she has so much power over him, but it's not going to make her look up to him and respect him as her man, or feel sexual attracted to him.

As a result, he won't seem attractive and appealing to her anymore.

She will feel like she might have even made a mistake in getting into a relationship with him in the first place, if that's who he really is as a person underneath or when challenged.

Secondly, most women don't want a guy to make a commitment to her simply because he's afraid of losing her and doesn't know what else to do to hold on to her.

[image: Just give me a chance]

The commitment will feel forced and she will have to worry that he really isn't committed and is only doing it to keep her for a while longer, until he's ready to break up with her.

She doesn't want to continue being the one who is always worrying about being dumped or left behind.

So, if you want to get your girlfriend back, don't make any rash, desperate decisions that might cause her to pull away from you even more.

Of course, if you've already offered your commitment to her by begging and pleading in a desperate way, don't worry about it.

What's done is done.

As long as you make sure that, from this moment onwards, you show her that you've learned from the experience and have become a better man as a result (e.g. emotionally stronger, confident, emotionally mature), she will begin to drop her guard.

When she can see for herself that you have sincerely changed and are not just chasing after her and making promises out of desperation, she will start to feel respect for you again.

You can then build on those feelings and make her remember why she seriously wanted to share her life with you in the first place.

The next thing you need to do is

2. Get her to forgive you

Apologizing to your girlfriend for your mistake is a good thing, but it's not everything.

An apology makes her feel heard and feel like you've made the effort to understand where she's coming from.

Yet, that's where the story ends.

After apologizing, you have to transition to forgiveness, so she can drop her guard and truly open back up to you.

If your girlfriend doesn't forgive you for making mistakes in the relationship, then you're stuck.

Without forgiveness, she's not going to feel good about the idea of giving you another chance.

She will have her guard up and remain focused on your negative qualities or the fears she has about getting back into a relationship with you.

So, you must to get her forgiveness.

How can you do it?

Say something like this to her, "I understand that right now, forgiving me is probably the last thing you want to do. You might even be thinking that your feelings for me are dead and that you've wasted enough of your time with a guy like me who won't commit to you. You might also feel like you deserve to be treated better and you do. I couldn't agree with you more. I definitely stuffed up and I never realized what an amazing girl I had until I lost you. I don't expect you to take me back, but I do want you to know I'm not that guy anymore. Rather than taking me back, I just want you to forgive me. Forgive the old me for being such an asshole. I know that you are mature enough as a person to understand that people sometimes make mistakes. We're only human. As long as a person learns from their mistakes and becomes a better person as a result, I think everything improves and moves in the right direction. So, can you forgive the old me? I'm not asking you to forgive me so we can get back together. I'm asking you to forgive me because you will feel better about yourself and any new relationship you decide to have. You'll be able to start with a clean slate, rather than always feeling scared that what happened with us will happen again."

Of course, saying something like that to her doesn't mean that you're giving up on you and her getting back together.

It also doesn't mean that you're encouraging her to find another guy.

You're just being the more mature one in the situation, which will make her feel respect and attraction for you.

When she feels that way about you, she won't want any other guy and will feel drawn to you again.

After forgiving you, she stops going over your mistakes and feeling angry and disappointed at you.

Instead, she starts seeing you as an emotionally strong man who has taken responsibility for his actions in a mature way and is doing something to rectify them.

She then starts to look at you as you are now, rather than the guy she broke up with who wouldn't commit.

From that point onwards, you've just got to make sure that every time you interact with her, whether it's on a phone call or in person, you making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

When you do that, her feelings come flooding back and she becomes more open to the idea of being in a relationship with you again.

3. Reactivate her feelings by attracting her in ways that she liked at the beginning of your relationship

[image: Reactivate her original feelings for you]

Your girlfriend obviously fell in love with you and wanted a commitment from you for a very good reason, right?

In other words, she loved you, respected you and felt attracted to you.

She really wanted to be with you and saw you as being the one.

So, get it out of your mind that just because she broke up with you, it's completely over now and you could never make her love you again.

Yes you can.

When you start behaving in the ways that attracted her to you in the first place (e.g. confident, cool, charismatic, fun, interesting), she won't be able to stop herself from reconnecting with her feelings of respect, attraction and love again.

Think back to what she loved about you the most and do more of that when you interact with her from now on, while at the same time doing less of the things that annoy her.

For example: If your girlfriend was attracted to you initially because of your sense of humor, bring that out every time you interact with her.

Make her laugh and smile, especially when she's being cold and saying, "I'm sorry, but it's over."

If your girlfriend loved your ability to make her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine strength, then make sure you don't suddenly start sucking up to her, being extra nice and sweet and allowing her to dominate you because you think that will make her happy.

So, re-spark her feelings by giving her what she liked at the beginning of your relationship, while also making sure to avoid displaying things that gradually turned her off (e.g. insecurity, being too emotionally sensitive).

Where some guys go wrong is by neglecting what has always worked (e.g. being the cool guy that he is) and trying to get her back by putting on an act of being someone he's not.

For example: A guy might suddenly become very romantic to hopefully show his ex how much he cares for her.

He might send her a bouquet of flowers, buy her special gifts and even write her love letters, poems or songs.

Yet, rather than impress her, when a guy is behaving out of character (i.e. he's never been romantic before), he just ends up appearing desperate or insincere to her.

She then closes up even more because she feels turned off by his desperation and loses trust in him due to him being insincere by putting on an act of being Mr. Nice Guy or Mr. Romantic all of a sudden.

So, don't waste time pretending to be someone you're not.

Instead, attract her in the ways that used to work so well, while also making sure to add in new ways of attracting her that are extensions of that.

For example: If she was initially attracted to your confidence and humor, make sure to continue being that way, but don't stop there.

Level it up so that you're very confident and now using humor that even funnier and more enjoyable to her (e.g. ballsy humor).

An example of ballsy humor is calling her up and saying, "Hey ex girlfriend, what's going on."

Another example is where she asks, "So, how have you been?" and you jokingly say, "Well, I was having a great day and then you called. Now I have to listen to your annoying voice" and have a laugh with her about that.

4. Stop asking for a relationship and start making her feel like she wants to be in a relationship with you again

One of the most common reactions that guys have when they get broken up with for not wanting to commit is to try to convince their ex to give them another chance by getting into long discussion about the relationship, what he wants, what he has learned and how he hopes to make it up to her now.

For example: A guy might call his ex woman and say things like, "Please just think about how much we've been through and what a waste it would be to just throw all that away because I wouldn't commit. Do you remember how you used to tell me that you wanted to grow old with me? Do you remember how we talked about marriage and starting a family? Well, that's still possible for us. I am ready now. So, please just give me a chance. I promise that things will be different from now on. This break up has been a wake up call for me. I am ready to commit to you 100%"

If she keeps saying "No", a guy might then think to himself, "Nothing is working. Well if a commitment is what she wants, then that's what I'm going to give her.

He might then say to her, "Look, I am serious. I have already been looking at rings. I was planning on proposing to you the next time I saw you. Please believe in me. I have changed."

Here's the thing though!

In small number of cases, proposing can work because the woman was just trying to put so much pressure on him until he did propose, so she accepts his proposal because that is what she actually wanted.

Yet, in all other cases, the woman has already had enough of the guy's BS and is turned off for other reasons too (e.g. the guy had no real plans for his future that we was continually following through on and making progress on, he had a wandering eye and stopped making her feel appreciated and loved).

So, she isn't just breaking up with him because he wouldn't commit.

She doesn't want a guy who isn't ready to grow up (even if he's 30 or 40 years old and hasn't committed to her yet. It's not about age, it's about maturity level) because she doesn't want to waste any more of her time.

As you may know, a woman's fertility rapidly begins to decline after she reaches the age of 30.

So, even if a woman doesn't want kids, hates kids or just maybe wants kids, she will still be largely influenced by her breeding instincts.

In other words, her instincts are telling her to leave and find another man who would be ready and capable to breed and stick with her long enough for the offspring to be safely raised.

In modern culture, we have invented the idea of staying together for life because it's more politically and socially correct.

However, our instincts are essentially driving us to get to the point where we can breed and then raise offspring that can go onto survive and breed.

Everything else (e.g. dating, going on holidays, having fun together as a family) is just dressing, accessories and distractions to make sure that the breeding happens and the offspring are taken care of.

Anyway, enough of the deep stuff.

Let's back to the simple stuff about you getting her back.

The thing is, your ex girlfriend doesn't want you to propose to her just to get her back or propose because you think that she wants it.

She wants you to be in this for real, without desperately trying to prove that to her.

In other words, she has to be able to sense your sincerity, without sensing desperation.

To show her that, you need to relax, focus on re-attracting her and not be in a desperate hurry to rush her back into a committed relationship.

Let her feel attracted to you again and want it and she will naturally come back to you.

The more that you make her feel good (i.e. attracted, respectful of you, falling back in love with you) when she's with you or interacting with you, the less she'll keep focusing on the fact that you wouldn't commit to her in the past.

She won't want to focus on that because she won't want to ruin the good feelings she is now experiencing around you.

As a result, her walls will come down and she will believe that giving you another chance is actually something that she really wants to do.

and it will be true.

She will want to do it for her own reasons (i.e. she is attracted to you again, worried about losing you now, feeling like the relationship still can work).

However, if you just keep asking for a relationship without re-sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you first, she's not going to feel like it's something she really wants to do.

She will feel as though you're trying to force her into something for your own reasons (e.g. you feel lost without her, you want to stop feeling the pain of being rejected by her, you are embarrassed to admit to your family and friends that you got dumped and she no longer wants you).

So, make sure that you focus on re-attracting her and making her naturally want you back, rather than making her put her guard up because she senses your desperation and need.

5. Give her 3-5 days of space in-between attraction building meet ups

If you keep texting, e-mailing and calling your ex non-stop, she won't have any time to miss you.

Instead, she may begin to think, First he wouldn't commit to me and now he won't leave me alone. He's driving me crazy! I didn't know that he was really like this deep down. Maybe I was wrong about him when I thought that he was such a confident, cool guy. I don't see him that way anymore. He seems like a needy, desperate guy. He's lost the appeal that he used to have. I don't feel it anymore.

You don't want that to happen!

So, make sure that you give your girlfriend enough time between every interaction (i.e. where you make her feel attracted to you again) to feel like she misses you and wants more of you.

She will then realize that she does still love you and wants to be with you, despite the fact that you wouldn't commit to her before.

She will see her feelings for you as being a sign that you and her aren't meant to remain broke up.

As a result, she will open back up to you and the relationship.

However, don't make the mistake of giving her too much space (some guys go overboard and ignore a woman for weeks or even months), or she will just go back to thinking that you don't care enough to commit.

So here's what you need to do:

Call her on the phone, or meet up with her in person and spark her feelings for you by making her laugh, smile and feel excited to be interacting with you again.

Give her a few days of space to allow her to miss you and miss how good it feels to be interacting with you again.

Wash, rinse and repeat until she's saying, I want to get back together again. You are the man for me.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Should I Send My Ex Flowers?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

No, it never works because flowers are a romantic gesture that women love and appreciate from a guy that they are either in love with, or falling in love with.

If a woman has broken up with a guy because she no longer feels enough respect, attraction and love to be in a relationship with him, getting flowers is not going to suddenly re-spark those feelings inside of her.

Instead, she will almost certainly just roll her eyes and say, “Nice try, but no thanks. We’re still broken up.”

Why?

The flowers are not you.

They’re just an object that you have purchased and sent to her.

If she is going to be in a relationship, it will be with you, not flowers.

At the moment, she is turned off by you and no longer feels enough respect, attraction and love to justify being in a relationship.

If you want her back, you have to change that by interacting with her and making her feel attracted to YOU, not flowers.

What matters to her at this point is how YOU make her feel.

Objects, gifts and romantic gestures just won’t cut it anymore.

5 Classic Mistakes That Romantic Guys Make When Trying to Get an Ex Woman Back

[image: Will you take me back now that I've bought you flowers?]

When a guy makes one or more of the following mistakes, it only turns his ex woman off even more...

1. Trying to be romantic when she doesn’t have feelings for him

Being romantic is a lot of fun for some guys.

â€¦even if it’s not fun for the girl.

They enjoy being a ‘Knight in Shining Armor’ kind of guy that buys a woman flowers, treats her like a princess and acts like a gentleman around her as much as possible.

Here’s the thing thoughâ€¦

Some women do like that kind of treatment from a guy, but ONLY if the feelings are mutual.

For example: If a guy shy, lacks confidence in himself and is trying to make up for that by sucking up with her with gentlemanly, romantic gestures, she’s not going to be impressed by it.

On the other hand, if a guy has a high level of social confidence (i.e. not just confident around her, but confident around all types of people), then anything sweet or nice that he does is going to be enjoyable for her.

Why?

She is attracted to him.

Confidence is attractive, whereas shyness and insecurity isn't.

So, getting flowers from a shy guy feel completely different to a woman than getting flowers from a confident guy.

Understand?

In the same way, if a woman doesn't feel attracted to her ex anymore (i.e. because he turned her off for various reasons), she's not going to appreciate his romantic gestures.

His efforts to win her over with flowers, gifts or love letters will seem misplaced, weird or even 'creepy' or stalkerish because she just doesn't feel the same way as he does.

He is attracted to her, but she's not attracted to him at that point, so the flowers are well, just flowers.

If he re-attracted her first, had sex with her again and made her want the relationship, it would be a different story.

She could actually appreciate and enjoy the flowers because they'd be coming from a guy that she is attracted to and falling back in love with.

So, if you are tempted to send her flowers before you've re-attracted her and hooked up with her again, I recommend that you think twice about it.

What should you do instead?

Make her feel attracted to YOU again.

Getting a woman back is easy when you focus on naturally re-attracting her when you interact with her.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't know how to re-attract their ex woman in a natural way, so they resort to gift giving, love letters or trying to convince her by having long discussions about the relationship.

It's not a guy's fault though.

Most guys just weren't lucky enough to have an excellent male role model (e.g. a father, big brother, uncle, grandfather) who clearly explained how to maintain a happy relationship and how to handle a break up if it ever happens.

Without that knowledge, a guy is essentially on his own and has to try and work it out all by himself.

As a result, he might be confused by what he sees on TV and in movies.

For example: On TV and in movies, women almost always respond positively to guys who are being romantic (e.g. sending her bouquets of flowers, buying her chocolates and sentimental gifts like teddy bears or heart shaped jewelry).

So, it seems like that might be a way to a woman's heart.

After all, if the fictional characters on TV and in the movies like it, maybe it means that real women like it too.

It's worth a try, right?

No, not really.

However, the fact is that a guy only knows what he knows.

If his awareness and knowledge about women includes the notion that flowers can solve problems in a relationship, that's what he will think could win her over and get her back.

A guy might then say to himself, *â"¢Should I send my ex flowers? I've seen it work before (on TV or in the movies), so maybe it will work for me too? When she gets the flowers, she will realize that I truly care about her and am sorry about my mistakes. She will then feel compelled to give me another chance.*â"¢

Wouldn't it be nice if life were that simple?

Just send her some colorful plants and like magic, she's back in your arms again.

It would be nice, but let's talk about reality here, not fantasy.

If you want to get your ex back, you've got to focus on what works in the real world, not in a hopeful fantasy idea of the world that you wish existed.

She is a real woman, not an actress in a TV show or movie that has been instructed to swoon over the flowers that are sent to her.

Here's the thingâ"¢|

Even if your ex has watched TV shows or movies where the woman was given flowers and your ex thought it was cute, sweet or romantic, it doesn't mean that she will feel that way when you send her flowers.

Remember: TV and movies are not the same as real life.

In real life, romance is only enjoyable when the feelings are mutual.

You might want to read that last sentence again.

It's that important.

You simply must understand the reality that romance is only enjoyable to a woman when she is in love or falling in love with a guy.

Anything outside of that is seen as annoying, unwanted, unwelcomed, misguided, confused, weird, creepy or even stalkerish to her.

So, just because it works in the movies, don't assume that it work in real life.

A woman is smart enough to know that a movie relationship (i.e. a fake, scripted relationship designed to entertain an audience) can be patched up with flowers, gifts and romance.

If every movie just showed what was really required to get a woman back, it wouldn't be as enjoyable and it also wouldn't be as politically correct.

For example: Most TV shows and movies don't want to come out and say, "Hey, you need to man up and start being more ballsy when you interact with your ex girl. That's how to get her back."

Some movies show that (e.g. the guy saves his ex girl from a bad situation), but your ex probably doesn't need you to save her from any dangerous villains right now.

So, what should you do instead?

How can you show her that you've manned up and are now the kind of emotionally strong, emotionally masculine, ballsy and charismatic man that she always wished you would be.

Simple.

Get her on a phone call or meet up with her in person and let her experience that new and improved side of you.

Believe me, she's going to be much more impressed than a bunch of colorful flowers.

So, a question to ask you at this point is: Do you know what things about you really turned her off and made her want to end the relationship?

For example: Sometimes, a woman will break up with a guy because she got sick and tired of him taking her for granted, treating her badly or not committing to her in the way she really wanted.

So, him sending flowers isn't going to change that, or prove to her that he's now ready to take the relationship with her seriously.

He thinks it will, but she doesn't see it that way.

Instead, she might just roll her eyes and think something like, "He's buying me things to hopefully make me forget my reasons for breaking up with him. Does he really think that flowers will prove to me that he really has changed?"

Of course, some women will smile when they get the flowers and maybe even feel a bit impressed by it, depending on the reason for the break up.

However, flowers are not what gets a woman back and in most cases, flowers just turn the woman off even more.

Most modern women don't like the idea of receiving flowers anymore.

It just seems so tacky and outdated.

It's like something you'd see in an old movie, or a movie with a nerdy guy who has no idea how to win a girl over.

It's just not that hip, cool or hot anymore.

The only time women appreciate it is when they are in love or falling in love.

Even then though, many women don't want to be sent flowers because it's too soppy, old school romantic.

If you believe that your ex is the kind of woman who would appreciate flowers, then make sure that you only give them to her AFTER you've re-attracted her.

Another classic mistake that romantic guys make when trying to get an ex woman back is

2. Thinking that all women are so simple and naïve, so she will be also amazed by the romantic gesture of sending her flowers

Sure, some women are naïve, simple and even stupid.

Yet, most women aren't.

Women are just as intelligent as men, so they don't fall for obvious tricks like sending her a bunch of flowers after a break up to hopefully get her back.

A woman can see that her ex is just hoping to distract her from the real problems in their relationship.

3. Hoping that her friends or coworkers are amazed by his romantic gesture and will then convince her to give him another chance

Wouldn't it be nice if all a guy had to do to get his ex back was send a bunch of flowers and then wait for a woman's friends and coworkers to do the rest of the work for him?

Her friends would say to her, "Oh my! How can you break up with such a wonderful, thoughtful guy? He's so sweet and romantic. What a dream guy! He must really care for you if he's sending you such beautiful flowers. Come on, don't be so hard on him. At least give him a chance. He deserves it. Besides, where else will you find a romantic guy who is willing to spoil you like this? I mean, you sent you flowers! Wow! Good guys like him are so hard to find these days. Flowers are everything! Flowers are so important! Give him a chance!"

Wouldn't that be nice?

Your ex would then say, "Oh, no! What was I thinking? I almost ruined a perfectly good relationship with a good guy! He doesn't make me feel attracted and in love anymore, but who cares. He sent me flowers! Flowers ARE everything. They are colorful little plants and that's all I need. It was silly of me to break up with him. I'm the luckiest girl in the world for having such an amazing ex willing to give me another chance with him. I'm going to call him up right away and tell him I want him back."

It would be nice, but that's not how things work in the real world.

In reality, even if a woman's friends and coworkers try to convince her to give a guy another chance because he sent her flowers, she will still say something like, "Look! I know you guys mean well, but I just don't have any feelings for him anymore. He doesn't know how to make me feel the way I want to feel. It's over" and they will understand her point of view and let it go.

4. Not even knowing what type of attraction experience she really wants in a relationship

[image: You don't even know what I want from a relationship]

Some guys go through life thinking that a woman's attraction to a man is based on his physical appearance (i.e. the more good looking he is, the better chance he stands in getting a beautiful girlfriend or wife and keeping her).

So, after getting dumped, he might think, "I'm going to have to fix myself up and become more physically attractive to her to get her back" and then head off to the gym for extra workout sessions.

Yet, that's not what most women care about when it comes to attraction in a relationship.

What matters the most is how you make her feel when you talk to her and interact with her?

In other words:

- Are you confident and emotionally masculine when you talk to her, or are you insecure and emotionally neutral (or worse, emotionally feminine at times)?
- Do you make her feel feminine and girly in comparison to your masculine vibe, or do you make her feel neutral like a friend (or worse, make her feel like she is tougher than you)?
- Are you able to pass her tests of your confidence (e.g. when she teases you about things, acts upset when she isn't, doesn't show affection, throws a tantrum), or do you crumble under her pressure?

- Are you able to maintain the position of power in the relationship in a confident, easy-going manner, or do you become very controlling and strict in order to get her to listen to you or do what you say?
- Do you make her feel like she has to impress you a little to maintain your interest, or do you essentially worship the ground she walks on even though she doesn't treat you well?

Those are the things that really matter a woman.

Some guys try to re-attract their ex woman by improving their physical appearance, but get nowhere with her because she just doesn't really care about that as much as his emotional attractiveness.

In other words, he just doesn't make her feel attracted, happy, in love and respectful of him when she interacts with him.

Here's the thing!

Your ex might appreciate it if you make an effort to improve yourself physically (especially if you let yourself go and became very skinny or overweight), but it's not going to be the one thing that makes her decide to give you another chance.

For your ex to be impressed and want you back, she will have to see that you have changed some of the things that really matter to her (e.g. you're more mature and determined to succeed in your life now, you're less emotionally sensitive, you now want the same things as her, you're more ballsy around her now rather than being so neutral).

Then, when you interact with her and she sees for herself that you're no longer the same guy she broke up with, her feelings will automatically begin flooding back and she will open up to you.

She will respect for having the courage to become a better man in the ways that really matter to her, rather than trying to distract her with flowers or superficial changes to your appearance.

When she can respect you, she will also start feeling sexually attracted to you again and when that happens, it won't take much or any convincing for her to want to try again.

5. Hiding behind romantic gestures because he doesn't have the confidence to call, or the assertiveness to get her to meet up with him in person

[image: What if I call her and she rejects me?]

In some cases, a guy simply doesn't have the enough confidence to interact with his ex after a break up.

She broke his heart by dumping him and rejecting his attempts to convince her to give him another chance.

He's feeling hurt, lonely and lost without her.

Lacking confidence in himself, he think things like, What if I call her and she hangs up the phone? or, What if I suggest a meet up and she says no?

Then, rather than take the risk of potentially getting rejected by her, he decides to send her flowers as a way of breaking the ice.

He's hoping that she will be so charmed by his gesture that she'll pick up the phone and make things easy for him by saying, “Hey, thanks for the flowers. I have missed you lately. Do you want to meet up?”

It would be nice if that is how life worked, but it doesn't.

As the man, you are the one with the balls.

You are the one who needs to properly put your balls on the line by calling her and getting her to meet up with you.

Here's the thing!

Even if a woman is flattered to receive flowers from her ex, in most cases, she still won't make it easy for him to get her back.

Why?

She can't see if he's changed and improved as a man since the break up by looking at the flowers.

The flowers are not him and if she's going to get back into a relationship, it will be with him, not the flowers!

In fact, getting flowers usually makes a woman suspect that he's still the same guy and is hiding behind the gesture.

Additionally, most women are going to want to see if he's man enough to take control of the ex back process by calling her and getting her to meet up with him.

If he doesn't have the balls to do that, she isn't going to be impressed and almost certainly isn't going to call him and make it easy for him.

She might send him a thank you text, but what is he going to do with that?

Reply and say, “You're welcome.”

What does that achieve?

Nothing.

Of course, he could call her at that point, but if he's like most men, he won't call.

He will be afraid of her not liking the fact that he's calling, be worried that it might look needy or be concerned that she might not answer.

So, the flowers and thank you text pretty much lead to nothing.

If you want to get your ex back, I recommend that get her on a phone call, make her smile and laugh and feel respect and attraction for you again and then get her to meet up with you in person.

In person, you can re-attract her for real and then get to a hug, kiss and possibly even sex after the meet up.

That's much better than paying the bill for a flower delivery service, right?

Save your money by not buying the flowers and just attract her on the phone and in person.

That's how real men get their ex back quickly, naturally and easily.

It might seem like real men send flowers because that's what is shown on old TV shows and movies, but times have changed.

In today's world, women need more than superficial gestures to feel properly attracted and in love with a guy.

You Have to Believe in Yourself

You ARE a good man.

You ARE worthy of her.

You CAN get her back.

That's how you need to be thinking if you want to get her back.

Unfortunately, after a break up, a guy will often stop believing in himself, his value and his attractiveness to his ex woman.

He will feel like it's completely blown it with her and there's no chance she would ever take him back.

You can't really blame him though, right?

She will most-likely have been saying things to him like, "Leave me alone. I don't feel the same way about you anymore. It's over. My feelings are dead" and so on.

It's not fun to hear statements like that from the woman you love.

However, if you want her back, you have to be strong and believe in yourself.

Women are not attracted to self-doubt and insecurity in men and this is especially so after a break up. No matter what she has said or done to make you feel unworthy, you must be strong and feel worthy of her.

Women are naturally attracted to confidence and self-assuredness in men.

It's not about being arrogant or cocky and telling her that you know she wants you.

No.

It's simply about being confident in yourself, believing in your value to her and believing in your attractiveness to her no matter what she says or does.

If you can do that, she will naturally feel attracted to you whether she wants to or not.

She will catch herself thinking, "Why do I suddenly feel attracted to him again? I mean, he's not all that bad, right? Yes, he stuffed up, but he seems different now. Maybe I should give him another chance."

You can make her feel that way by interacting with her on a phone call or in person and making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Remember, if she's going to get back into a relationship, it will be based on her attraction to you.

Flowers don't make a woman feel attracted to a man.

A man makes a woman feel attracted to him by how he talks to her, behaves around her and reacts to her.

In other words, what matters most to a woman is how you make her feel when you interact with her.

When you interact with your ex, you're either turning her off or turning her on.

If you're turning her on by how you're talking to her, behaving and reacting to her, then you will get her back.

If you're not, then you won'târegardless of how many flowers you send her.

So, save your money on the flowers and just re-attract her naturally by interacting with her on a phone call or in person.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why Has She Forgotten About the Good Things That Happened in Our Relationship Now That We've Broken Up?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

She hasn't forgotten.

She is still fully aware of the fact that you and her experienced good times and good moments together.

It's just that she doesn't want to focus on those things right now because she's trying her best to remain broken up with you and move on.

She focuses on the negatives to help convince herself that she made the right decision to break up with you.

If she focuses on the positives, she knows that you could then begin seduce her back into a relationship with you.

So, if you want her back, here's what you need to do make her start focusing on the positives and feeling drawn to you again!'

1. Stop discussing the relationship with her

[image: Stop discussing the relationship with her]

Long, emotional conversations where you try to discuss the relationship isn't' what will make your ex feel drawn to you again.

What will?

Sexual and romantic attraction?

You've got to make her feel a spark for you again, so she can start being overcome by sexual and romantic feelings.

If you're just trying to discuss the relationship with her, she will be experiencing annoying emotions like stress, anger, frustration, resentment and disappointment.

She will feel like you are hassling her and trying to pressure her into giving you another chance for YOUR reasons.

In other words, you want her back to feel better about yourself.

You want her back because you miss her.

You want her back because you still feel very attracted and in love with her.

Yet, she doesn't feel the same way right now.

So, to her, it feels like you're trying to take something from her, or trying to force her to give you something that she just doesn't feel like giving.

From now on, you need to use every interaction that you have with her (e.g. via text, on a phone call, or in person) to spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

If you don't focus on that, she's just going to keep the negatives in the forefront of her mind so she can move on without you.

So, make sure that you're not getting into long discussions, debates or arguments about what when wrong in the relationship or whose fault it all was.

Using that approach, you will never be able to move past the past and start a new relationship with her in the present.

Leave the past behind you and start making her feel attracted in love with who you are now.

Let her feel it.

Let her realize that you aren't so bad after all and in fact, whenever she interacts with you now, she feels attracted, happy and open to you.

That's how it's done.

Yet, if you just focus on trying to discuss the good things about your relationship and ask her to remember them, she's not going to.

She's interested in how she feels NOW, not how she used to feel.

Focusing on the past only keeps the situation at the same level, where both you and your ex feel hurt, misunderstood and betrayed.

A lot of guys don't ever find out what you're learning now though, so they just make their situation worse.

For example: When on a call with his ex, a guy might say, "Okay, so I made some mistakes, but I did some things right as well. Why won't you admit that? Why are you just remembering all the bad stuff and acting like you've forgotten the good things about our relationship now that we've broken up? Why are you being like this? At least give me a chance to show you that things can get better again. I care about you more than anything. I want our relationship to work and I'm willing to do whatever it takes."

[image: Why don't you just remember the good times?]

Yet, saying something like that to a woman, usually only turns her off even more.

Why?

From her perspective (even though she might be wrong), the guy is just thinking about himself, how bad he feels and what he wants from the situation.

He's trying to make her care about him and the relationship based on how good things used to be in the past.

Yet, it just makes her remember how bad things became near the end and how faded her feelings are now that she has broken up with him and had some time apart.

So, what should you do instead?

2. Start making her smile, laugh and feel good when she interacts with you

It's very difficult for a woman to keep focusing on the negatives when she's smiling, laughing and having a fun time with you (on a phone call or during a face-to-face interaction).

You can get her laughing a little via text and make some progress with her that way, but it's always better to call.

Why?

Watch thisâ□|

If you focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good, you will be creating new, positive memories with her.

You won't be trying to convince her to give you a chance based on the fact that things used to be good between you and her.

So, rather than wasting the interactions you have with your ex (which may be limited at the moment) by being too serious and trying to get her to see your point of view about the relationship, just get her smiling, laughing and feeling good.

For example: If she says something like, *â□□ Look, Iâ□□m tired of going over the same things with you. I know that you donâ□□t want to accept it, but itâ□□s over between us, okay? I donâ□□t have anything else to say to you,*â□□ don't get upset and try to convince her otherwise.

Instead, just say something like, *â□□ You don't have anything else to say to me. Okay, no problem. You just keep quiet then and I ramble on talking by myself. So where was I? Oh yesâ□| anyway, did I mention that my goldfish turned green after I put some cleaning detergent in his tank? Does that mean heâ□□s now a greenfish rather than a goldfish? I don't know. Should I change his name from Goldie to Greenie? Oh, hang onâ□|sorry! I forgot that youâ□□re not saying anything to me anymore, so just ignore the last question.*â□□

Alternatively, if she says something like, *â□□ Look, Iâ□□m tired of going over the same things with you. I know that you donâ□□t want to accept it, but itâ□□s over between us, okay? I donâ□□t have anything else to say to you,*â□□ you can say, "Don't worry. I accept it. We're finished. All I really want is for you to cook me your famous chicken stir fry one more time. That's all I want. Sorry if I gave you the impression that I wanted a relationship. I'm just hungry, that's all."

When you make her laugh, itâ□□s difficult for her to keep thinking of the old you that turned her off, because the more confident, brave and emotionally strong you is making her feel attracted in a whole, new way.

Of course, it's not about ALWAYS joking around with her.

You just have to add humor and laughing in like you would add in spice or seasoning to a pasta.

Don't drown it in seasoning or spice, but just sprinkle it in to give it a good taste, rather than making a plain, old boring pasta with tomato sauce.

Keep things interesting with some humor, so she can smile, laugh and feel good when interacting with you, rather than feeling pressured, stressed or annoyed.

When you make her smile, laugh and feel good, she then allows the walls around her heart to come down.

She may then begin to think something like, *â□□ Why am I feeling like this? Itâ□□s actually good to be talking with him again. Iâ□□m enjoying the way heâ□□s so much more relaxed and confident and is making me laugh like this. Could I have made a mistake when I broke up with him? Is it possible for us to start over and repeat the same old mistakes from the past? What if he changes back to the old him? Iâ□□m so confused. I like him now, but I'm not sure.*â□□

As long as you keep showing her via your actions that you really are that confident, self-assured, emotionally strong guy sheâs been experiencing so far, she will naturally open herself back up to being with you again.

If she doesn't make it obvious (e.g. she keeps giving you mixed signals), just remain confident and keep guiding her through the ex back process.

If you do, you will almost certainly be able to get her back within days or a week.

Just remain confident and keep pushing forward.

Of course, make sure that you are attracting her in ways that she actually cares about, rather than offering her the kind of attraction experience that bores her.

3. Start attracting her in new ways that matter to her

[image: Start attracting her in ways that really matter to her]

Regardless of how good the relationship between you and your ex used to be, or how sorry you are for everything that happened, itâs not going to matter to her unless you start attracting her in the ways that she really wants.

For example: If a man was always a very romantic guy (e.g. he bought her flowers once a week, took her to candlelit dinners regularly, spoiled her with little surprise gifts all the time), then him continuing to do that isn't going to impress her and make her change her mind about him.

She wants to see that he has changed in the ways that actually matter to her.

He might think that his romantic approach is what every woman should want, but she just doesn't get excited about it because he isn't able to make her feel attracted in ways that are important to her.

For example: She might want him to be dominant in the relationship, rather than handing over him power to her and allowing her to be the more dominant one (e.g. she gets to decide on everything or most things).

She might also want him to be more confident in social situations (e.g. around her friends and family), but he continues to be shy, reserved and quiet.

If he doesn't change those things about himself, no amount of flowers, expensive dinners or gifts is going to make her feel the kind of attraction that she really wants.

So, if you are a great guy and have always been caring and attentive around your ex, donât go offering her more of that and thinking that it will impress her and change her mind about you.

Instead, you need to improve things that will actually matter to her (e.g. start believing in your value to her, become more emotionally masculine, stop placing her needs ahead of your own, be more ballsy around her, be more driven and ambitious, make progress towards your big goals in life).

When your ex can see that youâre not just sitting around feeling sorry for yourself and have made improvements and changes, she will naturally feel respect for you, even if she doesnât openly admit it.

When she feels respect for you, she will naturally start looking at you in a different way.

She will see that you are now capable of giving her the kind of attraction experience that actually matters to her.

As a result, she will start to focus on the happy memories that you and her have together and how you and her could make more of those memories now and in the future.

Howeverâ€¦!

3 Mistakes to Avoid if You Want to Successfully Get Your Ex Back

Lately, you might have been feeling a bit annoyed with your ex and thinking things like, â€œWhy can't she see my point of view?â€ or, â€œHow could she just forget about all the good times? It's like she is a completely different person now. It's like our relationship never even happened.â€

It's not a nice experience to go through, but you have to stop yourself from focusing on the problem (i.e. she's not acknowledging the good parts of your relationship anymore) and start focusing on the solution (i.e. re-attracting her and reawakening her feelings for you).

Here are 3 mistakes you should avoid if you want to speed up the process of getting her backâ€¦!

Mistake 1: Thinking that she is being cold and mean to you because she's a bad person

It sucks that she isn't being nice, loving and affectionate anymore, but that doesn't mean she is now a bad person.

Of course, sometimes it feels a lot easier for a guy to think, â€œI never realized it before, but my ex really is a bitch. She clearly never cared about me the way I cared for her. I was just too love struck to notice that she was a selfish bitch who only cares about herself. Now that we've broken up, her true colors have come through. I was the sucker who let her dupe me. I never should have allowed myself to fall in love with her. She's a horrible person.â€

It's easier for a guy to think that way than to admit that his inability to attract her in the ways that she finds most important (e.g. she wants a truly confident guy, not an emotionally sensitive guy who needs her to be nice, sweet and gentle with him all the time), is what really drove her away from him.

She just got sick and tired of not being able to relax and be a real woman (e.g. feminine, girly, irrational at times, moody at times, silly at times) around him because he needed her to be so consistent and supportive, or else he would get upset or angry.

She hasn't forgotten about the good times.

She just doesn't think that previous good times are enough to keep a relationship together than hasn't been good for quite a while.

Mistake 2: Not seeing things from her perspective

In your eyes, it looks like your ex has forgotten about the good things that happened your relationship.

Yet, from her perspective, it looks like someone that she isn't attracted to anymore is trying to get her back.

Now, ask yourself, â€œIf our places were reversed, wouldn't I be reacting in the exact same way as her?â€

Youâ€”re probably going to say, "Yes."

So, stop trying to make her see things from your point of view and start reactivating her feelings of attraction instead.

Remember: Getting an ex back is about making the feelings mutual.

It's not about trying to convince her to see your point of view and give you a chance based on that.

It's about her feelings.

Make her have feelings for you again and you will get her back.

Mistake 3: Thinking that she should want to be with you because of what you and her have been through together

You and her most likely did some great, fun, interesting, challenging or exciting things together.

You might have even overcome some difficult challenges or problems in life by being there to support each other.

That's great, but it's not why a woman will want to get back with her ex.

What matters is how you make her feel NOW, based on who you are NOW.

Forget what you and her talked about in the past, did in the past or wished for in the past.

What's past is past and you will never get that back.

You need to focus on the opportunity in front of you now.

You now have an opportunity to start over and create a fresh, exciting future with your ex and make new, positive memories together.

So, rise up to the challenge.

Be the man that she always wished you would be.

Let her experience that when she interacts with you.

Reawaken her feelings and make her feel drawn to you again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Said That Her Feelings For Me Have Faded and She Doesn't Know if They'll Ever Come Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your ex's feelings have faded, don't worry.

You can get her to feel more respect, attraction and love for you than she has EVER felt before.

How?

Follow these simple DO's and DON'Ts and watch as her feelings for you come flooding back and become stronger than ever before...

1. Do understand what has really been turning her off you

[image: What has really been turning her off about you?]

What has been turning her off will usually completely different to what she has been telling you.

Why?

Most women won't admit the type of attraction experience they want, because they either feel embarrassed to talk about what they really want, or they just want to be in love without all the fuss of trying to explain things to a guy.

So, rather than spelling things out for her guy (and possibly risk him reacting badly), a woman will usually provided him with a vague excuse for the break up to let him down easy.

She might say, "My feelings for you have faded. I don't know if I could ever feel the way I used to. Please just give me some time to be by myself," but, there will be much deeper reason for her unhappiness in the relationship that just not willing to admit to him.

For example: Sometimes a woman will break up with a guy because she felt she couldn't be herself around him (e.g. he was too jealous and controlling, so it was difficult for her to hang out with her friends or wear whatever she wanted).

Yet, rather than come out and tell him that, she will usually just say something along the lines of, "I'm tired of trying to make things work between us. We're just not right for each other."

Even though he might be a good guy in many ways (e.g. he's generous, has a great sense of humor, he's ambitious, has a good heart), he just doesn't know how to make her feel loved, appreciated and respected in the ways that she wants.

In cases like that, a guy will hope (and sometimes even expect) that she will love him and want to be with him based on how much he loves her and wants to be with her.

Yet, that's not how to keep a relationship together for life.

The feelings have to be mutual.

[image: Dumped for being too emotionally sensitive and insecure]

It can't be one sided and all about you wanting her.

You've got to rise up to the challenge that she has presented you with (i.e. the break up) and start being the kind of man that she can genuinely feel respect, attraction and love for again.

However, you can't just guess and hope that you understand her and what she really wants.

If you don't uncover her real, more subtle reasons for breaking up with you (e.g. you became too timid or boring in the bedroom, you weren't able to make her feel submissive and girly outside of the bedroom anymore, you became too emotionally sensitive about things) then you'll be offering her the wrong things and she'll just continue saying, "My feelings for you have faded and I don't know if they'll ever come back. Please just give me time to be on my own for a while."

She is going to see that you still don't understand her and what she really wants and, rather than telling you what to do, she's just going to try to find love with a new man who naturally understands her.

If that happens, she won't listen to your attempts to convince her to give you another chance.

No matter what you say to her, all she will essentially hear coming out of your mouth is, "I want you back. I need you. I don't know how to make you happy, but don't worry about that. I want you back. I need you back. Please."

Nothing that you say will get through to her.

On the other hand, when you fully understand what has been turning her off, you can then make changes that she actually cares about.

For example: If you became too timid or boring in the bedroom, she will be able to pick up on the changes in you if she notices that you're a lot more confident and ballsy when you interact with her outside the bedroom (e.g. on the phone, in person) now.

She will assume that your new, more confident and ballsy approach to her would most likely follow through to the bedroom and she will be curious to find out.

Alternatively, if you became too emotionally sensitive in the relationship (e.g. couldn't deal with her tests of your confidence, needed her to regularly reassure you of how much she loved you, needed compliments all the time, sulked when she wasn't being affectionate or nice to you), then she's going to need to see a real change in you when she talks to you on the phone and in person.

She will need to see that nothing that she says or does makes you become emotionally sensitive anymore.

You've effectively become emotionally bulletproof.

You're so strong now, emotionally.

You can handle anything because you're so damn confident.

That is what will matter to her.

Not telling her, "I care so much about you. I love you. I want you back. Blah, blah, blah."

You've got to make her feel attracted in the ways that SHE cares about, rather than going on and on about what you want from her and what you care about.

If you want her to care about you again and feel sexually attracted to you, make sure that you make real changes to the actual things that were turning her off in the relationship.

2. Do start giving her a new and improved attraction experience on the phone and in person

[image: Re-attract her on the phone and in person]

It's not enough to just know where you went wrong with her.

You've got to change and let her experience it on the phone and in person.

Not via text or e-mail.

That isn't you.

It's just words on a screen.

She's got to be able to hear your voice or see you in person to get a real picture of how much you have changed and how differently it makes her feel now.

Anyone can cool, tough, confident or smart via text, but it's a different story on a phone call or in person.

As you may have noticed if you've watched any of my videos on this page, there's a big difference between reading my words (and having no idea who I am) and watching a video where I help you to understand how to get your ex back.

So, make sure that you not only know what you need to change, adjust or improve to re-attract her, but you actually go ahead and do it.

Interact with her on a call or in person and properly re-attract her.

When you do that, her feelings will go from being faded to coming back to life once again.

She will have first hand evidence that she really does feel differently about you now.

That's what counts.

So, don't avoid doing it.

If you want her back for real, you've got to re-attract her for real.

You can't just expect her to want a relationship with you because things used to be good between you and her.

That's not good enough.

How you make her feel now is what counts.

Here's the thingâ€¦!

When a woman decides to open up to having a relationship with a guy, itâ€™s usually because certain behaviors and characteristics about him make her feel good when sheâ€™s around him.

For example:

- He has a great sense of humor and he makes her laugh and smile.
- Heâ€™s very charming.
- He makes her feel beautiful, important and appreciated in his presence.
- Heâ€™s emotionally strong and masculine, which makes her feel feminine and girly in comparison to him.
- Heâ€™s a nice, trustworthy guy, without being a pushover.

If a guy can then maintain that approach to her, she will be happy with him for life.

However, if she notices that he stops being like that because he just putting on an act to get her into a relationship, she will begin to close up and lose interest in him.

She will realize that heâs not such a nice guy after all and is actually quite devious and selfish in his approach to women and maybe even life.

Alternatively, she might still be able to see that heâs a good, honest man, but itâs just that he has too many other behaviors and traits (e.g. he is insecure, too emotionally sensitive, gives her too much power in the relationship, is unable to dominate her sexually or emotionally) that overshadow his good qualities.

Hereâs another exampleâ

A woman might initially feel attracted to a guy because of his sense of humor and his ability to make her laugh.

However, once in a relationship with him, she may discover that his humor is actually only a front that he uses to hide his insecurity and self-doubt from her and the world.

Another example is when a guy pretends to be more emotionally masculine than he is (e.g. acting tough, talking about how brave he is, talking about things heâs accomplished and that he plans to accomplish).

Yet, when in the relationship, she notices that heâs actually very emotionally sensitive and emotionally feminine in many situations (e.g. he gets scared easily, he cries or almost cries when life gets tough, he seeks pity from her or others because life is scaring and hard for him).

She also notices that he canât seem to gain the upper hand in the relationship and as a result, she takes on the more dominant role.

He lets her make all the decisions and when he tries to lead the way, she shuts him down and he doesnât have the emotional strength to stand up to her in a dominant, but loving way, so she just walks all over him.

He hopes that she will be happy because sheâs getting her way all the time and because heâs so nice, loving, generous and supportive of her, but sheâs not happy at all.

She wants a man, not emotionally wimpy guy that she can control.

As a result, she begins to prepare herself to break up with him (e.g. begins disconnecting from the love she used to feel for him, starts flirting with other guys, begins looking into moving out if they live together).

If she is the kind of woman who doesnât want to see yet another one of her relationships fail, she might try to stick it out a little longer.

She may then start trying to make her guy change back to the man he was at the beginning (e.g. saying, “Why are you so insecure lately?” or, “You used to be so confident. Youâve changed”).

Yet, if he doesnât change and just continues to turn her off, her feelings will naturally start to fade.

She will then break up with him and he will be left feeling hurt, rejected and alone without her.

So, if your ex said that her feelings for you have faded and she doesnât know if theyâll ever come back, donât panic.

They will come back when you start giving her a new and improved attraction experience (e.g. on the phone and in person).

You simply need to give her more of the things she felt attracted to in the first place and also change the things that turned her off.

For example: If she loves your confidence and easy-going nature, then make sure that you let her experience that when you next interact with her.

Don't talk to her in a sad, rejected, hurt tone of voice because that just isn't going to be attractive to her.

Likewise, if she lost interest in the relationship because you ended treating her more like a neutral friend than an attractive, sexy woman that you desire, then make sure that you flirt with her and build up some sexual tension when you next interact with her.

The more you give her what she really wants, the more her feelings of attraction will start flowing back.

She won't be able to stop it from happening because attraction is an automatic reaction between men and woman.

It cannot be turned off.

She might try to cover up the fact that she's feeling sparks of attraction for you, but she will still be feeling it.

Her feelings will start flowing back, rather than continuing to fade away.

However, if you continue to interact with her in ways that turn her off (e.g. feel nervous and insecure around her, suck up to her to make her change her mind) then her feelings will remain faded and she will continue to move on.

3. Don't try to change her mind by telling her how strong your feelings are for her

[image: But, I really love you]

When getting an ex back, the most important thing you need to do is make the feelings mutual.

At the moment, you are attracted to her and still in love with her, but she doesn't feel the same way.

So, the feelings aren't mutual.

When a woman doesn't have strong feelings for a guy and he starts declaring her feelings for him, it doesn't make her fall back in love with him and feel attracted to him.

For her to care about how he feels, he first needs to make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for him again.

It can't just be one sided and be all about him having strong feelings for her.

Here's the thing!

When a woman says that her feelings for her man have faded and she doesn't know if they'll ever come back, a guy might say to her, âBut, I love you. You are everything that I want in a woman. Please give me a chance to show you that you and I are meant to be together. I understand that your feelings are faded, but you can fall back in love with me again if we try. So, just give me a chance.â□□

Heâ□□s hoping that she will suddenly start thinking, *â□□Oh, I never realized his love for me was that strong and that we might be able to re-spark my love for him. How silly of me not to see that before. Besides, I donâ□□t know if I could ever find a man who loves me like he does. I think we should get back together again right away!*â□□

Yet, she doesn't.

Instead, she's more likely to be thinking, *â□□I know that he means well, but I just don't feel the same way he does anymore. Hearing him telling me how much he cares doesn't make me want to change my mind either. Sure, I feel bad that heâ□□s hurting, but Iâ□□m still not going to stay with a guy I donâ□□t have any feelings for just because I pity him. I need to be able to be in love too. I just don't feel enough of a spark with him anymore.*â□□

So, even though it would be great if a guy could just pour his heart out and instantly change how a woman feels about him that way, the truth is, you canâ□□t just talk a woman into having feelings for you.

You have to MAKE HER have feelings for you based on how you now interact with her and behave around her.

The best thing about a woman's attraction for a man is that it's mostly within his control.

A man will either be behaving in ways that make her feel attracted (e.g. being very confident, emotionally masculine, using humor) or he will be behaving in ways that turn her off (e.g. being insecure, neutral, too polite, sucking up to her, giving her too much power during a conversation).

The way that women work is that they REACT to what a man is offering.

You're either offering her the opportunity to feel attracted to you or not.

It's as simple as that.

So, if you want your exâ□□s feelings for you to come back again, donâ□□t bother telling her how much you still care about her.

That isn't the way to make her feel attracted, so she will just keep saying things like, *â□□Sorry, but my feelings for you have faded and I donâ□□t know if theyâ□□ll ever come back.*â□□

4. Donâ□□t tell her that you need her in your life

Even though a woman likes the idea of being loved and appreciated by her man, most women just donâ□□t like the idea of being his main reason for living or his number one source of happiness.

Of course, there are some women who like having their man feel lost and hopeless without her, but the majority of women donâ□□t want a guy like that.

Almost all women want a man who loves her and appreciates her, but doesn't need her to feel happy, confident and fulfilled in life.

He doesn't ever need to SAY that to her though.

She just wants to be able to pick up on it based on the fact that he's not a needy, clingy, insecure guy who can't function without her.

So, when a guy is saying that he needs his woman because he canâ□□t go on without her, rather than make her change her mind about him, it usually turns her off even more.

She will look at him as being the sort of guy who just can't function without her and needs her to be strong, consistent and dependable (traits of a real man).

Yet, being a typical woman, she doesn't want to live her life in a masculine, manly way.

She wants him to be the man and if he can take on that role, she will happily be his committed, loyal, helpful, loving woman.

However, if he can only be confident and reliable when she is being nice to him, then she's not going to be his helpful, loving woman.

She is going to feel turned off by the fact that he needs her to be nice, sweet and supportive in order to be man enough to be strong, consistent and reliable.

It's just not how things work.

Women aren't designed to be like men for a reason.

They are emotionally inconsistent and irrational at times for many reasons.

One of those reasons is to test the strength and willpower of her man.

Does he need mommy to be patting him on the head all the time and saying, "Good boy. You can do it. Mommy is here supporting you," or is he capable of remaining strong, consistent and reliable no matter what is happening around him and regardless of whether she supports him or not?

[image: Need her encouragement or support all the time]

If a man needs his woman to be like a mother figure for him and give him unconditional love, then she feels like she's stuck with a boy who hasn't grown up yet, so her instincts are going to tell her to leave him.

However, if a man is always emotionally strong, reliable and forward moving in life with or without her support or encouragement, then she's got herself a real man and her instincts will tell her to stick with him for life.

Some guys feel like that is unfair.

"Why do we men have to be the strong ones?"

We do.

Deal with it.

We are the men.

Women are the ones who bend over to take us from behind.

Women are the ones who get on their knees to suck us off.

We are the more dominant species.

If you think, feel, behave and act like women are the more dominant species, then they just won't feel attracted to you on an instinctive, primal level.

You've got to be able to offer a woman a feeling of safety by letting her see that no matter what happens, you will always remain strong.

Life can be tough sometimes and a woman wants to know that the guy she's with is emotionally strong enough to cope with the bumps in the road, with or without her.

She wants to know that she can depend on him to be the more emotionally strong one, rather than having to continually prop him up and take care of him because he's too emotionally sensitive to handle the challenges of life.

So, although there's absolutely nothing wrong with wanting your ex to be a part of your life again, just make sure that you don't give her the impression that you NEED her back to feel okay about yourself again.

If she gets that sense, she will lose touch with any remaining feelings for you because you will be turning her off at an instinct level.

So, a part of getting her back is getting to the point where you want her back, but don't need her back.

When you let go of your need for your ex and focus on becoming genuinely happy and independent in your own life, something amazing happens!

Not only do you feel better about what happened between you and your ex, but you also become more attractive to her and to women in general.

Women sense it.

They sense your lack of neediness and it attracts them in an instinctive, primal way.

They see a man who is in control of his life and doesn't need a mother figure to pat him on the head and make him feel okay.

5. Don't tell her that you will wait as long as it takes, even though you have no idea how to change how she feels

When a woman says that her feelings have faded, a guy might decide to give her some space (e.g. 30 to 60 days) to hopefully make her realize that she does have strong feelings for him.

Before giving her space, he might also tell her that he's willing to wait as long as it takes.

âI just want you to know that I am willing to wait as long as it for you to change your mind. If we have some time apart, I hope that you will eventually realize that we are meant to be together. We can start over again.â

He may then give her the space that he thinks she needs to regain her feelings for him, by cutting off all communication with her for weeks and even months.

Yet, here's the thing!

Approaching the ex back process in that way results in failure almost EVERY time.

Why?

The woman doesn't have strong enough feelings to even care.

If she meets a new guy that she finds more interesting and attractive, she opens up to him instead.

While her ex is giving her space, she is having sex with a new guy and falling in love.

Don't put yourself in that position with your ex.

The highest success rate approach to getting an ex back is to actively make her have feelings for you again by giving her a tailored attraction experience that touches the core of who she is and what she really wants from a man.

For example: She may go around saying that she only wants a nice man who cares for her and listens, but what she fails to explain is that she also wants a man who doesn't put up with her bad behavior or let himself get walked all over by her.

Instead, he lovingly, but assertively put her back in her place and makes her want to respect him.

He also makes her feel girly and feminine in comparison to how masculine he thinks, talks, feels, behaves and takes action around her and in life.

He doesn't just behave like a boring, neutral, good guy who believes in the failed experiment of society that was the 50/50 relationship.

50/50 doesn't work.

You have to be the man.

You have to make her feel like your girly, feminine woman.

If you do that, her feelings for you will be stronger than ever before.

She's not going to explain any of this to you though because she just wants to be in love, rather than trying to make a relationship work with a guy who doesn't yet understand how to be the kind of man that she needs.

You are different now.

You do know what she wants.

You are ready to re-attract her.

You are ready to reclaim her as your woman and give her the kind of attraction experience she wanted with you all along.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Still Calls Me Every Day, But Doesn't Want to Get Back Together

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why your ex might still call you every day, but then say that she doesn't want to get back together!

1. She's hoping that you will create a sexual spark that causes her change her mind

Have you been making her feel sexually attracted to you again, or have you been neutral or just friendly towards her?

If you want her to feel the desire to get back into a real relationship with you again, you've got to trigger her sexual feelings.

If she's still calling you every day, it means that the door is still open to win her back.

By the way!

You're in a much better position than other guys who are dealing with an ex that won't even answer the phone or reply to a text.

Yet, a guy in that position is still able to get his ex woman back.

How?

By using every interaction that he has with her as an opportunity to create a sexual spark and make her feel drawn to him again.

That's how it's done.

In your case, it's a little easier because she's actually calling you.

Why?

In most cases like yours, it's because the woman hasn't fully disconnected from her feelings and is still in two minds about whether or not she should move on.

As a result, she will call her ex every day and hope to feel a spark for him that changes her mind.

If she doesn't feel that spark, the calls will become less and less frequent and she will begin secretly trying to find a replacement guy, so she can then cut off contact with her ex and move on.

So, if you want to get her back while she's still calling you, make sure that you avoid some of these classic mistakes:

Where a lot of guys go wrong, is by making some of the following mistakes:

Mistake 1: Not actively making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new and improved you

Many guys just don't know how to get their ex woman back, so they will wait until she gives 100% clear signals that she wants a relationship (e.g. she calls and says, "I've been missing you so much" *lately. Do you think we can try to be a couple again?*â€œ)

So, when she calls him, he just keeps things neutral and talks to her like a friend.

Alternatively, he gets into long discussions with her about the relationship.

For example: He might say things like, â€œIâ€™m so sorry I stuffed up. I did all those things (mentions all his mistakes) that made you fall out of love with me and I regret it so much. I don't know why I'm like that. Maybe it has something to do with my childhoodâ€œ and so on.

Essentially, he's dragging her into a serious, emotionally draining conversation that has nothing to do with making her feel respect and sexual attraction for him.

Instead, he's just reminding her of reasons why she broke up with him and making her feel as though he probably wouldn't be any different if she gave him another chance at this point.

So, she begins to lose interest and the calls eventually stop.

Mistake 2: Not feeling welcome to flirt with her and create sexual tension

Flirting creates a sexual vibe between you and her and it is an essential part of creating a spark with your ex and keeping it alive (by continuing to flirt occasionally).

Yet, many guys don't know that.

In fact, some guys believe that flirting with an ex is wrong.

For example: A guy might think, â€œIf I flirt with my ex, she might get angry and stop calling me. I don't want to risk it. If I just stay on my best behavior and remain neutral and friendly, I won't scare her off and then hopefully, she will gradually begin to want me back.â€œ

Yet, that approach just doesn't work on most women because it doesn't make her have sexual feelings.

If a guy is not actively making his ex feel respect and sexual attraction for him when he interacts with her, she will gradually lose interest in talking to him.

Then, if she happens to meet a new guy who makes her feel attracted and aroused, her ex will be left behind without a second thought.

After all, she has to look out for number one.

It's not her responsibility to remain in a relationship with a guy who loves her, but isn't able to make her feel attracted anymore.

She might feel like she owes it to him to be a friend for a while, but she won't be able to keep that going if she starts having sex with a new guy and really enjoying it.

So, if you want more from your ex than a daily phone call, you've got to start actively making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

If you don't, she will gradually move on, or suddenly move on if she meets a guy who she finds interesting and attractive.

Mistake 3: Not being assertive enough to get her to meet up in person

There's only so much talking you and your ex can do over the phone before it starts to get boring or unfulfilling for one of you.

You've got to let her experience the new and improved you in person, so she can open herself up to hugging you, kissing you, having sex with you and getting back together again for real.

So, don't waste any more time talking on the phone with your ex.

Get her to meet up with you as soon as possible.

Let her experience the new, improved version of you and reignite her feelings of respect and sexual attraction.

If you haven't already started kissing by the end of the meet up, just get her to give you a hug (e.g. say something like, â€œOkay, we should go now, but this was fun. Bring it in for a hug goodbyeâ€œ).

Then, when she's in your arms and seems open, give her a quick kiss.

If she doesn't pull away, deepen the kiss and then if she still seems keen, proceed to your place or her place to have sex.

After sex, just relax, be confident and continue to make her feel attracted to the new and improved you.

Don't push for a relationship.

Let her want it naturally.

If you do that, she will most likely then start talking about getting back together and asking what you think.

You can use that moment as an opportunity to attract her further by saying, “Get back together? No way” and then pause for about 5 seconds to let her feel the shock of your response.

Then, laugh and say something like, “Okay, wellâ€¦as long as you cook me dinner, give me massages and do all of my laundry” and then have a laugh with her about that.

Being confident and using humor in moments like that is very attractive to women, so make sure that you don't shy away from it because you want to play it safe by being neutral.

Neutral is boring to women and makes them want to find a new guy.

You've got to have the balls to joke around and let her experience exciting emotions at times, rather than just playing it safe.

Another possible reason why your ex calls you every day, but then says that she doesn't want to get back together is:

2. She's just checking to see if you're missing her, while she secretly tries to find a new guy

[image: She is just checking to see if you are still missing her, while she secretly tries to move on without you]

A woman will sometimes fear that her ex will find a new woman and move on, before she's had a chance to hook up with another guy and move on first.

She doesn't want to have the feeling of being left behind by her ex, so she wants to make sure that he waits for her while she secretly tries to find a new guy.

To keep tabs on him, she might call him up on a daily basis under the pretence of just wanting to say hello.

Every now and then, she might ask things like, â€œHey, so what are you up to today?â€ or â€œSo, are you seeing someone else yet?â€ or, â€œWhatâ€™s new with you?â€ or, â€œWhere were you last night? I tried to call, but you didnâ€™t answer.â€

If her ex then says that he isnâ€™t interested in other women right now and still only wants her back, she can relax and not have to worry so much about him potentially moving on before she does.

She will continue staying to check how heâ€™s doing, until the phone calls suddenly stop one day when she finds herself a new man.

Alternatively, she might call him, have a little chat and then dump the news on him.

â€œDonâ€™t get mad or anything, but Iâ€™ve met someone else.â€

Ouch.

If you want to prevent that from happening to you, donâ€™t waste your exâ€™s phone calls to you by just being Mr. Friendly Ex or Mr. Helpful Ex or Mr. Nice, Neutral Guy.

The only mister you want to be is Mr. Sexy.

Use the phone calls as an opportunity to trigger her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

Then, if she had only been calling you to string you along until she found a new guy, she will suddenly feel confused.

She will be feeling surges of respect and attraction for you again and begin to forget about her plan to find a replacement guy.

She will open back up to you and you can then get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

Another reason why you ex might call you every day but not want to get back together is becauseâ€¦

3. She misses you and doesnâ€™t know how to deal with the pain of a break up

[image: She misses you and doesn't know how to deal with that pain]

Unless a guy really messed up badly (e.g. he cheated, was physically and/or emotionally abusive) and his ex woman absolutely hates him now, she will naturally miss him from time to time.

For example: A woman might think to herself, â€œI know that weâ€™re broken up, but I do miss having a guy to go out with, or a date for all those couples events Iâ€™m always getting invited to. I donâ€™t like the feeling of being broken up,â€ or â€œSometimes when Iâ€™m all alone on a Sunday afternoon, I really do miss him. I guess he wasnâ€™t all bad. Going through a break up feels worse than how I felt when I was with him. Maybe I should just give him another chance.â€

Of course, that doesnâ€™t mean sheâ€™s going to come out and tell her ex that she misses him.

It also doesnâ€™t necessarily mean that she wants to get back together.

Why?

Some reasons might be:

- She doesnâ€™t really believe that he can change, so she doesnâ€™t want to open herself up to a relationship, only to be disappointed once again.

- She doesn't want to make it easy for him to get her back because she wants him to be the man and take the lead.
- She's afraid he might reject her if she shows interest in a relationship at this point.
- She doesn't believe that he can give her the attraction experience she's looking for in a man (e.g. he's too soft and gentle, but she wants a guy who is more rough and rugged).

However, the good news is that if your ex is calling you every day, there's a good chance that she still has some feelings for you.

The main thing to remember, is that as long as she's keeping the lines of communication open with you, you have a big chance of getting her back.

She's actually making it easy for you.

All you have to do is re-spark her feelings for you over the phone (e.g. by using humor to break down her defenses and make her open up to you) and get her to meet up with you as quickly as possible.

The sooner you meet up with her face-to-face, the sooner she will experience the new you and then the idea of getting back together will be on her mind more and more.

Yet another reason why you ex will call you every day but doesn't want to get back together with you is because

4. She wants to mess with you to get emotional revenge for how bad you made her feel during the relationship

In some cases, a woman might feel particularly angry or bitter towards her ex (e.g. because he cheated on her, he was abusive, he was too jealous or controlling).

So, after she breaks up with him, she may decide to mess with his head as a way of getting emotional revenge on him.

For example: She might say to herself, I'm going to stay in touch with him by calling him on the phone every day and make him feel confused. He's going to be wondering why I'm staying in touch, even though I don't want to get back together. He will hate the feeling of having no control over the situation and I'm going to sit back and enjoy watching him squirm. It's exactly what he deserves after the way he treated me.

She will then call him or text him daily, always seeming open and friendly, but never wanting to get back together.

If he becomes frustrated and says something like, Come on, we're clearly getting along with each other, so what is the problem? You wouldn't be calling me if you felt nothing. So, why don't you want to get back together? she will enjoy the fact that he's being taken along for her ride.

Secretly, she may be thinking something like, Do you honestly think I would have any feelings for you after the way you treated me? I just wanted to mess with your head for a while to make you feel some of the pain that I felt. Now you know what it's like to be treated badly by another person. It sucks doesn't it? As for a relationship between you and me that is over! We're never getting back together again. This is all just a game to me. I hope it makes you suffer the way I *did in the relationship. You disappointed me so many times and now you deserve this.*â□□

Horrible, right?

Well, some people (not just women) can be that nasty after a break up.

If you donâ□□t want that to happen to you, then make sure that you're using the phone calls to make her want you back in a sexual way.

Don't be neutral and friendly and expect her to feel an amazing spark with you.

That's not how it works.

You've got to be very confident and ballsy and use the kind of humor that will stop her in her tracks and make her think, "Hmmmâ□|why do I suddenly feel so attracted to him again?"

The more she experiences the new, more sexually attractive you, the less she will want to get emotional revenge on you for making her feel unhappy in the relationship.

One last reason why you ex might call you every day, but not want to get back together with you isâ□|

5. She wants to see how much of her games you will put up with before you cut off communication with her

This is very common in situations where a woman felt like she had too much power over her ex boyfriend (or husband) in the relationship.

So, to find out if he has changed, she will call or text every day and always give him mixed messages about her feelings.

Any time he brings up the idea of them being back together in any way, she changes and either ends the phone call or stops texting him.

She wants to see if he will continue allowing her to be in the position of power and be the one who is ending phone calls, or stopping text conversations first.

If he just puts up with her games day in and day out, without ever standing up to her or ending a call or text chat first, she will know that nothing about him has changed and she will feel even more turned off.

So, donâ□□t let yourself get caught up in a situation where your ex is playing games with you and you're just putting up with it so you can talk to her.

If you allow her to mess with your head like that, it will do nothing to change her negative feelings for you and make her want you back.

She will lose more and more respect for you during every interaction and will eventually be unable to feel any attraction for you at all.

Remember: Women are not attracted to emotional weakness in men.

Women are attracted, aroused, excited and interested in emotional strength in men.

That is what keeps a woman hooked on a guy.

So, make sure that you let her see that you're no longer the guy you used to be.

If she's being a pain in the butt on a phone call, just calmly and confidently say, "Okay, good talking to you, but I've got to go. Talk to you next time."

If she's playing mind games with you via text, just stop replying for a few hours and then reply, but start a new conversation and don't get continue on with the nonsense she was trying to create.

This will make her feel some respect and attraction for you because it will be first hand evidence that you really have changed.

So, if you are serious about getting her back, make sure that you are willing to try a new approach from now on.

If what you've been doing hasn't gotten her back, it's almost certainly not going to.

Change your approach and she will change how she feels.

When she changes how she feels, she will change her mind about not wanting to be with you.

Then, you just need to make sure that you follow through on the final steps of the ex back process and she will be yours once again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Said That She Just Wants to Be Friends. (5 Possible Reasons Why)

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

When a woman says that she just wants to be friends with her ex man, it usually means that:

1. She doesn't feel enough attraction for him to be more than just friends

[image: She doesn't feel enough attraction for him to want to be in a sexual, romantic relationship]
Relationships usually start off with a lot of excitement and passion.

Most guys are very attentive and loving, so they naturally make their woman feel like she's the most beautiful girl in the world.

Yet, when the initial thrill of being with her wears off, a guy might start taking her for granted.

She will notice that he doesn't really look at her the way he used to, or doesn't treat her as well as he did at the start.

He might think that she is in the wrong because she has started to become annoying and turn him off. Yet, that's not what she thinks.

She thinks that she's only been behaving in an annoying way to and get his attention and make him want to get things back to how they used to be.

If he just keeps taking her for granted and not making her feel like his sexy girlfriend, she will begin to feel frustrated and unhappy in the relationship.

She may then begin to think, "I just don't feel the same way about him anymore. Something has changed between us. I just don't feel happy being treated this way anymore. Maybe we're not meant to be. Maybe I need to break up with him and find myself a guy who will love me and respect me for life."

Here's the thing!

In a relationship, it's a man's responsibility to maintain and build on the love, respect and sexual attraction between him and his woman.

Some guys might think that it's unfair, but that's just the way it is.

A woman doesn't want to take on the responsibility of being the leader and have to drag her man along, kicking and screaming.

She wants him to take the lead and guide both himself and her into deeper feelings of love, respect and attraction so they can stay together for life.

So, even if a woman still cares about her guy, if she's not getting the attraction experience she wants from him (i.e. he's not making her feel feminine, girly and sexually attracted anymore), she will eventually decide break up with him and try to find herself a man who knows how to keep a woman happy.

How about you?

Did you end up taking your woman's presence in your life for granted (e.g. you became very irritable around her, didn't treat her with respect, but expected respect from her, or became more of a nuisance to her than a benefit)?

If you took her for granted, don't worry.

You can fix it and get her back.

How?

Accept a friendship with your ex and then use any interactions that you have with her to make her feel sparks of respect and sexual attraction for the new and improved you.

When you approach it that way, you and her won't be friends.

She will start feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again and you will then be able to get her back into a relationship.

Where a lot of guys go wrong when an ex says something like, â€œI just want to be friends from now on,â€ or â€œI see you more as a friend than as my guy,â€ is assuming that it means the relationship is doomed forever.

Hearing something like that, a guy might panic and start begging, pleading and crying as a way of hopefully convincing her to give him another chance.

For example: He might say, â€œPlease don't give up on us. I can change. What we have is far too deep to just be friends. Please, give me one more chance and I promise things will be different this time. I will prove to you that what we have is special.â€

Yet, because she doesn't feel enough sexual attraction for him, she's not going to feel motivated to give him another chance and experience more of the same.

Alternatively, he might say, â€œNo, I can't accept a friendship. I love you more than anything. Being only a friend to you would be too difficult for me. I want a relationship or nothing.â€

Yet, because the sexual and romantic feelings aren't mutual, she simply isn't interested in anything more than a friendship.

Alternatively, he might ask her to tell him what he needs to do to change her mind and want to be in a relationship, rather than just be friends.

Yet, a woman doesn't want to have to teach a guy how to attract her.

She wants to be in a relationship where attraction happens naturally, without her having to guide the guy and teach him what to say and do.

So, when a guy tries to get her back by pleading with her, not accepting just a friendship, or asking for her help, it just doesn't work in most cases.

She doesn't think, â€œWow! He really cares about me. Maybe I'm being too hasty with my decision to break up with him. I can teach him how to be the man I want him to be and then everything will be perfect between us. Yes, I will be his guide! He can be my little project and I will turn him into a real man one day if I just work hard enough at it.â€

She doesn't want to be in a sexual, romantic relationship with a guy who doesn't even know how to make her feel sexually attracted to him anymore.

She wants things to flow naturally and for her to experience deeper feelings for him over time.

If he doesn't know how to do that, she will give him the old, "Let's just be friends" line and then move on, unless he can change and start re-attracting her.

So, remember!

If your ex says that she just wants to be friends, you should look at it as a great opportunity for you to re-attract her and get her back.

Use your interactions with her (whether it's via text, social media or on the phone and in person) to re-spark her feelings for you and make her feel like being friends is simply not good enough for her anymore.

Another reason why a woman will say that she just wants to be friends with her ex is

2. She's just saying that they will be friends, but doesn't actually think it'll be possible until he fully gets over her or moves on

[image: She doesn't think it's possible to be friends]

Sometimes, a woman will say that she just wants to be friends with her ex even though, deep down, she knows that he won't be able to handle the friendship.

For example:

- He will be too jealous if he sees her with other guys or hear about other guys who are now interested in her.
- He will always be subtly pushing for a relationship while just acting like a friend.
- He will get upset when she wants to start limiting the amount of contact they have with each other.

And so on.

So, to avoid making him upset and potentially start begging her to stay in contact with him, she might agree to be just friends, even though she knows that she will be trying to avoid him and move on.

If he doesn't give up on pursuing her, she will hope that when he finds out that she's now dating other guys and moving on, he will say something like, "I can't accept only being friends with you. It's just too painful for me. Unless you and I can be together in a relationship, I cannot be your friend anymore. I can't stand by and watch you talk about other men you like, or go off dating new guys. It's just too painful for me. Goodbye."

She can then say something along the lines of, "I'm sorry you feel that way. I guess from now on, it would be better if we don't contact each other anymore," and walk away from the relationship without feeling like she's the 'bad guy.'

So, if your ex is saying that she just wants to be friends with you, but secretly believes you won't be able to handle it, you need to show her that you can handle it.

How?

By stop trying to get her to commit to a relationship and start making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

When you make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you, don't make the mistake of going 'straight for the kill' and asking for a relationship or even hinting at it.

Just let her feel so attracted to you again that she naturally wants to be in a more than just a friendship with you.

She wants to hug you, kiss you and have sex with you again.

If you make her feel that way, you won't have to suffer the pain of being rejecting when you ask for more than just a friendship.

She will want a relationship and you can then just go along with it, while continuing to build on her feelings for you.

How can you do that?

By letting her see that you believe in your attractiveness and value to her, even when she treats you like a friend to test your confidence, or tries to make you feel insecure by talking about other guys.

The more she can see that you maintain your confidence around her regardless of what she says and does, the more respect and attraction she will feel for you.

All of a sudden, love will start to fill her heart and she will feel the need to be close to you, in your arms, kissing you and being sexual with you like a proper girlfriend.

She will then start to regret ever suggesting that you and her should only be friends because it could have resulted in her losing you and missing out on the amazing experience she is having with you now.

Another reason why a guy's ex woman might say that she just wants to be friends is thatâ

3. She only wants him to stay in her life so she doesn't feel the pain of losing him right now

She might say to herself, â If we remain friends, it won't be as bad as losing him completely. We can still hang out together and if I ever need him (e.g. to help me repair something in my house, when I need a date for a party or wedding, when I'm feeling down and need someone to cheer me up) he will be there for me. In the meantime, I'm going to start looking for a new man to take his place in my life. When I have a replacement, I will then tell him that we can't be friends anymore.â

She may then lead her ex on by showing interest in him and being nice, friendly and open.

Her ex may then think something like, â Cool! She must still have feelings for me if she hasn't cut me out of her life completely. If I stick around as a nice friend, she will eventually realize her mistake and we can then be boyfriend and girlfriend again.â

Unfortunately, being a nice friend to an ex woman is not enough to get her back.

You've got to trigger her sexual feelings if you want her to stop look at you as just a friend.

Of course, guys who get friend zoned by their girlfriend often don't really know how to make her feel attracted anymore.

[image: Friend zoned by ex girlfriend]

For example:

- He's too much of a pushover and lets her walk all over him.
- He's too emotionally sensitive about things, which makes her have to dull down her personality and confidence to make him feel okay about himself when around her.
- He makes her feel more dominant than him.
- He makes her the most important thing in his life and stops actively pursuing his biggest goals, dreams and ambitions just so he can spend even more time with her.
- He gives her too much power in the relationship.
- He's more neutral and friendly around her than masculine and sexual.

So, if that's what he's offering her in a relationship if she gets back with him, she's not going to change her mind about just wanting to be friends with him.

Instead, she will enjoy knowing that he's available to her when she needs him, but it won't stop her from having sex, dating and falling in love with another guy.

So, if you want to get your ex back for real, make sure that you are ready to make her feel sexually attracted to you again in the ways that will really make a difference to her.

Being her 'friend' is fine, as long as you're not being a platonic, neutral friend.

Make her have sexual feelings for you again based on how you now interact with her.

You think differently, speak differently, feel differently, behave differently and act differently.

You're so much sexier now and it turns her on.

That is what works and you can do it.

Don't doubt yourself.

If you doubt yourself, you will be naturally turning her off because women are not attracted to self doubt in men.

Women are attracted to confidence and self belief in men, so make sure that you rise up to the occasion.

Use this break up as an opportunity to force yourself to quickly become a sexier man.

Most guys are able to transform themselves within a few days to a week (e.g. by becoming more confident, being more emotionally masculine, stop looking at her as the leader of the relationship).

Important: You need to focus on being sexier in terms of emotional attractiveness.

It's not about going to the gym more, getting a new haircut or buying new clothes.

You can do that if you want to, but it's not going to make a difference to her if she's turned off by you emotionally (e.g. because you're insecure, doubt yourself around her, are too neutral).

Another reason why a guy will get friend zoned by his ex girlfriend is that

4. She knows that he doesn't even understand the type of attraction experience she really wants

[image: She knows that she doesn't even understand the kind of attraction experience she really wants]

When a woman starts dating a guy, it's usually because he's got certain traits and qualities that are attractive to her (e.g. heâ□□s confident, he makes her laugh, he treats her well).

Then, when she breaks up with him, itâ□□s mainly because he either stopped displaying the traits and qualities that attracted her to him in the first place, or because his negative qualities overshadow the good things about him.

For example: A guy might be able to make a woman laugh and smile with his great sense of humor and fun personality.

However, if he lacks drive and ambition in his life and doesnâ□□t take his future seriously, a woman may start seeing his funny side in a negative way.

She might start to feel like heâ□□s always just clowning around and hiding from his true potential as a man.

He just likes being in a relationship and spending loads of time with her so he can avoid rising up and reaching his true potential.

It's safe with her.

He can be silly, waste time, laugh and play.

He doesn't have to man up and start achieving big things because he just hang with her.

Yet, here's the thingâ□|

Even though she was initially attracted to him for certain reasons (i.e. his lighthearted, humorous side), it just wasn't enough for her to want to remain in a relationship.

He lacked ambition, or like many guys, was intelligent, but afraid of reaching for bigger success in life because he feared making mistakes, being ridiculed or failing somewhere along the path to success.

As a result, he clung to her like she was his safety blanket in life.

She was his protection from the big, bad world out there.

â□|and she hated that.

She hated the fact that she was stuck with a fearful, immature guy who didn't have enough balls to stand up and start reaching for his true potential as a man by following through on his biggest goals, dreams and ambitions.

So, she dumped him.

As a result, the guy felt like she had just pulled the rug out from under his feet.

She had taken away his life support, his safety blanket and his reason for living.

He then started pouring his heart out to her and telling her how much she means to him, in the hope that it would change how she feels.

Yet, it didn't because that isn't what matters to her.

She knows how much he feels for her, but what matters to her is how much she feels for him.

She is turned off by him because he lacks ambition or doesn't have the balls to follow through and make things happen in his life.

So, she just says something like, "I just want to be friends now. I don't want to be in a relationship anymore" and plans to start moving on as soon as she can.

Of course, most guys don't search for help on this topic until it's too late, so they make all sorts of additional mistakes that turn the woman off even more.

For example: A guy might say things like, â€œI care about you so much. Nothing means as much to me in my life as you do. Please give me another chance. I promise to do anything you want. Iâ€™ll do all the housework from now on if you want. Iâ€™ll let you go out with your friends and Iâ€™ll stay home. Iâ€™ll take you out to restaurants or away for romantic weekends like you always wanted. Iâ€™ll do anything. Just tell me that youâ€™ll reconsider your decision to break up with me. Please!â€

Yet, that's not what she wants him to change about himself, so it just doesn't hit the mark for her.

Rather than make her think, â€œHow sweet! Heâ€™s such a great guy and heâ€™s obviously crazy about me. It doesnâ€™t matter that he doesnâ€™t understand my real reasons for breaking up with him. At least heâ€™s willing to do lots of nice things for me,â€ she think something like, â€œHe doesnâ€™t have a clue why I really broke up with him. Heâ€™s just offering to change random things and hoping that Iâ€™ll be happy with it. Yet, his lack of understanding only makes me feel more determined not to be in a relationship with him anymore. He doesnâ€™t know how to be the kind of man that I want and Iâ€™m not prepared to teach him. Why should I have to help him through everything, when there are men out there who know how to manage a relationship properly without needing a womanâ€™s help? I want a man like that in my life.â€

She just dumps him and tries to move on.

He might be left thinking, “Damnâ€¦ women are so hard to please. I was willing to do anything and she still walked away” because he just doesn't understand the position he put her in.

She didn't want to be his teacher or guide and tell him what she wants and she also didn't want to waste time going away on romantic weekends with him, when she wouldn't have been feeling sexually attracted and in love.

She just wants a man who understands how to be a man, so she can get on with being his loyal, devoted woman who loves him and feels sexually attracted to him.

So, if you want your ex to see you as more than just a friend again, make sure that you improve your ability to attract her in the ways that really matter to her, rather than offering her an attraction experience that doesn't excite or arouse her.

If you attempt to get her back without first giving her what she wants from you (i.e. feelings of attraction, arousal and romantic love), she will simply keep saying, â€œThanks, but I donâ€™t feel the same way about you anymore. I just want to be friends from now on.â€

Another reason why a woman will tell her ex that she just wants to be friends nowâ€¦

5. She's trying to get emotional revenge on him for how bad he made her feel during the relationship

Sometimes, a woman might decide to stay friends with a guy (and give him false hope that over time she may change her mind) as a way of punishing him for treating her badly throughout the relationship, or for disappointing her and wasting her time by never becoming the kind of man she hoped he would be.

For example: If a guy took his woman for granted when they were together (e.g. by letting her do most of the housework without pulling his weight/expecting her run all the errands for the both of them/breaking his promises to her over and over again), she might decide to make him suffer for as long as possible after the break up.

She may think, "I'm going to give him some of his own medicine now that we're broken up. I'll tell him I want to be friends and use him to help me fix things around the house, run errands for me or pay for outstanding bills. I'll let him think that he has a chance and when he gets his hopes up really high, I'll tell him that I just don't feel attracted to him and don't want to in contact with him anymore. Let's see how he likes to be used and taken for granted."

Naturally, when that happens, the guy is left wondering, "What the? I thought we were getting along so well. I was treating her like a princess and being as good to her as I possibly could. What went wrong? I just don't get it. What did I do wrong?"

What he did wrong is that he failed to use the friendship to actively make her have sexual feelings for him.

He just assumed that by being nice and sweet and doing everything she wanted him to do, it would be enough to take away the negative feelings that she'd been holding on to.

Yet, that's not how the ex back works.

If you don't actively make your ex have sexual feelings for you when you interact with her, she will continue to see you as just a friend.

For a relationship between a man and a woman to be more than a friendship, the all-important sexual spark needs to be there.

Luckily, the spark is something that you can create when you talk to her and interact with her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why Does My Girlfriend Have No Interest in Trying to Get Our Relationship Back Together?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

6 possible reasons why a woman will behave that way towards her boyfriend areâ€¦!

1. She doesn't think that he can change the things she secretly wants him to change

[image: She doesn't believe he can change the things that really matter to her]

Women can't always be honest about what they want a guy to change.

For example: If a woman is in a relationship with her boyfriend and notices that he's just not confident enough in the bedroom, or he feels shy around very confident people, she's not necessarily going to admit to him that she feels turned off by it.

In the bedroom, she might ask him, "Why are you so tense? Relax" or "Why are you so quiet when we have sex?" as a way of hinting to him that she wants him to be more confident and real.

In social situations, she might ask him, "Why did you react that when Peter made fun of you? Why didn't you stand up for yourself?" or, "Why can't you just get along with Jenny and her friends? You always seem so quiet and reserved" as a way of hinting to him that she wants him to be more confident.

If he doesn't take her hints seriously and then start becoming a more confident man, she will gradually lose so much respect and attraction for him that she will want to end the relationship.

Here's the thingâ€¦!

In most cases, when a woman breaks up with a guy, itâ€¦s usually after sheâ€¦s given him plenty of chances beforehand.

For example: A woman might say to a guy, "I'm tired of arguing and fighting with you all the time about the same things. Our relationship is just becoming too stressful for me to cope anymore. If you don't make some drastic changes, I think it will be best if we just break up and go our separate ways."

Unfortunately, a guy might then assume that she's just tired of all the disagreements they're having and if he avoids arguments, everything will be fine.

He might then start tiptoeing around his woman and making every effort to avoid getting into an argument with her.

Yet, the arguments are not the problem.

The arguments are a symptom of deeper problems that still exist in the relationship and if he doesn't fix those, it won't matter to her that they're no longer arguing as much.

She wants him to fix the core problem, rather than avoiding the symptoms of it (i.e. arguing).

For example: A woman might throw a tantrum with her guy because he came home late from work and the dinner she prepared for the both of them was missed.

She ended up having to eat alone and didn't hear from him with an explanation about why he was coming back late because he just ignored her texts, to avoid getting into an argument.

When he gets home, she might say something like, â€œIâ€™m tired of slaving in a hot kitchen to make something nice for you and then having to throw it all away because you canâ€™t pick up the damn phone to tell me that youâ€™re going to be late.â€

Of course, she doesn't have to throw away the food and is simply being dramatic, but that's women for you.

Women will often turn something small into a huge problem just to be able to throw a tantrum and see how you react.

Will you be able to maintain your confident, good nature and turn her tantrum into something that you and her can both laugh about together?

Will you lose control of your emotions and get very angry at her?

Will you apologize over and over and try to suck up to her to make it up to her?

What kind of a man are you when you are put under that kind of pressure?

Are you going to realize your mistake, apologize for it, but then be the man and guide the interaction back to love and laughter, so both of you can not only grow from the experience, but feel better about it?

Unfortunately, most guys don't really know how to turn an angry woman into a happy, loving, understood woman, so they end up causing more of a rift between themselves and her.

For example: A guy might try to just calm her down by apologizing to her for his behavior and hoping that she gets over it.

He doesn't plan on never making that mistake again, but instead, just wants her to calm down, shut up and let him relax after a hard day of work.

So, he might say, â€œIâ€™m sorry. Youâ€™re right, that was very thoughtless of me. Thank you for making the dinner. I really should have replied to you or let you know, but I was so busy at work. Sorry.â€

If the relationship is fairly new or if the woman is totally in love with him, she will accept the apology and just hope it doesn't happen again.

However, if the relationship is already starting to fall apart (i.e. she has been losing respect, attraction and love for him), then she's not going to be willing to just forget about it and keep letting him get away with treating her in that way.

If he had been taking her for granted for some time now, she's going to know that he's probably not going to change unless she breaks up with him.

If she keeps putting up with it, the relationship will continue turning into more of a 'take love' relationship than a 'share love' relationship.

In other words, he will take all the love, kindness, generosity and benefits she can offer him, but won't give her an equal amount in return.

He will take her presence for granted and just expect her to put up with it.

If he wants her to stop feeling annoyed at him and keep giving him the benefits, he might promise to change, but not really mean it.

He might start to call her or reply to her texts if he's going to be late home from work, but he will continue taking her for granted in so many other ways, so she just won't feel appreciated in the relationship.

Eventually, she will get to a point where she either cheats on him (a common exit strategy for a woman in a relationship like that), or she will break up with him and try to get over him and move on as quickly as she can.

She will know that he has an ability to charm her with his words, so she will try to steer clear of him and meet new guys, to help herself feel like she doesn't need him anymore.

Not knowing what else to do, he might start pleading with her and saying things like, â€œPlease, just give me one more chance. I promise that this time, things really will be different between us. I will treat you like a princess from now on because you deserve it. I'm sorry. Please give me another chance.â€

Yet, by that stage, a woman usually won't believe that he could really change the things that have been secretly turning her off, so she will say something like, â€œI have no interest in trying to get our relationship back together anymore. It's over and you need to accept that. Please leave me alone.â€

[image: Playing video games all weekend and expecting her to just wait around in the background]

In most cases, she's not going to list off all the subtle things that were turning her off (e.g. how he seemed to be more interested in his smartphone than her, how he played video games on weekends and just expected her to hang around the house doing nothing, how he showed more appreciation and respect to his friends than he did to her).

Why?

She doesn't want him to then say, “I promise to fix those things and anything else you want me to do as well. I will do it. I promise.”

Why?

She doesn't want to be responsible for shaping him into the man that he needs to become.

She just wants him to figure it out on his own, rather than leaning on her for guidance and support.

If he can't figure out where he has been going wrong now, she believes that he won't understand later on in life as well, so he will continue to disappoint her.

Of course, she might be wrong about that, but she doesn't want to take the risk and end up having to be his teacher, guide and support system for life.

So, the first step to making your girlfriend interested in trying to get the relationship back together, is to understand her secret, more subtle reasons for breaking up with you.

For example:

- She wanted you to be more ballsy, but you were always so neutral and nice.
- She wanted you to be more ambitious and driven, but you were always complaining about how hard life was and coming up with excuses for your lack of success.
- She wanted you to make her feel loved, appreciated and noticed, but you were always completely focused on your career and continuing to be as successful as you are, so she felt like she had to wait around in the background of your life.

- She wanted you to be more emotionally strong, but you were always so sensitive about things.

You've got to change, adjust or improve what really matters to her.

Then, the next time you interact with her, she will be able to pick up on the fact that you're longer the same guy she broke up with.

You really have changed and as a result, a relationship with you really would be different now.

The more she experiences the new you, the more interested she will become in getting the relationship back together again.

Another reason why a guy's ex girlfriend might not have any interesting in trying to get the relationship back together is becauseâ€¦

2. She is still turned off by how he begged and pleaded for another chance

[image: She is still turned off by how he begged and pleaded for another chance]

Some guys will beg, plead and even cry to a woman in a state of desperation after a break up.

As a result of his display of emotional weakness, she will lose almost all respect and attraction for him right away and feel like she just has to continue on with the break up and move on.

Women are repulsed by emotional weakness in men and magnetically attracted to emotional strength.

Of course, getting broken up with is hard, but that's just the kind of moment a woman gets to see how strong her man really is.

For example: A guy might appear very upset and say things like, â€œPlease forgive me! I know I stuffed up, but I promise to make it up to you. I beg you to just give our relationship one more chance.â€

When she refuses to give him another chance, he might become even more upset to the point where he sheds a tear or two (or more).

He then tries to beg her for another chance and making her feel sorry for him because of how hurt and broken he is now that she is leaving him.

Yet, rather than make a woman change her mind, her survival instinct kicks in and she begins to think, â€œDoesn't he realize that all his begging and pleading is actually turning me off even more? How does he expect me to be able to feel respect for him when he's falling apart like this? Doesn't he realize that women are attracted to emotional strength and turned off by emotional weakness? If he can't cope with a simple break up, how am I expected to believe that he will be able to handle other challenging things in his life (e.g. financial problems, marriage, raising a family, problems with friends, problems at work)? Could I even rely on him to be a strong man during times like that? Would I have to be the stronger one take care of him instead? No way. I don't want that. I need an emotionally strong, masculine man that I can look up to and respect. I need a man who makes me feel safe and protected, not a guy who needs me to help him along through life and make him feel secure. He just doesn't understand how to be a real man. I've got to get away from him and move on.â€

If the guy doesn't understand the mistake he is making (i.e. begging, pleading and being an emotionally wussy turns her off), he will often continue along the same path and turn her off even more.

If he does realize the mistake, he might not even know what else to do.

As a result, he might just decide to cut off contact and hope that she misses him.

Yet, she doesn't really care about him and the relationship anymore, so she doesn't have much or any interest in trying to get the relationship back together.

By the wayâ€¦

Did something like that happen between you and your girlfriend?

If it did, don't worry.

It's not the end of the world.

You can recover from it by getting her to forgive you for being so emotional during and after the break up.

For example: You can say something along the lines of, â€œWow! Did I mess that up or what? I got so upset over the idea of losing you that I reacted like an immature little boy. I can't believe I did that. I look back on it now and laugh at how I was acting. So silly. No wonder you're not interested in trying to get our relationship together now. I don't blame you. If I was in your shoes, I'd probably feel the same way too. So, I just wanted to say sorry for acting like an idiot. I now understand why my behavior made you feel like you didn't want to be around me anymore. I mean what kind of woman wants to hang out with a wimpy, needy guy, right? I was being such an idiot and I'm sorry.â€

Let her say something and then add in, â€œBy the way. Something I'd like you to understand is that even though I reacted badly, it was just a mistake and not who I am as a person. I have learned from it and I'm not that guy anymore. I meanâ€¦think about thisâ€¦I'm sure you've made some mistakes you're not proud of in your life, right? Yet, that's not who you are now. It's just what you did back then. Everyone trips up sometimes and as long as you can learn from it and improve as a person, it's not something that should define you for the rest of your life. Of course, I don't expect you believe that I have fully changed, but if you can forgive me, we can at least move forward in our lives with a clean slate as friends. I'm not asking you to take me back, just that we try to be friends for now. What do you say, can you forgive me?â€

In most cases, a woman will say â€œYes,â€ because she will already be impressed that you have the confidence and maturity to own up to your mistakes and say something like that to her.

However, rememberâ€¦

Just saying something like that to your ex girlfriend isn't the magic solution to making her interested in trying to get your relationship back together.

It's simply the first step of showing her that you have realized your mistakes and have already begun to change and improve as a man.

She then finds it much easier to start experiencing feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you once again.

Then, from that point onwards, you just need to continue showing her via your actions (e.g. by being confident around her regardless of what she's saying or doing to annoy you, using humor to get her out of a bad mood, making her feel girly and feminine in comparison to your masculine vibe and behavior) that you really have changed.

Another reason why a woman might say that is becauseâ€”

3. He was clingy and needy and she now feels relieved to be away from him

[image: Relieved to be finally broken up from her clingy boyfriend]

One of the most common reasons why a woman will break up with a guy is because he just became too clingy and needy, to the point where she felt suffocated by the relationship.

Yet, when she breaks up with him, rather than showing her that he understands her reasons for breaking up with him and has already begun to change, a guy like that will often react by saying things like, â€œPlease don't do this to me. I can't live without you! You're my everything. Life isn't worth living without you in it. Please let's just try to work this out. What we have is so special to me. I don't want to lose you.â€

His reaction only highlights to her that he doesn't understand why she is breaking up with him and probably isn't capable of changing.

So, she closes up and shows no interest in trying to get the relationship back together, even though they used to be so in love and had experience so many good times together.

She's no longer interested because he just isn't changing and she can't afford to wait any longer.

Women have an instinct to not waste time with a guy who isn't suitable for her because of how their fertility works.

While men can still impregnate a woman at 70 years of age, a woman's fertility rapidly declines when she gets to 30 years of age.

Even if a woman doesn't want children, is too young for children or hates children, she is still largely controlled by her breeding instincts.

Her instincts tell her to not waste time with a guy who isn't going to be capable of being the kind of man she needs to be happy, feel protected and be in love with.

So, if a woman breaks up with a guy and can see that he doesn't even understand what to change or how to change it, her instincts will tell her to leave him and find a more suitable replacement guy.

How about you?

Was one of the reasons for the break up with your girlfriend because you were too clingy and needy, which then made her feel suffocated by the relationship?

If so, you need to show her that you're definitely not that kind of guy anymore.

How can you do that?

By reacting differently to the way she expects you to.

For example: If she says that she's not interested in trying to get your relationship back, she'll expect you to get upset and try to change her mind.

Instead, you don't get upset and simply turn it into something that you and her can laugh about together.

You can say something like, â€œYouâ€™re right. I donâ€™t want you back either. Iâ€™ve finally had a good nightâ€™s sleep now that youâ€™re not there to keep me awake with all your snoring.â€

Sheâ€™ll probably then laugh and say something like, â€œHow can you say that? I donâ€™t snore! You snore!â€ and you can reply in a joking way, â€œThatâ€™s what you think because you havenâ€™t seen the petition signed by all the neighbors. You were so damn loud. I secretly had to wear ear plugs to get any sleep around youâ€ and have a laugh with her about it.

She will then have first hand evidence that youâ€™re no longer reacting in the same way as you used to (i.e. always pushing to get a relationship).

Now, you actually have the confidence to relax and focus on making her have feelings for you and actually enjoy interacting with you.

As a result, her guard comes down and she starts to feel interested in being in a relationship with you again to see how it goes now that youâ€™ve changed.

Another possible reason why sheâ€™s not interested in getting the relationship back togetherâ€™

4. She already has a new guy or is flirting with a guy that she really likes and hopes to get into a relationship with

[image: She already has a new guy, or is flirting with a guy she likes]

This isnâ€™t something that most women will openly admit to their ex boyfriend.

Why?

She is afraid of how he may react (e.g. He gets angry and possibly becomes aggressive or even violent towards her. He threatens, or even gets into a fight with the other guy. He becomes emotional and starts begging and pleading with her to change her mind. He shows up at her house unannounced and demands to speak to her. He bombards her with angry, insulting texts messages about how she is moving on so quickly).

So, rather than take the risk of being on the receiving end of his attacks, she tries to let him down lightly by saying that sheâ€™s not interested in getting back together again.

She hopes that he will then give up, or make one of the most classic ex back mistakes of all and give her 30 to 60 days of space.

She then uses the space to hook up with the guy she has been flirting with or get out and find herself a replacement guy to move on with.

Then, if her ex calls her after 30 to 60 days, she can say, â€œSorry, but you havenâ€™t called me in weeks/months. If you wanted me back, you should have gotten in touch with me earlier. I thought you werenâ€™t interested in me anymore, so I met someone else and have moved on. Iâ€™m very happy now with my new boyfriend, so please donâ€™t call me again because I donâ€™t want to ruin things with him. Itâ€™s over between you and me. I wish you all the best. Goodbye.â€

So many guys get that kind of outcome when they give their ex girlfriend too much space, rather than re-attracting her and making her want the relationship again.

If youâ€™re in a position at the moment where you can still contact her, make sure that you use any contact or interaction that you have with her to reactivate and build on her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

If you do that, she will naturally be interested in getting the relationship back together again.

Another reason why a woman might not be interested is thatâ€¦!

5. She only ever wanted a quick relationship

Sometimes a woman isnâ€™t interested in getting into a long, serious relationship with a guy (e.g. because she feels like she is too young to settle down, heâ€™s not her ideal match, heâ€™s just a rebound guy or she just wants to have fun).

So, even though heâ€™s heartbroken and desperately wants another chance at a relationship, the thought of getting back together wonâ€™t really enter her mind because in her heart, she always knew that he was just a temporary stop along the road for her.

If she also knows that sheâ€™s perfectly capable of finding a new guy who wants to sleep with her and give a new relationship a try, sheâ€™ll usually just keep saying, â€œNo. Itâ€™s over. Iâ€™m just not interestedâ€ to her ex as she moves on.

One more reason why a woman might not be interested in a relationship anymore is thatâ€¦!

6. She actually does want him back, but isn't going to help him make it happen

Even if a woman still has feelings for her ex, sheâ€™s usually not going to make it easy for him to get her back.

Why?

She wants to see that he has the maturity and emotional strength to confidently guide her back into a relationship, even though she is being cold, distant or even rude towards him.

If he can take the lead and guide her through the ex back process, not only will she be interested in trying to get the relationship back together again, but she will also feel exciting rushes of respect and attraction for him as a man.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

The amount of respect and attraction your ex girlfriend feels for you is essentially within your control.

Youâ€™re either saying and doing things right now that are making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you (e.g. being confident, being emotionally strong and independent, making her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you) or youâ€™re not (e.g. being self-doubting and insecure when you interact with her, being too serious with her, being afraid to make her feel attracted to you again by flirting with her).

Itâ€™s entirely up to you which guy you want to be.

You can either be a turn off to her or a turn on.

You are in control of that.

Women react to men and change their mind based on how the man is making her feel.

So, if you want your girlfriend to be interested in trying to get your relationship back together again, you have to be willing to let go of the old you and embrace the new you.

You've got to start making her feel attracted in new and exciting ways.

Make her want you back based on her reactivated and reenergized feelings for you, rather than trying to convince her to give you another chance because you want it.

Remember: Women react to men and change their mind based on how the man is making her feel.

How have you been making her feel the last couple of times you interacted with her?

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Said That She Doesn't Want to Jump Back Into a Relationship With Me Right Now

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex said that she doesn't want to jump back into a relationship with you right now are:

1. She wants to find a new man before you find a new woman. She will then say that it's really over between you and her

[image: She wants to move on before you do]

A woman will do this to avoid seeing her ex boyfriend (or husband) move on quicker than her.

She will give him hope that she's interested in a relationship, but will be secretly trying to find a replacement guy and begin to move on, so she can say to her ex that it's over now and he needs to stop pursuing her.

As a result, her ex guy is the one who left feeling hurt, rejected and left behind, while she avoids the pain of being in that position herself.

Some women do that out of selfishness, other women do it for revenge and other women do it because they're not very confident about their attractiveness to other men and don't want to end up becoming even more insecure after the break up.

For example: After a break up, a woman might be feeling a bit vulnerable and insecure about her attractiveness to men.

As a result, she might be finding it difficult to fully let go of her ex because she's worried that she won't be able to find herself a new man who will stick with her after sex.

She then might then say to herself, "After everything he put me through in the relationship, I don't want to be the one who is left hurting and feeling bad as he moves on with another woman. So, I'm going to string him along by telling him that I don't want to jump into a relationship with him right now and make him believe there's a small chance we will get back together again. In the meantime, I'm going to get out there and find myself a replacement man before he gets another girl. I have to take care of myself for once. He put me through a lot of crap in the relationship and I'm not going to take it anymore. I have to come out of this on top."

She will then try to go out to bars with her single friends, attend parties and use dating apps like Tinder to get some quick dates or quick sex.

If she finds a suitable replacement guy, she will usually then have a false sense of confidence about herself being more attractive and valuable than him.

Here's the thing!

If you want your ex to give you another chance, you must make sure that you're not giving her the impression that she is more attractive and valuable than you.

You've got to actively make her have feelings for you, so she can be reminded of the fact that you are a cool guy and that you do deserve a woman like her.

Don't let her get it in her head that she's better than you and you're so unworthy now.

No.

You are worthy.

The way to remind her of that is to make her feel it!

If you are actively making your ex have feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you, then she is going to open herself up to getting back into a relationship with you.

However, if you're just trying to get another chance by asking her or by being a friendly ex, then you're going to be disappointed.

When getting an ex back, what really makes all the difference is when you actively trigger feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside of her.

When you do that, you don't have to waste time trying to explain things to her or hopefully convince her to give you another chance after weeks of discussing it.

She feels it right away and opens back up to you.

Yet, most guys don't know that they need to focus on triggering feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.

As a result, man guys turn their ex woman off by behaving in unattractive ways (e.g. begging and pleading with her for another chance, being extra nice to her, sucking up to her, bombarding her with texts, pouring his heart out in long letters or e-mails).

A guy will hope that if he can just show her how much he cares, she will then take pity on him and give him another chance.

Unfortunately, that approach doesn't work on the majority of women because they see it as desperate and pathetic, rather than confident, kind and sincere.

So, a woman will just try even harder to find herself a new guy so she can then say, "Look, it's over between us now. I'm sorry if I gave you the impression that we might get back together again. We're not getting back together. I have a new boyfriend now and I'm really happy. You need to accept that and move on."

She might then unfriend him or unfollow him from social media, block his phone and no longer open any of his e-mails.

The guy is then left feeling hurt, rejected and left behind.

He thought he was making progress with her by begging, pleading, explaining, convincing and sucking up to her, but it wasn't working.

If you want your ex back for real, make sure that you are ready and willing to do what it takes to trigger feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside of her.

If you just want to be neutral, nice and boring about your approach to her, then you can't expect her to be excited about it.

You've got to make her feel something and then build on those feelings and get her back.

Likewise, if you just cut off contact and wait for her to come back to you on her own, then you're probably going to end up feeling disappointed and betrayed when you find out that she's moved on with another man.

The approach that you have been using so far hasn't been working.

So, if you want her back for real, make sure that you're willing to approach her in a different way from now on.

Another reason why a woman might say that she doesn't want to jump into a relationship with you right now is that

2. She only wants to have casual sex with you when she feels like it, but doesn't want to settle down at this point in her life

[image: She only wants to have sex with you]

Sometimes, a woman will break up with a guy because she doesn't want the kind of relationship that he wants.

For example: A guy might feel like he's met the woman of his dreams, so he settles down, gets married and starts a family with her.

Yet, the woman might feel like she's not ready to commit to one guy for life at this point in life.

She might then break up with him and be open to keeping him around as a 'friend with benefits' (i.e. she uses him for sex when she feels like it, but isn't interested in being in a relationship with him).

Of course, this means that she's not going to be faithful to her ex anymore.

So, if she meets a guy who makes her feel like she is ready to settle down, the friends with benefits arrangement will come to a sudden end.

That's one of the funny things about women that

A woman will usually say one thing and then do the complete opposite of what she feels like it.

This change can happen in an hour, a day, a week, a month, a year or more.

In other words, you can't rely on a woman's word.

Women are not men.

If a man gives his word about something, it means that he has made a logical, rational decision that he will stick to.

However, if a woman gives her word about something, it usually means that she's just saying what she feels in the moment and as a result, her decision is completely open to change if her emotions change tomorrow or the next day.

This is why you should never follow the lead of a woman in a relationship.

If you do, she will lead you around in circles and through zig zag paths that go nowhere, because she's just following her changing emotions.

This is also why a woman wants to be with a man who can confidently take the lead in a relationship and not be thrown off her changing mood, opinions, feelings or desires.

If a guy follows her around, they will go nowhere fast and she will feel turned off by the fact that he isn't strong enough to lead a woman like her.

So, if your ex is saying that she doesn't want to jump back into a relationship with you right now, it could mean that she's currently only open to having casual sex hook ups.

However, take note of the word 'currently.'

She might currently feel that way, but you can change how she feels and make her want to have an exclusive, committed relationship with you today, tomorrow or the next day.

If you can then be the kind of man that makes her feel the way she wants to feel in a relationship, she will stick with you for life.

How can you do that?

You've got to be able to guide her through the stages of a relationship, get to stage 5 and then keep it thereâ€¦!

If you can do that, it's highly unlikely that you and her will ever break up again.

Women know how difficult it is to find a man who can create and maintain that type of dynamic in a relationship.

So, if your ex is open to just having casual sex with you, but doesn't want a relationship right now, don't worry â€¦ you can change her mind by changing how she feels whenever she interacts with you from now on.

Make sure that every time she comes to you for sex, as well as all the times in between, you make her feel so much respect and attraction for you that she feels compelled to upgrade your relationship from friends with benefits to boyfriend/girlfriend or husband/wife.

Another reason why your ex might not want to jump into a relationship right now is thatâ€¦!

3. You've become too needy and clingy and she doesn't know how to make you stop

[image: You have become too clingy and needy and she doesn't know how to get you to stop]

Itâ€¦s perfectly okay for you to miss your ex and want her back.

You and her had something special together and you want to experience that again.

Thereâ€¦s nothing wrong with that and thereâ€¦s nothing wrong with doing whatever is necessary to get her back.

However, there are certain personality traits (e.g. confidence, determination, emotional maturity) that will attract a woman and make her say, â€¦I think I made a mistake by breaking up with him. I want him back,â€¦ and then there are others that will turn her off and push her further away (e.g. insecurity, neediness, clinginess, desperation).

So, when a guy starts behaving in unattractive ways after a break up, rather than convince a woman to give him another chance, she begin to look for ways to make him stop pursuing her and leave her alone.

For example: A woman might say to herself, â€¦Heâ€¦s being so clingy and needy. Itâ€¦s driving me crazy! If I had my doubts about breaking up with him before, I donâ€¦t' anymore. Heâ€¦s convinced me that Iâ€¦ve made the right decision by breaking up with him. I don't want to be with a guy who is as emotionally fragile as him. He's losing it. I have to get away from him and move on as quickly as I can, or he will drag me back into a relationship.â€¦

If he doesn't stop pursuing her in a needy way, she will try to destroy things between them by being unreasonable, rude or selfish.

For instance, she might tell him to only text her from now on because she won't answer his calls ever again, or say that she can't see him for 4 weeks because she has a busy project at work.

Alternatively, she might tell him that he can only see her when he runs errands for her, or if he helps pay her rent.

Secretly, she is hoping that by treating him badly, he will begin to hate her and then give up on the idea of getting her back.

Yet, some guys just take the punishment and give into her unreasonable demands.

As a result, she sees him being desperate and pathetic and it turns her off even more.

So, even though he was thinking that putting up with her bad behavior and agreeing to all of her unreasonable demands might make her happy, it simply makes things worse.

Here's the thing:

If you want to convince your ex to give the relationship another chance, you need to show her that you're not a needy, clingy guy anymore (e.g. by enjoying a fun life that is independent of your relationship with her).

You also need to let her see that she can't push you around by making unreasonable demands anymore.

For example: If your ex puts restrictions on when and how you can contact her, rather than give in to try and please her, just show her instead that you're now a much more confident, emotionally strong man who believes in himself.

How can you do that?

By laughing at her demands and saying something like, "Relax girl...no need to be so fussy and demanding" or, "Well, aren't you a Little Miss Fussy Pants today?" or, "Anything else you want me to do? Maybe only text a maximum of 10 words, or only speak to you for 35 seconds on a call?" and then have a laugh with her about that.

In other words, don't take her fake demands so seriously.

Laugh at her for being a pain in the butt.

When she can see for herself that not only aren't you being clingy or needy anymore, but you're also not buying into her bullying tactics and letting her walk all over you, she won't be able to stop herself from seeing you differently.

She will feel sparks of respect and attraction for you and begin to consider that there may actually be a chance for you and her again after all.

Of course, when you make her feel that way, don't make the mistake of immediately trying to get her to commit to a relationship.

No.

You've got to build on her renewed feelings for you and let her naturally want to be in a relationship with you, rather than making her feel like you're forcing her into it.

Another reason why your ex might not want to jump into a relationship with you right now is that:

4. She wants to party with her single girlfriends, hook up with a different guy and see how she feels

Sometimes, a woman might decide that being single again seems like it would be more fun than being in a relationship.

This is especially true if she's really young or inexperienced and this was her first serious relationship with a guy, or if she's in a relationship that has lost its spark after being together for years or decades.

If she's young (i.e. under 30), she might say to herself, "Why should I be stuck with one guy when all my friends are having so much fun being single and dating new guys all the time? I want to enjoy myself and party too before I settle down and get serious with one man. Besides, how will I ever know if he's the right man for me, if I've never been with enough other guys to know what I really want?"

She might then say to her ex, "Look, I don't want to jump back into a relationship with you right now. I want to be single for a while and hang out with my friends and have a bit of fun. Just give me a chance to be by myself for a while and maybe sometime in the future, we can get back together again."

Unfortunately, that's a woman's promise and as you would know if you read the earlier parts of this article, it doesn't mean much.

When a woman gives you her word, it's based on how she is feeling in the moment.

It's like not like a man giving you his word about something (e.g. "I promise to have your back as a friend for life" or, "If you help me fix my car, I will help you paint your house").

When a real man (not a wimpy guy, insecure guy, selfish guy) gives his word, he means it and he will follow through on it.

So, if your ex girl has said something like, "Maybe we can get back together in the future," don't count on it.

She is totally willing to change that promise if she feels differently a minute, an hour, a day or a week later.

In other words, she will do it if she feels like it, not because she promised it.

So, a mistake that some guys make is asking, "How long do you need me to wait?" and then waiting patiently for the agreed amount of space she has asked for (e.g. a month, a few months), without doing anything to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for him during that time.

Here's the thing!

There's nothing wrong with giving your ex a bit of space (e.g. up to a week) if she needs that time to calm down, relax and gather her thoughts.

However, if you're going to be waiting for her to come back and say, "I've had my fun and I've decided you're the man for me. Let's get back together again," you're almost certainly going to be disappointed because most women just move on.

To get her back into a relationship, you have to make her want you back by actively making her feel respect, sexual attraction and love for you again.

You have to interact with her (via text, e-mail, social media, on the phone and in person) and trigger her feelings for you at every chance you get.

Then, the idea of hanging out with her single friends, or hooking up with another guy starts to seem less and less appealing to her.

She stops trying to convince you that sheâs not ready for a relationship right now and starts wanting to be your girl again.

On the other hand, if you do nothing other than wait for her to ‘come to her senses,’ chances are you will be waiting a long time, only to discover that sheâs moved on with another guy.

Another possible reason why your ex doesn’t want to jump into a relationship with you right now, is thatâ|

5. You still haven’t fixed the things that secretly turn her off

[image: You still haven't fixed the things that secretly turn her off]

Your ex will have admitted a reason or some reasons why she ended the relationship, but not all.

For example: She might have wished that you’d be more manly and put her back in her place as your woman, rather than being soft and nice all the time.

Yet, if she’s like most women, she’s not going to have the courage or desire to tell you that.

She will just want to be with a man who gets it.

Here’s another exampleâ|.

A couple begins a relationship and in the beginning, everything seems pretty much perfect.

Both of them feel like they could possibly have a real future together (i.e. get married, start a family) as a couple.

However, over time, things began to change.

They were arguing and fighting a lot more about trivial things (e.g. he forgot to take out the garbage, he didn’t call to tell her that he invited a friend over to dinner, she was nagging him about watching too much TV all the time) and the love and happiness started to fade away.

Soon enough, the relationship felt more like a burden than a benefit.

There was more anger and hostility between them than love and attraction, so she eventually got tired of it and ended the relationship.

If the guy still loved her and wanted to get her back to do better this time around, he might make the mistake of trying to get her back in ways that she doesn’t really care about.

For example: He might send her flowers, write her a love letter to declare his feelings for her or buy her a gift to show how much he cares.

Yet, rather than make her change her mind, she says something like, *âThanks. Youâre being really sweet and itâs not that I donât appreciate all the nice, romantic things that you’ve been doing for me, but I just donât want to jump back into a relationship with you right now.*â

Essentially, what sheâs saying (without actually using these words) is, âThanks, but you donât have a clue why we really broke up. You’re just trying to get me to ignore the problems *with flowers, letters and gifts. Although you mean well, you're still the same guy as before, so we would still experience the same kind of problems as before.*â□□

From his perspective, he might be willing to change, adjust, improve and do anything she wants to get her back, but that's not enough.

She doesn't care that he's willing to do it.

She wants to be able to see the changes in him based on how he now thinks, talks, behaves and acts. For example: If she was always nagging him about watching too much TV, it means that she wanted him to be more driven and live life with purpose like a real man.

So, after the break up, if he starts following through on his big goals, dreams and ambitions, she can then believe that things might actually be different if she gives him another chance.

Yet, if he buys her flowers, apologizes and promises to change, she will see that as a cover up gift and an empty promise.

As the old saying goes, "Actions speak louder than words."

You've got show take the right actions though, if you want to get the desired effect.

Buying her flowers and writing her a letter is an action, but is it the right action for your situation?

Probably not, right?

I've been working on ex back cases for years and I've never seen an example where flowers and a letter sealed the deal and got a woman back.

Men who successfully get their woman back are the ones who focus on re-attracting her and regaining her respect by changing, improving or adjusting the things that had been secretly (or obviously) turning her off.

The man then confidently follows through and guides her back into a relationship by building on her feelings as he goes.

So, how about you?

Do you know what you need to change, adjust or improve to be able to properly re-attract her?

If youâ□□re not sure, just ask yourselfâ□!

- Did I stop making her feel loved and appreciated?
- Did I become too insecure in the relationship?
- Did I turn the relationship into more of a friendship?
- Was I not affectionate enough?
- Was I too affectionate to the point where she felt smothered by me?
- Was she able to be herself around me, or did she have to dull down or change her personality to make me feel better about myself?
- Was the sexual attraction between us mutual, or was it just me who felt the urge?
- Were her expectations of the relationship being fulfilled?
- Did I make her feel as though I needed her way more than she needed me?
- Was I being manly enough for her?
- Did I become too emotionally sensitive?

Can you relate to any of those potential reasons for her losing touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you?

It's essential that you understand her real reasons for wanting to exit the relationship, so you can then make changes or adjustments that she's actually going to feel attracted to and care about.

When she sees that you understand where you went wrong and have already taken action to improve, she won't be able to stop herself from seeing you in a more positive light.

Her mind might be telling her, â€œNo. Don't jump back into a relationship with him again. Give yourself time to get over him and move on,â€ but her heart will be saying, â€œThis is the man you always wanted him to be. So, don't be a fool and let him get away now. Give him a chance. He's obviously different now. You clearly feel better around him. Just give him a chance and see how it goes.â€

She then drops her defenses and allows the final steps of the ex back process to happen.

Before you know it, she's telling you that she loves you, you're having sex and you're enjoying a committed relationship once again.

Best of all, this time around, she really wants it.

She's so much more attracted to you now and so much more in love, so it's a different kind of relationship experience.

She's your girl and she really wants to be with you now.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Keeps Telling Me Not to Pressure Her About Getting Back Together

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your ex keeps telling you not to pressure her about getting back together, you simply need to change the way you are approaching the ex back process from now on.

So, if what you've been doing so far hasn't worked, here's what you should do instead:

1. Stop talking about the relationship via text, e-mail or social media messages

Rather than using your contact with her to annoy her by discussing the relationship, you need to use it to make her have feelings for you again.

When you do that, she will naturally open up to getting back together without you having to pressure her into it.

Make sure that you use every interaction that you have with her from now on to make her feel sparks of respect and attraction for you.

When you do that, her guard will come down because you're now letting her want you back naturally, rather than making her feel like you are trying to force her into giving you another chance.

The next thing you need to do to change how your ex feels right now is to

2. Focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good when she interacts with you

[image: Focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good when she interacts with you]

One of the best ways to ease the negative, awkward or unhappy tension between you and your ex is by making her laugh and smile every time you interact with her from now on.

Think about it this way

How would you feel if you dumped a woman and didn't want to be with her anymore, but she kept pressuring you to give her another chance?

Would you say to yourself, "Oh, it's fine. I'm not attracted to her anymore, but who cares. She obviously loves me, so I will give her another chance," or would you be thinking something like, "She is so annoying. Why is she pressuring me like this when she can see that I clearly don't have feelings for her anymore?"

Chances are high that you'd probably want to remain broken up with her if you no longer felt respect and attraction for her, right?

You might even tell her to stop pressuring you about getting back together and then try to cut her out of your life completely (e.g. unfriend her on Facebook, unfollow her on other social media, block her number).

By thinking about in that way, hopefully you can now understand why your ex is feeling annoyed that you've been pressuring her to get back with you, even though you haven't reactivated her feelings of respect and attraction.

You want her back, but she doesn't feel the same way right now, so she looks at your attempts to get her back at frustrating or annoying.

So, if you want to get her back, make sure that from now on, you make her smile and laugh whenever you talk to her.

Don't pressure her to get back with you and don't try to discuss the relationship or fix things between you and her by talking it out.

Just allow her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you.

That's what really matters the most to her.

After all, you have strong feelings for her and want her back, but she's just not feeling the same way right now.

So, you need to get her smiling, laughing and feeling good while talking to you.

When you do that, you help her to let go of negative feelings for you (e.g. anger, bitterness, disappointment) and replace them with positive feelings (e.g. respect, attraction, happiness, intrigue and excitement).

Even if she tries to resist the feelings, she just won't be able to stop herself from relaxing, opening up and enjoying interacting with you again.

The more she interacts with you and sees that you're not being like you used to be (e.g. needy, insecure, desperate to get her back), the more she becomes open to getting back with you again.

She stops telling you not to pressure her about getting back together and starts saying things like, â€œI didn't think we could ever feel comfortable with each other again like this, but you've really surprised me. You're so different now. I enjoy talking to you and I don't know why. Maybe we should meet up for a cup of coffee sometime. What do you think?â€

The next step is to

3. Get her to forgive the old you

Getting your ex to forgive you is a very important step if you want her to feel good about the idea of getting back together again.

However, it's very important that you get her to forgive you for her own well being, so she willingly forgives you.

If she senses that forgiving you all about you and what you want (i.e. so you can feel better about yourself, so you can get her back), she will just dig her heels in and refuse to forgive you.

On the other hand, if you call her on the phone and say something like, â€œHey, I know that I messed up. What I put you through wasn't fair on you and I'm really sorry about it. I'd take it all back in a heartbeat if I could, but I can't. However, holding on to a grudge about me isn't going to help you now or in the future. If you don't forgive me for who I used to be in our relationship and see that I am a new man now, it's just going to make any relationship you might have in the future more difficult for you. You will naturally have your guard up because you won't fully trust your next guy to never stuff up or disappoint you. I don't want you to have to experience that. You deserve better. So, what I want to ask you is this: Can you forgive me? Can you forgive the old me by understanding that as people, we make mistakes and learn from them? Yes, I stuffed up, but it's important that you see that I'm a different guy now. People can change. So, what do you say? Can you forgive the old me?"

When she agrees, you can then say, "Well, now we can at least look at each other as friends, rather than having to be all guarded. I accept that we're broken up and don't ever expect that you and I could be a couple again, so don't worry. However, we don't have to be awkward strangers with each other from now on. Let's just be friends."

Not only does she then feel less pressured to get back together with you, but she also gets to experience the new and improved you.

You're so much more emotionally mature and strong now.

You know how to lead a conversation towards mutual understanding and creating feel good emotions, rather than annoying her or making her feel stressed by continually pressuring her to give you another chance.

As a result, she then realizes that you're not the same guy who messed up in the relationship.

You really have changed and she really does feel differently (i.e. respectful, attracted, in love) when she talks to you now, so she feels happy about the idea of forgiving you.

You can then

4. Meet up with her as friends and let her experience the new and improved you

[image: Meet up with her and let her experience the new you]

After you get your ex to forgive you, you can suggest that you and her meet up as friends for a quick catch up.

Initially, she might be a bit resistant to the idea and say something like, "No, I don't think so," or even, "There you go again, pressuring me to meet up with you. You haven't changed, have you?"

Don't let that throw you off.

Remain calm and say in a joking way, "Hey, I'm only asking you to catch up for a cup of coffee. If I suggested meeting for two cups of coffee, then that would be serious stuff. However, it's just one cup of coffee. If you want more than that, you can forget about it. I'm not ready for that kind of a commitment with you right now. One coffee and we're parting ways" and then have a laugh.

She will most likely then laugh and realize that she was being too serious about a simple catch up.

She may also start wondering, "I like him when he's being confident and relaxed in this way. It's not how he would have reacted in the past. Maybe a cup of coffee wouldn't be such a bad idea. After all, we've had a laugh on the phone, so maybe we will in person too. I'm curious to see if he's really like this all the time now, or if he's just putting on an act to impress me," and she will then agree to meet up with you to find out.

At the meet up, you just need to continue saying and doing the types of things that have been turning her on (e.g. being very confident, making her laugh and smile, flirting with her, making her feel girly in comparison to your masculine vibe), so she can experience the full force of the new and improved you.

When she can see for herself that you're no longer the guy who was pressuring her about getting back together again, she will naturally drop her guard and open up to you even more.

However, be warned!

Don't get that far to then ruin it by pushing her to whether or not she is now willing to give your relationship another chance.

Just keep building on her attraction for you, so she naturally begins to want a relationship with you.

If you do that, you will get her back.

3 Mistakes to Avoid When Getting Her Back

[image: Mistakes to avoid when getting her back]

After helping men to get women back for many years now, I've found that most women will give an ex man another chance if he simply reactivates her feelings of respect, sexual and attraction and love.

When her feelings are back, she wants to do it and doesn't feel like she is being forced into it.

She is experiencing new, exciting and interesting feelings for him and wants to explore them.

That's the easy way to get an ex back.

Unfortunately, not all guys discover what you are learning right now.

As a result, they make classic mistakes and mess up their chance to get her back.

Mistakes such as:

1. Thinking that staying on her mind via text is the trick to getting her back

If a woman doesn't have feelings for her ex, she's simply going to feel annoyed at him if he keeps texting her and trying to 'fix things' or work things out with her.

Despite that, some guys just don't know what else to do.

So, a guy will use texting, e-mail and social media as a way of staying in touch with her 24/7 (e.g. telling her that he misses her, asking her to explain what she wants him to do to get her back, promising to change if she gives him another chance, telling about his day, asking her questions about her life without him, sending her random videos to watch that he hopes she will find interesting, trying to chat with her like a friend and so on).

Meanwhile, his ex woman will be rolling her eyes and feeling annoyed at him for it.

Remember: No matter how sincere you might be when texting your ex or sending her e-mails, it just doesn't have the same effect on her as talking to her on the phone or seeing her in person.

When you stick to texts or e-mails, she is also much more likely to misinterpret what you're saying and see you as pressuring her, annoying her and causing her unwanted stress.

This happens because she can't hear your tonality or see your body language to determine your state of mind and see for herself that you're being confident, easy-going and light-hearted.

For example: Try reading out the following in different tones of voice and you will see what I mean.

- Annoyed tone of voice: Hey, what's up? I haven't heard from you. Can you reply to my last e-mail?
- Easy-going, relaxed tone of voice: Hey, what's up? I haven't heard from you. Can you reply to my last e-mail?
- Hesitant, nervous tone of voice: Hey, what's up? I haven't heard from you. Can you reply to my last e-mail?

As you can see, you will be able to hear the difference in tone in your voice as you read it out, even though you are reading out the same words.

So, depending on your ex's mood and perception of you (e.g. if she sees you as being needy and pressuring her), she might read that as you being slightly demanding and insistent that she replies to you, even though you were being relaxed and easy-going about it.

Of course, some guys think, "Okay, well I'll just put some smileys and emojis in there to let her see that I'm in a good mood."

Yet, that doesn't work either.

If a guy uses lots of smiley and emojis with an ex who doesn't feel respect and attraction for him, she will usually look at it in a negative light.

For example: She will look at it and think, "He texts like a girl. All those smileys and emojis. It's like I'm talking to one of my girlfriends" and feel turned off by him.

So, if you want to avoid messing things up via text, just get her on a phone call with you and let her hear and experience the new and improved you.

Let her see that no matter what she says to make you feel uncomfortable, you remain confident, easy-going and in control of yourself and the situation.

If you do that, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you.

Another mistake that guys make is

2. Feeling as though it's okay to annoy her because she used to love him and so she will probably just put up with it

Sometimes, a guy might think to himself, "Sure my ex keeps telling me not to pressure her about getting back together, but I'm not going to just give up on the idea of us being a couple again. Besides, I know that she used to care for me once too, so she has to understand that I'm doing this is out of love for her. She needs to deal with it and just open up to me again, rather than keep telling me to stop. That's what real love is about. Couples shouldn't quit and break up just because they're having a few problems. We need to work through this and fix any issues we have. If she finds that annoying, I don't care. I'm going to keep pushing until she stops being so stubborn and starts giving me a chance."

What he fails to realize is that she is an individual and can do whatever she wants.

Even though he might look at her as being his property, she's not.

Modern women are free to leave a relationship if they want to and can no longer be forced to stay with a man.

If you want a woman to want to stay with you for life, you've got to be able to guide the relationship through all the stages!

When you get her back, you can guide her to stage 5 of a relationship and keep it there for life.

Both of you will be so happy and will want to stay together for life.

For now though, you've got to make sure that you're not ruining your opportunities to reconnect with her and get things back on track.

For example: Sometimes a guy will feel as though, because his ex woman loved him so much before, he has the right to pester her and annoy her now that they are broken up.

Yet, pestering her is one of the quickest ways to make a woman further disconnect from her remaining feelings of respect, attraction and love.

It simply makes her realize that he doesn't acknowledge the fact that she's an individual and can choose to be in a relationship with him or not, which then makes her lose respect for him.

It makes her feel like a relationship with him would be a burden and she would feel trapped, rather than feeling elated and in love.

So, make sure that you avoid making your ex feel like she has to open up because you're telling her too.

Instead, focus on making her feel good every time she hears from you by using humor, being confident and making her feel girly and feminine in comparison to your masculine approach to conversations and situations.

She will then begin to think, "I think we can work things out after all. I'm starting to believe that he really is the man I want to be with. I can't stop thinking about hugging him and kissing him. I want us to be together again."

Another mistake guys make is!

3. Trying to explain why he wants her back, rather than making her feel like she wants him back

Explaining to your ex about how much you love her and why you want her back might seem like it's the right thing to do (e.g. some guys think, "My ex will be flattered when she hears how much I need her and how I can't live without her"), but it's not.

A woman wants a man who wants her, loves her and appreciates her, but doesn't need her.

That doesn't mean a man should ever say, "Hey, I don't need you" to his woman.

That would be rude, unloving and unnecessary.

Instead, he just needs to let her sense that he would be totally fine without her.

He would remain confident, happy and continue moving forward with his life, with or without her around.

That's what a woman wants.

She wants to be loved, respected, appreciated and taken care of, but she doesn't want to be with a guy who makes her his reason for living and can't function properly without her.

So, rather than trying to explain how much you love her and why you need her back (which will make her feel pressured), just focus on getting to the point where you can feel genuinely happy in your life with or without her.

For example: You might begin to make progress on achieving a big dream or goal that youâve been neglecting.

If you don't have any big goals, then decide to set some and start making each one of them a reality.

When your ex can see that you are a happy, fulfilled and determined man without her, she will feel much more attracted to you than if you try to explain why you need her back.

Important: Showing her that you are happy without her is not about hooking up with new women.

You can do that if you want to, but it's not required to get a woman back in almost all ex back cases.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Can I Rekindle the Fire of Love Between Me and My Ex?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

To rekindle the fire of love between you and your ex, you need to:

1. Understand what caused her to lose respect for you

[image: Understand what caused her to lose respect for you]

Every relationship has its ups and downs, but when certain issues keep coming up over and over again, itâs usually a sign that something is going wrong.

For example: A woman might go from being happy and fun at the beginning of a relationship, to always sulking or throwing tantrums about seemingly irrelevant things.

This may cause her guy to think, âWhatâs wrong with her? Why is she always so moody these days? Sheâs just so unpredictable. I never know what will set her off. She used to be such a sweet girl before, but now sheâs always trying to pick a fight with me. Sheâs angry, irritable and annoyed all the time. I just donât get it. What happened to her?â

The answer is usually that something about the guyâs attitude, thinking and behavior has made her lose respect and attraction for him over time.

[image: Why your ex may have lost respect for you]

For example: Some of the common things that may cause a woman to lose respect for her guys is thatâ

- He is too emotionally sensitive and responds to everything in his life more like a woman than a man (e.g. He remains upset about something for a long time, rather than fixing the problem. He seeks pity from her and expects her to be gentle with him because heâs so emotionally sensitive).
- He stops making her feel appreciated and starts taking her for granted (e.g. treating her with disrespect, but expecting her to respect him. Getting angry at her often or behaving in a controlling way. Not making her feel like a sexy woman in his eyes anymore).
- He has no real sense of purpose in life that heâs actively following through on, so he wastes time on unprofitable hobbies (e.g. video games, watching sports) and expects her to just put up with it and deal with living a mediocre lifestyle.
- He has turned the relationship into a friendship by being neutral around her, rather than being very masculine, so she can feel feminine and be his woman.
- She canât be herself around him because he expects her to behave in all sorts of ways that just arenât her.
- He wonât commit to her and just expects her to put up with being in a boyfriend/girlfriend relationship for life.
- He isÂ clingy and needy and she feels suffocated by the relationship.
- He doesnât take her seriously and rudely disregards her ideas and opinions about things.
- He gives her way too much power in the relationship, to the point where she can walk all over him and treat him badly and he still puts up with it just so she wonât leave him.

Can you relate to any of the examples above?

If so, that's good news for you because the first step in rekindling the fire of love between you and your ex, is to fully understand what caused her to lose respect for you.

If you're not aware of your ex's REAL reasons for losing respect, you will most likely be offering her things that she doesn't want (e.g. offering to treat her better, when she actually wants you to be more ballsy and masculine).

If you're offering her the wrong things, she's just going to keep saying things like, "No. We had our chance and it didn't work out. I don't love you anymore."

So, make sure that you get clear on why she really lost respect for you and then begin to fix, improve, change or adjust those things about yourself.

The next step is to

2. Find out which pieces of the attraction experience were missing in your relationship

Every woman wants a slightly different or vastly different attraction experience than other women do. For example: Some women just want a nice, fairly confident, sweet guy who will commit to them for life.

On the other hand, some women want a ballsy, confident guy who is a challenge to win over and keep in a relationship.

Other women want a good guy who is very confident and only a little bit challenging to win over and impress in a relationship.

Other women want a bad boy who makes her cry and try really hard to impress him and keep him happy.

Other women want a very confident guy who is sweet, loyal and committed.

In other words, every woman is different.

To properly re-attract your ex, you must understand what pieces to the attraction experience were missing in your relationship with her.

You have to interact with her and allow her to see for herself that you have changed and improved and she will now be able to get a full experience with you in a relationship, rather than having to put up with a boring, unfulfilling experience that doesn't really match her wants and needs.

When she can see that you've changed, her guard automatically comes down and the idea of getting back together with you doesn't sound that impossible to her anymore.

She realizes that you are now making her feel the way she always wanted to feel with you, so there's no point pushing you away anymore.

On the other hand, if you try to rekindle the fire of love between you and her by offering her the wrong kind of attraction experience, her heart will remain closed off to you and she will keep rejecting you.

For example: A woman loses respect and attraction for a guy because he is too emotionally sensitive and responds to everything in his life more like a woman than a man.

He might then decide that the best way to re-spark her feelings for him, is by being romantic and sending her love letters, poems and/ or flowers, in the hopes that he can sweep her off her feet.

Yet, even though a woman might appreciate his efforts to do nice things for her, it's not the main thing that will change how she feels about him.

She wants him to be more confident, ballsy and masculine in his behavior, rather than being a hopeless romantic.

She wants him to interact with her and let her experience the changes in him for herself (i.e. that he is so much more confident and emotionally strong now).

No matter what she says or does to make him feel insecure, he remains confident and emotionally strong.

She can then see that if she gave him another chance, she would actually get what she wants this time (i.e. a more confident, emotionally strong and ballsy man).

So, the question is: Do you understand what the missing pieces of the attraction experience between you and your ex really were?

Are you clear on what your weak points are when it comes to relationships and maintaining your ex's attraction for you?

That is what you need to start improving right now.

Don't focus on anything else, because she's just not going to care about it.

She will only care about you and feel the love rushing back into her heart if she can see that you have changed and can now offer her the kind of attraction experience she really wants.

When she feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, the idea of rekindling the fire of love between you and her will be something that she wants too, rather than it being something you are trying to force her into.

She will open up to it and enjoy it and you and her will naturally get back together and be happier than you were before.

So, when you are ready!

3. Interact with her on a phone call or in person to let her experience the new and improved you

Many guys lose the chance of rekindling the love with their ex woman by hoping that she will eventually change her mind if they spend enough time apart from each other.

For example: A guy might say to himself, "Right now, everything I do seems to irritate her. So, the best thing for me to do is just give her some space to calm down. She will then realize how much she misses me and will hopefully contact me and tell me that she wants me back."

He may then cut off all communication with his ex for 30 or 60 days (and in some cases even longer), hoping that time apart will be the magic solution that will rekindle the fire of love between them.

Yet, when several months go by without hearing from her, he may start to wonder, "Why isn't she calling me? Why hasn't she come running back to me yet? Should I give her more time? Will that make her want me again?"

No.

In most cases it won't.

Why?

When a woman has lost a lot of respect and attraction for a guy, him ignoring her for weeks and months just isn't a big deal to her.

Instead, she just uses the time apart to get over him completely and move on with a new man (or men).

So, don't put yourself in that position with her.

Rather than ignoring her and hoping that she comes back on her own, just get her on a phone call with you right away, so you can start the process of rebuilding her feelings of respect, attraction and love.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by

- Using humor to make her relax and open up a little.
- Displaying confidence when she tries to make you feel nervous and insecure by being cold, distant or rude towards you.
- Responding differently to the way she expects you to (e.g. you laugh when she thinks you'll get upset, you act mature and emotionally strong when she thinks that you will start begging and pleading with her).
- Flirting with her to create a playful, sexual vibe between you and her.
- Making her feel girly and feminine in contrast to your masculine vibe, so she can feel attracted to you in a fundamental way.

That is what rekindles the fire of love in her heart.

You don't need to get into long discussions about the relationship, buy her gifts or try to amaze her with grand romantic gestures.

All it usually takes for most ex back situations, is for the guy to create a spark of sexual attraction inside of the woman.

Once he does that, it sets off a chain reaction in her heart and mind and her guard comes down.

As long as he continues to build on her feelings for him while interacting with her, it's almost a certainty that they will get back together and be happier than they were before.

The next thing to do is

4. Meet up and build on the sexual tension between you and her

[image: Meet up with her and build sexual tension]

When you made her feel attracted to you over the phone, it created some sexual tension between you and her.

Sexual tension occurs when a man and a woman are sexually attracted to each other, but there is something in the way that is blocking them from having sex.

In this case, it's the fact that you're talking to each other over the phone and are broken up.

So, when you make her feel attracted over the phone and end the call, she will naturally be feeling the exciting, captivating effects of sexual tension.

Don't just stop there though!

Seeing your ex face-to-face is a crucial step to getting her back.

If you just text back and forth or talk on the phone and never get to an in person meet up, the sexual tension will eventually fizzle out.

It's kind of like water boiling in a kettle.

If you keep it boiling for too long, the water will eventually evaporate completely via steam and you will be left with a burnt out kettle.

So, make sure that you build sexual tension and then use it to get to a hug, kiss and then sex.

Don't get fooled into thinking that you're getting her back for real just because she's texting with you or talking to you on the phone.

Even if she sounds like she's opening up to you via text or over the phone, nothing real (i.e. sex, getting back together) is going to happen until you see each other again in person.

So, make sure that after you've reactivated her feelings, you then get her to meet up with you in person as quickly as possible.

Then, when you see her in person, focus on building up the sexual tension between you and her.

How can you do that?

By flirting with her (e.g. teasing her in a playful way, making her laugh and smile, playing a little hard to get) and letting her enjoy the attraction she is now feeling for you.

Don't make the mistake of ruining the sexual tension by asking her to give you another chance, asking if she finds you attractive or trying to convince her to change her mind about the break up.

You might be tempted to just say that you want to give the relationship another chance, but don't.

Let the sexual tension build.

Let her want the relationship and want to tell you that she is interested again.

If she is too shy to tell you, she will show you by being open to hugging you, kissing you and having sex with you.

So, don't make the mistake of thinking that flirting with your ex is wrong or that you need to be neutral around her to show her how much you care.

No.

You have to make her have sexual feelings for you again.

When you do that, it's like getting instant access to her heart.

She feels attracted, her guard comes down and the love comes rushing back into her heart.

She feels it, she wants it and she's totally open to it.

That's what you want.

So, make sure that you're not acting neutral or too nice because you want to show her how gentlemanly you are.

If you are being too serious or nice, she will end up feeling awkward around you and will close up.

She will then think something like, Well, this is awkward. We're just not comfortable around each other anymore. There's no spark between us. It must be a sign that whatever we had before is now truly dead. It's time for both of us to move on. This just isn't going to work.

She then closes up even more and possibly says something like, "I should go. It was nice meeting up with you, but what we had is over now. You need to accept that. I wish you all the best. Bye."

Don't let that happen to you.

Make sure that when you meet up with your ex, you flirt with her, make her laugh and make her feel sexually attracted to you again.

Of course, that doesn't mean you can't be serious with her if necessary.

You definitely can be serious and approach the conversation in a neutral way at times, but don't use that as your main approach or else she will feel bored, awkward and want to leave the meet up.

So, once you've reactivated your ex's feelings of sexual attraction and made her want more, you can to

5. Release the sexual tension with a goodbye hug, kiss and then sex

Don't wait around hoping that she will give you a definite sign that she's open to hugging, kissing or having sex with you.

In most cases, a woman won't want to come across as being easy, so at best, she might give subtle signs like licking her lips, touching you on the arm or leg, or playing with a necklace or her throat while looking at you in the eyes.

At worst, she might just be open to the conversation and simply wait for you to be confident enough to take the lead and release the sexual tension by giving her a hug, or preferably a kiss.

You can do get to that point by saying something along the lines of, "Hey, this has really been fun to catch up. It's nice to see that we're so civilized and mature around each other, unlike those other exes that can't even be in the same room together. So, let's celebrate our awesomeness by giving each other a big goodbye hug. Come here" and then lean in for a hug.

If she agrees and begins to lean in, just go ahead and give her a warm, long squeeze.

Then, while still holding onto her, lean back and look her in the eyes and then give her a kiss.

If she responds well, you can deepen the kiss and then leave together to hook up with her sexually at your place or hers.

Alternatively, if she pulls away from the kiss to avoid it, you can simply laugh and say, "Oh, yeah I forgot that you're a shy girl" and have a laugh with her about that, rather than worrying that you've just screwed up your chances with her.

It's always better to make it the woman's fault (e.g. You're shy. You don't like to kiss in public. You're worried that you will love me again if we kiss) rather than feel rejected and assume that it's your fault.

Women always respond well to a man who believes in himself and his attractiveness.

So, don't ever doubt yourself around your ex or any other woman.

Be the calm, confident guy who knows that he is more than good enough for a woman, but doesn't need to openly brag about it at all.

You just have that relaxed, easy-going, cool guy confidence that every woman loves and feels attracted to.

By the way!

If she seems a bit hesitant to hug you and says something like, "No, I don't want to," or "I don't think it's such a good idea," you can also react by simply accepting that in a relaxed, easy-going way.

You can say, "Sure, no problem."

Then, continue to build up more the sexual tension between you and her and try again later when she's more open.

The important thing to remember here is that the more you make your ex feel sexually attracted to you again, the more interested she will be in rekindling the fire of love between you and her.

However, if you're just coming at her in a neutral, friendly way and not creating sparks of sexual attraction, she's not really going to feel motivated to want to reconnect with the love she used to feel for you.

So, make sure that you're focused on making her feel the all-important feeling of sexual attraction.

Then, build up the sexual tension and release it with a hug, kiss and sex if you can.

From there!

6. Start a new and improved relationship that is better than it was before

[image: Enjoy an even better relationship this time around]

When you reactivate your ex's feelings of respect and attraction and then have sex with her, it makes her see you in a different light.

You're a new man now and you are giving her a new kind of attraction experience that is so much more enjoyable and fulfilling to her.

As a result, her walls come down and she starts to believe that you really have transformed yourself into the kind of man that she can now look up to, respect and feel attracted to in the long run.

Of course, she might initially try to subdue her feelings by saying to herself, "What are you doing? Don't you remember how he stuffed up before? Don't give him another chance. End it. Walk away."

Yet, this time around, there will also be a new voice in her mind telling her, "Yes, but that was the old him. He's not that guy anymore and you know it. This new version of him is the man you have always wanted. Are you going to make the biggest mistake of your life and let him go? He is different now and you feel so good with him, so just go with it."

She will realize that if she lets you go this time, she will regret it and end up feeling like she's lost a true love.

So, she won't want to end it.

She will want to explore her new feelings for you and see how it goes.

That's how you rekindle the fire of love between you and her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Texted Me to Say That She is Happy and Doing Fine On Her Own

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible reasons why your ex texted you to say that she is happy and doing fine on her own are:

1. You've been making the mistake of trying to get her back via text

Have you been trying to get her back via text messages?

Don't worry, most guys make that mistake because it seems so easy and instant to contact her via text.

Just type in some words, hit send and you're done.

Yet, it doesn't work well for ex back situations.

Texts are great when you're dating a new girl or are in a happy relationship with a woman, but not when you're trying to get an ex back who isn't interested.

If you want her back, you need to have the balls to call her and re-attract her on the phone, rather than hiding behind textsâ€¦

Don't worry if you have made the mistake of trying to text her back.

You can recover from that simply by calling her and re-attracting her on a phone call and then re-attracting her again in person.

Then, she won't be so happy without you.

She will feel attracted to you again and if she doesn't get back with you right away at the meet up, she will go away missing you and regretting not giving you another chance.

Her guard will then come down and you can contact her, meet up with her and get her back the next time.

Many guys are able to get their ex woman back right away, but if your case is a little more difficult, don't worry.

Just focus on re-attracting her and you will be able to make her want you back and give you another chance.

Of course, not all guys know about what you're learning now.

After a break up, a guy usually doesn't know what he needs to say or do to get his woman to give him another chance.

He fears that if she says the wrong thing, she will reject him and he will then lose his chance with her.

So, to 'play it safe,' he sticks to just texting her.

He may think something like, "She's really mad at me right now, so if I try to call her, she's probably not going to answer. So, I better text her."

He might then send her a string of text messages where he:

- Apologizes to her over and over again, hoping that she will take pity on him and give him another chance.
- Talks about good memories they shared to hopefully make her miss him (e.g. Remember all the good times we had together? Sure we fought often, but we also laughed a lot. That has to count for something, right?).
- Asks her for another chance.
- Asks her to tell him what she needs him to change to get another chance.
- Tries to remain in her life as a friend (e.g. texting, “Hey, so how was your day?” or, “How did you go with that project at work? I hope it went well”).

It seems like it will work, but it doesn't in most cases.

Why?

The feelings aren't mutual, so she just doesn't care.

If a guy wants his woman back, he first has to make her have feelings for him.

Only then will she begin to care about his point of view or feel like she should give him another chance.

So, when an ex guy tries to make a woman give him another chance based on what he's texting her, she just doesn't fall for it in most cases.

Rather than make her think, “Ohh, how silly of me. He does have good intentions! I was wrong to break up with him,” she thinks something like, “Why is he asking me for another chance via text? Can't he be bothered to talk to me face-to-face or over the phone, or is he texting because he doesn't have the balls to face me?”

Even though she might not answer every time he calls, he still needs to have the balls to call and get her to meet up with him.

Women respect balls, not insecurity or fear in men.

If you're hiding behind text, she is going to sense that and it's going to turn her off.

You've got to be the stronger one and make the reconciliation happen.

Be a man about it.

Take control.

Get her back.

Stop hiding behind texts.

It doesn't matter if you think she might not like it when you call.

Just call her.

She will like it when you make her laugh and smile.

Don't worry about any potential awkwardness at the start.

Facing up to that is more than worth it because you can actually re-attract her and bring her guard down, so you can then get her to meet up with you and feel even more attracted in person.

So, enough with the texts.

You have to understand that texting simply doesn't make an ex woman feel enough respect and attraction to make her want to forgive you and meet up with you in person.

On a phone call, she can hear your tonality and how you're expressing yourself to determine whether or not you've really changed (e.g. you are more confident, self-assured, motivated or emotionally masculine now) or if you're still stuck at the same level as before (e.g. you're still insecure, timid or afraid to stand up for yourself).

You don't have to waste weeks or months trying to get her to hopefully realize that via text.

On a phone call, you achieve that in 30 seconds to a minute.

So, stop texting and just get your ex on a phone call with you.

When you get her on the phone, make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new you.

Then get her to agree to meet up with you in person.

When you meet up with her in person, build on the initial spark of attraction and respect she felt for you over the phone.

Then, the idea of giving you another chance will begin to feel good to her.

She will feel like life would actually be fun and interesting if she gave you another chance and watched what unfolded.

Another reason why your ex may have texted you to say that she was happy without you is that!

2. She's trying to make you feel hurt and jealous to get emotional revenge for how you treated her during the relationship

[image: She wants revenge for how you made her feel in the relationship]

Sometimes, a woman will feel bitter and angry over what happened between her and her ex.

For example: In the relationship, he might have started taking her for granted.

He stopped paying attention to her, put her in last place in his life after work, family and friends and he may have also broken his promises to her time and time again.

He might have also gotten angry at her often and been controlling and just expected her to put up with it.

In other words, he took her love, loyalty and presence in his life for granted and assumed that she would stick with him no matter what.

In a case like that, after a break up a woman will sometimes want to make her ex feel as bad as he made her feel when they were together.

She might try to make him jealous by sending him a text like, "I just wanted to say hi and let you know I'm happy and doing fine on my own. I've been having lots of fun with my friends and enjoying my freedom. How are you? How's things?"

She's hoping that it will hurt him and make him feel the kind of emotional pain she experienced during the relationship as he was taking her for granted.

Another possible reason why!

3. You used the No Contact Rule (i.e. ignored your ex for 30-60 days) and she moved on with her life

[image: You used the no contact rule and she moved on]

For most ex back situations, the No Contact rule only makes a situation worse and results in a woman moving on and feeling fine without her ex.

So, if you've made the mistake of ignoring her and hoping that she would miss you because of that, don't worry â€” you can recover from the mistake.

From now on, you need to focus on using every interaction that you have with her as an opportunity to make her feel SOMETHING for you again.

Make her feel sparks of respect, attraction and love, so you can interrupt the process of her moving on and feeling fine without you.

When you do that, she suddenly stops feeling like she wants to be apart from you and begins to feel drawn to you.

Things that seemed fun to her without you, now start to lose their appeal.

When she goes places or does new things without you, she catches herself wondering what it would be like if you were there to experience it as well.

As a result, her guard comes down and you can then easily guy her back into a relationship.

You can accomplish this in a week if you do it right.

You don't need to waste time ignoring her and hoping that simply not being in her life will do the trick.

No.

That isn't what works for most ex back situations.

In most ex back situations, the woman is over the guy and no longer has feelings for him, so she doesn't care that he isn't contacting her.

This is why you need to contact her and reactivate her feelings for you.

That stops the process of her moving on and feeling fine without you.

Of course, not every guy knows what you are learning here.

Most guys can't think of anything else to do than stop contacting their ex woman, because a guy will assume that he's tried everything (e.g. begging, pleading, discussing, promising to change) and nothing has worked.

No.

He hasn't tried everything.

He hasn't tried re-attracting her.

Re-attracting your ex is essential if you want her to stop feeling so happy without you and start missing you and wanting you back.

Why?

If a woman doesn't have feelings for a guy after breaking up with him, she's not going to worry that much about not hearing from him.

She doesn't feel respect, attraction or love for him anymore, so it doesn't really matter to her. Instead, she feels relieved that he's not chasing after her in an annoying way (i.e. begging and pleading for another chance) and simply uses the space to move on without him.

Then, if the guy contacts her after a long absence (e.g. by sending her a text saying something like, Hey, I just wanted to say hi. How have you been?), he will usually be disappointed to find out that she has moved on without him and is happy and doing fine now.

He might then express his disappointment by texting something like, "You've moved on already? Wow, I guess I didn't mean much to you after all."

Obviously, that isn't going to make a woman feel respect and attraction for a guy and will instead make her feel even more turned off by him.

Women don't feel respect and attraction for guys who seek pity or play the victim card and try to make her feel guilty.

So, what should you do instead?

Here's an example!

Imagine you're talking to your ex on the phone and she says, Why are you calling me? I don't know what you want from me after all this time. I'm happy now and doing fine on my own.

Simply remain calm and confidently say something like, That's awesome! I'm glad that you're doing well. I'm happy for you. I'd love to hear all about what you've been up to since we broke up and I can tell you all my news too. It's great to hear that we've both moved on and can be mature adults with each other without holding on to all the baggage from the past.

Alternatively, you might say something like, "That's great to hear. I was hoping that you were happy. Life has been great for me too. I'm glad that we can just talk as ex's who are friends and nothing else."

By saying something like that to her, you are letting her see that you're not pressuring her into getting back with you.

As a result, she can bring her guard down a little and allow herself to smile, laugh and even feels some attraction for you as you talk to her.

You can then use her feelings of attraction for you to get her to agree to meet up with you in person.

In person, she can see your body language and watch your reactions to the things she intentionally says and does to try and throw you off (e.g. teasing you about your new haircut, asking if you have a new girlfriend, talking about a guy who is interested in her).

She can see that no matter what she says or does, you remain confident and you believe in your value to her as a man.

As a result, she naturally feels respect and attraction for you because you are clearly a confident, masculine guy that deserves more than she has been giving you credit for lately.

Her guard then comes down even further and you can then get to a hug, kiss and sex.

Another reason why she might have said that she's happy and doing fine without you is that!

4. She's actually lying and is trying to get you to chase her and get her back

After a break up, a woman can still have feelings for ex and kind of want him back.

Yet, regardless of how she feels about him, she won't always want to make it obvious that he has a chance.

Instead, she just waits for him to take the lead and get her back.

If he doesn't try to get her back, she might try to shock him into action by texting him something along the lines of, â€œHey, I just wanted you to know that Iâ€™m happy and doing fine on my own. I hope you're well.â€

Yet, what sometimes happens is that rather than spur him into action, hearing that sheâ€™s happy just makes some guys give up.

For example: A guy might say to himself, â€œI guess itâ€™s really over then. She is happy without me, so she probably doesnâ€™t love me anymore. I suppose the honorable thing for me to do now is to leave her alone and not bother her anymore. If she wants me back, she'll come back on her own.â€

He might then lose his chance of actually getting her back because, while he's ignoring her, she's slowly getting over him and opening herself up to new guys.

Eventually, she meets a new guy who she finds attractive and interesting and decides to move on with him.

Meanwhile, her ex is still missing her and secretly hoping that she contacts him one day and says that she wants him back.

Imagine thisâ€

A woman is sitting at home after a break up and secretly missing her ex a little, even though she doesn't admit it to him.

She is disappointed about the way things turned out between them, but deep down she also hopes that they might be able to work things out.

Yet, rather than come out and say that to him, she just waits to see if heâ€™s man enough to get her back.

If he does (i.e. he contacts her, re-attracts her and guides her back into loving him again), she will go along with the process and see what happens.

On the other hand, if he just gives up trying to get her back because she has rejected his initial attempt, or if waits for her to take the lead and tell him what to do, she will start to doubt her feelings for him.

She may begin to think, â€œDid I waste my time with him? Clearly he isnâ€™t man enough for me. I don't want to be with a guy who waits for my permission to make a move. I want a man who knows how to take control and make things happen.â€

She then begins to switch off her feelings for him (e.g. by getting angry over his lack of action, focusing on all of his negative qualities, blaming him for everything that went wrong or comparing him to other guys).

Here's the thingâ€¦!

I've been working on ex back cases for many years now and I've seen so many cases where a guy has given up too easily.

His initial approach was all wrong (i.e. begging, pleading, trying to convince her) and he then gives up because he thinks that's all he can do.

Alternatively, in some situations, a guy will tell his ex woman that he is willing to wait as long as it takes for her to change her mind.

He might say something like, â€œI know that you're happy without me now and I wish you the best, but I just want you to know that I am willing to wait for you as long as it takes. So, tell meâ€¦do you think that you might ever want to get back together again sometime in the future?â€

A woman might decide to mess with his head by saying, “Maybe, but not now” and make him waste time waiting for her.

In other cases, she might shut him down and say, “No. It's over between us and you need to accept that. I am happy and doing fine now and I don't want to ruin that. I wish you all the best. Goodbye.”

It might seem like a good move to say something like the example above where you promise to wait for her, but it doesn't work for one main reason.

What is that?

The feelings aren't mutual.

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she no longer has feelings for him, so she just moves on and doesn't care.

In the cases where she does still have feelings for her ex, asking her if she will change her mind doesn't work either.

Why?

Most women don't want to give a guy an easy pass like that.

A woman wants to use the break up as an opportunity to test how confident and emotionally strong her guy really is.

She wants to see if he is capable of rising up to the challenge and making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him NOW.

If he can't do that, she will most likely just move on and forget all about him.

In some cases, the woman won't move on and will contact her ex, but that's just not a risk that I recommend you take.

I've worked on 100s of ex back cases and have seen so many guys lose their opportunity with an ex woman by leaving it all in her hands.

If you really care about her and want her back for real, then don't leave her in control of your fate.

Take control by re-attracting her and guiding her back into strong feelings of love, sexual attraction and romantic attraction for you.

When you do that, you can get her back NOW.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why Does My Ex Blame Me For Everything, When She Made Mistakes Too?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex blames you for everything when she made mistakes too, are thatâ

1. She's trying to convince herself that you are bad for her, but her heart doesn't necessarily agree

[image: She's trying to convince herself that you are bad for her, but her heart doesn't agree]

A woman will often do this as a way of trying to stop herself from caring about you and the relationship, especially if she still has feelings for you.

She doesn't want to appear vulnerable and allow you to think that she's open to giving you another chance, so she will keep telling herself things like, He stuffed up. He's to blame for all the pain I'm going through now. He can't be trusted. Don't believe a word he's saying. You can do better than him. He isn't good for you. Move on. Don't give him another chance.

Even though her heart might be saying, He's not really all bad. You made some mistakes too. You're being too hard on him, she'll try to block that out by saying to herself, Don't be a fool and let him hurt you again. He's not good for you. You're better off without him.

So, how can you stop her from thinking and behaving in that way?

Rather than getting into long discussions with her about the relationship, you must focus on keeping things light, playful and friendly between you.

For example: If she says, "It's all your fault" and lists off a bunch of things that you did wrong, you can laugh and playfully (important) say, "Yes, it's true. I could probably win the award of world's worst boyfriend" and have a laugh with her about that.

You could also playfully (important) add in something like, "Hey, but you made some mistakes too. Do you remember when you burnt the toast that morning when we were making breakfast? I've never gotten over that" and have a laugh.

If she continues to try and blame you for everything, you can be serious and say, Yes, I admit it. I made some mistakes and I've apologized to you about that many times before. So, let's just get one thing clear. You and I are broken up and I accept that. I'm not asking you to accept my apology so we can then get back together. I know that you and I can't get back together. So, let's just be friends from now on.

You then take away her power because you're not desperately trying to convince her to give you another chance.

You are saying to her that you and her are not getting back together and you accept it.

You're also saying that you're just friends now.

Why?

That way, she will stop feeling like she has to put her guard up or ignore you from now on.

As a result, the lines of communication will be open between you and her and you can then re-attract her.

Additionally, when she can see that you've admitted your mistakes, apologized and are not asking for anything in return, she then starts to think about how she is behaving and ponders her role in the break up.

She begins to accept some of the blame herself and naturally feels like it's okay to start forgiving you for some of your past mistakes, because she also wasn't perfect throughout the entire relationship.

Another reason why a woman might blame her ex for everything is becauseâ

2. She is trying to make you react in an angry way, so she can have another thing to complain about

[image: She wants you to react in an angry way]

Sometimes, a woman will be struggling with her decision to end a relationship and will try to come up with additional things to blame her ex about or complain about.

If she can't find enough to complain about or blame him for, she might start being rude to him and blaming him for everything that went wrong in the relationship.

She hopes that he will react in an angry way and she can then point out that he's just too argumentative, aggressive or has too much of a temper.

She might even go as far as saying something like, "You're scaring me. Why are you getting so angry? I don't want you calling me anymore."

It's her way of making herself feel okay about dumping you and blaming all or the majority of the relationship problems on you.

So, to make her ex guy angry, she might say something like, "It's your fault that this has happened. I warned you plenty of times before that I wasn't happy, but you didn't change. I was so nice to you, but you were an absolute prick to me. You don't deserve me. I wasted my time with you. I wish I had never met you! You never treated me right."

If the guy gets angry at her, she can then say, â See!? You always get angry and argue with me about everything! I'm sick of it! Leave me alone!â

If that annoys him even more, she might then say, â You can't be rational and calm like a normal person. You're too angry for me. You scare me. So, leave me alone. It's over!â

She can then feel justified about her decision to break up with him and begin to move on, even though she was behaving in an angry, disrespectful way to him.

She just focuses on his angry reaction and nothing else, which allows her to feel like it's all his fault.

This is why I always recommend that a guy never try to match a woman's crazy.

In other words, if she is acting crazy and ridiculous, don't get dragged into it.

Be calm, confident and in control.

Don't let her cause you to lose control of your emotions because it never, ever ends up being in your favor.

For example: If a woman gets angry and you get angry, she can then turn up the heat and get even angrier and crazier.

If you match that, you will be the one who ends being in the wrong because she will pull the 'woman card' and say that you're scaring her or being verbally abusive.

So, don't let a woman drag you into her drama.

Laugh at her and the drama, remain calm, confident and in control and be the bigger person.

That's what a woman really respects, even though she might not ever tell you that directly.

For example: She might even say, "Oh, you think you're so cool now, hey? Well, you're not. You're a piece of shit. You asshole!" to see if you crack and get angry.

Instead, you just need to laugh it off and say something like, "You're hilarious. You actually look kinda cute when you're angry too. You get these little wrinkles between your eyebrows. It's cute" and have a laugh.

Almost any woman on the planet will not be able to stop herself from laughing or at least smiling at that point.

She will see that you are clearly the man and no matter how much heat she tries to put on you, it doesn't throw you off balance and make you crumble.

You remain calm, confident and in control.

By the wayâ€

Trying to get a woman to understand your point of view when she doesn't feel enough respect and attraction for you to care, is also a big waste of time.

A woman will only truly care about your point of view when she is feeling respect, sexual and attraction and love for you.

It will be in her best interests to care because you are the man that she is in love with.

However, if you're broken up and she doesn't feel respect, sexual attraction or love for you, then there is no real benefit for her to care much about what you're saying to her.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, you must focus on making her have feelings for you again, rather than trying to discuss the relationship and work things out.

Make her have feelings for you again and she will have a reason to get back with you.

However, try to get her back when she's just not feeling it and she will just keep looking for ways to prove to herself that youâ€re wrong and sheâ€s right, so she can get over you and move on as quickly as possible.

So, if you want your ex to stop blaming you for everything and take some responsibility for her actions, you have to spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you first.

When you do that, she will naturally begin to reconnect with the love she used to feel for you and she will also begin to feel a new kind of love that will draw her to you and make her want to give the relationship another chance.

However, let me remind youâ€

You can't achieve that by arguing and trying to force her into being open minded when discussing the relationship and the problems you and her experienced.

You can only achieve that through re-attraction and the reactivation of her feelings for you.

Be confident and use humor when she's trying to press your buttons and make you angry.

Laugh off her attempts to mess with you and turn it into something that she can laugh about too.

No matter how much she tries to goad you into getting mad at her, don't bite.

If you don't play into her hands, she won't have anything to hold against you from now on.

She won't be able to tell herself, "See? There's another reason to remain broken up with him! He's just an angry, out of control guy and it's his fault that I'm feeling so much pain right now. He wasted my time. He ruined the relationship! I'm so much better off without him and now I have even more proof of that. I have to move on!"

You definitely don't want to cause her to think and feel that way.

If you do, you will make the process of getting her back much harder than it needs to be.

So, simply focus on triggering her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love in every interaction that you have with her from now on (e.g. via text, on social media, on a phone call, or in person) and whether she likes it or not, her guard will come down.

She will then stop feeling the need to blame you and will start feeling the need to hug you, kiss you, have sex with you and spend time with you.

Another reason why your ex is blaming you for everything is because!

3. She is immature and can't own up to her mistakes

[image: She is immature and can't own up to her mistakes]

Sometimes a woman is isn't emotionally mature enough to look at her behavior in an unbiased way.

In a case like that, no matter how much a guy tries to reason with her and points out the mistakes that she made, she will refuse to listen to him.

She will say things like, "Don't try and put the blame on me. I didn't stuff up, you did. It's all your fault and I'm not going to let you make me feel bad about what happened."

Naturally, when a woman won't listen to reason and is being stubborn in that way, a guy might feel a bit annoyed and frustrated at her.

Yet, here's the thing!

You can't force your ex to take responsibility for her actions if she doesn't want to, or if she isn't emotionally mature enough to.

This same rule applies whether the woman is 18, 28, 38, 48, 58 or 68.

Some women go through life without ever really growing up and becoming a rational, healthy, emotionally mature adult.

So, don't try to force your ex to see reason if she's just being silly about the whole thing.

Instead, just be the more emotionally mature one and lead by example.

One way to do that is to not take her accusations of blame too seriously.

Literally laugh them off if she is being silly or unreasonable.

Turn her accusations into something that you and her can laugh about together, rather than letting it turn into an unnecessary argument that drives you further apart.

She might initially feel a bit shocked that you're not getting upset about her accusations, but she will feel respect and attraction for your ability to remain confident and not be walked all over by her.

However, if she doesn't laugh, don't worry about it.

In most cases, she will just be pretending to be angry or annoyed to test your confidence.

She wants to see if you will feel like you've stuffed up and are losing her now because she seems annoyed.

This is standard female behavior.

One of the most important roles of a woman in a man's life is to test his confidence by putting him under pressure.

If a guy can handle her tests, she then has faith in him that he could handle himself out there in the world and not get walked all over by bad people.

Passing her tests (e.g. her acting annoyed and angry when she's not) triggers her primal, instinctive attraction for you and makes her respect you and want to be with you more than anything nice or sweet you might say to her.

At the end of the day, confidence beats anything else in a woman's eyes.

Women thrive on the confidence of men.

It's what draws a woman to a man and keeps her by his side, feeling attracted and feeling safe with him.

So, whatever you do, make sure that you don't ever give her the impression that you are intimidated by her or doubting your attractiveness or value to her based on her actions or behavior.

You have to remain confident and believe in yourself no matter what she says or does.

When your ex notices that you don't need her approval to feel good about yourself, she will automatically feel respect for you again, even if she tries to fight it or hide it.

She will find herself thinking about you in a more positive way and naturally reconnecting with her old feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

Another reason why she might be trying to blame everything on you is that

4. She doesn't realize her mistakes yet and still thinks that she approached the relationship correctly

Like men, some women go through life thinking that they are perfect and don't need to change a thing.

People like that tend to fail at most things in life and then blame other people or blame external sources (e.g. the government, a boss at work, parents).

A person like that usually doesn't like to admit their faults or mistakes because they don't want to look weak or stupid.

They don't realize that everyone makes mistakes and when a person learns from their mistake, they become stronger and smarter, not weaker and less intelligent.

So, if your ex is like that, she will know about her mistakes, but she won't want to focus on them.

She will want to shift the blame to you, so she can feel better about herself.

Yet, here's the thingâ€¦|

She won't feel better about herself at all.

She will know that she was at fault too and she will hate the fact that she has to keep living a lie and acting like she is perfect and doesn't need to learn anything.

5. She wants to see if you continue chasing her, even though she's treating you badly

If a woman is attractive or feels as though she is a quality woman, she will want to make sure that her man deserves her and isn't just getting lucky by being with her.

One of the ways she can do that is by blaming him for everything and treating him badly after a break up.

She will be rude to him, call him names, insult him and downplay anything good he ever did for her and then watch to see what his reaction is.

If he takes all of her punishment, takes all the blame, apologizes over and over again and tries to suck up to her, she will see that he doesn't really view himself as being a valuable man.

A confident man who believes in his value and attractiveness to a woman would laugh at her attempts to make him out to be the villain, or to be a worthless piece of junk that she or any other woman wouldn't want anything to do with.

A confident man who believes in his value to a woman will always be able to get his ex back so much easier than a guy who doesn't believe in himself.

Why?

Women are naturally attracted to confidence.

Additionally, women are turned off by men who allow themselves to be walked all over by a woman.

Important: This doesn't mean that you should get angry at her and demand that she treat you better.

No.

You have to be emotionally mature and emotionally strong enough to not get dragged into her fake drama.

Rise above it, look down with a smile and laugh at it.

You know very well that you are not to blame for everything, so why not laugh at the accusation.

After all, it's ridiculous.

So, laugh.

You can say something like, "Yes, it's all my fault. I'm the worst. It's even my fault that you [insert some mistakes she made in the relationship]. I'm to blame for everything. World's worst boyfriend" and have a laugh.

By being confident and manly in that way, you stop her in her tracks and make her realize the ridiculousness of what she is saying.

You also make her feel impressed and attracted to the fact that you're not allowing yourself to get walked all over by her.

If you can also get her laughing, she will respect the fact that you're being a good guy about all of this, rather than being an angry asshole of an ex who wants to even the score with her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Can I Get My Ex to Spend Some Time With Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Follow these 3 steps to get your ex to spend more time with you...

1. Tell her that you accept the break up

Telling her that you accept the break up and understand that a relationship between you and her will never happen again, is a great way to bring down an ex woman's guard.

So, if your ex has recently been avoiding you, or making excuses not to talk to you or see you, it might be because she is getting a vibe from you that you just want a relationship with her again.

However, since the feelings aren't mutual (i.e. you are attracted to her and still in love with her, but she's just not feeling the same way anymore), it doesn't feel right for her to be spending time with you.

By the way ☐!

If you've already told her that you have accepted the break up, but she is still avoiding you, it could be because you were coming on too strong (e.g. texting or calling her all the time, showing up uninvited at her home or place of work, or where she likes to hang out with her friends).

As a result, she may feel that you're trying to force her into spending time with you and giving you another chance, even though the feelings aren't mutual.

So, rather than getting into an argument with you about your approach or having to teach you what to change so she can open back up to you, she simply tries to avoid you instead.

It doesn't mean that things are over between you and her though.

You can change your approach to her (i.e. focus on making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you) and she will naturally open back up to interacting with you more.

[image: Tell her that you accept the break up now]

Firstly though, if you haven't sincerely told her that you accept the break up, you should start there.

For example: You can send a text message, message her on social media or send her an e-mail saying something along the lines of, â☐☐ Hey (insert your exâ☐☐s name). I know that Iâ☐☐ve been putting pressure on you lately to spend time together and I'm sorry about that. I just want you to know that I have now fully accepted our break up. I don't intend on trying to get us back into a relationship. However, I do think that we can be friends instead, if you want that too.â☐☐

By saying something like that to her, youâ☐☐re letting her know that you understand how your behavior has been making her feel.

Youâ☐☐re also taking the pressure off her to spend time with you, which actually then makes her more willing and open to spend time with you.

When she can see that youâ☐☐re no longer trying to force her back into a relationship with you, it allows her to relax her guard a little bit when she hears from you.

She doesn't have to keep pushing you away or being cold or distant because you're clearly not pressuring her anymore.

Once youâve made her drop her defenses a little bit, the next thing you need to do isâ

2. Get her on a phone call and focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good

Don't just hide behind texts.

You have to get to a phone call, so you can let her hear your confidence coming through as you talk. You also need to get her smiling, laughing and feeling good on the call, so she feels motivated to want to spend some time with you.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys mess things up when they call an ex woman.

So, to help you get it right, I will point out 5 classic mistakes that guys make when calling an ex woman and trying to get her spend some time with himâ

Mistake 1: He begs or pleads with her to spend time with him

This is probably one of the most common reactions guys have.

If she says something like, âNo, I donât want to see you right now,â or âIâm not ready to meet up with you yet. Maybe in a few weeks or months, Iâm not sureâ he might plead with her by saying something like, âPlease meet up with me just this once! I beg you! I just need to see you. Please donât cut me out of your life completely. I need this. Please do it for me.â

Unfortunately, rather than convince a woman to change her mind, a begging, pleading guy only turns her off even more. Why?

A womanâs attraction to a guy is based mostly on his ability to make her feel like she can respect him, look up to him and feel proud of him as her man.

So, when a guy is begging, pleading and falling apart without her, rather than make her feel flattered that heâs so lost and hopeless on his own, she feels turned off by what she perceives as his lack of emotional masculinity.

As a result, she can't look up to him and respect him, so she just doesn't feel like spending time with him.

Another common mistake that a guy might make isâ

Mistake 2: He shows emotional weakness

In most cases, when a woman talks to her ex after a break up, she won't make it very easy for him to get her back.

Instead, she will play a little hard to get or behave in a difficult way to test if he really has changed or not, (e.g. Will he become insecure? Will he get angry and frustrated at her? Will he lose control of his emotions?).

It's a perfect opportunity to really push him to the limit and find out what kind of man he really is.

So, rather than agree to meet up with him again right away, she might act cold, distant and possibly even hostile towards him.

Naturally, if the guy then seems insecure or anxious over the phone, she will lose respect for him based on the fact that he can't handle the pressure.

She may then begin to think, â€œI never really wanted to admit this to myself before, but heâ€™s really just a weak-minded, wimpy guy, isn't he? He's not strong enough for me. Iâ€™m sure that I can do better than him. I just have to stick with this break up and get back out there again. I will find myself a real man who isn't going to fall apart every time heâ€™s faced with a challenging situation. Iâ€™m actually kind of glad that we broke up now because it has given me the chance to see what kind of man he really is deep down.â€

Another ineffective tactic a guy might use to get his ex to spend some time with him isâ€¦!

Mistake 3: He tries to make her feel guilty for how hurt he is that she won't spend time with him

Rather than making her smile, laugh and feel good on the phone so she then wants to catch up with him, a guy will sometimes make the mistake of seeking pity from her.

He might try to make her feel guilty for not spending time with him by saying something like, â€œWhy won't you spend any time with me? Doesn't what we used to have together mean anything to you now? After all the love and good times we shared, the least you could do is give me a few minutes of your time. Why are you being like this? I mean, maybe I was wrong about you. I thought you really loved me, but I guess our â€œloveâ€ was something that only I felt. I love you and have always loved you, but this is how you treat me. I didn't know you could be this cruel and heartless.â€

In some cases, a woman will agree to spend some time with her ex based on that kind of approach, but she won't like it.

She will resent him for making her feel guilty and for seeking pity from her in that way.

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

Although a guy may be experiencing a lot of emotional pain from being rejected by his ex woman, it's not reason enough for him to turn into an emotional wussy.

Watch this video for more infoâ€¦!

Being an emotional wussy might get you some temporary time from her, but it's not going to last.

If you want her back for real, you've got to be a man about it.

You also need to focus on making her having feelings for you.

Mistake 4: He shows her that his life is essentially on hold until he can spend time with her or get her back

Sometimes a guy might say, â€œI know that youâ€™re not willing to spend time with me right now, so Iâ€™m just going to wait until you are. I don't want to move on without you. I love you and I only want to be with you. I don't care about anything else in life right now. I would throw it all away right now just to be with you. Please understand how much I love you and how much you mean to me.â€

Heâ€™s hoping that she will feel flattered about how devoted he is to her and say, â€œIâ€™ve been so silly! How could I have treated you so badly? Iâ€™m so sorry! Let's meet up right away! I can't wait to see you again. After allâ€¦ any guy who is willing to put his life on hold for me is worth keeping.â€

Obviously, it just doesn't work that way.

Why?

Firstly, the feelings have to be mutual for her to care about meeting up with him.

Secondly, a woman doesn't feel respect and attraction for a man who can't function properly without her.

A woman wants to be in a relationship with a man who loves her and wants her, but doesn't actually need her there supporting him before he will continue on pursuing his goals and rising up to reach his true potential as a man.

So, when a guy is telling his ex woman that he doesn't really care about anything else in life because he needs her back, she's going to feel turned off by that.

She will feel as though he is more of a burden than a benefit to her.

As a result, she will close up and it will become a little more difficult for him to then get her back.

Finally, one of the worst mistakes a guy might make is that

Mistake 5: He makes it about him spending time with her (which is him being emotionally needy), rather than them spending time together as friends

Sometimes, when a woman keeps refusing to meet up with a guy, he might get so caught up in his feelings (e.g. how frustrated, sad, annoyed, or hopeless he feels without her) that he forgets how he is making her feel.

For example: He doesn't realize that he's coming across as being too emotionally sensitive or needy when trying to get her to meet up with him and spend time with him, which then makes her feel like she is being pressured into something she doesn't want.

Even though the guy is a good guy and has good intentions, it just doesn't feel good to her.

Some women may even think, He's being so selfish! All he's worried about is stopping the pain of me rejecting him. He wants me to spend time with him so he can feel better about himself. Well, what about how I feel? Has he even given me a second thought? Does he realize how unattractive his needy, selfish behavior is to me? I bet he doesn't even care. He just wants me to stop the pain and make him feel better by spending time with him. Well, no! I'm not going to do that for him. He wants me back, but he hasn't even made me feel like I want him back yet.

As you can see from the example mistakes above, it's very important that you approach the phone call correctly when speaking to your ex and asking her to spend some time with you.

Don't worry if you've stuffed things up already, or have made the classic mistake of hiding behind texts.

What matters is what you do from this moment onwards.

For example:

Imagine that you're on a call with your ex and she says something along the lines of, Why do you keep pressuring me? I just don't want to see you right now. You need to accept that.

The old you might have felt upset, begged and pleaded with her, or reacted in some other unattractive way (e.g. getting angry at her, seeking pity, trying harder to convince her, expressing your annoyance or frustration at the situation).

However, the new you doesn't lose control of his emotions just because she's being closed off.

Instead, he sees it as an opportunity to make her smile and laugh.

So, when she says something like that, you can reply by saying in a light-hearted, joking way, â€œNo problem if you don't want to see me right now. How about in 2 minutes? Is that enough time? Okay, maybe I'm still being too pushy! how about 5 minutes from now? Okay, okay, how about this! I'm feeling generous today, so I'll give you 10 minutes to get ready and then meet me at the coffee shop to say hi! and then have a laugh with her about that.

If she can hear the playfulness in your tone of voice, she will almost certainly smile or laugh while you are saying it, or afterwards.

She will then be forced to think about you in a more positive way, because you're reacting very differently to what she's expecting (i.e. you're being confident and playful with her by turning a potentially serious conversation into something you can both laugh about together).

At this point, you should

3. Ask her to catch up for a quick coffee to say hello

After a few minutes of light conversation with your ex, where you continue to make her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again, go ahead and ask her to meet up with you to say hello as friends.

You can say something like, â€œThis is the best chat we've had with each other in ages. It's great to see that we can finally talk like two mature adults, rather than awkward ex's. Let's catch up for a quick cup of coffee sometime this week. However, I've must warn you! it's only a catch up to say hello as friends, so don't ask me to get back together with you, okay?â€œ

Say the last part in a joking way and then add, â€œSeriously though, it would be nice to meet up in person. After we have that coffee, if you decide that you never want to see me again, I promise to accept it and never contact you again. So, how about it? Which day would suit you best? I'm busy on Tuesday and Wednesday, but available on Monday and Thursday.â€œ

In most cases, a woman will say â€œYes,â€œ and you can then go ahead and make plans to meet up with her at a convenient time and day.

Important: Many guys make the mistake of meeting up with their ex woman without first improving their emotional attractiveness (i.e. the guy is still hurt by the break up and needy of her, he lacks confidence around her now, he doesn't feel worthy of her anymore, he suppresses his instinct to joke around and plays it safe by being nice).

If you make that mistake, your ex won't be feeling those all important sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you as a result, she won't feel motivated to give you another chance.

So, make sure that before you get to the meet up, you've spend a few days making some attractive changes to your way of thinking and behaving, so you can properly re-attract your ex.

[image: How to re-attract her when spending time with her]

For example: Some of the things that will trigger her feelings of respect and attraction and make her want to spend more time with you are:

- You maintain your confidence around her, regardless of what she says or does to upset you or make you feel insecure.
- You use humor to bring down her guard and make her open up to you.
- You create sexual tension by flirting with her one minute and then pulling your attention back and talking to her normally the next.
- You make her feel feminine and girly by being emotionally masculine around her.
- You take the lead in the interaction and don't allow her to dominate you.

When she sees that you are now able to attract her in the ways women really want, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

[image: Use the time you spend with her to make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again]

She will then drop her guard a little bit and allow herself to imagine spending more time with you.

The more time she spends with you, the more attractive and in love she feels.

Before you know it, you and her are back together, in love and enjoying a committed relationship once again.

That's how it works.

You can achieve that within the next few days to a week.

Don't waste any more time.

Get her back before you potentially lose her forever.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Said That She Doesn't See a Future For Us Being Together as a Couple

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex said that she doesn't see a future for you and her as a couple, are that!

1. She can see that you still don't understand what she really wants in a man

She has tried to give you hints and clues based on what she has said to you and how she has reacted to behavior of yours that she found unattractive.

Yet, despite her attempts to get you to understand her and what she really wants in a man, you're still using pretty much the same old approach as before.

As a result, she's just not feeling it with you.

She might see you as being a good guy, but that's just not enough.

You've got to be able to give her the feeling that she really wants to have in a relationship.

If you're unable to do that, she's just not going to feel like there's any point giving you another chance.

For example:

- Did she want you to be more ballsy around her or in life in general, or did she see you as being confident and manly enough already?
- Do you know what kind of male behavior really turns her on, or were you just being a good guy to her and hoping that it would be enough?
- Did you make her feel more like your friend in the relationship, rather than your girl who could look up to you and respect you as her man?
- Did she want to see you being more ambitious and following through on big goals, or were you already an ambitious, successful guy or an ambitious guy who was on his way to success?
- Do you know what kind of power dynamic she would really prefer in the relationship (e.g. you clearly in the position of power), or did you just do whatever you felt like and expected her to simply enjoy it even though it wasn't what she really wanted?
- Were you able to remain confident and in control of your emotions when she tested you by being difficult, throwing a tantrum, teasing you or changing her mind all the time?
- Were you able to make her feel girly and feminine in comparison to how masculine you think, talk, feel, behave and act around her and in life, or did she feel neutral in comparison to you?

By answering those questions, you will realize that there's a lot more to relationships and keeping a woman happy than just being a good guy to her.

The love between a man and a woman is something that needs to be taken care of, nurtured and deepened over time.

If you do that properly (it's easy to do when you know how it's done), you and her will get to Stage 5 of a relationship, which is what I call Blissful Love.

When you reach Blissful Love and keep the relationship there, both you and her won't ever want to break up.

It feels so good to be there with each other and nothing else compares.

Unfortunately, most guys aren't aware of how to build on a woman's love over time, which is one of the reasons why there's such a high break up and divorce rate out there.

It's not men's fault though.

We don't get taught this kind of thing in school and in most cases, our parents have no idea about it either.

So, you are pretty much on your own as a man.

You have to figure out for yourself.

Of course, I am here to help you and show you the way.

Unfortunately, a guy will often avoid seeking help when the relationship with his ideal woman is falling apart.

This is particularly true with intelligent men.

An intelligent man is usually able to figure things out for himself and get through life.

Yet, when it comes to his woman and the relationship that is falling apart, he just doesn't know what he can do to stop the pending break up.

Not knowing what else to do, a guy might begin to be more and more insecure, controlling, jealous, irritable, selfish or emotionally sensitive.

He won't feel safe in the relationship anymore and will be continually worried about the possibility of her leaving him.

His woman will notice the changes in him and feel turned off by his inability to get things back on track.

She will lose respect for him and begin to wonder, “Is this really the guy I want to be with for life? Is he really the best that I can do? Do I have to stay with him, even though he's continually turning me off and making our relationship feel annoying and stressful? Is it okay for me to just break up with him?”

She will then either then break up with him right away, or begin the process of breaking up with him (i.e. stop showing as much affection, spend more time away from him, begin flirting with other guys, make plans to go out with her single girlfriends after breaking up with him).

When she finally breaks up with him and says something like, “I don't see a future for us as a couple,” it can be devastating and heartbreaking to the guy.

Many guys have no idea how to fix the problem and end up losing their woman completely.

So, don't be afraid to seek help with this.

You can fix the problems between her and get her back.

However, you have to make sure that you do it right.

For example: Don't try to talk to her and fix the problems between you by discussing them.

That's not what works.

You've got to focus on reactivating her feelings of respect and romantic and sexual attraction for you. When you do that, she naturally starts to open back up to you and begin imaging a future with you. However, if you are trying to get her back by discussing the relationship before even re-attracting her, she's just not going to feel the same way you do.

She won't feel the motivation to fix things like you do and will just keep rejecting you.

The real secret to getting an ex back and to keeping a relationship together for life is to maintain and build on the woman's feelings for you.

You can't just make her feel good at the start and then expect her to stick with you for life even though she doesn't feel good around you anymore.

If you want to get her back and keep the relationship together, you've got to be able to maintain and deepen her feelings over time.

If you don't give a woman that experience, she begins to feel uncertain about her future with you.

Let's have a look at some examples to put it into contextâ"|

Example 1

A woman might want to have a boyfriend (or husband) who is always striving to reach for his true potential and rise through the levels of life.

She wants to know that if she decides to have a family with him, he will be emotionally strong enough to continue striving to succeed and be able to support them and their offspring.

So, if she notices that her guy is drifting through his life (e.g. he doesn't have a clear purpose or direction, he has a low-paying job, he doesn't have a job and relies on her for financial support, he wastes most of his free time watching TV, playing video games or chatting on social media sites) she will naturally start to feel insecure about her future with him.

Initially, she might make excuses for his behavior and she may even say to herself, â"Itâ"s okay. Weâ"re still young. I donâ"t want to be one of those nagging women who push their man to be overly responsible and not have any fun. Iâ"m sure that he will mature soon enough and start being the man I want him to be.â"

Yet, when she realizes that months or years continue to pass by and heâ"s no closer to becoming the kind of man she needs him to be, she will start to feel insecure and anxious about her future with him.

When that happens, she will begin to lose respect for him and eventually decide to break up with him by saying something along the lines of, â"Iâ"m sorry, but this isnâ"t working out. I just donâ"t see a future for us being together as a couple.â"

Example 2

Another example is when a woman finds herself in a relationship with a guy who is very driven and is always working hard to provide for her, to the point where he becomes neglectful, doesn't spend much time with her and expects her to just wait around in the background for years or decades until he achieves the level of success he's aiming for.

Even though he is working hard and setting himself up to be a great provider for her and any offspring they may have, it's just not fair on the woman.

She's not his property and doesn't have to wait around and get little bits of his attention a couple of times a week.

She has to be able to feel loved, appreciated and wanted.

If he's able to strike that balance, she will be an amazing woman for him and will make him feel loved, appreciated and wanted too.

Yet, if it's all just about his career or business and hardly ever about him and her enjoying life, she's just not going to be happy.

Deep down, she might feel bad for being ungrateful (especially when her friends or colleagues talk about their lazy boyfriend or husband), but she just won't be able to stop herself from feeling taken for granted.

Unfortunately, in cases like this, a woman will often cheat on her man if she is left to wait in the background of his life for too long.

She will need a guy to make her feel loved, wanted and appreciated.

She will also just need to feel like she is living her life and enjoying it, rather than waiting around in the background for a man who might even decide to dump her later on when he becomes successful.

Here's the thing thoughâ€¦!

A woman doesn't want to have to get to the point where she cheats on her boyfriend/husband or flirts with other guys for attention and validation because she's not getting that from her relationship.

If she's like most women on the planet, she just wants to be with one man for life.

She wants to feel like the man that she's with understands what she wants and is giving that to her in the best way that he can.

He doesn't have to be perfect, but he does need to ensure that he strikes a balance in life (i.e. doesn't work too hard and neglect her, or doesn't become too lazy and cause her to feel unsafe about a future with him).

By keeping things balanced, he will naturally avoid making his woman feel as though her loyalty, commitment and dedication to him is being taken for granted.

As you can see, there are many different reasons why a woman might feel unsafe about a future with a guy.

If your ex has said that to you, don't worry.

You can change how she feels about you and make her see a clear, exciting, rewarding future with you.

How?

When you understand her real reasons for breaking up with you (e.g. She wants you to be more focused and driven in your life, rather than messing around. She wants you to treat her more like an attractive, desirable woman rather than a friend or roommate. She wants you to be more confident and emotionally strong, rather than always letting her dominate you emotionally), you can then make the right changes and adjustments to yourself.

Then, when you interact with her and she expects in the same old ways, you can surprise her by thinking, talking and behaving like the new, more confident and more emotional masculine version of you instead.

When she can see for herself that not only do you understand what she really wants in a man, but you are also giving it to her now, it then becomes difficult for her to deny the fact that a future with you actually seems good to her now.

She doesn't look into the future and feel dread or feel like it would be a huge mistake or waste of time to be with you.

She can see that you have already changed and will almost certainly continue to become an even better man day by day now.

Another possible reason why your ex said that she doesn't see a future for you being together as a couple is that

2. She doesn't want to have to teach you or guide you

[image: She doesn't want to teach you or guide you]

A woman doesn't want to be a guy's teacher about how to be a man in a relationship.

She wants a guy who already knows how to maintain and build on her feelings of love, respect and attraction, without needing to lean on her for guidance and support.

Essentially, she just wants to be in love, rather than trying to make a relationship work with a guy who doesn't yet understand how to be the kind of man she needs.

For example: When a woman decides to get her own house, she usually doesn't want to build the house herself.

Instead, she just wants to buy the best house that she can find, so she can move in right away and enjoy it stress-free.

She wants the house to be a real house, in excellent working condition and with no nasty surprises.

So, imagine how she might feel if she then discovers that her nice, new house springs a leak in the kitchen and bathroom and all the walls begin to crack all around the house.

Naturally, she will feel like she's been cheated and sold a house that wasn't as good as she thought initially.

She was promised a great house, in excellent working condition, but it is full of problems that are taking away from the joy she wants to experience in it.

In the same way, most women don't want to discover that their guy needs a lot of fixing before he can be a real man that she can look up to and respect.

She also doesn't want to have to expend the time and energy improving him and teaching him how to be the kind of man she needs him to be.

She just wants a man who understands how to be a man and is that way, so she can get on with enjoying a real, loving, committed, lifetime relationship with him.

So, an important question for you at this point is

Do you know exactly what is causing your ex to say that she doesn't see a future for you and her being together as a couple?

If your answer is No, don't worry you can figure this out now.

Here are some possible reasons that she isn't telling you about because she doesn't want to teach you how to get her back.

She doesn't see a future with you as a couple because

- You became too insecure, needy and clingy in the relationship.
- You stopped making her feel like a desirable, sexy woman (e.g. you weren't affectionate enough, the sex became too neutral or even dried up completely).
- You placed her needs ahead of your own, despite her bad behavior, so she felt emotionally more dominant than you.
- You became too annoying (e.g. you stopped listening to her, you made fun of her ideas and opinions, you pestered her for attention).
- You didn't want to be mature and commit to her and the relationship in the same way she did.
- You weren't following through on your big goals, dreams and ambitions in life and were using the safety of "spending time with her" to hide from making progress as a man.
- You made her feel as though you needed her way more than she needed you.
- You made her feel as though you'd be a burden that she would have to carry throughout life.
- You and her always seemed to end up arguing and fighting about things that other couples handle so easily.
- She couldn't be herself around you because you were either too emotionally sensitive and needed her to be nice and gentle with you, or you were too selfish and expected her to just put up with whatever you said or did around her.
- She felt she was just too cool for you, or you were too cool for her.
- She felt like you didn't have the same kind of value to offer her as she was offering you (e.g. she was smart, attractive and interesting and you were smart, annoying and boring).

Of course, not all of the examples above will apply to you.

Those are just examples to help you get clear on where you might have been going wrong with her and how you can adjust and change to get her back.

It's only when you understand your ex's real reasons for leaving, can you then begin to make the right changes to yourself.

For example: If you and her always seemed to end up arguing and fighting, she's not going to care if you get a new shirt and add some muscle at the gym.

What will matter to her is when she interacts with you and notices that she feels so much happier now around you.

Conversations create smiles, laughter and feel good emotions.

It's no longer how it used to be.

When she can see that you figured out what has been turning her off without needing her to tell you and have also taken steps to change those things, she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She will then begin to imagine a much better future if you and her were to get back together and be a couple again.

At that point, you just need to build on her feelings as you interact with her and she will keep dropping her guard and opening up.

Many guys are able to achieve that during the first interaction with their ex woman.

However, in some cases (e.g. where the woman is completely turned off by her ex and doesn't want anything to do with him anymore), it can take 2-3 interactions to accomplish.

Another possible reason why your ex said that she doesn't see a future for you being together as a couple is

3. She thinks that you and her will want different things in the long run

At the start of a relationship, a couple will usually focus on the excitement of falling in love and getting to know each other, than on any differences they might have.

So, if they don't agree on something, it's easy to write it off by saying, "We can fix that later. I'm sure that things will change," or, "Right now, none of those things are important to me. I'm certain that when the time comes, we'll work everything out."

Yet, months or years into the relationship, the things that were initially ignored now start to become annoying and unwanted.

For example: A woman might be very focused on her career and be looking forward to rising through the levels in her chosen field, before she decides to settle down and start a family.

On the other hand, her guy is always talking about how wonderful it will be when they are married, how much he loves children and how he can't wait to have a big family of his own.

Naturally, this is not something that will bother a woman when she's just met a guy because she's not yet sure if she will stick with him for life.

However, in a long-term relationship where he and her seem to want different things, she will begin to wonder whether the relationship should continue.

For example: She may think something like, "While I'm focused on my career, all he seems to be aiming for is having a family. He wants me pregnant and at home, but I want to continue on with my career as long as I can. Maybe we just need to break up because if we stay together, one of us will have to compromise and I don't want to be the one to do that. I want to continue on with my career, without being made to feel selfish about it."

If he keeps pestering her about starting a family and she just can't seem to change her mind about wanting to continue on with her career, she will be forced to break up with him.

She might then say something like, "I don't see a future for us being together as a couple. We want different things and it's just not working out."

Another possible reason why your ex said that to you is

4. You haven't made her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you yet

After a break up, most guys feel unsure about how to approach their ex to get her back into a relationship.

As a result, all kinds of classic mistakes are made, which simply don't help the guy's chances of getting her back at all.

For example: A classic mistake is writing a long letter or e-mail to an ex woman to explain your feelings and try to work things out.

A guy might send his ex woman an e-mail and type something like, "I just want you to know that I love you and care about you more than anything else. You said that you can't see a future for us being together as a couple, but I can. I just can't see a future without you in it. You mean the world to me and I will do anything to make this work between us. What we had was special. You have to admit that. It was. You and I were so good for each other before we started having problems. I want to get us back to that place. Just tell me what you want me to change or do and I will do it. Tell me what will make you see a future for us together and I will make it happen."

The guy means well, but it's just not what works on a woman.

A woman doesn't want to have to teach a man or help him to get her back in any way.

As a result, she will think something like, "He doesn't get it. He thinks that talking about what he wants from me is going to change the fact that I don't feel the same way about him anymore. He doesn't even know why my feelings have changed. Well, I'm tired of having to help him understand how to be the kind of man that I need. I've given up trying to teach him and guide him. I'm simply not willing to take on the responsibility of shaping him into the man that he needs to become. I have to get away from him and find myself a man who understands what a woman really wants."

She then closes up and it becomes a little more difficult for him to get through to her and get her back.

He can still get her back, but he has to change his approach right away and stop saying and doing the things that turn an ex woman off.

There are so many classic mistakes to avoid and most guys simply do not know about them until after they've made the mistake and felt the consequence.

A final possible reason why your ex said that she doesn't see a future for you being together as a couple is

5. You're asking her for a relationship before you've fully reactivated her original feelings for you

[image: You are asking for a relationship before reactivating her feelings]

One of the most common reactions that guys have when they get broken up with by a woman, is to quickly try and convince her to give him another chance.

For example: A guy might send his ex flowers and write a note like, "I'm sorry. I know that I stuffed up, but we can make this work. Please give me another chance. I love you so much. Peter,

xoxoxoâ☐☐

Another guy might write his ex a love poem, pouring his heart out to her and asking her to take him back.

Another guy might try to list of reasons why they are good as a couple and why she should give him another chance.

What these guys donâ☐☐t realize is that without first reactivating her feelings of respect and attraction, none of those romantic gestures will mean much to her at all.

Why?

The feelings aren't mutual.

If he doesn't reactivate her feelings for him first, she's not going to feel motivated to give him another chance.

So, if you want your ex to see a future for you being together as a couple, donâ☐☐t try to convince her by being romantic (i.e. sending flowers, gifts, love letters), because those things rarely change a womanâ☐☐s mind.

Additionally, don't try to make her realize how good you and her couple be by talking about all the positives of your previous relationship.

What matters is how you make her feel NOW.

Are you making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you NOW based on the changes you've made to yourself?

Have you changed the things about yourself that really matter to her, or are you just trying to get her back in the same old ways, without changing your approach to her?

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Can I Talk to the Emotional Side of My Ex's Brain?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 tips to help you talk to the emotional side of your ex's brain, so she opens up and wants to be with you againâ€¦

1. Stop trying to discuss the relationship with her

[image: Stop trying to discuss and work through your old relationship problems. Just start a new relationship based on who you are now.]

To get an ex woman back, you must focus on making her feel positive, enjoyable feelings for you. That can't happen if you're trying to 'work things out' by discussing the relationship problems you and her experienced and how you might be able to fix them.

So, don't try to discuss the relationship or 'fix things' between you and her right now.

Instead, just focus on making her experience positive, enjoyable feelings for you as you interact with her (e.g. love, respect, attraction, happiness, excitement, arousal and intrigue).

When you make her feel positive emotions, she will naturally drop her guard and begin to feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

You will be connecting to the emotional side of her brain rather than the analytical side of her brain. She will enjoy being around you and feel drawn to you.

As a result, she will naturally want to hug you, kiss you, have sex with you and open back up to giving the relationship another chance.

However, if you force her into analytical mode by asking her loads of questions about the relationship, trying to 'work things out' or get her to remember the good old times and forget the bad times, she's just going to close up.

Remember: What matters most is how you make her feel NOW.

Don't worry about the past.

Yes, you made some mistakes and the relationship fell apart, but that was before.

What matters most is how you make her feel NOW.

So, focus on making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you NOW.

Don't make the classic mistake that other guys make and end up turning your ex off and making her not want to interact with you anymore.

For example: Imagine that a guy is on a call with his ex and not talking to the emotional side of her brain.

He's making the classic mistake of saying things like, â€œPlease forgive me. I know I stuffed up pretty badly, but I'm willing to do anything to make it up to you. How about we go away for a holiday to spend some quality time together just the two of us? Or, maybe you'd rather go to counseling together to have a professional help us through this. I'm willing to do whatever you want. Just tell me how to make things right between us and I'll do it. I promise that you won't *regret it if you give me another chance.*â□□

He hopes that his approach will work, but what he doesn't realize is that NOTHING about what he's saying or doing is making her feel re-attracted to him.

Before she would even be interested in going away for a holiday or participating in counseling, she would need to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new and improved him.

He is essentially trying to get her to work on the relationship, even though she doesn't have much or any feelings for him anymore.

Most women don't want to do those kind of things if they've already broken up with a guy.

So, rather than make her think, *â□□Oh, how sweet. Heâ□□s being so honest and open with me. He's also willing to do whatever I want. He is so dedicated to me!*â□□ she will be thinking something like, â□□This relationship just seems like too much hard work. He needs me to tell him what to do. He has no idea how to make me feel happy and attracted to him right now. He might feel drawn to me, but I just don't feel the same way. In fact, his desperation to do whatever I want is actually turning me off even more."

He was trying to show her that he loved her and cared about her so much that he was willing to do anything.

Yet, that's just not the way to get a woman back after a serious break up.

You have to make her have feelings for you again, otherwise she's just not going to feel motivated or inspired to say, "Yes!" and give you another chance when you ask for it.

So, in the example above, when the guy asks her for another chance, she will have already made up her mind and will say something like, *â□□Sorry, but Iâ□□m not interested in getting back together again. Itâ□□s over between us and you need to accept that and move on.*â□□

The poor, right?

Definitely.

I feel for him.

He really loves her and wants to do the right thing, but his approach is all wrong.

So, what is the right way to get your ex woman back?

Simple.

Use every interaction that you have with her (especially over the phone and in person) to reactivate her feelings for you and then build on them.

Make her feel like she's having so much fun and feeling so attracted when talking to you that the idea of not hearing from you again begins to make her feel anxious.

She starts to worry about the possibility of missing out on the chance to experience what it would be like to be in a relationship with you now.

Her guard comes down and she begins to enjoy the attraction she now feels for you.

So, how can you make her feel attracted?

One way to make her feel attracted is by using humor to make her smile, laugh and feel good when talking to you.

For example: Imagine that youâ□□re on a call with your ex right now.

Firstly, make sure you don't mention the relationship to her at all.

If she happens to bring up the relationship and say something like, "I don't know why I'm even talking to you after what happened," rather than start explaining and apologizing (which will play right into her hands and give her more reasons to feel turned off by you), just turn it into something that you and her can laugh about together.

If she says, "I don't know why I'm even talking to you after what happened," you can say (in a light-hearted way), "Well, you're probably talking to me because you can't resist my charming personality," and have a laugh with her about it.

She will likely feel a bit shocked (in a good way) that you're saying joking around with her when she's being serious and closed off.

She then laugh (or at least smile) at your boldness and feel sparks of respect and attraction for you.

Note: If she says, "That's not funny" and tries to act like she's angry, just know that it's a test of your confidence.

Women always test the confidence of men and if a man crumbles under the fake pressure that is being put on him by a woman, the woman loses respect for him.

So, if she says, "That's not funny," don't take it seriously and worry.

Instead, just say something like, "Relax girl. Just because we're broken up, it doesn't mean we can't joke around and have a laugh. No need to be so serious."

Say that in a relaxed, easy-going, light-hearted, but assertive manner to let her know that you're not intimidated, but you're also not being an asshole either.

Getting your ex woman to respect you is part of talking to the emotional side of her brain, so don't be afraid to be assertive in a relaxed, easy-going way.

She might not openly admit to you that she feels some respect for the new you, but she will.

Additionally, don't be afraid to joke around with her and get her smiling and laughing.

Laughing, smiling and having fun causes a woman to drop her guard and stop being so serious about everything.

As a result, interacting with her becomes a lot easier, because the emotional side of her brain is now open to you.

2. Start making her feel attractive emotions

[image: Start making her feel attractive emotions]

To make your ex open herself up to the idea of getting back together, you must begin to replace her negative feelings for you (e.g. anger, disappointment, disgust) with more positive emotions (e.g. respect, attraction, love, desire, excitement and intrigue).

She then begins to think something like, "I can't believe how different he is now. I keep expecting him to react in the same way that he used to before, but he surprises me by reacting in a more confident and emotionally masculine way now. The man he has become now is definitely the kind of guy I could respect, feel attracted to and love again. Maybe it isn't over between us. Maybe it would be fine to just give him another chance and see how things go. After all, I have that feeling in my heart for him again. I feel drawn to him. I have to follow my heart. â□□

What's an example of how you can make her feel that way?

Make sure that you react differently to what she says and does compared to how you used to be.

No matter how much she tries to needle you to get a rise out of you, just make sure that you don't show her the old you who she broke up with (e.g. insecure, not feeling worthy of her anymore).

For example: If your ex says something along the lines of, *â□□My feelings for you have changed. I donâ□□t think you and I are right for each other,*â□□ you can show her that you donâ□□t feel hurt or insecure by it.

You might laugh at what she said (important) and say something like, *â□□I bet youâ□□re expecting me to get upset right now, aren't you? Okay, here goesâ□|â□□ then playfully pretend to cry and say, â□□Boohoo! This canâ□□t be happening to me! The most perfect woman in the world doesnâ□□t think we should be together anymore. Oh no, my life is over. She hates me!*â□□

Alternatively, you might laugh and say, *â□□My life is over! Iâ□□m going to kill myself now. Soâ□| whereâ□□s the nearest pizza place? I am going to eat as many pizzas as I can until I have a heart attack or something. Death by pizza sounds like something I can do. It might take a while, but at least it will be enjoyable,*â□□ and then laugh with her about it.

Alternatively, you might say something like, "You're right. You and I aren't right for each other because you always were a horrible cook. Do you know that I used to go to the bathroom and throw up when I ate your home cooked meals. They were the worst!" and have a laugh with her about that.

In other words, you donâ□□t take what she is saying so seriously and just use it as an opportunity to make her smile, laugh and feel good in your presence.

You temporarily get rid of the seriousness of the situation and as a result, she starts to relax a little.

You can then say something like, *â□□Seriously though, I understand why youâ□□re feeling that way about me right now. I definitely did silly things like (what you did wrong â□□ e.g. you were too emotionally dependent on her, you displayed unmanly behavior too often, you were too jealous), but Iâ□□m not that guy anymore. I donâ□□t expect you to believe me just because Iâ□□m saying it, so Iâ□□ll let my actions and behavior prove it to you instead. I accept that weâ□□re broken up and Iâ□□m not going to push you to give me another chance, if thatâ□□s what youâ□□re worried about. That said, I still think we can be friends. We're both mature enough to do that. So, let's just be friends now, okay?*â□□

If you were previously trying hard to get her back, or if you usually weren't able to handle her negative comments or reactions, she will see for herself that you really have changed.

You now have the balls to remain confident and turn potentially awkward, tense situations into something that both you and her can laugh about.

She can also relax and not have to keep her guard so high because you're saying that you just want to be friends now.

Of course, you're not just going to be her friend.

You're simply going to use the "friendship" angle to keep the lines of communication open, so you can interact with her and re-attract her.

3. Keep the laughter going

[image: Make her laugh and smile when she is being cold towards you]

Thereâs a very good reason why people often say, *âLaughter is the best medicine.*â

It really does help to get rid of a lot of negative tension and bring things back to love and other feel good emotions.

In the case of getting an ex back, when you make her laugh, smile and feel happy to be around you, she will find it almost impossible to think, *âHeâs such a jerk and I never want to see him again as long as I live,*â at the same time.

Making her laugh isn't the only thing that is required to get her back, but it definitely is something that helps bring her guard down so you can re-attract and impress her in other ways.

So, whenever youâre talking to your ex over the phone or in person, make sure that youâre not taking the conversations too seriously and creating unnecessary negative tension and stress between you and her.

Instead, approach every interaction with a confident, easy-going attitude and focus on turning pretty much everything she says into something that will make her laugh, smile and feel sparks of attraction for you again.

For example: Imagine that youâre having coffee with your ex and she says something like, *âI donât know why Iâm even here.*â

Rather than doing what a lot of insecure guys would do (e.g. get upset, try to calm her down), you can turn it into something that you and her can both laugh about together.

You might say, âI know why you're here" and she will then ask something like, "Why?"

You can then say, "For the free coffee. You knew I'd pay for the bill and you need help to feed your coffee addiction" and then have a laugh with her about that.

She will then feel some respect and attraction for you because youâre not getting caught up in her fake drama.

She will then have to admit to herself that youâve changed (i.e. because youâre not reacting in the ways she is expecting you to), which will automatically boost her feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

In addition to making her smile, laugh and feel good, you should alsoâ!

4. Make her feel feminine in comparison to how masculine you think, talk, feel and behave

Many guys make the mistake of thinking that a woman will be happier if she gets to lead the way and decide how and when things happen.

So, rather than taking charge of the ex back process and getting her back, a guy will constantly be looking for her approval every step along the way.

For example: He might text her and say something along the lines of, âI would really like to talk to you. Is it okay if I give you a call sometime? I donât want to bother you if youâre busy.â□□

Alternatively, if heâ□□s on a call and asking her to meet up with him at a coffee shop, he might ask, â□□Are you sure that coffee shop is okay with you? We can go somewhere else if you donâ□□t like it. Iâ□□m easy. We can go anywhere that suits you. Just tell me which coffee shop you like the best and I will meet you there.â□□

Then, at the meet up (if he actually gets one), he might say things like, â□□I finally cleared up all that junk in my yard that you used to hateâ□□ and hopes to get a compliment from her about it.

Alternatively, he might say something like, â□□I took your advice and bought myself some new t-shirts and jeans. What do you think? Do they look good on me, or?â□□

He's hoping that she will be impressed and open up to giving him another chance because he's made some changes.

Yet, thatâ□□s not how the ex back process works with a woman.

A woman can get a man back that way (i.e. by changing things and then seeking his approval), but if a man seeks his ex woman's approval, he is just going to turn her off even more.

Women don't respect guys who need the approval of women to feel confident about themselves and their attractiveness.

Women respect guys who improve and develop as a man all the time, but don't come looking for a pat on the head about it from a woman.

If seek her approval or a pat on the head via a compliment, she will just end up feeling turned off because of how you see her as being in the dominant, leading position.

When that happens, she then stops feeling feminine and girly around you and starts feeling more like your boss, teacher or mother, which is extremely unattractive to her.

This is why you must believe in yourself enough to take the lead and be a man around her, without needing her approval every step of the way.

Naturally, that doesnâ□□t mean you should be arrogant, rude, push her around or demand that she does whatever you say.

That's not it at all.

Instead, being the mean and leading the way simply means that you are confident enough in yourself and in your value to her to do what it takes to get her back, without needing her to help you along and make things easy for you.

If she gets the sense that you're lost without her, feeling unworthy of her or doubting your attractiveness and hoping that she will make you feel okay about yourself again, she will feel turned off and close up.

You then won't be able to talk to the positive emotional side of her brain and will have to deal with the negative side instead.

So, make sure that you're not seeking her approval of the changes you've made since the break up.

When you are self-approving, masculine man, not only do you automatically become more attractive to her, but you also realize that you donâ□□t need her to feel happy or fulfilled in your life.

That is attractive to her (and to other women).

All of a sudden, she starts to look at you in a more positive light because you are now behaving like the kind of man she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love.

She realizes that if she doesn't get back with you, she's going to miss you a lot from now on and probably end up regretting it when you move on without her.

As a result, she will want to open up to give you and her another chance to see how it goes.

5. Create sexual tension

Sexual tension is an exciting, enjoyable, magnetic feeling that causes a man and a woman to want to kiss and have sex.

How can you create sexual tension?

Interact with her and make her feel attracted to you in many different ways at the same time (e.g. by using humor, being very confident, being emotionally strong, being charismatic, charming, assertive).

At the same time, let her see that you're not chasing a relationship with her.

She is attracted to you, she wants you back, but you're not even pressuring to make it happen.

You're simply letting the sexual tension build between you and her.

As a result, she begins to feel like she wants to kiss you and may think something like, What is happening to me? Why am I thinking about him kissing me again? Why am I suddenly worried about losing him? Why do I want to have sex with him?

Remember: The key is not to release that sexual tension right away.

Let it build and build to the point where she feels compelled to tell you that she wants to give you another chance, or she hugs you or leans in for a kiss.

For example: Imagine that you're having coffee with your ex and you're flirting with her, making her laugh and smile and making her feel feminine in contrast to your masculine vibe.

By the end of the meet up, she will be feeling turned on and wondering if you're going to at least give her a hug or a kiss goodbye.

Rather than giving her a hug and kiss, you can instead say something along the lines of, Anyway, it was great to catch up. I should head off now. Maybe we can talk another time and then leave.

This will leave her feeling frustrated and wondering what she did wrong and why you didn't try to kiss her.

She may even tell you to stop, so she can talk to you further and hopefully get a hug or kiss.

Alternatively, she might stop you and hug you or kiss you.

If she doesn't do any of those things, don't worry.

She will be feeling attracted to you again and there will be unresolved sexual tension between you and her.

So, she will be thinking about you from then on.

After a couple of days, simply contact her again and build up her feelings of attraction on the phone call.

[image: Release the built up sexual tension]

Then, get her to meet up with you, build up some sexual tension and release it with a hug and kiss (or sex, if you can).

Warning: Don't play too hard to get.

Remember that she is currently your ex and if you play too hard to get, she might just get fed up and move on.

So, after you've built up enough sexual tension, just go ahead and release it with hugging, kissing and sex.

That will be a pleasurable release of exciting sexual tension for her and make her want to experience more of you.

That's how you talk to the emotional side of her brain.

Don't waste time trying to discuss the relationship or connect with her in a friendly way.

Focus on making her feel attracted to you again, build up the sexual tension and release it when the moment is right.

You will then have her back and you can enjoy the great times ahead with her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Will Having Sex With My Ex Change Her Mind About the Break Up?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It definitely can help, but whether or not you get her back after the sex will usually depend on the following things...

1. Have you changed and improved emotionally since the break up?

Although the make up sex might be great between you and her, it's not what the whole relationship is about.

You still need to be able to make her feel attracted to you emotionally outside of the bedroom (e.g. because you're more confident now, you're more emotionally masculine, you're not as emotionally sensitive as you used to be).

[image: Have you changed and improved emotionally since the break up?]

If you continue to making the same old attraction mistakes outside of the bedroom (e.g. giving her too much power in the relationship, being needy or clingy, being insecure), she's going to want to stick to her decision to be broken up from you.

After all, if the sex was good in your relationship before, then it's not the reason she broke up with you anyway.

So, if you want your ex back for real, you need to show her that you've changed and improved emotionally in the ways that really matter to her.

For example:

- Were you clearly the man in the relationship (i.e. emotionally strong, emotionally masculine, the leader) so she could feel sexually attracted to you and in love with you, or did you end up creating a more neutral kind of relationship where you and her felt more like friends?
- Did you make her feel unappreciated by failing to notice her efforts to be a good girlfriend for you?
- Did you make her feel smothered in the relationship by being overly clingy and needy?
- Did you break your promises to her too often, or make her lose trust in you for other reasons?
- Did you only really care about your feelings and needs in the relationship?
- Did you make her feel unsafe by being a timid, insecure or and wimpy guy around her?
- Did you make her feel unsafe about the future by not having clear goals and confidently following through on them like a man?
- Did you and her grow apart because you wanted different things from the relationship (e.g. to settle down and get married vs. not wanting to commit)?
- Did you and her grow apart because one of you matured a lot faster than the other?
- Did you make her feel like you needed her more than she needed you, or that you loved her more than she loved you?

- Did you give her too much power in the relationship and she eventually got tired of leading you and feeling like a mother figure in your life?

By answering those questions above, you will be able to think of some of the ways you really messed up with her.

You will then be able to start making the right changes, adjustments or improvements to yourself to re-attract her in ways that she actually cares about and values.

When you interact with her and she notices that you've changed and improved some of the things that really matter to her, she will naturally begin to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

The more you build on her feelings for you, the less she will be able to hold onto her negative perception of you.

She will be forced to look at you in a positive light and feel hope for you and her once again.

When that happens, she will become open to hooking up with you sexually and seeing what happens after that.

Then, when you blow her mind in bed, she will naturally begin to change her mind about the break up.

Another thing that will determine whether or not having sex with your ex will change her mind about the break up isâ€¦

2. Will you be able to pass her confidence tests inside and outside of the bedroom?

[image: Will you be able to handle her tests inside and outside of the bedroom?]

One of the ways that a woman checks to see if her guy really has changed and improved emotionally since the break up, is by testing to see if he can remain confident and emotionally strong when she is being difficult.

For example: A woman might start having sex with her ex and in the middle of it, burst into tears and say something along the lines of, â€œI canâ€™t do this. Iâ€™m just not ready yet.â€

Then, a little while later, after they get dressed and are sitting on the couch together, she might start kissing him and initiating sex once again, only to stop him in the middle one more time with the same kind of excuse.

Essentially, sheâ€™s testing him to see what he will do (this is especially true if a woman broke up with her guy because he was too insecure and self-doubting around her).

A confident, emotionally strong man will just laugh and say, “No problemâ€¦let’s stop for now” and not take it personally.

If she does it the second time, he might laugh at her again and not take it so seriously.

He might say, “Coolâ€¦well, this time it was your fault because you started kissing me and groping me. Keep your hands to yourself” and have a laugh with her about that.

However, if she keeps doing the same thing and is simply trying to be annoying, he might decide to ask her to leave (or just get up and leave if he’s at her place).

He might say (in a calm, confident, assertive, but easy-going manner), “Okayâ€¦enough of this. It’s time for you to leave” and get her to leave his place.

She will most likely then apologize and want to stay and he can then make her promise to not stop halfway through sex next time, or else he won’t let her come over and see him anymore.

By approaching it in this way, he’s showing her that he isn’t getting insecure or angry when she is testing him, but he’s also not going to keep putting up with her silly behavior either.

There’s only so much he will put up with before he leaves her place, or gets her to leave his.

On the other hand, a wimpy, insecure guy might get upset and ask, “â€¦Why are you doing this to me? You pull me back in only to now reject me when we’re having sex. It hurts me that you would do that to me.”

She will then feel turned off by him for being such an emotionally sensitive wimp.

Alternatively, he might try to be Mr. Nice Guy and say, “â€¦Itâ€™s okay. I donâ€™t want to push you if youâ€™re not ready. Iâ€™m here for you no matter what. I’m willing to waitâ€¦” and she will then gain an unnecessary sense of power and control over him.

If she notices that he’s being on his best behavior and sucking up to her, she will lose respect for him for being such a wimp.

Another way a woman might test her ex guyâ€™s confidence is by meeting up with him and saying something along the lines of, “â€¦I donâ€™t know why I even came here today. Itâ€™s just a waste of my time,” to see if he will panic and become nervous.

In a situation like that, a confident guy will simply laugh at her fake bitchiness and say something like, “â€¦Oh, okayâ€¦I see that you brought along the bitchy side of yourself to coffee today. That’s fine, she can stayâ€¦I donâ€™t mind. However, Iâ€™m only paying for you and meâ€¦the bitchy self will have to pay for herself.”

Alternatively, he might say, “Well, isn’t someone in a bit of a mood today? What’s next? You’re going to tell me that you hate me and I’m the worst ex boyfriend in the world?” and then have a laugh with her about that.

Alternatively, he might say, “A waste of your time? Coffee with your hot ex boyfriend is never a waste of time” and then have a laugh with her about that.

Essentially, he’s showing her that he isn’t panicking or becoming nervous just because he hit her with some fake bitchiness to throw him off.

He’s stronger than that.

He’s not going to buckle under pressure, but he’s not going to be an arrogant asshole about it either.

He’s still going to be a good guy and make her smile, laugh and feel good while showing her that he’s not intimidated or thrown off by her test.

As a result, she will feel a bit shocked that he now has the confidence and balls to remain strong, while also having the class and grace to still be good to her at the same time.

She will automatically start to feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for him, even if she fights it.

As a result, it will be much easier to get to a hug, kiss and then sex.

On the other hand, if the guy crumbles and becomes nervous around her, or tries to suck up to her by being extra nice and doing whatever he can to please her, sheâll lose even more respect and attraction for him and her guard will go up.

So, when you interact with your ex (especially over the phone and in person) make sure that no matter what she says and does, you maintain your confidence and use humor to show her that you believe in your attractiveness and value to her.

If you do that, the sex will be so much better and she will then be so much more likely to change her mind about the break up afterwards.

Another thing that will determine whether or not having sex with your ex will make her change her mind about the break up isâ!

3. Are you able to make her feel very feminine in comparison to how masculine you are, or do you only make her feel neutral (like a friend) around you now?

[image: Are you able to make her feel feminine and girly inside and outside of the bedroom?]

Sometimes, a woman will have sex with her ex for reasons other than getting back with him, (e.g. she misses the intimacy, she hasnât had sex for a while and sheâs feeling horny, she doesnât want to have a one night stand with a stranger).

She might even enjoy the sex, but because he hasnât changed much about his energy and approach to her, itâs just the same old thing.

For example: She might have broken up with him because he ended up becoming too neutral around her, to the point where she felt more like a friend.

In other cases, a guy might have even stopped being masculine around her and ended up behaving like a wimpy guy, a feminine guy or a very emotionally sensitive guy.

As a result, she just didnât feel much of a spark (or any spark) with him anymore and wanted to leave the relationship.

So, if she opens up to have sex with him again and notices that heâs still pretty much the same as he was before, sheâs not going to feel very motivated to give the relationship another chance.

She might give him the impression that sheâs interested to avoid getting into an argument with him, or to avoid him pressuring her to change her mind on the spot, but secretly, she will know that she has to keep trying to move on.

A guy who doesnât understand that or isnât able to pick up on it, might then stay in regular contact with his ex and be like a nice, helpful, reliable friend to her.

Heâs hoping that sheâs going to think something like, âWow! Not only have we had sex again, but heâs also being so sweet and dependable. What more could I possibly want from a guy? I guess I need to tell him that Iâve changed my mind about the break up so we can get back together again. Yayy!â

It would be nice if it was that easy, but in most cases thatâs just not how it works.

If a woman doesnât feel like a real woman around a guy (i.e. feminine, girly, free to be change her mind, mood and emotions all the time without the guy getting angry), sheâs just not going to enjoy herself in the relationship.

So, even if she has sex with her ex, it's just not going to be enough for her to want to commit again.

In some cases, a woman in that position will keep her ex around as a friend, lap up the attention he gives her and possibly even use him when she needs extra money to pay her bills, an errand to be run or something to be done in her house.

Yet, she won't be loyal to him.

If another guy comes along and sparks her feelings of sexual attraction by making her feel girly and feminine in comparison to his masculinity, she will leave her ex behind and move on.

So, here's the thing!

It's totally fine to have sex with your ex if she's open to it.

However, you must ensure that you are ready to attract her in the ways that really matter to her inside and outside of the bedroom.

For example: If you make the mistake of treating her like a neutral friend (e.g. because you don't want to scare her off), she will end up having neutral feelings for you.

Neutral just isn't exciting.

To make a relationship enjoyable and exciting for a woman, you have to allow her to feel girly and feminine around you by always being as emotionally masculine as you can be.

In other words, don't be a wussy, don't be too emotionally sensitive about things, don't give her too much power and don't seek her approval before you feel confident about yourself.

Be a man that is confident, happy, forward moving and strong, with or without her support or reassurance.

When you do that, she will naturally see you as the man in the relationship and will feel drawn to you for more than just sex.

She will literally love the new you and realize that you are now the kind of man that women struggle to meet out there in the world.

As a result, she won't want to lose her opportunity to experience a relationship with you again.

One last thing that could determine whether or not having sex with your ex will make her change her mind about the break up is!

4. Does she place a lot of importance on sex in a relationship, or does she care more about other things?

If your ex really cares a lot about sex or places a lot of importance on it, then yes! Having amazing sex with her will definitely make her want to change her mind about the break up.

However, most of the time, sex (or a lack thereof) isn't what really causes a woman to break up with a guy, so it's not going to be the main thing that will get her back.

For example: When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because certain aspects of his thinking and behavior have been turning her off (e.g. he became too insecure, he got annoyed with her so easily, he spoke to her like she was an idiot, he cared ways more about his feelings and needs than hers rather than taking a more balanced approach).

So, even if the make up sex is enjoyable, it won't necessarily get her back for real afterwards.

If he turns her off in other ways (e.g. He's still stuck in a rut in life because he's not following through on his big goals, dreams and ambitions. He's too timid and fearful about things. He's too immature compared to her), the sex isn't going to fully win her over.

It's just not how it works in most situations.

If you want her to change her mind for real, you need to discover her secret reasons for breaking up with you and then quickly make some adjustments, improvements or changes in those areas.

For example:

- Did you become insecure, needy and clingy?
- Did she feel like you were dragging her down?
- Did you want different things in the relationship?
- Did she get tired of leading?
- Did you stop making her feel girly in comparison to your masculinity?
- Did you find it difficult to stop yourself from getting angry at her when she changed her mind, mood or behavior randomly like girls do?
- Did you expect her to treat you with respect at all times, even though you didn't do the same for her?

When you understand where you really went wrong, you can then make changes that will actually matter to her.

Then, the sex will be better and she will feel compelled to change her mind and give you another chance.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Can I Get My Ex Back if She Already Has a New Boyfriend?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes.

Here are 3 examples of how other guys have gotten their ex girlfriend (or wife) back from her new boyfriend:

Example 1: The guy was dumped for being too clingy and needy

[image: Dumped for being too clingy and needy]

When a guy gets dumped for being too clingy and needy, his woman will usually then hook up with a new guy who is more confident than him.

The new guy might not be perfect, but she will focus on his good qualities and overlook any flaws, so she can get caught up in the thrill of falling in love.

However, that doesn't mean that her ex guy has no chance with her anymore.

He can get her back.

I've worked on many cases like that and here's a summary of what one of the guys that I helped did to get his ex woman back:

1. He stopped thinking insecure thoughts like, "I don't know what to do without her. I feel lost. She was my whole world and now I have nothing worth living for," and started thinking confident thoughts like, "Yes, I miss her and want her back, but I don't need her to have a happy, fulfilling life. I have my own goals, interests, hobbies and friends to keep me busy. Life is good with or without her. I want her back, but I don't need her."
2. He started having more fun in his life and letting her see that by posting photos on social media of himself having a good time with friends, attending music festivals or sporting events, traveling and doing other exciting things.
3. He called her on the phone, made her smile and laugh and made her feel sparks of attraction for him again.
4. He got her to agree to meet up with him to say hello as friends.
5. At the meet up he maintained his confidence around her, even when she was being cold and mean towards him.
6. He focused on building on her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him by behaving in some of the ways that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confident, self-assured, charismatic, charming, emotionally masculine).
7. He ended the meet up with a warm goodbye hug and a kiss and left her feeling confused about her feelings for her new guy.
8. A few days later he called her and sparked her feelings for him some more.
9. She met up with him again, they had sex and she then said that she'd been missing him.
10. She then broke up with her new boyfriend and came back to her ex.

A second example of a guy getting his ex back even though she already had a new boyfriend isâ€¦!

Example 2: The guy was dumped for taking his girlfriend for granted

[image: Dumped for taking his woman for granted]

Sometimes in a relationship, itâ€™s easy for a guy to fall into the habit of taking his woman for granted (e.g. getting angry at her often and expecting her to just put up with it, not following through on his promises to her, expecting her to treat him with respect at all times even though he wasn't treating her with respect at all times).

It doesn't mean that the guy is a bad person, or that heâ€™s doing those things to intentionally to make her feel unloved and unappreciated.

Sometimes a guy will be like that, but not in most cases.

In most cases, a guy simply doesn't know how else to behave to get his point across or to get his woman to treat him well.

The guy also makes the mistake of thinking that because she loved him so much at the start, she will put up with anything and never leave him.

Yet, that's just not how relationships work anymore.

A woman can dump a guy and leave him if she wants to.

So, when his girlfriend (or wife) left and found herself another, more loving and attentive boyfriend, it most likely came as quite a shock to him.

To many guys, it feels like she just decided to break up with him suddenly, out of the blue.

Yet, in reality, in most cases, the woman had been working up the courage to leave him for some time after giving him repeated warnings about not treating her the way she deserved to be treated.

Despite those warnings, it really didn't register with him that she would seriously break up with him and move on if he didn't change.

So, how can a guy get a woman back in a case like that if she has a new boyfriend?

Based on a case that I worked on a few weeks ago, here's what the guy didâ€¦!

He started off by letting her know that he has now realized the mistakes he was making and was sorry about that, but didn't expect her to take him back.

He said something along the lines of, â€œI see now why you broke up with me and I'm sorry about that. I was taking you for granted and it made you feel like I didn't care. Of course, nothing could have been further from the truth. I really did care about you, but my actions and behavior seemed to show otherwise. I just want you to know that accept that I stuffed up and Iâ€™m truly sorry for making you feel less important to me than you really were. I don't expect you to give me another chance or even care about my sincere apology to you. I just want you to know that I get it now. I also want you to understand that in a relationship, itâ€™s inevitable that mistakes will be made along the way. You made some and I made some. Well, it was mostly my fault, but we both made mistakes along the way. That doesn't mean weâ€™re bad people. In my case, I simply didn't know how else to conduct myself in a relationship and ended up making you feel taken for granted. I get that now. I also understand that you have a new boyfriend now and you probably don't really care anything I'm saying right now. However, it would be nice if we could put all that behind us and just move forward as friends. So, how about it? Will you forgive me and agree to be just friends from now on?

She was then able to start believing that he had changed for the better and because he wasn't asking for another chance at a relationship, she agreed to remain friends with him.

He then used the friendship as a platform to actively spark her feelings of respect and attraction for him during every interaction they had (e.g. via text, on phone calls and in person) from then on.

The more time she spent with him, the more confused she became about her feelings for her new boyfriend.

She realized that, although her new boyfriend was sweet and attentive and she wasn't being taken for granted anymore, the attraction she felt for her ex was stronger, more real and more fulfilling.

So, she broke up with her new boyfriend and got back together with her ex.

A third example of a guy getting his ex back even though she already had a new boyfriend is

Example 3: The guy was dumped for making her feel like more of a friend than a girlfriend

In this case, the guy felt so comfortable around his woman that he unconsciously started treating her more like a buddy than an attractive, desirable woman.

He stopped being charming and romantic and did the same boring things with her over and over again, expecting her to just be happy with that and the friendship type relationship that they now had.

As a result of treating her more like a buddy, the sex fizzled out and she started to feel annoyed by his touching, hugging or kissing whenever he tried to initiate sex.

It just didn't feel right to her anymore.

So, in this case, the woman tried to get her boyfriend to stop treating her like a friend and start looking at her as a sexy, girly, feminine woman who needed to be treated like a woman.

For example: She started wearing sexier clothes, planning romantic weekends and randomly acting girly and submissive to see how he'd react.

Rather than reacting and making her feel like his girl, he kept on with the friendship style of relationship and at times, even acted a bit like her (e.g. changing the tone of his voice often and talking in a fairly girly way, giggling with her about things, being overly cute about things).

Eventually, she felt more like his roommate or sister than his woman.

The guy didn't mean to be like that and cause those problems.

He was just doing what he felt like doing, which turned out to be a turn off.

He didn't realize that the less feminine and girly a woman feels around her man, the less sexual attraction she feels for him.

He didn't realize that to keep the sexual attraction and love alive, he has to clearly be the man and let her clearly be the woman, rather than kind of being like each other and just hanging out like friends.

As a result, she didn't feel the spark anymore and dumped him.

She then hooked up with a new guy who had a more masculine approach to life and interactions and as a result, she enjoyed the fact that she could feel girly in comparison to him.

So, how did the guy get her back from her new boyfriend?

He stopped changing his tone of voice to be neutral (or even feminine at times) and started talking in a more manly way.

He also stopped being so emotionally sensitive about things and started being more emotionally strong and emotionally mature like a man.

This took him a few days to get used to and he then contacted his ex to start re-attracting her and getting her back.

He got her on a call and used flirting to build up sexual tension and make her agree to meet up with him in person.

In person, he continued to build on the feelings of sexual tension (to make her want him) and also made her feel feminine and girly in contrast to his masculine vibe, behavior, conversation style and actions.

She was surprised by the changes in him and automatically felt rushes of respect and attraction for him.

At that point, her guard came down and she started to open up to the possibility of getting back with him.

However, to make sure that he got her back, he didn't rush to get her to commit to the idea of leaving her new guy.

He didn't even mention that at all.

He just focused on building on her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for him, so she felt like she wanted to leave her boyfriend without being forced into that decision by him.

After the meet up (which ended with a warm hug), he gave her a few days of space where he didn't contact her at all.

He then called her to say hello and she was happy to hear from him.

They met up again and this time, hooked up sexually and he blew her mind by being more confident and masculine than he had even been before.

She then dumped her new boyfriend and they got back together again.

Those are three examples (out of 100s) that I've personally worked on and heard back about here at The Modern Man.

One of the most important things that I help men with when getting an ex woman back is about how to re-attract her.

Here are some examples!

I also offer more advanced ways to re-attract your ex in my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you use those techniques, she simply will not be able to resist leaving her new boyfriend to give you another chance.

5 Mistakes That Can Ruin Your Chances of Getting Her Back

[image: Mistakes to avoid when getting your ex back from her new boyfriend]

Getting an ex back is usually a pretty easy process when you focus on attraction.

Yes, even if she has a new guy.

You can make her feel more attracted to you than she feels for him, so don't about him.

Attraction rules over everything else.

If you make her feel attracted to again, she feels drawn to you and, as long as you follow the right steps to get her back, she will be yours once again.

So, while getting her back, make sure to avoid these classic mistakes!

1. Only trying to get her back via text

If your ex has a new boyfriend, it's likely that she won't be very open to talking to you over the phone, or meeting up with you in person, because she doesn't want to upset him.

So, the only contact you might have with her at the moment is via text.

Unfortunately, you just can't fully reactivate a woman's feelings of respect and attraction for you via text.

No matter how sweet or charming you might think you're being via text, if she can't hear the confidence in your voice, or experience it in person, she will likely assume the worst of you.

For example: If you try to make her laugh via text, rather than feel amused and say to herself, "Wow, he's so confident and funny! Even though I'm being so cold and mean to him, he's still being confident. It takes so much balls to be confident via text!" she will instead likely think, "Oh wow, you're so funny and confident, aren't you? Yeah right! You're probably just too scared to call me or face me in person, so you hide behind these texts. Grow a pair of balls and call me."

You just have to call and let her experience the new and improved you, so she can feel something real for you.

Text simply doesn't cut it in most cases.

Essentially, because she has no new information about you to base her opinion on (i.e. she hasn't interacted with you on the phone or in person to experience the new you), she will read your texts and continue thinking of you as the emotionally unattractive guy that she broke up with.

In most cases, she won't say, "Wow! Now that was an amazing text! He deserves me back because of that."

Of course, if your ex still has strong feelings for you, then a text can make her miss you and want to see you again.

That is true.

However, the majority of guys that I've helped to get a woman back (especially when she has a new guy) are in a situation where she no longer has feelings for him.

So, when he tries to get her back via text, she just rolls her eyes and feels turned off by his lack of balls to call her or get her to agree to meet up with him in person.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ□|

2. Hoping that it's a rebound relationship and all you need to do is wait it out

Sometimes a guy might say to himself, *â□□Her new boyfriend is probably a rebound, so it won't last. She thinks heâ□□s great because heâ□□s not making the same mistakes as I did. When she realizes that he has faults too and isn't so perfect after all, she will break up with him as well. I just need to wait.*â□□

He might then wait around for weeks, months and in some cases even years, for his ex to break up with her new guy.

Eventually, he might come to the realization that sheâ□□s not going to dump her new guy and that heâ□□s wasted all that time waiting for her, instead of staying in touch as a friend and then rebuilding her sexual and romantic feelings for him.

Alternatively, if she does dump the guy and he then calls her up after a long silence, she might say something like, *â□□What? Youâ□□re still waiting for me? Why? I havenâ□□t heard from you in ages and you think we can now get back together again just because Iâ□□ve broken up with my boyfriend? Sorry, but my feelings for you died a long time ago. You need to accept that Iâ□□m never getting back with you. Itâ□□s time for you to move on. We're never getting back together. Don't ever call me again.*â□□

Horrible, right?

For sure.

That's not what you want to hear after patiently waiting for her to finish the relationship with her new boyfriend and become available again.

So, what should you do instead?

Do something about it NOW.

If you want to win your ex back from her new boyfriend, you have to be active about it, not inactive.

You have to interrupt the process of her moving on, by interacting with her and re-sparking her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

Once you do that, her behavior and attitude towards you changes completely and you can then begin to get her back and leave her new boyfriend thinking, "Huh? What just happened? Why did she leave me?"

So, get rid of the new guy and take her back.

She's your woman.

Claim her.

Make her love you again.

While doing that, another mistake to avoid isâ□|

3. Lying to her about being with other women, or not even wanting her back

Sometimes, a guy will try to shock his ex into wanting him by trying to make her jealous (i.e. by telling her heâ□□s been with other women), or make her fear losing him forever (i.e. by saying that he would never get back with her and is happily moving on without her).

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her ex and has already found someone else, rather than feel jealous or fear losing him, she will simply feel relieved that things are over between them.

She will only care if he reactivates her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction and then seems to be happy and enjoying life without her.

However, if she doesn't feel anything for him, she's just not going to care about who he's with or what he thinks about her anymore.

Of course, some women will care (e.g. if she's a narcissist kind of woman who needs everything to be about her, or if she likes to keep ex guys chasing her to boost her confidence), but most women wonât.

Another more mistake to avoid making isâ!

4. Saying negative things about the other guy

As tempting as it might be to want to point out your exâs new boyfriendâs faults, donât do it.

Be the bigger man by not even looking at his as being competition to you.

Just know that you're better than him, without even having to say anything about him or point out his flaws or faults.

If you bring up his bad qualities, rather than make her think, âYou knowâ I never noticed that about my new guy. My ex is right! My new boyfriend is definitely a jerk. Iâm going to dump him now and go back to my ex for being such a great guy and pointing this out to me,â sheâs going to think something like, âHeâs just being a jealous ex and hoping that by saying bad things about my new boyfriend, I will change my mind and take him back. Well thatâs never going to happen. Even if I did break up with my new man, I would never get back together with a jealous, immature guy like my ex.â

You don't want her thinking that way about you!

Be the bigger man, so she doesn't have to think of you as being jealous, insecure or immature.

A final mistake to avoid making isâ!

5. Letting her see that your life is on hold while you wait for her

This might seem romantic, but it just doesnât work.

Instead of feeling flattered by your devotion to her, your ex will feel turned off by your lack of purpose and direction in life.

Hereâs the thingâ!

You stand a much better chance of getting her back by showing her that youâre living a happy, exciting, interesting life without her, rather than sitting around wasting your life away waiting for her.

Why?

Although a woman likes to be wanted and desired by a man, she definitely doesnât want to be needed by him.

She doesn't want to be his purpose for living and she doesn't want to be responsible for his happiness in life.

So, if you want to get your ex back even though she already has a new boyfriend, make sure that you allow yourself to feel happy, confident and emotionally fulfilled without her.

Then, when you interact with her (e.g. on a phone call, or in person) and she gets a sense that you are happy, confident and getting on with your life without her, she will begin to see you in a new light.

She will look at you as being a confident, emotionally mature and emotionally strong man, which will automatically make her feel some respect and attraction for you.

From there, you just need to build on her feelings and create some sexual tension between you and her.

As a result, she will become confused about her feelings for her new boyfriend and start to wonder why she isn't with you.

You can then get her back and make her new boyfriend history.

By the way!

Every day, all over the world, guys get their ex girlfriend (or wife) back when she has a new boyfriend.

It's not only possible, but in most cases, it's easy when you focus on attraction.

You can re-attract her and make her want you more than she wants him.

You can interrupt the process of her moving on and get her to come running back to you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

5 Ways to Show Your Ex That You've Become a Better Man Since the Break Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways to show your ex that you've become a better man since the break up!

1. Improve the things that she actually cares about. (Usually very different to what she has told you)

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she will rarely, if ever, admit the real, subtle reasons why she is breaking up with him (e.g. he's too emotionally sensitive, he's not ballsy enough around her, she doesn't like how he gets shy in social situations).

Instead, she will just tell him that she doesn't feel the same way about him anymore, doesn't love him or just doesn't want to be in a relationship with anyone right now.

Something vague about her feelings and wants, but nothing (or not much) about the subtle things he would need to change to re-attract her.

[image: Not revealing her real reasons for the break up]

She does this for many reasons, but to name a few:

1. So he then doesn't immediately promise to change those things, even though he has no idea how to. She will then feel obligated to give him another chance.
2. So he doesn't get angry at her for pointing out very personal things about him (e.g. his lack of confidence in the bedroom bored her, he cried to her when he lost his job, he's too emotionally sensitive about things rather than being in control of his emotions like a real man).
3. So he doesn't then ask her for help to fix those things about himself, so their relationship can work.

Rather than getting a reaction that won't be of benefit to her, she will keep her reasons vague (e.g. "I love you, but I'm not in love with you" or, "You mean a lot to me, but I just don't want to be in a relationship anymore" or, "I need to be alone for a while to sort myself out. I'm not sure what I want anymore").

Not knowing what to do to make her happy and stop the break up, a guy will often begin offering her things that she doesn't even care about.

For example: A woman might want a guy to trust her more and to stop always assuming the worst of her (e.g. he is insecure about her loyalty to him and always worries that she might leave him, which then causes him to react in a clingy, jealous or controlling way).

What she wants is for him to stop being such an insecure guy and start being the kind of confident, emotionally mature guy that she can relax around and fall more in love with over time.

[image: Not offering her what she really wants]

So, if he then tries to get her back by saying something like, "Please baby, just give me another chance and I promise to spend more time with you. We can even buy a house and move in together. I promise. You mean the world to me and I will do anything to make this work,â it's not going to make her want to give him another chance.

She will feel turned off by his misplaced attempt to get her back and think something like, âHe still doesn't get it! Why is he talking to me about moving in together, when what I need from him is to trust me more? Living together would be the worst thing for us to do right now because of his trust issues. Every time I get a text message, or chat with someone via social media, he'll assume that I'm flirting with other guys and want to see who I'm talking to. That will simply create more arguments and misunderstandings between us and I will end up feeling stressed and trapped in a relationship with an insecure boyfriend (or husband). I'm much better off staying broken up. I have to stick with the break up and move on, because he obviously doesn't even know what I need him to change or how to change it. I've got to move on.â

Another example is if a woman wants her guy to be more supportive of her career, rather than just expecting her to want to quickly become a mother and stay at home to raise the children they have.

If he then tries to get her back by buying her flowers, expensive gifts, or even proposing to her, rather than feel flattered and change her mind, she may think, âHe's still not taking my goals seriously. Instead he's hoping to distract me by giving me material things and offering to marry me. If I wanted flowers or jewelry, I could buy those things for myself. That's not what I want right now. Can't he see that what I really need at this stage in my life is his support and encouragement of my career goals? Can't he see that I'm just not ready to slot into the role that he wants for me right now?â

As a result, she will keep saying no to his requests to get her back.

He will be offering her things that really don't matter to her at this point in time, so it just won't be appealing to her.

He might end up thinking that she is being unnecessarily difficult or stubborn, especially after all they've been through as a couple.

Yet, she just wants to get the kind of attraction and relationship experience that suits her, so she can be happy too.

If he can't give her that, she has to go.

So, as you can see, improving the things your ex really cares about (not what you think she cares about or want her to care about because you think it's important) is an essential step to showing her that you've become a better man since the break up.

For example: Some guys mistakenly try to impress their ex girlfriend (or wife) with improvements to their physical attractiveness, rather than improving their emotional attractiveness (i.e. confidence, social intelligence, relationship intelligence, emotional masculinity, charisma).

A guy might start wearing better clothes (e.g. suits rather than denims, expensive designer labels), change his hairstyle, or go to the gym to build some muscle/lose weight.

In his mind, he thinks something like, âWhen ending our relationship, I remember that she said I need to become a better man. Well, when she sees how much I've changed and how attractive I now look, she will be impressed and hopefully want me back.â

Yet, what a guy like that doesn't realize is that even his ex says, âYou're looking goodâ when she sees him again, his appearance isn't what will convince her that he's become a better man.

What will?

His ability to make her feel respect and attraction for him based on the way he thinks, talks and behaves when he interacts with her.

It's how he makes her feel when he talks to her on the phone and in person that really counts.

Superficial changes (e.g. losing some weight, adding some muscle, getting a hair cut, wearing new clothes) are not the most important things to a woman.

What is most important is how a man makes her feel when he talks to her.

For example:

- Does he turn her on by being confident, charismatic, masculine or funny, or does he turn her off by being insecure, self-doubting, hesitant or weak?
- Does he make her smile and enjoy talking to him, or does she feel closed off, annoyed, stressed or bored because of his approach to the conversation?
- Does he make her feel feminine and girly by being emotionally strong and masculine around her, or does she dominate him with her confident personality?
- Does he pass her confidence tests by laughing at them and not taking them so seriously, (e.g. when she teases him by saying something like, "What did you do to your hair? It looks horrible") or does he fail the tests and become insecure when she puts pressure on him?
- Is he able to regain the power during conversations and make her respect him again, or does she feel like she can walk all over him now because he's so desperate to get her back?

Those are the kind of things that matter the most to the majority of women when it comes to the attraction they feel for men.

When you make changes that really matter to her (i.e. you become more emotionally attractive as a man), she will see that you've become a better man already and will then become open to giving the relationship another chance.

Another way to show your ex that you've become a better man since the break up is to

2. Pass her confidence tests when you interact with her

Even if a woman still has feelings for her ex and wants to get back with him, she usually won't make it easy for him.

Instead, she will put him through a series of tests to see if he's confident and emotionally strong enough for her.

If he can pass her tests, she will look up to him, respect him, feel attracted to him and love him once again, because he has proven that he is man enough for her.

On the other hand, if he becomes nervous, insecure and self-doubting when she tests him, she will see that he really hasn't changed and will keep the door to her heart closed off to him.

For example: Some of the ways a woman might test a guy are by

- Being cold and distant towards him during conversations.

- Telling him that sheâs having so much fun without him (e.g. partying with her single friends, meeting new guys, feeling freedom that she hasn't felt in a long time).
- Giving him mixed signals about her feelings for him (e.g. she might let him see that she's interested in getting back together. Then, when he suggests getting back together, she might say something like, âDon't get the wrong idea. I would never make the mistake of getting back together with you again. You stuffed up too many times with me. It's overâ).
- Blaming him for everything that went wrong in the relationship to see if he puts up with it.
- Asking him to do favors for her and being nice to him, but never letting him hug her, kiss her or do anything that might suggest they could be boyfriend/girlfriend or husband/wife again.
- Teasing him about how he now looks (e.g. "Why are you wearing that shirt? It doesn't suit you") to see if he feels insecure.

If he remains calm and relaxed and doesnât let her tests get to him (e.g. he laughs at her attempts to make him feel jealous, or to take the blame for everything), she will feel respect and attraction for him and know for sure that he has changed.

On the other hand, if he appears to lose confidence, doubt himself and feel insecure under her pressure, she will lose even more respect and attraction for him as a man.

She will then put her guard up even higher and try even harder to move on without him, before he drags her back into a relationship that will be just the same as before.

She wants the relationship to be different.

She wants you to really change and level up as a man, rather than just trying to get her back while remaining stuck at the same level as a man (e.g. still being insecure, still lacking emotional masculinity, still giving her too much power).

This is why it is vital that you pass your exâs confidence tests when you interact with her.

It gives her direct evidence that you really have changed, without you even having to tell her, "Hey, I've changed. Please believe me!"

She can see it for herself, so you don't even need to try to convince her to believe you.

So, the next time your ex tries to mess with your head by being cold or rude, or tries to make you feel jealous, just remember that itâs her way of testing your confidence.

She wants to see if you are now the kind of man that she can genuinely look up to and respect, or if you deserve to continue getting the cold shoulder from her.

So, rather than get upset about her tests, feel happy that sheâs doing it by understanding that it gives you a perfect opportunity to show her that you really have changed and become a better man since the break up.

When she realizes that her tests are not making you respond like she was expecting you to (e.g. She thought you would be insecure and self-doubting, but instead you are confident and emotionally strong. She thought youâd feel jealous and doubt your attractiveness to her, but instead you laugh at her attempts to mess with your head), she wonât be able to stop herself from feeling surges of respect and attraction for you again.

You can then build on those feelings by continuing to display traits that are naturally attractive to women.

3. Be a self-approving, masculine man

[image: Be a self-approving, masculine man]

While it's great to show her that you've changed, just make sure that she doesn't get a vibe from you that is essentially communicating, "Hey, so now do you like me? Did I do a good job mommy? Am I a good boy now?"

You have to make the changes because you want to and then approve of yourself, rather than seeking her approval.

She doesn't want to get the sense that you doubt your attractiveness to her and need her to tell you that you're okay now.

Women are attracted to men who never doubt their attractiveness to a woman, while also always making sure that they actually are being attractive (e.g. being emotionally strong, emotionally masculine, funny, ambitious, determined to succeed).

By the wayâ€¦!

Approving of yourself and believing in your attractiveness does not mean that you should suddenly start acting arrogant or look down on her or anyone else.

It simply means that you approve of yourself, love and respect yourself with or without her or anyone else's approval.

Women all over the world are naturally attracted to self-approving, masculine men who aren't waiting for a 'pat on the head' from mommy to say, "Good boy. I'm proud of you."

You are confident, happy and forward moving in life with or without her encouragement or approval.

Women love that because it means that a woman doesn't have to baby a guy in a relationship by continually encouraging him and trying to make him feel good enough or confident enough to make progress in life.

He is his own man and makes this happen without the help or encouragement of his woman.

This is very attractive to women and will be attractive to your ex as well.

Another way to show her that you've become a better man since the break up is toâ€¦!

4. Make her laugh and smile, especially when she's being cold to you

[image: Make her laugh and smile when she is being cold towards you]

One of the quickest ways to make your ex stop seeing you as the guy you used to be and start seeing you as the new, improved man that you are now, is by making her smile and laugh when sheâ€¦s interacting with you (especially if she is being cold or mean).

Laughter breaks down the emotional walls and helps to get rid of bitterness or negativity that might be present between you and your ex.

Essentially, when a woman is smiling and laughing, it makes it almost impossible for her to be thinking, "This guy is a jerk. He makes me feel miserable. I don't like him and I don't ever want to be his girl again,â€œ at the same time.

Instead, she begins to think something like, â€œI like this. In the past, he would've never been able to laugh and joke around if I was being cold towards him. He would likely have gotten angry at me or started sucking up to me to seek pity. He's so much more confident now. He's more manly. I can't believe I'm actually thinking this, but I'm enjoying myself with him now. I like it. I like him.â€œ

Her walls then begin to come down and she opens herself up to the idea of seeing you as the man that you are now, rather than the man you used to be.

She experiences new, more interesting and exciting feelings for you that make her want to give the relationship another chance.

Here's an example of how you can make her smile or laugh when she's being cold to you:
Imagine that you call her on the phone and she says something like, â€œWhat do you want? Why can't you accept that it's over between us?â€œ

Rather than letting her questions throw you off and make you think, â€œShe hates me! She's not going to give me a chance. It's over!â€œ simply turn it into something that you can both laugh about.

For example: When she says, â€œWhat do you want? Why can't you accept that it's over between us?â€œ you can say, in a joking way, â€œI don't know what you're talking about, you're the one who called me!â€œ and have a laugh with her about that.

Alternatively, you might say, "What do I want? Well, I wouldn't mind some of that pizza you used to make. I'm hungry" and then have a laugh with her about that.

Alternatively, you might say, "What do I want? I want you to accept that it's over between us and stop calling me" and then have a laugh with her about that.

Essentially, you don't take what she is saying so seriously.

When you do that, she will feel attracted to you for having the courage to joke around with her and get her smiling and laughing, even though she started out being cold and unfriendly.

From there:

5. Get her to fully open back up to you by continually leading the way with a confident, easy-going attitude

After a break up, a woman will often become less nice, accommodating and friendly to her ex, especially if he's been trying to get her back by offering her things that she doesn't care about.

If a guy wants the dynamic to change back to how it used to be (i.e. they were in love, good to each other, got along so well), he needs to lead the way by always maintaining a confident, easy-going attitude.

This works because women are very responsive to men, even though they might act like they're not initially, to test the man's confidence.

If you lead the way to a better dynamic between you and her, she will go along with it and feel respect and attraction for you, as long as you don't crumble under her pressure when she applies it.

So stay strong, be confident and maintain an easy-going attitude when talking to her and interacting with her.

Let her see that you really have become a better, stronger man since the break up.

You are now the kind of man that she can truly look up to, respect, feel attracted to and be totally in love with.

You are now the kind of man who makes her heart skip a beat when you walk into the room, or look at her in a confident, masculine way.

You give her butterflies in her stomach and make her feel like she's in love again.

You are the man.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Reunion After Break Up (5 Steps)

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 steps to make a reunion after a break up happen:

1. Prepare to be forgiven

Sometimes, a guy will want to get his ex woman back immediately after a break up, even though he doesn't really know how to make her happy anymore.

He will just try to convince her to give him another chance and hope that she gives in and says, "Yes."

Yet, in most ex back cases, a reunion won't happen unless he guy can show his ex woman that he truly understands why she broke up with him.

For example: She said, "I just don't feel the same way anymore. I want to break up" when she was ending the relationship, but what she didn't say was, "The reason why I don't feel the same way anymore is that you've turned me off by being so insecure and emotionally sensitive. You've also given me too much power in the relationship, so I can look up to you and respect you as my man anymore."

If a guy doesn't know the real reasons why his woman is breaking up with him, he might start offering her things that won't make a difference (e.g. he offers to treat her even better, give her more freedom, or listen and care about her even more than he already has).

She then says, "No, I'm sorry. I don't want to be with you anymore. It's over" and he is left devastated, not even knowing what went wrong.

Of course, sometimes a guy knows exactly what went wrong and what he needs to do to get his ex woman to forgive him and give him another chance, but most guys simply aren't aware of the woman's more subtle reasons.

That doesn't mean those guys are selfish, uncaring guys who deserved to be dumped.

Instead, it simply means they failed to notice the signs, or hints their woman was probably giving them throughout the relationship.

Alternatively, the guy simply doesn't know much about attraction and what it takes to keep a woman happy, attracted and in love throughout all the stages of a relationship.

Let's have a look at some more examples of where a relationship will fall apart over time, without the guy really knowing about it or knowing what to do to fix it.

Example 1

If a woman feels like her guy is too much of a loner and is too emotionally dependent on her as a result (e.g. he doesn't go out without her, he doesn't have separate interests or hobbies), she's not always going to say that to him directly.

Some women will accuse their guy of being too much of a loner and tell him that it's turning her off.

However, most women will say something like, "Why don't you go out without me sometime? I really don't mind. I don't want you to start feeling trapped in our relationship, or thinking that I'm one of those clingy women who needs her man around all the time to feel good about herself. You can go and see your friends, you know?â

If a guy then takes on the feedback and starts leading a more balanced lifestyle, she can feel more attracted to him again because she will see that he's not so emotionally dependent on her anymore.

In other words, she doesn't feel like his mother or protector.

She is his woman and at times, she gets to miss him when he's not around for a few hours or more.

Yet, not all guys know how to handle a situation like that.

In some cases, a guy will try to reassure his woman by saying something like, âNo! No! You're not like that. You're amazing. You're not clingy. You're perfect. Besides, I love being around you all the time. No one can compare to you. I just don't have fun when we're apart. I'd rather just spend all my spare time with you.â

[image: I only want to spend time with you. What's wrong with that?]

She then feels annoyed that he's not taking the hint and realizing that his clingy (or loner) behavior is turning her off.

Then, when she breaks up with him, the guy will ask, âWhy? What did I do? We always spend time together and are fine together. What is the problem?â because wasn't able to pick up on her hints and adjust accordingly.

Example 2

If a woman wanted her guy to be more relaxed and easy going, rather than being so serious all the time, telling her âI'm going to work harder and take your needs more seriously from now on, so please just give me another chance,â is not going to make her feel understood.

Example 3

If a woman wanted her man to stop being so childish and immature (e.g. wasting most of his spare time playing video games rather than following through on things that would make their life better, getting drunk every weekend with his single friends), him begging, pleading and crying for her to give him another chance, isn't the way back into her heart.

If you want to reunite with your ex after a break up stay together, you have to give her the kind of attraction experience that she really wants, not what you think she wants.

That way, she can see that you've really taken her needs seriously and changed (or adjusted or improved).

As a result, she will then be more open to forgiving you and getting back together.

How about you and your relationship?

Are you aware of the subtle, but important reasons why your ex broke up with you?

Are you aware of the things that she secretly (or maybe quite obviously) wants you to change, adjust or improve about yourself?

Have you already begun to change, adjust or improve those things?

Are you ready to re-attract her?

The next step to a reunion after a break up is to

2. Contact her to meet up and say hello in person

Once you've made some attractive changes to your thinking and behavior (e.g. you are more emotionally independent, confident and emotionally masculine now), you should contact your ex to arrange a reunion.

Note: In most cases, a guy can get to this point within 7 days.

Don't waste a lot of time getting ready to re-attract her.

Improve, adjust and change as quickly as you can and then get on with the rest of the reunion process.

By the way

At this point in the process, some guys are tempted to just send their ex a text message (e.g. Hey, how have you been? I was wondering if you'd like to meet up sometime?) rather than call her.

He's afraid that she might not answer, won't like it that he called or that he'll stuff things up on the phone.

So, he hides behind the safety of a text message.

Unfortunately, when it comes to getting an ex back after a break up, texts are usually the worst possible way of communicating and asking her to meet up.

Why?

It's so much easier for her to say, No via text rather than on the phone when she's listening to you being confident and easy-going.

On the other hand, when you get your ex on the phone and make her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you, she's going to be much more relaxed and open.

Then, when you say, Hey, this has been fun to chat again. How about we catch up sometime this week to say hello as friends? it becomes a lot more difficult for her to decline.

Of course, that doesn't mean she's going to jump at the idea right away, especially if a guy makes the mistake of referring to the reunion catch up as a date, or if she wants to play a little hard to get to not look too easy.

If a guy refers to it as a date, or makes it sound like he will be trying hard to get her back at the meet up, her guard will go up and she will be much more likely to decline.

Additionally, if a guy hasn't first reactivated a woman's feelings of respect and attraction for him, she might be feeling nervous about seeing him again.

For example: She may be thinking, "What if I say yes to meeting up with him and it's awkward and tense to be talking to him again? What if he pressures me to get back with him, even though I don't feel attracted and in love with him anymore? Will he then start being annoying and pursuing me by calling, texting and maybe even arriving at my house uninvited? Maybe I should just say no."

So, on the call to your ex, (after you've made her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again) you should then say something along the lines of, Hey, it's been nice chatting again. How about we meet up sometime this week to say hello in person as friends? Nothing serious of course. Just two mature exes catching a cup of coffee together. We can do that, right? It doesn't mean we're getting back together again. In fact, if you decide that you don't want to see me again after we catch up this time, we can say goodbye forever and I promise to leave you alone. So, how about it? Wednesday at 6pm for a quick coffee?

When you approach a meet up in that way, the chances of her saying, Yes are almost certain.

Then, once she agrees, go ahead and make plans to meet up with her as soon as is convenient for both of you.

At the reunion!

3. Let her experience the new and improved you in person

[image: Let her experience the new and improved you in person]

When you meet up with your ex, make sure that you reactivate and begin building on her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

You want to get her to the point where she is thinking something like, "Wow, this is really nice. It feels good to be around him again. Why am I feeling this way? I like him again. Why do I want him to hug me and kiss me all of a sudden?"

When she is at that point, her guard comes down and you can easily begin to reunite with a hug, kiss and then sex at her place or yours.

So, how can you reactivate and begin building on her feelings for you?

You can do it by:

- Reacting differently to the way she's expecting to (e.g. She expects you to be insecure, nervous and self-doubting around her, but you're relaxed, confident and easy going instead. She expects you to try to push her into getting back with you again, but you use humor to break down her defenses and make her naturally want the relationship).
- Flirting with her and making her feel feminine and girly in your presence, rather than being neutral and making her feel like just a friend.
- Laughing at her when she tries to push you around or dominate the reunion, rather than being on your best behavior and being a Mr. Nice Guy all of a sudden to hopefully impress her.
- Making her laugh and smile and feel happy in your presence, rather than being too serious or making her feel stressed by trying to discuss the relationship problems in detail.

As she is feeling attracted to you, she won't be able to stop herself from slowly dropping her guard and opening back up to you.

Important: Don't make the classic mistake of asking for another chance before you show her that you've really changed.

You've got to let her experience the changes, so she can feel differently in your presence and decide for herself that a relationship with you really would be different now.

If you try to get her to agree to give you another chance before reactivating her feelings, she will begin to close herself off emotionally and then, getting her to agree to another meet up will be a lot more difficult from then onwards.

Why?

She will see that you're trying to get her back without even changing, which will make her feel like you are being selfish and not taking her needs into account.

So, make sure that you follow the process correctly.

Once you've reactivated her feelings and begun to build on them, you need to

4. Get her to forgive the old you

For a reunion after a break up to lead to reconciliation and an even better relationship, forgiveness is a very important step.

Forgiveness allows a woman to stop seeing everything that you say and do in a negative light and start seeing you as you are now (i.e. a new and improved man).

Once she has forgiven you, she can then let her guard down and allow herself to feel respect, attraction and love for you again.

In many cases, if a guy asks for a relationship before getting his ex woman to forgive him, she will usually say something like, "I don't know. There's too much between us for me to be able to fully trust you again. What if I agree to give you another chance and then, as soon as you feel comfortable around me again, you go back to being the old you? I'm just not willing to risk going through all that again. Let's just stay broken up. I don't want to be with you anymore. Please accept that."

She is saying that because she doesn't have any real, current evidence that he actually makes her feel different now.

He's also trying to get her to commit to a relationship when she's still looking at him as being who he used to be.

He hasn't gotten her to forgive the old version of him, so she can then start looking at him as the new version of himself.

So, make sure that you get your ex to forgive you first.

You can do that by saying something like, "I know that it took me longer than it should have to understand where I was going wrong (i.e. we had to break up first), but I do finally understand why you broke up with me. I see now how certain aspects of my behavior, attitude and thinking would have turned you off (e.g. I was too insecure and needy, you matured in the relationship faster than me, I was unreliable). Looking back at myself and how I behaved, I can't believe that was really me. I mean, how could you not feel turned off by me when I was being like that? I sometimes shake my head and have to laugh at how silly I was back then. Of course, I know that it might be difficult for you to believe that I have changed, but I really have. I want to apologize to you now for putting you through all that. I'm sorry. I don't expect you to give me another chance. I'm just asking you to forgive me for who I used to be. So, can you forgive me?"

As long as she can see that you're not asking her to give you another chance right now and are just asking for forgiveness, she will almost certainly just go ahead and forgive you.

Once that happens, she will look at you differently.

She will look at who you are now as being a different man to who you used to be.

The man who made all those mistakes in the relationship is who you used to be and the man who has learned from it and become a better man is who you are now.

Once she has forgiven you, make sure that you continue allowing her experience the new you whenever you interact with her (on the phone and in person).

The more evidence she gets (by personal experience of interacting with you) that you really have changed, the more genuine her forgiveness will be.

Her feelings of respect and attraction will come flowing back and before she realizes it, she will be wondering, “How did I fall in love with him again? Why do I feel like I just want to be with him now? Why don’t I want to be broken up anymore? Why do I miss him so much whenever we are apart?”

Finally!

5. Fully reactivate her feelings for you

[image: Fully reactivate her feelings for you]

One of the best ways to reactivate a woman’s feelings for you is by using humor and flirting to create a more easy-going, sexually charged dynamic between you and her.

When you do that, it naturally breaks down the walls that she put up to prevent herself from falling for you again.

For example: Imagine you’re at a coffee shop with your ex.

If you focus on being too deep and meaningful (e.g. discussing the relationship in terms of soul mates and destiny, trying hard to come up with solutions to the problems in the relationship), her guard will remain up and she will start to feel annoyed, stressed or overwhelmed by what is going on.

On the other hand, if you use flirting and humor to create some sexual tension between you, even if she doesn’t want it to happen, her feelings will naturally come flooding back.

For instance, you might say in a joking way (even if she doesn’t have any milk above her lip after taking a sip of her coffee), “You look really sexy with that cappuccino mustache. That has to go on social media. I think everyone in the world should be able to see how hot you look right now. Little Cappuccino Mustache Girl.”

She will most likely blush and try to wipe above her lip to clear away the milk or froth from the cappuccino.

Again, even if she doesn’t have anything above her lip, you can lean forward and say, “Let me do it,” and gently lean in and run your thumb above her top lip.

If she did have something on her lip, you can then jokingly say, “Geez! I can’t take you anywhere. You make a mess of yourself wherever we go.”

If she didn’t have anything on her lip, you can look at your finger and say, “Oh well, look at that! There wasn’t anything there after all,” and have a laugh with her about it.

She will likely pretend to be angry with you for tricking her, while at the same time, she will be feeling rushes of respect and attraction surge through her body and mind.

Once youâve fully reactivated your exâs feelings for you, it's only natural that you and her will reunite and get back together.

Best of all, you will now be a better man than you were before.

You will have changed, improved or adjusted things about yourself that were turning her off.

You will have understood what it really takes to make a woman like her happy in a relationship.

You will also know how to maintain her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you forever.

So, when you reunite, you won't have to worry about breaking up again.

She will be yours for life.

Now, go and get her back!

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Can I Get My Ex to Believe That We Can Make This Work?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Even if she does believe that you and her can make it work, she will probably keep playing hard to get and giving you mixed messages to see how you react.

For example:

- Will you lose confidence in yourself and your attractiveness to her?
- Will you resort to begging and pleading with her if she doesn't change her mind?
- Will you lose control of your emotions and get angry at her?
- Will you be trying so hard to suck up to her and make her give you another chance that you end up putting up with her disrespectful behavior towards you?

In other words, she wants to see how she will feel now that you no longer have a guarantee of being with her in a relationship.

So, here's what you need to do:

1. Get her to understand and agree with you that a couple's love becomes stronger and more meaningful when they overcome temporary issues like what you and her are experiencing now

[image: Get her to understand that the love can become stronger]

In most cases, a man and a woman will get into a relationship without really knowing what is required to make it last a lifetime.

For example: Some couples believe that a successful relationship is all about always being happy, never disagreeing with each other or having any arguments or fights and never getting bored or frustrated with each other.

As a result, when they begin to disagree or fight, or the excitement wears off a little bit, either one of them or both of them will think that the relationship is doomed and cannot be fixed.

The woman might think, “This isn't what I signed up for. I don't want to be stuck in a boring relationship, or have to deal with a guy who gets sometimes angry at me and shouts. I can do better than this. I want a relationship that is happy all the time. That's how it supposed to be.”

What she doesn't understand is that successful couples (those who stay happily together for life), understand that arguments, disagreements and mistakes are bound to happen, no matter how perfect the relationship, or how in love with each other they both are.

It's totally natural, normal and expected.

As long as each person continually improves and doesn't keep making the same old mistakes, then it's all good.

The relationship just gets better and better over time.

When a couple understands that fact about relationships, they know that a few bumps in the road isn't a good enough reason to walk away from an otherwise loving, happy relationship.

In fact, the great thing about making mistakes in a relationship is that when those mistakes get fixed and improved, the relationship becomes even stronger and more enduring than ever before.

So, if you want to make your ex believe that you can make this work, it's important that you understand where you've been going wrong with her and then make some real changes in those areas.

It's also essential that you get her to understand (and agree with you) that a couple's love becomes stronger and more meaningful when they make an effort to overcome minor problems in the relationship.

When a couple does that, they always become stronger together and respect and love each other more and more, rather than running from one relationship to the next and never sticking with it through the rough times to eventually get to blissful love that last for life.

So, you might say to her, "A relationship that lasts forever isn't always perfect and happy in each moment. There will be ups and downs and we won't always agree with each other on everything, but that doesn't mean we have to give up and walk away. If we learn from our mistakes and improve as a result, our relationship will get even better and stronger over time. I know you feel hurt right now and you probably don't want to believe me or you may not even care to try, but I believe that actions speak louder than words. So, if you give me a chance to show you that I've changed, I'm going to prove to you that I'm the man you want me to be and that our relationship really can work."

Important: You need to already have made some changes and improvements before saying something like that to her.

Don't offer her promises of what you will do in the future, if she can see with her own eyes that you haven't even changed in the present.

You need to allow her to experience some of the changes in you, so she has some evidence to believe your claims about how you will be better.

That leads me to the next point!

2. Show her that you've already changed, rather than telling her that you will change

[image: Show her that you've changed, rather than telling her that you will change]

When a woman is saying things like, "Look, it's over between us. We keep coming down the same road again and again and nothing ever changes. I can't keep lying to myself anymore. I just don't believe we can make this work," it's only natural that a guy will want to prove to her that she's wrong.

He might then say, "Please just listen to me. I promise that if you give me another chance, I'll change. Please believe me when I say that we can make this work. I'll do anything you want me to do to make you happy. Just give me a chance to show you that I mean it this time.â□□

Yet, if she's given him many chances to change in the past and he hasn't, she might say something like, â□□This isnâ□□t the first time weâ□□ve had problems. Every time youâ□□ve promised me that you would change, you never have. So, why should this time be any different from all the other times when we tried to make this work? I just donâ□□t believe you anymore.â□□

So, what should you do instead?

Just let her see that you have already changed based on how you now interact with her.

For example: If a woman broke up with a guy because he didnâ□□t believe in his value to her as a man and was constantly afraid of losing her (and as a result became very jealous and controlling), sheâ□□s not going to fully believe him if he tells her, â□□Iâ□□m a changed man. I promise that this time Iâ□□ll be more confident and I won't be clingy and overprotective.â□□

To test him, she might say something along the lines of, â□□I donâ□□t know. Iâ□□ve been hanging out with other guys since we broke up and Iâ□□ve really enjoyed it. Maybe we can get back together, but if we do, I want to have an open relationship, so I can see other guys if I want to. What do you think?â□□ and see how he reacts.

If he looks horrified at her suggestion and pulls away from her and says, â□□Are you crazy? What kind of an idea is that? I love you and I want to make this work and youâ□□re talking about seeing other people. I can never accept that. Itâ□□s all or nothing. I love you and would be 100% to you only and I would expect the same back from you,â□□ she will know for sure that he hasnâ□□t really changed.

On the other hand, if he maintains his confidence, bursts out laughing and says with a naughty grin, â□□Hey, that sounds like a great idea. My birthday will be fun this year with you and all the other women Iâ□□ll be dating coming to my party at the same time! I'll get lots of presents and bathroom blowjobsâ□□ she will have the proof that sheâ□□s been looking for to convince her that he really is different now.

Of course, he doesn't actually have to date other women and as I said earlier, a woman will usually only test her guy by saying that she wants an open relationship to see if he'll be insecure.

Essentially, he's just calling her bluff and raising her. (If you understand poker terms. If you donâ□□tâ□□)

Essentially, he's showing her that he isn't intimidated by what she's saying and in fact, he's even going to take it a little further.

When she can see that he's not getting insecure, clingy and needy like he used to, she will automatically begin to feel some respect and attraction for him again.

He passed her test with flying colors and she can now naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him, rather than him wasting loads of time and energy trying to convince her that he won't be an insecure, needy or clingy guy anymore.

This is why itâ□□s so important that you make some real changes and adjustments to yourself, before you try to make your ex believe you can make your relationship work.

Then, when you interact with her (on the phone and in person) she will be able to sense it via the tone of your voice, your body language and the way you react and respond to what she says and does.

You wonâ□□t have to try and convince her by giving her long-winded explanations that go on for hours and hours and drain both of you of your energy.

Instead, the process is quick, simple and effective because you're actually showing her and letting her experience it for herself.

She can then believe that you truly have changed and that it's actually possible for you and her to make the relationship work now.

The next step is to

3. Attract her in the ways that she really wants, but probably isn't telling you about

This one is really important for your situation, so pay attention.

A woman will sometimes break up with a guy without ever telling him her real reasons why, because she doesn't want him to get angry, try and talk her out of her decision, or start making wild promises to change the things she has mentioned.

Alternatively, in some cases, she may not even know what to tell him.

She just knows that something doesn't feel right to her and he needs to fix it.

Naturally, because of that, a guy might then try to discuss the relationship in detail with her to try and work things out.

For example: He might say things like, "I know that I stuffed up and I'm sorry. I really want to be able to make this work because I love you and only want to be with you. So, just help me understand what I did wrong and I will then make those changes right away."

In his mind, it sounds like he's just being a good guy and trying to work things out, so he doesn't see a problem with what he's saying.

Yet, what she hears is something like this, "I don't know what I did wrong. As far as I'm concerned everything between us was perfect and you're just being an unreasonable, moody woman about everything. Besides, if you don't like something about me, why don't you just come out and tell me what you want me to do, rather than expect me to figure it out on my own? Be clear with me woman. I can't read your mind. Just tell me what to do."

As a result, she becomes even less willing to want to work on the relationship.

Why?

A woman doesn't want to be responsible for teaching her man how to be the man that he needs to become.

She wants him to figure it out on his own (without her having to spell it out for him), make some changes to himself and show her that he is now the kind of man that she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love.

So, rather than using your interactions with your ex to discuss the relationship in detail, just focus attracting her in the ways she really wants, but isn't telling you about.

For example: Some possible reasons why your ex broke up with you, but didn't tell you about, could be that:

- You made it a 50/50 relationship, rather than being the more dominant one, so she was unable to be a feminine woman around you.
- You had (and possibly still have) no purpose in life that you are actively following through on, so you became too emotionally dependent on her (e.g. clingy, needy, jealous, over protective).
- You felt very lucky to be with, which made her feel like she was too good for you or that she could do better. As a result, you gave her too much power, sucked up to her or on the other end of the scale, tried to ruin her confidence and make her feel dependent on you, so she wouldn't leave you.
- Her expectations of the relationship weren't being fulfilled (e.g. she wanted you to commit, but you kept delaying. She wanted you to have fun and enjoy life more, but you were just too serious all the time to the point where you became quite irritable).
- She felt taken for granted (e.g. because you broke your word to her too often, didn't take her seriously, treated her badly, didn't really care about making her feel attracted to you anymore).
- You didn't see each other often enough, so you drifted apart.
- You were too emotionally sensitive, so she had to dull her confident personality down and be gentle with you, otherwise you'd get upset or feel very insecure.
- You needed her to regularly show you or tell you that she loved you and only wanted to be with you, otherwise you'd start feeling insecure.
- You gave her too much power in the relationship to the point where she felt like your mother or big sister at times.

When you understand your ex's real reasons for ending the relationship, you can then make the right changes to yourself.

Then, when you next interact with her (on the phone and in person) and you make her feel attracted in the ways she always secretly wanted, she will open back up to you.

For example: You're now so much more emotionally masculine in comparison to how emotionally feminine she is, so she now feels like a girl around you.

You now maintain your confidence when she's being cold and distant, rather than getting upset or insecure.

You now use humor to ease the tension between you and make her laugh and feel good, rather than getting angry at her.

When you make changes that really matter to her, she will automatically start feeling respect and attraction for you again.

She will then believe that it finally might be possible to make a relationship between you and her work.

However!

4. Don't ask for a relationship right now. Just meet up with each other a couple more times to see how you both feel

It's only natural that if a guy notices that his ex is relaxing her guard around him and is possibly even opening up a little bit, he might be tempted to push her into committing to a relationship right away.

Don't make that mistake.

Let her want it.

Let her start imagining being back with you, while she is feeling an increasing amount of respect and sexual attraction for you.

If you do that, she may even be the one to suggest that you and her get back together.

Of course, not all women are the same and you need to keep that in mind.

Some women will play hard to get, even though they are feeling attracted again.

For example: She might think, "I'm not going to tell him that he can have another chance with me yet. Let him squirm for a little bit. He deserves to run around and try to make things up to me after the way he behaved in our relationship."

If the guy then starts being desperate or insecure, she will feel turned off and her thoughts will change to something like, "Actually I've changed my mind. I just don't feel it with him anymore. I've got to end this and move on."

So, make sure that whatever her reaction is during the ex back process, you always remain confident and emotionally strong.

Don't lose confidence in yourself if she plays a little hard to get and don't start trying to suck up to her to hopefully get her to take pity on you and give you another chance.

Instead, just keep the interactions between you light and relaxed, and focus on sparking her feelings for you by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you again.

Don't rush to get her to commit to a relationship unless she is really making it obvious that she wants it.

For example: Rather than saying to her, "Let's get back together again. I know we can make this work," you can instead say something along the lines of, "Well, it was good to catch up with you. Maybe we can catch up again sometime soon to say hi."

If she is feeling drawn to you and secretly wanting to give the relationship another chance, she will agree to it and will see you again soon.

That way, not only are you taking the pressure off her to get back together again, but you're also taking control of the ex back process, rather than letting her play hard to get with you and mess with your head.

She can no longer string you along and enjoy having power over you, because you are in control.

She's feeling attracted to you again, the relationship doesn't feel like it's over to her and she wants something to happen.

She also notices that you're not desperately chasing her to commit.

You're just suggesting to catch up again and say hi.

You are in control.

She wants you and she hopes that you will make a move on her the next time you meet.

From that moment onwards, you just need to

5. Keep building on her newfound feelings for you

[image: Keep building on her newfound feelings for you]

Some of the ways you can do that are by:

1. Continuing to change other things that really matter to her

Don't focus only on the reasons she told you about when breaking up with you, (e.g. she's tired of always fighting and arguing with you).

Instead, focus on the deeper reasons probably won't admit to you (e.g. she doesn't want to be the leader of the relationship, she feels more like a neutral friend around you than a sexy, desirable woman, your emotional state is no longer appealing to her, she doesn't like that you're so emotionally dependent on her, you're too emotionally sensitive).

2. Wanting her back, but not needing her back

Get to the point where you genuinely feel happy and fulfilled with, or without her in your life.

Yes, you want her back, but don't continue to sit around thinking, "How can I make my ex believe that we can make this work?" all the time, at the expense of everything else in your life (e.g. your biggest goals and dreams, your hobbies and interests, your friends).

You really have to start enjoying your life whether she's with you, or not.

Some guys worry about doing that and say, "Won't that make her angry at me? Won't she want to get revenge by enjoying life without me too?"

Not necessarily.

Some women will get angry and seek revenge, but most women won't.

Why?

Seeing you happy without her makes her feel respect for you for having the confidence to enjoy life without her support.

She then feels attracted to who you are now and begins to feel the pain of losing you.

That's what works.

Yes, you run the risk of her potentially getting angry, but it's worth it.

Why?

She still feels respect and attraction for you anyway, which then makes it so much easier to get her back.

However, if you just want to show her that you're sad, lonely and lost without her, then she's not going to feel respect for that.

In fact, she will lose respect for you for being so dependent on her and will begin to feel attracted to guys who are more emotionally independent and confident.

3. Being active about the ex back process, rather than passive Actively focus on reactivating your ex's feelings for you (e.g. by calling her on the phone and meeting up with her in person), rather than waiting around hoping she will take the lead and get you back.

Actively re-attracting her is not about trying to convince her to give you another chance.

Instead, it's about interacting with her (on the phone and in person is best) and actively making her have strong romantic and sexual feelings for you again.

When you do that, she will naturally start believing that you can make it work.

Finallyâ□|

6. Guide her back into a relationship

[image: Let her want the relationship, rather than trying to force it on her]

When your ex has forgiven you and is feeling attracted to you again, she stops feeling so defensive around you and opens back up to you.

She allows herself to see you as the man you are now (e.g. confident, emotionally masculine, emotionally independent), rather than the man you used to be (e.g. insecure, wimpy, clingy, needy).

The more she accepts the new you, the less desire she will have to keep pushing you away.

Her walls will come down and the thought of hugging you, kissing you and even having sex with you all start to feel really good again.

When she gets to that point, you don't have to waste energy trying to convince her that you can make things work because they already are working.

She respects you, she feels attracted to you and she loves you.

You are a different man now.

She feels good around you and wants to be with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Can I Make My Ex Feel Safe With Me Again?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The 5 steps to make your ex feel safe with you again are:

1. Get her to forgive the old you, so she can see that the new you is real

[image: Get her to forgive the old version of you, so she can see that the new you is real]

Forgiveness the old version of you allows her to stop assuming the worst of you every time she interacts with the new version of you.

It's draws a line in the sand between before and now and allows her to see you in a new, more positive light.

For example: Imagine what will be going through a woman's mind if she doesn't forgive her ex man for how he used to behave or what happened in the relationship to cause the break up.

When he asks for another chance, she might think something like, "No way. He must be joking if he thinks I'm going to forget about all the ways he stuffed up and then give him another chance because he wants it to happen. I don't care what he wants anymore. I have to take care of myself now. He hurt me and I'm not going to just forget about that. It's going to take a lot more than him apologizing and saying that he'll do anything to make me feel safe with him again for me to be able to trust him."

This is why you need to get her to forgive you, before you even get to the point of asking her to give you another chance.

By the way!

Getting her to forgive you isn't about constantly apologizing to her until she finally says, "Okay! I forgive you."

Why?

Firstly, a woman will rarely forgive a guy that she has dumped simply because he keeps apologizing. Secondly, constantly apologizing for your past mistakes doesn't get to the core of the problems between you.

Sure you're being sincere and are really apologizing to her, but to her, it doesn't guarantee that you really have changed and will now be able to be the kind of man that she could feel safe with again.

So, how can you get her to forgive you for real?

Start by saying to her (over the phone or in person, but not via text), "Look, I know I stuffed up and I'm genuinely sorry about it. I'm not going to make excuses for my actions, but even though it may sound unbelievable, I've learned from my mistakes and I'm not that guy anymore. I don't expect you to believe me right now or take me back just because I'm saying that to you. However, I also don't want you to move on, only to discover that you can't fully be happy again because you haven't been able to forgive me and let go of the past. That wouldn't be fair on you. I've learned that the mature way to handle a break up is if we both forgive each other and acknowledge that people make mistakes in relationships sometimes. It doesn't mean they are bad people and cannot ever change. It simply means that they stuffed up. We don't have to get back together at all, but it's the right thing to do to genuinely forgive each other. In our case, it's just you who needs to forgive me because you really didn't do anything wrong. So, can you do the mature thing here and forgive me? That way, we can both feel better about the break up and move on. If we do think about each other, it will be to remember some of the good times we had, rather than feel hurt by the bad times.â€

The great thing about asking your ex to forgive you in that kind of way, is that she suddenly stops feeling so angry at you for stuffing up.

She relaxes and begins to see the new you in a more positive light.

She starts to believe that the new you is real (i.e. because you're genuinely caring about her and her feelings, rather than just giving her an empty apology to get what you want from her).

The next thing to remember isâ€

2. Don't let her make things more dramatic than they really are

Some women enjoy creating drama in relationship and making a big deal out of little things that didn't have to be such a big deal.

For example: In a relationship, a woman might often throw a tantrum over something seemingly insignificant.

In most cases, she will do it just to see how her guy will react.

[image: I'm sorry! Please give me a chance to make it up to you! I will do whatever you want]

Will he give in to her and do whatever she wants?

Will he lose control of his emotions and get angry at her?

Will he stand up to her and lovingly put her back in her place? (This is secretly what she wants him to do).

Will he laugh at her tantrum and not take it so seriously. (Women also like this reaction from men at times).

Women always test men by changing the mind all the time, being moody and generally just trying to be difficult.

It's part of a woman's survival instinct to align herself with a man who can remain confident and in control of his emotions, regardless of what people might say or do around him.

[image: Falling out of love because he keeps failing her confidence tests]

If a man is unable to pass a woman's tests of his confidence, she will lose respect and attraction for him and eventually fall out of love with him.

She will also stop feeling safe with him because he's not someone who she can rely on to maintain control of a situation.

He's just not man enough for a woman like herâ€yet.

He can improve and be man enough for her, but in most cases, guys just don't know what to do to change.

In other cases, men simply blame the woman and think she is bipolar, crazy or a pain in the ass.

Yet, she's just following her natural instincts to be with a man who makes her feel safe by being confident and not losing control of his emotions when tests.

So, when a woman like that breaks up with her, she will often make the break up process out to be so dramatic and so painful to her emotionally, just to see how he reacts.

The mistake that some guys then make is sucking up to her with extra nice behavior (e.g. taking the blame for everything that happened between them, buying her flowers and gifts, possibly even pay for some of her bills, making himself available to her 24/7).

Alternatively, he might say things like, â€œIâ€™m sorry. Please donâ€™t get upset. Iâ€™ll do whatever you want to prove to you that I wonâ€™t hurt you ever again. What do I have to do to make you believe me? Just say the word and Iâ€™ll do it. Iâ€™ll do anything. I care about you so much. I want to make you feel safe.â€

Yet, rather than make her think, â€œI really am behaving like a spoiled brat here, aren't I? Clearly my ex is trying to make things right between us, so I should stop being such a drama queen and give him another chance,â€ she will just feel even more turned off by him.

For example: She will notice that heâ€™s too easily manipulated by her, heâ€™s wimpy and weak-minded, she feels more emotionally dominant than him and he doesn't know how to get her to stop creating fake drama and change the relationship dynamic back to a more relaxed, open and loving one.

As a result, she will then pull further away from him than she already has and begin to say things like, “Look, you have no chance of getting me back, so just give up. It's over” because she can see that he doesn't even understand how to be attractive to her.

Here's the thingâ€

Even though you are most-likely a really good guy who is trying to make things right between you and your ex, donâ€™t make the mistake of getting sucked into her all of her fake drama.

Of course, that doesnâ€™t mean youâ€™re denying what happened, or even that you made some mistakes, but it also doesnâ€™t mean every interaction you have with your ex needs to turn into a damn soap opera.

Don't take her drama so seriously.

Laugh at her for being a drama queen, retain your confidence and use your emotional masculinity (i.e. the emotional toughness of a man) to guide the conversation or interaction back to a more loving, easy-going place.

3. Focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good around you

Imagine that youâ€™re meeting your ex at a coffee shop.

When she arrives, she sits down sighs in an annoyed way.

After a few moments, she says something along the lines of, â€œI donâ€™t think meeting up with you is such a good idea after all. Iâ€™m going to leave now.â€

One option is to take her reaction seriously and start trying to convince her to stick around and give you a chance to explain.

Yet, thatâs not going to spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you and will just turn her off and annoy her even more (i.e. because you're getting sucked into her unnecessary drama, rather than being the man and leading the way to a more fun, easy-going dynamic).

So, what other way can you react to her?

Just have the balls to turn what she says into something to laugh about together.

So, if she says, *âI donât think meeting up with you is such a good idea after all. Iâm going to leave now,*â you can say in a light-hearted, joking way, *âAt least wait until after get I my order. It shouldnât take that longâ! I only ordered 17 burgers, 5 apple pies, 23 portions of fries, 19 cups of coffee, 14 doughnuts, 8 milkshakes and a diet coke,*â and have a laugh with her about that.

Alternatively, you could jokingly say, “Okay, but at least wait until my order comes. I will then get the check and hand it to you. You’re paying” and then have a laugh with her about that.

Alternatively, you could jokingly say, “Okay, but before you leave, come here and give me a high five” and then get her to high five you and have a laugh with her about it.

By approaching a potentially “serious” situation like that in a funny way, sheâs much more likely to relax, smile, laugh and be more open to sticking around and talking to you.

Of course, she might act like she is still annoyed, but still stick around and you can then say, “Well, are you Little Miss Fussy Pants today? Or, maybe, Little Miss Moody. Which one is it? Moody or Fussy Pants?” and have a laugh with her about that.

Using humor to get her laughing creates some positive feelings in her, which then makes her stop focusing on the negatives about you as much.

Even if she tries to block the rush of feelings she will be experiencing for you, she just won’t be able to.

Attraction is an automatic reaction that men and women have to each other.

So, she just won’t be able to stop herself from feeling respect for you again for having the confidence and emotional strength to make her laugh and smile in a serious moment like that.

â!especially, if you previously would have gotten dragged into her fake drama and started sucking up to her.

After you make her smile and laugh, you then need toâ!

4. Build on her feelings of respect, attraction and love

[image: Build on her feelings for you]

One way you can do that is by showing her that youâre taking her feelings seriously.

For example: You might say to her, âBy the wayâ! I was only joking before and I donât want you to think I donât care about how you feel. I understand that right now, sitting down and talking to me probably feels uncomfortable for you. You probably still want to leave and walk away from me forever. That’s fine. However, I just want you to know that I now understand what I did wrong when we were together and Iâm truly sorry for hurting you. I donât expect you to *believe me that I've changed and I don't expect you to care either. Yet, can we at least try to be friends rather than ex's who are now enemies and can't even say hi to each other?*â□□

She will likely say, â□□*Okay*â□□ and you can then focus further on building on her feelings of respect and attraction for you again (e.g. by displaying some of the traits and behaviors that are naturally attractive to women, such as confidence, humor, emotional masculinity, emotional maturity).

You can display those traits byâ□!

- Making her feel feminine and girly in your presence, rather than just making her feel friendly or neutral around you.
- Letting her see your masculine confidence by not feeling nervous or unsure of yourself when she is being cold. This allows her to see that you're not intimidated by her or the situation, which is attractive.
- Using humor to put her at ease when talking to you, rather than allowing the conversation to feel awkward.
- Showing her that youâ□□ve moved past the level you were at when she broke up with you, rather than making the same old communication mistakes as you did before (e.g. giving her too much power).

When she starts to feel respect and attraction for the new you, she will become willing to look past your mistakes and see you as the man you are now.

Her feelings will grow and she will start to feel like the relationship between you and her isn't over.

Finally, make sure toâ□!

5. Be the kind of man she really wants now

When you first met her, she most likely had a different idea of what she would ultimately accept in a man.

To properly re-attract her and get her back, you need to let her see (not tell her) that you are now the kind of man that she really wants.

You've changed and become so much more emotionally masculine and emotionally strong.

She now feels like your girl, rather than like a friend or a neutral ex who doesn't feel a spark with you.

Sparks are flying between you and her because you are making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you, based on how you can now interact with her.

By the wayâ□!

Sometimes, it is fine to talk about the changes you've made, but make sure that you only do so briefly and add it in to the conversation casually.

Don't make it out to be a long-winded speech about all the things you've learned, everything you've changed and everything you now want to continue improving.

Just let it surface in conversation naturally and casually and only talk about it briefly.

For example: If a guy made his ex feel unsafe by being irresponsible (e.g. he didn't have a good job or didn't have a job), to show her that he's changed, he needs to casually tell her about the things he's been doing to improve himself since the break up.

If he was unemployed or was stuck in a dead-end job, he might say, "By the way, don't laugh, but I wear a suit and tie these days."

His ex will most likely be shocked and ask, "What? Why? What are you doing that requires you to dress like that?"

He then can say, "Well, I've got a great job now. I'm working as a..." and then briefly tell her about it.

If she wants to ask more, he can answer her, as long as he's not giving off the vibe of, "So, now do you like me? Am I good enough now?"

A woman wants to see that a man is improving his life because he wants to, not because he's hoping that it will get him a pat on the head from her.

Alternatively, if a guy abused alcohol or drugs and made her feel unsafe in that way, he might say, "By the way, I went to rehab after you broke up with me. It was the best thing I ever did. I'm grateful to you for not letting me get away with that reckless behavior any longer."

The Most Important Thing of All

The most important thing of all when getting an ex back is to focus on making her feel respect, sexual and romantic attraction for you again.

When you do that, she naturally feels drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

If she can see that you've become a much more balanced, complete man, it will be easy to respect you.

Likewise, if she can see that you don't get dragged into her fake drama anymore and now have the balls to laugh at her, ignore it and just let her rant or turn it into something both of you can laugh about, then it will be easy to respect you and feel attracted to you again.

When that happens, she starts to feel love for you again.

When that happens, she starts to believe that it really is possible to feel safe with you again.

She opens up and gives you another chance.

By the way,

It doesn't take weeks or months to get a woman to change how she feels.

This is something that you can achieve right now or within a few days.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Said That Her Heart is Closed Off to Me Now

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 possible reasons why a woman tell her ex boyfriend (or recently dumped boyfriend) that her heart is now closed off to himâ€¦

1. She has given him plenty of chances, but he still hasn't been able to change

[image: She has given him plenty of chances, but he still hasn't been able to change]

A woman will usually give her guy more than one chance to change and improve before she makes the final decision to break up with him.

For example: She might say things like, â€œIf you don't change, I'm going to leave,â€ or â€œI'm really tired of all the fighting and arguing. I'm sick of trying to make things work between you and me. If we don't sort things out right away, I'm going to break up with you for good.â€

Naturally, most guys in the world are good guys and they don't want to see their woman unhappy, so a guy will usually say something along the lines of, â€œYes, I promise that this time, things will be different,â€ or â€œI don't want to hurt you. I'll do whatever it takes to make things right between us.â€

For a little while, he may even try really hard to please her and do whatever she says to keep the peace.

However, if eventually he starts to slip back into his old pattern of thinking and behaving, she will then decide to break up with him.

To make sure that she can move on without him, she will begin to close her heart off to him and get ready to open herself up to meeting new guys.

When her boyfriend asks for another chance, she will say something like, “No, it's too late. You had your chances. It's over now. You have to accept that.”

Not knowing what else to do, a guy will often start begging and pleading with her, by saying something like, â€œI'm sorry! I know that I stuffed up again, but I promise that if you give me just one more chance, I won't let you down this time. You mean everything to me. Please don't do this. I love you. Just give me one more chance.â€

Unfortunately, by that stage, a woman is usually thinking, â€œNo way. How many times does he think I'm going to fall for the same promises and excuses? He's had more than enough chances and I'm not going to put myself through that kind of pain and disappointment again.â€

So, no matter what he says, she will try to remain disconnected from her feelings for him and not care about losing him.

When he notices that she's not giving him another chance, a guy might then pour his heart out in a long e-mail, letter or text message (e.g. telling her how much he loves her and how much she means to him, talking about the past and how good things used to be, promising to change and become a better man if she takes him back) in the hopes that he can soften her up and make her change her mind.

Yet, that approach rarely works.

Why?

When a woman has closed the door to her heart, he needs to first re-spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction before she will consider reopening that door.

Her feeling that way about him can only happen if he can now show her (via his actions and behavior) that he really has changed.

More importantly, she really does feel differently when she interacts with him now.

She feels respect, attraction and love and feels hopeful about how good a relationship together could be now and in the future.

That's what you need to make your ex feel.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys "jump the gun" or "put the cart before the horse" or "try to get the end result (a relationship) before putting in any work to truly change themselves and become more emotionally attractive to her," by just asking for another chance right away without even changing.

When a woman has gotten to the point where she has broken up with her, she won't want to be convince to give him another chance based on the promise that he will change in the near future.

Some women will give a guy that chance, but not if he's done it once, twice or many times before.

There's only so much that a woman can take before she thinks, "I deserve better than this. I've got to move on."

What your ex will want to see is that you have already improved and become a better man than you were before.

You've got to let her experience the changes in you for herself, rather than just telling her that you've changed.

Words are meaningless to her at this point, unless they come with a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

When your ex girlfriend can see that you remain confident and in control, regardless of what she does to throw you off and make you revert to your old behavior, her negative opinion of you will begin to fade.

She will start looking at you as being a new and improved man.

As a result, the idea of opening her heart to you again will start to feel good to her.

Another reason why a woman might tell her ex that her heart is closed off to him now is that

2. She has met someone else who makes her feel more respect, attraction and love

When a woman breaks up with her man, it's usually because her wants and desires in the relationship don't match what she's actually getting.

As a result, her feelings of respect, attraction and love begin to fade over time.

For example: She wants a man who is confident, assertive and emotionally independent, but her guy is just too insecure, needy, clingy, timid or self-doubting.

As a result, they never get to experience the kind of love that lasts a lifetime.

Watch this video for more informationâ!

To make a woman want to be with you for life, you have to be able to give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants in a relationship.

Otherwise, you won't get to the Blissful Love stage of a relationship and will break up after the relationship gets boring by remaining stuck in the working stage for too long.

Here are some more examples of not giving a woman the kind of attraction experience she really wantsâ!

She wants a man who is more emotionally dominant than her, but her guy tends to be too nice, easily manipulated and who allows her (and other people) to get away with pushing him around and treating him badly.

She wants a man who has a definite purpose and direction in life, but he doesn't really care about succeeding or achieving things and just wants to spend time with her and waste time on hobbies (e.g. video games).

She want a guy who is emotionally masculine and emotionally mature, but her guy often acts too childish and makes her almost feel like his parent.

She wants a guy who genuinely loves her and cares about her, but her guy stopped being like that after being with her for a few months.

He was nice at the start, but slowly started turning into an irritable, angry, selfish boyfriend who took her for granted.

So, when a woman finds herself in a relationship that isn't providing her with the kind of attraction experience she really wants, it's only natural that she will eventually decide to break up with him.

She will then close her heart off to him and attempt to move on without him.

If he changes, she will open back up to him, but if he wants to keep her without changing, her heart will remain closed off.

Not knowing what else to do to get her back, some guys become very emotional and begin making all sorts of mistakes that only make the situation worse.

For example:

- Crying to her and saying things like, âI canât live without you,â or âMy life is a mess without you. I havenât been able to function since we broke up. I need youâ).
- Begging and pleading (e.g. saying things like, âPlease forgive me. Iâll do anything you want me to do. I promise to change if you just give me one more chanceâ).
- Writing her a long letter, e-mail or series of text messages to express how he feels and how much she means to him.
- Promising to wait as long as it takes for her to be ready to open her heart up to him again.

Although the above actions might seem okay because it's based on his love for her, it's not okay for the woman.

Women are not attracted to emotional weakness or emotional dependence in men, so his desperation for her is a turn off.

Additionally, because she no longer feels respect and attraction for him, she isn't interested or impressed by his declarations of love for her or his promises to change.

For romance to be enjoyable and welcomed, the feelings have to be mutual.

It cannot be one sided.

If a man has feelings for a woman (i.e. he is sexually attracted to her, respects her, loves her), but she doesn't have feelings for him, she isn't going to enjoy his attempts to get her to commit to a relationship with him.

Until the feelings are mutual, a relationship is not an option.

So, if you want your ex to actually care about you and want to be back with you, it's essential that you make her have feelings for you again.

By the way!|

If you ever feel the urge to be emotional and show her how upset or hurt you are about the break up, don't do it!

It never, ever helps with getting a woman back who has closed her heart off to you because women are not attracted to emotional weakness or desperation in men.

For a woman to feel respect and attraction for a man, she needs to be able to see that no matter what life throws his way (e.g. a break up, a financial crisis, raising a family, trouble at work), he is always man enough to remain mentally strong and in control of his emotions.

Of course, a woman is fine with a man temporarily feeling negative emotions when faced with problems, but the important thing is that he then gets right on with fixing the problem or finding a solution like a man.

He doesn't lose control of his emotions, cry or seek pity from people around him like a woman would.

He approaches life like a real man and keeps pushing forward with confidence, no matter what life throws at him.

That's what women really want in man.

If a guy refuses to be like that and just expects his ex girlfriend to give him another chance just because they used to be in love, she'll close herself off from him and say something along the lines of, "I'm sorry, but my heart is closed off to you now. Please accept that it's over between us and move on."

In many cases, a guy will then feel heartbroken by her rejection and go on to develop a real fear of relationships with women.

It will literally begin to eat away at his confidence around women and as a result, he will struggle to re-attract his ex girlfriend and, if he tries dating again, he will struggle to attract and keep a quality woman.

He will force himself to accept a lower quality woman because he fears that any other type of woman wouldn't want to stay with him in the long run.

He is wrong.

He is good enough for his ex and he is good enough for a high quality woman.

The problems in his life arose when he used the wrong approach when trying to get her back (e.g. trying to convince her to give him another chance, seeking pity from her, expressing his feelings for her).

That's not what gets a woman back who has closed her heart off to a man.

What does work?

Fixing the core issues about himself that have been turning her off (e.g. insecurity, lack of emotional masculinity, giving her too much power during conversations and interactions), so she can then feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new and improved him.

Yet, that's not what most guys do.

Most guys aren't willing to man up and start being the kind of man that their ex girlfriend can naturally feel respect and sexual attraction for.

Most guys want their ex girlfriend to give them another chance out of pity, or because of how in love they used to be.

That just doesn't cut it.

It's not good enough.

You have to be a man about this and get her back properly, or else you will suffer the consequences (i.e. she will reject you, you will most likely lose confidence in your attractiveness to women, it will cause you to feel insecure in your next relationship and potentially get dumped for that).

Another reason why a woman might say that to a guy is becauseâ€¦|

3. She knows that he doesn't understand the missing pieces to the attraction experience she seeks

A woman will rarely admit the subtle reasons why she is breaking up with a guy, because she doesn't want to help him understand how to get her back.

Not knowing what to offer her, a guy will often focus on all the wrong things and mess up his opportunity to get her back.

For example: He might try to open her heart with romance, byâ€¦|

- Sending her bunches of flowers with a sweet card saying something like, â€œIâ€™m so sorry for hurting you. I will give my life to make it up to you.â€
- Writing her a long letter expressing his feelings for her and talking about the special connection they shared.
- Calling his local radio station to dedicate love songs to her.
- Enlisting friends and family to get her to a surprise romantic dinner heâ€™s planned.
- Sending her a gift.

Hereâ€™s the thing thoughâ€¦|

Although a woman might appreciate that her ex is going to a lot of trouble to make it up to her, if she perceives his actions as being superficial (i.e. heâs trying to be romantic, but isn't getting to the core of the problems between them), she will just keep saying, *âI know you mean well, I'm not going to change my mind. My heart is closed off to you now.*â

This is why you have to get to the core reasons for the break up and begin to fix those things, rather than trying to bribe your way back into a relationship by offering her superficial things that won't really matter to her at all.

If youâre unsure what her real reasons for breaking up with you were, here are some questions to help you find outâ!

- Did you stop being the confident guy she first met and instead became insecure, needy and clingy in the relationship?
- Did you stand up to her and put her back in her place in an assertive, but loving way when she disrespected you, or did you put up with her bad behavior and let her walk all over you?
- Did you laugh at her in a loving way when she tried to intimidate you by being mean and nasty during a conversation, or did you get upset and angry at her most of the time?
- Did you get along well with her friends and family, or were you too shy, anti-social or jealous of the other people in her life?
- Did you stop being emotionally masculine around her and instead started behaving more like her friend, or worse, started to behave in a feminine kind of way at times?
- Did you remain emotionally strong throughout the relationship, or did you become emotionally sensitive and need her to be gentle and nice to you, or else you would become upset, irritable or moody?
- Did she mature a lot faster than you?

Once you understand what she really wants you to change about yourself to be able to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, it then becomes easier to get her back.

You can target the areas that really matter and then get ready to show that to her the next time you interact with her.

On the other hand, if you waste your time changing things that she doesnât care about (e.g. being more romantic, improving your physical appearance, being extra nice to her) she isn't going to be impressed because it isn't why she really broke up with you anyway.

Another reason why a woman tell her ex boyfriend (or recently dumped boyfriend) that her heart is now closed off to him is thatâ!

4. He has broken her trust one too many times in the past

[image: He has broken her trust one too many times]

In a relationship, a woman needs to be able to trust her boyfriend (or husband) to be a man of his word all the time.

It's not enough to just be honest for the first few months, or even most of the time.

You have to be a man of your word at all times, so she can put her full trust in you.

So, when a guy behaves in ways that erode a woman's trust, she will naturally start to disconnect with her feelings for him.

Initially, she might try to convince him to change by saying things like, “I don’t like it when you promise me thing and then do another,” or “If you lie to me again, I’m going to break up with you. I can’t be in a relationship where I don’t fully trust a guy.”

If the guy keeps breaking her trust in him (e.g. because she doesn’t take her warnings seriously), she will eventually break up with him.

To get her back after a break up due to trust issues, you’re going to have to get her trust back first.

How can you do that?

Not by saying, “I promise to never do that again! You can trust me this time, things will really be different,” because it’s unlikely that she will believe you now, after all she’s been through with you in the past.

A better way to go about it is by changing the things about yourself that eroded her trust in the first place and then passing her tests when you interact with her.

For example: Imagine a woman broke up with a guy because he was disrespectful of her ideas and opinions.

As a result, she could trust him to be nice to her, supportive and loving when she came up with ideas.

She then had to keep things hidden from him because she didn’t want him talking down to her and making her feel stupid.

She warned him not to talk down to her anymore and to be a more supportive boyfriend, but he didn’t listen.

He always ended up making her feel stupid or naïve in comparison to how smart and wise he was.

As a result, she stopped being so open with him for a while and hoped that he would change.

He didn’t.

She got to the point where she realized that she could trust her family and friends to be loving and supportive, but not her boyfriend.

This made her feel as though the relationship just wasn’t beneficial or fulfilling for her anymore and she decided that she was going to give him one more chance to see if he could change.

So, to test him, she said something that seems completely ridiculous to see if he would snap at her and call her an idiot, like he used to in the past.

For example: She’s a hairdresser and didn’t do very well at school.

All of sudden, she said to him, “I’ve decided to go medical school to become a doctor. What do you think?”

He then laughed and said, “You? A doctor? You’re not smart enough for that,” and shook his head at her as though she was stupid.

That’s not what a woman wants.

What a woman wants is for her man to be supportive by allowing her or even encouraging her to look into it further.

She can then find out for herself that she probably wouldn’t be smart enough to be a doctor.

Even though it might sound silly to her boyfriend and a complete waste of time, it’s not something that he should attack her about.

For example: Maybe she didn't do well at school because she didn't want to learn back then, but she really could become a doctor if she put her mind to it.

If she couldn't, maybe it would lead her along the path of becoming a nurse, which would then make her just as happy.

Maybe that's what she was destined for all along.

That's why it's always better to just be a supportive boyfriend and let your girlfriend make mistakes as she goes along, rather than making her feel stupid.

You never know what might happen if you follow a path that you seem interested in.

New doors open, you learn new skills and you find happiness in ways that you never thought possible.

Trust in a relationship comes in many forms.

It's not just about keeping your word to a woman.

It's also about keeping your behavior, your love and your support.

So many guys are nice and supportive for the first few months, or maybe even for the first couple of years, but they can't sustain it after that.

If you want to keep a woman in a relationship with you for life, you've to do it for real.

You have to be a man that she can rely on all the way.

If you do, she will stick to you like glue and never let you go.

By the wayâ□!

I know this because I'm happily married to my sexy, young wife.

I met her when she was 20 and I was 35.

Despite the age difference, our relationship gets better and better every year that we are together.

That's how it's supposed to be.

That is what you can have with your girlfriend too.

It's totally possible and it's actually very easy to do, if you know what mistakes to avoid and the right way to do things.

A final reason why a woman might say, "My heart is closed off to you now" to her ex boyfriend is becauseâ□!

5. She's just talking about how she feels now

[image: She is just talking about how she feels now]

Right now, your ex might be saying things like, â□□ *My heart is closed off to you now. Just accept it and move on.*â□□

Yet, that doesnâ□□tâ□□ mean her feelings canâ□□t change.

Feelings change all the time.

Think about itâ□!

There was a time when you were a complete stranger to her and she felt nothing for you because she didn't know you.

Then, there was a time where you and her met and she was thinking things like, â€œHeâ€™s so cute. I really like him. I wonder if he might be the one for me.â€

As your relationship progressed, she probably felt love for you and may even have said something along the lines of, â€œI love you. I want us to be together forever.â€

Yet, after an argument or fight, she might have thought to herself, â€œHeâ€™s such a jerk! I hate him!â€ only to change her mind minutes or hours later (e.g. when she calmed down, you changed or improved the thing that caused her to feel angry).

Likewise, there is the time now where you've caused her to close her heart off to you.

As you can see, your exâ€™s feelings for you have changed multiple times, which means they can easily change again.

[image: Start giving her the attraction experience she really wants]

When you reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to the new you again, even if she tries to resist the feeling or hide it from you.

Something inside of her will switch back on.

She will feel like the relationship between you and her isn't over and as a result, her heart will open back up to you.

She will then be yours once again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Isn't Willing to Talk Things Out and Let Me Know What Went Wrong

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The 5 possible reasons why your ex isn't willing to talk things out and let you know what went wrong are:

1. She hasn't felt a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you yet

[image: She hasn't felt a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you yet]

If your ex doesn't feel much respect or attraction for you, she isn't going to feel motivated to want to work on the relationship or give you any clues on how to get her back.

Instead, she will remain closed up and try to move on because there is nothing for her to go back to you (i.e. you haven't re-attracted her and made her feel like she wants you again).

Many guys don't really know how to re-attract an ex woman, so they just try to convince her to give him another chance instead.

For example:

- He begs and pleads with her to give him a chance, in the hope that she takes pity on him and gives in.
- He tries to make her feel guilty or selfish for not being willing to talk things out and let him know what went wrong (e.g. "How can you do this to me? I can't believe how cold-hearted you're being now after all we've been through. Does what we had mean anything to you? I thought you loved me. You used to tell me what I was the one. What happened? Why won't you just let me know what went wrong, so I can fix it?").
- He sends her a long, emotional letter, e-mail or social media message where he expresses his feelings and talks about how much she means to him. He hopes that it will make her think, "He must be the one! He feels so much for me. This is real love!" but it doesn't because he hasn't reactivated her feelings of respect and attraction first.
- He makes promises to change and improve if she will just tell him where he went wrong.

He's hoping that she thinks something like, "He's right! We just need to talk things out. Why didn't I think of that? We can get back together if we talk it out. How silly of me. I'm sure that once I tell him what went wrong between us, he will quickly change and improve and become the man of my dreams right away. What was I thinking by being so cold and closed off? Obviously he's putting in the effort and I owe it to him to try as well. How selfish of me for being so closed off to him. I have to help him get me back!"

That kind of thing just doesn't happen, obviously.

Instead, she just keeps saying, "No" whenever he asks her to talk things out and tell him what went wrong because he's trying to get her back before he's even re-attracted her.

Most guys don't know when to stop using their ineffective approach and seriously try something else, so they just keep going.

He just keeps begging, pleading, pouring his heart out, asking for her help and generally going on and on about the same old things.

His ex then closes herself off from him even more and acts like she doesn't care, in the hope that he begins to hate her and just moves on without her instead.

After all, he hasn't really changed, so there's nothing for her to want to give him another chance.

It's just him wanting her back.

The feelings aren't mutual yet.

So, if you want your ex to be willing to talk things out and give the relationship another chance, you must start saying and doing the things that will renew her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

That is what really counts.

If you interact with her and talk and behave in ways that naturally attract women (e.g. maintain your confidence regardless of how cold, mean or unfriendly she's being towards you, use humor to get her out of a bad mood, make her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your emotional masculinity), her feelings for you will automatically change.

You won't waste time and energy trying to convince her to give you another chance because she will want to give you another chance for her own reasons.

She will feel drawn to you and it will feel good to her to hug you again, kiss you, have sex with you and say, "I love you" again.

It will be a fun experience to go through the ex back process with you now that she's attracted to you again.

On the other hand, if you keep making the same old mistakes that you've been making so far, she'll just keep thinking, "He doesn't get it. He doesn't know what I need him to change to make me want him again. I'm not wasting anymore of my time on him."

She then closes up and loses interest in communicating with him, having her number stored in her phone or keeping him as a friend on social media.

She decides that she will just have to move on and find someone else, before she makes the mistake of getting back into a relationship with a guy who hasn't even really changed.

So, make sure that you really do change the things about you that were turning her off (e.g. insecurity, emotional sensitiveness, lack of emotional masculinity) to avoid turning her off from now on.

When she can see for herself that you're not reacting like she's expecting you to (e.g. begging and pleading, asking her to tell you what to do to make her happy, hoping that she will take pity on you), she will become open to talking things out with you because she will have reconnected with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again.

Another possible reason why your ex isn't willing to talk things out and let you know what went wrong is because

2. She doesn't want to teach you how to get her back

[image: She doesn't want to teach you how to get her back]

In some cases, a woman won't want to give her guy a clear reason why she's breaking up with him because she doesn't want to teach him or help him understand how to get her back.

So, to keep things vague and unhelpful, she might say something along the lines of, "This just isn't working out anymore," or "My feelings for you have changed. I think we need to take some time apart from each other to see if this relationship is worth fighting for."

Her guy might then start pleading with her to tell him what has been turning her off and what he needs to change to make her happy.

Yet, rather than make a woman think, "Okay, he's really trying here. He obviously wants to change and improve, so I'll give him a list of all the things about him that have been turning me off to help him become the man I need him to be," she will think something like, "I can't believe that after everything that happened between us, he still doesn't know what went wrong. He needs me to tell him how to behave like a real man now so I will give him another chance. Doesn't he realize that I'm tired of having to help him understand how to be the kind of man that I want? I've tried for so long and I'm now at the point where I've just given up on him. I'm tired of trying to make things work with him. I want a relationship that just works naturally because the guy understands how to be a real man in a relationship. I have to get away from him. I have to move on."

Here's the thing!

Even though your intentions with her are good (i.e. you really want to know what you've been doing wrong, so you can then quickly improve and become the man she wants you to be), asking your ex to tell you what to fix is one of the quickest way to turn her off even more.

Why?

If a woman has to tell her guy how to attract her, it just won't feel real to her.

In the back of her mind, she will think something like, "He's just putting on an act to make me feel better, so I give him another chance. I don't want a guy who is like a robot that follows my instructions and does whatever I say. How does he even know that I will tell him the right things? Why would he put his trust in a woman to take care of him and guide him? Doesn't he realize that I could just take advantage of him and tell him to behave in ways that aren't even about being a real man? It's just too tiring and annoying and confusing with him. I want a real man who knows how to be a man without my help and guidance. I have to move on now before he gets me back into a relationship and wastes more of my time."

This is why it's very important that you stop asking your ex to talk things out and let you know what went wrong.

She doesn't want to be your teacher or guide.

She wants you to find the answers yourself and just start being the kind of man that she can respect and feel attracted to.

For example: Ask yourself!

- Did I feel like I got lucky with my ex, which then caused me to feel insecure about losing her?
- Did I go from being a confident guy, to becoming a clingy, needy or jealous guy over time?
- Did I stop making her feel like my sexy girl and instead started treating her more like a neutral friend or roommate?
- Was I too much of a pushover with her by allowing her to get away with bad behavior, which caused her to feel unsafe with me because she could see that I didn't know how to stand up for myself?
- Did I become too aggressive or angry when standing up to her, rather than putting her back in her place in a loving, but dominant way like a real man would?
- Did I get on well with her friends and family, or was there always a fair bit of awkwardness and negative tension, so she felt like she had to choose between me or them?
- Did we want the same things in the relationship (e.g. a serious commitment, to have fun, to focus on career), or were we going in completely different directions in life?
- Was I a man of my word, or did I let her down one time too many times?
- Did I spend way too much time on my work or studies and not give her enough attention?
- Did I spend too much time playing video games or hanging out with my buddies, which then made her feel unappreciated?
- Did I turn her off by being insecure and shy in social situations, especially around confident people?
- Did I give her too much power in the relationship, to the point where she no longer felt respect and attraction for me and lost interest in sex?
- Did I take away too much of her power by being overly controlling, which then made her want to reclaim her sense of freedom?

Some of those questions may ring a bell for you and help you understand what really turned her off and made her want to leave the relationship.

From this moment onwards, it's essential that you begin to get to the core of why you acted in that way, so you can fix it immediately.

Then, when you interact with her and show her (via your actions and behavior) that you've taken action to change without her help, she will automatically feel some respect for you again.

If she can respect you, it means that you can then build on that initial spark and make her reconnect with her feelings of sexual attraction and love as well.

On the other hand, if you keep nagging her by saying things like, "Please, let's just talk things out. Please tell me what went wrong. I am willing to do whatever it takes or even worse, you try to get her discuss it all via text, she's just going to keep saying, 'No. I don't want to talk about it. Leave me alone. It's over.'"

Another possible reason why your ex isn't willing to talk things out and let you know what went wrong is because

3. She's embarrassed to admit the kind of attraction experience she really wants from a man

Although a woman might be independent, have a career and is in a position of power in her professional life, in a relationship she usually wants an emotionally strong man who will allow her to truly relax into being a feminine woman around him.

Being feminine means that she will cry, change her mind about things all the time, get upset over little things, be happy one minute and moody the next and so on.

If a guy is able to remain confident and in control of his emotions no matter what she says or does, she will respect him for that.

If he's also able to laugh at her when she throws a tantrum or gets angry all of a sudden, she will love him for it.

She will then show him a sweet, loving, warm and affectionate side of herself that she never reveals to other guys.

That's not because women are crazy, a pain in the ass or intentionally being difficult to win over.

There is a very important reason for women behaving in that way with a man when in a relationship.

What is that reason?

It makes men stronger.

One of the most important roles that a woman plays in a man's life is to make him become emotionally stronger all the time.

She does this out of a natural instinct to ensure that her man has the ability to protect her from danger and not be bullied or taken advantage of by mean or difficult people.

If her man doesn't feel intimidated by her, doesn't get upset when she changes her mood like the weather and doesn't get angry if she gets angry, she will feel attracted to him and in love with him on a deep, primal level.

She will not want to leave him because she will know (especially if she's had experience with relationships) that other guys simply do not have that kind of emotional strength and emotional masculinity.

Of course, this isn't something that a woman will admit to her man.

Most women don't feel comfortable coming out and admitting what they want these days, especially because of all the women's lib stuff she reads about or sees on TV.

Most women in the media talk about being strong and acting like a man, but it's not what they really want to be like in a relationship with a man.

A woman really wants to be free to be a girl around her man.

That is what makes her the happiest and most in love.

So, if a woman is in a relationship with a guy who hands over his power to her and expect her to take the lead like a man, she will be deeply upset and turned off by him.

Additionally, if he expects her to be emotionally consistent like a man, she will feel like she has to break up with him and find a man who understands how to make a woman feel like a real woman.

Of course, almost all women are embarrassed to admit that kind of thing to a man because they don't want a man to then accuse her of being stupid, crazy or childish.

So, rather than be made to feel that way, she just breaks up with him and tries to find a real man who will let her be a real woman.

Here's the thing:

Many modern women go around saying that they can do anything that a man can do, but they are still instinctively attracted to and respectful of a man who is more emotionally dominant than they are.

This doesn't mean that she wants a man who pushes her around and bullies her, is controlling and domineering and doesn't take her opinions or feelings into consideration.

It's simply means that she wants her man to be the emotionally stronger one who takes on the role of leading the way in the relationship, so she can then relax and feel like a feminine woman around him.

If he constantly keeps handing the reigns over to her and saying things like, Whatever you decide is fine with me, or I'll do whatever you want. As long as you're happy that's all I care about, she won't be able to relax and be girly, get emotional and focus on being in love with him.

As a result, she loses respect and attraction for him as a man and that usually leads to her breaking up with him pretty quickly.

Then, after the break up, if he continues to put her in control by saying things like, Please let's talk things out so that you can let me know what went wrong, it turns her off even more.

He doesn't realize that she doesn't want to have to come out and admit that he's not emotionally dominant enough for her.

She doesn't want him to take it the wrong way and start being an asshole or treating her badly, because he doesn't know how to be emotionally dominant in a loving way.

She just doesn't want to take that risk, so she tries to move on.

Another possible reason why your ex isn't willing to talk things out and let you know what went wrong is because

4. She might have cheated on you and doesn't want to admit it

[image: She cheated on you and doesn't want to admit it]

When her ex starts saying things like, Let's talk about what went wrong. Maybe we can work things out. Please just talk to me she isn't going to want to open up and tell him that she cheated on him and then risk him getting angry at her.

Instead, she hopes that the less she opens up to him, the faster he will give up and move on without her.

When a guy can't seem to get a straight answer from his ex woman, he might decide that he has to give her some space (e.g. 30 to 60 days).

Yet, as you will discover from the video above, giving a woman a lot of space after a break up rarely results in getting her back.

If your ex did cheat on you and you want her back, then you have to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you, so she actually has a reason to give you another chance.

After cheating, a woman will often feel disconnected from her ex because of the attraction she felt from the guy she cheated on him with.

To get her back, you've got to get her to reconnect with her feelings as soon as you can, rather than giving her loads of space and hoping that she will come back on her own.

In many cases, a guy won't know what else to do, so he will give his ex woman a lot of space.

Yet, when he eventually calls her (e.g. 30 to 60 days later), he is disappointed to hear her say something like, â€œSorry, but it's over between you and me now. Iâ€™m in a new relationship and I'm happy, so itâ€™s pointless for us to talk things out and discuss what went wrong in our relationship. Whatâ€™s done is done and thereâ€™s no reason to go over that now. You have to move on and leave me alone. Goodbye.â€

He then has to deal with getting her back from another guy.

Additionally, if she did cheat on him prior to the break up, she can now avoid admitting that and use his lack of contact after the break up as a reason why she moved on.

So, if you want your ex back the easy way, don't make the mistake of giving her loads of time to move on.

You can re-attract her very quickly if you approach it correctly.

A final possible reason why your ex isn't willing to talk things out and let you know what went wrong is becauseâ€¦!

5. She feels like you'd just talk her into getting back with you, but the same relationship problems would still exist

When a man is very charming and persuasive during conversation, he can sometimes talk an ex woman into giving him yet another chance, even though he hasn't really changed.

If she has fallen for that trick before, she will be less likely to fall for it again.

In cases like that, a woman will try to avoid her ex and refuse to talk things out with him to ensure that he can't somehow manipulate her into giving him another chance.

She knows that even though he has a lot of good qualities, he just doesn't understand how to really change the dynamic in the relationship to make her truly happy.

For example: She might want him to be more assertive and make more decisions in the relationship, but heâ€™s too easy going and doesn't want to take on that kind of responsibility or be so serious about life.

Alternatively, she might want him to stop putting up with her fake drama and letting her control him, but he might think that it's the right thing to do to always be nice to a woman and do whatever she says.

Another example is if the woman wants him to be more socially confident, so they can lead a more interesting life, but he isn't putting in any effort to overcome his social shyness or he doesn't see the need for socializing.

Rather than try to fix him or change him, she just tries to move on.

She doesn't want to open her heart to him, only to get hurt once again when he makes her feel unhappy and unfulfilled for the same or similar reasons.

So, the first step to getting your ex back is to identify the problems that existed in your relationship and then take action to fix and change those things about yourself.

Then, the next time you interact with your ex (e.g. on a phone call, or in person) she will be able to see that youâ€”re not just trying to convince her to give you another chance without even changing.

You have already changed and she can now envision a much happier, brighter future with you.

Once you make her feel that way, don't make the mistake of wanting to keep discussing the relationship.

Don't make the process of getting back with you feel difficult or stressful for her.

Make her feel attracted, happy and alive when she interacts with you and she will naturally want to give you another chance.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Lies to Me When I Ask Her What She's Been Up to Lately

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex lies to you when you ask her what she's been up to are that:

1. She doesn't want to open back up to you because she knows that you still haven't changed

[image: She can see that you still haven't changed]

When a woman stays in contact with her ex (e.g. via text messages, talking to him on the phone, or seeing him in person from time to time), it's easy for her to pick up on whether or not he has really changed and improved since the break up, or if he's stayed the same.

It's not something that he needs to tell her.

She picks up on it based on her observations of him during a conversation or interaction and decides for herself whether or not he truly has changed.

He might tell her that he has changed, but if she senses that he hasn't, her guard will remain up.

So, he has to show her the changes, not tell her.

If he can't do that, guard will remain up.

As a result, she won't feel like telling him what she's been up to lately, or if she has any plans because she doesn't want him getting involved in her life.

For example: A woman might decide that she just wants to spend some time alone and not do much over a particular weekend.

If her ex then asks her, "What are you doing this weekend? Do you have any plans?" she might say, "Yes. I'm going out with some of my friends to this new club."

She's lying to him because if she tells him that she's staying home alone, she fears that he may think, "Excellent! That must mean she's still hurt about our break up and doesn't feel like going out."

He might then start asking her how she feels about him now and if she's open to giving him another chance, to which she will say, "No" because she can see that he still hasn't even changed yet.

Likewise, if she did tell him the truth about staying home for the weekend on her own, he might then say, "Well, if you're not busy and I'm not doing anything either, why don't we meet up and do something together?"

To avoid getting seduced back into a relationship with a guy who hasn't really even changed, she will just lie and say she has plans.

So, if you want your ex to be more open towards you from now on, it's very important that you use every interaction you have with her (on the phone and in person) as a way to show her the new and improved you.

For example: When you ask her what she's been up to lately and she openly lies to you, or gives you a vague answer like, â€œOh, not much,â€ rather than getting upset or annoyed with her, choose instead to display confidence by turning it into a joke you can laugh about together.

You might say something like, â€œNot much, hey? Wow, youâ€™ve been doing a lot of not much lately. It must be a lot of fun doing that. I’ll call you Little Miss Not Much from now onâ€ and have a laugh with her about that.

She will most likely feel a bit shocked by your confident reaction to her vague response of, “Not much” and try to hide the fact that it makes her feel some respect and attraction for you again.

However, she won’t be able to stop herself from continuing to feel waves of respect and attraction for you again for being so confident around her.

As a result, she will believe that you have changed without you even having to tell her.

She will experience the changes for herself (e.g. you’re more confident and ballsy now, while still being funny and being a good guy) and she will feel differently about you as a result.

The more she can see the real changes in you, the less she will want to lie to you about what she’s doing because she doesn’t want to mess up what you and her now have.

As a result, she becomes more open to the idea of you being a part of her life again and stops trying to shut you out.

By the way!

Don’t try to do this via TEXT.

If you ask your ex what she has been up to via text, rather than on a phone call or in person, she won’t feel any pressure to answer right away or give much detail.

Also, it will likely give her the impression that you’re too nervous and insecure to call her on the phone, which will reinforce her belief that you still haven’t changed.

Additionally, jokes via text can easily be misinterpreted as you being arrogant, cocky or rude.

Her replies can also seem very angry, when in fact she’s smiling, laughing and feeling attracted.

In other words, text is no good for a situation like yours.

Make sure that you get her on a phone call with you, or meet up with her somewhere, so you can attract her in person and avoid any misunderstandings via text.

Another possible reason why your ex lies to you when you ask her what she’s been up to is because!

2. She’s been seeing someone else and doesn’t have the heart to tell you about it yet

[image: She is seeing someone else, but doesn't have the heart to tell you about it yet]

Sometimes, a woman moves on quickly after a break up and notices that her ex is having a difficult time getting over her and moving on himself.

So, rather than hurt his feelings even more by telling him she’s with another guy already, she will lie to him as a way of letting him down easy.

Alternatively, a woman might fear that her ex will lose it if she tells him that she’s seeing someone else (e.g. he becomes angry and makes a scene, he becomes overly emotional and maybe even starts crying and saying things like, “How can you do this to me?” and “My life is finished. I’ll never get over this! You have destroyed my trust in women. Congratulations. You’ve ruined me.”)

So, rather than causing drama, a woman might decide that it’s just easier (and safer) for her to lie about what she’s been up to lately.

She then hopes that he’ll gradually give up on asking her questions and move on, or get angry at her for lying to him and then declare that he’s never going to speak to her ever again.

Another possible reason why your ex lies to you when you ask her what she’s been up to is because

3. She’s testing to see how you react

After a break up, a woman can still have some feelings for her ex and secretly want him back, but she won’t show him that.

Instead, she will test his confidence (the most attractive thing about a man to a woman) to see how emotionally strong he really is.

For example: If she lies to him about something obvious, knowing that he will find out (e.g. because he’s heard about what she’s been doing from friends or mutual acquaintances) and he then calls her up in a jealous fit, being emotional and saying things like, “How could you lie to me? How could you be so cold? Did you ever really love me, or was it all just fake?” she will see his true colors.

If one of the main reasons why she dumped him was due to the fact that he became too insecure and emotionally sensitive, she will see that nothing has changed.

He hasn’t moved beyond the level he was at when she broke up with him and as a result, she will keep trying to move on without him.

On the other hand, if he finds out that she lied to him and confidently makes a joke about it instead, she will be able to feel respect and attraction for him.

For example: If he says something along the lines of, “Hey Pinocchio, how are you doing today?” and then has a laugh with her for lying to him, not only will she feel attracted to him for handling the situation like a real man, she will also likely feel a bit ashamed for lying to him too.

As long as he is joking when referring to her as Pinocchio (or possibly as Little Miss Naughty, or Little Miss Liar Liar Pants on Fire) for lying to him, she will see it as funny.

However, if he is being emotionally sensitive about it and appears hurt and upset about it, then she’s going to be turned off by him.

Essentially, what a woman wants to see from a man is that he can be confident and joke around with her, while still being respectful and being a good guy.

The less you let her naughty behavior get to you (while still being a good guy), the more attracted to you she will become.

As a result, she will automatically stop feeling the need to lie to you so much and will open back up to having an honest relationship with you again (even if it’s just a flirtatious friendship to begin with).

When you're flirting with her, making her feel attracted and building up sexual tension between you and her, it's only natural that the relationship will get back together.

She will want it just as much as you do.

Then, getting her back becomes a matter of you taking the lead and just making it happen.

Another possible reason why your ex lies to you when you ask her what she's been up to is because

4. She doesn't want to hurt you or make you jealous by telling you about all the fun she's been having

[image: She doesn't want to hurt you or make you jealous]

In a case where a woman broke up with a guy because he was too jealous and controlling, she will usually avoid giving him too many details about what she's doing, now that they are apart.

Essentially, she doesn't want to have to tell him that she's having fun, living a good life and possibly even meeting and hooking up with new men, because she doesn't want to get into a long, emotional argument, or heated debate with him about it.

In some cases, a woman may even be afraid that her ex might start stalking her if she tells him where she's going, or possibly even become violent with her and attack her in a jealous rage.

We've all seen those news stories, right?

Women fear that kind of thing happening to them.

You might not ever do that kind of thing, but a woman still fears it happening to her, so she will usually try to be careful about what she says or does after a break up.

Alternatively, if a woman's ex is insecure, needy and has low self-esteem, she might avoid telling him the truth about what she's doing, because she doesn't want him to start making her feel guilty for moving on with her life without him.

For example: He says things like, "How could you move on so quickly? Did what we had together matter to you at all? How can you be over us so quickly? Did I mean nothing to you? Fine, I see your true colors now. You are a horrible person. I hope you get what's coming to you. As they say, what goes around comes around. So, I hope some guy dumps you and hurts you badly. Goodbye!"

Here's the thing

Although a guy might sometimes feel as though his ex should tell him everything because they were in a relationship before, the truth is, she doesn't have to anymore.

What they had together is over now.

She doesn't have feelings for him and what she does with her life is essentially none of his business anymore.

It sucks to hear that (especially if your ex woman says it to you), but it's the truth.

She's an individual and can do whatever she wants, just like you are an individual and can do whatever you want.

If you want her back, you have to focus on making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again, so she has a selfish reason to give you another chance (i.e. she feels attracted to you again, the relationship doesn't feel finished, she wants to experience what it would be like to be with you now that you've changed so much, she doesn't want another woman taking her place now that she wants you back).

A final reason why your ex might lie to you when you ask her what she's been up to is

5. She doesn't want you showing up where she is at right now, or where she is going to be

Sometimes, a guy will go to any lengths to get his woman back, even if that means showing up uninvited at her work, at a party, a bar or a club that she's at.

He will hope that if he shows up, she will feel obligated to talk to him and he will then be able to convince her to get back together again (e.g. by telling her how much he loves her and that he misses her, by promising her that he will change).

Yet, as you will discover from the video above, trying to convince a woman to give you another chance just doesn't work if you're not making her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you.

So, rather than trying to find out what your ex is doing now that you and her are apart, I recommend that you simply focus on reawakening her feelings for you.

There's nothing wrong with asking her how she is and what she's been up to since you and her split up, as long as you are being easy-going about it and as long as you don't get upset when she doesn't want to tell you certain details.

If you seem tense and like you are putting pressure on her to give you lots of little details about where she's going and who she's going with, it will make you look jealous and insecure in her eyes and she will feel turned off.

The bottom line is this

Don't waste anymore time worrying about whether or not your ex lies to you when you ask her what she's been up to lately, because that only keeps you stuck in a place where you feel hurt, betrayed and jealous, which is unattractive to her.

If you want her back, a better way to go about it is by becoming emotionally independent of her.

That means that although you really do want her back, you don't actually need her back to live a happy, exciting and enjoyable life.

When she finds out that you've been living a fun life without her, she will naturally feel curious and possibly even a bit jealous.

Then, when you meet up with her in person and she experiences your newfound confidence and emotional strength for herself, her guard will come down even further.

She will find herself feeling waves of respect and attraction for you and not wanting the interaction to end.

She will also feel the urge to tell you what she's been up to lately and invite you to do things with her from that moment on.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Talks to Me, But She is Cold and Mean

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

In most cases, there are two main reasons why an ex woman will talk to you, but be cold and mean. Number oneâ€¦!

1. She is being immature

Sometimes, when a woman is really young, doesnâ€™t have much experience with relationships and break ups, or if sheâ€™s emotionally immature, she might not know how to handle a break up in a mature way.

So, rather than just be nice and treat her ex in a mature way, or even just cut off all communication with him and move on peacefully, she continues to talk to him and tries to hurt him by being cold and mean.

[image: She is being immature about the break up]

Naturally, when a woman is behaving like that, it can be quite annoying and even painful for a guy, especially if he still loves her.

A guy might even ask, â€œWhy canâ€™t she get past what happened between us, so we can at least be civil towards each other? I know we broke up, but is that a good enough reason for her to be so mean to me? Besides, Iâ€™m not the only one who made mistakes in the relationship. Part of the blame is hers too. Why canâ€™t she just be nice to me? She used to be so sweet and caring and sheâ€™s like a completely different girl now. She has changed.â€

Although it would be nice if every woman acted nice to her ex after a break up, it just doesn't work out that way.

Watch this video to how you can get her to start being nice, loving and open towards you againâ€¦!

If she is being cold and mean towards you, the best approach to take is to not get dragged into any drama or appear upset or hurt.

You've got to remain emotionally strong, emotionally masculine and emotionally mature, so she can feel respect and attraction for you.

Show her that you're a confident, emotionally strong man by:

- Laughing at her attempts to be mean, rather than being so serious about it.
- Standing up to her (in a dominant, but loving way) when she tries to make you feel bad by continually bringing up past mistakes.
- Remaining confident no matter what she says or does, rather than feeling insecure and pleading with her to be nicer to you.
- Playfully dominating her during interactions, rather than being timid, uncertain or hesitant to take on the role as the man.

When you change how you interact with her and how you respond to what she says and does, she will automatically begin to change how she behaves as well.

Being a bitch towards you will start to feel wrong to her because you're making her feel so attracted and respectful of you now.

As a result, she starts to ask herself things like, *â€œShould I keep being cold and mean? Maybe he'll get tired of it and I'll lose him. Maybe another girl will feel attracted to the new version of him and he'll get with her instead. Okay, I've got to start being nicer to him.*â€œ

Her behavior then changes and you can then get her back by remaining confident no matter what she says or does.

The other main reason why your ex might be talking to you, but being cold and mean isâ€œ

2. She is trying to make you hate her so you leave her alone

Sometimes, a woman will do whatever she can to make her ex hate her, so he will get over her and not try to get her back anymore.

So, rather than giving him false hope and make him think things like, *â€œShe's being so sweet to me on the phone. She must still have real feelings for me. I think she's just playing a hard to get, to avoid looking too easy,*â€œ she instead decides to kill his hope by being cold and mean every time she talks to him.

Of course, a lot of guys might then ask, *â€œDoes that mean I should give up on ever getting her back? Is it hopeless?*â€œ

No.

You should not give up and itâ€œs definitely not hopeless.

You can get her back.

Most ex back situations (even the ones where an ex woman hates her ex) can be turned around if a guy uses the right approach (i.e. focuses on making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to him again).

You can do it.

Of course, if your ex is being mean and is going out of her way to push you away, it might be difficult to imagine ever being able to convince her to give you another chance, right?

Don't worry â€œ you can do it.

The solution is actually quite easy and simple.

What you need to do is re-spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you by getting her laughing and smiling, especially when she is being mean or cold towards you.

Then, let her see that the new and improved you is for real.

How can you do that?

By interacting with her on the phone and in person and responding to what she says and does in a different way that you have before.

For example: Rather than getting upset or feeling insecure when she is being mean or cold towards you, let her see a different reaction from now on.

Laugh at her for being cold and mean towards you and jokingly say things like, *â€œHey, stop being such a little brat, or else I'll have to bend you over my knee and spank you.*â€œ

Alternatively, you might laugh and jokingly say, “Oh no! you’re so mean. I’m so hurt by that. Please be nicer to me. I can’t take it anymore. You’re breaking my heart” and laugh with her about that as you pretend to be heartbroken.

Alternatively, you might laugh and jokingly say, “Well, someone’s a little meany today, aren’t they? Your new name is Little Miss Nasty” and have a laugh with her about that.

When you say something like that, your ex will feel a bit shocked that you suddenly grew a pair of balls and stood up to her in a dominant, but loving way.

Warning: To test your confidence, she might act like she’s angry with you for laughing and saying something like that to her.

If you apologize and back down, she will see that you were just pretending to be a confident, emotionally masculine guy, but you’re not.

She will then lose respect for you.

However, if you laugh and jokingly say something like, “Oh, you’re so sensitive, aren’t you? Everything has to be said really nicely and gently to you. You’re so soft” she will respect you for not backing down, but for also being a good guy about (because you’re joking).

Women react positively to that, especially if they have been trying to act tough, confident and independent.

She doesn’t to seem soft and fragile like a girl, so she will have to accept your humor and not be so sensitive about it.

Even though she probably won’t admit it to you, she will be thinking something like, “I didn’t think he would ever have the balls to stand up to me like that. I like it. It’s sexy. He really has changed. I wonder what else about him is different? If he talks like this to other girls, they will like him and want him, so I better give him another chance before I lose the opportunity.”

Warning: She might then try to test you again by pretending to be interested in getting back together and then being cold and mean once again.

She will be testing to see if your confidence was just an act, or if you really have changed.

So, make sure that you don’t buckle under her pressure at any time.

Just know that it’s in her best interests to test your confidence to decide if you are now man enough to handle a girl like her.

So, expect the tests, be ready and don’t worry.

You can pass her tests easily by not taking them so seriously.

Just laugh at her attempts to be mean to you and she will respect you.

When she sees that you maintain your confidence around her no matter how badly she behaves, her walls will come down and she will stop trying to get away from you.

3 Mistakes to Avoid When Trying to Get an Ex Woman Back Who is Being Cold and Mean

When a guy still has feelings for his ex and she’s being cold and mean, it can often cause him to behave in ways that are totally out of character for him (e.g. desperate, anxious, stressed, angry, highly emotional).

As a result, he ends up turning his ex woman off even more because women are naturally turned off by emotional weakness and desperation in men.

So, if you want to get your ex back, you have to make sure that you remain emotionally strong and calm as you get her back.

Here are 3 classic mistakes that guys make when in your situation!

1. Telling her how sad and confused he is based on how she is treating him

A guy might say, “Why are you being so mean to me like we are almost enemies now? Doesn’t what we shared mean anything to you? You used to be so nice and loving. What happened to that girl? Why can’t you just be a bit friendlier when we talk? Remember how happy we used to be. You used to be so nice to me. I can’t handle the thought of knowing that you hate me so much now. It hurts me deeply. What can I do to make you forgive me? Just name it and I’ll do it, but please stop treating me like this. You know that I deserve better. It’s not fair that you’re being like this.”

He’s hoping that by saying something like that to her, she will then feel guilty for being so cold and mean to him and be nicer from then on.

As a result, he will then be able to communicate with her without having to get into arguments and feel so frustrated, which will help him get her back easier.

Yet, that’s just not how women are designed to work.

One of the most important roles that a woman plays in a man’s life is to continually push him to become emotionally stronger.

It’s not her role to be soft, nice and gentle when he really needs to man up and stop being so sensitive and weak.

The reality is that her being cold and mean to him is a huge opportunity for him to rapidly build his emotional strength and maturity.

If he does that, he will be naturally attractive to her, but if he doesn’t, she will continue to feel turned off and won’t want to be nice and make it easy for him to get her back.

Here’s the thing!

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her ex, she usually stops caring about how he feels to ensure that she doesn’t feel sympathy for him and get back with him when she sees him hurting as a result of the break up.

So, when he tries to make her feel guilty for her behavior, it doesn’t work.

Instead, she looks at his emotional desperation as another reason to continue treating him badly and moving on.

So, don’t bother telling your ex how sad and confused you feel because of the way she’s treating you.

If you do, she will most likely laugh and pump up the bad treatment even more.

A better way to approach the situation is to simply focus instead on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

When you do that, she then has a reason to be nicer to you (i.e. she feels attracted to you, is worried about losing you, doesn't feel like the relationship is over anymore).

Another mistake that guys make when their ex is being cold and mean isâ□|

2. Taking her cold behavior too seriously

[image: Taking her cold behavior too seriously]

When a guy's ex is being cold and mean, he might make the mistake of getting very angry at her.

Alternatively, he might make the mistake of taking her cold behavior too seriously, rather than using it as an opportunity to make her feel respect and attraction for him by using humor to get her laughing and smiling.

For example: Imagine a guy is talking to his ex on the phone and she gets angry and says something like, â□□ Why do you keep calling me? What do you want?â□□

Instead of using humor to break her out of her bad mood and deflect her serious comments, a guy will often make the mistake of saying something like, â□□ Why are you being like this? What's wrong with you? I'm just calling to see how youâ□□re doing. I still care about you, you know? Obviously you don't care about me anymore.â□□

Although the guy means well and is trying to make a point, it's just not what works with women.

With women, you've got to be emotionally strong and not take her attacks seriously.

Look at her as though she is a tiny little thing trying to act mean.

As a result, you see her as being cute, vulnerable and harmless.

You can laugh at her for attempting to seem mean and tough.

She's no match for you.

That's how you have to look at a woman to put her back in her place.

Don't be an asshole about it though.

Always do it in a loving way.

You look at her as being cute and harmless, but you still treat her with respect and be a good guy to her.

That is what works.

What also works is humor, because it shows that you're not taking her threatening behavior so seriously or feeling intimidated by it.

For example: If she says, â□□ Why do you keep calling me? What do you want?â□□ a guy can say in a joking tone of voice, â□□ Oops, my bad. I thought this was Pizza Hut. I want a double cheese and bacon pizza. Can you make it for me?â□□ and have a laugh with her about it.

A woman will then most likely laugh (or at least smile) and feel respect for him for being confident enough to turn her bad manners into something positive, light and funny.

She will then start to feel like a real woman around him (i.e. feminine, girly in comparison to how masculine he is, in love) and feel magnetically drawn to him.

A final mistake that guys make when their ex is being cold and mean isâ□|

3. Hoping that if he treats her even nicer, she will take pity on him and stop being so mean

[image: Don't suck up to your ex as a way of getting her back]

As you may have realized by now if you've been reading along, it's not a woman's role (in a romantic relationship) to be nicer to an emotionally weak man.

A man has to toughen up or suffer the consequences of being dumped.

Women don't need to be nicer and more gentle because that would only send mankind down a road of weakness, which then reduces our toughness and ability to survive and defend ourselves from attack.

We men always have to become stronger (emotionally), rather than hoping that women will get weaker.

A lot of guys don't know that or don't want to accept it, so they complain to their woman or complain about women who are so hard on guys.

For example: Sometimes, a guy will hope that being extra nice to his ex woman who is being cold and mean, will make her feel guilty and selfish for being so mean.

From then on, she will be gentle, nice and sweet to make it up to him.

Yet, it just doesn't work like that in real life.

It works in the movies and on TV shows, but that isn't real life.

In the real world, a woman doesn't want to be manipulated into giving her ex another chance simply because he can't deal with the way she's treating him.

Additionally, when a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her ex, how he feels just doesn't really matter to her anymore.

So, when a guy treats his ex woman even nicer (e.g. helping her in any way he can, being on his best behavior) as a way of getting her to feel pity for him, rather than make her change her mind, she just uses his desperation as another reason to feel turned off and continue moving on.

Don't put yourself in that unfortunate situation.

There is much easier way to handle her coldness, warm her back up and get her back.

When your ex talks to you, but is being cold and mean, just use it as an opportunity to spark her feelings for you.

For example: Be assertive, but loving and stand up to her.

Let her see that you aren't intimidated or feeling insecure now that she's acting mean.

Instead, you see it as cute because she's just a woman and is no match for you.

You don't tell her that by the way.

Just let her feel it based on how you can laugh and not take her attacks so seriously, like you used to.

When she sees you reacting in that way, it will make her feel attracted to your confidence in yourself.

She might not ever admit it to you, but watching you have an unquestioned confidence in your attractiveness and appeal to her is a massive turn on for her (and for pretty much any woman on the planet).

Women don't admit it because they don't want guys acting like they are confident in their attractiveness to women all of a sudden.

Women want to hook up with and be with a man who naturally understands that women are most attracted to men who don't doubt themselves.

When she sees that you have that kind of confidence in yourself now, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling attracted to you.

Her iciness will begin melt and she will soon be putty in your hands once again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Won't Commit to the Idea of Coming Back to Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible reasons why your ex won't commit to the idea of coming back to you are that:

1. You're asking for a relationship before you've reactivated her feelings

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she's usually going to do whatever she needs to do to get over him as quickly as possible.

Part of that process is about trying to keep all the negative things about him fresh in her mind and all the positive things out of her mind.

For example: Rather than think things like, "We really did have some good times together. Maybe if I give him another chance, things will be better this time," she will say to herself, "Just remember how badly he hurt you. Remember all the times he promised to change and then broke his word to you. He doesn't deserve another chance. You have to find yourself a new guy who isn't stuck at his level. He's not man enough for you yet. Move on."

So, if the guy then comes along and says, "Let's get back together again," before he has even done anything to properly reactivate her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him, she's just going to say something like, "I can't make that decision right now. I need more time to think about it."

Here's the thing:

In most cases, a guy will be unable to convince his ex to commit to a relationship again, simply based on what he is offering her or promising her.

A woman will often accept that approach initially, but if her guy has done it before, she will know that he's most likely just offering her empty promises once again.

She will realize that he doesn't really know how or what to change to make her feel the kind of respect, attraction and love she really wants in a relationship.

So, rather than waste more time with him and have to go through another break up in a few days, weeks or months, she will just say no to the idea of coming back to him.

What should you do instead?

[image: Reignite her feelings during interactions]

Reignite her some of her romantic feelings for you by showing her that you've changed the way you talk, behave respond to what she says and does.

When you do that, the most important thing of all happens:

She feels differently around you.

Rather than feeling turned off and having to keep her guard up, she feels a renewed sense of respect for you and then allows her guard to come down a little.

This then allows her to start feeling attracted to you again.

As a result, you can then build on her feelings and get her back.

Where some guys go wrong is assuming that getting into long, serious discussions about the relationship is the best way to convince a woman to change her mind and want the relationship.

Then, when that approach doesn't get her back, a guy might make the additional mistake of begging and pleading.

He might say something like, "Please, just give me one more chance. I promise I'm going to change and be the guy you want me to be. Please! Please, just give me a chance."

Yet, that approach usually doesn't work.

Why?

It's a turn off, so she just goes ahead and adds "emotionally weak and wimpy" to her list of things about him that she already finds unattractive.

He's just making the situation worse by displaying behaviors (e.g. emotional weakness) that naturally make a woman feel turned off sexually and romantically.

What should you do instead?

Interact with her (on the phone and in person) and focus on making her smile, laugh and feel happy in reaction to your confident, emotionally masculine and charismatic approach.

Don't worry it's easy to do.

By making some attractive adjustments to your behavior and to the way that you talk and interact with her (e.g. staying confident even when she's being cold and distant towards you, using humor to diffuse a tense situation, not taking her indecisiveness too seriously), being around you suddenly becomes fun, interesting and attractive to her.

Her defenses come down and she can't stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again.

Then, all the positive things about you that she's hidden away in the depths of her mind, come back to the surface and make an appearance.

She looks at you differently and begins to think something like, "Maybe getting back together is actually a good thing after all. Maybe we can make it work this time. Maybe the break up was supposed to happen so we could get to this place. I want to try again. I feel good about this."

Then, if you ask her to commit to the idea of coming back to you, she's more likely to say, "Yes" because her heart is open and she is feeling attracted to you again.

Another possible reason why your ex won't commit to the idea of coming back to you is because

2. You're trying to get her to commit via text

Sometimes, a guy will be too afraid to call his ex in case she tells him to leave her alone, or if she's cold and unfriendly towards him, so he will decided to just stay in touch with her via text.

For example: He might pour his heart out to her in a series of text messages (or in some cases in a written letter or e-mail) and say things like, "I know I messed up, but please give me one more chance. You mean the world to me and I regret hurting you so much. I know that if you come back to *me, I will treat you like a princess this time and do whatever I can to make you happy. Nothing you ask for will be too much for me. I promise you that things will be different this time. Please just give me a chance to prove myself to you. You and I shared a special connection and I don't think we should just throw that away. Please consider giving us another chance. I love you more than anything.*â□□

Yet, in most cases, rather than make a woman think, â□□ *Oh, how sweet and romantic of him. It must mean that really loves me and that he is the one. Okay, Iâ□□ll go back to him and we'll live happily ever after now*â□□ it usually turns her off even more.

Why?

Firstly, when a woman has disconnected herself from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy (i.e. because he turned her off and she then disconnected from her remaining feelings to then break up with him and move on), him pouring his heart out to her isnâ□□t going to re-spark those feelings inside of her.

Instead, itâ□□s usually going to make her see him in an even more negative light because he appears to be behaving in a needy, emotionally weak and desperate way, which is a turn off for most women.

Secondly, a text message is just a bunch of random words on a screen and donâ□□t have the same impact as words spoken over the phone, or in person, where a woman can hear the tone in a guyâ□□s voice, observe his body language and assess his state of mind.

For example: Is he emotionally strong and self-assured or is he insecure, nervous and self-doubting? Is he able to laugh and remain confident when she tests him by being cold or even rude, or does he become nervous and tongue-tied?

Only when she can hear you or see you for herself, will she be able to get a clear picture of who you are now and see if youâ□□ve actually changed or are still the same guy she broke up with.

So, if your ex wonâ□□t commit to the idea of coming back to you, it may be because youâ□□ve been trying to get her back via text.

If thatâ□□s the case, donâ□□t worry about it.

The important thing now is that you change your approach and get her on a phone call with you right away.

On a phone call, you can break down her defenses (i.e. by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again) and get her to meet up with you in person.

In person, she can observe your confident body language and see that you really are a new and improved man now.

When she can see for herself that youâ□□ve changed, she wonâ□□t be able to stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for you, even if she hides it by acting indifferently.

When she is feeling attracted to you again, you don't even need to ask her if she wants to try again because she will be feeling drawn to you and will want to see you again to explore her new, more complex feelings for you.

Another possible reason why your ex wonâ□□t commit to the idea of coming back to you isâ□□!

3. She can see that you still don't understand why she really broke up with you

[image: She can see that you still don't understand why she really broke up with you]

When a guy is trying hard to get his ex back and she just won't commit to the idea of being in a relationship, it can be a heartbreaking, confusing and tiring experience.

Regardless of what he says or does, she is always saying things like, â€œI don't know! I'm just not sure if it's the right thing to do,â€ or â€œI just don't feel ready to make that decision right now. Please give me some more space.â€

When nothing else seems to be working, he might get desperate and resort to sending her flowers (often to her work so that her colleagues can say, â€œWow! Your ex must really love you if he's sending you all these beautiful flowers. Why don't you give the poor guy a break? He seems so nice.â€), buying her gifts (e.g. jewelry, tickets to a special concert or play she's been wanting to go to), or even helping her out financially (e.g. pay her rent or other bills) to make her feel as though she needs him in her life.

He's hoping she will think to herself, â€œWhy am I being so stubborn about all this? He's obviously a wonderful guy. Even though I've not been committing to the idea of getting back with him, he's still there waiting for me patiently and lovingly. I'd be a fool to waste anymore time playing hard to get and risk the chance of losing him.â€

Unfortunately, that's just not how it works because if he hasn't reactivated her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction, she's not going to feel drawn to him in a boyfriend/girlfriend or husband/wife kind of way.

She's going to look at him as an ex that she doesn't have feelings for anymore.

As a result, she will think something like, â€œHe thinks that if he bedazzles me with gifts, flowers and attention, I'm going to forget that he was insecure/needy/jealous/wimpy and weak-minded/took me for granted and I'm then going to go running back to him. Well that's not going to happen â€œ not unless he changes the things that really matter to me. I need to be able to feel attracted and aroused when I am around a guy. Otherwise, there's just no point being in a relationship. I'm going to have to move on as quickly as I can now, to hopefully get him out of the way. He obviously doesn't know what to change or how to change it to make me feel attracted to him again.â€

So, don't make the mistake of feeling entitled to a relationship with her just because you want her back and are being extra nice to her now.

She will only want to commit to being in a relationship with you if she feels enough respect, sexual attraction and love to warrant it.

[image: Show her that you have changed]

If you want her back, you're going to have to earn it by showing her (not telling her) that you really understand her secret reasons for breaking up with you and have already changed those things about yourself.

The question you need to ask yourself is: â€œDo I know her real, secret reasons for breaking up with me?â€

For example:

- Did she feel safe and protected in the relationship (i.e. because you had a definite purpose and direction in life), or did she feel insecure about her future with you (e.g. because you were too emotionally immature and were hiding from your true potential as a man behind hobbies, video games, TV, or just hanging out with her)?
- Did she feel like an attractive, desirable woman in your presence, or did she feel more like your buddy?
- Were you the kind of guy she could proudly introduce to her family and friends, or did she feel embarrassed by you (e.g. because you were insecure, treated her badly, lacked ambition or didn't have good enough social skills to get along with her family and friends)?
- Could she relax and be her real self around you, or did you keep trying to change her core personality and identity?
- Were her expectations of the relationship being fulfilled, or were you just focused on getting what you wanted from the relationship?
- Were you emotionally strong at all times like a real man, or did she feel like she had to take care of you emotionally (e.g. because you were too emotionally sensitive, lacked belief in yourself)?

When you understand why she really ended the relationship, you can then make the correct changes that will make a difference in her heart and mind.

Then, you won't have to force her to commit to the idea of coming back to you.

Instead, it will be something she wants too, without you needing to waste loads of time and energy trying hard to convince her.

She is feeling attracted to you again, so giving you another chance becomes something that she feels good about.

A final possible reason why your ex won't commit to the idea of coming back to you is

4. You haven't gotten her to forgive the old version of you

[image: Get her to forgive the old version of you]

Most guys will apologize to their ex after a break up, but apologizing to a woman (even if you do it over and over again, which is not a good idea by the way), isn't going to change how she feels, unless she actually forgives the old version of you for real.

Forgiving you real means that she looks at the old version of you and the new version of you as being two completely different people.

The old version of you made the mistakes he made and as a result, she felt turned off enough to want to end the relationship.

The new version of you is the man who has learned from those mistakes and no longer makes them.

So, getting her to want a relationship again isn't going to happen if she's still looking at you as being the old version of you.

She has to forgive you for real, in order for her to be able to see the new you and start feeling attracted to you.

Be warned though!

Most women will simply say, â€œYeah sure. I forgive you,â€ as a way of getting her ex to stop pestering her.

Secretly, she's thinking, â€œNo, I don't forgive you. Why should I? You stuffed up. Saying â€œI'm sorryâ€ isn't enough of a reason for me to forget what you did. I will never forgive you for that.â€

If she's thinking in that kind of way, getting her back will be more difficult than if she had forgiven the old version of you, so she could then begin to see the new version of you as being a new and improved man.

So, if you want your ex's commitment, you need to get her real, genuine forgiveness for you first.

How can you do that?

By asking her to forgive you for her own benefit.

Explain to her that if she doesn't forgive you, she might go through life carrying the baggage of her relationship with you and thinking that men cannot be trusted or relied on.

Then, if she ever decides to have another relationship someday with someone else, rather than opening herself up to be loved the way that she deserves, she will remain guarded and closed up, which will then cause problems between her and her new man and potentially end in a break up.

As a result, her fears will only get worse that men can't be relied on and relationships can't work.

So, tell your ex that you don't want that kind of thing to happen to her.

Tell her that you want her to be happy.

By the way!

Don't worry.

Saying that to her is not about helping her move on with some other guy.

Instead, when she forgives you for her own benefit, she does it for real, rather than just faking it to shut you up.

As a result, she stops looking at you as the old you and she starts seeing you as the new man you have become.

Her guard then begins to come down and she becomes more open to talking to you, seeing you and even opening herself up to the idea of coming back to you.

From there, you just need to make sure that you are sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again whenever you interact with her and she will be back in your arms before you know it.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Can I Make My Ex's New Man Look Unattractive Compared to Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways that you can make your ex's new man look unattractive compared to you!

1. Make him look like the insecure one

If her new man keeps asking questions about you like, "If you're over him, then why are you still interacting with him?" or "Are you still into him? Am I your rebound guy?" he will seem less attractive to her.

Why?

Women are naturally attracted to confidence in men and naturally turned off by emotional weakness (e.g. insecurity, self-doubt, anxiety).

This is why it's so important that you interact with your ex to interrupt the process of her moving on.

When you interact with your ex and let her realize that you've changed the things about you that turned her off before, she will drop her guard and open back up to you slightly.

If she also notices that you now have a lot of the qualities and traits that are missing in her new man (e.g. you're more confident, emotionally strong, emotionally mature, emotionally masculine, funnier, more interesting, more charismatic), she will stop looking at him as being better than you.

She will then subconsciously begin comparing you to her new man and won't be able to stop herself from wondering, "Did I make a mistake breaking up with my ex? Is this new guy really that much better than my ex? Maybe my ex and I can work things out between us after all."

So, make sure that you interact with your ex on a phone call and if possible, in person.

Don't hide behind text because it feels safer, or because you think she might prefer that.

Texts are the easiest way to stuff up re-attracting your ex because she can read your texts as being insecure, desperate, controlling or needy.

However, when she talks to you on the phone or in person, she can sense the changes in you and feel real attraction for you again.

Then, she will almost certainly begin to change her behavior around her new man, or even mention that she has been speaking to you.

If he seems worried, she might try to reassure him by saying, "It's fine. We're just friends now. You have nothing to worry about," or "Don't be silly! It's not like that between us anymore. I'm with you now."

[image: Why are you talking to your ex? You're supposed to be with me!]

Yet, if he continues to be jealous and needy (e.g. gets upset when she talks to you on the phone or meets up with you, forbids her to interact with you anymore, asks her who she likes more), she will soon begin to wonder if he's really the right guy for her after all.

Hereâ€”s the thingâ€”!

For a man to build on a womanâ€”s feelings of respect, attraction and love over time in a relationship, he needs to continue thinking and behaving in the ways that are naturally attractive to her (e.g. confident, emotionally strong, emotionally independent, masculine, mature).

Instinctively, every woman understands that a guy who is confident, emotionally strong and mature will be more likely to survive during difficult times in life, than a guy who is insecure, weak-minded and self-doubting.

This is why, when a guy is being clingy, jealous, controlling and insecure about his value to his woman, heâ€”s actually triggering her instincts and making her feel turned off at a deep level.

[image: Make her new guy display insecurity]

She begins to think, â€”I didn't know that he was this insecure. If he can't cope with my ex and I talking, it must mean that he doesn't really believe in himself and his attractiveness to me. That makes me miss my ex.â€”

If his jealousy and insecurity continues and she has to keep reassuring him about her feelings for him, her respect and attraction for him will begin to fade away.

Then, it won't take long before she dumps him for you.

Another way you can make your exâ€”s new man look unattractive compared to you is toâ€”!

2. Start living a fun life and let her see it via social media

[image: Start living a fun lifestyle and let her see it via social media]

Sometimes, when a woman gets into a relationship with a new man, her ex may feel shocked and even betrayed that she has moved on so quickly.

He might say to himself, â€”How can she do this to me? Did our love mean nothing to her? Iâ€”m still feeling the pain of losing her and sheâ€”s already off with some other guy. Did she really care about me? Was I the only one who felt love? Was it all just a lie? Was she using me? Will any woman ever truly love me?â€”

He may then fall into a depression and close himself off from the world (e.g. he doesn't go out with friends anymore, he refuses to meet new people or try new things).

Heâ€”s kind of hoping that when his ex finds out how lost, lonely and incapable of moving on without her he is, she will think, â€”Ohhhhâ€”the poor guy. What have I done? I had a guy who adored me and I broke his heart. Iâ€”ve made such a big mistake! I need to get back with him. It's the right thing to do!”

Yet, thatâ€”s not how it works.

In most cases, rather than be impressed by his emotional dependence on her, a woman will think, â€”Sure, itâ€”s nice that he really loves and appreciates me, but him not being able to function without me is such a big turn off. Seeing him like this makes me feel like I made a mistake getting into a relationship with him in the first place.â€”

So, if you want to make your exâ€”s new man look unattractive compared to you, one of the best ways to do it is by showing her that youâ€”re an emotionally strong and independent man now, with or without her.

For example: You mightâ€¦

- Go out with existing friends to have fun and interact with other interesting people.
- Join a club or group activity to make new friends (e.g. martial arts, outdoor group exercise, hiking, dancing).
- Go traveling on a group tour (where you will not only be seeing new places, but you will also make new friends).

By focusing on improving yourself and enjoying a happy life without your ex, you become a better man and lead a more balanced life.

As a side bonus, you also become more attractive to her (and to other women).

You can then post photos of yourself on social media (where your ex is sure to see them), doing all these new, exciting things and having fun with many different people.

Note: If she has unfriended you from social media, simply post the photos as “public” so she can see them from the outside.

When she sees that you havenâ€™t been sitting around pining for her and living a lonely, sad life without her, she will naturally begin to feel respect and attraction for you again.

Secretly, she will also consider what it would feel like to join you and be a part of your new, fun life.

She will then begin to wonder whether her new man is the right guy for her, or if he’s just a temporary rebound that she needs to leave so she can get back with you.

A third way you can make your exâ€™s new man look unattractive compared to you is to:

3. Attract her in ways that he can’t, or that he doesn’t do a very good job of

Most guys have no idea how to be the emotionally masculine man that women hope to find.

So, even though your ex might seem happy in her new relationship, the fact is that she will lose interest in him if he is unable to attract her in the ways that really matter.

Therefore, it’s essential that you focus your attention on attracting her in the ways that he can’t, or that heâ€™s not very good at.

You can do it in some of the following ways:

1. Make her feel girly and feminine when she interacts with her

For example: A man and a woman are always fighting, arguing and disagreeing, which makes her feel stressed out and annoyed.

So, she eventually decides to break up with him.

Then, she might hook up with a guy who is extra nice and sweet and who never disagrees with her about anything, because she wants to be with someone who is the opposite of her ex.

Yet, over time, she may realize that although her new man is a really nice guy (because he never stands up to her and instead lets her get away with anything), she doesn’t like how she always feels so much more emotionally dominant with him.

It's like she is the man or the boss, which she doesn't want.

As a result, she can't relax and allow herself to be a feminine, girly woman around him.

He doesn't have the kind of emotional masculinity that naturally makes her want to be submissive and girly around him.

It's like he is the girl.

So, she has gone from being in a relationship with a guy who was too aggressive and argumentative, to being in a relationship with a wimp.

Neither of those options is what she really wants.

What she really wants is a man who is confident and loving, but also assertive and manly.

She wants the right balance of a good guy with balls, rather than an arrogant asshole or a wimpy nice guy.

So, if you interact with your ex and she can sense that you are no longer on one extreme or the other and can finally offer her a more balanced, attractive experience, she will naturally lean towards you.

Her new guy will stop seeming so appealing and her thoughts will keep wandering back to you.

Another way to attract her is

2. Turn her tantrums and bad moods into moments of laughter, smiling and love

By their very nature, women tend to be a lot more emotional and dramatic than men.

So, in a relationship, a woman might sometimes throw tantrums and start crying over seemingly insignificant things.

In reality, it's not that serious and what she actually wants is for her man not to get caught up in the drama or become angry, upset or insecure.

She wants him to be able to accept that she's sometimes will become an emotional woman and it's not something that he needs to worry about.

Instead, he should use it as an opportunity to deepen her respect, attraction and love for him by being strong enough to guide the interaction back to smiling and laughter.

If you can do that with your ex (and he can't or struggles to), he will be gone in no time.

3. Remain emotionally strong whenever she tests your confidence

Whether a woman is meeting a guy for the first time, on a date with him, or in a relationship with him, she will always test him.

She will test to see if he can maintain his confidence and emotional strength around her and handle her pressure.

Why?

Most women don't want to get emotionally invested in a relationship with a guy, only to eventually discover that he actually can't cope with the pressures of life because he's unable to stand up for himself in an assertive, but loving and easy-going way.

Rather than remaining confident and in control, he buckles under the pressure and becomes insecure, self-doubting and fearful.

A woman doesn't want to get stuck with a guy who can't handle himself in the world and keep him and her safe for life.

Even though she might not openly admit it, or even be able to explain it if asked, it's what her instincts are hard-wired to find out about a man, which is why she will always test him no matter how long they are in a relationship.

It's her natural instinct to ensure that she will continue to be protected and taken care of, in this often scary and uncertain world.

So, if you want to make your ex's new man look unattractive compared to you, just make sure that you:

- Make her feel feminine and girly every time you interact with her (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, flirt with her to create sexual tension).
- Show her your confidence and emotional strength by using humor to get her out of a bad mood when she's throwing a tantrum.
- Maintain your confidence around her, no matter what she does to test you (e.g. she is being cold and unfriendly towards you, she tries to make you jealous by talking about her new man, or tries to pick a fight with you).

The more she can see that you don't feel insecure about yourself in comparison to her new man, the more she will begin to wonder if she made the right choice.

Then, when her guy slips up (e.g. becomes jealous and controlling, fails to make her feel feminine and girly, becomes clingy and needy), she will feel drawn to you like a magnet, because you're now the better man.

5 Mistakes to Avoid When Re-Attracting Your Ex

[image: Mistakes to avoid when re-attracting your ex]

Getting an ex woman back from her new man is easy in most cases.

However, if you make one or more of the following mistakes, you will just make it more difficult to get her back.

1. Pointing out the new guy's flaws

Even if what you say about him is true (e.g. he is a jerk, he's only interested in her for the sex), it's not a good idea.

Why?

Rather than believe you and come running back to you, she will assume that you're just being immature about her moving on with another guy.

She will assume that you feel inferior, are jealous and are trying to convince her that he's no good for her.

Doing that actually makes him seem more attractive than you if he's not asking about you or worrying about you.

So, it's always best to just not worry about pointing out any of his faults and instead, focus on re-attracting her when you interact with her.

Another mistake to avoidâ€¦|

2. Asking her if he is a rebound

A rebound relationship is the relationship that a person quickly or immediately gets into after breaking off their previous relationship.

Statistically speaking, about 65% of rebound relationships end within 6 months according to most studies.

Yet, if you try to explain to her that most rebound relationships break up and therefore, she should just leave him now, she will assume that youâ€¦re trying to get in the way of her new relationship because youâ€¦re insecure, which will then make her lose even more respect and attraction for you.

There's no benefit in bring that kind of thing up with her, so make sure to avoid it.

Another mistake to avoidâ€¦|

3. Improving your physical attractiveness, rather than your emotional attractiveness

Although thereâ€¦s nothing wrong with looking good (e.g. you might want to lose some weight, add some muscle, change your clothes or hairstyle because itâ€¦s what you want to do for yourself), improving your physical appearance won't necessarily make her see you as being more attractive than her new man.

Why?

What matters the most to a woman is how a man makes her feel (based on his behavior, attitude, conversational style, vibe) when he interacts with her.

In other words, do you slip into an insecure, self-doubting or needy way of thinking and behaving around her, or are you confident, emotionally strong and self-assured?

That is what really counts.

Another mistake to avoidâ€¦|

4. Hiding behind texts rather than meeting up with her in person to allow her to experience the new and improved you

Sometimes, a guy will "play it safe" by sticking to texting his ex and never actually getting on a phone call with her (e.g. because heâ€¦s afraid she might reject him, he doesnâ€¦t want to scare her off).

However, when a woman has a real-life man in her life who is talking to her, making her laugh, making her smile and doing whatever he can to make her feel attracted to him, is almost impossible for a mere text from her ex to make her think, â€¦Hmmm, my new man is taking me out to a romantic dinner tonight and he makes me feel so attracted, but this text from my ex saying â€¦hiâ€¦ is so awesome! My new guy now looks so unattractive compared to my ex. I have to get back with my ex! What a text!â€¦

This is why I always recommend that a guy just call.

â€¦even if she has a new boyfriend or is dating someone new.

You have to get in the way of her moving on and make her feel attracted to you again.

If a guy doesnâ€™t do anything to actively spark a womanâ€™s feelings for him on a phone call and in person, she will usually just randomly reply to his texts and continue moving on and having a good time with her new man.

The final mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

5. Feeling unwelcome to flirt with her and create a sexual spark

Some guys make the mistake of thinking that flirting with an ex is wrong.

It's not wrong.

It's essential that you do it!

You've got to create a sexual spark between you and her if you want her back.

If a guy isn't actively sparking his exâ€™s feelings of respect and attraction for him, there will be nothing to convince her that heâ€™s a better option compared to her new man.

So, if you want to make your exâ€™s new man look unattractive compared to you, it's essential that you begin to make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

You need to believe in yourself and in your value to her, no matter what.

When she can see for herself that you are now the kind of man that she can look up to, respect and feel attracted to (i.e. because youâ€™re now more confident and emotionally strong, youâ€™re a man of purpose, you make her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you), her new man will begin to pale in comparison to you.

She will then become open to breaking up with him and falling back into your arms once again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Said That There Was No Spark Between Us, But I Felt it

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why a woman will say that to her ex are thatâ€¦!

1. He didn't understand the type of attraction experience she really wanted

For example: She wanted him to be more ballsy and confident around, but he just offered her the nice, neutral version of himself.

He hoped that she would just accept that and be happy with it, but she wasn't.

[image: I'm doing my best to make you happy. What else do you want?]

Even though she most likely gave him plenty of warnings that she wasn't happy, he just kept offering her the same kind of attraction experience as before.

So, she got to the point where she said something like, "I just don't feel like there's a spark between us anymore," and wanted to break up with him.

When a guy is faced with a situation like that, it usually feels like it's happening all of a sudden.

He doesn't understand how she could be dumping him, after he'd been so nice to her and tried his best to be a good boyfriend (or husband).

He may think, "She's saying that there was no spark between us, but I felt it. I know that we have a special connection. I just have to do whatever it takes to make her see that it's really there."

Of course, most guys who get dumped for the old, "I don't feel a spark with you" reason usually aren't very good at attracting women.

In other words, a guy like that usually relies on getting lucky and fumbling his way into relationships with women, rather than actually knowing how to attract and pick up women that he selects.

Watch this video for more infoâ€¦!

So, when a guy who isn't very good at attracting women by choice gets dumped by a woman who didn't feel a spark with him, he will often try to re-attract her in ways that she doesn't care about.

For example: He hopes that if he makes himself look better (e.g. loses some weight, goes to the gym to build some muscle, wears better clothes, changes his hairstyle), she will feel more attracted to him and feel the spark between them.

Alternatively, sometimes a guy will assume that he's not being romantic enough in the relationship, which is why his woman is saying that there was no spark.

As a result, he may then start showering her with flowers and gifts as a way of sparking her romantic feelings for him.

Yet, here's the thingâ€¦!

Romance is only enjoyable if the feelings are mutual.

Although a woman might say, â€œYouâ€™re looking good. Well done on losing all that weight/building muscle,â€ or â€œThanks for all the surprises,â€ it isn't going to make her feel attracted to him in the ways that really matter.

What are the ways that really matter?

How he makes her feel when he talks to her, interacts with her and is around her.

For exampleâ€¦!

Does he make her feel excited, happy and content when sheâ€™s around him, or does she feel bored, stressed out or depressed?

Does he make her feel like an attractive, sexy, desirable woman, or does she feel more like a neutral friend, big sister or roommate?

Does he make her feel rushes of sexual attraction when they talk and interact, or does he always seem to say and do things that bore her, or turn her off?

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't know the answers to these questions, so they hope to spark their woman's feelings by showing her how willing they are to spend money on her, or by giving themselves a physical makeover to impress her.

Of course, that doesn't mean a guy should look like a slob, or not bother to spoil his woman a nice gift or romantic gesture every once in a while.

However, if you want to spark your ex's sexual feelings for you, you need to focus more on changing the things that really matter (e.g. becoming more confident and emotionally masculine around her, being more emotionally dominant than her so she can feel girly in comparison to you).

When she can see for herself that you no longer react to her in the same way you used to, it then feels natural and normal for her to drop her guard and open herself up to you again.

Another reason why a woman might say that there was no spark between her and her guy is becauseâ€¦!

2. She felt some lust for him initially, but it faded pretty quickly

[image: She felt some lust initially, but it faded]

Sometimes when a guy doesn't feel very confident about his attractiveness to women, he might focus on putting on a persona when he interacts with a woman for the first time.

For example: He mightâ€¦!

- Be very nice and attentive towards her to try and impress her that way.
- Use self-deprecating humor as a way of hopefully taking the focus off the fact that he doesn't feel good enough for her.
- Act like he's really confident and sure of himself, while on the inside he's feeling anxious and thinking things like, â€œShe's so beautiful. I'd be so lucky of a woman like her fell for a guy like me. I've got to be on my best behavior and not screw this up!â€
- Flatter her with lots of compliments to hopefully get her to give him a chance.

Of course, because heâ€™s displaying a few of the qualities and personality traits that are naturally attractive to women, she will feel some attraction for him.

She may even be thinking, â€œHmmmâ€¦he seems like a great guy. Heâ€™s confident, funny and nice. Maybe I should give him a chance.â€

She then gets into a relationship and hopes for the best.

Yet, after the initial thrill wears off and they become more comfortable around each other, his persona begins to wear off and he settles into being his true self around her (e.g. insecure, self-doubting, weak-minded, wimpy, irritable and moody).

When that happens, itâ€™s only natural that the woman begins to wonder, â€œWhat happened to the confident, nice, fun guy that I first met? Heâ€™s not the same anymore. In fact, all those things about him that originally turned me on are pretty much non-existent now. Heâ€™s nothing like the man I fell for. Thereâ€™s just no spark between us.â€

She might decide to hang in there for a little while to see if he can re-spark her feelings for him.

However, when she realizes that the insecure, needy, wimpy version of him is his actual true self, her feelings of lust and desire will begin to fade and she will then break up with him.

Another reason why a woman might say that there was no spark between her and her guy is becauseâ€™

3. She lost respect for him, so she could no longer feel proper attraction for him

[image: She lost respect for him and could no longer feel attracted to him as a result]

To maintain a womanâ€™s feelings of respect, attraction and love, a guy needs to be the kind of man she can look up to, rely on and feel proud of.

So, when a guy fails to live up to those expectations over time, a womanâ€™s feelings for him will also begin to change.

For example: Some of the reasons why a woman might lose respect for her man are:

- He displayed unmanly behavior too often (e.g. being too emotionally sensitive).
- He had no strong sense of purpose in life that was actively following through on.
- He placed her needs ahead of his own and always let her get her way, even though she treated him badly and didn't give much or anything in return.
- He allowed her to dominate him emotionally in the relationship.
- He treated her like a neutral friend instead of his woman.
- He initially presented himself as a confident, ambitious guy, but never really followed through on any of the big plans or dreams he told her about when they were dating.
- He regularly criticized her and made her feel stupid, unattractive or useless.
- He felt shy or anxious around confident men in social situations.
- He became the butt of jokes amongst her friends or family.
- He didn't ever stand up for her when she was being teased by friends or family and tended to take their side.

- He lost control of his emotions often and either cried, sulked or became very angry.
- He was always so moody and irritable and she had to be nice, sweet and gentle, otherwise he would get upset.

Essentially, he wasn't being a real man.

When a woman is in a relationship like that, she will often start thinking, “What am I still doing with him? Most of the things I wanted in a man are missing from this relationship. I feel depressed and stressed out all the time with him. There's no spark between us as well. Instead of wanting him to hold me and kiss me, I just want him to leave me alone. This is not how it's supposed to be. I want to feel happy and turned on when I'm with my man, not like I want to get as far away from him as possible.”

In most cases, when a woman reaches a point where she's thinking like that, she has lost pretty much all respect for him.

Without respect, it then becomes very difficult for her to feel sexually attracted to him, which then leads to her thinking, “There's no spark between us.”

So, even though the guy might be thinking, “That can't be true. There was a spark between us. I felt it! The sex was amazing at the start. We used to kiss for a long time and be groping each other passionately. There was a spark!” it's simply not good enough.

You can't keep a relationship together for life based on a spark that used to be there.

You have to build on it through all stages of your relationship!

Another more reason why a woman might say that there was no spark between her and her guy is because!

4. She thought that she'd be happy with a nice guy, but she now realizes that she needs more than just nice

If a woman has had a bad experience with a previous relationship where the guy was mean, took her for granted, cheated on her or even just generally treated her badly, she will usually then look for a new man who is the complete opposite to her ex (i.e. nice, sweet, gentle, agreeable).

Alternatively, if a woman has been raised in a family where her father was too domineering and treated her mother like an idiot, she might say to herself, “I never want to be in a relationship like that. I want a nice, sweet guy who will always treat me like a princess.”

She might then hook up with a nice guy who matches her picture of the ideal man that she has created in her mind.

However, as time goes by, rather than feel happy and content in the relationship with her nice guy, she starts to feel turned off and bored.

Why?

Although her man is everything she wanted him to be (i.e. sweet, kind, attentive), she realizes that his niceness is not enough to make her feel sexually attracted to him.

She feels like a neutral friend around him, or feels more emotionally dominant to him and like she has to take care of him.

Initially, she might say to herself, “Why are you being like this? You can do a lot worse than him. Just give him a chance! maybe he will man up one day.”

Yet, when weeks, months or even years pass, her patience will run out.

She might then say to her guy, “I don’t think that I want to be in a relationship with you anymore. There’s just no spark between us, so there’s no point being together” as a way of motivating him to change and give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants from him.

In most cases, rather than ask himself, “What aspect of my thinking and behavior is causing her to say this to me? What can I do to change and spark her feelings for me?” a guy makes the mistake of asking her what he needs to change to make her feel the spark, which only turns her off more.

Why?

A woman doesn’t want to be responsible for shaping her guy into the man that he needs to become.

If she has to tell him what to do and how to behave, it puts too much pressure on her to be the leader in the relationship, when she just wants to be able to relax and be his girl.

So, a woman will almost always prefer to just cut her losses and break up with her guy, so she can then find herself a man who knows how to be a real man, without needing her to tell him how.

A final reason why a woman might say that there was no spark between her and her guy is because!

5. He didn’t make her feel feminine and girly enough

To maintain the spark of attraction and love that a woman feels for her man, a guy needs to make her feel girly and feminine in comparison to his masculinity.

Sadly, the mistake that a lot of guys make in a relationship is assuming that the initial spark that caused his woman to say, “Yes” to being his girl, will be enough to keep her attracted over time.

So, rather than focus on triggering her feelings of attraction every day (e.g. by making her feel loved, appreciated, desirable, sexy) a guy instead starts to treat his woman like his buddy.

For example: Rather than take her out for a romantic dinner, compliment her on her appearance and make her feel like she’s the sexiest, most desirable woman in the world to him, a guy might get into the habit of always playing video games while she hangs around the house, take her to sports game and essentially hang out with her like he would with any of his other buddies.

In his mind, he might be thinking, “This is so cool. My girl and I are so comfortable with each other that we can just hang out together wearing old tracksuits or denims and be happy forever. I don’t have to do the kind of things that other men do, (e.g. surprise her with flowers or gifts, plan romantic outings, make her feel very girly in comparison to how masculine I am behaving).”

Yet, what he doesn’t realize is that secretly, she doesn’t feel the same way.

She might like it at times, but not when it feels as though they are more like buddies or roommates than masculine/feminine lovers.

Here’s the thing!

If a woman doesn't feel feminine and girly in her man's presence, there's nothing really there for her to feel continually attracted to, sexually.

She might feel some intellectual attraction and like him as a person, but without the all-important sexual spark in place, it just won't feel like a proper boyfriend/girlfriend or husband/wife relationship.

She then will break up with him and hope that she can find a new guy who makes her feel that spark and keeps it alive.

So, if your ex said that there was no spark between you, but you felt it, it may be because you were happy with the way things were (i.e. comfortable, stable, familiar), while she wanted to feel more.

Fortunately, you can change how she feels by making some adjustments to the way you interact with her from this point onwards.

You may not have realized this, but you actually have a lot of control over how much or little attraction she feels for you.

For example: The more you display behaviors and personality traits that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, charisma, emotional masculinity, humor) the more attracted she will feel.

On the other hand, if you display behaviors and personality traits that are naturally a turn off to women (e.g. insecurity, neediness, emotional sensitivity) she will continue to say, "There was no spark between us and there still isn't. Please accept that it's over."

The way she feels about you is pretty much controlled by how you present yourself to her during interactions.

If you display attractive behaviors, she feels some attraction and opens back up.

If you display unattractive behaviors, she feels turned off and closes herself off even more.

Which approach will you take from now on?

Are you ready to re-attract her and get her back?

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I'm Afraid to Contact My Ex Because I'm Worried That She Will Reject Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you're afraid to contact your ex because you're worried that she will reject you, here are 5 steps you need to take to get her back:

1. Prepare yourself to reactivate her feelings

Your ex's feelings can be turned back on.

When you talk to her and interact with her on the phone and in person, you can make her feelings of respect, attraction and love coming flooding back into her heart and mind.

Before you contact her, it's important that you understand her real reasons for breaking up with you, which are often different to the reasons she provided you.

For example: A woman might break up with a guy because he lacks emotionally masculinity (i.e. he's too wimpy, insecure or gives her too much power), but she won't necessarily tell him that when she dumps him.

Instead, she will say something like, "I just don't feel the same way anymore. I want to break up."

[image: She doesn't want to have to explain the real reason for the break up]

She doesn't want to explain the real reason because he would then promise to change that about himself.

He might not be able to change that about himself for weeks, months or even years if he doesn't get real help and advice about it.

So, if she says, "Yes" and gives him another chance, she will then have to go through another break up with him eventually.

Rather than going through all of that and wasting her time, she just says that she doesn't feel the same way anymore and wants to break up.

So, if you want your ex back, you must discover her real reasons for breaking up with you (she won't tell you) and then make some attractive changes to your thinking and behavior.

Watch this video for some examples!

Then, when you do contact her she will be able to feel that you really are different now.

You're no longer the same guy she broke up with, which means that it will be much harder to reject you.

After all, she will be feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, which will draw her to you and make her want to explore her feelings further.

Here an example to think about!

A woman broke up with a guy because she felt more emotionally dominant than him and got tired of wearing the pants in the relationship and having to lead him.

If he then contacts her to try and get her back and she acts cold and distant or throws a tantrum and starts saying things like, “What do you want? Why are you calling me? I have nothing to say to you. We are finished! Our relationship is over!” the way he reacts will determine whether she will continue rejecting him or not.

If he gets flustered and tries to calm her down by saying things like, “I’m sorry. I don’t want to bother you. It’s just that I was hoping we could talk about our relationship. Please give me a chance to make things up to you. Just tell me what you want and I’ll do it. I’ll do my best to be the man you want me to be. Please just listen,” she will automatically see that nothing about him has really changed.

He still hasn’t realized that giving her the power in the relationship is what caused her to lose so much respect, attraction and love for him in the first place.

She doesn’t want him looking at her as being the more dominant one and feeling as though he has to bend to her will.

She wants him to have a backbone.

She wants him to be a man that she can look up to and respect, so she can then be his girl.

So, if he can remain confident, let her rant for a while and then guide her back to smiling, laughter and other feel good emotions, she won’t be able to stop herself from feeling some respect for him again.

She will think something like, “Interesting. He’s not reacting like he used to in the past. He’s actually standing up to me and being emotionally strong for once. If this really is the new him, then I am interested. If he’s like this, I won’t be able to stop myself from falling for him again. This is what I’ve wanted all along. Maybe I should give him another chance.”

This is why it’s so important that you prepare yourself before you attempt to contact your ex.

You need to find her deep, hidden reasons for breaking up with you, so that when you do talk to her again (e.g. on the phone or in person), you will be giving her the kind of attraction experience she really wants.

If you don’t already know the real reasons why your ex broke up with you, here are some questions to ask yourself that will help you find out:

- Were you the more emotionally dominant one in the relationship, or were you the nice, sweet guy who pretty much always bent over backwards to do things her way?
- Did you believe in your value and attractiveness to her, or did you feel insecure and secretly feared losing her, which then caused you to become needy, clingy, controlling or jealous?
- Did you and her want the same things in the relationship (e.g. to take things slowly and have fun, go traveling together, move in together, get married), or were you going in completely different directions in life?
- Did you make her feel loved, appreciated and valued, or did you fall into the habit of taking her for granted?
- Did you make her feel like your girl, or like one of your buddies?
- Did you maintain your masculinity in the relationship, or end up acting a bit like her?
- Were you able to build on her feelings of respect, attraction and love over time, or did you assume that the initial love she felt for you should have been enough to keep her for life?

When you fully understand where you went wrong with her, you can then change the things she really wants you to change.

As a result, rejecting you will be the last thing on her mind because she will be feeling surges of respect and attraction for the new you.

2. Don't try to get her back via text

[image: Avoid trying to text your ex back]

Sometimes, when a guy is afraid to contact his ex because he's worried that she will reject him, he might say to himself, "Maybe if I just send her a text instead of calling her on the phone, she will feel less annoyed than if she hears my voice again right away. In that way, I can wear down her defenses and ease her into the idea of giving our relationship another chance."

He might then send her a text saying something like, "Hey, I just want you to know that I'm really sorry about everything that happened between us. I'm willing to do whatever it takes to make you forgive me," in the hopes that she will think, "Oh, how sweet. I feel so flattered that he's still thinking about me and willing to do anything to get me back," and then quickly call him to arrange a meet up.

Yet, here's the thing!

In almost all instances, when a woman has broken up with a guy and is still feeling a lot of negative emotions (e.g. anger, disappointment, disillusionment) about it, him trying to get her back via text usually only makes her feel more annoyed and turned off.

Why?

Texts are just a bunch of words on a screen to her.

It's not like talking to him in person.

No matter how hard a guy tries to express himself via text, it's impossible to convey his true emotions, attitude and state of mind.

If he's feeling confident, she can't see it in his body language, or hear it in his voice via a text, so she's usually just going to assume that he's too insecure and emotionally weak to call her.

So, while he's sitting around and waiting for her to respond, she's likely just rolling her eyes and thinking things like, "I can't believe he doesn't even have the balls to call me!"

He's just sending me a silly text and hoping I'm going to come running back to him based on that. Well he's in for a big surprise. It's going to take a lot more than that to convince me to give him another chance."

Here's the thing!

Trying to get an ex back via text before you have reactivated her feelings (which is best done via the phone and face-to-face), is usually just a big waste of time.

Contacting an ex via text after a break up, should only ever be the initial step to getting her to talk to you on the phone and in person (e.g. "Hi Jenny, I have to talk to you about something quick. I'll give you a call in about 10 minutes.")

On a phone call, it's so much easier to re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her smile and laugh) and getting her to agree to a quick catch up.

Warning: If you wait too long to call her (e.g. because you're afraid that she will reject you) you stand the risk of her finding a new guy and moving on.

So, make sure you get her on a phone call with you right away.

On the phone call

3. Focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good when she talks to you

Chances are, even if you and your ex parted ways on very good terms, she's not going to make it easy for you to get her back.

Why?

She wants to know that you're man enough to take responsibility for the ex back process and guide both you and her into a relationship.

She doesn't want to have to lead you and make things easy for you because this break up is now a perfect opportunity to test how emotionally strong and emotionally mature you really are.

For example: Some of the ways a woman might test her ex's confidence is by

- Being cold and even hostile towards him (e.g. saying things like, What do you want? or Why are you calling me?).
- Pretending to be happy to hear from him and then when he starts to feel happy and relaxed, blow him off by saying things like, This call is a waste of time. I don't have feelings for you anymore and nothing is going to change that. Why did you even call me? I think I should just go now.
- Throwing a tantrum.
- Blaming him for everything that happened between them.
- Being bitchy and mean to see if he will react in a sulky or angry way.

This is why it is very important that no matter what your ex says and does to try to make you feel insecure, you maintain your confidence and show her that you're no longer the guy you used to be.

How can you do that?

By putting in the effort to become emotionally stronger before you contact her and then using humor to pass her tests when talking to her.

For example: Imagine you're on a phone call with your ex right now.

She says something like, What do you want? I don't want to talk to you. Leave me alone!

Rather than react by getting upset and thinking something like, I knew it! That's why I was afraid to contact her. I knew she would reject me. This is hopeless. I'm never going to get her back! a better way to respond is to make her smile and laugh to get rid of the negative tension in the moment.

If she says, What do you want? I don't want to talk to you. Leave me alone, you can turn it into something to laugh about together by saying something along the lines of, I thought youâ€¦d say that. Well, youâ€¦re not going to get out of paying your debts so easily. If you want me to leave you alone, youâ€¦re going to have to pay up first.â€¦

She will likely feel confused and she may say, â€¦What do you mean? What debts? I donâ€¦t owe you anything,â€¦ and you can then say in a joking way, â€¦Of course you do! Did you forget it was your turn to buy coffee? I always bought coffee for us and it was your turn before you broke up with me. So, when would you like to meet up and get me a coffee? I promise that once youâ€¦ve paid up all your debts, Iâ€¦ll leave you alone. It will be a goodbye coffee. I will not contact you ever again after that if you don't want me to. So, how about it? Coffee tomorrow?â€¦

If an example like that wouldn't apply to your situation, here are some more examples for you to give you a better idea of what to doâ€¦!

When you use humor to get rid of the negative tension, she can't help but smile and feel attracted to you again, even if she tries to hide it.

She likes the fact that you have the balls to take a risk and be the confident, leading man, rather than hoping that she will be gentle and nice and lead you back into a relationship.

When that happens, she becomes more open to talking to you further and meeting up with you to see for herself what else about you is different.

She will be curious to find out if you really have changed or if you were only putting on an act over the phone to try and get her back.

Just remember: Once you get her to drop her guard, donâ€¦t make the mistake of becoming too serious and getting into long, serious discussions about the relationship.

Insteadâ€¦!

4. Aim only to get her to meet up with you as friends or to say hello as ex's

After a bit of light hearted conversation where you've been sparking her feelings of respect and attraction by maintaining your confidence and making her smile and laugh, you can say, â€¦Hey, I was only joking just now about you owing me coffee, but I still think it would be nice to meet up anyway. How about it? Letâ€¦s meet up sometime this week for a quick coffee. I promise Iâ€¦ll even pay the $5 or whatever is. It's fineâ€¦ and then have a laugh about that.

In most cases, a woman wonâ€¦t say â€¦Yesâ€¦ to meeting up with her ex right away and will say something like, â€¦I donâ€¦t think thatâ€¦s a good idea,â€¦ or â€¦No. I donâ€¦t want to do that.â€¦

That's easier because doesnâ€¦t fully believe that youâ€¦ve changed, doesnâ€¦t want to come across as being too easy, is afraid of getting hurt again or wants to test your confidence to see if you'll crumble under that little bit of pressure.

So, no matter what she says, donâ€¦t let it make you feel insecure and start doubting yourself.

Instead, just relax and say in an easy-going way, â€¦Hey, itâ€¦s just a quick cup of coffee between exâ€¦s to say hello in person. We can do that. After all weâ€¦re two mature adults. So, itâ€¦s no big deal. Just because you agree to meet me for coffee, it doesn't mean that I assume you are open to ever getting back together. I know weâ€¦ve broken up and I accept that. However, that doesnâ€¦t mean we can't drink one cup of coffee together or be just friends, right? Besides, if you decide you never want to see me again, I promise to leave you alone after we catch up for this coffee. So how about it? Which day this week suits you best?

She will then likely say, Yes, or Okay. Just this once, and you can then go ahead and arrange a suitable day and time.

Then

5. Get her back at the meet up

[image: Get her back at the meet up]

You can sit around thinking to yourself, I'm afraid to contact my ex because I'm worried that she will reject me, but that kind of fearful approach isn't going to get her back.

As the man, it's up to you to be confident enough in your attractiveness to take the lead in the ex back process and guide her back into a relationship with you.

You shouldn't wait around hoping that your ex will somehow give you a sign that she's open to getting back together again, because that rarely, if ever happens.

You have to take action to make this happen.

Get her back by being a man who follows through on the ex back process, rather than waiting around, losing confidence and maybe even losing her forever too.

Just do it.

Contact her and get her to meet up with you.

At the meet up, make sure that you continue to make her smile and laugh and show her (via your actions, body language and conversation style) that you really have changed and become a better man since the break up.

When she experiences the new you for herself, her defenses naturally will come down.

She will stop thinking about you in a negative way and she start seeing the possibilities of starting a fresh, new, exciting relationship with you.

So, stop worrying about what she might say or do and just start getting her back right now.

Time is ticking...

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me Because She Wants to Reclaim Her Sense of Freedom

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

7 common reasons why a woman will say that to her boyfriend as an excuse for the break up are:

1. He was too controlling

If a guy feels insecure about his value to his woman (e.g. he thinks she's too good for him, he worries that she might find other guys more attractive and leave him), he will often become jealous and controlling in the relationship.

For example: He will tell her not to mingle with certain friends, he will check her phone or regularly ask her questions to find out where she's been, with who and why.

[image: Girlfriend consoling her insecure boyfriend]

Naturally, a woman will usually try to reassure her guy by saying things like, "I love you and I would never do anything to hurt you and break your trust in me," or "Relax. I'm with you aren't I? I wouldn't be here if I didn't love you."

However, if nothing she says gets through to him, she will inevitably start feeling smothered by him. She might then react by becoming secretive and having to lie about her whereabouts, which is something that she doesn't like doing.

As a result, she starts to feel stressed out and unhappy.

If she sees how happy her girlfriends and work colleagues are with their boyfriends, she will begin to wonder why she's wasting her time trying so hard to make it work with a guy who doesn't even believe he's worthy of her.

Then, rather than put up with his controlling behavior and over-protectiveness, she will try to reclaim her sense of freedom by breaking up with him.

Another common reason why a woman will say that to her boyfriend is

2. He spent way too much time with her or was texting and calling her all the time

As a result, the relationship ended up feeling like work that she had to do, rather than a relaxing, enjoyable experience of being in love.

If they were together, he always needed her affection and attention and if they were apart, he always needed to text with her or call her to feel okay about himself and not worry that she might be straying.

He may have also turned her off by constantly sending her updates of what he was doing and where he was (e.g. via text message, Snapchat, photos, video calls).

Eventually, she just got tired of how much effort seemed to be required to be in a relationship with him.

It felt as though she was working for him to make sure that he always felt loved, wanted, needed and assured that she was his girlfriend.

As a result, she got tired of the relationship and wanted to reclaim her sense of freedom.

Another reason why a woman will break up with her boyfriend to reclaim her sense of freedom is becauseâ€¦!

3. He lacked purpose and direction in life, so she needed to find a purpose for herself outside of the relationship

[image: He lacked purpose and direction in life, so she needed to find one for herself]

Most women want to be with a man who has purpose and direction in life (e.g. big goals, dreams and ambitions that he is actively following through on), so that she can then relax into being his woman and enjoy the love and life that they have together.

A woman wants to know that if she eventually decides to become a mother one day, her man will be able to keep their life moving forward, because he is deeply passionate about his ambitions and is always making progress towards them.

So, in a situation where a guy doesnâ€™t have any big goals, dreams or ambitions and is instead stuck in a rut in his life (e.g. he doesnâ€™t have a job, or is stuck job that he hates, heâ€™s a loner and doesnâ€™t have many, or any friends, or he makes his entire existence revolve around his relationship and feels lost without his womanâ€™s support and encouragement), itâ€™s only natural that he will become clingy and needy over time.

He will cling to his girlfriend because she is the one thing that seems valuable and worthwhile in his life and without her, he'd be lost, sad and have to face up to the world once again on his own.

Yet, here's the thingâ€¦!

Women hate to feel responsible for a manâ€™s emotional state in a relationship.

So, although she wants her guy to be loving and attentive and make her feel like the most important person in his life, she doesnâ€™t want to be the most important thing in his life.

The most important thing to a man should be his biggest goals, dreams and ambitions and he should always be making progress towards them.

If he can do that, a woman will naturally respect him and follow his lead throughout life, rather than thinking that she needs to reclaim her sense of freedom so she can start making progress in life.

Yet, if a woman comes to the realization that her guy is stumbling through life without a clear purpose or direction, it will cause her to feel insecure about her future.

She will then start thinking things like, â€œIf he canâ€™t get serious about the future then I guess I will have to do it. I canâ€™t just sit around and hope that one day he will man up and lead the way to a better future for us. What if I fall pregnant next week? Will I then have to take care of a guy and a baby at the same time? Will I have to be the strong one and lead the way for us? When I think about my future with him, I just donâ€™t feel safe and protected and like I can rely on him. Instead, I feel like heâ€™s just going to keep leaning on me for direction and support. Thatâ€™s not how I see *myself living my life in a relationship with a man. I need to reclaim my sense of freedom now, before itâ€™s too late. If he gets me pregnant, then I'm stuck with him. If he proposes and I say yes, then it will be harder to break up with him. So, I have to get out now while I can. I need to focus on what I want for the long term, rather than settle for a relationship and a guy who makes me feel lost and confused about my future with him.*â€œ

If she then breaks up with him and he starts begging her for another chance, rather than make her change her mind, the only thing he accomplishes is to remind her of how emotionally dependent he is on her.

So, she just keeps saying, *â€œNo. Itâ€™s over. Accept it. I want to reclaim my sense of freedom. I don't want to be in a relationship anymore. Please understand that.*â€œ

Another common reason why a woman will say that to her boyfriend isâ€œ!

4. The relationship became boring

Gone are the days where a woman was forced (by pressure from society) to stay in a relationship with a man regardless of how miserable or bored she felt.

In todayâ€™s world, itâ€™s no longer a social taboo for a woman to have multiple relationships throughout the course of her life.

Most families donâ€™t expect their daughters to stick with a guy if he makes her unhappy and most women can take care of themselves and find a replacement guy whenever they want (e.g. get on Tinder or online dating, go to a bar or club, go speed dating, ask friends to set her up).

So, rather than remaining stuck in a relationship with a guy who makes her feel bored or trapped, todayâ€™s woman will break up with him if he canâ€™t make her feel the way she wants to feel (e.g. respectful, attracted and in love).

Most women today are negatively influenced by what they see on TV or read about on the internet (e.g. Reading about celebrities talk about how much happier they are being single. Watching exciting, passion-filled relationships that never get dull on TV shows. Watching women dumping guys and moving on to find their Prince Charming who is charismatic, romantic and exciting).

So, when a woman finds herself in a relationship thatâ€™s lost itâ€™s spark and is dull and boring (e.g. her guy treats her more like a buddy than a desirable, sexy woman, theyâ€™re always doing the same things, the romance has died), she won't always just put up with it and stay.

For example: She may begin to think, *â€œThis is it? Is this really the best I can do for myself? Our relationship has become so boring. All we ever do is watch TV and hang out. I feel like weâ€™re roommates rather than lovers. Thereâ€™s just no spark between us anymore. This isnâ€™t how I want to spend the rest of my life. I want to be with a man who makes me feel butterflies in my stomach every time Iâ€™m near him. I think Iâ€™m better off breaking up with him and reclaiming my sense of freedom, than going forward like this feeling trapped and bored.*â€œ

When a woman gets to that point, she will usually break up with her guy and try to move on as quickly as possible, to avoid feeling the need to get back with him to end the pain of breaking up.

So, if your ex broke up with you because she felt bored, to get her back, you need to quickly re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you every time you interact with her from now on.

You can do that by maintaining your confidence around her (especially if she is being cold, distant or mean towards you) and using humor to get her laughing and smiling to bring down her protective walls.

You can also re-attract her by being emotionally masculine around her and making her feel feminine, girly and desirable in your presence.

The more she can see that youâ€¢re not the same guy she broke up with (e.g. you're no longer as boring, predictable, insecure or self-doubting), the more her curiosity will grow.

She will want to see more of you to experience the new and improved you for herself.

When that happens, the relationship automatically starts to get back together because the way you make her feel is more attractive to her than being single and potentially lonely.

Another more reason why a woman will say that to her boyfriend isâ€¢!

5. She grew up faster than him

[image: She grew up faster than him]

Initially, when a couple gets together it may be because they are on the same level emotionally.

For example: A guy and woman might meet at university and their common interests are to hang out with friends, go to parties, drink a lot of alcohol and have as much fun as possible without worrying so much about responsibilities or the future.

Yet, as the time passes and they graduate from university, itâ€¢s only normal that their priorities in life may begin to change.

If a woman realizes that sheâ€¢s ready to get more serious about her life and focus more on her career or getting a good job, settling down, being in a more serious and committed relationship, but her boyfriend is still stuck at the same level he was at when they were in university, she will inevitably start to question if heâ€¢s the right guy for her.

She may then begin to think, â€¢Thereâ€¢s just too much of a gap between my emotional maturity and his. Heâ€¢s still acting like a boy or a teenager who likes the idea of going through life without any responsibilities. Iâ€¢ve grown up, have set real goals and have made real plans for the future. Maybe it's time for us to go our separate ways.â€¢

She might then say to him, â€¢Why donâ€¢t you grow up and think about what you want to do with your life? Stop acting like this. You need to get serious about life, otherwise you're going to lose me.â€¢

If he doesnâ€¢t listen and remains stuck at the same level, she will lose too much respect and attraction for him to want to stay in the relationship.

She will then break up with him and say that she wants to reclaim her freedom and be herself again.

Another common reasonâ€¢!

6. Partying with her single girlfriends seemed more exciting than being with him

If a woman is unhappy in her relationship with her boyfriend, she may start to get jealous when she sees her single friends having so much fun partying, dating different guys and being free to do whatever they want.

She may begin to wonder, "Maybe I'm just too young to settle down at this stage of my life. Maybe I should be single for a while and enjoy my life while I still can. I can always settle down at a later stage, but I can't suddenly start partying and having fun at 50. I've got to do it now, otherwise I will waste my life being unhappy in a relationship with him. I might get pregnant and have to raise a family with him. Then I'll be stuck. I've got to get out now while I can."

She will then break up with her guy by saying something along the lines of, "Look, it's not you, it's me. I'm just too young to get serious with one guy right now. I need to reclaim my sense of freedom and experience the single life while I'm still young."

After the initial shock wears off, a guy might hope that giving her space will make her realize that she should be with him.

For example: He may think to himself, "Maybe she's right. Maybe she is too young to settle down with me right now. So, I'm just going to give her some time to party it up and then when she's had enough of the single life, she will see that I'm still here waiting for her. She will then come back to me and we can be together again."

Yet, that approach rarely, if ever works because the woman usually has sex with a new guy who is more confident and emotionally masculine than her ex.

As a result, she just doesn't feel like downgrading and getting back with her ex who lacks the kind of confidence and emotional masculinity that really turns her on.

A lot of guys don't realize that and just hope that giving her space will make her miss him and come running back.

It does work in some cases, but in the majority of cases, the woman just moves on and doesn't feel the need to go back to her ex.

So, when a guy doesn't hear from his ex girlfriend for months or even years and decides to call her up to see why she's not coming back to him, she will often say something like, "Huh? Why are you still waiting for me? That's crazy! We've been broken up for so long. Why haven't you moved on? I moved on a long time ago and so should you. What he had is over and you need to accept that."

Don't let that happen to you.

If you want your girlfriend back, you must focus on actively sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you again NOW, before it's too late.

Every time you interact with her from now on, you can make her smile, laugh and feel attracted and turned on by your approach to the conversation and interaction.

This will make her feel happy and attracted to you.

The happier and more attracted that she feels around you, the less influence her single friends will have over her.

All of sudden, getting back with you will feel more exciting than being like her single friends who just sleep around and don't get to experience real, lasting love.

A final reason why a woman will say that to her boyfriend is

7. She thought she wanted to settle down, but the relationship just wasn't fulfilling enough for her

Initially, a woman might get into a relationship with a guy with the belief that she's ready to settle down.

This is especially true if the relationship is very exciting (e.g. the sex is great, they have a lot of fun together, her and her man are into the same things).

She might think, "Wow! This is it. This is the guy I'm going to be with for life. He's the one."

Yet, that belief won't remain if the guy is unable to build on her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him over time.

For example: If a guy often feels insecure in the relationship and worries, "What if she breaks up with me? What if she suddenly realizes she can do better than me? I can't lose her. She's my life. I have to keep her away from other guys" he might then start to become clingy and needy as a result.

Initially, she might think it's romantic that he needs her so much, wants to protect her and that she's just so important to him.

However, when she realizes his actions are based on insecurity, her respect and attraction for him will begin to fade.

Why?

Women are hardwired to respect and feel sexually attracted to emotional strength in men and to feel turned off by emotional weakness.

So, when her instincts kick in and let her know that she's with a guy who is behaving the way he is due to insecurity, he may then start asking herself, "I thought I was ready to settle down, but now I'm not so sure anymore. This isn't working out. Something isn't right. Maybe I have to break up with him."

If his behavior continues, she will break up with him to reclaim her sense of freedom and get rid of the instinct feeling that has been bugging her for weeks, months or maybe even years.

Here's the thing:

Even though your girlfriend may have once said something like, "I want us to be together forever," she's not obligated to stick with that statement, if you can't build on her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you over time.

So, if your ex broke up with you because she wants to reclaim her sense of freedom, you need to prove to her that being with you now will be so much better and more worthwhile to her than before.

How can you do that?

By using every interaction you have with her to make her smile, laugh and feel attracted to you again.

When she feels attracted to you in new and exciting ways (i.e. because you're now more confident, emotionally strong and masculine than ever before), the idea of the single life will stop being so appealing to her.

She will feel drawn to you again and her heart will open up.

She will want you back and you can then confidently guide her back into a relationship with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Said That I Wasn't Enough of a Man For Her and Then Dumped Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

7 common reasons why a woman will say that to her boyfriend as an excuse to break up with him are that:

1. He lacked purpose and direction in life

Although being in love with a woman and having a great relationship with her is something that most men strive to achieve, it cannot be his main purpose in life.

Why?

A woman wants her man to love her, spend time with her and appreciate her, but not if it comes at the expense of him reaching his true potential as a man by following through on his biggest goals, dreams and ambitions.

So, when a man neglects all the other areas of his life (e.g. his goals, interests, friends, hobbies) to make her the main focus of his existence, a woman will gradually become annoyed by that and begin to show less affection and interest in him.

As a result, he will begin to behave in a clingy, needy, insecure way because he notices that she's just not that into him anymore.

Her and the relationship is pretty much what his life is about.

He doesn't really care that much about following through on the big goals, dreams and ambitions that he used to have because he's with her now.

[image: He lacked purpose and direction in life]

Yet, she doesn't like that.

She feels as though he's hiding from becoming a bigger and better man behind the safety and comfort of spending lots of time with her.

She then begins to wonder, “Why does he just want to spend time with me? Why does he become insecure if I'm not being loving and making him feel important to me? Isn't the man supposed to be the more emotionally strong one in the relationship? I want a man I can look up to and rely on. I don't want to be with a guy who needs me to make him feel okay about his place in the world and keep him safe and hidden from having to rise up and become a better man. I need a real man.”

Initially, she might try to encourage him to be more emotionally independent by suggesting that he start to follow through on his goals and dreams.

Yet, an insecure guy doesn't usually like the sound of that kind of suggestion.

He may worry, “Is she trying to get me to spend more time on other things, so she can be free to find a new guy?” or, “Is she bored of me and wants me to become so busy working on my goals that we don't have time for each other anymore and she can then use that as an excuse to break up with me?”

In his mind, he just wants to be with her and spend time with her.

Everything else in life is just annoying, pointless or a waste of time.

He just wants to be with her because when he is, he feels happy, safe, comfortable and warm.

Yet, if a woman realizes that she's in a relationship with a guy who is never going to do anything without her supporting him, she will usually just break up with him and try to find a guy who is ready to become and be a real man, or a man who is already a real man.

Here's the thing|

There are some women who like to be with a man who has nothing else going on in his life other than her (usually unattractive or insecure women), but the majority of women want to be in a balanced relationship with a man they can look up to and respect.

When a woman feels respect for her man, she will also feel sexually attracted to him, and her love for him will grow stronger over time.

On the other hand, if a woman feels like she can't look up to her man because he is too insecure and emotionally weak to stand on his own two feet in life, she will lose respect for him and her feelings of sexual attraction and love will inevitably begin to fade.

Another reason why a woman will dump her guy for not being man enough is because|

2. He needed her to support him emotionally

Sometimes a guy becomes so emotionally dependent on his woman, that he can't really do much without her support.

For example: He might ask her things like, â€œDo you think I can do it? What if I'm not good enough and I fail?â€ or â€œWill you come with me to the interview/meeting? You can stay in the car, but just knowing you're there will make me feel better,â€ or â€œI can't live life without you. I need you. Will you promise that you'll never leave me?â€

In his mind he may even be thinking, â€œHer and I are so connected. She's my reason for living and everything I do in my life is because she's there to support me. I don't know what I'd do if I ever lost her. Being with her is the only thing that makes me happy.â€

Yet, a guy being like that in a relationship with a woman is almost always a recipe for disaster. Why?

Women hate to feel responsible for a man's emotional state in a relationship.

A woman wants her man to be emotionally strong, confident and forward moving in his life, with or without her support or reassurance.

[image: You need to support me emotionally. I'm your boyfriend, you know? Help me!]

Many guys don't realize that, so they end up ruining a perfectly good relationship by turning her off with emotionally needy behavior.

Then, when a guy like that gets broken up with, he wonders, â€œWhat happened? My ex said that I wasn't enough of a man for her and then dumped me. Why? What did I do wrong? What could I have done to be more of a man for her? What does she want? What will make her happy?â€

Here's the thing|

A woman can't feel respect and attraction for a guy when she has to support him emotionally because he's too emotionally sensitive or wimpy to handle life like a real man.

So, if you made that kind of mistake and want to get her back, you first have to prove to her that you're now the man she always wanted you to be.

How can you do that?

By becoming emotionally independent and realizing that you don't need her to be able to live a successful, happy and fulfilled life.

The truth is that you are more than capable of pursuing your goals, dreams and ambitions in life without her emotional support.

Yes, you want her there and it's always nice to have a loving, supportive woman who stands behind you and encourages you to do better, but you don't need her to do what needs to be done to succeed in your life.

When you get to that point in your thinking, you will automatically feel more confident, which will be attractive to her.

The emotionally independent you are from now on, the more that she will look at you as the kind of man that she can respect and feel proud to be associated with again.

Another reason why a woman will dump her guy for not being man enough is because

3. He didn't make her feel feminine and girly enough

Sometimes, a guy will get so comfortable in his relationship with a woman that he falls into the habit of treating her more like his friend or roommate, rather than like his feminine, sexy woman.

For example: A guy might stop noticing his woman's efforts to look beautiful and attractive for him.

He may also get bored of doing the romantic things that originally kept the sexual spark alive between them (e.g. touch and kiss her in a way that showed his attraction for her, take her out on romantic dates, hold her in a way that made her feel girly in comparison to his masculinity).

Initially, a woman will usually put up with it by saying to herself, It's okay. He's a great guy. Besides, all relationships don't remain as exciting as they used to be in the beginning, right? It's to be expected that some of the original thrill will wear off. I'm sure that this is just the way it's supposed to be.

Yet, over time, she will notice that couples who've been together longer than her and him don't have that problem.

Other couples have managed to maintain a clear masculine/feminine dynamic in their relationship, where the man is clearly the man and the woman is clearly the woman.

and they are so happy.

When she looks at what she has with her guy, she realizes that they've become more like friends, roommates or worse, like girlfriends.

In other words, he has ended up acting a lot like her and letting go of much of his masculinity.

He's become too soft, wimpy and feminine in his approach to being a guy.

and it's turning her off.

She then decides to either threaten him with a break up in the hopes that he changes, or cheats on him to end the relationship in quick, but messy way or just breaks up with him and tries to move on after that.

Hereâs the thingâ!

Modern women often have a difficult time admitting the truth about what they really in a man.

It's hard for them to say, "I like a man who doesn't act like me in any way. He's masculine, raw and unafraid. He doesn't need me to be gentle with him to feel confident about himself. He can laugh at me if I tease him and try to make him feel uncomfortable or insecure. He doesn't take my crap so seriously. I like that in a man. A man who stands on his own two feet and doesn't need me to be all nice, sweet and gentle for him to continue feeling strong enough to stand up and be the man he is."

Women don't want to say that because most guys will get the wrong idea and take it too far (i.e. start treating women badly).

That's why women just dump guys who don't yet know how to be a man, rather than having to explain everything in detail.

It's too much of a risk for a woman to give a guy the secrets to a woman's heart because in most cases, the guy will take it too far.

She just wants a man who knows how to be the kind of masculine man that women really want.

When a woman is around a man like that (you may have seen it in action), she smiles, giggles and becomes girly.

She loves it because she gets to be feminine around him, in response to his very masculine energy and approach.

Some guys might think, "Well, I don't want to be more emotionally masculine. I just want to be me, even if I am emotionally sensitive. Why can't she like me for that? Why do men have to be confident? It's not fair."

It's kind of like a heavily overweight woman saying, "Why can't men just like me for my personality? Why do women have to look good for men? It's not fair."

Sure, some men will like her for personality and even find her obesity attractive, but the majority won't.

Likewise, some women will like a guy who lacks masculinity (i.e. he's an emotional wimp, gives a woman too much power in a relationship), but the majority of women won't.

The fact is, the less feminine and girly that a woman feels around her guy, the less sexual attraction she feels for him.

It literally kills her sexual desire and as a result, it makes her start to question whether she should actually be in a romantic relationship with him or not.

By the wayâ!

I know that some people get offended when weight is brought up.

Additionally, some guys assume that if they are overweight, a woman won't like them or feel attracted to them.

So, here's a very brief lesson on attraction:

A woman's physical appearance is to a man, what a man's personality is to a woman.

You find her looks sexy.

She finds your personality sexy.

Of course, men and women can feel attracted to personality or looks, but the way that nature works is that men are more attracted to looks and women are more attracted to personality.

Okay, back to getting your ex backâ€¦!

If you want to get your ex back after she dumped you for not being man enough for her, make sure that every time you interact with her from now on (on the phone and in person), youâ€™re sparking her feelings of attraction for you and making her feel girly and feminine, rather than being like a nice, sweet, platonic friend to her.

Being nice, sweet and friendly isn't going to make her wet.

You've got to man up and start being more confident, ballsy and masculine if you want her to feel a spark with you.

The more you spark her feelings of desire inside, the less she will hold onto the idea that youâ€™re not man enough for her.

Even if she tries to stop it, she will automatically feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and begin to feel drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her (i.e. sexually attracted, aroused).

Another reason why a woman will dump her guy for not being man enough is becauseâ€¦!

4. He cried to her when life got tough

Sometimes a guy will think that pouring his heart out to his woman, telling her all about his problems and worries and turning to her for emotional support time and time again is actually something she wants him to do.

So, let's get this straightâ€¦!

There's nothing wrong with a guy talking about his problems with his woman, but if he continuously whines, complains and falls to pieces around her (i.e. like a woman or a boy would), her respect for him will begin to diminish.

What is acceptable to a woman is when a man talks to her about his problems and then goes into solution mode.

For example: "I lost my job today because they are restricting the company. Not to worry. I will use this as an opportunity to try to get an even better job now with a new company. I might even try to take on a bigger role if I can get it."

She can then look up to him and respect him for handling life like a man.

She doesn't have to take on the role of reassuring him that everything will be okay, patting him on the back and trying to make him feel confident again.

He's already got things under control.

Yes, he might be disappointed that it happened, but because he's a man, he doesn't dwell on the disappointed and look for pity.

Instead, he feels the disappointment and then gets on with a solution, which then makes him feel confident, hopeful and happy about the direction he is now heading.

That way, his woman can relax and know that her man has things under control.

She can be his girl and feel feminine around him, which results in her feeling sexually attracted to him.

Here's the thingâ€¦!

Even though a modern woman is usually perfectly capable of taking care of herself, she still wants to be able to depend on her man to be the more emotionally strong one in the relationship.

If he can't give her the support that she needs and instead expects her to hold his hand and support him emotionally because he can't cope with the inevitable problems that arise in life (e.g. he has a disagreement at work, he loses some money in a bad investment, he fails an exam, he needs to repair his car, he has an issue with a friend or family member) she just won't be able to respect him.

If he cries to her when life gets tough, it will further ruin her respect, attraction and love for him.

As a result, she will eventually get to the point where she dumps him for not being man enough for her.

So, to get an ex back after crying to her, a guy needs to let her see that he's changed (via the way he thinks, talks and behaves) and that he's become an emotionally stronger man since the break up (e.g. he's more confident and self-assured now, he can handle his problems on his own without falling apart, he isn't an emotionally sensitive guy anymore).

Then, when she sees for herself that he's no longer at the same level he was at when she broke up with him, it becomes more difficult for her to hang on to her negative opinion of him because he's no longer the guy she remembers.

Another reason why a woman will dump her guy for not being man enough is becauseâ€¦!

5. He needed her more than she needed him

[image: He needed her more than she needed him]

A woman does want her man to want her, appreciate her and love her, but not if it always feels like he needs her more than she needs him.

Most women want to feel like they are lucky to have their man (e.g. because he's so confident that he could easily attract another woman) and feel proud to be his woman (e.g. because he's rising through the level of his true potential as a man by following through on his biggest goals, dream and ambitions in life).

If a woman finds a man like that, she sticks with him.

Yet, if a woman finds herself with a man who feels luckier to have her and isn't making her feel proud, she will start to feel as though she's making a mistake in being with him.

Another reason why a woman will dump her guy for not being man enough is becauseâ€¦!

6. He let her wear the pants in the relationship

Sometimes a guy will make the mistake of thinking that in order to be happy in a relationship, a woman has to be the one who wears the pants, makes all the decisions and is generally in charge.

So, to please his girlfriend (fiancée or wife) he might continuously place her needs ahead of his own because he thinks that's what she wants.

Yet, he is wrong.

Of course, it is true that some women like to wear the pants in a relationship, but most women don't.

The ones who do wear the pants end up feeling so turned off by the wimpy, weak behavior of their guy that they withhold sex.

He only gets it if she says, "Yes" and even still, he has to be on his best behavior the whole time, or else she will change her mind.

If he tries to initiate sex, she rejects him almost 100% of the time and he has to live with the fact that he can't even get laid in his own relationship.

That's not a fun way to live life as a man.

It's also not what women want to experience either.

A woman wants to be able to respect her guy's position as the man and then naturally submit to him sexually and romantically.

Of course, women don't go around admitting that in public because they fear it will make them look weak.

Yet, it's what makes a woman the happiest and most in love when in a relationship with a man.

100 years ago, women had to put up with being in an unhappy relationship or marriage.

Yet, today's women can do whatever they want and in most cases, they won't settle for being in a relationship with a guy who isn't enough of a man for her.

She simply gets way too much influence from TV shows, music videos and Hollywood movies that tell her it's okay to dump her guy if he doesn't make her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with him (i.e. feminine, girly, in love).

So, even if a woman initially enjoys testing her guy by wearing the pants in the relationship and bossing him around, it will get boring eventually.

She will lose so much respect and attraction for him that she begins to wonder, Why did I ever hook up with him in the first place? Why am I sticking with this relationship? He's obviously not a real man. I'm wasting my time with him.

She then dumps him.

In many cases, a guy assumes that if she doesn't like his nice, sweet guy approach, then she must want a bad boy.

He then tries to get her back by acting bossy and overly domineering when he interacts with her, in the hopes that she will think, Wow, he's so manly now. I think we should get back together again.

Yet, she now feels turned off by him for being a bully to her.

Remember: A woman wants to be with a guy who knows how to confidently lead the way, without being an asshole about it.

A guy who naturally takes charge and allows her to relax into feeling totally feminine around him, rather than being overly domineering or bossy about things..

A guy who makes her feel loved, appreciated and respected, but also doesn't put up with her BS just to spend time with her.

That leads me to the next pointâ€¦!

7. He puts up with her bad treatment of him just so he can be with her

When a guy doesn't believe in himself and in his value to his woman, or to women (in general), he'll usually do anything to hold on to the woman he's got.

He'll feel so lucky to be in a relationship with her that he will allow himself to be a pushover around her (e.g. by placing her needs ahead of his own despite her bad behavior, saying nothing when she disrespects him or treats him badly, being extra nice to her when she throws a tantrum, being very generous towards her, helping her in any way he can).

Yet, rather than think to herself, â€œWow, I'm so lucky to have such a great guy who keeps being so nice, giving and sweet even though I'm being so selfish, cold and mean towards him. I need to stick with him for life,â€ a woman usually feels annoyed by him instead.

Why?

Women are simply not attracted to weak, wimpy men who let themselves get walked all over by a woman.

Why?

It's a primal instinct of a woman to align herself with a man who won't get bullied or taken advantage of by mean, selfish people out there in the world.

So, if she notices that she can walk all over him and he just puts up with it because that's all he thinks he deserves, then she will naturally feel turned off by him at an instinctive level.

Being a man is not about being very macho, aggressive or domineering.

It's just about not being a wimp in any way.

Women are naturally attracted to strong men who have kind of confidence and emotional strength that makes her feel protected and safe in a relationship.

So, if you want to get your ex back, you must get her to experience (on a phone call or in person) the new and improved version of you that is no longer self-doubting and insecure.

You're emotionally strong now.

Whatever she says to you, no matter how she treats you, how she tests you, how she behaves, she can see that you always react and respond in an emotionally strong way now.

She experiences your emotional strength and can't stop herself from feeling respect, attraction and love for you again.

When that happens, she looks at you as being man enough for her and wants to give you another chance to experience her new, more desirable feelings for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Broke Up With Me Because I Didn't Give Her the Love and Attention That She Needed

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your woman broke up with you because you didn't give her the kind of love and attention she needed, here are 6 steps to fix it and get her back!

1. Stop apologizing and start making her smile, laugh and feel happy when she's interacting with you

[image: Make her smile, laugh and feel good whenever she interacts with you from now on]

You've most likely already apologized to your ex for the way you treated her and probably more than once, right?

As you would now understand, another apology isn't going to fix the problem any more than all the previous apologies did.

So, what will?

Changing the dynamic between you and her to be more funny, enjoyable and light-hearted from now on, rather than allowing her to be so serious and make the situation out to be worse than it actually is.

Yes, it's true that you didn't do the right thing and you did make a mistake by not giving her the love and attention she needed, but it's a pretty common problem that couples experience in a relationship.

It's also something that can be easily fixed, forgiven and forgotten.

For example: Imagine that you're on a call with your ex and she turns the conversation towards what went wrong and how badly you messed up by saying things like, "I can't believe I'm even talking to you after the way you treated me. I gave you my all and you really hurt me."

In most cases, a guy will want to make his ex woman feel better by apologizing to her and saying things like, "You're right. I'm a jerk and I deserve everything you throw at me," but that's not going to change anything if he's already apologized plenty of times before.

It's also not going to pull her out of her negative mood and make her see him in a more positive light.

So, rather than getting caught up in all the drama she's creating, you need to use humor to get her to snap out of her "poor little me" attitude and into feeling good and feeling attracted when she interacts with you.

When she says something along the lines of, "I can't believe I'm even talking to you after the way you treated me. I gave you my all and you really hurt me," you can turn it around by saying in a light-hearted, joking way, "You know why you're talking to me? You missed my delicious lasagna, right? Of course, you're not going to admit that to me, but I know you haven't eaten a decent lasagna since we broke up. Go on! tell me I'm wrong! I can hear your stomach rumbling over the phone! Lasaaaaanga! Mmmm!"

She will then laugh, smile and begin to feel respect for your confidence and ability to turn her bad mood into a good one.

As you may know, women always say, “I like a guy who can make me laugh” and one of the most important parts of that desire from women, is a guy who can get them out of a bad mood with his confidence and humor.

So, when you get your ex laughing and feeling good, she stops focusing so much on the negatives about you and the relationship.

Note: Make sure you don't go overboard with it and turn every discussion into a joke, because then she'll get defensive and may think, “Not only didn't he give me the love and attention I needed before, but now he's not taking the break up seriously. Well, I'll show him. I'm not going to laugh at his jokes anymore.”

So, don't go overboard with it.

Just get her laughing and smiling to help her relax enough to drop her guard and open herself up to interacting with you again (on the phone and in person).

The next step is to

2. Get clear on the real missing pieces to the love experience that you and her shared

[image: What part of the love experience was missing?]

You need to understand your ex's real reasons for breaking up with you, so that when you interact with her from now on (e.g. on the phone and in person) you will be giving her the kind of love experience she really wants, rather than offering her things that she doesn't want.

For example: She might like the fact that you were ballsy and confident, but didn't like the way you ended up treating her badly and making her feel unimportant.

So, a mistake to avoid is dropping your confident, ballsy attitude and become a Mr. Nice Guy all of a sudden.

That's not what she's looking for either.

She wants you to take a more balanced approach.

A lot of guys who get dumped for the reason you did (i.e. not giving her the love and attention she needed), make the mistake of giving her way too much love and attention and hoping that it makes her happy.

In some cases, doing that can temporarily get a woman back because she wants to see him grovel and suck up to her, before she dumps him again.

Yet, because the guy comes across as desperate by sucking up to her, she loses respect for him and therefore, finds it difficult to maintain feelings of sexual attraction for him from then on.

As a result, the relationship will then break up again.

He will then be left thinking that he's trying “everything” and it didn't work, so he's lost her.

No.

He hasn't lost her.

He just has to use an approach that actually works (i.e. re-attract her, remain balanced and in control, build sexual tension).

When you re-attract your ex in the ways that really matter to her, then she naturally drops her guard and opens back up to you.

Do you know what part of the love experience was missing in your relationship with her?

Ask yourself, "What did I do that made her feel like I wasn't giving her the love and attention she needed?"

For example:

Maybe you bought her lovely, expensive gifts for special occasions (e.g. birthdays, anniversaries, Valentine's Day), but you failed to show appreciation for her on other days (e.g. You didn't notice when she changed her hairstyle or bought a new dress to look good for you. You didn't appreciate it when she made an effort to prepare a special dinner to impress you and make you feel loved).

Maybe you were nice and sweet to her in public, but when you were alone, you became more critical of her.

Maybe you spent too much time at work, but never made it up to her for being late, forgetting to call or not being available when she needed you.

Maybe you spent a lot of time pursuing your goals in life, but you never encouraged her to do the same or worse, criticized her and made her feel stupid as she tried to succeed at things in life.

Remember: Each relationship is different, so you have to find the reasons that are the most relevant to you and your ex.

Then, once you know where you went wrong, focus on showing your ex that you've moved past the level you were at when she broke up with you.

When she experiences your new, attractive behavior in person, she naturally begins to feel more respect and attraction for you as a man.

3. Show her love and attention, but don't do it in a desperate way

It's only natural that when a woman breaks up with a guy because he didn't give her the love and attention she needed, he might go to extremes to prove to her that he can do better.

For example: Some guys immediately propose marriage to a woman in situations like this, but because he is doing it out of desperation to get her back, she doesn't see the proposal as being sincere and something that he really wants to do.

Even if he promises that it is something he wants, the proposal is still out of place and just doesn't feel right to her.

She may think something like, "A proposal doesn't fix anything. The problems are still there and getting married would be like sweeping the dust under the carpet and hoping that it will go away. I don't want to do that and then find myself being another divorce statistic in a year or two. When I get married, I want it to be forever."

Another example is where a guy pours his heart out to his girlfriend (fiancée or wife) and cries to her, hoping that it will show her much he really cares for her.

He hope that when she sees how badly the break up is affecting him, she'll realize that he does love her after all and she will then change her mind.

However, desperation rarely makes a woman change her mind and in most cases, she just feels even more turned off and uses it as a reason to want to remain broken up.

So, make sure that when you interact with your ex, you're saying and doing the types of things that are making her reconnect with her feelings of love, respect and sexual attraction for you (e.g. making her laugh and smile, making her feel appreciated), not being desperate and turning her off even more.

Another important step to getting her back in a situation like yours, is to

4. Get her to forgive the old you

[image: Forgiving me will make you feel better]

Forgiveness makes a woman drop her guard and open herself back up to the idea of being with you again.

Getting her to forgive you is not about begging and pleading with her and saying things like, "Please, please, please forgive me! I'll do anything to make it up to you. Just tell me what you want and I'll do it," because that type of desperate pleading will cause her to close herself off even more.

A better way to get her to forgive you is by telling her that it will be for her benefit (this is actually true by the way).

For example: You can say something along the lines of, "I know I messed up and I'm truly sorry for hurting you. Breaking up was a big wake up call for me and I deserved it. It made me realize what's really important in my life and that is without a doubt, you. I don't expect you to believe me, but I really have changed and I would appreciate it if you'd forgive me, so we can both move forward without feeling negative and bitter about the past. We all know what it feels like to be angry at another person and then, when you meet someone new, you then project that anger onto them. The thing is, even though we're broken up, I still care about what happens to you and if you don't forgive me, that's what might happen to you in future relationships. So, I don't want you to forgive me for my sake, I want you to do it for you, because it will make your life better from now on!" and of course, "I'll feel better about it too. So, can you forgive me and allow us both to go forward as friends?"

If you can get her to the point where she genuinely forgives you, it makes her drop her guard feel comfortable to be interacting with you again.

She no longer stops herself from feeling attracted to you, or feeling respectful towards you.

Then, when she experiences the new you for herself (i.e. every time she talks to you on the phone or meets up with you in person), the idea of being your girl again doesn't seem as far-fetched of an idea to her as it did before.

She likes the new you and has already forgiven the old version of you.

You then need toâ€¦!

5. Build on her feelings whenever you interact with her

Building on your exâ€™s feelings of respect, attraction and love for you is the only way to make sure that you get her back for sure.

Some women are easier to get back than others.

If your case is a little more difficult, you need to make sure that you are using every interaction that you have with her as an opportunity to build on her feelings for you.

If you do that, she will be yours again for sure.

Where many guys go wrong is by trying to reactivate a womanâ€™s feelings by being on their best behavior around her.

For example: A guy will avoid flirting with his ex and will instead remain neutral and friendly around her.

He worries that if he flirts with her and shows her that heâ€™s still sexually interested, she will get upset and then he wonâ€™t get another chance with her.

Alternatively, a guy might use every interaction he has with his ex to get into serious discussions about the relationship and where he went wrong.

He may ask things like, â€œTell me what I should have done differently to give you the love and attention you needed? I need to know.â€

Yet, rather than make a woman feel loads of respect and sexual attraction for him for asking her to tell him what to do, itâ€™s actually annoying for her to have to explain what women feel attracted to and how he can do it.

So, if you want to reactivate your exâ€™s feelings for you, donâ€™t make the mistake of seeking her help or being extra nice around her to suck up to her.

Instead, focus on flirting, using humor and being a confident guy who believes in his ability to attract her.

When you use humor to get her smiling and laughing and then flirt with her to create sexual tension between you, it allows her to relax and enjoy the moment, without worrying about the fact that sheâ€™s considering getting back with you now.

Finallyâ€¦!

6. Get the relationship back together

In most cases, if a guy has properly reactivated his womanâ€™s feelings for him, she will be open to the idea of getting back together again right away.

However, if your ex isnâ€™t ready to get back together just yet, you might need to meet up with her another couple of times before she is.

In some cases (e.g. where the woman is very angry with her ex, or is afraid of getting hurt again) it might take 2 to 3 interactions (on the phone and in person) where a guy is building on the womanâ€™s feelings, before she will fully drop her guard and open herself up to the idea of getting back together again.

If that doesn't work, you might need to make her feel the pain of losing you by letting her see you enjoying a great life without her (e.g. by actively pursuing your big goals and dreams in life, taking up a new hobby or interest, going out and enjoying yourself with your friends).

When she finds out about that (e.g. via social media, mutual friends, co-workers, or even when you talk to her about what you've been up to lately) and she realizes that you're getting on with your life and are happy without her, she will begin to wonder, â€œDid I make the right decision by breaking up with him? Am I about to lose the love of my life because of my stubbornness? Should I just give him another chance?â€

She then drops her guard and without even realizing it, she finds herself back in your arms and thinking to herself, â€œThis is what I wanted all along. Iâ€™m so glad that he didnâ€™t give up on our love. He's such a better man now. I love him and want to stay with him for life.â€

You can make her feel that way.

You can do it.

Don't doubt yourself and feel like your situation is just too difficult.

Most men who get their ex woman back are dealing with difficult situations and they are able to do it.

You can too.

Yes, you made a mistake by not treating her as well as you should have, but that doesn't have to be the end of it.

When you focus on making her feel attracted to you again and then building on her feelings, you will get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me Because She Felt Smothered By Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

A woman will say that to her boyfriend if he made one or more of the following mistakes:

1. He regularly needed her reassurance to confirm that she really loved him and wasn't going to leave him

Let's face it.

Some guys get lucky when they meet their girlfriend.

She's prettier and possibly cooler than the kind of women he can usually attract.

So, he gets a little worried that she might realize her value and decide to dump him and hook up with a new guy instead.

For example: He might think something like, â€œWhatâ€™s a beautiful woman like her doing with a guy like me? I still canâ€™t believe my luck. Is today the day she will realize Iâ€™m not good enough for her and dump me? I just canâ€™t imagine what I would do if that ever happened.â€

Attempting to calm down his insecurities, he might then ask her things like, â€œDo you still love me? Are you still attracted to me? Are you still happy to be my girlfriend?â€ or â€œIâ€™m the luckiest guy in the world to have you as my girl. You wouldnâ€™t ever leave me would you? You know that would break my heart, right? Promise me that you and I will be together forever,â€ or â€œYouâ€™re the woman of my dreams. I need you to tell me that you really love me as much as I love you. I know how much I love you, but I don't know how much you love me. How much do you love me? Is the most in love you've ever been?â€

Initially, a woman will usually respond by trying to reassure him of her love by saying things like, â€œOf course I love you as much as you love me,â€ or â€œI feel lucky too. Youâ€™re a great guy and I want to be with you. If I didnâ€™t, I wouldnâ€™t have agreed to go out with you in the first place. So, don't worry.â€

Yet, over time, if she realizes that nothing she says or does is ever enough to stop him from being so insecure and needy, she will get tired of it.

She will start to feel as though he needs her to take care of him emotionally because he's not a real man who can stand up on his own two feet, without needing a woman to support him.

The more she has to do support him emotionally, the more smothered she will feel and her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him will then begin to fade.

[image: Stop worrying so much. It's a turn off to me, you know?]

She might then try to shake him up by saying something along the lines of, â€œStop worrying. Iâ€™m here with you now, arenâ€™t I? That means I love you, so stop being so insecure all the time. Youâ€™re driving me crazy! I feel like I canâ€™t breathe with all your neediness. I don't know how much more of this I can take.â€

In most cases, an insecure guy will then make things even worse.

Rather than quickly adjust his thinking and behavior to be the confident, emotionally strong man she needs him to be, he clings to her even more and feels even more of a need for her reassurance.

He starts to worry that she is losing interest and his biggest fear (i.e. her leaving him) is starting to come true.

He just can't stop himself from texting her or calling her all the time, spending as much time as possible by her side and seeking reassurance from her that she is happy with him and wouldn't leave him.

Eventually, the woman will have had enough of his neediness and emotional weakness, causing her to break up with him by saying something like, "I can't be with you anymore. I feel like you're smothering me. I need to be alone for a while."

Unfortunately, a guy might then make the mistake of thinking that he needs to ignore his ex girlfriend for weeks, or even months, to show her that he doesn't care about her and that he's no longer a clingy, needy guy.

In his mind, he is hoping that by ignoring her, it will trigger her fears of losing him and she will then realize that she still loves him and she will then come running back to him.

However, this tactic rarely (if ever) works, as explained in the video below!

Ignoring a woman just isn't effective in most ex back situations.

The truth is, if a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, then not hearing from him for weeks or even months won't really matter to her at all.

Sure, her ego might feel a bit bruised because he isn't desperately chasing her, but if she stops for a moment to remember how she felt in the relationship (i.e. smothered, overwhelmed), she isn't going to want him back.

Rather than thinking, "He's not contacting me! I'm losing him! I wonder what he's up to. Could he have met another woman by now? What if I lose him forever?" she'll be glad that he's not hassling her and just focus on moving on without him.

So, if your girlfriend broke up with you because she felt smothered by you, don't make the mistake of ignoring her in the hopes that it'll convince her you're less needy now.

What should you do instead?

Interact with her (e.g. over the phone and in person) and re-spark her feelings for you, by showing her (via your actions, behavior and the way you interact with her) that you're now a confident, emotionally strong man that she can look up to and respect.

Let her see that you have changed and she will begin to believe that you are no longer the same guy she dumped.

When she can see for herself that you're more confident and self-believing, it becomes more difficult for her to keep pushing you away.

She stops thinking about you as the needy, clingy, insecure guy you were before and starts looking at you with fresh eyes.

Her defenses come down and then the idea of interacting with you and seeing where things go from there, begins to feel like the right thing for her to do now.

Another reason why a woman will break up with a guy because she felt smothered by him is ifâ€¦!

2. He didn't want to spend any time apart from her because he was worried that other guys might steal her from him

Many ruin a perfectly good relationship with their ideal woman because they go through life comparing themselves to other men and feeling inferior.

That's not what an alpha male does.

An alpha male believes in his value and worth and doesn't ever question it.

As a result, he is always able to remain confident and believe in his attractiveness to his woman, regardless of what other men may be around her in her life.

He knows that he's the man.

Of course, not many guys have the courage to maintain an alpha male mindset, so they suffer the consequences in relationships with women.

She notices that he is worried about her potentially finding other guys attractive and it turns her off.

Women just aren't sexually attracted to the emotional weakness in men.

So, the more he feels insecure or inferior, the more she starts feeling attracted to other men who are more confident than him.

In other words, he creates the problem himself by being insecure and then makes it worse by becoming even more insecure when he notices that she's losing interest.

For example: A guy like that might focus on things about himself that he feels aren't good enough (e.g. he's not good looking enough, he's overweight, he's skinny, he's bald, he doesn't have a good enough job, he doesn't have enough money, he's not popular enough).

If he then notices his woman talking to a guy who has some of the things that he thinks are lacking in him (e.g. the guy is more physically attractive, has more money or an expensive car, is successful in his career) he might begin to think, â€œWhy is she talking to him? I'm going to end up losing her if I just let her socialize with guys like that. What if she realizes that she should dump me and get a better guy like him?â€

As a result, he will then start to become clingy and insist on doing everything together with his woman.

In his mind, he will justify his actions by saying something like, â€œI'm not jealous or insecure. It's just because I care for her so much. I heard that a man has to protect his woman. She is mine and I have to protect her from looking at other guys, talking to other guys or being hit on by other guys. If she does talk to other guys, they will steal her from me. I can't allow that to happen.â€

Yet, here's the thing!

That type of clingy, needy behavior only serves to highlight to his woman that he doesn't believe he's good enough for her.

As a result, she then starts to think that he might be right and she could do a lot better with him.

She then starts to think, â€œMaybe he's not the right guy for me. Maybe there is a better guy out there. Maybe he is smothering me so much because he's afraid I'll like another guy. What am I doing with him? He's clearly not confident enough for a woman like me. Maybe I need to break up with him.

Here's the thing!

If you didn't get lucky (i.e. you attracted her on purpose and you can easily attract and pick up other women at will), then it means that she selected you out of all the other options she had with guys.

It means that something about you stood out to her, made her feel sexually attracted and made her want to be in a romantic relationship with you.

So what happened?

Did you allow your insecurities to make you doubt your attractiveness and value to your girlfriend?

Did you then you into a clingy, needy guy and couldn't seem to stop yourself from doing it?

Did you start to make her feel smothered by always texting, calling or needing to be with her?

If so, then it's only natural that she would have felt smothered and eventually decided to break up with you.

The truth is, in today's world a woman doesn't have to stick with a guy if she doesn't want to.

Women are free to leave a relationship if they're not happy, even if she once said to her boyfriend, "I want to be with you forever" or, "I promise to never leave you."

Women essentially make decisions about relationships based on how they feel day by day, week by week, month by month.

If your girlfriend had been feeling turned off day in day out, week after week and month after month, then she will have forced herself to get to the point where she built up the courage broke it off with you.

She may have been hoping that you'd change (and giving you plenty of hints and warnings along the way), but because you didn't, she had to go through with her decision.

Don't worry though you can get her back.

You've just got to focus on re-attracting her and guiding her through the ex back process!

Another reason why a woman will break up with a guy because she felt smothered by him is if

3. He texted and called her more than she could handle, due to her busy work or study life

If a guy doesn't have a lot of experience with relationships (or feels really lucky to have gotten himself such a beautiful girlfriend), he might make the mistake of over-texting and calling her.

In his mind, he thinks he is doing the right thing.

He wants to show her how much he cares and make sure that she never, ever feels like he is taking her for granted, or that he might be somewhere hooking up with another woman.

For example: He might send her a good morning text every day, or text her to let her know that he's getting ready for work/university.

In extreme cases, a guy might then send her several more texts along the way like, â€œIâ€™m on the train and itâ€™s really packed today. Would rather be with you than here!â€ or â€œDriving to work now. Missing you!â€ or â€œJust arrived at work. Itâ€™s going to be a long day without you. Will phone later. Miss you.â€

Later that day, heâ€™ll call her to talk about random things (even though she might be busy) and also send a few more texts to say, â€œHey, it was great to hear your voice. Canâ€™t wait to see you,â€ or â€œTalking to you was the highlight of my day. Iâ€™ll call you again later for another dose of you â€œâ€œ

This goes on and on the whole day, every day, or most days.

He texts, calls and keeps in constant contact with her.

Why?

In addition to the reasons I mentioned above:

- He thinks that she will be flattered that he cares about her so much.
- He thinks that a boyfriend and girlfriend are supposed to spend all their time together and ignore the world around them.

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€

Although a woman might initially enjoy the attention and romance that comes with being on a guyâ€™s mind all day, she will eventually start to feel turned off and smothered by his constant need for attention from her.

Rather than think, â€œHeâ€™s so sweet. I just love that Iâ€™m never off his mind at any time. Heâ€™s the perfect boyfriend! Heâ€™s not like all those other guys who play hard to get and make a woman go crazy with longing. I never have to worry about where he is or what heâ€™s doing because I have a blow by blow account of his every move. Thatâ€™s so attractive to me!â€ she will instead be thinking something like, â€œI do like hearing from him, but I also have other things to do. I canâ€™t spend every minute of my day replying to his texts or answering his calls. The relationship with him is so overwhelmingâ€œI feel so smothered by him. Itâ€™s just too much. Something isnâ€™t quite right between him and I. It shouldnâ€™t be like this. Why am I feeling this way? Maybe heâ€™s not the one. Maybe I have to break up with him.â€

Then, when she breaks up with him, he continues with the same pattern of behavior (i.e. over-texting and calling) as a way of getting her back.

He just canâ€™t stop himself from being that way because he thinks that heâ€™s doing the right thing by showing her how much he loves her and needs her.

He doesnâ€™t realize that although a woman does like it when a man loves her and makes her feel appreciated, she doesnâ€™t want to be in the “one up” position in the relationship.

In other words, she doesnâ€™t want to feel like she is the leader, the boss or the most valuable one.

She wants him to make her feel as though she needs to impress him and be respectful towards him to maintain his interest, rather than just drowning her in his 24/7 interest, even if she is treating him badly.

If he canâ€™t offer her the challenge that a woman looks for in a man when in a relationship, she will get bored of being in the one up position and will start to feel attracted to guys who could take on that position.

So, if you want to get your girlfriend back, you've got to make sure that you start approaching her in a way that is going to be attractive to her.

Don't just try to get her back using your old approach, because it's not going to work on her.

She needs you to be a bit more of a challenge, as you interact with her and re-spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you.

Another reason why a woman will break up with a guy because she felt smothered by him is if

4. He tried to control her behavior, thoughts or feelings

[image: You have to do things my way]

When a guy feels insecure about himself and his value to his woman, he will usually react in some of the ways I've already mentioned so far (i.e. constantly look for reassurance of her feelings for him, become clingy and needy, overwhelm her with attention, text or call her all the time).

He might also get to the point where he tries to control her behavior, thinking and feelings, to make her more obedient and loyal.

For example: Some of the ways a guy might do that is by

- Checking her phone and/or social media accounts to see who she's talking to and what she's saying.
- Forbidding her to hang out with her single friends or work colleagues because he fears that they are trying to make her want to be single like them.
- Interrogating her about where she's been and with whom.
- Being suspicious of any guys in her life (e.g. work colleagues/male friends) and accusing her of feeling attracted to them.
- Being hostile towards any guys she might talk to/interact with (in some instances he may even get into arguments and fights).
- Calling her up at all hours of the day or night to check up on her.
- Not letting her dance too wildly if they are at a party, in case other guys start to feel attracted.
- Not allowing her to wear make up or revealing clothes, in case it attracts other guys.

Although he might think that this behavior is okay and that his jealousy is a sign of how much he really loves her, the truth is, it's just a symptom of his insecurity about his attractiveness to her.

If a man has an alpha male mindset about his attractiveness (i.e. he believes in his attractiveness to his woman and other women, regardless of what anyone tries to say to make him feel insecure), then he's never going to worry about other guys potentially looking at her or liking her.

He knows that he's the man and as a result, she feels a deep, ongoing respect and sexual attraction for him.

She knows that he is with one of the rare men, who always remain confident no matter what.

As a result, he always appears more attractive to her in comparison to other guys who are less confident and who doubt their attractiveness.

Confidence aside, you also have to trust your woman.

A healthy relationship is built on mutual trust, rather than on trying to control each other's thinking, behavior and feelings as a way of preventing a break up.

If a man cannot trust his woman, it will eventually erode her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him (i.e. because women are turned off by insecurity and emotional weakness in men) and she will either cheat on him, or break up with him.

One more reason why a woman will break up with a guy because she felt smothered by him is if

5. He made her the main purpose of his life

Many guys don't realize that a woman doesn't want to be the most important thing in his life.

She wants to be the most important person, but not the most important thing.

The most important thing needs to be his biggest goals, dreams and ambitions in life, so he can rise up through the levels of his true potential as a man.

If he does that, his woman will feel respect, attraction and love for him for life.

Yet, most guys don't know that or don't want to do it, because they'd rather just spend time with her and not care about trying to achieve their true potential.

For example: He might say to himself, "She is everything I ever wanted in a woman. She makes me happier than anything else in my life. In fact, when I think about being away from her, even for a few hours, it feels painful. I don't see the point of doing other things without her, or hanging out with other people if she's not there. I'm sure she feels the same way too. After all, what woman doesn't want to be her man's main focus in life? I want to be by her side and show her that she's the most important thing in my life and nothing else really matters."

He may then

- Give up his hobbies or interests (except video games because he can still be in the same place as her when doing that) to spend more of his time hanging out with her.
- Stop seeing his friends, unless she's invited too.
- Put his goals and ambitions on the back burner (e.g. he might say, "Maybe I'll get back to my ambitions someday, but right now, she comes first"). If he doesn't have any goals and ambitions for the future, he may think to himself, "I don't need anything more than her. She's the best thing that's ever happened to me. I want to focus on making her feel like a princess so that nothing will ever break us apart. She's all that matters to me now."
- Get upset when she wants to go out with her friends without him, or pursue a hobby or interest without including him.
- Feel like he can't be happy and fulfilled in his life without her.

Yet, that's where he's wrong.

A woman hates to feel responsible for a man's emotional state in a relationship (e.g. he's only happy if she's being affectionate and making him feel loved), or to be his main reason for living.

A woman wants her man to be happy, confident and forward moving in his life with, or without her support or reassurance.

If she finds herself in a relationship with a needy guy, a woman will usually try to encourage him to be more independent of her.

For example: Telling him to go out with his friends more, take up a new hobby that doesn't involve her or stop texting or calling her so much when they are apart.

Yet, if he continues to cling to her by saying, â€œWhy would I want to do that? Doing other things would just take time away from you and I don't ever want to do that. You are the most important thing in my lifeâ€ she will feel turned off and prepare to break up with him.

A final reason why a woman will break up with a guy because she felt smothered by him is if

6. He wasn't someone that she could look up to and respect, but he expected it of her anyway

[image: He wasn't the kind of man she could respect]

A woman might initially be attracted to a guy because she likes certain things about him (e.g. he's got a great sense of humor, he can make her laugh and smile even if she's in a bad mood, or he's a great conversationalist).

Based on her attraction for him, she will try to overlook some of the things about him she doesn't like (e.g. he's irresponsible, he breaks his promises to her, he's childish and immature, he depends on her to lead and make all the decisions).

She may even try to justify her reasons for being with him by saying to herself, â€œIt's okay. He's a great guy and I'm sure that over time, he'll grow up and start taking his life and our relationship more seriously. I know that he's not perfect, but I'm willing to take a chance on him.â€

She might even try to help him change and improve by saying things like, â€œWhy don't you ask your boss what you need to do to get a promotion?â€ or â€œI can't pay all the rent anymore. I have too many other expenses. Why don't you look for a job?â€ or â€œI accept that you forgot to call me, but this is now the 10th time you've promised me something and then haven't kept your word. I don't like it when you do that.â€

If he just ignores her hints and expects her to put up with it because she loves him, it will inevitably lead to her losing respect for him.

Here's the thing

When a woman grows up faster than her man (even if they are in their 20s, 30s or 40s) and starts wanting very different things (e.g. to settle down, for them to become more serious about their future together), her feelings for him will inevitably start to fade.

Then, rather than make excuses for his behavior like she did in the beginning, she will start thinking things like, â€œWhy am I still with him? He's never going to change. I'm just wasting my time. I want a man who thinks, talks, feels, behaves and takes action like a real man. I don't want to be stuck with an emotionally childish and immature man that I can't rely on, look up to or respect. It's time for me to get out of this smothering relationship. I've had enough. I've wasted enough time on him. I need to get away from him and find a replacement man.

So, if you're serious about getting your girlfriend back, you have to show her (not tell her) that you have changed.

Let her feel and experience the changes when she interacts with you.

If you do that, she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new you.

As a result, her guard will come down and she won't be worried about you smothering her or being needy if she gives you another chance.

She will be able to see for herself that you are now a more emotionally independent, strong and mature man.

You have learned from your mistakes and are now able to make her feel the kind of respect and attraction that opens her back up to you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

What Does it Mean When Your Ex Girlfriend (Fiancée or Wife) Says That She's Afraid of Getting Hurt Again?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 common reasons why a woman will say that to her ex:

1. She used to love you way more than you loved her, so she's afraid that it will happen again

[image: She used to love you way more than you loved her]

In the case of a boyfriend/girlfriend relationship, a guy might sometimes hook up with a woman and get into a relationship with her, but be secretly thinking something like, "This is fun, but I'm not really ready to get serious and settle down with her. I'll break up with her one day."

In the meantime, she might be thinking, "This guy is the greatest! I'm so in love with him. I can definitely see myself with him for life."

While she's opening herself up to the idea of a serious commitment and possibly even thinking about moving in together, getting married and starting a family with him one day, the guy is thinking otherwise.

He might act like he is interested in that too, but deep down, he knows that he intends to break up with her one day.

Over time, she will begin to pick up on the fact that their feelings for each other aren't really equal.

She may then try to be on her best behavior, do nice things for him and make him feel loved and appreciated as much as possible, in the hope that it makes him feel the same way about her as she does about him.

Yet, if he doesn't change and she realizes that there's too much of a gap between her emotional involvement and his, she will decide to break up with him, or at least threaten to break up with him to see if he changes.

When it comes to long-term relationships (couples who have been together for 2 to 3 years, or are engaged or married), some of the things that can cause a woman to feel that she loves him way more than he loves her include:

- He takes her for granted.
- He's often mean to her, but nice to others.
- He's not affectionate enough.
- He has a wandering eye.
- He is emotionally closed off from her.
- He stops making her feel appreciated.
- He compares her to other women in a negative way.
- He doesn't give her enough emotional support because he just doesn't care that much about her to want to.
- He cheats on her.

- He treats her like an idiot.
- He doesn't put in much or any effort into the relationship anymore.
- He expects way too much of her, without giving much in return.

So, if a woman breaks up with her boyfriend, fianc  or husband because she loved him more than he loved her, she is naturally going to be afraid of the same thing happening again if she gives him another chance.

If he then tries to get her back, she might say something like,    Sorry. I  m just too afraid of getting hurt again. It  s better if we leave things the way they are and move on.  

Essentially, what she  s not saying is,    You never loved me the way I wanted you to love me before, so what proof do I have that if I get back with you, the same thing won  t happen all over again? I  d have to be stupid to allow myself to get hurt like that once again. I  ve been regaining my confidence since the break up and I don  t want to fall back into feeling like I need your love to feel good about myself anymore. I  d probably be better off trying to get over you and finding myself another guy who will give me the love and commitment I really want and deserve.  

So, if you want to convince your ex girlfriend, fianc  or wife to give you another chance after she loved you more than you loved her, it  s going to take a lot more than saying,    I  m sorry. I promise to be more committed to you and the relationship this time,   to convince her this time.

What should you do instead?

Simply focus on sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you by making her smile, laugh and feel happy every time you interact with her (e.g. over the phone or face-to-face) from now on.

Stop trying to get her to commit to a relationship and just make her have feelings for you again.

By triggering some of her feelings, she lowers her guard and opens herself up to the idea of trusting you again.

However, just because her defenses come down, it doesn  t mean that she is 100% ready to get back together with you at that point.

For you to get that end result, she will first need to see that you  ve also made some changes to yourself since the break up.

For example: If a girlfriend broke up with her boyfriend because she wanted more from the relationship than he was willing to give (i.e. because he didn't really care about her), he needs to show her that he  s now more emotionally mature and serious about his future with her.

That doesn  t mean he has to rush a marriage proposal to get her back or declare his undying love for her and promise to treat her like a princess from now on.

Instead, he simply needs to show her (via his actions) that he now wants the same things that she does.

Another example is if a wife left her husband because he was too emotionally closed off from her.

To convince her to give him another chance, he needs to open himself up and let her into his heart.

Again, that doesn  t mean he should become an emotional wimp and continuously talk about his feelings all the time like a woman.

That's the biggest mistake a guy can make when trying to get his ex back  !

You have to remain calm, confident and in control when getting her back.

Another possible meaning to why your ex girlfriend, fiancée or wife says that she's afraid of getting hurt again is because

2. She's just being a drama queen and wants to see if you will fall for it

[image: She is creating fake drama to see if you fall for it]

Sometimes a woman might create some fake drama when she interacts with her ex, purely as a way of testing his confidence.

For example: Some of the ways she might do that is by

- Answering his calls or texts in a friendly way and then ignoring him for days or even weeks.
- Being happy and cheerful when talking to him on the phone and then suddenly bursting into tears and saying things like, "I can't believe how badly you treated me," or "How can you even think about asking me to give you another chance after the way you broke my heart?"
- Agreeing to meet up with him and then canceling at the last minute by saying something like, "I'm not ready to see you again. I'm still feeling too vulnerable."
- Meeting up with him and crying and saying, "I can't do this. I'm afraid of getting hurt again."

Naturally, when a guy is experiencing that kind of erratic behavior, he might feel a bit confused and he may even get upset at her for being so indecisive and overly emotional.

He may ask, "What do you want from me? How can I show you that I've changed and that things will be different between us this time? Just tell me what you want and I'll do it."

Yet, what he doesn't understand is that she doesn't actually want him to take her drama so seriously and that she's only testing him to see how he will respond.

For example:

- Will he put up with her bad behavior because he's desperate to get her back?
- Will he lose control of his emotions and resort to begging, pleading and crying as a way of trying to convince her?
- Will he lose confidence in himself and in his value and attractiveness to her?
- Will he start treating her even nicer and being more patient with her, when she really wants him to just laugh at her for being such a little drama queen?

If he gets dragged into her fake drama, she will lose respect for him and close herself off to him even more.

However, if he doesn't fall victim to her unnecessary emotional drama, she will naturally begin to look up to him and respect him again.

As a result, she will then begin to feel sparks of attraction and love for him and will open herself back up to being with him.

So, the next time your ex girlfriend, fiancée or wife gets overly emotional with you and says, “I’m afraid of getting hurt again,” just remember to see the funny side of how she is approaching it all, rather than getting sucked into the fake drama she is creating.

For example: You can laugh and say, “You’re such a little drama queen, aren’t you? Oh, my feelings...you’re so sensitive. I don’t want to get hurt. Oh, no! poor little me!” and then laugh at her and with her about it.

Initially, she might be a bit shocked that you’re not taking her drama seriously anymore, but even if she doesn’t show it, she will be feeling a tremendous amount of respect and sexual attraction for you for having the emotional courage to not get sucked into her fake drama.

She will then realize that you’re the confident, emotionally strong man she always wanted you to be and she won’t be able to stop herself from reconnecting with her original feelings of love for you.

When that happens, you can get her back easily.

Another possible meaning to why your ex girlfriend, fiancée or wife says that she’s afraid of getting hurt again is because

3. Her gut instinct is telling her that the relationship would just break up again soon anyway

[image: Her gut instinct is telling her that the relationship would just break up again soon anyway]

This is usually the case when a woman can see that her ex doesn’t even know what she really wants him to change.

Naturally, some guys might ask, “So, why doesn’t she just come out and tell me exactly what she wants? I’ll do whatever she wants, so why does she have to play games with me? If there’s something about me she doesn’t like, why doesn’t she tell me what to do to change? I will change!”

It would be nice if women spelled things out for men, but that’s not the role that women want to take on in a romantic relationship.

When in a romantic relationship, a woman does not want to be responsible for shaping a guy into the man that he needs to become.

She wants him to figure things out by himself and then take action like a real man, by making the necessary changes to his thinking and behavior along the way.

If she tells him how to attract her, it just won’t feel real to her.

It will feel as though he’s putting on an act and doing whatever she tells him like a good little puppet, even though deep down he may not want to change or be like that at all.

So, he might put on an act and then slowly change back to being how he was before.

Meanwhile, she will have wasted additional months or years being with him, which she will then regret.

That’s why women don’t want to come out and just tell you what to do.

A woman wants a man who understands how to be a man, wants to be a man and gets on with being a man.

She doesn't want a guy who thinks that being a man is too much work, is wrong or isn't something that he needs to do.

She also doesn't want a guy that expects her to lead him, carry him and encourage him along throughout life.

So, if a woman's ex fully understands what she wants him to change and then makes some improvements to his way of thinking, behavior and the way he interacts with her (without seeking her advice), she will be able to look up to him, respect him, feel attracted to him and love him as her man once again.

If he then asks her to get back together again, she will be open to the idea because she can see that he's at a different level now.

How can you show your ex that you're at a different level now and are a man that she can respect and look up to?

Here are some examples:

When you interact with your ex she might expect you to:

- Beg and plead and lose control of your emotions, but you instead remain confident, calm and in control no matter what she says and does.
- Be nervous and insecure around her, but you're emotionally strong, self-assured and relaxed.
- Be on your best behavior and put up with her tantrums or bad moods, but you don't get dragged into her fake drama and instead use humor to break through her defenses and make her lighten up.

She then drops her guard and feels more open and even happy to be interacting with you again.

She starts to feel that you've actually made an effort to become the man she always wanted you to be and the thought of getting back together again feels like something she really wants to do now.

However, be warned:

If you try to get her back without changing the things about you that turned her off in the first place, a woman will usually continue giving you excuses about why she doesn't want to be with you anymore.

A woman wants to see that her boyfriend/fiancé/husband understands her real reasons for breaking up with him and is already making changes because he wants to do it and not because she's telling him to do it.

Finally, another possible meaning as to why your ex girlfriend, fiancé or wife says that she's afraid of getting hurt again is because:

4. She now has feelings for another guy, so she doesn't want to say, "Yes" to getting back with you and then have to go through another break up with you

[image: She now has feelings for another guy, so she doesn't want to get back with you and then have to go through another break up with you]

Sometimes a woman might have already met another guy and wants to see where things go with him, but doesn't know how, or if, she wants to tell her ex about it.

So, rather than agreeing to get back into a relationship with him and then have to go through all the negative emotions of breaking up again, she simply says, I'm afraid of getting hurt again, in the hopes that he will say something along the lines of, How about I give you some space to think about things? Then, we can talk about getting back together again at a later stage.

If he doesn't suggest giving her space, she will ask for it.

She will then use that time apart to get over him and move on with her new guy.

When her ex finally calls her after 30, 60 or even more days of not interacting with her, she can then say, I'm sorry, but I can't get back with you now because I've met someone else now and I'm happy. Please accept that what we had is now truly over. You need to move on like I have.

By getting him to give her some space and then secretly moving on, she gets to avoid having long, tiring discussions or arguments with him about her reasons for not wanting to get back together again.

Get Her Back, Before it's Too Late

Now that you understand why she could have said that she was afraid of getting hurt, it's time to take the next step.

The next step is to focus reawakening her feelings of respect and attraction for you whenever you interact with her.

When you bring her feelings back and build on them during an interaction, all of her excuses begin to stop and she starts looking forward to being with you again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Said That She's Sorry For Giving Me the Impression That She Wants to Get Back With Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why a woman will say that she's sorry for giving you the impression that she wants to get back with you are:

1. She thought you'd changed, but you haven't

In most relationships, a woman doesn't decide to break up with her guy until after she's given him at least one or two chances to change and improve.

She will usually start off by hinting at what is bothering her.

For example: If she feels her guy is too jealous, she might say things like, "Don't worry."

"You're my man and I don't want anyone else," or "I love you and I wouldn't do anything to hurt you. You need to trust me."

If he doesn't pick up on her hints, or simply just ignores by telling himself something like, "I know she's annoyed with me now, but she loves me. She'll forgive me no matter what I do. She loves me," her hints will then begin to turn into arguments and fights.

Eventually, if she notices that no matter what she says to him, or how many fights and arguments they get into about the same thing, he always falls back to his old pattern of jealousy, she will begin to lose respect for him.

As a result, her feelings of love and attraction will begin to fade away, until she finally decides to break up with him.

Naturally, when a guy gets broken up with, his first instinct is to usually rush into saying and doing whatever he thinks will convince his ex to give him another chance.

Yet, in most cases, what he thinks is the right thing to do, turns out to be something that turns her off even further.

For example:

Classic mistake 1: Pouring his heart out to her in the hopes that it will make her overlook his flaws and give him another chance

[image: Pouring his heart out to his ex]

For example: A guy might say something like, "I know I messed up pretty badly, but in my defense, I only behaved that way because I love you so much. I was being jealous because the thought of losing you was more than I could bear. No matter how much I tried to protect our relationship, I ended up losing you anyway. I messed up. Please forgive me. I can't imagine my life without you in it. You were my reason for being and without you nothing makes sense or feels right anymore. I promise that I will never let you down again. Please just give me one more chance."

Yet, rather than feeling amazed by his declaration of love for her, she just feels turned off by how needy and dependent he is of her love.

She can sense that if she gives him another chance, he won't change and will continue on being the jealous guy that he was and still is.

Alternatively, he mightâ€¦

Classic mistake 2: Buying her flowers, a gift, or even go as far as proposing to her to show how much she means to him

Sending flowers to an ex after a break up is a pretty common mistake most guys make, but in extreme cases, a guy may even propose to his ex in a desperate attempt to make her change her mind.

Heâ€¦s secretly hoping that the thrill of getting married will overshadow all the negative things about him and the relationship that she didnâ€¦t like.

Yet, it doesn't.

She doesn't want to get married to a guy who is only proposing out of desperation.

She also doesn't feel impressed by flowers or a gift from a guy that she doesn't fully respect or feel attracted to.

He's doing it all backwards.

To get an ex back, you have to start by reactivating her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

Only when her feelings are back, will she actually appreciate a nice gesture like flowers or a gift.

Additionally, only when the relationship has been back together for a while and is happier than ever, will she then feel good about saying, "Yes" to a marriage proposal.

Classic mistake 3: Sending her emotional texts or e-mails

For example: A guy might text something along the lines of, â€¦Iâ€¦ll do anything to make you change your mind. Please give me one more chance. I canâ€¦t handle being apart from you,â€¦ or â€¦Being without you is torture. I know I stuffed up, but please give me a chance to make it up to you. I promise never to behave the same way again. I know I said it before, but this time itâ€¦s 100% for real. Please, forgive me. Iâ€¦m begging you!â€¦

Alternatively, he might text her something like, "You mean the world to me. I just want you to know how special you are to me. You are the best woman I've ever met. I love you more than anything. All I think about is you. The love we shared was so strong. Don't you agree? I want you back. I need you. You are everything to me. Please just see that."

Yet, that approach just doesnâ€¦t work in most cases because a woman will say to herself, â€¦Heâ€¦s just being desperate because he's feel hurt and rejected after being dumped. He probably also doesnâ€¦t want to lose me because it would mean that he'd have to go out there and face up to finding a new woman. If I give in and give him another chance, I bet heâ€¦s going to go back to being the same guy he was before.â€¦

Sometimes it does work though.

Sometimes, a woman still has feelings for her ex and thinks, "Maybe he is different now. Maybe I should give him another chanceâ€¦" and she then drops her guard (e.g. by sending him a sweet or friendly response to show her interest, or agreeing to meet up with him in person).

A guy might then assume that if sheâ€¦s open to seeing him again, it must mean that she wants to get back together again and he then gets excited.

He starts imagining them getting back together and everything being happy and loving again.

He gets his hopes up and can't wait to see her.

Yet, if she meets up with him and she realizes that he hasn't changed (e.g. he appears jealous when she talks about how happy she is without him, he becomes insecure and self-doubting), she will close herself off from him and do her best to move on as quickly as possible.

If he then calls her up and asks, What's going on? Why are you ignoring me? I thought we were working things out between us, she will say something like, As far as I was concerned, it was just a meet up to say hi as friends. I'm sorry for giving you the impression that I want to get back with you. It's over between us. Please accept that and move on.

The guy is then devastated and can't understand why she didn't give him another chance.

Here's the thing though!

If you want your ex to get back with you, the first step is to make some changes to yourself to attract her in the ways that are important to her.

For example:

- You're less insecure and self-doubting now, which means you don't feel the need to get jealous or control her anymore.
- You're more emotionally independent, which means that you don't need her to be gentle and nice with you to feel okay about yourself.
- You're more emotionally mature now, which means that you aren't seeking her pity or letting her walk all over you like she used to.

When she experiences those kind of changes in you, she naturally drops her guard and opens up to being with you romantically and sexually.

Where a lot of guys go wrong is thinking that because the things he has already tried (e.g. pouring his heart out, sending flowers, proposing) didn't convince her to give him another chance, then nothing else will.

Yet, that's just not true.

When your ex can see for herself that you really have changed this time, her feelings for you will also begin to change.

Even if she tries to deny it to your face, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling rushes of respect and attraction for you for being man enough to change and improve so quickly.

Another reason why your ex might have said that she's sorry for giving you the impression that she wants to get back with you is that!

2. She was thinking of getting back with you, but met a new guy who made her feel more respect and attraction than you

[image: She met a new guy who made her feel more attraction than you do]

Some women can't cope with the emotions of a break up and don't like the idea of being single for very long.

A woman like that might think to herself, â€œI miss him and I hate being alone. Maybe my expectations were too high. Maybe if I give him another chance, things would be different this time.â€

If her ex then tries to get her back (e.g. calls her on the phone, asks for another chance, promises to change), rather than make it clear to him that sheâ€™s not interested, she might let him believe that sheâ€™s open to giving the relationship another chance to see how she feels (e.g. does she stop feeling lonely and stop missing him).

This may go on for weeks, especially if the guy is trying to get her back via text, or if heâ€™s still making the same old mistakes that turned her off in the first place.

He might think that she will remain faithful to him and give him another chance, but if another man comes along and makes her feel more respect and attraction for him, she will almost certainly open up to that.

For example: The new guy makes her feel attracted in ways that her ex canâ€™t because heâ€™s more emotionally masculine and makes her feel feminine in his presence, he is more goal oriented and focused in his life or he is more emotionally dominant and takes the lead in the relationship.

All of a sudden, she will pull away from her ex and focus her attention on the new guy instead.

If her ex then says something along the lines of, â€œHey, whatâ€™s going on? Why are you being so cold and distant all of a sudden? I thought we were making progress towards getting back together again,â€ she will then say something like, â€œIâ€™m sorry for giving you the impression that I want to get back with you. Please just leave me alone.â€

Her ex is then left feeling confused and probably even a bit annoyed at her for giving him mixed messages.

So, if your ex gave you the impression that she wanted to get back with you and then suddenly changed her tune, she may have met a new guy recently who is giving her the kind of attraction experience she wants (e.g. heâ€™s more confident and emotionally masculine).

Yet, that doesnâ€™t mean that the new man is perfect and that you canâ€™t get her back.

In fact, when you make some attractive adjustments to the way you think, act and behave around her, you will be ready to properly re-attract her.

Giving her the kind of attraction experience that she really wants is the best way to get her to start paying attention to you and missing what you and her had.

Donâ€™t try to get her back by offering her what you want to give, when itâ€™s not what she actually wants.

For example: She might want you to be more confident, make her feel feminine and girly when sheâ€™s in your presence and not put up with her bad treatment of you.

Yet, you might want to send her flowers, be extra nice and sweet to her and let her have even more power over you.

Thatâ€™s not going to work.

You have to give her the kind of attraction experience that she really wants.

Additionally, if you are able to attract her in ways that her new guy canâ€™t (e.g. You make her laugh, whereas heâ€™s too serious. You get on well with her friends and family, but he doesnâ€™t).

You take her dreams and ambitions more seriously than he does), she will begin doubting her decision to break up with you.

She will then start to look at you in a positive light and realize that you probably are the right guy for her after all.

When that happens, she will open back up to you and help you to get a=the relationship back together with her.

Another reason why your ex might have said that sheâ□□s sorry for giving you the impression that she wants to get back with you is thatâ□|

3. She wanted to take things slow, but you put too much pressure on her to commit

[image: Please just give me another chance]

Sometimes, a woman might feel unsure about whether she wants to get back with her ex or not, so she will say to herself, â□□Okay, Iâ□□ll just take things slowly with him and see if things are different this time.â□□

She wants to see if her ex has changed and improved of the things that turned her off in the relationship (e.g. he has stopped being so jealous and controlling, he has become more focused and emotionally mature, or he has become more emotionally independent).

If he makes changes that are important to her, she will then be happy to get back with him and give the relationship another chance.

However, if she notices that nothing is changing, she will stick to her decision to be broken up and just focus on moving on.

Sometimes, a guy will be so eager to get his ex woman back that he begins to pressure her into committing to a relationship, even though he hasnâ□□t made real changes to himself and allowed her to feel attracted to that.

For example: When a guy interacts with his ex, rather than simply making her laugh, smile and feel happy to be talking to him, so she then naturally drops her guard and opens up to him, he turns her off by constantly wanting to discuss the relationship and work things out between them.

He might say things like, â□□I messed up before, but I want you to know that Iâ□□m really sorry for what happened. I promise that when we get back together again, things will be so much better between us. Just tell me what I should do, so I donâ□□t repeat the same mistakes as before. I promise to do anything you want. I will do whatever it takes to make you happy and make you love me again. So, the sooner you tell me what to do, the quicker we can get back together again and be a happy couple again.â□□

Yet, thatâ□□s not what a woman wants to hear.

In fact, rather than make her think, â□□This is great! I feel so good about getting back with him because heâ□□s willing to do anything I say to make me happy. I've got myself a slave! I can now control him!â□□ it actually turns her off even more. Why?

Firstly, a woman doesnâ□□t want to be pressured into a relationship with a guy on the basis of his promises to change.

Secondly, if a woman has to tell a guy what to do to make her feel attracted, it makes her feel like she has made a mistake getting into a relationship with him because he doesn't even yet know how to be a man.

As a result, she begins to feel attracted to men who don't need her to explain to them how to act, think and behave like a real man.

Then, her ex starts to look like a confused guy who still hasn't fully grown up and become a man. If she had been giving him signs that she might be interested in getting back together, she suddenly stops doing so.

She then says something like, â€œIâ€™m sorry for giving you the impression that I want to get back with you. It's over. I thought I made that clear. Please just accept it and leave me alone now.â€

That's a horrible situation for a guy to be in.

So, to avoid that, what you need to do is stop trying to get her back into a relationship right away and focus instead on having fun together.

The more you make her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you again, the more she will be able to relax and reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

Then, getting back together will happen naturally, because it's feels good for both of you.

On the other hand, if you put too much pressure on her to tell you what to do to get her back, she will just pull away from you even more.

Another reason why your ex might have said that she's sorry for giving you the impression that she wants to get back with you isâ€

4. She was only trying to be nice to let you down slowly, but you saw it as a sign that she wanted a relationship

Sometimes, a woman is just a really nice person and doesn't want to leave her ex feeling heartbroken and unable to move on after the relationship.

So, rather than make a clean break from him where she totally ignores him and refuses to have any contact with him whatsoever, she will try to let him down slowly by staying in touch and being nice, sweet and friendly towards him.

In her eyes, she's just being a decent, caring person and is doing her best to make sure that he feels good about himself and remains confident enough to move on with another woman.

Of course, most guys don't recognize that when it's happening.

Additionally, it's totally understandable that a guy who still cares for his ex and wants her back, might mistake her good intentions as meaning that she clearly wants him back.

So, when a woman realizes that she's accidentally been leading him on and giving him the wrong idea, she may then say to him, â€œIâ€™m sorry for giving you the impression that I want to get back with you. It's over. I'm not interested in giving it another chance.â€

It sucks to hear that, right?

Don't worry.

You can change her mind.

Even if your ex was only being nice to you to let you down slowly and isn't currently interested in getting back together again, you can change how she feels and make her want you back.

When you reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her smile and laugh when you interact with her, showing her that you've moved past the level you were at before, making her feel feminine and girly in your presence) she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

Best of all, it happens naturally and automatically without you having to try to convince her of anything.

She feels attracted to you and drawn to you and naturally wants to give you another chance.

A final reason why your ex might have said that she's sorry for giving you the impression that she wants to get back with you is that

5. She was leading you on until she was ready to move on [image: She was leading you on until she was ready to move on]

In some cases, a woman is simply the kind of person who only cares about her own feelings.

She may think to herself, "I'll keep him around thinking he has a chance and move on before he does. That way, he is the one who is hurt and left behind, not me."

She might then string him along for a while, until she has fully moved on and is ready to say, "Sorry, I didn't mean to give you the impression that I wanted you back. I was just being friendly. I wish you all the best with your future. Goodbye."

A guy is then left devastated and the way she treated him might scar him for life, or for many years to come.

He may develop a fear of relationships and not only avoid trying to get his ex back, but avoid getting into relationships with other women as well.

Don't put yourself through that unnecessary pain.

If your ex has hurt you by breaking up with you and leading you on, you can get her back, as you will have discovered if you've watched any of the videos on this page.

For now, let's have a look at some of the ways that a woman may lead her ex on after a break up:

- She likes his posts on social media.
- She calls him on the phone to talk for hours.
- She meets up with him every time he asks.
- She hugs and sometimes even gives him a kiss when she sees him.
- She says things like, "I miss you," or "Life doesn't feel the same without you."
- She turns to him for help when she has a problem.

Naturally, when an ex woman is behaving in that way, a guy might think to himself, "This is great! She clearly still has feelings for me. By the look of things, we should be back together again soon. I've just got to be patient and she will be mine once again.

Then, when he works up the courage to say, "So, does this mean that you want to start over and be in a relationship again?" she will then say something, "I'm sorry for giving you the impression that I want to get back with you. You need to forget about us as a couple. That is over."

It's very confusing for a guy to be lead on like that by a woman.

In many cases, he might then lose control of his emotions and start seeking pity, becoming upset or trying harder to suck up to her to get another chance.

Yet, doing those things just turns her off even more.

So, don't let yourself get caught up in a situation like that.

Instead, simply take charge of the ex back process by using every interaction you have with her from now on as an opportunity to re-spark her feelings for you.

The more you make her feel respect, attraction and love for you, the less she will be able to stick to her decision to lead you on until someone better comes along.

She will begin to want you back for real and you can then gently guide her back into a relationship that is better than ever before.

Believe in yourself.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

3 Stories of Ex Girlfriends Coming Back to Their Boyfriend

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

A lot of men believe that once a woman breaks up with a guy, there's nothing he can do to get her back.

Fortunately, that's just not true because every day, all across the world, millions of women come back to their man.

To help you understand how it happens and why, here are 3 stories of ex girlfriends coming back to their boyfriend.

1. After one break up

Our first story is about a girl who met a guy and felt an initial spark of attraction for him.

For example:

- He used humor to make her laugh and feel happy when she was in his company.
- He was a loving, attentive and made her feel special.
- He put an effort into getting to know her, making her feel good and getting along with each other really well.

They then began a relationship together as boyfriend and girlfriend.

In the beginning, it was fun because it was a new relationship and they were kissing, having sex and getting to know each other.

Yet, over time, she began to notice that rather than building on her feelings for him (by continuing to display the kind of behavior that she found attractive), he started behaving in unattractive ways, which then caused her feelings for him to erode.

[image: He changed and started turning her off]

For example:

• He was initially loving and attentive, but gradually fell into the habit of taking her for granted and beginning to care way more about himself than her.

• She began to notice that he was only confident about his sense of humor if she laughed along with him. If she didn't support his jokes, he became insecure, upset or even angry at her.

• He was so nice to her all the time that he became predictable, so the relationship began to feel boring (i.e. no matter how badly she treated him, he was always being really nice to her and treating her like a princess).

• She started to feel more like a neutral friend than a desirable woman around him because he stopped trying to make her feel attracted to him and started treating her like one of his buddies.

Naturally, she then started to ask herself, Is this something that I want to put up with for life, or is it a deal breaker? Is it possible for him to change, or is he more likely to remain stuck behaving in those ways and maybe even get worse?

To get him to notice that she was unhappy with his approach, she may have then started to say like, â€œThis isnâ€™t working out. Iâ€™m just not sure if we should keep trying, or just give up. It's not like it used to be. I'm not happy anymore.â€

She was hoping that he would realize that the relationship was beginning to fall apart and then do something to re-attract her, before it was too late.

Yet, he didn't.

Unfortunately, he reacted like a lot of guys do in a situation like that and he assumed she was being dramatic, or that she was just going through a phase.

He may have then thought to himself, â€œOh, here we go again. I know that she doesn't really mean it. She's threatened to leave me a few times before and never does. It's just her way of getting attention. I know she really loves me and wouldn't actually break up with me. I'll just keep doing what I'm doing and she will stop complaining and start being a good girlfriend to me again.â€

In the meantime, the woman was thinking something along the lines of, â€œDoes he think that it's the 1800s where women were forced to stick with a man for life no matter what because of pressure from society? The world doesn't work that way anymore. I can leave him if I want to. There are plenty of other guys out there who can give me what I want. I don't have to stick around and be miserable with him.â€

Naturally, when she broke up with him, he was shocked and he may even have thought to himself, â€œI can't believe this is happening! I love her so much. How could she do this to me? It's over forever. I've lost her and can't get her back.â€

After the initial shock of being dumped wore off, he then realized that a break up doesn't mean that he can't ever get her back.

So, rather than wallow in his unhappiness, or try to get her back in all the wrong ways (e.g. beg and plead with her, ask her to tell him what he did wrong so that he can change, pour his heart out to her and tell her that he's lost without her), he instead focused on discovering her real reasons for breaking up with him.

He asked himself questions likeâ€

- Did I make her feel loved and appreciated, or did I take her for granted?
- Did I believe in my value to her as a man, or did I feel like she was too good for me and then start acting insecure, needy and clingy?
- Did I make her feel like a beautiful, desirable woman, or did I treat her more like one of my male friends or a roommate?
- Was she able to depend on me as her man, or did she feel like she had to be the emotionally stronger one in the relationship?
- Did I take the lead in the relationship and focus on building her feelings of respect, attraction and love for me, or did I sit back and assume the love would take care of itself?
- Was our relationship fun and exciting, or did it become too boring and predictable?

By asking himself those questions, the guy finally started to understand his ex girlfriend's real, secret reasons for breaking up with him.

Confronted by the truth, he decided that he wanted her back, that he could change and he then quickly took definite steps to make some attractive changes to his way of thinking and behavior.

Within a few days he got his ex on a phone call.

On the call, he maintained his confidence with her (even though she initially tried to put him off by being cold and unfriendly) and focused on making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to him again.

She then began to wonder, â€œWhat is going on here? Heâ€™s so different from the way he was before. I feel so drawn to him again.â€

When he asked her to meet up with him to say hello as friends, she jumped at the chance and said, â€œYesâ€ because she was feeling attracted to him and didn't want to miss out on the opportunity to experience more of that in person.

At the meet up, he continued to re-attract her by behaving in some of the ways that she always wanted from him but didn't get (e.g. heâ€™s now confident and self-assured, heâ€™s a good guy but he doesn't let her dominate him emotionally, he flirts with her to create sexual tension and makes her feel like a desirable woman around him).

She could see that he really had changed and was now the man she always wanted him to be.

As a result, she naturally began to feel more respect and attraction for him.

He then asked her to get back together again and she agreed.

Hereâ€™s another story of an ex girlfriend coming back to her boyfriend, but this timeâ€¦

2. After two break ups

[image: Getting back together after two break ups]

Our second story is about a couple who have broken up twice before, because the guy failed to realize that he was making the same mistakes again the second time around.

So, after their first break up the guy pleaded with his ex to give him another chance by saying things like, â€œI give you my word that this time will be different,â€ and â€œI promise Iâ€™ll change and be more of the man you want me to be,â€ as a way of convincing her.

She then thought to herself, â€œOkay. Iâ€™ll give him one more chance,â€ but after a few days, she realized that nothing had really changed about him and he was still stuck at the same level he was at before, so she broke up with him again.

To get her back the second time, the guy realized that he had to do things differently.

This time, rather than beg and plead and make promises to change if she gave him another chance, he instead quickly made some attractive changes himself (e.g. He stopped being insecure about his value to her, which in turn made him feel less jealous and controlling. He understood that he needed to stop taking her tantrums so seriously and instead, needed to start using humor to get her out of her bad moods).

He also knew that he needed to get her to forgive him for his past mistakes first, before the relationship could move forward with a clean slate.

So, the next time he spoke to her on the phone (because he knew that apologizing to a woman via text almost never works) he said, â€œIâ€™m really sorry about what happened between us. I now see that I broke my word to you after Iâ€™d promised to change the first time we split up. That was immature of me and it was wrong. I now totally understand why you needed to break up with me again and I don't blame you for it. If the situation was reversed and you did to me what I did to you, I probably would've done the same thing. It was a big reality check for me, but the positive thing about it is that it allowed me see things about myself that I needed to improve. I accept that you might not be able to believe me right away, but I just want you to know that I'm not that kind of guy anymore. Right now, you're likely thinking that I'm just saying this to get you back, but I'm not. Sure, I'd like us to get back together again, but I'm not asking you for that. Instead, I'm asking you to forgive me for who I was before. Can you do that?'

By saying that to her, he was showing her that he really had changed and was now at a different level than he was before.

She then dropped her guard and allowed herself to forgive him.

When she forgave him, it broke down her walls and she stopped thinking about him in such a negative way and she became more open to him.

She saw the difference between the old version of him and the new version of him and realized that it would be immature and unnecessary to hold a grudge against him for who he used to be.

As a result, she started to look forward to seeing him in person again.

When they met up in person again, he continued to trigger her feelings of respect and attraction for him by saying and doing the kind of the things that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. being confident and charismatic, making her laugh and smile, being emotionally masculine).

She realized that he really was a new and improved man and decided that she didn't want to lose him now that he was finally giving her the kind of attraction experience she always wanted from him.

Then, it was only natural that they got back together again.

Our final story of an ex girlfriend coming back to her boyfriend is what happened!

3. After three or more break ups

[image: Getting back together after three or more break ups]

The guy made promises to change and the woman gave him several more chances, only to then discover that he was still the same guy as before, so she broke up with him again and again.

She realized that even though she cared for him deeply, her expectations of the relationship weren't being fulfilled and she could no longer see herself in his future.

So, to get her back, he decided to give her a week of space to allow for things to cool down between them.

He knew that ignoring her for anything longer than 7 days was a waste of time because when a woman has lost respect, attraction and love for a guy, she won't really care that she's not hearing from him.

Instead, she will simply use the time apart to move on and then when he finally calls her up she'll say something like, 'I'm sorry, but you've been gone for too long. I've met someone else now.'

So, he gave her a week of space and in that time, he focused on making some attractive changes to himself before contacting her again.

For example: A reason why she broke with him was that he made her feel as though she had to take care of him emotionally.

She felt as though he was too needy and dependent on her, so he used the time apart to become more emotionally independent.

For instance, some of the ways he did that wasâ€¦

- He decided to stop being such a loner and made contact with some of his old friends.
- He made some new friends by attending group activities in his city or town (e.g. group exercise, salsa dancing, hiking, martial arts).
- He began working towards achieving his big goals, dreams and ambitions in life.
- He learned more about what it means to be a man in a relationship with a woman.

After a week, he contacted her, apologized for his previous behavior and got her to forgive him by explaining that the mature way to handle a break up is to forgive each other, rather than holding onto grudges and feeling bitter and negative about relationships in general.

He then got her to agree to meet up with him for a quick catch up.

At the meet up, he actively sparked her feelings of respect and attraction for him by being confident and charming and making her laugh and smile, even though she was trying to make him feel nervous and unsure of himself by being cold and distant.

He also let her experience the changes he made to himself since the break up, by casually bringing it up in conversation.

She then realized that he really had changed this time and was now the kind of man she could see herself being with in the long term, so they got back together again.

Do You Feel Like Your Ex Back Situation is Worse or More Difficult Than Everyone Elseâ€™s?

If yes, don't worry â€¦ most guys feel that way initially.

To you, it seems as though it's going to be very difficult to get her back based on what she said to you when breaking up with you and how she has behaved since.

It can seem like others might have it easy, but you have it really hard when it comes to her.

That's just not true.

Every ex back case is complicated and unique in it's own way, but thankfully, the solution is the same.

If you want to get her back, you absolutely must get her to experience strong feelings for you again when you interact with her.

When you do that, she naturally opens back up to you and wants to give you another chance because it feels like a good thing to do for herself.

Not every guy realizes that though.

Many guys trick themselves into thinking that their case is unfixable and as a result, he loses his girlfriend and never gets her back.

For example: A guy might think something like, “Maybe some couples do get back together again after a break up, or even multiple break ups, but me and my ex are different. Our problems are too serious/ unfixable compared to other guys”. It just won’t be that easy for me to get her back. She’s not like other women.”

Pretty much every guy that I’ve helped to get an ex woman back has said that last line.

Even my friends that I’ve helped to get a girlfriend or wife back said the same thing about their woman when I began to help them.

“She’s different. She’s not like other women.”

Yes, she is different.

Every woman is.

Yet, she responds to the same feelings other women (i.e. respect, attraction and love).

Regardless of how complicated a break up might seem, the fundamentals always remain the same.

What are those fundamentals?

- Does she respect him?
- Does she feel attracted to him?
- Are those two emotions in place so she can then love him and confidently give him another chance?

That is what matters in every case that I’ve ever worked on.

If a woman can feel respect for you, she can then feel attracted to you.

With those two emotions in place, she can then love you and as a result, want to be in a relationship with you.

So, if your ex girlfriend has been saying, “It’s over between us. I just don’t have feelings for you anymore,” or “I’ve given you enough chances. This time I’m not going to be persuaded by anything you say,” it simply means that the way you are talking to her and interacting with her now isn’t making her feel enough respect and attraction for you.

When you make some attractive adjustments to the way that you are talking to her, she starts to drop her guard a little.

If you also change the way you react when she’s being cold, distant or telling you to leave her alone (e.g. by maintaining your confidence and using humor to break down her defenses, rather than getting upset or insecure), she won’t be able to stop herself from feeling respect for you.

When you get her respect back, everything changes.

She begins to feel attracted to you and drawn to you again.

Then, rather than try to avoid you (e.g. by ignoring your texts, not answering calls, refusing to meet up with you) she now wants to interact with you more and more.

When you get her back, your relationship will also become one of the millions of daily stories of ex girlfriends coming back to their boyfriend.

Other guys do it and you can too.

If you don’t want to lose your girlfriend, make a decision now that you’re not going to give up on her.

You're going to do whatever it takes to get her back.

Thankfully, it's very easy to do.

I know, I know!|

You might be thinking, "My ex is different. She's not like other women."

I know.

Yet, she responds and reacts to the same fundamental emotions as other women.

You can make her want you again.

You can get her back.

It's within your control.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Said That She's Made Her Mind Up and Never Wants Me Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Don't worry.

She has only made up her mind based on how she currently feels about you, which you can change. Right now, she feels turned off by the mistakes you made in the relationship (e.g. you became too insecure, took her for granted, were mean to her and nice to other people, she felt like you were dragging her down) and the unattractive approach you have used to get her back so far (e.g. begging and pleading, getting angry or upset with her, promising to do anything she wants if she gives you another chance).

So, it might feel like it's going to be impossible to change her mind.

It's not.

You can change how she feels about you by following these steps:

1. Understand what kind of attraction experience she really wants with a man

[image: Understand what kind of attraction experience she really wants from a man]

Each woman requires a different attraction experience than other women.

For example: Some women prefer a very confident guy who always takes the lead, other women prefer a confident guy who takes the lead while also letting her take the lead at times and some women like a shy guy who lets her boss him around.

Each woman is different.

Do you know what kind of attraction experience your ex really wanted from you?

Were you giving her that experience?

If not, don't worry â you can reawaken her feelings for you by interacting with her and letting her see that the attraction experience she seeks is now available with you.

For example: If a woman broke up with a guy because she felt like he was dragging her down (e.g. he was too negative as a person and kept whining about life) to get her respect and attraction back, he has to show her that he is now more positive and optimistic about life.

When she experiences the new positive, easy-going man that he has become, she will naturally start to feel differently about him.

She will stop feeling stressed out by his negative approach to life and she will start to enjoy being around him.

Of course, just making that one change won't automatically get her back, but it will bring her guard down and allow him to then start re-attracting her in other ways.

When he does that, she will then begin to open up to giving him another chance so she can explore her new, more interesting and appealing feelings for him.

Another example is where a woman broke up with a guy because he made her feel as though she had to take care of him emotionally.

For example: He was too emotionally sensitive regularly needed her reassure him of her love and commitment to him, otherwise he'd become clingy, controlling or upset.

He was also hiding from rising through the levels of his true potential as a man by spending most or all of his spare time with her.

He was afraid of failing or being rejected if he tried to achieve his big goals, dreams and ambitions, so he just used her as an excuse to waste his time away doing nothing and just hanging out with her.

As result, she felt turned off by his emotional sensitivity and by his fear of becoming a bigger and better man.

To make her change her mind and become open to giving him another chance, he needs to show her that he's a much more emotionally independent man now.

He also has a clear purpose in life and has set goals for himself that he's fearlessly working towards achieving.

He has hobbies, friends and interests and is living a happy, enjoyable life without her.

He wants her back, but he doesn't need her back to take care of him and give him a reason for living.

That is what counts to her.

When she can see for herself that he would be totally fine without her, she can drop her guard and start to feel some respect and attraction for the new version of him.

How about you?

What are the kinds of things that turned your woman off and lead to the break up?

What do you need to change to let her see that not only are you different now, but that she feels differently when she interacts with you?

When your ex can see that you've understood the kind of attraction she really wants from you and are now able to provide that to her, she won't be able to stop herself from opening back up to you.

She may start thinking things like, "I know that I said I made up my mind and never want him back, but I was saying that about the old version of him. This new version of him is actually very attractive to me now. If he'd been like this all along, we would never have broken up in the first place. Maybe it's not too late to make things work between us after all. I can see us working now. I feel something for him again. I don't want to miss out on this opportunity."

She then naturally changes her mind because getting back together doesn't feel like it's the wrong thing for her to do anymore.

She wants it to happen, rather than feeling like you are trying to force her into it against her will.

That's the key.

If you are trying hard to convince her to change her mind, she will remain closed off to you and see your efforts as desperate and selfish.

Yet, when you reawaken her feelings for you and let her see that you can now give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants, then things change.

You don't have to waste time and energy trying to convince her to change her mind, because she does it by herself.

She wants to give you another chance for her own reasons (e.g. she wants to explore her new feelings for you, it doesn't feel like it's over between you and her anymore, she wants to be around you).

2. Prepare yourself to attract her in new ways when you next interact

Understanding what caused her to stop feeling attracted to you is a good start, but just understanding it won't get her back.

You have to prepare yourself to attract her in new ways, so she can experience new feelings for you.

Most guys aren't aware of that, so they end up ruining their chances with an ex girl by making one or more of the following mistakesâ€¦!

Mistake 1: Trying to make her change her mind via endless texts, e-mails and letters

When a woman is refusing to see her ex or talk to him over the phone, he might feel that the only way to get through to her is via text, e-mail or by sending her a long letter.

Heâ€¦s hoping that if he can make her listen to his point of view (e.g. he loves her, he knows that things can be different if she gives him a chance, he just made some mistakes and she should understand that and open back up to him to see for herself), she wonâ€¦t stay closed off to him anymore.

Yet, hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

When a woman canâ€¦t see a guy and experience the new version of him in person, sheâ€¦ll usually just assume that heâ€¦s still exactly the same guy she broke up with.

So, when he texts her or sends her an e-mail or letter, itâ€¦s unlikely that she will give him the benefit of the doubt and say to herself, â€œHmmmâ€¦he really sounds like he is truly sorry for what happened between us. Iâ€¦m going to take his word for it that heâ€¦s changed. I believe him! Iâ€¦m going to giving him another chance!â€¦

Instead, sheâ€¦ll just assume that heâ€¦s the same guy she broke up with and feel even more turned off by him for not being man enough to talk to her on the phone or in person.

So, if you want your ex to change her mind, make sure you only text or e-mail her as a way of getting her on a phone call with you, so that you can re-spark her feelings for you for real.

Hiding behind texts because it feels easier to you isn't a smart move.

Women get turned off so easily by texts from an ex (e.g. because a text can come across as insecure, desperate or needy).

Women can also play hard to get and not reply to texts just to see how their ex will react.

If he gets upset, seems to lose confidence or starts sucking up to her, she then feels turned off by his desperation and insecurity.

This is why it's always best to just get her on a phone call and meet up with her in person.

Another mistake that guys make isâ€¦|

Mistake 2: Pouring his heart out to her and explaining how she is the only one for him

He might say things like, â€œYouâ€™re the only woman for me. Without you Iâ€™m lost. Canâ€™t you see that everything Iâ€™ve ever done was for you and me? Yes, I stuffed up before, but that doesnâ€™t mean I donâ€™t love you and that I wonâ€™t do whatever you want me to do to make you happy from now on. Please donâ€™t throw our love away. Youâ€™re my one and only true love. Don't you remember what you used to say to me about growing old together? You told me you loved me more than any other guy. I love you more than any other woman I've ever met. You are the one for me. Please don't walk away from what we have. Please think about this. I love you.â€

Yet, when a woman has disconnected herself from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a man (e.g. because she broke up with him for being too insecure, taking her for granted or not being able to give her the kind of attraction experience she wanted), him pouring his heart out to her just wonâ€™t matter to her.

Instead, sheâ€™ll just think something like, â€œI might be the one for you, but youâ€™re definitely not the one for me. You don't understand me and what I really want. Goodbye!â€

She then closes herself off even more and it becomes more difficult for him to get through to her.

If he keeps using the same approach and she can see that he doesnâ€™t even understand what she really wants, a woman will usually then block his number, delete him or block him from social media and try to move on without him as quickly as she can.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't make the mistake of talking to her about your feelings all the time and telling her how much she means to you and what you'd do if she gave you another chance.

Instead, focus on changing how she feels (i.e. make her experience new feelings of attraction for you, get her to reconnect with her original feelings for you, make her want you), rather than on how you feel about her.

It's fine to tell her that you love her, but only if you are making her feel sparks of love for you.

If the feelings aren't mutual, she just isn't going to care about your feelings for her.

Another classic mistake that guys make isâ€¦|

Mistake 3: Trying to get her to remember the good times

When a woman is saying things like, â€œLeave me alone. Iâ€™ve made up my mind and I never want you back,â€ a guy might start bringing up all the good times they shared in the past as a way to hopefully get her to change her mind.

Yet, rather than make a woman change her mind, highlighting to her how good things used to be only reminds her of how bad things became in the end.

The secret is to focus on making her feel sparks of respect, attraction and love for the new you, rather than trying to get her back based on what she used to feel for you.

Mistake 4: Pleading with her to stop being so closed off and just give him a chance

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she will usually choose to disconnect herself from him as quickly as possible, so she can get over the pain of the break up and move on.

A guy might then try to make her change her mind by saying things like, “Why are you doing this to me? Why are you being so stubborn and closed off? How can I make things right if you won’t even give me a chance? Please baby! I don’t shut me out like this. I need you. Please!”

Yet, it just doesn’t work because nothing about that approach makes her feel sparks of respect, attraction and love.

In her mind, he is just being selfish and wanting her to change his mind so he can feel better about himself.

He’s not doing anything to respark her feelings for him.

As a result, she will just say something like, “Sorry. I’ve made up my mind and I never want you back.”

He might then spend the next few months or years missing her and feeling hurt by how she dumped him and moved on so easily.

In many cases, a guy won’t ever realize his mistake and how he could have gotten her back if he used a different approach that was focused on making her feel attracted again.

Instead, a guy will often become depressed, insecure and emotionally guarded from the pain he experienced after being dumped by her.

Don’t put yourself through that.

There is an easier way to get a woman back and it’s about making her have feelings for you again.

Once you do that (and it’s easy), she naturally changes her mind and opens back up to you, without the need for you to beg, plead and try to convince her.

Another mistake that guys make is

Mistake 5: Promising that he will change

Promising to change isn’t as powerful as understand what she needs you to change, changing and then letting her experience the changes.

In other words, actions speak louder than words.

It’s easy to say, “I will change, I promise!”

A woman knows that a promise from her guy is not the same as him actually following through and doing it.

For example: In many of the ex back cases that I’ve worked on over the years, a couple will have had several near break ups before the final break up took place.

A woman will likely have said something to the effect of, “I’m tired of this. If you don’t change I’m going to leave you,” and the guy will usually have responded by promising her that he will change.

Then, if he didn’t change or only briefly changed and then went back to his old way of thinking and behaving, she breaks up with him for real.

If he then tries to get her back by promising to change, she is less likely to believe him and give him yet another chance.

She then says something like, "I've made up my mind and I never want you back" and at that point, a guy starts looking for help.

Maybe something similar happened to you, right?

You're here now and I can help you.

If you want your ex to change her mind, you must start changing the things that turned her off when you were together.

Then, when you interact with her again, you will be ready to give her the kind of attraction experience she always wanted from you, but never seemed to get.

Remember: Actions speak louder than words.

You need to show her (not tell her) that you're now at a different level from when she broke up with you.

With that in mind, let's move onto the next tip!

3. Interact with her to allow her to experience the new and improved you

[image: Interact with her and allow her to experience the new and improved you]

Sometimes, when a woman says, "I've made up my mind and I never want you back," a guy might decide that his only hope of getting her back is to give her enough space to change her mind.

He might say to himself, "Right now, she's angry with me about what happened and she's closing herself off from her feelings for me. She's confused about how she feels and when I try to talk to her, it only makes her feel annoyed and angry. So, the best thing to do is give her some space to figure things out. When she doesn't hear from me or see me for a while, she will realize how much she still cares about me and then she will want me back after all."

He might then cut off all communication with her for 30 to 60 days (sometimes even longer) in the hopes that this will trigger her fears of losing him and make her come running back.

Here's what he doesn't realize though!

In most cases, when a woman has disconnected with her feelings for a guy, she will just use the time apart to get over him, move on and possibly even hook up with another guy.

Don't do that to yourself.

Understand that the best way to change your ex's mind is by interacting with her (instead of ignoring her) and making her laugh and smile, so she can begin to reconnect with her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Essentially, when you make a woman smile, laugh and feel happy during a conversation, she simply can't hold on to negative, angry feelings about you for long.

So, if you think she needs a little bit of space, give her 3 to 7 days at most.

Giving her that amount of time proves the point that you're not being needy and desperate. It also allows her time to calm down and start missing you. You decide how much space (up to a week) that she will need. Then, contact her and re-spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for the new and improved you.

4. Get her to forgive the old you for her benefit

[image: Get her to forgive you]

Getting your ex to forgive you is a very important step to making her change her mind. To make her want to forgive you, it's important that you let her know that forgiving you will make her feel better, fresher and lighter. She won't have to carry around the baggage from her relationship with you and will have handled the break up in a mature way (i.e. forgiving the old you for making mistakes because she is mature enough to understand that people can make mistakes, learn and become a better person as a result). When you get her to forgive you, she then stops thinking about the mistakes you made with her and she starts looking at the new you in a more positive light. Her determination to remain broken up from you starts to fade away and she becomes open to you again. When that happens, you need to make sure that you're able to make her feel enough respect and attraction for you again, so she feels motivated to want to be in a relationship with you again.

5. Ask her to catch up with you to say hello, or to say goodbye if she wants that instead

Getting your ex to change her mind about you and the relationship is a lot easier when you're talking to her face-to-face. When she can see the new and improved way that you now talk, think and behave around her (e.g. more confident, charismatic, emotionally masculine, dominant but loving), it becomes difficult to keep imagining you as the horrible ex she broke up with (e.g. wimpy, annoying, overly emotional, insecure). So, don't waste a lot of time trying to convince her to give you another chance via text, e-mail, social media message or letter. Instead, call her on the phone and reawaken her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel feminine and girly) and then get her to meet up with you in person. Initially, she could be a bit resistant to see you again and might say something along the lines of, â€œNo. I don't want to see you again. I've made up my mind and I never want you back. So, what's the point of meeting up? What do you want?â€ Regardless of what your ex says to you, make sure that you don't get upset or lose your confidence in the moment.

Remain calm and confidently say, â€œHey, Iâ€™m only asking you for a quick catch up. Itâ€™s nothing serious. Just because we agree to have a quick cup of coffee, it doesnâ€™t mean weâ€™re getting back together again. These days, itâ€™s no big deal for exâ€™s to meet up and say hello as friends. Besides, after we meet up, if you decide you just want to say goodbye and never see each other again, I will respect that. I wonâ€™t contact you ever again. So, how about it? Iâ€™m busy on Monday and Tuesday, but Iâ€™m available on Wednesday afternoon or Sunday morning. Which of those days is best for you?â€

You might then get a response of something like, â€œOkay, fine. Maybe just this once,â€ or if she really wants you out of her life, she might say, â€œOkay, if thatâ€™s the only way I will be able to get rid of you for good, then yes â€œletâ€™s meet up this one time and thatâ€™s it.â€

Whatever the case is for you, just go ahead and make plans to meet up with her on a day that suits you both.

If you attract her at the meet up, sheâ€™s not going to want it to be a final goodbye.

She will open back up to you and will stop being as cold and distant.

In many cases, a guy is able to get his ex woman back at the first meet up.

However, in difficult cases (i.e. where she hates him), it can take a couple of meet ups to fully get her back.

Whatever the case is for you, just remain confident, calm and in control of the situation by focusing on making her have feelings for you again.

That now leads us to the final tip for youâ€¦

6. Make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you at the meet up

[image: Reawaken her feelings and get her back]

At the meet up, youâ€™ve got to continue building on her feelings for you so she will want to change her mind.

You can do that by making some attractive adjustments to the way youâ€™re talking to her, how you respond to what she says and the way you react when she tries to test you (e.g. by being cold and distant, telling you that sheâ€™s made up her mind and never wants you back).

When she can see that youâ€™re not losing your cool and are instead being a confident, emotionally strong man (something sheâ€™s probably not expecting from you at this point), she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling some respect for you again.

When you get her respect back, everything begins to change.

She drops her guard, opens herself up to feeling attracted to you again and starts to feel drawn to you in a sexual and romantic way.

She starts thinking, â€œThis isnâ€™t the same guy that I broke up with. Heâ€™s actually the kind of man I can look up to, respect and easily fall in love with now. Iâ€™m so confused. I thought Iâ€™d made up my mind, but now I want him back. I donâ€™t want to miss out on this. I have to give it a try. I like how I am feeling. I want this.â€

Remember: It doesn't matter what she said before about never wanting you back.

What matters is how you make her feel from now on.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex's Friends Are Telling Her to Avoid Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

6 steps to fix the problem:

1. Calmly apologize for previously trying so hard to get her back

Sometimes, a guy will go overboard when trying to get his ex back to the point where he becomes annoying to her or her friends.

For example: He mightâ€¦

- Text, e-mail or call her continuously to say things like, â€œIâ€™m so sorry! I know I stuffed up, but please give me one more chance to make it up to you,â€ or â€œIâ€™m sorry! Iâ€™m sorry! Iâ€™m sorry! Iâ€™ll say it a million times if that's what it takes for you to believe me.â€
- Beg and plead with her for another chance.
- Show up at her home or work place to try and discuss the break up with her, even though she has been telling him to leave her alone.
- Send loads of messages to her via social media as way of discussing the relationship and work things out.

Initially, she might be open to it because she wants to see what he has to say and how she might feel if she says something that makes her miss him.

Yet, if he is trying too hard to get her back without doing anything to re-spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction, she will begin to feel overwhelmed and uncomfortable and then turn to her friends for advice.

When her friends see that she is unhappy and stressed out because of your approach to getting her back, they will take her side and say things like, â€œWhy are you letting him do this to you? You have to be strong. Tell him to leave you alone and stick to itâ€ or, â€œWould you really want to get back with a loser like that? Just avoid him until he gets the message that itâ€™s over between you. You can do better than him. We'll go out this weekend and flirt with some new guys. You will see that you don't need him.â€

If she listens to her friends, it will feel as though she's doing the right thing by avoiding you.

The only way to override the opinions of her friends is to interact with her and spark her feelings of romantic and sexual attraction for you.

When you do that, she starts missing you and feeling more and more drawn to you, to the point where it doesn't matter what her friends say.

She wants to be with you and she's going to give you another chance, even if they disagree.

So, if your ex's friends are telling her to avoid you, don't get mad at them.

They are just doing their â€œjobâ€ of being a friend by protecting her from the guy that they perceive is hurting her.

Rather than blaming them and feeling as though you have no control over the situation anymore, just change your approach so you can get a different result.

Calmly and briefly apologize to her for trying too hard to get her back to the point where you became annoying (if that applies to you).

For example: You might say something along the lines of, “I know that you’ve probably had enough of me and I accept that. I just wanted to call you to apologize for my over-the-top behavior since we broke up. It was wrong, it was silly and it was immature and I know that now. I understand that I made you feel uncomfortable and I’m sorry for that. The way I went about showing you how much I care was definitely all wrong. I see that now and I hope you will be able to forgive me and not hold it against me. I’m not asking for us to get back together. I just want to say sorry for being such a (whatever applies to you) when you broke it off with me.”

Saying something like that calms things down between you and her.

She realizes that she doesn’t need to have her guard up so high with you anymore and then begins to feel some respect for you again for realizing your mistake and doing something to rectify it. The next thing you need to do is

2. Tell her that you and her should agree to just be friends now

[image: Let's just agree to be friends]

Don’t worry, agreeing to be a friend will not put you in the friendzone with her.

Why?

You won’t act like a friend.

You will actively trigger her feelings of romantic and sexual attraction for you and therefore, she won’t want to just remain as friends only.

She will feel attracted to you and want you in a romantic, sexual way.

Then, you will get her back, regardless of what her friends have been trying to tell her.

So, once you’ve apologized to your ex for going overboard to get her back, you can take the pressure off her by suggesting that you and her just be friends.

For example: You can say something like, “I accept the break up completely. So, from now on, I promise to stop harassing you about getting back together. Not because I don’t want to get back together, but because you don’t want to and I accept that. So, let’s just be mature adults about our break up by putting everything behind us and agreeing to be friends only from now on. You agree?”

In most cases, the woman will likely say, “Yes, I agree” or “Okay, let’s give that a try.”

However, if your ex is resistant and says something along the lines of, “I’m not sure. My friends are telling me to avoid you,” what you shouldn’t do is:

- Say negative things about her friends (e.g. “Why do you even bother listening to those bitches? They’re just jealous that I still love you and if we get back together again they won’t be able to control you.”)

- Tell her to choose you or her friends (e.g. â€œWe have a chance here to be friends and make things right between us again. So whatâ€™s it going to beâ€ me or them?)

If you put her in a position like that, she will lose even more respect for you and feel turned off by your seemingly selfish, unloving approach.

She might then say something like, â€œAre you serious? For a minute there, I almost believed that youâ€™d changed and that it might be possible for us to be friends, but now I see youâ€™re just the same jerk you were before. Well, for your information, I would choose my friends over you any day! Itâ€™s over between you and me. Deal with it. I donâ€™t want to be friends with you and I donâ€™t want to see you ever again. Goodbye!

You don't want to get that kind of reaction from her, right?

To avoid making her feel that way, it's better to say something like, â€œYour friends definitely have a good reason to hate me right now. I stuffed up and I caused you pain. If some guy was making one of my female friends feel that way, I would probably give her the same advice. However, I also believe that if he sincerely apologized and wanted to just be friends with her, I would give him the benefit of the doubt and let him prove himself to her. So, how about it? Will you let me prove to you that we can be friends without me going crazy again? Only friends. Nothing else. Okay?

At that point, she will be impressed by your emotional maturity and will most-likely agree.

From there, you need to

3. Use the friendship as a way to interact with her and make her feel respect and attraction for the new you

Thereâ€™s no point in staying friends with your ex if youâ€™re going to keep saying and doing the types of things that were turning her off in the past, or that have been turning her off since the break up.

So, you need to make sure that every time you interact with her from now on (e.g. via text, e-mail, on social media, over the phone and in person) your thinking, behavior and the way you talk and interact with her is a reflection of the new and improved you.

For example:

- If your ex feels like she can't trust you about only being friends now and is expecting you to continue trying to get her back (i.e. because you have lied to her on many occasions in the past), show her that you've changed by sticking to your word and treating her as though you and her are great friends now (while still making her feel sexually attracted by making her smile and laugh when you interact with her and by being confident, charismatic and emotionally masculine).
- If sheâ€™s expecting you to sit back and wait for her to call the shots (e.g. because in the past you let her wear the pants in the relationship), show her you've changed by taking the lead and making things happen between you and her.
- If she tries to keep you at arms length (e.g. because she knows it will be easy for her to find a new man), don't get insecure and start seeking pity from her or trying to make her feel guilty.
- If she tests you to see if youâ€™re going to fall apart and become insecure around her by saying something like, “My friends are telling me to avoid you and I think they’re right. You and I just shouldn’t be together anymore,” show her that you’ve changed by remaining calm and confidently turning her test into something both of you can laugh about together.

When your ex can see for herself that you’re no longer at the same level you were at before, she won’t be able to stop herself from automatically feeling some respect and attraction for you again.

Then, even if her friends keep telling her to avoid you, at the back of her mind she will be thinking, “Yes, but he’s not the same guy anymore. He has really changed this time. It feels different. I like this. I want to try it and see what happens.”

If you haven’t done so already!

4. Get her to meet up in person to say hello for 10 minutes

Re-attracting your ex in person is the easiest way to get her back, so make sure that you don’t avoid it.

Also, don’t try to get her to agree to meet up with you by texting her (e.g. sending numerous text messages back and forth where you’re asking her for a meet up and she’s saying no and you’re asking why and trying to change her mind).

If you are going to use text, I recommend that you only send a brief text as a way of getting her on a phone call with you.

Then, on the call, make her smile and laugh and feel good and then ask her to meet up with you for a quick cup of coffee.

For example: After a few minutes of conversation, you can say something along the lines of, “Hey, it’s been good talking to you. I’ve got to run now (e.g. because I have to get back to work), but let’s meet up sometime this week to say hello in person. Nothing serious though—just 10 minutes for a coffee as friends. Afterwards, if you decide you never want to see me again, we can say goodbye and I promise I’ll never contact you again after that, if it’s really what you want. Wednesday afternoon is good for me, which day suits you best?”

If you’ve been switching her feelings back on, she will most likely agree and you can then arrange a time and date.

However, if she says no (e.g. because you haven’t made her feel enough attraction yet, she’s afraid of what her friends will say or she doesn’t want to come across as being easy), don’t make the mistake of trying to make her feel pity for you.

For example: A guy who is trying to convince his ex to meet up with him through pity might say, “Why are you doing this to me? Please just give me a chance to show you that I’ve changed. I’m really trying my best to make things up to you. I haven’t been able to eat or sleep properly since the break up. It’s killing me. Please, I need to see you one more time. Please say yes! do it for old times sake. Do it for the love we used to have for each other and that I still have for you. Please!”

Yet, using emotional blackmail like that on a woman only makes her close up even more. Why?

Itâs a sign of emotional weakness and insecurity, which is instinctively unattractive to women. On the other hand, if you remain confident and emotionally strong no matter what she says or does and use humor to lighten the mood, then meeting up with you will be something that she wants to do because she will feel respect and attraction for you.

5. Fully reactivate her feelings for you at the meet up

[image: Fully reactivate her feelings at the meet up]

When you meet up with you ex, you need to fully reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, so that at the very least, she wants to see you again and at the most, she wants to be your girlfriend (or wife) again.

You can do that byâ

- Making her laugh and smile so she feels good around you, rather than begging and pleading with her for another chance and making her feel annoyed and uncomfortable.
- Showing her that youâve figured out where you went wrong before and have made some adjustments to the way you think, act and behave, rather than asking her to tell you what she wants you to do to make her happy.
- Making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine vibe, rather than making her feel neutral like a friend or worse, like she is the more dominant, masculine one out of the two of you.
- Taking the lead in the ex back process, rather than hoping that she takes all the risks to show interest, remain confident and get you back.

When you reactivate her feelings, her guard comes down and she becomes less influenced by what her friends have to say about you.

She follows her heart.

From there, you can eitherâ

6. Hook up sexually, or agree to continue on just as friends for now

[image: Make the relationship sexual again]

If you are turning her back on, she will start giving you signs that sheâs interested in hooking up with you sexually (e.g. she licks her lips while holding eye contact with you, keeps touching you on the hand or leg in a sexual way, is open to giving you a hug or a kiss).

You can then either go to your place or hers and blow her mind sexually.

Once you've had sex, you can then discuss the idea of giving the relationship another chance because she will be a lot more open to it.

On the other hand, if your ex doesnât seem open to hooking up right away, just give her a hug (if sheâs willing) and agree to just stay in touch with her as friends.

If you both agree to that, you can then make her jealous by letting her see you living a good life based on what you post on social media (e.g. post pictures of yourself having fun with friends where you are doing interesting outdoor activities together).

Alternatively, you can call her up to say hi and get her smiling, laughing and feeling good when talking to you.

Then, when the moment is right, ask her to catch up again to say hi in person again.

This time, instead of going somewhere neutral for coffee, get her to meet up with you at your place or hers where you can cook dinner together.

If she's still a bit reluctant to do that, you can do something that you and her enjoyed doing together before (e.g. walk on the beach, go for ice cream, eat at a favorite restaurant).

If you consistently focus on triggering her feelings for you, eventually, no matter how much she tries to fight it, her defenses will come down and she won't be able to stop herself from experiencing strong feelings of love, respect and attraction for you again.

Then, when you bring up the idea of getting back together again, all thoughts of her friends telling her to avoid you will disappear and she will be saying, â€œYes. Let's do it. I love you.â€œ

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend is Reluctant to Give Me Another Chance

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 steps to get her to change her mind:

1. Stop asking for a relationship and just ask to catch up and say hi in person

When a woman is saying, “I don’t know. I’m not sure that giving you another chance is such a good idea anymore. I think it’s better if we just move on and each find someone else,” a guy might panic at the thought of losing her.

He may then resort to begging and pleading and trying to convince her to change her mind by over-texting her.

For example: He might send her long text messages saying things like, “Please don’t do this to me. Please give our relationship one more chance. I promise you that this time things will be different. Just tell me how you want our relationship to be from now on and I’ll do whatever it takes to give you what you want and make you happy. I beg you. Please don’t throw our love away. You mean everything to me. Please just give me another chance. We can make this work.”

As you may know (if you made the kind of mistake with her or with another woman in the past), begging, pleading and asking for a relationship via text, only makes a woman close herself off to you even more.

Rather than think, “Oh, maybe I’m being too hard on him. Yes, we had some problems in our relationship, but I also accept that what we had was special enough not to give up on it. Maybe we can work things out and try again after all,” she will think something like, “Not only is he turning me off by not being man enough to talk to me over the phone or in person, but he also keeps asking me for a relationship without making any effort to fix what went wrong. I feel like he’s not taking what happened between us seriously. As far as I’m concerned, we don’t have a relationship anymore. We’ve broken up and him asking for another chance only makes me feel pressured into making a decision that I’m not ready to make. He hasn’t done anything to make me have feelings for him again, so I don’t see the point in giving him another chance.”

If you’ve been making the mistake of asking for a relationship before you’ve reactivated her feelings for you, it’s essential that you stop doing that right away.

Rather than asking for another chance, just get her on a friendly phone call with you.

On the call, you need to make her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again and then invite her out for a catch up to say hi just as friends.

For example: After a bit of small talk, you can say something like, “I accept how you feel right now and I’m not going to pressure you to give me another chance anymore. I accept the break up. So, let’s just be friends. We can get together for a cup of coffee and to say hi to each other as friends, with no strings attached. We’re mature enough to do that, right? Just because we’re broken up, it doesn’t mean we can’t be mature adults about all of this and end things on a friendly note. So, how about we get a cup of coffee together tomorrow afternoon and say hi for about

10 minutes? Just as friends of course. Our boyfriend/girlfriend relationship is over and I accept that.â

In most cases, a woman will say, âYes,â or at least, âOkay, maybe just this one time.â

From there, the next step is to

2. Reactivate her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you in person

[image: Reactivate her feelings in person]

Important: Just because you said that you and her were just friends now, it doesn't mean that you then act like a friend!

When you meet up with your ex girlfriend, it's absolutely vital that you use the interaction as a way of making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you again.

Don't try to get her to commit to giving you another chance before you've had sex with her again.

Just focus on rebuilding her feelings for you, so she actually has a reason to want to give you another chance.

Show her by the way you talk to her, the way you behave, the way you interact with her and the way you respond to what she says and does (especially if she's being cold, distant and unfriendly) that you're not longer the same guy she broke up with.

You don't have to be perfect to reactivate your ex girlfriend's feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Instead, you just need to make some adjustments and improvements to yourself and let her see that you're now at a different level as a man from the one you were at when she left you.

When you interact with her in ways that reactivate her feelings for you, everything changes.

The process of getting her back becomes a lot easier, because she starts enjoying being around you and interacting with you again.

She has a reason to get back with you (i.e. she is feeling respect, attraction and love for you and wants to explore those reactivated feelings), so her guard comes down.

On the other hand, if you continue to make the old communication mistakes you made before (e.g. trying to force her to see things your way, not understanding her feelings), then she's just going to keep saying things like, âI don't think giving you another chance is a good idea. Let's just leave things as they are. It's over. Please accept it.â

So, make sure that you are ready to properly re-attract her and reactivate her feelings when you see her in person.

Don't leave it to chance and hope that she'll change her mind based on your strong feelings for her.

If a woman doesn't have feelings for a man, she doesn't care if a man has feelings for her.

It has to be mutual.

When getting an ex back, what counts the most is her feelings for you, not your feelings for her.

Ask yourselfâ€¦!

Does she feel respect, attraction and love when sheâ€™s with you, or does she feel irritation, anger or discomfort?

Does she feel turned on and happy to be interacting with you again, or does she feel like she canâ€™t get away fast enough?

These are the things that matter most to her and to your chances of getting her back.

So, donâ€™t try to convince her to give you another chance by giving her a list of reasons why she should, or why you love her and want her in your life.

Instead, focus on making her have strong feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you again and she will naturally want to give the relationship another try.

Next tipâ€¦!

3. Let her see that you've changed and improved

If you donâ€™t improve your ability to attract your ex girlfriend, sheâ€™s going to continue feeling reluctant to give you another chance.

On the other hand, if you let her see that youâ€™ve changed and improved yourself, her reluctance will begin to fade.

She will open back up to you and you can then get her back.

For example: If a woman says something along the lines of, â€œYou didn't give me enough emotional support when we were together, so I had to switch my feelings off and be strong like a man to survive. Now, I don't feel anything for you and I just don't care about what you want from me,â€ you can say something like, â€œI know. I was too emotionally closed off in the relationship and didn't understand what you needed from me to feel loved and appreciated. I made a bunch of silly mistakes and I don't blame you for not wanting to give me another chance. You are right to feel that way.â€

By saying something like that to her, it shows her that he understands where he went wrong in the relationship with her and accepts her feelings on the matter.

When she sees that heâ€™s not pressuring her to change her mind and give him another chance, she begins to see him in a more positive light and starts to feel some respect and attraction for him again.

Another example is where a woman broke up with a guy because she couldn't be herself around him (e.g. because he was too jealous and controlling, he was too critical of her).

To test him, she might arrive at their meet up wearing something that she knows would have provoked him in the past (e.g. a very short skirt, a revealing blouse).

Alternatively, she might say something like, â€œI don't know if I should give you another chance. I've been having so much fun partying with my single friends since we broke up. I have guys lining up to get a date with me these days. Why should I give all that up for you?â€

If her ex then gets angry and reacts by saying something like, â€œYou slut! I was right not to trust you when we were together. Are you already seeing someone else?â€ she will see that heâ€™s still the same guy as before, so she won't want to give him another chance.

On the other hand, if he stays calm and says something along the lines of, â€œI see now that I was forcing you to be someone youâ€™re not. I was wrong to try and block you from doing certain things,â€™ she will see that he has really changed.

She can then feel respect for the fact that he has become a more emotionally mature man.

As a result, she will automatically start feeling attraction for him and feeling drawn to him in a girlfriend/boyfriend kind of way.

She will experience new, interesting feelings for him and want to explore them to see where it goes.

That's the effect you need to have on her.

When your ex girlfriend can see that youâ€™ve made an effort to improve and change the things about yourself that were turning her off, she wonâ€™t be able to stay closed off from you for very long.

Her guard comes down and she becomes open to the idea of giving you another chance.

Next tipâ€¦!

4. Get her to forgive your past mistakes to make herself feel better

If your ex doesnâ€™t forgive you for making mistakes in the relationship, then getting her back will be very difficult.

Why?

She will keep looking at you as being the guy she broke up with, rather than clearing that out of her mind and seeing you as the new, improved version of yourself.

Additionally, if she doesn't forgive you, she will have problems in future relationships because she will always have her guard up to protect herself from being hurt if the relationship ends.

So, you need to get her to forgive you for benefit and for hers.

Don't worry â€” it won't make her want to move on without you. It will have the opposite effect and make her feel drawn to the new you.

You can get her to forgive you by saying something like, â€™I know I stuffed up and I accept responsibility for my actions. However, itâ€™s not something you need to hold against me for the rest of our lives. Iâ€™m asking you to forgive me so that we can both make a fresh, clean start without each other. Then, if you happen to meet some other guy, you wonâ€™t have negative baggage from our relationship getting in your way. You will be able to love freely because you will have forgiven me for my mistakes and won't be dragging that around with you. You will now that it's possible for a person to learn from their mistakes, like I have. You can then move on without me. So, how about it? Can you let go of the anger and resentment you've been holding against me and let us both go forward with a clean slate?â€™

Of course, youâ€™re not encouraging her to hook up with another guy or move on without you.

Instead, when you give her the freedom to move forward and let go of the negative emotions associated with your relationship, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from forgiving you.

When that happens, her guard naturally comes down and she starts to see you in a more positive light.

Her reluctance to give you another chance begins to fade and she starts to think, â€™He really is different now. I wonder if we could actually make it work this time. I can see that he has changed. He's not like he used to be.□□

She looks at you in that way because she has forgiven the old version of you and is now seeing the new and improved you.

From there, you need toâ□|

5. Hook up with her sexually, but don't ask for a relationship right away

The time a woman will be most interested in getting back together is after you and her have had sex again.

Why?

Mainly because for her to get to the point where she is having sex with you again, it usually means that you have successfully reactivated her feelings of respect and attraction prior to that.

After sex, her defenses will be down, which means she that will be less likely to think about how badly you stuffed up before and more likely to focus on how good she is feeling around now.

So, donâ□□t waste any more time worrying about her saying that she is reluctant to give you another chance.

Instead, meet up with her, let her experience the changes youâ□□ve made to yourself since the break up and then have sex with her.

Then, donâ□□t bring up getting back together right away.

Let her want it to happen herself, so she doesn't feel like you're forcing her to commit to a relationship.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Make My Ex Respect Me as Her Man

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 tips to make your ex respect you as her man again!

1. Become more emotionally strong than you ever have been before

How a guy reacts when he gets broken up with is very important.

Don't worry if you did react badly (e.g. begged, pleaded with her or even cried).

Most guys don't handle a break up with a woman very well, so if you messed up don't worry, it's not just you.

You can still recover from your mistakes and get her to respect you again.

From this moment onwards, make sure that you become emotionally stronger than you have ever been before.

For example: When you're interacting with your ex, you must remain confident no matter what she says or does to mess with you (e.g. if she is cold and distant, if tells you she doesn't respect you anymore or brings up your past mistakes and says she will never forgive you because of it).

If you can remain emotionally strong and confident no matter what she says or does, she will feel naturally respect and attraction for you, whether she wants to or not.

Of course, each woman requires a different level of emotional strength from a man to feel real respect for him.

The more emotionally strong you are the better, but don't worry about being perfect.

You've just got to let her see and experience the changes in you for herself.

If she liked you and stayed with you in a relationship before when you weren't as emotionally strong as you are now, then she's not going to require an extremely high level of emotional strength.

She will just need to see and experience for herself that you have become emotionally stronger and more importantly, she now feels respect and attraction for you as a result.

2. Pass her confidence tests when you interact with her

[image: Pass her confidence tests when you meet up with her]

For your ex to respect you again, she needs to feel that you are now the kind of guy that she could feel proud to call her man.

One of the ways to check if you really are different now, is by testing you to see if you will remain confident and emotionally strong, or if you will crumble at the first sign of resistance from her.

For example: Some of the ways a woman might test her ex man's confidence is by:

- Teasing him about something he used to be sensitive about (e.g. I can't believe youâre still walking around with that dorky hairstyle. It looks horrible.â)

- Playing hard to get (e.g. ignoring most of his text messages and only responding to him once in a while, not talking his calls or refusing to meet up with him the first or second time he asks).
- Acting cold or distant towards (e.g. responding with one or two word answers when he asks her questions, treating him like a stranger who has no right to ask her personal questions).
- Talking about the fun she's been having since the break up (e.g. saying things like, âItâs so awesome being single again. My friends and I have been going out almost every night. I never realized how restricted I felt in the relationship with you. I love being free now. Single life is great.â)

Testing a guy's confidence is very important for a woman because it helps her get clear on whether or not he deserves her respect.

If a guy can remain calm when she tests him and use his confidence to get her smiling and laughing, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling respect for him again as a man.

For example: She teases him about his haircut and he laughs at her and the comment and confidently, but playfully says, "You love it."

Alternatively, she says that he should be asking her personal questions and he laughs and says, "Relax girl. You take things too seriously."

Essentially, he shows her who is in control, while also still being a good guy to her.

As a result, she feels respect for the balls that he has and the fact that he can still be a good guy while taking control of a situation.

She then drops her guard and the idea of interacting with him again begins to feel good to her.

On the other hand, if the guy becomes upset or appears hurt by her tests (e.g. his vibe changes, he breaks eye contact, his body language shows that he is feeling rejected or is doubting himself), she will see that heâs still not man enough to handle her and will lose even more respect for him as a result.

So, when you interact with your ex (e.g. via text, e-mail, on social media and especially over the phone and in person) make sure that no matter what she says and does, you remain confident and use humor to turn her bad behavior against her.

Note: Getting her respect back is a lot easier on a phone call or in person, than it is via text.

Women know that pretty much any guy can act confident via text, but talking to her on the phone or in person will be a completely different story altogether.

So, if you need to get your ex's respect back, I recommend that you steer clear of texting as much as possible and get to a phone call or in person meet up.

That way, she can see that you are for real and as a result, she will feel respect for the new and improved you.

3. Let her see that you are happy, but also make her feel happy about herself when she's around you

One of the qualities that women feel attracted to in a man is emotional independence.

This means that a guy is able to live a happy, fulfilling and successful life with, or without, a woman by his side or with or without his girlfriend's (or wife's) emotional support or encouragement.

Essentially, you are your own man and can stand up, be strong and take on the challenges of life without the need for to be patting you on the back, being extra nice to you and encouraging you along.

If you are emotionally dependent on your ex, she will naturally find it difficult to feel respect and attraction for you, which will make it close to impossible to get another chance with her.

So, if you want to make your ex respect you as her man again, you need to focus on making progress on important things in your life other than her.

For example:

- Making real progress towards a big goal that you put on hold for the sake of your relationship with her, or didn't spend enough time on because you were so focused on her for so long.
- Hanging out with good old friends that you may have neglected.
- Having a good time without her (e.g. going out to party, making new friends, trying new things that interest you).

Then, when you interact with your ex (e.g. on a phone call or in person), make sure that you also make her feel good about herself too, rather than trying to rub your happiness in her face.

Let her talk about what she has been up to and genuinely try to make her feel good about it, while also allowing details of what you've been up to and how great you've been to enter into the conversation as well.

When she sees that you're now the emotionally independent and mature man she always wanted you to be, she won't be able to stop herself from looking at you in a more positive way and feeling some respect for you.

4. Talk about the progress you've been making towards your goals and ambitions in life

Sometimes, when a guy feels like he got lucky to be in a relationship with his woman, he might focus all his attention on her because he's afraid that she will stray and become interested in someone else.

He might say to himself, "Yes, I have big goals that I want to achieve in life, but my girl is more important to me now. My goals can wait. Besides, when she sees that she's the most important thing in my life, she will realize how much I love her and she will feel lucky to have a guy like me," or "My biggest goal in life was to get a beautiful woman like my girlfriend (or wife). Now that I have her, I don't need anything else. My dreams have come true and from now on, I'm just going to focus my attention on making her happy. I don't care about trying to be successful or to achieve my other dreams. I just want to spend my time with her."

Although that might sound sweet or romantic, it's not what a woman wants.

A woman does want to feel loved and appreciated by her guy and she even wants to be the most important person in his life, but she doesn't want to be his main source of happiness in life or his reason for existing.

Hereâ€¦s whyâ€¦

When a man makes his woman his main reason for living (i.e. he gives up on his goals and ambitions), he will eventually begin to behave in a clingy, needy, emotionally submissive way.

If the woman then notices that he has become clingy and needs her constant support and direction in life to feel happy, it will cause her to lose respect and attraction for him as a man.

She will then stop showing him as much affectionate as before, which will make him become even more insecure and clingy.

Soon enough, she will be completely turned off by him and will want to end the relationship.

This is why it's absolutely essential that a man never makes his woman his purpose in life.

She can be the most important person in your life (my wife is for me by the way), but she cannot be your purpose in life (my purpose is to help you and other men to succeed with women).

You have to treat her as your woman, not your life support system or source of oxygen.

You have to breathe on your own, be strong on your own and rise up to reach your true potential as a man.

You can't expect her to want to be your purpose or reason for living, or to be constantly encouraging you and trying to boost your confidence so you keep making progress towards your goals.

You have to be a man about it and do it on your own, without needing her help.

Ironically, when you approach life in that way, your woman becomes your biggest cheerleader and does support and encourage you along the way.

Yet, if you need it from her to feel confident and motivated, that is when it stops being given and when she stops feeling respect for you as her man.

So, if you gave up on your big goals, dreams and ambitions in life, or if made her your main goal in life, you need to show her (via your actions) that you are now the kind of man who deserves her respect.

Take the lead in your life, follow through on your big goals and ambitions and be the emotionally mature and dominant man that she always wanted you to be.

Let her see that she would be proud to be your woman now.

You are now a man that she can look up to and respect because you are rising up through the levels of your true potential, without needing her support or encouragement.

5. Get her smiling, laughing and feeling good if she's being cold or distant when talking to you

When you make your ex smile and laugh, you help her replace her negative feelings about you (e.g. anger, resentment, distrust) with more positive feelings (e.g. respect, attraction, excitement, love).

When her emotions change, she naturally feels drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

No matter how determined she might be to maintain a cold, unemotional front, all it usually takes is a little smile to break her defenses and allow her to open herself up to seeing you in a more positive light.

So, rather than getting upset, or feeling discouraged if she's being cold towards you, just use it as an opportunity to create new, happy memories in her mind by making her laugh and smile.

5 Mistakes That Guys Make When Trying to Get an Ex Woman to Respect Him Again

[image: Mistakes to avoid when getting your ex's respect back]

Getting a woman's respect back should be done in a relaxed, confident manner.

You have to believe that the changes you have made are more than good enough to earn her respect back, rather than feeling as though you need to go overboard to prove how manly you are now.

On that note, here is the first classic mistake that a guy will often make when trying to make his ex woman respect him again!

1. He becomes domineering in the hope that she is impressed by his extreme masculinity

For example: Imagine a guy is talking to his ex on the phone and he suggests that they meet up for a cup of coffee and a catch up.

She might then say something along the lines of, "No. I don't think that's a good idea. I just don't have feelings for you anymore, so meeting up would be a waste of time. Let's leave things as they are."

The guy might then get annoyed and try to force her to change her mind by being domineering and saying things like, "No. I don't accept that. You owe it to me to at least meet up and hear what I have to say. This relationship is important to me, so we have to meet up. What time should I pick you up?"

Yet, as you may know, being a bully isn't the way to make your ex woman feel respect for you again.

So, what is a better way to handle the situation if your ex says that she doesn't want to meet up?

By being dominant in a loving way, rather than getting angry and trying to dominate her in a selfish manner.

For example: If your ex says, "No. I don't think that's a good idea. I just don't have feelings for you anymore, so meeting up would be a waste of time. Let's leave things as they are," a good way to respond that will spark her feelings of respect for you again is by laughing and saying something along the lines of, "Oh, come on...it's just a 10 minute coffee. We're mature enough to do that, aren't we? We'll have a quick coffee and say hello. If you like, we can also say goodbye and never talk to each other again after that coffee. If you decide that's what you want when we catch up, you have my word that I won't ever contact you again after that."

If she isn't sure, simply remain calm and keep making her smile, laugh and feel good when she's talking you.

While you're doing that, push for a meet up (in an easy-going way) until she says yes.

If she can see that you're not going to crack under the pressure and either turn into a bully or a wimp, she will feel some respect for you and become open to changing her mind and seeing you again in person.

At the meet up you need to show her (via your actions, behavior and the way you interact with her) that you're a different man now.

No matter what she says or does to try to make you feel uncomfortable, insecure or even angry, you remain calm, confident and in control.

You also focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good as she talks to you.

As a result, she naturally and automatically feels respect and attraction for you, even if she tries to fight it or hide it.

The next mistake that some guys make isâ

2. He tries to get her respect back by being even nicer than he's ever been

[image: Sucking up to her with flowers]

Sometimes a guy might think to himself, âI just need to be nicer to her than ever before and she will then respect me again. I'll show her that no matter how mean she is being to me, I treat her nicer than ever before. She will then feel guilty for being mean and respect me.â

He might then try and please his ex (e.g. by agreeing with everything she says, never standing up to her when she's behaving like a brat, making himself available to her every beck and call or helping her out with errands).

Yet, being really nice to a woman who isn't being nice to you, isn't the way to regain her respect.

Using that approach just makes a guy seem desperate and she loses even more respect for him as a result.

Being extra nice to a woman doesn't make her suddenly think, âWow. My ex is really such a sweet guy. I don't know why I never realized it before. I feel so much respect for him now. I have to stop being cold and distant and show him the respect he deserves! He's so nice!â

So, to make your ex respect you as a man, you need to show her (by the way you now talk, behave and react to what she says and does) that you are now the kind of man she can look up to and respect.

By the wayâ

That doesn't mean you have to treat her badly.

Being on the extreme end of the spectrum (e.g. too nice or too much of an asshole) is never the answer.

You have to be a good guy who has balls, so she can feel good around you and respect you.

Another mistake that some guys make isâ

3. Acting like he doesn't care about her anymore

When an ex woman is playing hard to get, a guy might think to himself, âTwo can play that game! I'll just pretend that I don't care about her either and then, when she realizes that she might lose me forever, she will panic and come running back to me.â

He might then say to her, âThis is great. I think we made the right decision by breaking up. I'm actually so much better off without you now. I think we should forget about each other, move on and start dating other people.â

Yet, that tactic hardly ever works. Why?

Firstly, a woman may test a guy to see if heâs telling the truth or if heâs only pretending not to care (e.g. by saying something like, âIâm sorry you feel that way. I was kind of hoping we could work things out between us.â)

If he then says something along the lines of, âI didnât mean that. You know that I still love you and want you back,â she will lose even more respect for him for trying to trick her.

Secondly, when a woman has lost respect for a guy, him telling her that he doesnât care about her anymore doesnât really matter to her.

Instead, she will feel relieved that heâs not chasing after her and making it difficult for her to move on.

After all, she doesnât have feeling for him anymore and he hasnât even done anything to reactivate those feelings.

So, to her, itâs no big deal if he doesnât care anymore.

If you want your ex to respect you again, donât play mind games with her and pretend that you donât care about her anymore.

Itâs totally fine to say that you love her and care about her, as long as youâre not saying it from a place of neediness.

Saying it from a place of neediness is where you are essentially saying, “I love you. I need you in my life. Without you, I feel lost and alone.”

If she gets that sense from you, she wonât be able to respect you because you will be a guy who needs her to help him feel confident, happy and emotionally secure.

Women respect men who are confident, happy and emotionally secure with or without support or encouragement from women.

Another mistake that some guys make isâ

4. Bragging about things to hopefully make her feel bad about herself

Sometimes, when a woman is being cold and distant, a guy might feel tempted to say something like, âIâm doing so well without you. I never realized how much I was putting on hold because of our relationship. Now Iâm doing all the things I always wanted to do. Iâve been traveling to some pretty cool places and Iâve finally be able to go clubbing with my friends, which has been a lot of fun.â

Heâs hoping that by saying something like that to her, she will think, âI never realized what an adventurous, fun guy he really is. My life is so boring and lonely in comparison to his. I wonder if heâd give me another chance and then we can do all those wild, crazy things together?â

Yet, in most cases, when a guy is bragging about how happy he is without his ex, itâs usually because the opposite is true.

Heâs actually feeling sad, lost and lonely without her.

All she has to do to find out if heâs lying is to say something like, âWell, I guess we donât need to stay in touch with each other anymore. Youâre way too busy to waste time talking to little old me.â

If he then reveals (by the way his tone of voice, body language or vibe changes) that he isnât so happy without her and has been missing her, she'll know that he is lying and she then will lose even more respect for him as a man.

The key to making her feel some respect for you is to be genuinely happy without her, rather than only pretending to be happy and trying to make her feel bad about herself to hopefully get her to come crawling back to you.

Remember: If a woman doesn't feel respect, attraction or love for her ex anymore, she's not going to really care how good his life is without her.

She doesn't have feelings for him, so it doesn't really matter that she is "losing him."

She is fine without him.

This is why it's so important to reactivate your ex's feelings when you interact with her, so she actually cares about the changes in you and what she'll be missing out on if she doesn't give you another chance.

Finally, another mistake that some guys make when trying to get their ex's respect back isâ□!

5. Talking about his goals and hoping that she says something like, â□ □ *Wow, I'm so proud of you.*â□ □

Making progress with your big goals, dreams and ambitions is something you must do for yourself.

A woman doesn't want to have to take on the role of mother, big sister, teacher or mentor and say, "Awww, I'm so proud of you. Aren't you a big boy now? Good boy."

Instead, she wants to see you rising up through the levels of your true potential as a man because you want to.

She doesn't want to feel as though you're just doing it to please her (i.e. to please mommy) and get a pat on the head.

She doesn't want to feel responsible for your direction in life or what you are choosing to do.

That's not a woman's role.

Instead, she wants to see that you are doing what you want because you want to do it.

You are confident, determined and passionate about who you are, where you're going in life and why.

When you are living life in that way, a woman naturally feels a tremendous amount of respect for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Ruined the Relationship That I Had With My Girlfriend. Can I Get Her Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, you can.

Here's what you need to do.

1. Understand her less obvious reasons for breaking up with you

You probably already know the obvious reasons why your ex broke up with you, right?

For example: She might have said, I'm tired of your insecurity, or I've had enough of trying to make things work between us, or We just keep fighting and arguing all the time. It's stressful and I don't want to live that way anymore.

If she told you something like that, then you know about the obvious reasons why she left you.

However, is it possible that she also broke up with you for one or more of the following reasons too:

- You didn't make her feel girly and feminine enough (i.e. because you stopped being masculine, started acting a bit like her at times, or became neutral around her like a friend).
- You lacked confidence around other guys, which made her lose trust in your ability to protect her and succeed in life if up against challenging people or opponents.
- You lacked purpose in life and hid from your ambitions behind her, so she felt more like your protector, which was a turn off.
- There was too much of a gap between her relationship intelligence and yours, so she felt like she always had to teach you or help you along to make things work.
- You kept trying to change her core personality and identity, which made her feel like she wasn't being herself and had to put on an act to make you happy (or to stop you from getting angry at her).
- You were too jealous and controlling.
- You weren't able to create a light-hearted, easy-going vibe in the relationship, so you and her always ended up fighting or arguing.
- She didn't feel like you ever understood her, what she wanted from you or how to give it to her.

At this point, it's only natural if you are wondering, Damn! How was I supposed to know what was bothering her if she didn't tell me? Why couldn't she just explain what was wrong and help me fix it? Why did she have to go through with the break up?

Here's the thing:

In many cases, a woman isn't 100% clear on what she wants you to change and how you could do it. She can't fully explain what is bothering her, but she just knows that something doesn't feel right.

Even if a woman does know how to explain it, she usually won't because she just wants to be in love, rather than trying to make a relationship work with a guy who doesn't yet understand how to be the kind of man that she needs.

Why?

If she has to explain to him how to be a man, she would end up feeling attracted to more emotionally mature men who don't need her to explain it.

Her boyfriend will then start to look like a confused guy who still hasn't fully grown up and needs her help to become a man.

She just doesn't want to be in that position because it's not attractive to a woman.

A woman doesn't want to feel like she is emotionally stronger, more mature and wise than her man.

She wants a man that she can look up to, respect and feel proud to be with, not a guy that she has to drag along with her for life, constantly teaching how to be a man in various situations.

She just wants a man who gets it, or a guy who is willing to learn on his own and then start being a real man that she could consider dating once again.

So, if you don't already understand your ex's less obvious reasons for breaking up with you, it's important for you to find out before you try to get her back.

You can't just guess and hope that if you apologize to her enough, or beg and plead with her enough, she will eventually give in and say yes.

Some women do give in to that kind of pressure, but if your girlfriend has already given you chances in the past, or if she has had experience with break ups, she will stick to her decision and begin to move on without you, unless you change and re-attract her properly.

You need to be sure that when you interact with her from now on (e.g. via text, e-mail, on social media and most importantly, over the phone and in person), it's clear that you understand where you went wrong in the past and are no longer like that.

Note: Don't get into a long speech about how much you've learned and how much you've changed because a woman will usually see that as a desperate attempt to convince her to give you another chance.

Instead, you've just got to let her naturally pick up on the changes in you based on how you now talk, behave and react to her during conversations and interactions.

If she needs clarification, she will ask.

However, most women are able to pick up on the changes simply by listening to you and observing you.

When she notices that you have already changed the subtle things about you that were turning her off, she automatically feels sparks of respect and attraction for you.

Her guard then comes down and it becomes possible for her to believe that you and her might be able to start again as a couple.

Next tip!

2. Make real improvements in the areas that were previously turning her off

[image: Start fixing the things that were turning her off]

Understanding where you went wrong won't matter if you don't do anything to improve those things about yourself.

Of course, improving doesn't mean you have to become 100% perfect to convince her to give you another chance.

You just need to be a lot better than before and she will automatically begin to look at you in a positive light.

For example: If you were insecure in the relationship, you've just got to let her see that you're a lot more confident now.

As a result, she will feel differently when she interacts with you (i.e. she will respect, attraction and sparks of love) and will start to wonder what it would be like to be with you again.

She will see you as being a different man than you were before when she broke up with you.

Important: Don't ask your ex for another chance before you have begun to fix the real reasons why she broke up with you.

If you ask for another chance and she gets the sense that you're the same as before, she will feel even more determined to stick with her decision to remain broken up.

So, make sure you make some changes to yourself first.

For example: If one of the reasons why your girlfriend broke up with you was that you didn't make her feel feminine and girly anymore (e.g. because you started acting a bit like her, you became neutral like a friend or you gave her too much power over you), then you're going to need to let her experience the new, more masculine version of you.

Likewise, if a reason why she broke up with you was that you became too emotionally sensitive, she's going to need to see that you are emotionally strong now.

If she tests you (e.g. by talking about other guys who like her, flirting with guys in front of you), make sure that you remain confident and turn her test into something you and her can laugh about together.

For example: You can smile and say, "Oh, well aren't you Little Miss Popular now?" and have a laugh with her about that, while letting her get the sense that you don't feel insecure about other guys being interested in her at all.

Let her sense the fact that you now believe in your attractiveness to her and are no longer the self-doubting, insecure man that you became near the end of the relationship.

Additionally, let her also sense that you know she is feeling respect and attraction for you again, even if she's trying to hide it to play hard to get or to test your confidence.

You can let her sense that based on how you talk to her, the eye contact you make and the way you react to her during a conversation.

She will see that you are aware of the fact that she is feeling sparks of respect, attraction and love for you.

It's written all over her face, her body language and is noticeable in how she is talking to you and behaving around you.

She is feeling it.

Even though she is trying to play a bit hard to get, you are remaining confident and not doubting yourself around you.

You're no longer the insecure, emotionally sensitive guy that she broke up with.

You now have the balls to turn a potentially awkward situation into a comfortable, easy-going situation that ends up with smiling, laughter and feel good emotions.

Essentially, you are in control, not her and she likes that.

She feels attracted to your emotional masculinity and ability to take the lead in a situation, rather than allowing her to control the dynamic between you and her.

You're so much more of a man now and she likes it.

All of a sudden, she starts thinking something like, â€œThis is not what I was expecting to feel around him. I like it. Not only didn't become insecure when I tried to make him jealous, but he also made me laugh and smile. I'm stunned. He's everything that I always used to wish he'd be before. It feels good to be around him again. If this is the man that he is now, then we can probably start again as a couple and make it work this time. I know that I want it. I've got to give this a try.â€

She then tries to make it more obvious to you that she is interested in starting again and giving the relationship another try.

Another important tip to help you get your girlfriend back after ruining the relationship is toâ€

3. Get her to forgive you on a phone call or in person

When your ex forgives you, most of her negative memories about her past begin to change.

She sees the negative memories as being who you used to be and starts to judge you based on who you are now, (e.g. confident, emotionally strong and mature, determined).

Getting a woman to forgive you for real is not about saying something like, â€œI'm really sorry for ruining the relationship we had. Can you forgive me so that we go back and start again? After all, it wasn't all bad. You have to admit that things used to be so good between us in the beginning. We can have that again. Please give me another chance to make things right again.â€

Sometimes that approach might work temporarily, but if she does forgive you and then realizes that the same problems still exist between you and her, it will result in another break up.

In most cases though, saying something like that to get an ex to forgive you just doesn't work.

Why?

A woman doesn't want to forgive a guy based on how good things used to be before.

In fact, the more he reminds her of the past, the more likely it is that she will keep thinking about the ways he ruined the relationship, which will cause her to feel less willing to give him another chance.

Sometimes, to get a guy off her case about forgiving him, a woman might just answer, â€œYeah sure, I forgive you...whatever,â€ but she won't really mean it.

She will then continue moving on without him because she hasn't forgiven his past mistakes and still looks at him as being that kind of guy.

This is why you have to get your ex to forgive you for real.

The best way to do it is by telling her that if she forgives you, itâs going to make her feel better about herself. (This is actually true by the way. She will feel better about herself afterwards and from then on).

For example: You might say, âCan you forgive the mistakes I made in our relationship? I'm not asking you to give me another chance, but just to forgive me so you can feel better about yourself from now on. Forgiving me means that you won't have to carry all the negative baggage from our relationship around with you anymore. You will be able to start with a clean slate and not let the past cause you to feel bitter about relationships and possibly prevent you from falling in love again. You deserve to be free from the past and you can be if you forgive me. So, what do you say? Can you honestly forgive me for the mistakes I made by understanding that people do live and learn and that I have changed? I'm not asking you to give me another chance. Instead, I'm just asking you to see that who I was before is different to who I am now. If you can forgive what I did before, you can set yourself free from holding onto baggage from our relationship. You won't have to go through life holding a grudge against me or being guarded in other relationships. You will handle our break up in a mature way and walk away healed and open to love with someone else.â

When you say something like that to her and give her the freedom to move on without you, it actually makes her feel drawn to you.

You're not clinging on and desperately trying to hold her back from being with someone else.

Instead, you're being a confident, loving and mature man, which automatically makes her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She then drops her guard and opens herself up to starting over again.

Note: Don't try to get her to forgive you via text! You must do it over the phone or in person.

Then, once she forgives you!

4. Get her to meet up with you

To make your girlfriend want to go back to the start again with you and have a new relationship, you have to meet up with her in person and let her experience the new and improved you.

When she is face-to-face with you and she can see and experience the changes in you (e.g. via your body language, the way you're talking to her and the way you're interacting with her) she will question her decision to remain broken up from you.

It won't seem like it's necessary to be broken up anymore because of how she is now feeling around you.

On the other hand, if you try to convince her to give you another chance via text or e-mail, she won't be able to fully experience the new and improved you.

When you ask her, âCan we go back to being in a relationship and start again?â she will almost certainly doubt that things would be different and say something like, âNo. It's too late for that. It's over between us.â

So, no matter how friendly she might seem via text, it doesn't mean that she's actually open to giving your relationship another chance.

If you want her back, make sure that you get her on a phone call to spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile) and then get her to meet up with you in person.

In person, she can see for herself that everything she experienced over the phone and via text (e.g. your confidence, charm, emotional strength and maturity) is actually for real now.

From there, you need to

5. Reactivate her feelings for you

One of the most important things that you need to do to convince your ex to go back and start again, is to use the meet up as a platform to reactivate her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

The more she can see that the guy who ruined the relationship no longer exists, the less she will be able to justify to herself why staying broken up is the best thing for her.

On the other hand, if you don't reactivate her feelings for you before you discuss giving the relationship another chance, she's just going to keep thinking of you as the guy who messed it all up.

So, you need to make some attractive adjustments and improvements to yourself to prove to her that you really are a better man now.

More importantly, she really does feel differently around you now.

When you interact with her in ways that reactivate her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, everything changes in her mind.

She stops trying to get away from you and opens up to being with you again.

When you have made her feel that way, you then need to

6. Confidently guide her back into a relationship

This is a very important step that most guys mess up, which is why they don't get their ex back.

You have to get this right.

You have to remain confident all the way, even if she is giving you mixed signals or playing hard to get to test you.

You've got to focus on the fact that both you and her will feel amazing when you kiss, have sex and fall in love again after getting back together.

Use that as motivation to keep pushing along until you and her are in a relationship once again.

So, at this point, you have two main options.

Option #1 is to follow the steps I've outlined above (i.e. you understand your girlfriend's less obvious reasons for breaking up with you, make improvements in those areas, get her to forgive you, meet up with her in person and reactivate her feelings for you).

On the other hand, Option #2 is to do nothing and hope that she comes back to you on her own.

So, which option would you rather choose?

If you chose Option #1, congratulations!

You've just proven to yourself, beyond a shadow of a doubt, that you are truly a new man now.

You rise up and meet challenges in your life and use them as stepping stones to become an even better man.

Women know how valuable and rare a man like that is, so when your ex senses that you are now truly like that in every way, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you again.

So, if have been feeling down about yourself lately, you need to stop that.

Stop beating yourself up about ruining the relationship and feeling unworthy of her.

The old version of you got dumped.

The new version of you is now in charge, has made changes and is now ready to guide her back into a relationship and show her that things really are different now.

You can do it.

Don't be afraid to get her back.

So many men start off in your situation and get their girlfriend back in a matter of days or, in extreme situations (e.g. where she hates him), it can take a couple of weeks.

Whatever the case is for you, the fact is that you can get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Moved On So Quickly. It Was Like I Meant Nothing to Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If a woman moves on quickly after a break up, it doesn't always mean that her ex meant nothing to her.

Look at it this way!

Imagine that you dumped a woman and then immediately hooked up with a new woman and got into a relationship with her.

Would that mean that your ex woman meant nothing to you?

Not necessarily, right?

Instead, it can simply mean that you are the kind of guy who can easily attract a new woman and so you did just that to help make yourself feel better after the break up.

It doesn't mean that your ex means nothing to you.

You might still love your ex and have a place for her in your heart, but you broke up with her for whatever reason you did.

In the same way, just because your ex has dumped you and moved on quickly, it doesn't mean that you never meant nothing to her or can't get her back.

If you want to get her back, you still can.

How?

Regardless of her new guy being in the picture now, you need to interact with her (e.g. by calling her on the phone and getting her to meet up with you in person), so you can actively make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you.

If you don't do that, then you are out of sight, out of mind.

She can focus on her new guy, get used to not having feelings for you and keep moving on without you.

However, when you reawaken her feelings, everything begins to change in your favor.

Experiencing respect and sexual attraction for the new you plants a seed of doubt in her mind and she begins to wonder, "Is my new guy really the right guy for me? I thought he was. Yet, why am I missing my ex all of a sudden? I didn't know my ex could have that effect on me. I'm confused. Why do I want him back? Is it a sign that we're meant to be together or something? Why can't I get him out of my mind?"

That's what you want her thinking and feeling.

When she does, her guard comes down and she starts to reconnect with her original feelings of love for you.

You can then guide her through the rest of the ex back process and she will be yours once again.

5 Mistakes to Avoid if You Want Her Back

Every day, all over the world, men get their woman back from another guy.

It can be done.

You can do it.

However, if you try to get her back while making one or more of the following mistakes, it will become a little more difficult for youâ€¦|

1. Sitting around feeling rejected, rather than being emotionally strong and doing what it takes to actually get a woman back

[image: Sitting around feeling sad about being left behind by her]

If your ex moved on quickly, it's quite natural for you to be feeling a bit sad and rejected about it.

It's also understandable that you may think to yourself, â€œHow could she do that to me? It was like I meant nothing to her.â€

However, when youâ€¦re feeling sad and depressed and focusing on the negatives, getting her back can seem very difficult or even impossible to you.

You find yourself trapped in a cycle of despair where you're thinking things like, â€œI still love her. I have never stopped loving her. Did she feel the same way about me though? Was the relationship even real? Did she actually love me? Will anyone woman ever love me? Am I doomed to be like this for my entire life?â€

You have to stop that kind of thinking.

Why?

If you interact with her (e.g. via text, on social media, on a phone call or in person) and she gets a sense that youâ€¦re emotionally weak and lost without her, it's going to turn her off.

Rather than saying to herself, â€œWow! His love for me is so deep, while I've been a shallow person for moving on so quickly. I don't know how I could have done that to him. How selfish of me! I should break up with my new guy and go back to my ex right now to stop his pain,â€ she will simply feel turned off by what she perceives as your emotional dependence on her.

The fact is: Although feeling sad and rejected is a normal reaction to seeing your ex move on so quickly after a break up, itâ€¦s not going to help you get her back at all.

If you want another chance with your ex, you need to change your thinking and actions to break free of the negativity and despair youâ€¦re currently stuck in.

You need to become emotionally strong, hopeful and optimistic about getting her back, which will allow you to project confidence and emotional strength when you interact with her.

As a result, she will feel some respect and attraction for the new you and it will plant a seed in her mind that will grow minute by minute, hour by hour, day by day.

Before she knows it, she will realize that all she has really been doing is thinking about you and missing you lately, so it must be a sign that she is meant to get back with you.

That's what works to get an ex woman back.

So, from this moment onwards, you must use every interaction that you have with her as an opportunity to show her (via the way you talk, think, act, behave and respond to what she says and does) that youâ€¦re now the man she always dreamed you'd be.

You can do that byâ€¦|

- Making her smile and laugh when you interact with her.
- Showing her (not telling her) that you've learned from your past mistakes and are a better man as a result. (She will pick up on it herself as she interacts with you).
- Giving her the attraction experience she always secretly wanted from you but never told you about (e.g. to be more emotionally independent and not cling to her so much, to stand up to her more and not let her get away with bad behavior or tantrums, to be more emotionally masculine rather than being womanly like her).

When you present her with a new, improved version of you that she never thought was possible, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

She might try to resist what she is feeling because she has already moved on, but her heart will be telling her to give you another chance.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Seeking pity from her by telling her how shocked and depressed you feel about how she moved on so quickly

Sometimes, a guy might feel so shocked that his ex has moved on quickly that he may say to her, How can you do this to me? I never imagined you could be so cold and heartless. It's like I meant nothing to you. At least I know that what I felt for you was real. Yes, I stuffed up, but I gave you my all. I didn't ever pretend to have feelings for you one day and then hook up with a new woman the minute you turned your back. I hope you're satisfied though, because if revenge was what you were after, you sure got it. Congratulations! You can now feel proud of yourself for showing me how little I meant to you. I've been so depressed since the break up. I haven't been able to eat or sleep properly. You've ruined me. You are a cold, heartless woman who has just shown me that I meant nothing to you.

By saying something like that to her he's likely hoping to make her feel pity for him and guilt for her actions.

He's hoping that she might feel guilty and say something like, No. That's not true. I still love you. I don't know what I was thinking by leaving you. You love me so much, so it's clear that we are meant to be together. I should never have moved on so quickly. I'm so sorry! Can you ever forgive me? Will you take me back?

Of course, it doesn't work that way though because women aren't attracted to pity seeking from men, especially ex men.

Essentially, a woman doesn't want to be responsible for a man's confidence, happiness, sense of worthiness and overall emotional wellbeing.

She wants to know that even though life has thrown him a curve ball, he's emotionally strong enough to cope and even to thrive from the experience.

So, if he shows her that he's falling apart after what she did, it's a clear signal to her that he's the sort of man who needs her to take care of him emotionally.

It's just not the role that a woman wants to take on in her romantic relationship with a man.

She wants a man who remains confident and emotionally strong, with or without her support or reassurance.

Here's the thing!

You will have a lot more success in getting your ex back when you start displaying some of the qualities and personality traits that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, self-belief, emotional masculinity, emotional independence), rather than by trying to make her feel sorry for you.

So, if you've adopted a Poor me attitude, now is the time to throw that away and focus on re-sparking your ex's feelings of respect and attraction for the confident, emotionally strong version of you.

When you approach getting her back from a position of strength, rather than weakness, she feels drawn to you again because it's attractive to her.

On the other hand, if you try to get some pity from her, she will become even more stubborn and might say something like, Get over it! I've moved on and you need to deal with it and leave me alone. It's over! Leave me alone.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Thinking that your only hope to get her back is to wait for the rebound relationship to end and then slowly try to get her to open up to you again

Another common mistake that guys make when their ex moves on, is to step back and wait (months or years) for her to become available again.

For example: A guy might say to himself, Well there's nothing I can do right now. She's moved on and whether I meant something to her or not doesn't seem to matter anymore. The best option I have is to wait for her to dump her new guy and then try and get her back after that. I love her so much that I'm willing to wait as long as it takes.

He may then sit around waiting for months and in some cases, YEARS, to get the news that his ex has finally broken up with her new guy.

When that happens, he might call her up and say, Hey, how are you? How about we catch up and say hi.

Yet, by that stage a woman will often just say, What are you talking about? I've been over you for months/years. Whatever we had together is long dead. Maybe if you tried to get me back in the beginning I would have been open to it, but now it's too late. I'm sorry. I can't believe you're still waiting around to get me back. Move on!

So, if you don't want that kind of thing to happen to you, make sure that you don't give up on getting her back today.

You can get her back if you are focused on triggering her feelings of romantic and sexual attraction for you again.

If you do that, it messes with her new relationship and interrupts her ability to fully move on without you.

She feels drawn back to you because you have reawakened her feelings for you and are making her feel attracted in new, interesting ways as well.

This is why it's so important that you stay in touch with her, rather than just sitting around and waiting for her to hopefully break up with the new guy in future.

So many men make that mistake and are then shocked to find that she quickly or instantly moves on with another guy after breaking up with her boyfriend.

In other words, she does the exact same thing again.

Why?

Women like her tend to follow a pattern.

She will break up with a guy when she has another guy waiting and ready to take his place.

That way, she doesn't have to feel hurt and lonely after breaking up with her ex and can move on much more easily.

So, don't make the mistake of just waiting around and hoping that she will be open and available for you in a few months or years time.

If you want her back, I recommend that you do it now.

Get the other guy out of the way and get her back.

Did You Make Her Your Everything in Life?

When in a relationship with a woman he really loves, a guy will often make the mistake of making her his "everything."

In other words, he will spend most or all of his spare time with her, not see his friends anymore, give up hobbies and stop pursuing his dreams.

He wants to show her that she is the most important thing to him in life.

Yet, women don't like that.

When a woman notices that a guy has made her his "everything," she will instinctively stop being as affection, start becoming demanding and throw tantrums if he doesn't do whatever she wants.

If he fails her tests and does whatever she wants because he's afraid of losing her, she will gain more and more power over him, which will turn her off.

She will then be less in love with him and he will get the sense that he is losing her.

As a result, he will gradually become clingy and needy, which will make her feel like she needs to get away from him and the relationship.

Did that or something similar happen between you and her?

Don't worry; most guys make that mistake with a woman at least once in their lifetime.

A guy will often assume that a woman will feel flattered by the fact that she means more to him than anything else in his life (even more than his biggest dreams, ambitions and goals).

Yet, although a woman might initially enjoy how devoted her guy is to her, she will gradually become turned off if she realizes that without her love, he's just an insecure, needy, clingy guy who is hiding from his true potential as a man behind her and the relationship.

She will then lose respect for him and stop feeling attracted to him.

Without a solid foundation of respect and attraction for love grow upon, a woman just won't see the point of staying with him anymore and will prepare to break up with him.

She will either start flirting with new guys to get a replacement ready to go, or break up with her guy and start flirting and opening herself to opportunities with new guys she meets.

If she meets a guy who is emotionally stronger and more emotionally masculine, she will feel naturally attracted to and drawn to him and will find it easy to hook up with him and move on because he will be making her feel a much more wholesome attraction compared to her ex.

Additionally, rather than feel like she's moving on too quickly, she actually just feels relieved to get away from her ex and get into a relationship where she can feel respect and attraction for a guy again.

Don't worry though because you can still get her back if you made that mistake.

If you became needy and clingy in your relationship with your ex, one of the first steps you need to take to get her respect and attraction back is to show her that you're not that guy anymore.

How do you do that?

You show her via your behavior, your conversation style, your attitude and the way you respond to what she says and does.

You focus on becoming emotionally independent and beginning to live a happy, fulfilled and successful life with, or without her.

Then, when you interact with her, you can show her that you've moved to a different level from the one you were at when she broke up with you.

For example: In the past, if your ex told you about how happy she is with her new man, the old you might have become upset and possibly said things like, "I can't believe you moved on so quickly! It was like I meant nothing to you" and hoped she would feel pity or guilt.

However, the new you just laughs and says something along the lines of, "I'm glad that you're happier without me. I realize now that I was just making you miserable with all my silly neediness and clinginess. Of course, I'm not that guy anymore. It was a big wake up call for me. I sometimes laugh when I look back and think about how I acted."

How does that change how she feels?

It makes her feel respect and attraction for you for being man enough to admit your mistakes and then having the courage to make some changes to your way of thinking and behavior.

When you allow her to see, hear, feel and notice that you are happy without her, but also have the emotional maturity to genuinely feel happy for her too (even though she moved on so quickly), she will realize that you are a rare catch of a man.

She will stop thinking so negatively about the old you and she will start feeling drawn to the new you.

You will have planted a seed of doubt in her mind about her new relationship.

From there, all you need to do is continue making her feel sparks of respect and attraction for you every time you interact with her and her walls will come tumbling down.

Remember: Just because your ex moved on so quickly, it doesn't mean that the love is dead between you and her and there's absolutely no chance of ever getting her back.

There is.

When you make her reconnect with her love for you (e.g. by showing her that you're the kind of man she can now look up to, feel proud of, respect, feel attracted to and love), she will begin to regret moving on so quickly.

From there, all it takes is the courage to guide her back into your arms and into your life again.

You have that courage, right?

If so, go and get her back!

If not, keep learning and I will keep building your confidence until you are ready to get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Won't Give Me a Reason Why She Broke Up With Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 possible reasons why your ex won't give you a reason why she broke up with you:

1. She doesn't want to teach you what you need to change to get her back

When a woman decides to break up with her man, he often feels like she's made the decision all of a sudden.

He might say, "I don't understand. What did I do wrong?" or, "Just tell me why this is happening. What is going on?" or, "Why are you doing this? I love you. How can you just leave me like this?"

Yet, as nice as life would be if a woman told you exactly why and what you need to change to get her back, it just doesn't happen that way.

In most cases, a woman will say something along the lines of, "I just don't feel the same way about you anymore," or "Just accept that it's over. I don't want to be in this relationship anymore."

She doesn't want to teach him and give him the exact instructions on how to get her back, so she makes it vague, which only confuses him more.

Here's the thing though!

Leading up to the break up, she will have given him hints for a long time, which he didn't pick up on or simply ignored.

So when he starts asking her why she's breaking up with him, it annoys her and shows her that he is clueless about what she really wants in a man to feel happy in a relationship.

Rather than making her think, "Oh, okay my mistake! I need to spell things out even clearer for him now. He will then understand and be the man I want him to be," she thinks something like, "He obviously wasn't paying attention to anything that went on between us. He probably thought I was just being a nagging, whiney girlfriend (or wife) when I told him his friends were being too much of a negative influence on him/I got angry with him for leaving all the decisions up to me/I got upset because he cancelled his plans with me one time too many/I felt turned off because he was being too insecure. Now he wants me to hold his hand and tell him what went wrong. No way. I've already told him and he just wasn't paying attention. So, if he wants a reason why I'm breaking up with him, he's going to have to figure it out on his own. I'm not helping him and giving him a way to get me back. He has to figure it out, become and be that man and re-attract me. Otherwise, we are finished."

It would be nice if women just took on the role of teacher and explained (to the man that they were breaking up with) how to re-attract them.

Yet, that's just not a role that women want to take on.

A woman wants to be with a man who understands how to be the kind of man she needs, without her guidance and teaching.

A guy might say, “Women are crazy! How can I give her what she wants if she won’t tell me what that thing is?”

Women aren’t crazy.

If a woman takes on the role of teacher for a guy, she stops feeling like his girl and therefore, stops feeling respect and sexual attraction for him.

A woman doesn’t want to feel like a big sister, teacher or mother figure in her man’s life.

It’s a turn off.

So, it’s not women being crazy or unnecessarily being a pain in the ass.

Instead, she is just following her natural instincts and knows that if she becomes a guy’s mother, sister or teacher figure, it will feel horrible for her.

She just wants a man who understands how to be a man, or a man who can learn about it elsewhere and start being that kind of man for her.

Additionally, in most cases, a woman will feel as though she’s given her ex enough information in the past to be able to work it out by himself anyway.

In her female mind, the hints she gave him, the tantrums she threw and the threats she made to break up with him should be enough for him to understand where he was going wrong.

If he can’t figure it out, then she feels as though she’s just wasting her time with a guy who doesn’t yet understand how to be the man she needs.

She doesn’t want to be his guide and mentor.

Moreover, if she has to tell him how to be the kind of man that she needs, she will lose respect for him because he’s not being his own man.

He is simply doing what she’s telling him, which then puts her in a position of dominance with him.

Women don’t want that.

If a woman feels emotionally more dominant she can’t respect him and if she can’t respect him, she won’t feel sexually attracted to him.

Without those two fundamental emotions, a relationship cannot survive and a woman cannot remain in love.

Respect and attraction are absolutely essential, fundamental parts of a relationship between a man and a woman.

Thankfully, they are both emotions that you can control.

The fact is that the amount of respect and attraction your ex feels for you is based on what you say and do around her and in life.

If you are being the kind of man that she can feel respect and attraction for, then she will automatically feel that way about you.

Likewise, if you’re not, she won’t.

So, if your ex won’t tell you why she broke up with you, it’s probably because she feels that she’s given you way too many clues along the way to figure it all out on your own.

If you can now fix some of your issues and improve yourself without her help, it will regain a lot of her respect and attraction for you.

Her guard will then come down and she will open herself back up to interacting with you, having feelings for you again and getting back together with you.

Another reason why your ex might be closed up and not giving you details about why she broke up with you is thatâ€¦|

2. There are several reasons for the break up and she doesn't believe you can change them all quickly enough

[image: She doesn't believe that you could quickly change and start being the kind of man she really wants]

For example: Some of the reasons why a woman might break up with a guy are:

- He displayed unmanly behavior too often and she lost respect for him (e.g. he was too emotionally sensitive, cried in front of her on a number of occasions or ended up behaving a lot like her).
- He became too annoying (e.g. because he was indecisive, he was immature or couldn't get much of a reaction out of her unless he annoyed her).
- She dumped him before he could dump her (e.g. because she felt insecure in the relationship with him and feared that he was too good for her).
- She felt like he was dragging her down (e.g. because he was a negative person).
- She couldn't see herself in his future because they wanted different things in the relationship (e.g. she wanted to settle down and get married, buy a house together, start a family and he wanted to live the single life, party and get drunk with friends and have no responsibilities).

If a woman realizes that there are just too many issues driving the relationship apart, she may become tired of trying to make things work with him and just end the relationship.

Naturally, a guy might then quickly try to make her change her mind by saying things like, â€œPlease baby, don't just walk away from what we have together. I know I stuffed up, but I can change. I promiseâ€¦| whatever you want me to do, I will do it. I just want you to be happy. Believe me, this time I really will change.â€œ

Yet, in most cases, itâ€¦s not the first time a guy is promising to change, so she isn't going to easily fall for it.

Instead, she might say something like, â€œLookâ€¦it's over okay? Iâ€¦ve heard your promises before, but they mean nothing to me. Youâ€¦ve had plenty of chances to show me that you can change and you haven't. I don't believe that you know how to change, want to change, or even that you know what you need to change to make me happy. This time itâ€¦s really over between us. Goodbye.â€œ

That's a horrible experience for a guy to go through.

He really loves his woman and wants to be with her, but his usual bag of tricks just isn't working on her anymore.

She's leaving him for good.

If he wants her back, he has to man up and make real changes, rather than trying to BS his way through his relationship with her.

He has to understand why she is really breaking up with him and start making real changes to those things about himself.

If he does, she's not necessarily going to say, "Wow! You've changed. Okay, I want you back!"

Instead, she might keep her guard up a little and wait to see if the changes are real and more importantly, if she continues to feel sparks of respect and attraction for him now.

If she notices that her feelings for him are coming flooding back, then her guard will come down and she will open back up to being in a relationship with him again.

So, the first step to getting your ex's respect and attraction back is to figure out her real reasons for breaking up with you.

Then, the next time you interact with her (e.g. on a phone call and especially in person) she will be able to see for herself (via the way you talk, think, behave and interact with her) that you truly understand where you went wrong and are no longer the same guy that she broke up with.

When she experiences the new you, it makes her drop her guard.

She then begins to feel more open to interacting with you again, because she feels that you've actually made an effort to figure out where you went wrong and then put in the work to make some attractive adjustments to yourself.

Another reason why your ex might not be willing to tell you the real reasons why she broke up with you is that!

3. She wants to get emotional revenge on you for treating her badly during the relationship

Sometimes, if a woman feels like a guy treated her badly in the relationship (e.g. he took her for granted, was too jealous and controlling, was too critical of her and belittled her), she may break up with him without telling him why to put him through months of misery and confusion.

For example: She might say to herself, "He doesn't have a clue what he did wrong. He thinks he's the best boyfriend (or husband) a woman can hope for. He always saw himself as being better than me. Well, I'll show him. I'm not telling him a thing. He won't know how to get me back and he'll most-likely mess up his future relationships by making the same mistakes. Then we'll see who is smarter. Good luck you asshole!"

As you may know, women can get pretty nasty after a break up.

It's pretty weird how it happens, but it does.

By the way!

Some of the reasons she might not have wanted to tell him are:

- She hated how he became insecure when she stopped showing interest to test his confidence.
- She felt turned off by how he often acted like her (a girl!), rather than continuing to be a manly man.

- She despised how much power she was able to gain over him simply by throwing a tantrum or rejecting him sexually.
- She felt disappointed that he always put her needs in front of his own, even though she was treating him badly. She wanted him to stand up to her in a loving, but dominant way and not put up with her crap.

These are some of the things that women just don't want to admit.

As you can imagine, if a woman told that kind of truth to a guy that she was breaking up with, what would he do?

In almost all cases, he'd promise to start being like that.

Then, what would happen?

She would see the changes as fake or forced and he would most likely go overboard with the changes and end up treating her badly.

For example: He'd become arrogant, selfish and domineering because he'd assume that if she likes a confident guy who takes on the position of power, then she'd really like an arrogant guy who takes all the power and makes her feel less than.

No.

That's not what a woman wants.

Since it's so complicated for women to explain to men, they often just dump a guy, move on and hope that the next one has a clue about what women really want in a man.

Finally, another reason why your ex might not have given you a clear, honest reason for the break up is that

4. She cheated on you and didn't want to admit it

In some cases, a woman might be feeling guilty about the fact that she cheated on her guy and end the relationship without getting into a big discussion about it.

Rather than confess her infidelity to him and possibly have to deal with him getting angry with her (and in some cases even violent), or alternatively, break down in front of her and cry, she might just say something like, "I need some space," or "I don't want to be in a relationship anymore."

That way, she gets a clean break and can leave without all the focus being on the fact that she cheated and broke his heart.

So, if you suspect that your ex may have cheated on you, here are some questions to ask yourself:

- Is my ex a woman of high moral character who would never cheat in a relationship, or is she a woman of low moral character?
- Was she always trustworthy in our relationship, or did she do many things that caused me to feel suspicious of her loyalty to me?
- Was she always respectful of me in social situations around other men, or did I often see her flirting and showing interest in men right in front of me?
- If I found out today that her reason for breaking up with me was because she cheated on me, would I still want her back?

- Would I need to sleep with another woman first (to even the playing field), before I would feel okay about having my ex back?

If you don't believe that she cheated, then what you need to do is focus on what other reasons may have lead to the break up (e.g. you became too insecure, gave her too much power, took her for granted, ended up acting a lot like her).

Then, you need to make some attractive adjustments to your thinking, behavior and attitude, so that when you interact with her again, she can think to herself, â€œHe is so different now. Why am I feeling attracted to him all of a sudden? What is happening? I love him. I want him back.â€

4 Mistakes to Avoid if You Want to Get Her Back

In most cases, getting an ex woman back is fairly easy and straightforward.

However, if you make any of the following mistakes, she will keep rejecting you away and saying things like, â€œJust accept it, weâ€™re not right for each other. It's over.â€

Mistake number one isâ€

1. Begging or pleading with her to give you a reason

[image: Please just tell me why]

When a guy honestly can't figure out by himself why his woman broke up with him (e.g. because they didn't have a big fight beforehand and she just suddenly broke up with him out of the blue), he might say to her, â€œPlease just tell me why. We didn't have a fight, so why are you doing this? I thought we were happy together. Why won't you tell me?â€

Although he feels justified in asking for an explanation, it usually doesn't work for 2 main reasons:

1. It's annoying for her to have to explain what women feel attracted to and how he can change.
2. She perceives him as being emotionally weak for begging and pleading with her, which turns her off more.

So, even if you don't know the reason why your ex broke up with you, don't beg and plead with her to tell you why.

If you do, you will cause her to lose even more respect and attraction for you.

2. Telling her that you are willing to change whatever she wants

To get an ex back, a guy might say to her, â€œI know I stuffed up, and Iâ€™m sorry. Just tell me what you want me to change and Iâ€™ll do it. Iâ€™ll do anything to make you happy and get us back together again.â€

In his mind, he thinks that he is doing the right thing and showing that he cares, loves her and is willing to change whatever she wants.

Yet, rather than make her think, “Now that’s what I’ve been waiting for! Yayy! Not only is he willing to change for me, but he’s also prepared to do whatever I ask him. What an amazing man! I would be crazy to let him go. He will do whatever I want. He will be my willing slave. I own him! Yes, bow down to me you little piece of dirt! Yes! Finally, a guy who will submit,” she will usually be thinking, “I guess I was right about breaking up with him. He still doesn’t have a clue what he did wrong. He just expects me to tell him so that he can feel better about it. If I tell him how to be the man that I need, he will simply be following my instructions like a robot, rather than learning from his mistakes and becoming a man on his own. I don’t want to be his teacher or guide in life about how to be a man. I want to be a man’s girl, not a mother figure for him. I have to stick with my decision to break up with him and try to move on as soon as I can.”

3. Seeking pity from her

A guy might sometimes try to make his ex woman feel pity for him, in the hope that when she sees how miserable he is without her, she will feel bad about leaving him and will then agree to give him another chance.

Yet, that tactic usually only makes a woman even more determined not to give in to what she perceives as his emotional blackmail.

Instead of giving him another chance, she focuses her energy on moving on and finding a new man as quickly as possible, so he can’t guilt her back into being in a relationship with him again.

Here’s the thing:

A woman doesn’t want to be with a man because she feels sorry for him or is doing him a favor. She wants to be with him because she looks up to him and respects him, feels attracted to him and loves him.

4. Getting angry at her and e-mailing or texting emotional rants

Some guys just can’t accept the fact that they have been dumped for no reason.

He feels betrayed, frustrated, angry, sad, rejected and hurt all rolled into one.

Not knowing what else to do, he unleashes his feelings in long-winded rants via text or e-mail, which just turns her off even more.

So, if you want to get your ex back, one of the most important things to remember is: Don’t lose your cool.

When you focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you (e.g. by being confident and emotionally strong around her, making her laugh and smile, showing her via your actions and behavior that you’re really changed), it will be a lot easier for her to begin thinking about you in a more positive light.

She will drop her guard and naturally become more open to seeing you again and seeing where things go from there.

Remember: Don’t try to get answers from her.

What she wants now is for you to re-attract her (by changing the subtle things about you that were turning her off) and if you can do that, she will open up to giving you another chance.

However, if you keep trying to get her back by wanting to discuss things with her, she will remain closed up and you will lose her.

Focus on making her have romantic and sexual feelings for you again, rather than trying to get her to help you understand how to get her back.

That is what works.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why is My Ex Dating a Guy Who Isn't as Nice as Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 possible reasons why your ex is dating a guy who isn't as nice as you:

1. She doesn't actually need a man to be as nice as you were to her

[image: She didn't need you to be as nice as you were]

There's nothing wrong with being a good man.

Almost all women definitely do prefer a good man over a man who doesn't treat them well.

However, almost all women also prefer a good man over a man who is super nice to her all the time, even if she doesn't treat him well.

In other words, women want a good guy, but they don't want a pushover.

You're most-likely a good guy, but you may have gone a little too far and become too nice to her.

It might seem like that would make her even happier, (after all, women do say that they want to be treated like a princess), but it doesn't.

Why?

Most women cannot admit that they want a guy who doesn't suck up to them all the time.

If women did say that, many guys would get confused and start treating women badly to impress them.

Yet, that's not what women are looking for either.

A woman doesn't want a man who treats her badly.

Instead, a woman wants a good guy who doesn't suck up to her all the time and place her above him in terms of importance and value.

This is frustrating for some guys who like the idea of being a romantic, sweet guy to a woman and being rewarded for it.

Yet, that's just not how a woman's attraction for a man works.

Women do want the niceness and sweetness at times, but only if it's coming from a guy who also has emotional masculinity (i.e. balls) and can be the man around her.

So, if you're in a position where you have noticed that your ex is dating a guy who isn't as nice as you, don't worry.

You can still get her back.

You've just got to be willing to change your approach to her a little.

If you've read this far, then you are most likely one of the rare guys who doesn't want to blame women for his lack of success with women and instead, wants to learn, improve and get her back.

So many other guys feel like it's just not fair, or that it's wrong that she is dating a guy who isn't as nice as him.

He is so confident about her being wrong that he believes she will soon realize it and come running back to him because he is nicer.

Yet, she doesn't.

He then loses confidence in his attractiveness to her and to other women and is more confused than ever.

After all, he doesn't know what else to do to make a woman happy in a relationship other than be nice, supportive, generous, helpful and caring.

He's lost, confused and irritated at what she is doing and why she isn't coming running back to him.

[image: I'm being nice to you. Isn't that enough?]

He may think to himself, â□□I donâ□□t understand what she sees in that new guy. I did everything for her. I put her on a pedestal and treated her like a princess. She always got everything she ever wanted from me. I spoiled her with gifts and surprises, I did most of the housework, ran her errands and I even cooked for her. Yet, she just walked away and now sheâ□□s with some guy who treats her like crap and she actually likes it. I just donâ□□t get it. Why wasnâ□□t I good enough for her? Canâ□□t she see that heâ□□s not as nice as me? Why would she actually enjoy being treated badly over being treated like the most important woman in the world?â□□

In some cases, a guy might try to get his ex to see that the new guy isn't as nice as he is, in the hope that she will suddenly realize her mistake and come running back.

Yet, she doesn't.

She knows the real reason why she broke up with him (i.e. he was a good guy, but he lacked the kind of emotional toughness and emotionally masculinity that she wants in a guy), so she doesn't care that the new guy isn't as nice as him.

Why?

Sexual and romantic attraction is the most important element of a relationship between a man and a woman.

Although women do appreciate a good man and want a good man, niceness level isnâ□□t what attracts a woman to man sexually.

It's nice, but it's not the thing that makes her wet and makes her want to be a man's woman.

A woman doesn't think, â□□That guy is nice, but this guy is so much nicer, so Iâ□□ll pick him.â□□

That's not how it works.

Instead, a woman is going to ask herself:

- Which guy makes me feel the way I want to feel when Iâ□□m with him (e.g. sexually attracted, romantically attracted, happy, feminine)?
- Which guy is emotionally masculine enough to take the lead in the relationship, so I can relax into being a feminine woman around him?
- Which guy can I look up to and respect the most because of his confidence, emotional strength and emotional masculinity?
- Which guy makes me feel feminine and girly in his presence?

These are the types of things that matter more to woman than whether one guy is nicer than another guy.

So, if you're wondering why your ex is dating a guy who isn't as nice as you, you need to understand that her attraction to him is based on how his approach to her makes her feel and not on how nice he is.

If you haven't been making your ex feel sexually attracted to you, she's almost certainly not going to think, "It's okay that he doesn't make me feel sexually attracted, aroused and respectful towards him. As long as he's really nice to me, I'm going to stick around him for life."

I know, I know.

You probably hate reading some of this.

Most nice guys hate anything that suggest they shouldn't be so nice.

In the mind of a nice guy, he is right and everyone else is wrong.

If you are one of those guys, I can't help you.

You will unfortunately have to learn the hard way, by not being able to get her back, getting dumped by other women in the past and eventually realizing, "Damnit! Niceness isn't the answer. I get it! I will be normal now and stop trying to suck up to women to get them to like me and not leave. I will be a more balanced man. I will be emotionally masculine. I will give a woman the kind of attraction experience she really wants."

Then, and only then, will you begin to experience easy and natural success with women.

Yet, before you make that change, you will always struggle to make a woman like you or not leave you.

It's not about you though.

It's your approach.

You just got to change your approach to your ex and to women in general.

You can stay the same, but you've got to be willing to not be such a nice guy pushover type to women.

If you're not willing to do that, you've got a lot of bad times ahead of you.

Rejection, lack of attraction in relationships, getting cheated on, being dumped and so on.

On the other hand, if you are willing to change your approach to your ex, then you have a lot of great times ahead of you.

So, if you want your ex back, change your approach to her and start making her experience strong feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you again.

When you do that, she will begin to appreciate how much better of a guy you are compared to him.

On the other hand, if you try to get her back by trying to convince her that you're the nicer guy, she's likely just going to say something like, "I appreciate that you always treated me so well, but I just don't have romantic feelings for you anymore. Maybe we can be friends, but I can't be in a relationship with you anymore. I'm sorry. Please accept it."

Another possible reason why your ex is dating a guy who isn't as nice as you is that

2. He just doesn't put up with her tantrums and instead puts her back in her place in an assertive, but loving way

Women hate it when a guy lacks the balls to put her back in her place in a loving way.

Why?

It suggests to her that if he can't handle her, he's not going to be able to handle challenging people throughout life as well (e.g. at work, amongst friends and family).

She will have to be the stronger one and lead the way to fight any battles that come their way, because he clearly doesn't have the balls to stand up for himself in an effective way.

Note: I'm not talking about standing up for yourself in an aggressive way and getting into fights.

I'm talking about being a good man, but not allowing assholes or dodgy people to take advantage of you in life.

As you may have experienced at work or amongst friends, there is always a bad person or two who will try to deceive you, get you into trouble, take what is yours or hurt you.

If a woman senses that you are unable to stand up for yourself and protect yourself against people like that, she just won't feel safe with you.

It doesn't matter how nice you are, how many things you buy her to make her feel safe or how much you promise that you'd take a bullet for her.

That isn't what she's looking for to feel safe.

What makes a woman feel safe is seeing you in action with her or around other challenging people and noticing that you don't get flustered or get taken advantage of.

You remain confident, calm and in control and are able to handle the situation effectively, without having to get into a fight or heated argument.

So, if your ex was able to make you become insecure or get you to do whatever she wanted by getting angry or throwing a tantrum, then it will have been a turn off for her.

If the new guy doesn't put up with her drama and instead puts her back in her place in a loving, but assertive manner, then she's going to feel attracted to that about him.

It might not make much sense to a guy who believes that niceness is the key to success with women, but that's the reality.

In fact, one of the main reasons why a woman will date a guy who doesn't seem as nice as her ex, is because the new guy doesn't let her get away with bad behavior.

She feels like she has to be on her best behavior around him, otherwise she will lose him.

and she likes that feeling!

Women prefer a guy who is a challenge, as long as he isn't being so challenging that he is an arrogant asshole.

It's never about being on one extreme or the other (e.g. too nice or too much of an asshole).

Instead, it's about being a balanced, good man who doesn't take crap from her or anyone else, but doesn't need to get into a fight about it or a heated argument to solve the issue.

So, let's have a look at an example

Guy #1 is nice and sweet and no matter how badly his woman behaves around him, he tries his best to please her (e.g. because he's afraid that if he stands up to her, she will stop having sex with him or break up with him).

If she throws a tantrum about something irrelevant, rather than see that her behavior is irrational and laugh at her for being so silly, he becomes upset and starts to tiptoe around her, doing whatever he can think of to please her (e.g. buys her an expensive gift, apologizes repeatedly, gives in to her unreasonable demands, is even nicer to her).

This makes her feel like she can push him around and treat him badly without him even standing up to her and getting her to respect him, which is a huge turn off.

He might also say things like, â€œIâ€™m sorry. Please donâ€™t get so annoyed. You know that I hate seeing you like this. Just calm down and Iâ€™ll make it right. Iâ€™ll do whatever you want me to do to make you happy. Just tell me what to do and I will do it. Iâ€™m sorry. Please donâ€™t be angry.â€

Yet, rather than making her feel happy that sheâ€™s got herself such a nice and loving guy, she starts to realize that he is willing to put up with her treating him like dirt, just so he can get to be with her.

She then loses respect for him because she perceives him as being emotionally weak and unable to protect her.

When a woman canâ€™t respect her guy, she also canâ€™t feel sexually attracted to him and without those two emotions, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to want to be his girl.

On the other handâ€¦

Guy #2 is a good guy, who is confident in himself and in his value to a woman.

So, when his girl throws a tantrum, rather than buy in to her drama, he smiles and asks, â€œHey, whatâ€™s this crap?â€ and then if she continues throwing her tantrum and becomes even more difficult, he laughs at her for being such a drama queen.

If she doesn't stop the drama, he gets her to leave, or he simply hangs up on her if they're talking on the phone.

Of course, a woman will usually then act like sheâ€™s annoyed, but secretly she will be thinking, â€œNow this is what Iâ€™ve always wanted; a man who can stand up to me in a loving, but dominant way and doesn't buckle under my fake pressure. I can look up to him and respect him as my man and relax into being a woman around him. I know that heâ€™s emotionally strong enough to lead the way in our relationship, rather than be a wimp who allows me to dominate him emotionally. I'd better be on my best behavior, otherwise I will lose him to another girl.â€

So, if your ex is dating a guy who isnâ€™t as nice as you, it can mean that heâ€™s simply not letting her get away with bad behavior the way that you used to do.

Of course, this doesn't mean that you should now show your ex that you are willing to treat her badly.

That's not what she wants.

In many cases, a guy in your position will make the mistake of thinking, â€œOkay, if she doesnâ€™t like it when Iâ€™m too nice and thatâ€™s why sheâ€™s dating a guy who isnâ€™t as nice as me, then I should be even more of a bad boy than him. If I start treating her badly and acting like I don't care about her, she will respect me and want me back."

No.

That's not how it works.

Women don't want to be treated badly.

They just want a good man who has balls (i.e. emotional masculinity, emotional toughness) and doesn't try to suck up to them as the main way of keeping them in a relationship.

Besides, in your case, if you suddenly stop being a nice guy around your ex, she will almost certainly act hurt and confused and accuse you of being mean to her.

What are you going to do then?

If you are used to being the nice guy and were just trying to act like a bad boy (which you don't need to be anyway), then you're most likely going to get nervous, apologize and tell her that you didn't mean it.

Then, she is going to lose even more respect for you for believing that she was genuinely hurt.

She was just testing to see if you would crumble and revert back to being the same nice, sweet pushover she broke up with.

And if you did, you lose.

She now knows that nothing about you has really changed and as a result, she will close herself off to you and feel even more attracted to the new guy.

On the other hand, if you continue treating her badly because you don't want her to think she can walk all over you, she will feel hurt and turned off by your lack of respect for her.

So, don't pretend to be something that you're not (i.e. a bad boy) as a way of hopefully getting her back.

Instead, you just need to get to the point where you're a good guy who treats her well, but also makes her feel respect by being more emotionally dominant than her.

When she feels like she can look up to you and respect you as a man, she will start to look at you differently and feel drawn to you in a new, interesting and compelling way.

She will experience feelings for you again and will be curious to explore those feelings by agreeing to meet up with you and then being open to hugging you, kissing you and even having sex with you.

Other guys have done that and you can too.

So, if you want to get her back from the new guy, don't be saying to yourself, "Oh, I don't think I could do that. She wouldn't like it."

If that's your mindset, then yes she won't like it.

Women want confidence in a man, not self doubt.

Another reason why your ex might be dating a guy who isn't as nice as you is that

3. Niceness is great, but there also needs to be a sexual spark in a relationship for it to stay together

Wouldn't it be awesome if being nice to a woman was the main thing that made her feel attraction for a guy and stick with her for life?

All we'd have to do as men is be nice and we'd own a woman's heart and loyalty for life.

She would think, â€œWhen he bends over backwards to please me and even puts up with my drama, I just want to rip his clothes off and make wild, passionate love to him. His niceness is driving me crazy with desire. Niceness is so damn sexy! Be nicer to me! Nicer! Nicer! Oh yes! Niceness!â€

Unfortunately, that's not how it works.

So, let's get back to reality here!

The reality is that although a woman might appreciate it when a guy is being nice to her, it's not what causes her have ongoing sexual and romantic feelings for him.

She might like him and care about him as a person, but without that extra spark of sexual attraction, the relationship is just a friendship, not a romance.

So, when a guy is being nice and sweet to his girlfriend (fianc  or wife), it's never going to be enough if there is no sexual spark between them.

Nothing that he does will be enough.

There will always be the secret dissatisfaction she feels due to the lack of a sexual spark with him.

So, if a woman is dating a guy who isn't as nice as her ex, it can be because her new guy is making her feel sexually attracted in important ways that her ex was not (e.g. he is more ballsy around her, he makes her feel feminine in comparison to his emotional masculinity and vibe).

To get her back, a nice guy might try to change his ex's opinion of her new guy by suggesting that he is only using her for sex.

For example: He might say, â€œI know things between us weren't perfect, but at least I loved you and respected you. Your new guy is just using you. He's just with you because of the sex and when he gets tired of you, he'll dump you and move on to the next woman he can find. Is that what you want? How can you do that to yourself? I love you more than anything. I have always treated you so well.â€

Yet, rather than make her think, â€œHmm, he has a really good point there. I was a total fool to leave my nice guy for the new guy who is only using me,â€ she will think something like, â€œWhat makes him think he has a right to judge who I'm going out with and why? He's just jealous because we never had this kind of sexual spark between us. How immature of him to even say something like that to me.â€

Worse still, his complaints about the new guy actually make the new guy seem more attractive to her. Why?

Her ex seems like an insecure, clueless guy who doesn't understand what women really want and is simply feeling inferior about the new guy.

On the other hand, the new guy probably doesn't even care what her ex says or thinks because he is confident and knows that women find him attractive.

Remember: Women are not attracted to self doubt and insecurity in men. Women are attracted to confidence and self belief.

It's not about being arrogant.

It's about being a confident, good man who knows that he is more than good enough for a woman.

Being a nice guy who sucks up to a woman and treats her extra nice because he is afraid she will leave, is not the answer.

That approach leads to endless heartache and frustration with women, where you get dumped, cheated on, treated badly and don't get the sexual affection you crave from her.

You've got to understand what women really want and start being that kind of man so your ex can feel the difference for yourself.

Stop comparing yourself to the other guy and trying to convince her that you are better than him because you're nicer.

Focus instead on reactivating her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you by thinking, talking, acting and behaving in some of the ways that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confident, emotionally masculine, self-assured, charismatic, funny, ballsy).

When she can see for herself that you are the kind of man who can make her feel attracted on a deep emotional level now, she won't be able to stop herself from seeing you differently.

All of a sudden, she starts to doubt her feelings about the new guy and open back up to wanting you.

At that point, you've just got to be confident and guide her back into a relationship with you.

Other guys do that every day all over the world and you can do it too.

You can do it.

Get her back!

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Said, "I'm Still Attracted to You, But I Can't Be With You."

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

A woman might say that to a man for one or more of the following 6 reasons:

1. She fears that he will eventually cheat on her or dump her

If a woman doesn't feel like she can completely trust her guy (e.g. because he lies to her often, he flirts with other women, he's too much of a ladies man, always seems to be checking other women out in front of her) and she gets a sense that he won't be able to change, she will often just break up with him, even if she still has feelings for him.

She will think something like, "He's a sexy guy and I'm still attracted to him, but I just don't believe that he could stay faithful to me in the long term. If I stick with this relationship, I might fall even more in love with him and then if he cheats on me, or dumps me, it will destroy me. So, it's better to get out now on my own terms, while I can still handle the pain of leaving him behind, rather than wait until it's too late and then have to suffer being cheated on or dumped by him. Besides, I'd rather invest my energy in a relationship that I know will last."

Women have this instinct because of their biological clock.

Even if a woman hates babies and swears to never want any, she will still have a natural instinct that makes her want to be with a guy that will stick by her for life.

Her instincts also push her to find a guy that she could have children with and be happy, safe, protected and provided for if she needed it.

So, if you're serious about getting your ex back, you have to show her (via the way you think, act and behave) that you're no longer the same guy she broke up with.

For example: If your ex felt that you would cheat on her because you were often flirting with women in front of her, you need to be more respectful of her position as your number one woman from now on.

When she can see for herself that you're no longer the same guy she broke up with, her trust in you will begin to come back and she will open up to having a serious relationship with you again.

Another reason why a woman might say to her ex, "I'm attracted to you, but I can't be with you" is that

2. She wants to be free to party with her single girlfriends

[image: She wants to be single and party with her girlfriends]

Sometimes, when a woman is really young, or is in her first serious relationship with a guy, she might start to feel a little jealous of her single girlfriends who can do whatever they want, whenever they want.

Alternatively, if a woman has been with a guy for a long time and their relationship has grown stale and boring (e.g. watching TV together every night, sex once a week, if at all) with no excitement, or prospects of it improving in the future, she might think that life would be better if she left the relationship and did her own thing.

She might look at her girlfriends living a carefree life (e.g. going out and partying, picking up different guys and having new experiences, traveling) and think to herself, “I really do care for my guy, but I feel like I’m missing out on so much. I also want to party and go traveling on a whim, but I can’t do that while I’m in a relationship. I also want to flirt and maybe even have sex with some other guys. Maybe I’m just not ready to stay with one guy right now.”

Important: A woman will rarely, if ever think like that or follow through on it if the relationship is good.

A woman will only start to feel drawn to that if a guy hasn’t been able to get the relationship to what I call Blissful Love.

Watch this!

If the relationship was good at the start, but has lost its spark, a woman doesn’t have to stick around if she isn’t feeling it anymore.

As a man, it’s your role and responsibility to ensure that you’re building on your woman’s feelings over time, rather than destroying them.

If you don’t, she will start to drift and may end up breaking up with you, cheating or becoming so annoying (because she’s unhappy with the relationship) that you end up breaking up with her.

So, if your ex left you because she wanted to party and live like her single girlfriends, how can you get her back?

You have to actively spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you whenever you interact with her from now on.

When you make her feel more attracted to you in new and exciting ways, she will realize that her love for you is stronger than the idea of being single and she will want to be with you again.

Of course, it’s possible that she might meet a guy who makes her feel more attracted and want to be with him.

You can get a woman back if she has moved on, but if your ex hasn’t moved on yet, don’t make it more difficult for yourself.

Just get her back now.

Another reason why a woman will say that she can’t be with her ex, even though she feels attracted to him is that!

3. He lacks financial stability and she can’t see him fixing that anytime soon

Although most modern women are now perfectly capable of taking care of themselves financially, the idea of being with a man who is going to struggle to put food on the table and take care of her and any children they might have together in the future, is not very appealing to a woman.

So, even if a woman feels very attracted to a guy (e.g. because he’s confident, cool, charismatic, fun to be around), if she gets a sense that he is financially unstable and is probably going to stay that way for most or all of his life, she might want to just cut her losses and move on, rather than stick around and face an uncertain future with him.

Hereâs the thingâ!

A woman wants to be with a guy who knows how to confidently lead the way to a better future for them both.

He doesn't have to already be successful in life to give her that feeling.

He just has to have a plan or vision for his future and be actively working towards it.

He can still have fun and enjoy himself along the way, but he needs to be able to give his woman a feeling of security about her future.

If he doesn't, her natural instincts kick in and start to change her thinking, behavior and feelings.

She might feel attracted to him, but she will also feel as though something just isn't quite right.

Her gut instinct will tell her that she's probably going to experience a lot of stress, strain and struggle if she sticks with him, which isn't at all appealing to a woman's breeding instincts.

Again, even if she hates babies and never wants children, the instinct will still be there.

A woman's natural instinct is to find and stick with a man who takes charge of the direction of his life and thereby allows her to relax into feeling safe about the future.

However, if a guy is just wandering through life without a clear purpose or direction (e.g. he keeps changing jobs all the time, is stuck in a company with no future prospects, doesn't have any savings and prefers to squander his money on useless things, uses most of his spare time distracting himself with video games, alcohol or drugs, chilling with friends or watching TV), it will cause his woman to feel insecure about her future.

When a woman gets to the point in her relationship where she feels like she can't rely on her guy to be the man and take care of them both, she may then decide to cut her losses and leave, even if she still feels attracted to him.

Another possible reason is the opposite of not being financially secure enoughâ!

4. He is wealthy, successful and comes from a great family, but she hasn't achieved much in life and comes from a poor family

[image: She doesn't feel like she is good enough]

Sometimes, when a man and a woman are at different levels socially, it might be difficult for her to remain confident and feel worthy of him in the relationship.

For example: She might think to herself, âIâm attracted to him, but why is he with a girl like me? Heâs rich and educated and he comes from a close family. Iâm just a poor girl who isnât very smart and doesnât really have much to offer him. I feel like his family and friends look down on me or think Iâm stupid because Iâm just not like them. Even though he might be willing to overlook our differences now, eventually the thrill of having sex with me and being with me will wear off and he will lose interest. Heâll probably hook up with a smarter or more successful woman and Iâll be left behind with nothing. So, itâs best if I just make a clean break now, before I fall too deeply in love with him and can't let go.â€

Another possible reason for the old, "I'm attracted to you, but can't be with you line" is thatâ€

5. She doesn't feel safe with him anymore because he has been mentally, emotionally or physically abusive towards her in the past

Sometimes, a good guy might change in a relationship with a woman and become abusive towards her (e.g. because he had a difficult childhood and doesn't know how to behave like a man in a relationship, has been dumped before, doesn't believe she will remain faithful to him or wants to make her feel insecure and unattractive so she doesn't ever leave him).

In a case like that, even though a woman might still feel sexually attracted to the guy and possibly even be in love with him, she will often decide that it's better for her to just break up with him before he does something that might cause her permanent emotional, psychological or physical damage (e.g. she loses her confidence and self-respect, is left with scars on her face after being hit, or possibly even loses her life).

Yet, rather than come out and say, â€Look, it's over between us. I just don't have feelings for you anymore,â€ and risk making him angry and possibly even violent, a will usually just try to let him down easy by saying something like, â€I'm still attracted to you, but I can't be with you. It's not you, it's me. I am messed up in the head and don't know what I want. Please just give me time to think. I need space.â€

By saying something like that, she's hoping that he won't react badly and that she'll be able to get away from him without any further abuse.

She will use the time away from him to quickly find a replacement guy, so she can feel a bit safer.

Another possible reason why a woman will say that she's attracted to her ex, but can't be with him is thatâ€

6. She's just saying that to make him feel better about the break up

[image: She is just saying that to make him feel better about the break up]

Sometimes, a woman is so nice of a person that she doesn't want to hurt a guy's feelings when she breaks up with him.

So, rather than saying something along the lines of, â€I don't love you anymore. Leave me alone!â€ or â€I don't want to be with you anymore! Deal with it!â€ she will try to make him feel better about the break up by telling him that she still finds him attractive, but can't be with him.

She hopes that he will think she is just crazy and confused, or suffering from childhood issues and he will then move on.

However, in reality, she doesn't actually feel attracted enough to him to want to stay in a relationship.

She's only saying that she is to let him down light and avoid the potential consequences a bad break up.

In a case like that, a guy simply has to start triggering her feelings of attraction (e.g. on a phone call and in person) by making her feel attracted in the ways that really matter to her.

For example: He might be a good guy and she may appreciate that. Yet, to feel attracted to him, she also needs to see that he is emotionally masculine (i.e. he has balls) and is able to make her feel girly and feminine in comparison to him as a result.

If he's just a good, neutral guy, then she's not going to feel the spark she needs to want to give him another chance.

3 Common Mistakes That Men Make When in Your Situation

Some guys are able to easily get their woman back in your situation, while others make it unnecessarily difficult for themselves by making one or more of the following mistakes!

1. Trying to make her feel attracted by being extra sweet, romantic and nice

For example: A guy might think, "If she's still attracted to me, it means that she's just confused about what she wants right now. So, if show her how special she really is to me (e.g. send her roses, buy her some of the things she really likes like perfume, jewelry, chocolates, make her feel like a princess), she'll realize that we're meant to be together and will forget all about this nonsense of breaking up. I'll show her how nice I really can be. I'll make her feel like it would be a huge mistake to leave such a good guy as me. No other guy is going to treat her as well as I do. I will show her."

Although the guy has good intentions, it can so easily go wrong and make things worse.

How so?

If he seems like he is trying too hard to be nice and sweet, she will see that as him feeling desperate and insecure, which is a turn off.

Women are attracted to men who remain in control of their emotions (e.g. he remain confident, relaxed and feels worthy of her) and turned off by men who start acting weird because they have lost control of their emotions (e.g. he panics about losing her and desperately starts sucking up to her).

What matters the most to her is how you make her feel when you interact with her.

For example: Does she feel like you're the kind of man she can look up to, respect and feel proud of, or does she feel a bit embarrassed about being your girl these days?

Does she feel like you and her have a future together, or does she feel like she can do better?

Does she trust that you can give her what she wants in a relationship, or does she feel like you and her want different things?

That's what really matters to a woman.

Another mistake that men make when in your situation is!

2. Trying to get her to focus on their good memories together to remind her that she used to love him and want to be with him

Another mistake that some guys make when trying to get their ex to change her mind about breaking up, is to bring up all the good times they had together.

For example: A guy might say something like, â€œRemember all the times we left the movies early because we couldn't wait to be alone? Something magical happened every time we touched each other. You have to admit that you and I were good together. We can have that again. It's not too late for us. Just remember what we had.â€

He's hoping that by saying something like that to her, he will reawaken the attraction and love she feels for him and they will get back together again.

Yet, although it'd be nice if that is all a man needed to do to get a woman back, it isn't.

In most cases, bringing up the good memories usually only highlights to her the reasons why things didn't work out in the end.

She begins to think, â€œYeah, we did have something magical between us, but there were also many other things you did that ruined the magic between us. Things that you're still not even aware of to this day because you're so blind to it. So, even though I'm still attracted to you, it's just not enough to make me want to stay in the relationship anymore. It will take more than attraction and good memories to change my mind. You need to understand what really makes me feel like I have to get out of this relationship and then change that. If you don't, I walk.â€

So, don't bother bringing up the past in the hopes that it will change her mind.

How you make her feel right now and from now on is what really matters.

She needs to feel respect and attraction for you based on who you are now, not who you used to be.

Have you changed?

Are you now able to give her the kind of relationship experience she really wants?

While trying to show her that you've changed, are you being desperate or appearing insecure in any way?

Those are the little things that count.

Another mistake that some men make in your position isâ€¦

3. Improving his physical appearance, but not focusing on what is really important to her

Sometimes, when a woman tells a guy that she is still attracted to him, but can't be with him, he might think to himself, â€œMaybe if I make some improvements to myself (e.g. lose some weight, build some muscle, change my dress style) she will feel even more attracted to me. Then, she won't be able to resist me and we can get back together again.â€

Yet, that approach rarely, if ever, works.

Why?

Essentially because what matters most to a woman is how a guy makes her feel when he's interacting with her.

Looks are only superficial and if you've been in a relationship for a while, her fascination about how you look no longer holds so much power over her (especially if you were turning her off in the relationship).

What matters to a woman is how her ex man makes her feel when he interacts with her.

For example: Does he behave in ways that are attractive to her (e.g. takes the lead and makes most of the decisions, listens to her without becoming emotionally sensitive, is loving and devoted, but also has a big purpose in his life apart from his relationship with her), or does he turn her off with his actions (e.g. he allows her to dominate him emotionally, is too needy and clingy, he has no sense of purpose in life that he is actively following through on)?

Is he the kind of man she can see herself sticking to for life, or does she feel unsure about her future with him (e.g. because he lacks financial stability, he's immature and childish)?

Is his way of thinking in line with hers, or do they have very different opinions and ideas about the fundamental things in life (e.g. she wants to settle down, get married and have a family, while he prefers to remain single and not take on any responsibilities)?

Can she look up to him, respect him, trust him and feel proud of him, or does she feel like she's too good for him?

Those are some examples of the things that attract a woman to a man, more than his looks ever will.

So, if you want to attract your ex girlfriend (fiancée or wife) back to you, you have to give her what she really wants, not what you think she wants.

When you show her (via the way you talk, think, act, behave, interact with her and react to what she says and does) that you're now the kind of man she always wanted you to be (e.g. confident, determined, emotionally independent, emotionally masculine), she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

She will then begin to feel the pain of losing you and won't want that pain to continue, so she will get back with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex is Giving Me Mixed Signals When I Bring Up the Relationship

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex is giving you mixed signals when you bring up the relationship are:

1. She doesn't want to discuss the relationship with you until she can see that you have really changed

If a woman gets a sense that her ex man hasn't changed, won't be able to change, or doesn't even know how to change, she will usually avoid getting into discussions about the relationship or the possibility of getting back together.

Instead, she will give mixed signals by saying things like, "I still care about you, but I'm not ready to get back together just yet," or "Just give me some time to sort myself out and then maybe we can discuss getting back together again at a later stage."

She's hoping that by not giving him a definite answer, he'll put in the effort to figure out where he went wrong in the relationship and then make some changes to re-attract her.

Alternatively, she hopes that he gives up trying to get her back and moves on, without her having to say, "Hey, leave me alone! It's over!"

Many women avoid being that direct and harsh because they fear an aggressive or even violent response from a man.

[image: She fears that you might become very angry, aggressive or violent]

You might not be like that, but hey we've all seen those news stories where a boyfriend kills his ex girlfriend because she won't give him another chance, right?

The fact is that some men just can't handle being dumped, so many women have an instinctive need to protect themselves by letting a guy down slowly (i.e. giving him mixed signals and not directly saying, "Leave me alone! I will never get back with you!").

Of course, you're probably not going to get angry or even violent, but that's not the point.

Women react in certain ways based on their natural instincts.

So, if you want her to be clear about her intentions with you, don't count on it.

The real way to get an ex woman back is to make her have feelings of romantic and sexual attraction for you again, based on how you now interact with her.

When you do that, you don't have to waste time and energy trying to discuss the relationship and work things out because she wants you back as well.

It's the easy way to get her back.

So, don't make the classic mistake of asking her to be clear with you (e.g. by saying something like, "Stop playing games with me and just tell me what you want. I love you. Why won't you just be honest with me and stop messing me around?").

That approach doesn't work for many reasons (e.g. she is afraid to tell you the truth, doesn't want to teach you how to get her back or it makes her feel turned off because it's like she is being forced into sticking with a relationship).

Instead of giving you the answer that you're looking for, your ex will think something like, Why should I explain to him how to be the man that I need? Does he expect me to teach him? That's not my role as a woman. Doesn't he understand that? I've tried to help him change for so long and I'm now at the point where I've given up. I've realized that other women have a man who understands how to be a real man and just gets on with it. So, it's probably going to be easier to just move on and find another guy who can give me what I want without me having to spell it out for him.

So, don't expect her to be your savior and teach you the path to get her back.

That's not a woman's role after a break up.

If you're serious about getting her back into a relationship, you must show her by the way you talk, think, act, behave, interact with her and respond to what she says and does (especially if she's giving you mixed signals when you bring up the relationship) that you really have changed as a man.

You are now the kind of man she can respect, feel attracted to and love.

For example: Some of the changes that a woman might want to see in her ex before she commits to the idea of getting back together with him, include:

- He is more ambitious and forward thinking in his life.
- He doesn't cling to her and the relationship like it's his only reason for living.
- He stops being such a loner and starts being more socially confident and open with people.
- He stops allowing his single friends to influence him negatively (e.g. he used to drink too much when was hanging with them, he became careless and irresponsible like them).
- He stands up for himself more now, while still being a good man.
- He takes the lead (e.g. He doesn't wait around for her to give him the green light that it's okay to get her back).
- He stops discussing his feelings with her all the time like a woman.
- He is emotionally stronger now.
- He makes her feel attracted in new and interesting ways based on the style of conversation he now uses.

Once you understand what your ex really wants you to change about yourself, you can then quickly make some adjustments and re-spark her feelings for you.

When that happens, her guard comes down and she becomes a lot more open about discussing the relationship with you.

Another reason why your ex might be giving you mixed signals when you bring up the relationship is that

2. She doesn't believe you can give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants

[image: She doesn't believe that you can give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants]

Most of the time, a woman won't break up with a guy before she gives him a several chances to change and make her feel the way she really wants to feel when she's with him.

This has a lot to do with a woman's natural instincts.

Even if she doesn't want children, the couple has been using condoms or she has been taking the contraceptive pill, her instincts will remain the same.

If a guy has been blowing inside or around her pussy, she is going to feel an instinct to stick with him so he could help raise and provide for any potential offspring.

If women didn't have that instinct, they would act more like men and not care about how many guys they had sex with.

So, before your ex broke up with you, she most likely gave you plenty of time or warnings to change the things that were turning her off.

For example: If a woman feels as though her guy isn't giving her enough emotional support, she might say something like, "You're always so cold and unemotional when I'm talking to you. I need you to be more supportive and understanding."

Essentially she's telling him (without saying these words), "I'm not getting the emotional support that I need from you and it's making me lose respect and attraction for you. If you can't change and give me the kind of relationship and attraction experience that I want, then I'm going to have to break up with you at some point."

Another example is if a woman feels that her man is displaying unmanly behavior too often (e.g. he gossips a lot, cries when life gets tough, acts a lot like her).

A woman might then say to him, "There's this guy I work with who is always gossiping and crying about things. Don't men realize that when a guy does that, women feel turned off? A woman needs a man who is emotionally strong enough to cope with life's challenges without whining about it like a big baby. As for all the gossiping, don't guys know we have girlfriends for that? We don't want to gossip with our guy. That is not sexy at all," in the hopes that he'll recognize his mistakes and then change.

Yet, if the guy just ignores her (either because he assumes that their love is strong enough to make her overlook his flaws, or because he just doesn't realize the importance of being a masculine man), she will eventually lose respect for him.

When respect goes, the sexual attraction also begins to fade and eventually a woman will also disconnect from her feelings of love for him.

When that happens, she will usually decide to break up with him.

If the guy then tries to get her back without changing, she may then give him mixed signals when he brings up the relationship.

She thinks something like, "I've given him so many hints and suggestions before, but I never seemed to get through and make him change. To be honest, I just don't believe he can give me the attraction experience I really want. He doesn't know how to be a real man. So, I probably just have to let him go. Sure, it would be nice if he could change and we could get back together again, but I just don't think it's possible at this point. I know he means well, but we're better off leaving things the way they are. He's just not man enough for me at this point in his life.

In many cases like that, a guy will then begin to beg, plead and seek pity to hopefully get another chance with her, which will just turn her off even more.

If you want to stop your ex from giving you mixed signals and just give you another chance, you need to first ask yourself, What part of the overall attraction experience was my ex missing out on in our relationship? What are my weak points when it comes to maintaining her respect, attraction love for me?

That's what you need to start improving right now.

When she feels heard and understood (because you've changed the subtle things about your approach that had been turning her off), her attitude towards you will also begin to change.

Her walls will come down and she will feel respect and attraction for you once again.

She will then stop giving you mixed signals because her feelings for you will be more certain.

She will want to give the relationship another chance, just as much as you do and you can then get her back much more easily.

Another reason why your ex might give you mixed signals if you bring up the relationship is that

3. She has feelings for another guy

Sometimes, a woman might find herself stuck between an ex who wants her back and the possibility of a new romance with another guy.

Don't worry if that applies your situation. You can still get her back.

If your ex isn't clearly telling you to leave her alone, it means that she hasn't yet decided whether the new guy is really what she wants in a man.

So, rather than look at the other guy as competition and allow negative emotions such as insecurity and self-doubt to erode your confidence (which is unattractive to women), you should instead focus on re-sparking your ex's feelings of respect and attraction for you.

For example: By making her laugh and smile when you interact with her, making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine vibe or showing her via your actions that you're confident and more emotionally strong and mature now.

The more you make her feel attracted to the new you, the less appealing the other guy seems and the faster she will become open to getting back together with you.

Another reason why your ex might be giving mixed signals is that

4. You're asking about the relationship via text, rather than making moves on her in person

Sometimes, a guy might convince himself that texting his ex about the relationship will be less threatening to her and because of that, she will be more open to giving him another chance.

Yet, most of the time, the exact opposite is true.

Text almost always creates more problems with an ex and makes her close up more and more.

When a guy tries to discuss the relationship via text, it reinforces her negative emotions about him (e.g. anger, disappointment, frustration, annoyance) because it's just a bunch of words on a little screen.

It's not him sitting or standing in front of her, talking and making her smile, laugh and feel good as he discusses the relationship with her.

So, she has nothing new to base her feelings on about him, other than words on her phone.

It's not him; it's just a text.

It's just not the same as re-attracting her on a phone call or in person.

So, if he tries to push her to give him another chance via text, rather than say, â€œSure, letâ€™s give it another shot,â€ she may decide to play hard to get or reply with mixed signals because she's not really feeling it yet.

For example, she might text, â€œIâ€™m not sure yet. Let me think about it. I need more time.â€

So, don't waste time trying to make your ex talk about the relationship with you via text.

Instead, focus on rebuilding her feelings of respect and attraction for the man that you are now, by getting her on a phone call right away.

Over the phone, she doesn't have to guess at your state of mind (e.g. are you confident and self-assured, or are you insecure and nervous?).

She can pick up on the changes based on how you talk, the tone of your voice, how you react to her, the confidence you have to joke around (especially if she is being distant) and your attitude towards her.

When she senses that you really have changed, she will begin to reconnect with her positive feelings for you (e.g. respect, attraction and love) and then she'll be much more open and happy when you bring up the relationship.

Another reason for the mixed signals

5. She's testing your confidence

[image: She is testing your confidence]

In a situation where a woman isn't sure about her feelings for a guy, she might give him mixed signals to test his confidence.

She will act like she is completely turned off by things he says, or as though she is annoyed at his behavior all of a sudden, even though he is just being a normal, good guy.

She wants to see if he will start doubting himself and his value to her (which will then prove to her that he's not man enough for her), or if he will remain emotionally strong and confident (which will then re-spark her feelings for him and open herself up to getting back together again).

So, don't keep trying to convince your ex to give you another chance, if you haven't gotten to the point where you are confident in yourself and in your worth to her.

If she gives you a mixed signal (e.g. agrees to meet up with you and then treats you in a cold, unfriendly way, says things like, â€œI still care for you, but I can't be with youâ€) and you fail that test by becoming anxious and insecure, or worse, demanding that she stops playing games with you, she will just keep stringing you along until she eventually finds a confident, emotionally strong man to take your place.

When that happens, you will hear those dreaded words, “I have something to tell you. Please don’t get angry at me” and she will then go on to say that she’s met someone else and wants you to leave her alone now.

Don’t put yourself in that position.

Focus on making her have strong feelings for you again based on how you now interact with her (i.e. remaining confident and emotionally strong no matter how hard she tests you).

If you do that, she will want the relationship too because her feelings will be back and she will want to explore it with you to see where it goes.

So, the next time she gives you mixed signals when you bring up the relationship, just make sure that you have sparked her feelings of attraction and then go ahead and give her a few days or up to a week of space.

She might call you or contact you during that time because she is missing you.

If she doesn’t, just call her, make her laugh and smile and let her experience the new you.

Before you know it, she will drop her defenses and give you the signal you’ve been waiting for all along (i.e. she wants you back for real now).

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get an Ex Back if You Work With Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Getting an ex back when you work with her might seem tricky or impossible, but it's actually a lot easier than you think.

I know this because I've heard back from so many men who've used the following approach to get their ex woman back that they were working with.

So, here are the 8 tips to help you get her back!

1. Tell her that you accept the break up and just want to be friendly coworkers now

[image: Tell her that you accept the break up]

Don't worry — you're not actually going to be friends with her.

It's just a way of getting her to drop her guard and open up to interacting with you, so you can then re-attract her and make her want you back.

Re-attraction is the most important part of the ex back process, regardless of whether you work with her or not.

You've got to make her have feelings for you again and when you do, she then feels like it's not over between you.

She now has reasons to want to get back with you (i.e. she is feeling drawn to you again, she likes the new you, she can't stop thinking about you and her while you're apart, she feels like it's not over).

Offering to just be "friends" gets rid of a lot of the stress of interacting with each other as ex's in a working environment.

She doesn't have to worry about you potentially causing a scene or creating trouble in the workplace.

You are being emotionally mature about it and she is feeling good around you, so it's all fine.

There's nothing for her to worry about or have her guard up about.

Where many guys go wrong when trying to get an ex back that they work with, is by trying to convince her to give him another chance via e-mail.

A guy might then e-mail her while at work and say things like, I can't bear seeing you here every day and not be able to hug you or kiss you like before. Just having you so close, but you not being mine anymore is killing me on the inside. I can't focus on what I'm doing anymore because all I can think about is you. When I see you walk past my desk and you ignore me, it really hurts me. I'm afraid that this is going to cause me problems here at work. Please just give me one more chance. I'll do anything to make it up to you.

Yet, that approach rarely (if ever) works.

Why?

Firstly, by sending that kind of e-mail, he risks getting himself into trouble with management or the HR (Human Resources) department, if she decides to report him for harassing her.

Secondly, a woman doesn't want to feel pressured into giving a guy another chance at a relationship if she doesn't have sexual or romantic feelings for him anymore.

So, the best approach is to just put her at ease around you by saying something like, "Hey Samantha, I know that we've broken up and it can feel a bit awkward seeing each other at work every day. So, rather than trying to avoid seeing one another which is obviously impossible under the circumstances wouldn't it be better if we just be friendly coworkers from now on? I know we're both mature enough to be able to do that and it would make seeing each other every day so much more natural and easy. So how about it? Friends?"

Essentially, by saying something like that to her, not only are you taking the awkwardness out of a difficult situation, you're also showing her that you're being an emotionally mature, confident man, which will make her feel respect for you again (this is a good thing).

Then, you need to

2. Use the friendly coworker interactions to let her experience the changes in you

[image: Use the friendly interactions to re-attract her]

Agreeing to only be friendly coworkers with your ex doesn't mean you're going to be on your best behavior around her and act like a good little boy who isn't allowed to make her feel attracted anymore.

No.

Instead, you're just going to use the friendship as a platform to show her that you've changed based on how you communicate and interact with her.

For example: If one of the reasons why a guy got broken up with was because his woman felt he was too submissive around other men (especially in the work environment), he needs to change that about himself now.

If she can see that he's now standing up for himself and taking on a more assertive, but professional role when he interacts with other guys, she will naturally begin to feel some respect for him again.

When she can respect him, she can also feel sexually and romantically attracted to him again.

Then, getting her back becomes easier because she's now feeling more open to the idea of being in a relationship.

The feelings are becoming mutual again, rather than just him wanting her and her feeling turned off and closed off to him.

To get your ex back, the main thing to remember is to use every interaction that you have with your ex at work to show her that you've changed and reawaken her feelings of respect and sexual and romantic attraction for you.

What you don't want to do is appear emotionally weak and hurt at work (e.g. beg and plead with her for another chance at every opportunity you get, eat lunch by yourself every day while looking sad and lonely. When she asks you how you are, say things like, "How do you think I am?" in tone where you are clearly seeking pity).

Additionally, if other people begin to notice your pain and start feeling sorry for you, it will make her feel even more turned off by you.

A woman doesn't want to be with a man who is at the bottom of the social ladder because he doesn't feel good enough, or because he needs everyone to pat him on the back and say, "It's okay boy. Don't cry. You will find another girl one day."

She wants a man who remains in control of his emotions, remains strong and doesn't crumble under the pressure of whatever he is going through at the time.

You can be that man and if you are, she will naturally feel sparks of respect and attraction for you again.

So, remember!

The main reason why you want to be friends with your ex at work is to show her (via your actions and behavior) that you've changed, so that you can get her respect and attraction back.

One of the best ways you can do that is to

3. Make her smile, laugh and feel good when she interacts with you, while also being professional

Some workplaces are a lot stricter than others, but generally speaking, most managers or bosses don't mind a bit of smiling and laughter, as long as the employees are getting their work done and being professional.

You have to make that judgment for yourself based on what you've seen in your workplace.

For example: Have a think about the coolest people at your workplace (who everyone seems to love) and pay attention to how they behave.

They're most likely getting their job done, while also adding in some humor and being light-hearted to make people smile, laugh and enjoy themselves at times, right?

Of course, an exception might be your boss, but what about the coolest people at your workplace?

They most likely don't mind having a laugh or two, while still being professional, right?

So, don't avoid trying to get her to smile and laugh because you think it would be unprofessional or frowned upon, when the coolest people at your workplace are already doing it.

As long as you are being professional and getting your job done, there's nothing wrong with having a few laughs along the way to make people around you feel good.

Additionally, getting your ex to smile, laugh and feel good around you (at times) is an important part of getting her to open back up to being in a relationship with you outside of work.

When you make her smile, laugh and feel good every time that she interacts with you, you are helping her to let go of the negative feelings about you that she's been holding on to since you broke up (e.g. anger, resentment, disillusionment) and replace them with more positive feelings such as respect, attraction, intrigue and excitement.

When that happens, she naturally feels drawn to you in a way that feels good to her.

Interacting with you at work becomes something she enjoys and possibly even looks forward to, rather than something she dreads.

So, make sure that when you bump into her at the photocopier/printer, or have to drop something off at her desk, youâre not being way too serious all the time.

Just be confident and focus on using every opportunity you have to interact with her at work, to make her laugh, or at the very least, smile.

For example: If she says, *âSo, how have you been since we broke up?*â you can jokingly say, *âOh terrible! I havenât had a decent home cooked meal since you left. Iâm starving! I should report you to the Humane Society for abuse. Iâve lost so much weight. Look at me, Iâm a skeleton!*â and have a laugh with her about it.

Remember: When she laughs, it eases the tension between you and her and she starts to see you as the man that you are now, rather than the guy you used to be before.

Even if she doesnât laugh (e.g. because sheâs playing hard to get), she wonât be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you for having the confidence and emotional maturity to handle the break up with a smile and good attitude.

She then drops her guard and becomes more open when you...

4. Get her to catch up with you for lunch as friends

Once you re-spark some of your exâs feelings of respect and attraction for you during interactions, you can then ask her out for lunch with you.

For example: You might say to her in person (not via e-mail), *âHey – How about we catch a bite to eat in the office cafeteria tomorrow? It would be fun to sit down and really catch up as friends.*â

If sheâs been feeling good every time she interacts with you, she will be open to having lunch with you.

However, if sheâs a little bit resistant to the idea at first (e.g. because she doesnât want to come across as being too easy), you can say something along the lines of, *âItâs just a friendly lunch between two coworkers. No strings attached. We can do that. Weâre mature enough to do that, right? Itâs just lunch as friends.*â

In most cases, a woman will say yes to an offer like that because it seems relaxed, friendly and non-threatening.

Then, at the lunch, make sure you continue to say and do the types of things that will build on her feelings of sexual and romantic for you.

Next tipâ

5. Get her to forgive your mistakes for her benefit

A very important part of getting your ex back is making her forgive you.

Yet, rather than making the classic mistake of saying something like, *âIâm so sorry about what happened. I feel so bad. I need you to forgive me so that I can get over the way I messed things up,*â you need to get her to forgive you for her own sake and benefit.

(Don't worry â□□ it will benefit you too. Her guard will come down big time after she sincerely forgives you. It's standard human psychology).

So, when youâ□□re having lunch with her, you can say something along the lines of, *â□□Hey – I know that I stuffed things up between us and Iâ□□m really sorry about that. However, itâ□□s not something you should allow to cast a dark cloud over any future relationship that you might have. Everyone makes mistakes, but carrying around the baggage of our relationship for life will only prevents you from moving on and being happy again. So, for your sake, as well as mine, I hope you can forgive me for the mistakes I made and how I treated you. Not all men are like that and I certainly am not going to be like that in future. I accept the break up between us. So, if you can forgive me, it would be a huge weight off your shoulders.*â□□

When she forgives you, she stops thinking of you as the guy who messed up and she starts seeing you as you are now.

Her guard comes down and she feels surges of respect and romantic and sexual attraction for you again.

Then, if she seems interested (e.g. she tells you she genuinely forgives you, wants to give you a hug or a kiss, is laughing, smiling and looking happy to be interacting with you), get her to agree to give the relationship another chance at that lunch.

If she isn't giving you those signs, donâ□□t worry about it.

Just reconfirm that you and her will only continue on as friends. Thenâ□□!

6. Continue building on her newfound respect and attraction for you

Even if sheâ□□s not ready to give you another chance right away, it doesnâ□□t mean that you canâ□□t change her mind in a few days or a week or two.

The key is to continue saying and doing the types of things that spark her feelings of respect and sexual and sexual attraction for you.

For example: If you ask her to forgive you for her own benefit and she then tries to test you by saying something like, *â□□Just because I have agreed to forgive you, donâ□□t get your hopes up. Iâ□□m not going to forget what you did that easily*â□□ just remain calm and in control of your emotions.

Rather than getting upset, use it as an opportunity to build her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Say to her (in a joking way!), *â□□I canâ□□t believe youâ□□re being so cruel! All I ever did wrong was burn the toast that one time when we were making breakfast. That was my only mistake. I'm soooo sorry being such a bad boyfriend. The burning of the toast was just an accident. I promise to make better toast from now on, okay?*â□□

She will most likely laugh and maybe even say, *â□□You know thatâ□□s not what I meant,*â□□ and you can laugh with her and say, â□□Yeah thatâ□□s what you say now, but how can I be sure? I mean, I know how important a good breakfast is to you in the mornings and I totally screwed that up. What a horrible boyfriend I was.”

She may then begin to think something like, â□□Heâ□□s changed. Heâ□□s so confident and easy- going now. Nothing that I say makes him get angry or lose confidence. I like it.

When that happens, she just won't be able to stop herself from automatically feeling some respect and attraction for you again.

That's what you want.

The same rule applies whether you are getting an ex back outside of work or in the workplace.

You've got to reawaken her feelings for you so she has reasons of her own to want to give you another chance.

Next tip!

7. Catch up with her again and at least get a warm hug from her to help reactivate her feelings further

[image: Get a warm hug from your ex]

If you've been building up your ex's feelings of respect and attraction during your first lunch together, she will most-likely be giving you signs that she's feeling open to catching up with you again.

However, the next time you meet up with her for lunch, or a quick cup of coffee, just make sure that you get a hug from her (and if possible, also a kiss) to reactivate her feelings for you.

For example: You might say in a relaxed, easy-going way, I'm glad we're not like those couples who break up and then have to quit their jobs because they can't be normal around each other in the workplace anymore. I'm impressed with how relaxed you and I have been about this. Don't you agree?

She might then say something like, Yeah, it's a relief not to have to avoid each other and feel awkward about the break up, and you can then say, I think we should hug on that. Come here.

Initially, she might be a little reluctant and she may say, Don't push your luck, but just stay relaxed and say, It's just a hug. I promise I won't bite too hard. Besides, we're friends now. We can hug without it being a big deal, right? So, come here and give me that hug. Bring it in for a hug.

She will then most-likely come closer to you for a hug.

Calmly and confidently pull her in close and give her a nice, long squeeze.

From there, the final step is to

8. Meet up with her outside of work hours, hook up with her sexually and get the relationship back together

[image: Hook up with your ex and blow her mind]

If it looks like she enjoyed the hug, go ahead and get her to agree to meet up with you after work.

Alternatively, let her feel attracted to you and want you so much that she starts showing obvious signs of interest over the next few days.

Then, suggest a catch up.

For example: You might say to her, â€œWe should catch up sometime this week outside of work to say hi and chill out togetherâ€ and then arrange a place and time to catch up.

When you catch up, continue focusing on making her feel sexual attraction and respect for the new you.

Then, when it feels like an appropriate time, give her a kiss.

From there, if sheâ€™s open, you can go to her place or yours and hook up with her sexually.

After sex, just relax, be confident and let her bring up the idea of having a relationship again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Won't Get Back Together With Me Because She Said Our Relationship Stresses Her Out

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your ex girlfriend doesn't want to get back together again because she felt stressed out by the relationship, you might be feeling like there's no hope of getting her back.

Fortunately, there is hope and you really can get her back.

Here are 7 tips to help you change her mind and give you another chance!

1. Make her smile, laugh and feel good whenever she interacts with you from now on

[image: Make her smile, laugh and feel good whenever she interacts with you from now on]

You're probably familiar with the old saying, "Laughter is the best medicine."

When it comes to easing the tension and making an ex drop her guard, humor to create smiling and laughter is so important.

Remember: Right now, your ex girlfriend probably feels reluctant to interact with you and she might be thinking, "I don't want to see him or talk to him anymore. It's just too stressful. I have broken up with him and that's it. I'm not giving him another chance."

So, if you want her back, it's up to you to change how she feels by making every interaction a happy, enjoyable experience for her.

Watch this video for some examples:

The more she smiles and laughs when interacting with you, the more that her feelings of respect and attraction for you will start to come back.

For example: Imagine that you're on a phone call with your ex girlfriend and she says something like, "Look, I don't want you call me anymore. It's just too stressful for me. Please accept that it's over. I'm not giving the relationship another chance. Please just leave me alone."

The wrong way to react would be by trying to be extra nice, sweet and polite to her and say things like, "Please, just give me a chance. I promise I won't say or do anything to upset you. You know how much I care about you. The last thing I would want to do is cause you to feel more stress," in that hope it makes her feel understood and respected.

Yet, rather than please her, it stresses her out even more. Why?

Essentially, because the guy is being a wimp and doesn't have the confidence or emotionally masculinity to stand up to her in a loving, but assertive way which is what she really wants.

Instead, he's being submissive to her and letting her call all the shots, which is stressful to her because it's not what she wants from a guy and she's sick and tired of acting like she's okay with it when she's not.

As a result, she closes off to him even more and says that he just stresses her out too much and she doesn't want to talk to him or see him anymore.

So, a better way to react when your ex says, “Look, I don’t want you to call me anymore. It’s just too stressful for me,” is to turn it into something the two of you can laugh about.

You might say in a joking way, “Yeah, I know what you mean! Saying hello over the phone can be soooo stressful. I don’t know how people all over the world do it every day without having a nervous breakdown. Hold on a sec! please don’t say another word or I might have a heart attack from all the stress of having a simple conversation!” and then have a laugh about it.

She’s most-likely going to laugh at your silliness and possibly even realize that she’s being too serious about a simple phone call.

She will then drop her guard a little bit and allow herself to enjoy the interaction with you.

Alternatively, if she says, “Look, I don’t want you to call me anymore. It’s just too stressful for me,” you can jokingly say something like, “Okay, I won’t call you anymore. Instead, you can call me. I’ll expect a call from you tomorrow at 7pm for a chat and a laugh” and then have a laugh with her about that.

Alternatively, you might laugh and say, “Hah! You’re such a drama queen these days” and have a laugh with her about that.

You might then laugh and add, “What’s next? You can’t open the fridge because the door is too heavy for you, or you can brush your teeth because the toothbrush is too prickly” and have a laugh with her about that.

When you approach the conversation in that way, she can then relax a little and stop being so serious and uptight about things as she talks to you.

By the way!

Cracking one joke to her isn’t the only thing that is required to fully get her back into a sexual, loving relationship with you. (Of course!).

It’s just something to do in the spur of the moment that will make her smile and maybe laugh, so she can relax and open up a little.

Using humor like that also makes her feel respect for the fact that you don’t lose confidence in yourself when she is being difficult.

When you make her smile and laugh during interactions with you, she just won’t be able to stop herself from feeling good.

Even if she tries to resist it, she won’t be able to hold on to her negative feelings about you for long, because you will be replacing her stressful memories of you with new, positive feelings.

When that happens, her guard comes down and she becomes open to the idea of being with you again.

Another tip to avoid her feeling stressed is to!

2. Stop trying discuss or work through the problems that you used to have in the relationship

[image: Stop trying to discuss and work through your old relationship problems. Just start a new relationship based on who you are now.]

Trying to discuss the problems you used to have together or work things out by talking about it, isn't what she wants right now.

She wants to feel good around you.

She wants to be able to feel sexually and romantically attracted, relaxed, happy and open as she interacts with you.

She doesn't want to feel as though talking to you is a difficult job or task that she has to handle in life.

She just wants things to flow smoothly, based on the fundamental feeling of mutual sexual and romantic attraction.

So, if you want to avoid stressing her out, you've got to stop trying to work things out with discussions.

Instead, focus on making the feelings mutual again (i.e. You respect her and she respects you. You feel attracted to her and she feels attracted to you. You love her and she is feeling like she's in love with you again).

That's what works to get an ex back fast.

Another tip to avoid stressing your ex girlfriend out as you get her back is to...

3. Stop apologizing for your mistakes

It's totally fine to apologize to a woman for your mistakes once or twice, but if you keep apologizing over and over again, it starts to become stressful for a woman.

Why?

She gets annoyed that the apologies keep coming, but she still feels the same about you.

What you need to do is apologize once (or twice if you really messed up and hurt her feelings) and then get on with re-attracting her and making her feel good around you again.

This rule applies, even if she is complaining and bringing up issues and seemingly expecting you to keep apologizing to her.

For example: A guy is on a phone call with his ex and she says something like, "I don't want to get back together. Being with you is too stressful. Remember when you (mentions all the things he did wrong)? Well I've had enough of that. I'm not going to put myself through it anymore. I just can't believe you did those things to me."

Naturally, most guys are good guys and when a woman is bringing up his past mistakes, he will want to apologize to her.

That's fine, but there is a line that can be crossed where apologizing starts to become desperate and seem like a weak, confused act on a man's part.

For example: If a man is constantly apologizing for his past mistakes, it can make a woman feel like she is more dominant than him.

When a woman feels more dominant than a guy, she can't look up to him and respect him.

When she can't respect him, she doesn't feel sexually attracted to him and without those two things, there's nothing much left to build a happy relationship upon.

So, if your ex brings up the same old issues again and again, rather than apologize to her repeatedly and give her the upper hand, you can laugh and say something like, “Hey, we’ve already talked about that. You stress yourself out by bringing up old problems all the time. How many more times do you want to bring it up? 10 more times 30 more? 50? Will complaining about it 100 more times get you to accept that people make mistakes, learn and become better as a result, or do you want to keep complaining about it and thinking that if you just stress about it enough, you will eventually feel relaxed and at peace with it?” or “Haha, okay, here we go again. Tell me all about it and stress yourself out again. You’re such a little drama queen these days, aren’t you? Always wanting to rant on and on about old problems to create drama. It’s funny. Go ahead. Tell me how bad of a boyfriend I was” and then have a laugh about it with her.

By saying something like that to her, you’re having a bit of fun to lighten the mood and relax her unnecessary anger.

You’re also establishing your role as an emotionally mature, dominant man, which she is going to respect and feel some attraction for whether she admits it or not.

Note: I’ve heard back from many men who’ve my ex back approach on their woman and they’ve told me things like, “She said why weren’t you like this before? I like this new you” or, “What has gotten into you? You’re so different now. I actually kind of like it.”

Of course, not all women are that open about their feelings of attraction.

Some women will feel respect and attraction and say NOTHING about it.

Other women will feel it, but say that they’re not feeling it to test your confidence.

In other words, every woman will express herself in a different way, but what you can count on for sure is that every woman does feel respect and attraction when a man is being emotionally masculine and is able to turn a potentially stressful or annoying conversation into something to smile and laugh about together.

Another tip to avoid stressing your ex out and pushing her away is to

4. Get her to forgive you for her own benefit

When your ex girlfriend forgives you, it will make HER feel better.

All of a sudden, she will feel a shift in her emotions and perspective of you and the relationship.

She realizes that everyone makes mistakes in relationships, but she doesn’t need to hold a grudge against you for it for life.

She can forgive you based on the fact that you made those mistakes before and are a new, improved man now.

You’re not the man who made those mistakes. You are the man who has learned from those mistakes and become a better man.

However, don’t try to get her to forgive you for the reason that you are a better man now.

No.

She has to forgive you for HER benefit (i.e. that she will feel better about herself and relationships when she forgives you).

That's how it works.

If you try to get her to forgive you for YOUR benefit (i.e. "Forgive me, because I'm a better man now,") she will close up and be unwilling to give you that gift, because it doesn't seem like it will be of any benefit to her.

It's very important that you get her to forgive you for HER benefit.

When you do, her guard naturally begins to drop and she starts to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Then, the idea of getting back together again doesn't seem that impossible to her anymore.

She doesn't feel stressed out by the new you, so she thinks, "Well, why not? I feel good now. It's not like it was before."

At that point, you can get her back.

Another tip to avoid making your ex feel stressed about being in a relationship with you is stop

5. Stop saying and doing the kind of things that used to stress her out

[image: Stop saying and doing the kinds of things that used to stress her out]

This one sounds a little obvious, but you'd be surprised at how many guys get it wrong.

A guy will continue talking to her and behaving in ways that make her feel stressed and annoyed, because he doesn't know what else to do.

As a result, she will become increasingly rude, cold and distant and he won't know what to do about it.

What he needs to do is change his approach and use an approach that matches her personality, wants and needs.

For example: Here are some things that can cause a woman to feel stressed about being in a relationship with a guy:

- He texts her or calls her every day, always wanting to text chat or talk on the phone for a long time.
- He spends most or all of his spare time just hanging around with her, rather than following through on his big goals, dreams and ambitions in life.
- He has no real sense of purpose in life that he is actively following through on and thinks that a woman will be okay about that in the long run.
- He is unreliable (e.g. he breaks his promises to her, borrows money from her all the time and doesn't pay it back, goes from job to job because he keeps getting fired, or taking on jobs that he doesn't like).
- He is moving too fast for her (e.g. after only a few weeks of dating, he is already talking about moving in together, getting married and having children, while she wants to see how the relationship goes for a year or two before committing to that).
- He doesn't want to commit to her (e.g. she wants to settle down and have a serious relationship and he wants to party and be irresponsible).

- He is too controlling (e.g. he wants to know her every move, reads her text messages, e-mails or social media posts, stops her from seeing her friends).
- He keeps focusing on her past (e.g. he constantly brings up her past mistakes, starts fights with her about previous relationships with other guys, feels jealous about how she used to really love her ex boyfriend).
- He keeps getting into fights and arguments with her all the time over trivial things, rather than creating a relationship dynamic based on happiness, love, trust and mutual support.
- He always needs her to reassure him of her love for him, otherwise he gets insecure.
- He needs regular compliments, displays of affection and loving attention from her, otherwise he feels like he is losing her and starts becoming clingy.

As you can see, there are many mistakes a guy can make to cause his woman to feel stressed about being in a relationship with him.

However, the main thing that you need to bear in mind is that whatever made your ex feel stressed out in the relationship, you need to make sure that those things are no longer going to be an issue.

It's not about promising her that you WILL change if she gives you another chance.

Instead, you actually have to begin to really change those things about yourself, so she can sense and pick up that it wouldn't be a problem anymore.

You don't have to tell her that you've changed those things.

Why?

Women are very good at picking up the changes in a guy without him even having to say it, by analyzing how he talks to her, reacts to her, behaves, thinks, feels and takes action.

It's obvious to a woman if a guy really understands where he was going wrong and is now capable of being a better man.

So, how can you make sure that picks up on the changes?

For example: If she felt that you were moving too fast for her and were trying to push her into something that she didn't feel ready for, then just slow down, relax and focus on having fun without giving off the energy of, "I want a committed relationship. You have to commit! Commit! Show me signs that you want to commit!"

If you and her kept getting into fights and arguments all the time, stop taking things so seriously and focus on turning disagreements into something both of you can laugh about.

Whatever the case is for you, the most important thing is that she can see that the things that were stressing her out before are no longer an issue.

When that happens, she will start to feel drawn to you again and from there you can build a new, happier, more relaxing and enjoyable relationship together.

On the other hand, if your ex girlfriend sees that you're behaving in the same old ways that made her feel stressed, then she's not going to be very interested in getting back together with you no matter what you say or promise to her.

You've got to make her experience and feel the changes for herself, so she can come to the conclusion that things really are different now and she doesn't need to keep her guard up around you.

Another tip to avoid stressing your ex out as you try to get her back is!

6. Don't let her create unnecessary stress and drama over little things

Your ex girlfriend may have good reasons to feel stressed about you and your relationship.

However, sometimes a woman can be very emotional and pick a fight with a guy over insignificant things.

If a guy doesn't realize that she actually wants him to put her back in her place in a loving, but dominant way, he might react by trying to be even nicer to her to make her happy.

For example: He might suck up to her to hopefully calm her down, promise to do whatever she tells him, take the blame for everything that happened between them or let her belittle him.

Yet, when a woman is throwing a tantrum and behaving like a spoilt brat, giving in to her is not a good idea, no matter how guilty you feel about what happened in the relationship.

Why?

Rewarding a woman for her bad behavior is never, ever a healthy way to build a lasting relationship. Instead, it just makes her feel like she can push you around and be bratty and selfish without any consequences.

As a result, she loses respect for you for not being man enough to put her in her place when she deserves it.

So, how could you handle the situation when your ex is creating unnecessary stress and drama over little things?

You need to remain emotionally strong, laugh about it and not take her so seriously.

For example: If she's being a pain in the butt and throwing tantrums for no reason, just laugh and say, â€œOh, you're such a drama queen,â€ or â€œRelaaax...you stress yourself out over the smallest things. Chill out girlâ€ and have a laugh with her about it, rather than taking it all so seriously.

When she sees that you're not buying into her drama, she'll naturally feel respect for you for being man enough to stand up to her in a dominant, but loving way.

Her guard will then come down and she'll suddenly find herself feeling attracted to the new you.

7. Let her see that your life is happy now, with or without her

Living a happy life without her is something that makes her feel respect and attraction for you, even if she doesn't admit it, or if she pretends to be angry about it to test your confidence.

When a woman can sense that you're getting on with other important things in your life (e.g. going out with friends, pursuing your goals, doing the things you've been putting off, enjoying your life), she will instinctively start to feel attracted to your confidence and ability to cope with the break up like a man.

She won't be able to stop herself from looking at you in a new, more positive way, because you are now behaving like the kind of confident, emotionally masculine, forward moving man that she can look up to and respect.

Of course, that doesn't mean you have to rub your new life in her face and try to make her feel bad about it.

Instead, just let her see how happy your life is based on how you talk about life now and what you've been up to.

Be an example of how easy life is when you don't stress out about little things and just get on with enjoying the moment, the day, the night, the week and your life.

When she realizes that you're now a more relaxed, easy-going, emotionally strong man without her, she automatically starts to feel attracted to you—even if she doesn't want to, or even if she doesn't admit it.

What you need to understand is that attraction is an automatic reaction that humans have to each other.

A person either displays attractive traits or they don't.

If you display traits that women find attractive (e.g. emotional masculinity, confidence, charisma, ambition, high self esteem), women will naturally feel attracted to you.

If you display traits that women find unattractive (e.g. emotional weakness or sensitivity, suppressed personality, lack of ambition, insecurity), women will naturally feel turned off by you.

So, when you display attractive traits to your ex girlfriend, she just can't help but feel attracted to you.

It happens automatically.

She also can't stop herself from dropping negative perceptions about you and beginning to look at you in a new, more positive way.

Based on your new approach, she now feels relaxed and happy when talking to you and interacting with you.

As a result, the idea of getting back together again makes her feel excited, curious and alive, rather than anxious, stressed out and tired.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex said That She Doesn't Have Romantic Feelings For Me and Feels Like We Are Better Off as Friends

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible reasons why your ex said that she doesn't have romantic feelings for you and feels like you and her are better off as friends are that:

1. Your relationship turned into a friendship

Sometimes a relationship might start off with a bang, where there's a whole lot of sexual attraction between a man and a woman.

Every time they get together, sparks fly and it feels like the kind of sexually passionate romance that you see in the movies and on TV.

Yet, over time, the excitement fades away as the guy starts treating his woman in a neutral way, or like a friend, rather than making her feel like she is his feminine girl.

For example: At the beginning of the relationship, a guy might

- Regularly compliment his woman and show her, via his actions and what he says that he finds her sexually desirable (e.g. he enjoys touching, kissing and holding her hand, he says things like, "You're so sexy! You look good even after being at the gym where you've been sweating and your hair is all over the place. In fact, you look even hotter that way to me.")
- Have sex with her often, regardless of the time (e.g. morning, afternoon or night) or place (e.g. in bed, on the sofa, in the kitchen, in the car).
- Take her on romantic dates (e.g. candlelit dinners, picnics on the beach, weekends away).

However, as time goes by, a guy might sometimes become so comfortable in the relationship with his woman that he stops treating her like a sexy, feminine woman and starts treating her more like a neutral friend.

Alternatively, she might continue to feel like a sexy woman in his eyes, but he stops being a sexy man in her eyes.

For example: He starts acting neutral (like a friend) around her or worse, acting feminine like her or one of her girlfriends might act.

She then stops looking him as her man and starts thinking of him as more of a friend, or worse, as one of her girlfriends.

When that happens, her sexual attraction is switched off and she no longer feels right about being in a boyfriend/girlfriend relationship with him.

There are many different paths to the old, "We're better off as friends" line from a woman, but the solution to fix the problem is always the same.

You've got to re-attract her.

You've got to make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction whenever you interact with her from now on.

When you do that, she will naturally start looking at you as a potential lover and boyfriend again, rather than just thinking of you as a friend.

For example: Other ways that guys end up causing the old, “We’re better off as friends” line from their woman includeâ€¦|

He stops complimenting her in a sexual way and if she tries to get him to notice something about her (e.g. a new outfit, her hairstyle) by asking, “How do I look?” he usually just says, “Fine” or, “Okay.”

She then feels like there isn’t much of a sexual attraction between him and her.

It feels like she is sexy and attractive, but he’s not even feeling it, so she then thinks that she’s being undervalued.

In many cases, she will then start flirting with guys at work (or university if she’s still studying) or when she goes out with her girlfriends.

When she notices that other men find her very sexy and are able to make her feel attracted (e.g. because they are being confident, emotionally masculine, charismatic), she then starts to think that she shouldn’t be in a relationship with her guy and should use the old, “We’d be better off as friends” line.

Another example is where romantic dates between him and are now a thing of the past and most evenings and weekends are spent eating takeout and watching TV, hanging out with friends or playing video games.

The sex is no longer regular or exciting and consists mainly of a few minutes in bed at night before falling asleep.

Essentially, the thrill and excitement of the relationship has faded away and rather than being a couple in love, they are now more like two roommates hanging out together and paying bills together. She then starts to wonder why she is sticking with a relationship that lacks the romance and passion that other people experience when in love and attracted to each other.

She then might try to shake him up a bit by giving herself a makeover and dressing in even sexier clothes.

If that doesn’t work, she might plan romantic getaways for the two of them.

However, if the guy still doesn’t get the message and continues to make her feel neutral feelings around him (i.e. because he’s not being very masculine and is treating her more like a friend), her feelings of respect and attraction for him will begin to fade.

When that happens, she might say something like, “I don’t have romantic feelings for you anymore. I feel like we’d be better off as friends now,” and then break up with him.

In most cases, a guy will be completely devastated when a woman says that to him because he will really love her and want to be with her.

He didn’t really know how else to keep the relationship together, other than being like a good friend to her.

Yet, now that she has broken up with him, he is becoming aware of the fact that to keep a relationship together, the feelings of respect, attraction and love have to be mutual and strong.

It's not enough to just have attracted her in the beginning and made her love you back then.

You've got to build on a woman's feelings, so you and her can experience the higher levels of a relationship and get to a point where you never want to break up or be with anyone else.

So, if your ex currently sees you as more of a friend than as her sexually attractive man, you need to ensure that you use every interaction that you have with her from now on to make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

How can you do that?

Some of the easiest ways are by creating sexual tension between you and her via flirting, making her smile, laugh and feel excited to be around you again and making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine vibe and behavior.

Remember: If you continue to only make her feel neutral, friendly feelings for you, she won't see any reason to want to get back together again.

Without romantic and sexual attraction, she's going to continue looking at you as just a friend, or as an ex that she once felt attracted to, but now feels neutral around.

Another reason why your ex may have said that she doesn't have romantic feelings for you and feels like you and her are better off as friend is that

2. You lacked emotional masculinity in the relationship

[image: You lacked emotional masculinity in the relationship]

Regardless of a woman's achievements in life (e.g. she has a successful career), she wants to know that when it comes to her relationship, her man is emotionally masculine enough to take the lead, be strong and be someone that she can always rely on.

She wants to know that he has a plan and a direction for their future together, while also having the confidence, drive and integrity to see it through.

Why is this important to her?

Essentially, because it allows her to feel safe knowing that she has a man who doesn't need her to keep pushing him and encouraging him along like a mother would have to do for her boy.

He is his own man and he will remain strong, keep moving forward in life and overcome any challenges that he encounters along the way to success.

As a result, she can then relax into her feminine role and be his woman (e.g. be girly, get emotional, focus on the love she feels for him, put time and effort into looking pretty for him), rather than feel like she has to take control, boss him around or make decisions about most things because he lacks the emotional masculinity of a real man.

Here's the thing

When a guy lacks emotional masculinity, it causes a woman to lose respect for him.

Without respect, she also stops feeling sexually attracted to him and when those two emotions are gone, she then disconnects from her feelings of romantic love for him.

It's no longer a boyfriend/girlfriend or husband/wife relationship and now becomes more like a friendship or partnership.

Yet, that isn't the way to keep a sexual, romantic relationship together for life with a woman.

The sexual, romantic spark has to be there at the core of your relationship with her.

It cannot be about being friends or "partners" (a word often used by politically correct, confused people).

It has to be about the man clearly being the man and the woman clearly being the woman.

In other words, they are completely different to each other.

One is a masculine man and the other is a feminine woman.

If the guy is unable to take on the role of being the man and ends up being like a neutral friend or partner, the spark will die out and the woman will want to get out of the relationship.

These days, a woman doesn't have to put up with being in a friendly, neutral relationship with a guy who lacks emotional masculinity.

She knows that she wants and deserves a man who will allow her to be his girly woman, rather than a guy who expects her to be happy with being his neutral friend in life.

So, what are some examples of a guy lacking emotional masculinity?

A guy who lacks emotional masculinity might:

- Be afraid of getting rejected or failing if he tries to follow through on his big dreams in life. So, he just talks about his dream and wishes it would happen, but he doesn't actually set goals and make progress towards those goals.
- Cry openly during movies. This is unattractive to most women because he's behaving more like a girl than a masculine man.
- Cry when life gets tough (e.g. he experiences problems at work, is struggling to pay his bills).
- Complain about other guys bossing him around, but doesn't do anything to improve the situation (i.e. understand how to be a good guy alpha male who gets respected and is liked by pretty much everyone he meets).
- Get stressed out by simple things, which other men can handle with ease (e.g. he has to take his car in to be serviced, grocery shopping, work responsibilities, etc).

Most women yearn to be in a relationship with a man who has the emotional toughness of a real man, while also being loving, kind and considerate towards her.

So, if your ex is saying that she doesn't have romantic feelings for you and feels like you're better off as friends, it could be because you've allowed her to feel emotionally stronger than you.

To change how she feels, every time you interact with her from now on, you need to show her that you're now much more emotionally masculine in the way you think, feel, behave and take action in life.

She needs to be able to see that she can relax and trust that you really are the man now.

When she sees that, she will begin to respect you again and when that happens, she will naturally become open to feeling romantic feelings for you again, rather than seeing you as only a neutral friend.

Warning: To test whether your newfound emotional masculinity is real, she will almost certainly test you.

She might act as though she doesn't care, isn't impressed or doesn't believe the changes in you.

She will do that to test your reaction.

Do you remain confident and laugh at her (in a loving way, not a sarcastic way) for doubting you and then continue on being confident, or do you suddenly lose confidence in yourself based on her little test?

How you react to her tests are so important and will be the real difference in whether she believes in you or not from now on.

Another reason why your ex might have said that you and her are better off as friends is thatâ□!

3. You haven't been able to give her the kind of attraction experience that really she wants

To change how your ex currently feels about you, it is very important that you give her the attraction experience she really wants.

For example: A woman might want her ex to be more of a challenge to impress, which then maintains her interest.

However, he just wants to be easy for her, be nice and make her feel like she doesn't need to do anything to impress him.

Yet, that's not what SHE wants.

It's what HE wants.

He wants to treat her that way and expects that she should be happy with it, even though it's not something that she could possibly be happy with for life.

In other words, he doesn't really care if she wants him to be a challenge because he thinks that being a challenge (i.e. a man that she has to impress) is wrong.

Yes, to him, it is wrong, but not to her and billions of other women on the planet.

Women love the thrill of the chase.

Of course, I'm not talking about playing way too hard to get to the point where you become arrogant and don't treat her well.

No.

I'm simply talking about letting her earn your affection, respect and attention, rather than just giving it to her on tap without any effort needed on her part.

A guy who doesn't understand that his woman wants him to be more of a challenge, might make the mistake of begging and pleading with her for another chance when she breaks up with him.

Yet, that's just another example of him not being a challenge for her to win over.

If he doesn't realize that and keeps using the same old approach on her, she will think, â□□He just doesn't get it. He thinks that letting me walk all over him is what I want, but the opposite is true. The more he lets me get away with behaving like a brat towards him, the more I see that he's just not man enough for me. I can't feel respect and sexual attraction for a guy who would let a woman treat him so badly like I am now. I need a real man, not a wimp. He just doesn't get it. I have to get away from this relationship and find myself a new man.â□□

When she then pulls away, he will be confused at how she could walk away from someone who loves her so much.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that his approach to the relationship has not been making her feel sexual and romantic attraction for him.

Instead, he's been turning her off and making her feel like she's with a guy who probably doesn't deserve her.

Even though he's a good guy and does deserve her, his approach makes her feel like he doesn't.

She just has way too much power over him and doesn't feel any need to impress him or maintain his interest.

Another example of a guy not being able to give a woman the attraction experience that she really wants, is where he fails her confidence tests.

For example: She pretends to lose interest, teases him about things that he's sensitive about (e.g. his weight, his thinning hair) and he becomes insecure, or she comes up with unreasonable demands that seems to expect that he should meet.

If he doesn't meet her demands, she gets angry and if she notices that he falls for it and believes in her anger, she can see that he just isn't man enough to handle a woman like her.

Note: A woman will always test her man. She wants to know if he is worthy of her submission.

If she is going to submit and be the girl in the relationship, she has to be able to see that he doesn't crumble under her pressure.

This is one of the real gifts from women to men.

Their tests make us stronger, more powerful and more capable of succeeding in life.

It's beautiful how it works when a man has the confidence to pass her tests.

However, if a guy either isn't aware that she is testing or doesn't have the emotional toughness to laugh off her tests, then it's a disappointing, annoying and sometimes stressful experience for both the man and the woman.

So, how can you pass her tests more easily from now on?

In most cases, to pass a woman's test, a guy needs to simply relax and turn her test into something to laugh about, rather than taking it so seriously.

For instance, if she teases him about his bald head (e.g. she calls him â€œbaldyâ€œ), the confident way to respond would be for him to say in a joking way, â€œMmmmâ€œ sexy isn't it? Admit it, you love my bald headâ€œ and then laugh about that with her.

She will then actually find the baldness sexy and attractive because it's part of the confident, emotionally masculine man that she loves.

I know, it's weird, but that's just how attraction works for women.

If you are confident about who you are and own it, women then find it attractive because women are attracted to confidence in men.

By the wayâ€œ!

The way to fail for a guy to fail her "baldy" test (and prove to her that he's still the same guy she broke up with) is to lose confidence in himself, feel self-conscious and possibly even try to hide his baldness (e.g. by always wearing a hat or beanie, wearing a toupee or hairpiece).

If a woman notices that her man has lost confidence in himself purely based on a random comment from her, she will feel turned off by him because he will reveal himself to be a guy who needs her constant reassurance to feel okay about himself.

Women don't want that.

Women want a man who is confident in himself and his attractiveness no matter what a woman or anyone else says about him to bring him down.

If a man has that type of confidence, women flock to him.

Note: I'm not talking about arrogant confidence here.

I'm talking about having a relaxed, easy-going and unwavering confidence in yourself no matter what anyone says about you.

That's what women love.

Okay, so those were two examples of how a woman could lose interest in a guy who wasn't able to give her the kind of attraction experience that she really wants.

If you want to get your ex back, you have to make sure that you understand what pieces were missing in the puzzle of the attraction experience in your relationship (e.g. You became too insecure, but she wants a confident man. You acted like more of a friend, but she needs a man that creates a sexual vibe and makes her feel girly in comparison to his emotional masculinity).

Next, you have to also make sure that you adjust your behavior, so that when you interact with her, you're flicking her sexual and romantic feelings for you back on, rather than making her feel neutral, friendly feels and confirming to her that she made the right decision by breaking up with you.

Another reason why she might have given you the old, "I don't have romantic feelings for you anymore" line is that

4. You stopped trying to turn her on and just took her presence in your life for granted

Most guys would never intentionally take their woman for granted.

However, a lot of guys fall into the trap of believing that the love will happen all by itself when in a committed relationship.

They believe that if their woman really loved them at the beginning, she will remember that forever and never leave him because of it.

Yet, that's just not how relationships between men and women work.

For example: At the beginning of the relationship a guy is usually very loving and attentive towards his woman.

He never forgets to compliment her on her appearance and he always notices when she's wearing a new dress, has changed her hairstyle, or has done something nice to please him.

At the same time, he flirts with her to create sexual tension between them, which he then releases with touching, kissing and wild, passionate sex.

Yet, over time, the more comfortable they become with each other, the more he starts to take her presence for granted.

Now, rather than compliment her on her appearance, he might become a bit critical of her (e.g. say things like, â€œYouâ€™re putting on weightâ€ or â€œYour hair looks weirdâ€ or, “I liked how you looked when we first met. You don’t look good anymore.”)

Then, if she tries to look good for him, he doesn’t really notice or care because he doesn’t really see her as being very attractive anymore.

If she asks him what he thinks of her new look or when she’s wearing a new outfit, he usually responds with something, â€œFineâ€ or, “You look nice.”

Yet, being just fine or being nice isn’t what a woman wants to hear from her boyfriend or husband.

She wants to hear him genuinely say something like, “Oh, don’t you look sexy today?” or, “Wow, look at you. Come here” and then bring her in for a hug and kiss.

In other words, she wants to be able to feel sexy in his eyes.

Note: Being a challenge for a woman is not about never giving her sexual compliments.

You have to love and appreciate your woman.

Instead, it’s about making her want to impress you and seek compliments like that from you.

It’s never about making her feel ugly, unimportant or unloved.

You’ve got to flirt with your woman and let her see that you look at her in a sexual way, rather than in a neutral way.

So, when a guy stops flirting with his woman and takes her presence in his life for granted, problems start to emerge in their relationship.

The sex is less exciting and less frequent and he naturally starts to treat her more like a roommate or a male friend than like a sexy, girly woman.

He might also stop being helpful towards her (e.g. become a slob around the house, stop pulling his weight around the house, expecting her to do everything for him).

As a result, she then starts feeling like he is taking her for granted.

[image: Hinting at her unhappiness and hoping that he gets the message]

She may then try to get through to him (e.g. by hinting at her unhappiness, getting into arguments and fights with him about his behavior, sulking, complaining and throwing tantrums).

If he just ignores her and consoles himself by thinking, â€œSheâ€™s just being an emotional woman. Deep down she knows that I love her and that she means everything to me. She might be throwing a tantrum now, but our love is strong. She would never leave me. She will put up with it. She’ll tire herself out with all these tantrums and realize her mistake,â€ she will begin to lose respect for him as her man.

When that happens, she will also stop feeling sexually attracted to him and then it’s just a quick hop, skip and a jump to her saying something like, â€œI don’t have romantic feelings for you and I feel like weâ€™re better off as friends.”

Then, a guy might panic and try to get her to have romantic feelings again by being very romantic or sweet towards her all of a sudden.

However, that’s not what she wants because he now seems desperate, which is always a turn off for a woman.

I know what you’re probably thinking, “Why are women so difficult?!”

In reality, women are so damn easy to please, get along with and keep, BUT you have to use the right approach.

If you use the wrong approach, a woman will make your life feel like a living nightmare.

If you use the right approach, a woman will make your life feel like the softest, warmest, sweetest, most enjoyable dream you've ever had.

You've just got to understand how women operate.

If you don't understand it or think that women are so annoying and you shouldn't have to put in any effort to understand them, then prepare for a life of misery when it comes to women.

However, when you know how to make a woman love you, respect you and feel attracted to you for life, you can relax and enjoy a peaceful, fulfilling life with a woman who will work her butt off to make you happy and please you.

That's how it works.

It's kind of like how some people struggle with a certain area of their life for their entire life because they keep using the same old approach that has gotten them that result.

They refuse to change and so does the laws of life, so they are in a constant battle against the thing that they can't seem to get under control.

Yet, when they have finally had enough and start to change, their struggle suddenly begins to disappear.

What used to be difficult, now becomes natural and easy.

The same rule applies to getting your ex back.

If you want her back in a sexual, romantic way, you absolutely have to be willing to change your approach to her.

If you don't, she will reject you and resist your efforts to get her back no matter what you say to her or promise her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Won't Discuss the Relationship With Me and Said to Leave Her Alone

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

That's because you need to reactivate her feelings for you first and then hook up with her again, before she will become open to discussing the relationship.

Prior to making that happen, you have to approach her as though you and her are only friends now.

Use the interactions that you have to make her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you and her guard will come down.

You can then hook up with her, blow her mind with the new and improved version of you and she will then naturally become open to giving the relationship another chance.

Here are 5 tips to help you make her open back up to you and want you back!'

1. Understand the real reason why she won't discuss the relationship with you

[image: Understand the real reason why she won't discuss the relationship with you]

When a woman has disconnected herself from feeling love, respect and attraction for her guy, she's usually going to do everything in her power to then get over him and move on as quickly as possible.

This includes refusing to discuss the relationship with him and telling him to leave her alone.

So, when a guy is calling her up and possibly even begging and pleading with her to listen to him, it's just not going to work.

[image: The feelings aren't mutual, so she doesn't want to discuss the relationship]

He might say things like, "If we can talk about it, we can fix it. Just give me a chance to make things right. Why are you being so stubborn?" in the hopes that she will open up and discuss the relationship with him.

Yet, rather than make her think, "Oh, okay. Maybe I'm being too hard on him. I should at least discuss the relationship with him", it's the right thing to do, she will become even more closed off.

Why?

In most instances, when a guy is trying to get his ex to open up and discuss the relationship with him, he's just begging and pleading with her, making promises to change, or expecting her to give him another chance based on the fact that the relationship used to be good between them.

Yet, he's not seeing it from her perspective.

Think about it like this!

If you weren't feeling attracted to a girl anymore (e.g. because she put on a lot of weight, stopped wearing makeup and putting in an effort to look attractive for you) and she then tried to get you back without improving her attractiveness first, you would just keep saying, "No. You need to accept that itâ€™s over between us and leave me alone.â€™

In the same way, if you donâ€™t make some attractive changes and improvements to the way you talk, think, act, behave and interact with your ex before you try to discuss the relationship with her, it's not going to work.

She's not going to say to herself, â€™It doesnâ€™t matter that nothing about him has really changed or improved. Iâ€™m just going to ignore all that and based on the fact that we had a great relationship in the beginning, Iâ€™m going to open up, tell him whatâ€™s bothering me and guide him through the steps of getting me back, so that we can live happily ever after â€™ just like in fairytales and Hollywood movies.â€™

Instead, she will simply close herself off from you even more and say what you would say if you were in her shoes, â€™Leave me alone. I donâ€™t want anything more to do with you. Just accept that itâ€™s over between us and move on.â€™

So, feeling as though you are entitled to your ex's attention, or that she is obligated to discuss the relationship with you and give you another chance, isnâ€™t going to make her change how she feels.

If you want her back, you've got to be able to re-attract her, so she actually has a good reason to give you another chance (i.e. she feels attracted to you now, she likes how she feels around the new you).

Yet, if you don't re-attract her first, she's just going to remain closed off to you because the feelings aren't mutual.

You feel attracted to her, you're in love and you want her back, but you haven't reawakened her feelings for you yet.

So, when you try to force your ex to discuss the relationship with you (especially if you havenâ€™t made any changes to the way you behave and interact with her), it only makes her more determined to keep you away from her.

If you want to change how she feels, you need to interact with her (via text, e-mail, social media and more importantly, over the phone and in person) and reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you again (e.g. by making her smile and laugh).

When you trigger her positive feelings for you again, she stops thinking negatively about you and becomes open to talking to you and seeing you more and more.

So, if you want her back ASAP, I recommend that stop trying to make her discuss the relationship.

Instead, get her on a phone call or meet up with her in person and make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

When you do that, her guard comes down and she then feels drawn to the idea of having a relationship with you again, without you even having to discuss it with her.

By the wayâ€¦!

On a phone call or in person, you need toâ€¦!

2. Take the pressure off by talking to her as though you and her are only friends for now

If you try to discuss the relationship with you ex, or make her feel like youâ€™re pressuring her to get back together again, she's just going to clam up and possibly even stop talking to you completely.

So, if you don't want that to happen, you need to approach your interactions with her as though you and her are only friends now.

Don't worry because you won't actually end up as friends.

Why?

You will be actively making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction while also talking to her as though you and her are only friends.

As a result, she will feel sexually and romantically drawn to you on her own and won't want you and her to just be friends.

For example: Imagine that you're on a phone call with your ex and she gets annoyed and says something like, "Why do you keep calling me? Can't you get the message that it's over between us? Just leave me alone."

Naturally, hearing her say something like that to you might make you feel upset and even a bit sad.

Yet, you can't let it get to you.

You have to be strong, so she can feel respect and attraction for you.

So, rather than getting upset, a better approach is to smile (remember, a person can hear a smile over the phone based on the change in your tonality and how you're saying things) while saying something along the lines of, "Hey, why are you being so serious? Relax girl. I know that we've broken up and not calling you to get back together. I just want to say hi as a friend and see how you're doing, that's all. We can do that, right? We're both mature enough to do that. Even though it's over between us (which I accept by the way), we can still be friends, can't we? There's nothing wrong with that. So, let's try this again from the beginning! Hi, how are you today?"

By saying something like that to her, you're effectively taking the pressure off her and letting her see that you're not in a huge rush to get her back into a serious relationship.

You're letting her know (without saying it) that you're not going to push her into something she's not ready for yet, which makes her relax, drop her guard and open up to you.

3. Allow her to begin experiencing the type of attraction experience she really wants when you interact with her

If you want your ex to stop telling you to leave her alone, you need to understand the type of attraction experience she really wants from you.

Then, you need to start giving it to her when you interact with her (e.g. over the phone and in person).

For example: Imagine a guy is talking to his ex on the phone and he turns her off because he:

- Feels insecure while talking to her.
- Feels intimidated by her dominant personality.
- Begs and pleads with her and says things like, "Why won't you talk to me? Please forgive me! I know I messed up but I can't bear the thought of losing you. Just give me one more chance to make it up to you. I beg you!

- Is extra sweet and nice to her, even when she's being rude and unfriendly towards him, in the hopes that she will realize what a good guy he is and give him another chance.
- Keeps talking about how much he loves her and misses her, without realizing that when a woman has disconnected from her feelings for a guy, she doesn't really care how he feels anymore.
- Asks her what she wants him to change about himself, which turns her off even more because it's annoying for her to have to explain what women feel attracted to.
- Becomes angry with her for not wanting to discuss the relationship with him and insists that she give him a chance.

Now compare that to a guy who:

- Makes her laugh and smile as he talks to her and interacts with her.
- Shows her (via the way he talks, thinks, interacts with her and responds to what she says and does) that he's really changed (e.g. If he treated her like one of his male buddies before, he now makes her feel feminine and girly. If he always ended up arguing with her or becoming irritated very easily, he now turns potentially stressful conversations into something they can both laugh about).
- Talks to her as though they are good friends now, but also includes some sexual flirting to spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction.
- Wants her back, but doesn't need her back to feel happy or fulfilled in his life.

Which guy do you think is going to be giving the woman the attraction experience she really wants?

If you picked the second guy, you would be right. (Of course!)

Essentially, the second guy is showing her (via his actions and behavior) that he's no longer at the same level he was at when she broke up with him.

This causes her to feel respect for him based on him having the balls to man up and make some changes to himself.

She then drops her guard and allows herself to see him in a more positive light.

4. Hook up with her and blow her mind with the new and improved version of you

[image: Hook up with your ex and blow her mind]

Regardless of how much you make your ex laugh, smile and feel good when you're interacting with her over the phone (or via text or social media messages), it won't make much of a difference if you don't meet up with her in person and have sex again.

When you re-attract a woman in person and then hug, kiss and then have sex with her, she begins to feel a new type of respect, attraction and love for you.

It becomes a lot more difficult for her to keep thinking of you as the jerk that she broke up with, because she now has a new, much more exciting and pleasant picture of you in her mind, which overwrites the negative picture she had of you from the past.

From there, you just need to relax and continue saying and doing the types of things that will show her, without a shadow of a doubt, that youâ€”re a new man now.

When she can see for herself that youâ€”re not putting on an act to impress her so that you can get her back (and the changes are real), her feelings of respect and attraction for you will come rushing back.

She will stop saying, â€”Leave me alone,â€” and she will start saying, â€”Letâ€”s see where this goes.â€”

Remember: When you give your ex the attraction experience she always wanted from you and then blow her mind with the best sex sheâ€”s ever experienced, it will be difficult, if not impossible, for her to keep pushing you away.

So, even though right now your ex wonâ€”t discuss the relationship with you and is telling you to leave her alone, all that will change when you change your approach to her.

When you give her what she really wants, she will be eating out of the palm of your hand in less time than you ever thought possible.

What are you waiting for?

Today is the first day of the rest of your life with her, so go for it.

Get her back.

Note: Most guys who get their ex woman back start out in the same or similar position to you.

Their woman is sick and tired of his approach to getting her back (e.g. trying to convince her to give him another chance, promising to change, texting her all the time, pouring his heart out) and has stopped being willing to discuss the relationship.

It's not just you who is experiencing a reaction like that from your woman.

Every day now, guys from all over the world are getting their woman back by focusing on making her feel attracted again.

You can do that too.

So, I recommend that you stop trying to discuss the relationship and start making her feel the types of feelings that will make her want to have a relationship with you again.

When you do that, getting her back is natural and easy and it works.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Has Become Emotionally Closed Off to Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex has become emotionally closed off to you are:

1. She can see that you don't understand how to give her the type of attraction experience she really wants when in a relationship with a man

In most cases, a woman won't break up with a guy before she's tried (often several times) to make him understand what she really wants from him.

For example: A guy might get into the habit of breaking his promises to his woman (e.g. he tells her that he will take her to see her favorite show/to a romantic restaurant/on an exotic vacation, but he never follows through on his promise to her, or, he promises her that he will fix the leak in the roof/repair a broken window/mow the lawn, but he never gets around to doing it or only does it if she nags him continuously about it).

Initially she might say to herself, "I know that his finances are a bit tight at the moment, so he probably just doesn't have the heart to tell me that he can't afford the vacation right now," or "That's okay. He probably just forgot about how he promised to take me out to a show. I'm sure it was just a once off thing and that he won't do it again."

Yet, over time, if she realizes that he's the kind of guy who doesn't follow through on his promises, she will gradually start to lose respect for him.

She might then try to get through to him by saying things like, "I don't like it when you say you're going to do something for me and then you don't. It makes me think that you don't even care about me."

If he then pays attention and starts sticking to his word, she will feel a big surge of respect and attraction for him for being man enough to change and her love for him will deepen.

On the other hand, if he just ignores her or tries to appease her by promising to do it some other time, she will start thinking, "He just doesn't get it. He thinks that just because I used to really love him, I'm going to put up with his broken promises to me forever. Well, it doesn't work that way. I can't be with a man who can't keep his word. He has no idea how to give me the attraction experience I really want in this relationship and it's now becoming clear to me that he never will," and she will usually break up with him.

If he then tries to get her back and she says something along the lines of, "No. It's over," or "I don't want to discuss it with you anymore. Forget about me and move on," he might then wonder to himself, "My ex girlfriend has become emotionally closed off to me. I don't understand why is taking those things so seriously. I mean, I was a great boyfriend to her in all other ways, so what is her problem? Why is she being so closed off?"

Here's the thing:

If you want your ex to open up to you again, she needs to see that you understand why she broke up with you, have learned from the experience and have become a better man as a result.

It's not about telling her.

Instead, it's about letting her see it and experience it for yourself when you interact with her.

If you try to tell her that you've changed and that things will be different, her guard will be up.

However, if you just let her pick up on the fact that you're no longer like that and have fixed the things that caused her to break up with you (e.g. you were insecure or you took her for granted), her guard will come down and she will open back up to you.

Let her experience it for herself, rather than trying to explain to her that you've changed and that things would be different if she just gave you one more chance.

You can let her experience it based on the way you talk, think, behave and interact with her now.

She will see for herself that you're no longer the same man she broke up with.

For example:

- If you were too much of a pushover before and let her dominate and control the relationship, you can now take control in a confident, assertive, but easy-going manner.
- If she felt like she couldn't be herself around you because of how strict or sensitive you were, you can now show her that you accept her for who she is and that she doesn't have to adjust her personality to suit your insecurities or sensitivities.
- If you became too emotionally feminine, you're now emotionally masculine.
- If you didn't keep your promises to her, you are now a man of your word.

When she can see and experience the new you for herself, it becomes difficult for her to remain emotionally closed off from you.

She then can't stop herself from feeling respect for you again for being man enough to admit your mistakes and then take action to improve yourself.

When she can respect you, she will then be able to feel sexually attracted to you and when that happens, her guard comes down and she naturally opens herself back up to you again.

On the other hand, if you keep trying to get her back without first understanding the type of attraction experience she wants from you, she will continue to be emotionally closed off to you.

Another reason why your ex may have become emotionally closed off is if

2. You've begged and pleaded with her too much

[image: You have begged and pleaded with her too much]

When a woman closes herself off after a break up and refuses to discuss anything about the relationship with her ex, it might come as quite a shock to him.

Not knowing what else to do to get through to her, he might then start begging and pleading with her to try and make her open up.

For example: He might try to get through to her (e.g. via multiple text messages, long e-mails, or by calling her on the phone) over and over again and say things like, "Please baby, don't do this to me! I don't know why you're being like this. What did I do that was so wrong? I am so confused. If you keep yourself emotionally closed off from me, how will I ever be able to make it up to you? Please give me a chance. I beg you! Please stop being so guarded. I love you and I'm sorry. Please see that. Things will be different this time around, I promise. Just give me a chance. Don't walk away from us.

He's hoping that by begging and pleading, she will see how upset he is because of how emotionally closed off she has been to him lately.

He then hopes that she will feel that she has punished him enough and open back up to him again.

Yet, in most cases, rather than make a woman think, "Awww! my ex is acting like a sad little boy and it's all my fault for shutting him out the way I've been doing. He's even willing to beg to get me back. He must really love me so much," she will be thinking, "Why is he being so emotionally wimpy? Does he think I'm going to forget that he had been turning me off with his behavior because he's now begging and pleading for another chance? Doesn't he realize that it only adds to the list of things that are turning me off and makes me want to have nothing to do with him even more?"

Even if she previously was in love with him, it doesn't mean much or anything to her if he just isn't able to make her feel the kind of respect and attraction that keeps a relationship together.

Most women just don't want to put up with being in a relationship with a man that they can't respect and feel properly attracted to (e.g. because he's insecure, he takes her for granted, he's too emotionally sensitive).

[image: Turning her off by begging for another chance]

So, when a guy is begging, pleading and coming across as being lost and confused, rather than make her change her mind, a woman will usually close herself off from him even more.

By the way!

If you've already tried to get your ex girlfriend to open up to you by begging and pleading with her many times to give you another chance; don't worry — you can fix it.

How?

Start by not doing it ever again in any kind of way when you interact with her.

Avoid any type of communication where you are subtly or obviously conveying a "pity me" type of vibe.

Using a "pity me" approach just won't work on a woman who is emotionally closed off to you.

If you want her to want you, it's essential that you focus on being an emotionally strong, emotionally masculine guy during interactions with her, so you can quickly and naturally get her respect back.

Once she can see that you're not going to become a lost, confused, desperate guy around her again, she will begin to drop her guard and open back up to you.

She won't feel like she has to keep you at arms length anymore to protect herself from your begging and pleading.

From there, you have to keep making her feel respect and attraction for the new you every time you interact with her, so that the idea of staying emotionally closed off to you doesn't feel right to her anymore.

Another reason why your ex may have become emotionally closed off to you is that!

3. It all seems to be about you getting her back for your own needs, rather than making her feel what she needs

When a woman is being emotionally closed off, a guy will often try to get her to see how much he cares about her in the hopes that she will open up again based on that.

For example: A guy might say things like, “You mean the world to me and the idea of being without you makes me not want to go on with this life anymore. Please, just give me a chance to make it up to you. I have never loved a woman in the way I love you. You are everything to me. I will do anything to make you happy if you will just give me another chance.”

Yet, she can see that he’s only really saying that to get what he wants from her.

He wants her back and is willing to promise that he will do anything to make her happy if she gives him another chance.

It’s all about him getting another chance and she can see that.

If she doesn’t give him another chance based on what he is offering via text, he might also send her flowers or gifts, in the hopes that she will realize how much he loves her and give him another chance.

Yet, what a guy like that doesn’t understand is that rather than make her think, “Why am I being so stubborn? My ex obviously still loves me. I’ve got to give him another chance,” she will be thinking something like, “Me, me, me! That’s all he can think about – himself! He needs me. He can’t live without me. Not once has he stopped to think about how I feel or what I want.”

So, if you want your ex girlfriend to stop being emotionally closed off, you need to stop worrying about how you feel and put the emphasis back on making her feel what she needs to feel to actually give you another chance.

For example: The next time you interact with your ex (e.g. on a phone call, or in person) rather than react in your usual way (e.g. try to make her open up to you and want the relationship), you can instead say something like, “Hey, I know that I’ve been going on and on about our relationship and bugging you about being emotionally closed off to me and I’m sorry about that. I see now that I was only thinking about myself and how much I care about you and miss you. That was selfish of me. I never stopped to think about what you’re going through and how you feel. So, I’m sorry if my behavior caused you any stress. I now realize that I could have been much more mature about it and just accepted your decision to break up with me. So, I’m sorry for putting you through that. I don’t expect you to believe me, or to want me back, but I just wanted to say sorry.”

Then, from that moment onwards, you need to show her via the way you talk, think, behave, interact with her and respond to what she says and does, that you’re a completely different man now.

You’ve understood what caused her to become emotionally closed off to you and you’ve taken steps to change those things about yourself.

When she can see for herself that you’re putting her feelings first, everything changes.

The process of getting her back becomes a lot easier, because she is feeling open to you.

She starts to enjoy interacting with you again.

It feels good to her and she actually looks forward to talking to you, seeing you in person, hugging you, kissing you and getting to have sex with you.

Another reason why your ex might have become emotionally closed off to you is thatâ€¦!

4. You've been asking her to explain to you what she needs from you

When a guy is faced with an ex girlfriend who is emotionally closed off, he might say to her, â€œJust tell me what you need me to do and Iâ€™ll do it. Tell me what you want. Being closed off isnâ€™t helping either of us. If you just say what it is that you want me to do, then I can do it and we can work things out. Instead, by being so closed off, we canâ€™t change anything.â€

Although thatÂ might seem like the right thing to say to an ex womanÂ and a guy may even believe that itâ€™s what sheÂ wants him to do, the truth is, asking a woman what she needs from you is never a good idea.

Why?

A woman doesnâ€™t want to be responsible for shaping you into the man that you need to become.

If she tells you how to attract her, your actions and behavior just wonâ€™t feel real to her.

It will feel as though you're putting on an act just to please her.

So, rather than telling you what to do, a woman will usually just close herself off even more and sit back to see if you're man enough to figure things out without her help.

If you can do that, she will be able to respect you again.

On the other hand, if you continue to ask for her help, or try to get her to open up to you again by being nicer, sweeter and more romantic than ever before, she will simply disconnect herself from you even more and try to move on.

So, to stop your ex from being emotionally closed off, you need to show her that you have what it takes to become a more attractive man to her without needing her guidance and support.

Another reason why she may have become closed off is thatâ€¦!

5. You've been reacting badly to her cold, distant attitude

Itâ€™s only natural that when a guy is trying to get his ex back and sheâ€™s being emotionally closed off, he might become a little bit frustrated and possibly even get a little angry with her.

However, losing his cool, calling her names or accusing her of being stubborn or selfish, is definitely not going to make her open up.

So, rather than taking her cold, distant attitude too seriously and allowing it to make you do something you might regret later on, thereâ€™s actually a much easier way to break her out of that.

What is it?

By getting her to smile, laugh and enjoy herself when she's interacting with you.

...especially, if she starts out being cold, rude, mean or distant.

Why?

Women are impressed by and attracted to men who don't crumble under the pressure that women place on them.

So, when you interact with your ex (e.g. on a phone call and in person) and you make her smile and laugh (especially if she starts out being cold and distant towards you), she won't be able to stop herself from opening back up to you, even if just a little.

No matter how determined she is to keep you at arms length by being cold and unemotional, all it usually takes is a little smile to crack her defenses and allow her to open herself up to you again.

[image: Bring her defenses down and get her back]

When her defenses come down, she then begins to enjoy feeling respect and attraction for you again.

You become the guy that she wants, rather than the guy that she wants to get rid of.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Replies to Some of My Texts, But Ignores Most of Them

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

3 possible reasons why your ex replies to some of your texts, but ignores most of them are that:

1. You're texting her too often

[image: You are texting her too often]

Some guys believe that the best way to prevent an ex from moving on and get her back, is by staying on her mind via text.

So, a guy will often send his ex girlfriend (or wife) texts about random things, as a way of staying in touch.

For example: He might text things like, â€œHey, I was just thinking about you. How was your day?â€ or, â€œOn my way to work and I just wanted to say hi. Have a great day!â€ or, â€œHaving coffee in that little coffee shop you used to like and thought of you. How has your day been so far?â€

Heâ€™s hoping that she will think, â€œThis is so sweet. Iâ€™m always on his mind and heâ€™s always on mine. It must be a sign that we are meant to be together.â€

Yet, that's just not how a woman thinks or feels after she's dumped a guy and no longer wants to be with him.

In reality, when a woman doesn't have strong feelings for her ex anymore, getting endless texts from him about random things is usually just going to annoy her.

She will think something like, â€œWhy is he texting me all this crap? I donâ€™t care that heâ€™s thinking about me, on his way to work or having coffee at my favorite coffee shop. Is this his way of trying to get me back? Does he honestly believe that if he keeps texting me Iâ€™m just going to forget what happened between us and go running back to him like it doesnâ€™t matter? How pathetic. He doesnâ€™t even have the balls to call me and talk to me in person, so he hides behind text. Heâ€™s just wasting my time. I've got to start ignoring more of his texts, or he will keep going with this approach.â€

Even if she responds to some of his texts to be polite, most of the time, she will just roll her eyes and decide to ignore him.

Why?

Getting constant messages from her ex who is trying to make conversation doesn't show her that anything about him has actually changed.

It doesn't solve any of the core problems that they faced in their relationship, and it doesn't make her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for him.

It's just a bunch of texts from her ex, who she assumes, is still pretty much exactly the same and if she gave him another chance, wouldn't even know how to give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants in a relationship.

So, if your ex has been replying to some of your texts, but ignoring most of them, it could be because youâre just texting her too much about random, unimportant things and sheâs now feeling annoyed and turned off by your approach to getting her back.

Even if you think she wonât be pleased that you call her, youâve just got to do it.

Watch thisâ

When you get her on a phone call, you can quickly reignite some of her original feelings of respect and attraction for you and make her feel attracted in new ways.

On a phone call, itâs a lot easier to break through her walls and get her to open up to you again, because you can make her laugh and smile and show her that youâre no longer the same guy she broke up with.

More importantly, she can feel differently right now and realize that things really are different between you and her now.

She is now feeling attracted to you and open to you.

Then, when she gets a text from you, rather than rolling her eyes and thinking, âItâs my ex again. Why wonât he just leave me alone? I hate getting texts from himâ she may think, âOh, itâs him. I had a good chat with him the other day. It was actually fun. He sounded so much more confident and self-assured than he used to be when we were together. I wonder what heâs up to now? Maybe heâs going to ask me to meet up with him. I think it would be so nice to see him face-to-face again.â

Then, the process of getting her back becomes so much easier.

Another reason why your ex might be replying to some of your text, but ignoring most of them is thatâ

2. Your Texts Are Too Emotional

[image: Your texts are too emotional]

Sometimes, a guy will use texting as a way of pouring his heart out to his ex.

For example: A guy might text something along the lines of, âI know I stuffed up and Iâm really sorry for that. I want you to know that you mean the world to me. Nothing feels the same now that youâre gone. I canât even eat or sleep properly. Do you realize how much I care about you? You were the most precious thing in my life and I ruined it. Can you ever forgive me and just give me one more chance to prove to you how much I love you and care about you? I donât know what Iâd do if you say that you canât. I miss you so much and I want to make it up to you. Will you please give me a chance to show you that things can be different between us from now on?â

When a guy is feeling lonely and missing his ex like crazy, pouring his heart out to her and being overly emotional might seem like a good idea to him at the time.

He may even think, âIf she realizes just how much I still care for her and that everything Iâm doing is because I want her back, she will stop being a hard case and agree to see me again. She will know that no other guy will ever feel the same way about her as I do and be willing to do anything to make her happy. Then, she will decide to give me another chance.â

Yet, thatâs not how it usually works.

Unless a woman is still in love with her ex (which means she would probably be replying to everything heâ€¦s texting her and even suggesting they meet up), when a woman has lost respect and attraction for a guy, sheâ€¦s not going to really care when he texts her about his feelings.

Instead, sheâ€¦s going to feel even more turned off by him and what she perceives as his emotionally wimpy and needy behavior.

Rather than making her think, â€œOh myâ€¦I am so lucky. I never realized how much he really loved me. Iâ€¦m being way too hard on him. Most women would kill to find a guy like him and here I am ignoring his texts and being difficult. I need to make it up to him before I lose his love,â€¦ she will be thinking something like, â€œIsn't it interesting how all he seems to talk about are his feelings for me? Not once has he thought about how I feel. Instead, he just wants me to care that he cares and wants me to give him another chance because he wants it. Well I donâ€¦t care and I won't give him another chance. I stopped caring when I broke up with him and now that heâ€¦s being all emotional and acting like a woman via text, I only get more determined to cut him out of my life and move on. Doesnâ€¦t he understand that Iâ€¦m not going to care how he feels about me, unless he does something to actively make me have feelings for him again? The feelings have to be mutual. Why doesn't he understand that and do something about it?â€¦

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦

If a guy has turned a woman off and she is no longer connected to her old feelings for him, she's going to feel turned off when he pours his heart out via text to tell her all about his feelings for her.

Also, because she canâ€¦t see his body language, hear the tonality of his voice, or assess his state of mind in the moment, she will just assume the worst of him (i.e. that he's so insecure, needy and desperate right now), rather than giving him the benefit of the doubt and assume he has changed and is a better man now.

So, if youâ€¦re going to tell your ex how much you still care about her, leave it until after youâ€¦ve re-sparked her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Then, when you do tell her, she will be happy to hear it because the feelings will be mutual and as a result, it will bring you and her even closer together.

However, if you tell her all about your feelings before that (especially if you do it via text), she will likely just shut herself off from you even more.

If you've already made that mistake, don't worry.

From now on, only text your ex as a way of getting her on a phone call with you, where you can actively make her have feelings for you again (e.g. by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with you again) and then get her to meet up with you in person.

Stop trying to use text as a way of slowly getting her back because it just doesnâ€¦t work on most women.

Most women get annoyed and turned off by texts from their ex because she doesn't have any real evidence that he has changed and can now make her feel differently.

Another reason why your ex might be replying to some of your texts, but ignoring most isâ€¦

3. You're trying to convince her to give you another chance via text

If a woman is being closed off and is making it difficult for her ex to interact with her (e.g. she refuses to meet up with him in person, she is cold and unfriendly over the phone), a guy might decide that his best chance of getting through to her is via text message.

He might then text her things like, â€œPlease forgive me. I know that I stuffed up, but I can make it up to you if you just give me a chance. Please think about it. I really think we can work things out,â€ or â€œI know you donâ€™t think I could ever change, but I promise you, if you just give me one more chance Iâ€™ll be a different man this time around. Just tell me what you want me to do to make you happy and Iâ€™ll do it. I promise. Please just agree to give me this chance.â€

Yet, rather than make her think, â€œWell okay then. Since you put it that way, of course Iâ€™ll give you another chance,â€ she will think something like, â€œIs he seriously asking me to give him another chance via text? He just thinks Iâ€™m going to drop all my negative feelings for him and give him a second chance based on what he says in a text message. He must think Iâ€™m naïve enough to fall for his requests via text. If he doesnâ€™t even have the balls to talk to me face-to-face and apologize for his past behavior, Iâ€™m not going to make an effort to reply to his texts. Yes, Iâ€™m being a bitch about meeting up with him, but he needs to be able to deal with that. Heâ€™s got to be confident enough to make the meet up happen. If not, heâ€™s not man enough for me.â€

A guy might think that she is being unreasonable or selfish by not being easy about the ex back process, but a woman has her reasons.

Sometimes, she doesnâ€™t make things easy because she wants to test his confidence.

Other times, she doesnâ€™t make things easy because heâ€™s not even saying or doing anything to make her feel rushes of sexual and romantic attraction for him.

Heâ€™s just texting her!

â€œand as you may know now, texts just donâ€™t work very well on an ex.

Texts are great when the feelings are mutual, but if one person isnâ€™t interested, texts become an annoying form of communicating very quickly.

So, I recommend that you save any requests for a second chance with your ex until after youâ€™ve reactivated her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you in person and have gotten to a kiss.

However, when re-attract her and get to a kiss, you most likely wonâ€™t have to ask her for another chance, because she will probably be the one saying to you, â€œI think we made a mistake breaking up. Letâ€™s try again.â€

On the other hand, if you try to convince your ex to give you another chance via text when the feelings arenâ€™t mutual, itâ€™s more than likely that she will ignore most of your texts and possibly even be thinking, â€œIf this is the best he can do to try and get me back, then I definitely made the right decision to break up with him.â€

If You Donâ€™t Reactivate Her Feelings First, Sheâ€™s Not Going to Feel Motivated to Reply to All of Your Texts

[image: Without feelings of attraction, she won't feel motivated to reply]

If your ex has been replying to some of your texts, but ignoring most of them, it's because you're just texting her and hoping that it will be enough to make her want to get back with you at some point.

However, that approach rarely, if ever, works and usually results in the woman moving on with a new guy and then no longer replying to any texts from her ex.

So, if you want your ex to reply to your texts and more importantly, want to get back with you, you need to make sure that you reactivate her feelings of respect and attraction for you by showing her that you really are a different man now.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by:

- Understanding her real reasons for breaking up with you and taking some steps towards improving those things about yourself (e.g. If you were insecure before, you're confident and self-assured now. If you were too wimpy or weak-minded before, you're emotionally strong now. If you let her dominate you and get her way all the time, you're now more emotionally dominant and stand up for yourself).
- Making her smile, laugh and feel happy during interactions with you, rather than being too serious or emotional.
- Getting to the point where you want her back, but don't need her back to feel content and fulfilled in your life.

You don't have to be perfect to reactivate your ex's feelings of respect and attraction for you to get her to open up to you.

Instead, you just need to show her (via the way you think, act, behave and interact with her) that you are no longer at the same level you were at when you and her broke up.

When you reactivate her feelings for you, everything changes automatically.

All of sudden, she wants to be in contact with you and see you in person.

On the other hand, if you don't reactivate her feelings for you first, she's just going to be thinking, Why won't he leave me alone? Can't he see that I'm not interested anymore? He's just wasting my time.

The Easy Way to Get Her to Feel a Strong, Renewed Sense of Respect and Attraction for You

I know that you probably prefer texting your ex, but you've just got to understand that it doesn't really work when getting an ex back if the feelings aren't mutual.

The truth is that there's the easy way to get your ex back and there's also the hard way.

The easy way is on a phone call and in person.

The hard way is via text.

So, why waste time and energy trying to get her back the hard way when you can just pick up the phone, reactivate her feelings for you (e.g. by making her smile and laugh and feel happy to be talking to you again) and get her to meet up with you in person, where she can see for herself (via the way you talk, behave, act and interact with her) that youâre a different man now?

It might feel easy to just text your ex and wait for her to give you a sign that sheâs open to getting back together again, but in reality itâs not easy.

Why?

Mainly because you can waste weeks or even months trying to get some kind of positive response from your ex, only to find out that while you were waiting, she was moving on and has now hooked up with another guy.

Donât let that happen to you.

As the man, itâs your responsibility to take the lead in the ex back process and guide both you and her back into a relationship.

So, donât make the classic ex back mistake of hiding behind texts in the hopes that she will make it easy for you or that she will make all the moves to get you back, so you donât have to risk the possibility of being rejected.

Just pick up the phone, get her to feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and then meet up with her in person.

When she sees you face-to-face and experiences the new man youâve become, everything inside her will change automatically.

She will feel naturally attracted to you and drawn to you and as a result, getting her back will be simple and straightforward.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Doesn't Seem to Care That We've Broken Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It can really suck to discover that your ex doesn't seem to care that you've broken up, while you've been suffering from a serious case of a broken heart.

You miss her, you love her and you want her back.

Yet, she's not really worried about it and seems to be doing just fine without you.

Don't worry, you can change things and make her care.

Here are 4 ways to do that!

1. Reactivate her feelings by letting her experience the new and improved version of you

Right now, your ex is probably trying hard to disconnect herself from any remaining feelings she still has for you.

For example: She might be going out with friends, partying and trying to convince herself that she's fine and doesn't care that you've broken up.

Essentially, behaving like that is a woman's way of making it easier for herself to move on and open up to meeting and falling in love with a new man.

Naturally, that's not what you want her to do.

You want her to feel the same way that you are feeling (i.e. sad about the break up, eager to fix things between you and her so that you can get back together again, still in love).

So, how can you do that?

Use every interaction you have with her from now on (e.g. via text or e-mail, on social media, over the phone and in person) to show her that you're no longer the man she broke up with.

You really have changed and more importantly, she really does feel differently about you now.

Her feelings are coming alive again.

There's that warm feeling of love in her heart, the beginnings of sexual desire and the potential for a romantic, intimate relationship once again.

She can feel it.

She might try to ignore it, but if you've sparked those feelings inside of her, they will begin to grow on their own.

She will be thinking about you, missing you and imagining what it would be like to get back with you.

So, what are some ways that you can make her feel some respect, attraction and love for you when you interact with her?

- If you displayed unmanly behavior too often and turned her off, you're now more emotionally mature and masculine.

- If you lacked self-belief before, youâre now so much more confident and self-assured.
- If you were a jealous controlling guy before, youâre more emotionally balanced now.
- If you placed her needs ahead of your own, despite her bad behavior, you are now able to stand up to her in a loving, but dominant way.
- If you made her feel neutral and more like a friend around you before, you are now able to make her feel surges of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

When she can see for herself that youâre at a very different level now as a man, she will struggle to hold on to the idea that she doesnât care about the break up and not being with you anymore. This is why it's so important to take action and actively get her back by focusing on making her have feelings for you.

In other words, you've got to do something about it.

In most cases, a guy canât make his ex woman feel attracted and in love with him by sitting back and hoping she assume he has changed, come running back to him and want another chance.

The truth is that these days, women are usually experienced enough with break ups to know that it doesnât take long for the pain of a break up to fade away.

Women also know that they can speed up the process of getting over their ex by having sex with a new guy and allowing herself to fall in love with him a little.

When she does that, she doesn't feel an urgent need to get her back because her emotional needs are pretty much being met by the new guy.

This is why you've just got to make a move and get her back now, before you lose her to another guy.

Unless a woman is still secretly in love with her ex and is afraid that he might meet another woman, or sheâs really struggling to find a replacement guy, she usually wonât make all the moves to get him back.

Instead, she will focus on getting over her feelings for him and trying to move on with her life before he gives up and finds a new woman.

That way, he can be the one who is being left behind, not her.

So, if you want your ex to care that youâve broken up, you need to make her care.

You need to take the lead in the ex back process and begin making her reconnect with her feelings for you by letting her experience the new and improved you every chance you get.

Donât waste time waiting for her to give you some kind of sign that she cares, so you can then feel confident enough to make a move.

If you want her back, you need to make sure that in every interaction you have with her (especially when youâre talking to her over the phone, or meeting up with her in person), you make her feel some respect and sexual attraction for you again.

When you trigger feelings of respect and sexual attraction inside of her, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to keep telling herself that she doesnât care that youâre broken up.

Her protective walls begin to come down and she opens herself up to the possibility of getting back together again.

Another way to make her care is toâ

2. Approach interactions with her as though you're just friends now, rather than trying to get her to care about a boyfriend/girlfriend relationship

[image: Act like you just want to be friends with her and then use any interactions that you have with her as opportunities to re-attract her and reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you.]

Act like you just want to be friends with her and then use any interactions that you have with her as opportunities to re-attract her and reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Don't push for a relationship.

Let her want it, so she seduces herself back into being with you naturally.

A common mistake that a lot of guys make is thinking that a woman should care that they have broken up because they were so in love before.

For example: A guy might say, "How can you not care about what we had together? We were so in love. We even talked about getting married and growing old together. How can you switch off your feelings like that and be so cold towards me? Have you forgotten what we used to have?"

He's likely hoping she will say something like, "You're right. Our love is something really special. The truth is, I'm only pretending not to care, because in reality, I care so, so much. I can't eat or sleep properly because I've been constantly thinking about our perfect love. Let's forget about what happened and get back together again."

Wouldn't it be nice if she said that?

Well, as wonderful as that would be, real life just isn't the same as a scripted Hollywood romantic movie.

In the real world, even if a woman talked about wanting to be together for life, she can change her mind if her man stops making her feel the kind of respect, attraction and love that keeps a relationship together.

It doesn't matter if she said she wanted that before.

That was then and this is now.

A woman doesn't have to stay with a guy just because she used to care about him in the past.

She will only stay with a guy who has the ability to maintain and build on her feelings over time.

So, rather than trying to convince your ex care about the relationship by bringing up your past feelings for each other and have her say things like, "No. It's over between us," or "Forget about it. I've already moved on and you need to do the same," you have to get her to be more open to interacting with you, without having her guard up so high.

How can you do that?

By treating her like she's a female friend who really likes you and is happy to see you.

Even if she acts like she's not happy to see you, don't let it get to you.

Remember: If she's meeting up with you, she wants to see you.

She might act cold, rude or distant, but that's either because she's testing your confidence, or you're trying to get a relationship before you've even re-attracted her.

By the way!|

When you're being her "friend," I don't mean that you should act like a nice, neutral friend and not make her feel sexually attracted to you.

No.

You're simply accepting a "friendship" with your ex as a way of keeping the channels of communication open, so that you can then reawaken her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

Remember: Don't make the classic mistake of acting like just a friend when you're being her friend (e.g. you don't flirt with her, you fear joking around and making her feel attracted).

[image: Use the friendship as a stepping stone to get her back]

You've got to use your friendship with her as a stepping stone to making her reconnect with her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you again.

If you're only being a nice friend, she's not going to feel sexual and romantic attraction for you.

So, make sure that you do it right.

Make her experience rushes of sexual and romantic attraction for you when she interacts with you.

Then, when her feelings for you are reawakened, she will automatically start caring about you and the relationship again because it will feel good to her.

Another way to make her care is to!

3. Let her see that you are happy and emotionally independent now

When you're missing your ex and feeling the pain of being broken up with, the idea of being happy and fulfilled without her might seem impossible or just something that you don't even want to consider.

Yet, here's the thing!

If you want to make her feel emotionally attracted to you when you interact with her, so she actually feels compelled to give you another chance, you first have to reach the stage where you are happy and emotionally independent without her.

It's totally fine to care about her and want her back, but you have to sincerely know that you don't need her to feel good about yourself.

You have to know that you can get on with your life without her (e.g. go after your big goals in life, do all the things you've been putting off, hang out with friends and have lots of fun, find another woman) and everything would be totally fine.

Of course, you want her back and there's nothing wrong with that at all.

I'm here teaching you how to get her back, so clearly, I'm on your side.

However, you have to make sure that you don't need her to give you another chance, so you can then feel good about yourself again.

If you need that, she will pick up on it and it will turn her off.

Where some guys go wrong is by trying to get an ex woman back by making her feel guilty for breaking his heart and leaving him behind in ruins.

For example: A guy might say to her, “Can’t you see how this is affecting me? You are my everything and now there’s no point to my life. Everything I did was for you. How can I go on from here? Can’t you see that I’m falling apart without you? How can you not even care that we’ve broken up? Where is your heart? How could you be so heartless and just turn your back on me?”

Yet, rather than make her feel sorry for him and think, “How sweet. My ex must really love me if he can’t get on with his life without me. Being a man’s purpose and reason for living is every girl’s dream. I think we should get back together again because no other guy will ever feel this way about me,” she, instead, feels turned off by his emotional weakness and dependence on her.

Instinctively, a woman knows that if a guy falls apart after a break up, he is probably going to struggle to handle the challenges of life as the years go on (e.g. climbing through the levels of life like a real man, maintaining a happy family, raising children, paying off a mortgage, dealing with challenging people at work).

A woman doesn’t want to find herself stuck with a guy that she has to carry through life, or constantly encourage so he doesn’t lose confidence in himself.

She wants to be with a man who always remains confident and emotionally strong no matter what happens to him in life.

So, if you want to make your ex care that you’ve broken up, focus on genuinely feeling happy, content and emotionally fulfilled without her.

Then, interact with her and let her pick up on it.

What you’ll find is that you have now automatically become more attractive to her and she can’t stop herself from wanting to interact with you more and more.

Women are naturally attracted to men who feel happy and confident with or without their support, while also being able to make her feel good during an interaction too (i.e. by using humor, being confident and playful, creating a light hearted vibe).

Another way to make her care is to

4. Make her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you on a phone call, but don’t try to get her back right away

This makes her feel drawn to you and also feel a desire to be closer to you because you’re not trying to get anything from her.

You’ve made her feel what she wants to feel (i.e. respectful of you, attracted, feeling sparks of love), but you’re not even asking for another chance.

Instead of asking for another chance, you’re just asking for her to catch up with you to say hi.

She feels attracted and drawn to you, so she agrees.

[image: Make her want you just as much as you want her]

When you catch up with her, you then need to focus on making her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new you.

Don't try to talk her into having a relationship with you right away.

Focus on breaking down the barriers she has put up to protect herself and make her feel attracted and feel good around you again.

By the way!

One of the best ways to do that is through using humor to create smiling and laughter.

When you make a woman laugh and smile, she simply cannot continue to feel defensive or closed off around you for very long.

Even if she tries to mess with your head by acting cold or distant towards you and by saying things like, "You need to leave me alone. I don't love you anymore and I'm never going to love you again," if you maintain your confidence and continue making her smile and laugh, eventually she will find herself feeling good and her walls will start crumbling down.

So, if you want to get your ex back, the best approach is to avoid getting too serious about a relationship too soon and instead focus on building her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you every time you interact with her.

Where a lot of guys go wrong is by not understanding that a relationship needs to have mutual respect, sexual attraction and love.

It's not just about the guy loving, respecting and feeling attracted to a woman.

It has to be mutual for it to work.

If a guy only focuses on his reasons for wanting her back or tries to explain his feelings to her, a woman won't feel motivated to get back with him, because the feelings just aren't mutual.

So, don't make the mistake of assuming that just because you love your ex and want her back, she's going to feel the same way about you.

You've got to MAKE HER feel the same way as you do about her.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Changed Overnight and is Like a Completely Different Person Now

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The 5 possible reasons why your ex changed overnight and is like a completely different person now are:

1. She doesn't want to be nice because she's worried it will give you the impression that she still wants to be with you, even though you haven't really changed

After a break up, a couple will sometimes stay in touch with each other via texting, on social media, by talking on the phone and in some cases, even seeing each other once in a while.

However, what can happen is that when the guy is still in love with his ex and wants her back, he might mistake her willingness to interact with him as a sign that she wants to get back together again.

He may then start saying things like, "We should never have broken up. Look how well we're getting on. It's obviously a sign that we are meant to be together," or, "So, have you been giving us some thought? Do you think you could give me another chance?"

He might even go as far as saying things like, "Let's just keep seeing each other for a while and see where things go," even though she isn't feeling attracted to him anymore and doesn't really see a future with him because of that.

Here's the thing:

If a guy doesn't actively do anything to re-spark his ex's feelings of respect, attraction and love for him, she won't feel much or any motivation to want to get back together with him.

He will feel motivated to get her back because he has feelings for her, but because he hasn't been actively reawakening her feelings for him, the feelings just aren't mutual.

He wants the relationship to get back together, but she just isn't feeling it.

When he keeps trying to get her back (without first reawakening her feelings and turning her back on to him), she will then have to take drastic measures to make him understand that she's not interested in him anymore.

She might then suddenly stop answering his texts, unfriend him on social media, block him on her phone and avoid going to any of the places where she feels that she might bump into him.

He may then say, "I don't get it. My ex changed overnight and is like a completely different person now. What happened? We were getting on so well and I thought that things were on track for us getting back together again. Why is she being like this all of sudden?"

What happened is that he was experiencing strong feelings for her and wanting her back because of it, but she wasn't feeling much or anything for him.

So, she then decided that she had to stop being so nice to him and giving him the impression that he had a chance based on the ineffective, unattractive approach he'd been using on her.

Then, to convince him that she doesn't want to get back with him, she suddenly becomes cold, distant and even bitchy towards him.

What he doesn't realize is that he CAN get her back, but he has to be willing to CHANGE his approach to her.

He can't keep using the same old approach on her and expect that she will suddenly say, "Wow! I want you so much all of a sudden even though you are still talking to me in the same old ways that turn me off!"

That's not how it works.

You've got to actively make your ex have sexual and romantic feelings for you again based on how you talk to her, behave around her and react and respond to her.

It's all within your control.

You can MAKE HER have strong feelings for you again.

Okay, onto the next reason why your ex may have changed and become a completely different person nowâ

2. She wasn't her real self in the relationship and now resents you for it

[image: She wasn't her real self in the relationship and now resents you for it]

Sometimes, a woman might discover that her personality has changed because of her relationship with a guy.

For example: She used to like partying and having the freedom to do whatever she wants, but once she started going out with her boyfriend, he became controlling and wanted to keep her inside all the time.

Initially, she may have gone along with his wishes because she was in love with him and enjoyed doing things together, but over time, she resented having to change her personality to suit him.

After the break up, she will then think something like, â" Finally! Iâ"m free at last! Iâ"ve been pretending to be this stay-at-home perfect girlfriend for so long that I forgot how to be real myself. Well now that weâ"re broken up, I can finally go back to being myself and do what I really want without being controlled by him anymore.â"

She will then start going out to party with her single friends again and doing all the wild and crazy things she has been missing out on.

Naturally, when her boyfriend sees her acting this way, he might say, â" This is so out of character for her! She was always such a sweet girl who loved staying home and watching a movie together or just hanging out and spending time with me. She would talk about wanting to settle down and grow old together. I just donâ"t understand. She changed overnight and is like a completely different person now.â"

What he doesn't realize is that the relationship was out of balance and didn't give her any room to experience other parts of life with him.

He always wanted to keep her hidden away from the world and other guys and she picked up on that.

Women hate it when they realize that their guy is behaving in a certain way or making her do certain things due to his insecurities (e.g. he doesn't want to go out to party with her in case she notices other guys that she finds more attractive and then thinks about leaving him).

Women want to be with a man who always remains confident in his attractiveness to her, no matter what situation they are in.

To keep a relationship together for life, a couple does not have to go out partying.

That's not the point.

Instead, the point is that a man needs to always remain confident in his attractiveness to his woman, so he doesn't try to control or restrict her from being a normal person to prevent himself from feeling insecure.

Women don't want to feel as though they are in a relationship with an emotionally weak man who needs constant reassurance of their love and commitment.

Women want a man who knows that he is more than good enough and doesn't see other men as competition for her.

Another example of a woman not being her real self in a relationship is if she used to be a really happy and positive person before her relationship with her boyfriend, but he turned her into a negative, stressed out person.

When she breaks up with him, she will then try to get away from his negativity, which may include cutting him out of her life completely, or just being cold and bitchy towards him for making her become that kind of person.

When she changes and treats him in that way, a guy might feel confused and wonder what caused her to change so much, so quickly.

After all, she used to say that she loved him and she used to really care about him, so how could she turn her back on him like that?

Simple.

She's an individual, just like he is.

An individual always has to look out for themselves if their well being is under attack.

She just doesn't like who she became in the relationship with him and can see that if she gave him another chance, it would be the same again.

Why?

He hasn't really changed.

He's just trying to get her back, but hasn't even fixed the core reasons for his insecurity or unattractive behavior.

He's still pretty much exactly the same guy and she can sense that.

If he wants her back, he has to improve and change and let her experience that during interactions, so she can see for herself that she really does feel differently around him now.

Another reason why your ex may have changed and become a completely different person is thatâ€¦!

3. She wants you to get angry, so she can use it as another reason why she needs time apart from you

A guy might sometimes be so determined to get his ex back that, no matter what she says to him (e.g. â€œI just don't have feelings for you anymoreâ€ or â€œJust accept that it's truly over between usâ€), he just keeps pushing hard to give him another chance.

So, as a last resort, a woman might start acting completely out of character (e.g. She used to be nice, sweet and friendly, but is now rude, unfriendly and cold towards him. She used to be shy and introverted, but is now confident again and enjoying going out to party and flirt with other men).

Secretly, she may be hoping that if she can make him lose his cool, become angry with her and possibly even become a little bit aggressive, she can then use his behavior as a way of convincing him to leave her alone.

She can then say to him, “You’re scaring me. I’m afraid that you would hurt me if I got back with you. So, no, I will not give you another chance now that you’ve shown me this side of yourself. You can forget about it now. It’s over between us. You’re not the guy I want to be with anymore. You are always so angry now. I’m afraid of you. Please leave me alone.”

By reacting in an angry way to her, he knows that she now has a reason to avoid him.

If she really acts like she is afraid of him, he might then feel guilty for his behavior and leave her alone.

Then, she can move on, without having to worry about him trying to get her back.

Note: Women usually do that to really nice guys who they don’t have much reason (other than not feeling attracted to him) to break up.

She makes him react in an angry way, so she then has a reason to end things or to act like she needs to because she is afraid of him.

Another reason why your ex may have changed and become a completely different person is that

4. She is trying to impress her single girlfriends by being a bitchy ex girlfriend to you

When a woman gets into a relationship, she will usually spend little or no time hanging out with her single girlfriends.

As a result, her single girlfriends might secretly dislike her new guy, either because he’s taking their friend away from them, or alternatively, because they feel that he’s not treating her right.

The friendship she has with them might become strained and she may begin to miss being able to hang out with them.

Then, after the break up, she will try to get their friendship and trust back by being a bitchy ex girlfriend to her guy as a way of impressing them.

She might say things like, “I’m so glad we’ve broken up and that I’m back with my friends again. He was keeping me away from you girls. I missed you all so much.”

Then, if she gets a text from him while hanging out with her single girlfriends, she will show it to them and they’ll come up with ways to be mean and bitchy to him when replying.

The guy will then be thinking, “Huh? What has gotten into her all of a sudden? Why is she being like this? She’s become a completely different person.”

Another reason why your ex may have become a completely different person since breaking up with you is that

5. She is seeing a new guy and now feels confident to ignore you and move on, without feeling the pain of a break up

Some women can’t cope with the idea of being broken up and feeling all alone, so rather than cutting off communication with her ex, she might be really nice to him as a way of stopping him from moving on while she actively looks for a replacement guy.

He may then think, “Okay, great! She’s being nice and friendly to me. Could this mean she regrets breaking up? If I take things slow with her, we will get back together again sooner rather than later. Just be patient, keep texting her and she will come to you. Yes, I can do this!”

Yet, he just texts her in a neutral, friendly way, which doesn’t create a spark.

Alternatively, he jokes around and is silly when texting her, which she laughs about, but doesn’t feel much attraction for because she knows that he really hasn’t changed.

In her mind, she knows that he probably hasn’t even begun to change the subtle things about himself (e.g. how he becomes insecure if she tests his confidence, how he gives her too much power over him, how he is too nice to her and lack the emotional toughness that she looks for in a guy).

So, while she is stringing him along via text and giving him the impression that he has a chance, she is secretly trying to find a replacement guy to move on before he does.

That way, she doesn’t have to be the one feeling rejected or left behind.

When she secures herself a new guy, she then suddenly stops being so nice to her ex.

She starts pushing him away, being rude and ignoring his texts, which then leaves him feeling hurt and confused and saying, “My ex changed overnight and is like a completely different person now.”

6 Mistakes to Avoid When Your Ex Suddenly Changes into a Completely Different Person

When your ex girlfriend (or wife) is no longer behaving like the woman you used to know and you don’t know why, you might feel tempted to try to force her to change back to who she was before.

Yet, that just doesn’t work.

If you want her to change back, you have to let her do it naturally, otherwise she will resist and reject your attempts to get her back and become increasingly cold, mean and rude to you.

The fastest way to get her to change back and be a nice, warm, loving and caring woman towards you, is to make her feel sparks of romantic and sexual attraction when you interact with her.

If you do that, she will then want to be nice to you for her own reasons (i.e. she’s feeling attracted to you and drawn to you again, so she wants to explore her new feelings for you and experience what would happen if you and her talked again or met up in person).

That’s how it’s done.

Unfortunately, most guys don’t know that or know how to do it, so they unintentionally turn their ex woman off even more.

For example: Some of the ineffective ways that a guy might try to get his ex woman to change include

1. Trying to get her to feel sorry for him

When a guy feels that his ex changed overnight into someone that he doesn't recognize anymore, he might try to make her feel pity for him by letting her know how hurt and disillusioned he feels about her change in behavior.

For example: He might post sad, lonely photos of himself on social media in the hopes that she will see them and feel guilty about her treatment of him.

Alternatively, a guy might ask some of their mutual friends to tell his ex how hurt and betrayed he's been feeling because of her behavior towards him.

He's hoping that if she realizes the negative effect she is having on him, she will quickly revert back to being the nice, sweet woman that he remembers and then come rushing back into his arms.

Yet, it just doesn't work that way because a woman doesn't want to feel like she's doing a guy a favor by being with him.

She wants to be with a guy who makes her feel respect, sexual attraction and love, not pity, guilt and sympathy.

So, don't waste time trying to make your ex feel sorry for you in any way because it will almost certainly make her feel turned off by you even more.

Another mistake that guys make when trying to get their ex woman to change her behavior is that

2. Asking her why she is treating him so badly

When a guy doesn't know how to cope with his ex's unexpected negative behavior towards him, he might become emotional and ask, "How can you do this to me? Why are you being such a bitch all of a sudden? I thought we were still friends, but you've changed and are acting like a completely different person now. You used to be such a kind and caring person. What's gotten into you? Don't you even care that you're hurting me? I don't deserve to be treated in this way. I love you and have always loved you. Why are you being like this?"

Yet, rather than make her think, "He's right. I am being a bitch towards him and it's wrong. He doesn't deserve what I'm doing to him," she will think something like, "If he thinks that behaving like a sad, hurt little boy is going to make me love him again, he's got it all wrong. Doesn't he know that women aren't attracted to emotional weakness in men? Where is his confidence? Why does he need me to be nice to him to feel good about himself? I don't want to have to baby him now that we've broken up. He can learn the hard way. I'm not going to be nice to him to make him feel better."

Here's the thing:

Although a guy might feel frustrated and hurt that his ex has suddenly changed and is behaving like a completely different person towards him, the only way to make her stop giving him the cold shoulder and become the woman he remembers again, is by reawakening her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for him.

He needs to think, act, behave and interact with her in some of the ways that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. being confident, emotionally strong, emotionally masculine, making her laugh and smile, making her feel girly and feminine in comparison to his masculine approach to a conversation or interaction).

So, if you feel that your ex has changed towards you and is treating you in a way that you don't like, don't bother trying to convince her to change her mind by showing her how badly you feel about it.

Instead, focus on making her feel respect and sexual attraction for you again.

When she's feeling attracted to the new and improved you, treating you with love and respect will happen automatically, because it now feels good to her.

She stops looking at you as her ex and starts looking at you as a potential lover or boyfriend again.

As a result, she has a reason to want to get back with you and therefore, will start being nicer to you again.

Another mistake that guys make when their ex woman changes her behavior is a|

3. Getting angry at her

[image: Getting angry at her for changing her behavior]

For example: He might start shouting at her and accusing her of playing mind games with him.

Sometimes, a guy might even become overly aggressive, threatening or even violent towards his ex girlfriend or wife.

However, it goes without saying that anger and violence isn't going to cause a woman to sincerely say, â€œOh, Iâ€™m so sorry! I don't know what I was thinking. Please forgive me for being so bitchy towards you. Will you ever be able to give me another chance after what Iâ€™ve done?â€

She might say that because she is scared of a guy, but she's going to be secretly planning on getting away from him as soon as possible.

4. Pleading with her to go back to who she was before when things were good

Sometimes, when a guy doesn't know what else to do, he might say to his ex, â€œPlease stop acting this way. Please try to remember what we had. If you do that, you will be able to go back to being the woman I fell in love with. Can't you see that the person youâ€™ve become isn't you? You're better than this. Please. Just stop acting so cold and rude to me. You know what you're doing is wrong. I love you. Please just see that.â€

He's hoping that she will see things from his point of view, realize her mistake and change back to being the woman he wants her to be, even though he hasn't even reawakened her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for him.

He's feeling attracted to her and really wants her back, but she isn't feeling it, so she doesn't feel like being nice to him and allowing him to get her back into a relationship.

So, rather than changing back to the kind of woman he wants, she feels even more annoyed and turned off by his inability to see things from her point of view and understand that the feelings just aren't mutual right now.

He wants her to treat him like everything is okay and as though they can start over again, just because he wants to.

He wants her to be nice to him and give him another chance because he wants that.

It's not even about what she wants or needs, so she closes up and doesn't give him a chance.

Here's the thingâ€¦|

If you want your ex to change the way sheâ€¦s treating you right now, you need to show her (via the way you think, act, behave, interact with her and respond to what she says and does) that youâ€¦ve understood her real reasons for breaking up with you and have made some real changes to yourself.

You donâ€¦t have to be perfect to convince her, but you do need to show her that youâ€¦re not at the same level you were at when she broke up with you.

When she can see for herself that youâ€¦re a different man now, her behavior will change automatically because the new you is so much attractive and appealing to her.

Another mistake that guys make isâ€¦|

5. Continually putting up with her bad behavior just so he can interact with her

If a woman feels more emotionally dominant than a guy, it becomes very difficult for her to respect him.

If she canâ€¦t respect him, she also canâ€¦t feel real attraction for him.

So, when a guy is being a pushover by putting up with her bad treatment of him, she loses respect for him.

She doesn't think, â€¦Awww, how cute. Heâ€¦s being so understanding and patient with me. How can I be so cold towards him when he puts up with all my bad behavior? I need to quickly show him that Iâ€¦m sorry for my bad behavior.â€¦

Instead, she will think something like, â€¦What a wimp. I canâ€¦t believe heâ€¦s still hanging around after all the bad things Iâ€¦ve done to him. Doesnâ€¦t he have any pride? I would never tolerate a guy treating me the way Iâ€¦ve been treating my ex. Well, if I wasnâ€¦t sure about the break up before, I can now see that heâ€¦s just not man enough for me. At least now I can move on and find myself a real man, knowing that Iâ€¦m not making a mistake. He just isn't man enough for me.â€¦

So, what should you do instead?

When youâ€¦re interacting with your ex, donâ€¦t make the mistake of thinking that being a pushover is going to bring her back to you.

Instead, what you need to do is to remain confident and stand up to her when sheâ€¦s being out of line.

It's not about getting angry at her or cutting off contact if she isn't nice.

Instead, you just laugh at her behavior and let her see that you're not impressed or intimidated by it.

Then, you need to use your interactions as a way to respark and reawaken her feelings of romantic and sexual attraction for you, so she has a reason to be nicer to you and meet up with you to give you another chance.

Finally, another mistake that guys make when their ex woman changes her behavior and becomes rude, mean, cold or bitchy isâ€¦|

6. Not turning her rude behavior into something for both of them to smile and laugh about

One of the easiest ways to change a woman's behavior from negative to positive is by making her laugh and smile.

So, when your ex is being bitchy and cold towards you, rather than let it upset you, turn it into something both of you can laugh about.

For example: The next time she's being rude to you and saying things like, "What do you want?" or "Leave me alone! I don't ever want to see you again," you can say something like, "Whoa, aren't you a little tough girl now? Woo, I'm so scared and intimidated. Let me see your muscles. Wow, you're so strong now," and have a laugh with her about it.

By making her laugh, you're breaking the ice between you and her.

You're effectively saying to her (without saying this to her at all), "Hey, I'm not going to crumble just because you're behaving the way you are. It's okay. I'm man enough to take your bad behavior and not be intimidated by it. I'm stronger than you, but I'm also a good guy. I'm able to turn a potentially negative situation around into something that both of us can laugh about and feel good about together."

[image: Change how she feels and she will change her behavior]

When you turn her rude behavior into something for both of you to laugh about, she will be impressed to see that you're confident enough to joke around with her, even when she's being rude towards you.

Then, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling good about you and her.

When that happens, her guard comes down and she starts being a better woman to you because she now wants to impress you, rather than push you away.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Says That She Loves Me, But is Not in Love With Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

When a woman says that she loves you but isn't in love with you, it simply means that you're currently not making her feel sexually attracted in the way that she REALLY wants.

You can change how she feels, but you have to be willing to change your approach to her.

For example: A woman might say, "I love you, but I'm not in love with you" to her ex boyfriend or husband if...

1. He is too nice to her all the time

There's nothing wrong with being nice to a woman and there's nothing wrong with being a good guy, but being nice to a woman isn't the main thing that makes her feel attracted to a guy.

For example: A guy is in a relationship with a woman and he is always nice to her, lets her have her own way and even allows her to treat him badly (e.g. by being rude or disrespectful towards him, breaking his trust) without ever standing up to her.

Then, after the break up he continues being a nice, forgiving guy and tries to change her mind by being extra romantic and sweet to her.

As he tries to get her back with his nice guy approach, he might do everything his ex wants him to do, suck up to her, make himself available to her every beck and call and generally try to show her that he's willing to put up with anything to get another chance with her.

[image: My ex loves me, but is not in love with me]

He might take her out to a nice dinner or lunch to show her that he's still willing to provide for her, even though she doesn't want to be with him anymore.

He might also help her pay some of her bills, buy her expensive gifts and shower her with bunches of flowers and boxes of chocolates.

If someone were to ask him why he is doing that, he might say, "I love her more than anything and I want to show that to her. It doesn't matter how she treats me. Being a gentleman is what really counts. I'm not going to be a bad boy and start treating her badly. That's not how I was raised or what I stand for as a man. I believe that niceness is what women really and if a woman doesn't want it, she must be crazy! So, when my ex realizes that I'm always going to treat her like a princess no matter what, she will naturally change her mind about us. She will see that no other guy will ever love her like I do, or treat her as nicely as I do. I haven't gotten her back so far because she's confused about her love for me. If I just keep spoiling her and being extra sweet and romantic, her defenses will come down and her feelings for me will change. I will get her to love me again. I was nice to her before and I will continue being nice to her. It has to work!"

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that he doesn't have to be a bad boy to stop using the failing nice guy approach.

What does he need to do?

Simple.

Be a good guy with balls.

In other words, treat her well, but don't be a doormat for her to walk all over whenever she wants.

Women do not respect guys who let themselves be pushed around by a woman, because it makes a woman feel unsafe with him as they walk through the world together.

If he can stand up for himself when it comes to her, what kind of protection will he offer if people start treating him and her badly?

Will she have to stand up for them?

Will she have to be "the man" and take control of the situation?

Stopping the nice guy act is NOT about being a bad boy or treating a woman badly.

Instead, it's about being a good guy who just has some balls.

In other words, a good guy with a backbone.

Put another way, a confident, assertive, good guy who is nice to her and to other people, but doesn't waste time and energy sucking up to her or other people in the hope that they treat him fairly in return.

If you've ever used the nice guy approach in life, you will know that no matter how nice you are, some people are the kind who will treat you badly, unfairly or rudely no matter what to do for them.

This is why women don't like the nice guy act that men put on as their social strategy in life.

Women like men who are good guys, but who are more real, balanced and emotionally strong.

So, if a guy is being extra sweet and nice to get his ex back when she dumped him for being too much of a nice guy to begin with, she isn't going to feel amazed that he's doing even more of it for her now.

Rather than make a woman think, "Iâm such a lucky girl! No matter what I do to him or how badly I behave, heâs always so understanding, nice and sweet. Look at how romantic he is and how much heâs always spoiling me, even though we've broken up. Iâd be making the biggest mistake of my life if I let him go! No other guy would be this nice!â sheâll be thinking, âWhy doesnât he ever stand up to me? Heâs always letting me get away with treating him badly. Doesnât he have any balls? Does he really think that my feelings for him will change just because heâs being nice to me and buying me flowers and gifts? Canât he see that his confused nice guy approach is actually one of the main reasons why I broke up with him in the first place? Doesn't he understand that women don't want a pushover because it doesn't make us feel safe?â"

Hereâs the thingâ!

Although being a nice guy and a gentleman to a woman is perfectly fine (e.g. I'm good to my wife and treat her well, but I don't put up with her bad behavior, so she is kept in line), when it comes to relationships, or getting an ex back, being extra nice to her is not what works.

Why?

When a woman feels way more valuable than a man because he's being so nice to her even though she is treating him badly, she just can't look up to him and respect him, which then ruins any potential for sexual attraction to occur.

Without respect and sexual attraction, it then becomes difficult for her to connect with feelings of romantic love, causing her think, â€œSomething is missing. I love him, but Iâ€™m just not in love with him. What is missing between us? I mean, heâ€™s a good guy, but I just donâ€™t feel it.â€

She might not be able to explain it herself, but she will be able to feel that something isnâ€™t quite right between you and her and she doesnâ€™t like it.

So, if you want to change your exâ€™s feelings of neutral, friendly love into romantic, sexual love, you have to actively make her feel respect and attraction for you again by behaving in some of the ways that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. by being more confident and self-assured, being emotionally masculine, standing up for yourself in a loving way, putting her back in her place in a loving way, making her feel girly and feminine when she interacts with you).

If your main approach to changing her feelings is to be nice to her and hope that it will convince her to give you another chance, the only thing you will accomplish is the unwanted result of making her lose more and more respect for you every time she interacts with you.

Donâ€™t put yourself in that position.

Remember: Women donâ€™t reward niceness with love, sex and devotion.

Women only appreciate niceness from men that they respect and feel sexually attracted to.

Another reason why a woman might say that she loves her ex, but isnâ€™t in love with him is thatâ€™!

2. He makes her feel more dominant than him

[image: Turning her off by making her feel more dominant]

Many guys make the mistake of thinking that a woman will be happier if she gets to wear the pants in a relationship.

A guy might then sit back and allow his woman to make most or all the decisions and be more emotionally dominant than him in the relationship.

Yet, rather than make a woman happy, a guyâ€™s lack of emotional dominance only makes her lose respect for him as a man and when she canâ€™t respect him, she also canâ€™t feel sexually attracted to him.

Naturally, this doesnâ€™t mean that a woman wants a man who is overly domineering and bossy and always makes all the decisions for both of them, without taking her thoughts and feelings into consideration.

It simply means she needs her man to be the emotionally stronger one and to take on the role of leading the way to a better life for both of them.

If he can do that (by making decisions and getting her to help in the making of others), she will be able to relax into feeling like a feminine woman around him.

Some guys just donâ€™t understand that about women, so in a relationship, a guy will let his woman be the boss.

He might do that because he thinks itâ€™s unfair that men are expected to be men, or because he thinks itâ€™s outdated to be a man around a woman.

Yet, being a man never goes out of style and never stops being what women really want.

So, if a guy doesnâ€™t take on the role of being the man in the relationship, his woman will lose respect, then attraction and then fall out of love with him.

Then, when she breaks up with him, he will mistakenly continue to put her in a position of control by asking her to explain what he needs to do to get her to change her mind.

For example: He might say to her, “Please give me another chance. Just tell me what you want me to do to make you fall in love with me again? I promise you, I will do whatever you say.”

Yet, rather than please her and make her think, “What a great guy! He wants me to lead him! This is what I’ve always wanted,” she feels turned off even more, because he’s behaving in the exact same way that caused her to break up with him in the first place.

Here’s the thing!

A woman doesn’t want to tell a guy what he needs to do to make her happy.

She wants him to be man enough to figure it out on his own, rather than leaning on her for guidance and support.

If she has to tell him how to be the man she needs, she will lose even more respect for him because he’s not his own man.

He is simply following her instructions, which takes the romance out of the relationship and turns it into something neutral.

It’s neutral because he’s neither a man nor a woman and she’s neither a woman nor a man.

Both of them are kind of somewhere in the middle.

If you want a relationship to last for life, you’ve got to be COMPLETELY DIFFERENT to your woman in terms of your role in the relationship.

In other words, you’ve got to be the MAN and let her be the WOMAN.

So, if you made the mistake of being neutral with your woman (rather than clearly being the man at all times), here’s what you need to do!

To get her back, she needs to be able to see that she can now fully relax into her feminine self and trust that you really are the man.

When she sees that your energy, thinking and behavior has changed to become so much more manly, she will automatically begin to feel respect for you again.

When she can respect you, she will naturally start to feel sexually attracted to you again and with that, her feelings will slowly change from neutral love back to passionate, sexual, romantic love again.

Following on from the previous point!

3. He is more like a friend to her

Another reason why a woman might say that she loves her ex, but is not in love with him, is because his approach to her makes her feel more like a friend to him, rather than his feminine, sexually charged girl when he interacts with her.

For example: During a guy’s relationship with a woman, it might have felt like fun to hang out with her like friends (e.g. play video games together, go to the park every weekend to play baseball, get her involved in his hobbies, talk to her about guy stuff and so on).

Although initially a woman might go along with that, she will eventually start to lose interest when she realizes that sheâs no longer as attracted to him as she used to be.

She goes from seeing him as her man and feeling like his woman, to seeing him more like a friend and feeling like “one the guys” or a buddy to him.

Then, after the break up, rather than use every interaction he has with her (e.g. over the phone and in person) to re-spark some of her feelings of sexual attraction for him, a guy will often make the mistake of continuing to use his friendly approach on her.

He might say to himself, âEven though right now she says that she isnât in love with me anymore, I just need to stay around her long enough as a friend to make her change her mind. If she sees that Iâm not going no matter what, she will realize that sheâs actually still in love with me and she will want me back.â

Yet, hereâs the thing thoughâ!

Although staying in touch with an ex and even being friends with her is definitely a good thing (because you can use interactions as opportunities to reactivate her feelings of sexual attraction), itâs not going to make any difference to her feelings for you if you’re just being friendly.

If youâre just being friendly around her, sheâs not going to get those special feelings of sexual and romantic attraction that happen when a guy is using an attraction based approach.

Instead, with a friendly approach, sheâs going to say something like, âI really do love you and I donât want to lose you, but I just don’t feel the same way about you as I used to. I don’t know what it is. Maybe I’m messed up in the head or something. Maybe I just need time. I don’t know. So, even though we canât be a couple anymore, Iâm glad we can be friends like this. I can’t guarantee that I will get back with you, but I’m open to being friends because I do love you and care about you as a person.â

Then, because she doesn’t feel sexually and romantically attracted to her ex, she opens herself up to new guys who do make her feel that way.

The next thing her ex knows, she is texting him to say, “Sorry, I can’t maintain our friendship anymore. My new boyfriend doesn’t like it and I don’t want to ruin things with him. I wish you all the best.”

In other words, if you want your ex back, don’t use a friendly, non-sexual approach.

You’ve got to make her feel those special feelings that bring a man and a woman together and keep them together in a sexual and romantic way.

If you just make her feel friendly feelings, all you will get is a temporary friendship will it’s still possible or convenient for her.

Another reason why a woman will say that she loves her ex, but isn’t in love with him isâ!

4. He has ruined her respect for him by crying

Life can be challenging sometimes (e.g. a guy might have trouble with his boss at work, lose his money in a bad investment, get caught up in disagreements or arguments with friends or family) and itâs natural when things go wrong, he might want to blow off some steam by talking about to his woman.

It's totally fine to talk about problems to your woman and work towards a solution.

Yet, if a guy becomes a complainer who often cries or sulks when life gets tough, his woman will soon begin to lose respect for him.

Why?

It's a fact of nature that women are not attracted to emotionally weak, wimpy men.

On TV, women might say that they like men who cry, but that's just due to political correctness or it's coming from an unattractive woman who can't keep a real man, so gets in and out of relationships with emotionally weak men who sometimes cry and usually desperately chase after her when she breaks up the relationship.

Yet, in real life, real women are turned off by men who cry when life gets tough, or when they are being broken up with.

So, when a man becomes emotionally sensitive and starts whining about his life like a victim or crying about the fact that she is breaking up with him, a woman will instinctively start to lose respect and attraction for him.

For example: He might say to her, "How can you do this to me. Isn't my life bad enough already without the added pain of losing you? I can't bear the thought of being without you. It's just too much! I need you. Can't you see that? Please don't do this to me. I need you. I love you more than anything. Please. Have a think about how you're making me feel. You're killing me. Please."

He's hoping that if she feels sorry for him, she will change her mind and give him another chance.

Yet, that only turns her off even more because a woman doesn't want to think of her relationship with a guy as a charity case.

She wants to be with him because it feels good to her, not because she feels that he will fall apart without her.

So, if you want to change how your ex feels about you, don't try to use the "pity me" approach on her because it may work for a short while on some women, but it won't work forever.

Women aren't attracted to emotional weakness in men, so you've just got to be strong.

When she sees for herself that you're the kind of man she can now look up to, respect and depend on, she will automatically begin to feel some respect and attraction for you again and her feelings will naturally change from neutral love to romantic love.

Another reason for the old, "I love you, but I'm not in love with you" speech from a woman is that

5. He hides from his goals by spending most of his spare time on her and the relationship

[image: You are all that matters to me]

Although there's nothing wrong with being a devoted, committed boyfriend (fiancé or husband), it absolutely cannot be your main purpose in life if you want your relationship to last.

Almost all women on the planet hate it when a guy makes her his purpose in life because he's either too afraid or too lazy to step up and become the man he can be and achieve the things he is capable of.

For example: Sometimes a guy might use his relationship with a woman as an excuse not to go after his dreams and goals in life.

He might say to himself, “She’s so much more important to me than any goal I might have. So, I’ll rather focus my attention on building our relationship and spending as much time together as possible, than going after some dream that may never come true anyway.”

He may even convince himself that giving up on his goals in life is the ultimate proof of his love for her and that she’ll feel flattered for LIFE that he’s willing to give everything up for her.

Yet, women just don’t work that way.

Although a woman wants to be loved and appreciated, she doesn’t want to be the number one source of her guy’s emotional security, sense of identity or reason for living.

When a guy does that to a woman, it makes her feel responsible for his happiness, confidence and sense of self worth.

It makes her feel like she has to be emotionally consistent and stable like a MAN in order to make him feel confident, happy and worthy in life.

If she acts like a WOMAN and changes her emotional state all the time, it causes him to become insecure or possibly clingy, jealous, controlling and angry at her at all the time.

That’s not what a woman wants.

She doesn’t want a guy who needs her to think, feel, behave and act consistently like a MAN.

She also doesn’t want to feel like she has to be like a “mother” figure to him because he needs her gentle, unconditional love.

Women give CONDITIONAL love in a relationship with a man.

The condition?

If you can be the sort of man that she feels respect and attraction for, she will love you and be nice, affectionate and caring.

If you are being the sort of man who is ruining her respect or attraction, she will disconnect from her feelings of love and stop being so nice, affectionate and caring.

If a woman feels like she has to “take care” of her guy because he needs her love to feel good about himself, she definitely won’t want to give it to him.

For example: A guy might try to get a woman by saying things like, “Please baby! I’m nothing without your love. You’re the reason I get out of bed in the morning. Without you, I don’t see the point in living anymore. I mean, what would be the point of doing anything if I can’t share it with you? Please give me another chance. I need you. Please.”

He’s hoping that if he expresses his love for her in that way, she will see it as romantic, feel flattered by how much he needs her and it will then change her mind.

Yet, that’s just not how women work.

Rather than making a woman think, “Oh no! What am I doing to him? His love for me is so strong and I’m throwing it all away. I’m being so selfish and ungrateful. I have to give him another chance!” she will likely think, “That’s the very reason why my feelings for him changed before! He was just smothering me with his neediness. He has no serious goals and ambitions in his life besides me. Yes, he wants to achieve the standard things in life like other people, but he's not striving to become a better man. He is afraid of becoming the man he knows he could be. I just can't be with a guy who is using his love for me as an excuse to avoid becoming and being a real man in this life.

She then tells him something like, “Sorry, I just don't feel the same way. You have to leave me alone” and he is confused.

He doesn't understand how she could love him as a person, but not be in love with him.

Worse still, she isn't ever going to tell him the REAL reason she is turned off by him at a deep level. She'll just say things like, “I love you, but I'm not in love with you. I'm sorry. It's over” because she doesn't want to give him clues on how he could re-attract her.

She wants a man who either understands how to be a real man and is living in that way, or a guy who learns how to be a real man and starts being it, so she can then experience a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

So, if you want to make your ex fall in love with you again, you need to start by showing her that you have become an emotionally independent, confident, real man now who isn't afraid of his potential.

Let her see that you have some big goals that you are striving towards and you are doing the things you were putting off because of your relationship with her, or because of your fear of your own potential as a man.

When your ex can see for herself that you're now the mature, emotionally strong man she always wanted you to be, you will automatically become more attractive to her.

It literally happens automatically, whether she wants it to or not.

So, don't worry if she doesn't say, “Wow! OMG! I want you back!” right away.

In most cases, a woman will act like she's only kind of impressed or isn't impressed at all to test her ex guy's confidence.

She wants to see if he really has become a real man, or if he's still the same kind of guy who needs a woman's approval and encouragement before he feels okay about himself.

Finally, another reason why a woman will love her ex guy, but not be in love with him is that

6. She's lost trust in him as a man that she can look up to and rely on

When in a relationship, a woman needs to feel that she can rely on her man to guide both himself and her to a better life in future.

Essentially, a woman's natural instincts are to find a guy that she can stick with for life (or at least a very long time), because of the risk of getting pregnant by him.

It's not because women are money hungry ho's or because women are lazy.

It's just about their natural instinct to be with a guy who will be able to protect and provide should she get pregnant and have to raise offspring.

So, when a woman hooks up with a guy, at the back of her mind she's wondering, Is he the *one? Can I trust him to stick by me and be a mature, emotionally strong man that I can rely on? Will he be able to provide for me and protect me? Will I be able to depend on him if we have any children together in the future?*â€œ

Women hate wasting their time on a guy who is pretending to be a well-balanced man when heâ€™s really not.

For example: A guy might sometimes put on an act to get a woman to go out on a date with him, but once they are in a relationship together, his insecurities begin to shine through.

For instance, he mightâ€™

- Realize that he got very lucky by scoring her and then start feeling the fear of potentially losing her. He will then become needy, clingy and insecure in the relationship with her.
- Take her for granted (e.g. stops treating her in the same loving, respectful way that he did in the beginning, becomes argumentative and critical towards her) because he assumes that she loves him and she will never break up with him now.
- Think that letting her make all the decisions in the relationship will make her happy.
- Continue behaving like heâ€™s still single (e.g. hangs out with his friends and doesn't pay much attention to her, spends his weekends playing video games, goes out partying without her and gets drunk around other women who might be interested in him).
- Behave in an irresponsible way and not follow through on his promises to her.

Although a woman might put up with this type of behavior for a while, eventually her instincts will start telling her, *â€œHeâ€™s not the guy you thought he was. You can no longer look up to him and rely on him to be the man you need him to be. What if you fall pregnant or some serious problem comes up in your life? You won't be able to count on him to take care of you or protect you. Get out of the relationship now before itâ€™s too late.*â€œ

She will then try to let him down easy by saying something like, *â€œThis isn't working for me. I love you, but Iâ€™m not in love with you anymore. I need time to think about what I really want.*â€œ

She might add, *“Who knowsâ€™ maybe sometime in the future we can give our relationship another try, but for now, I need to be alone for a while.*â€œ

He might then cut off all communication with her for a few weeks or even months, because heâ€™s hoping that she will be working through her feelings for him and will soon call him and tell him that sheâ€™s ready to get back together again.

Yet that rarely, if ever, happens because she's not in love with him in a romantic, sexual way, so she doesn't feel motivated to give the relationship another try.

She knows that she will just end up seeing him as more like a friend and won't feel the spark, so she doesn't follow through on getting him back.

Instead, she tries to use the time apart to get over him, move on and hook up with another guy who she hopes that she will be able to continually look up to, respect, rely on and depend on to be the man that she really needs.

Then, when her ex calls her after giving her weeks or more of space, she will say something like, â€œSorry. We just weren't meant to be. Itâ€™s too late. Iâ€™m in love with someone else now. I'm sorry it didn't work out between us. You're a really nice guy and all. I wish you the best from here on out. I'm sure you will find a nice girl one day who will appreciate you.â□□

Of course, she then gets off the phone and knows that she didn't tell him the truth, but told him what would help her get away from him.

If she were to tell him the truth, she would explain what you've been learning so far in this article.

Yet, she doesn't want to do that because she doesn't want him to say, "I can't be like that, I promise! Just give me a chance to prove it to you!"

If she did that, she would feel like his leader, guide or mother figure in life.

She doesn't want that.

So, if you don't want to lose your ex to another guy, you've got to re-attract her now, before it's too late.

Interact with her (e.g. over the phone and in person) and show her via the way you talk, think, behave and interact with her, that youâ□□re a different man now.

When you can show her that youâ□□ve changed the things that turned her off (e.g. youâ□□re more emotionally masculine now, youâ□□re confident and self-assure, youâ□□re emotionally independent and have a big purpose in life), her instincts will kick in and she will begin thinking, â□□Now this is the kind of man I always wanted. I can definitely rely on him, look up to him, feel attracted to him and love him. Maybe I should just give him another chance. I feel good about this now, so why not? I should do it!â□□

Her walls then come falling down and the love in her heart starts to feel different.

Instead of feeling neutral, friendly feelings when she interacts with you, her heart starts to skip a beat ever time she hears your voice or sees your face.

She's in love with you again.

It's on!

You and her are back together.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get My Ex to Chase Me and Initiate the Reconciliation

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you want to get your ex to chase you and initiate the reconciliation, here are 5 tips to help you make that happen ASAP:

1. Fix the Things That She Really Dumped You For

Sometimes in a relationship, a guy might get into the habit of behaving in ways that are unattractive to his woman (e.g. he becomes too wimpy or weak-minded, stops making her feel appreciated, becomes too annoying), which then causes her to lose respect and attraction for him over time and eventually leads to her breaking up with him.

So, if he then wants to get his ex to chase him and initiate a reconciliation, he needs to make sure that when he interacts with her (e.g. on a phone call, or in person), he shows her (via his actions, thinking and behavior) that he really has fixed the things that she dumped him for in the first place.

For example: If a woman broke up with a guy because he became too wimpy and weak-minded and was always whining to her (about life, her, problems, work, responsibilities, the government), he needs to show her that heâs now emotionally strong and mature enough to stand on his own two feet like a real man.

He doesn't sulk or complain about life and instead, takes responsibility for his own fate by learning, improving and becoming a better man as he continues through life.

He is now someone that she can be proud to call her boyfriend (or husband) because he's not a complainer, a whiner or a wimp.

He's a real man now.

Another example is if a woman broke up with a guy because he put too much stock in what his friends or family had to say about how he lived his life, so she eventually grew tired of him not being man enough to make his own decisions.

To show her that heâs changed, he needs to let her see that he has become more emotionally independent now (e.g. heâs moved out from the family home, is pursuing a lifelong dream that his family doesn't approve of, has disconnected from some of his negative friends and has made some new, more positive and supportive friends).

Every relationship is different, so you need to stop for a moment and have a think about your exâs real reasons for breaking up with you.

From there, you need to make some adjustments to your way of thinking and behavior, so she will be able to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction the next time she interacts with you.

When you do interact with her in person, she will be able to see that youâre no longer the same guy she broke up with and she will then experience new feelings for you.

She will look at you as being a new, improved guy who makes her feel differently.

As she looks at you in that way, she drops her guard and starts thinking something like, âHeâs so different now. I really like the new him. I think I made a mistake in breaking up with him and not wanting him back again. I wonder if he would take me back if I asked him for a *reconciliation? Maybe I should give this a try. I'm feeling good now, so why not?*â□□

When her guard is down like that, it's then so easy to hug her, kiss her, hook up with her sexually and get the relationship back together.

She may initiate the reconciliation by asking for it, or by moving in for a hug or kiss, but you shouldn't expect that from every woman.

Every woman is different.

Some women don't want to make the first move because they fear you might reject them.

Other women don't want to make the first move because they want to see if you now have the confidence to do it.

So, you can't rely on just waiting for her to chase you in each and every moment.

Sometimes, you have to put your balls on the line and make a move.

You need to adapt to your unique situation and do what is required to get her back, before you lose her forever.

On that noteâ□|

One of the biggest mistakes a guy can make is not doing anything to improve himself after a break up.

He just sits around hoping his ex will chase him and initiate the reconciliation, but he never gets to the point where he fully understands what she wanted him to change about himself (e.g. because he believes everything that went wrong in the relationship was her fault, he doesnâ□□t know how to change, he doesnâ□□t want to change and just expects her to accept him as he is).

Yet, it doesnâ□□t work that way.

For a woman to want to get back with a man, she wants to see that heâ□□s at a different level than before.

If she sees him in person and discovers that nothing about him has really changed and his behavior doesn't make her feel differently, then sheâ□□s not going to feel very motivated to get back together with him.

Instead, she may think something like, *â□□If I had any doubts about breaking up with him before, Iâ□□m sure about it now and know that I made the right decision to leave him. Heâ□□s waiting for me to come running back to him, even though heâ□□s still turning me off in the same, subtle ways that drove us apart in the first place. I guess heâ□□s not mature enough as a man to figure it out on his own. Iâ□□m definitely better off without him. I've got to find myself a guy who is already a man.*â□□

She then focuses her energy on getting over her ex, moving on and meeting another guy who can make her feel the way she really wants to feel when in a relationship (i.e. feminine, girly, respectful of her man, sexually attracted, happy, in love).

So, don't let that happen to you.

It's actually easy to make a woman feel feminine and girly around you, feel sexually attracted, happy and in love with you.

That is so damn easy.

In fact, it takes less work than most guys realize because it's mostly about you taking back the position of power and letting her be your girl.

When you make her ex feel the way she really wants to feel around a guy, she will naturally begin to chase you a little and either initiate the reconciliation or hint at wanting one.

On to tip #2â€¦

2. Reactivate Her Feelings in Person or On a Phone Call, But Don't Try to Get Her Back

This is very important if you want her to chase you and try to get you back because she feels attracted to you and wants you again, but notices that you're not even trying to get her to commit to a relationship of any kind.

She then feels compelled to either tell you that she wants a relationship again, or she hints at it and hopes that you make the moves to get you and her back together.

However, please noteâ€¦

The best way to properly reactivate a woman's feelings for you is on a phone call or in person.

You can't properly re-attract an ex's feelings via text if she is turned off by you, doesn't know that you've changed and isn't interested in getting back with you at this point.

For example: If you just send her random texts (e.g. â€œI just wanted to say hiâ€ or â€œHey, how things?â€), or click like on her social media posts to let her know that you are still around, it's not going to work for most situations.

If you want your ex to have a reason to feel motivated to chase you and initiate a reconciliation, you've got to reactivate her feelings on a phone call or in person, so she can see for herself that not only have you changed, but she now feels differently when she interacts with you.

She feels sparks of respect, attraction and love for who you are now, which makes her feel motivated to want to make something happen between you and her.

This is why it's so important to interact with her on a phone call or in person, rather than sending her random texts, clicking like on her social media posts or worse, simply ignoring her and hoping that she comes back on her own.

So many guys lose their ex girlfriend (or wife) by waiting around and hoping that she will call him up one day and say, â€œI must have been crazy to break up with you. Can you ever forgive me? I want you back! Please give me another chance with you.â€

Unfortunately, many guys wait for weeks, months and in some cases, YEARS, before they decide that she's not coming back and they've lost her.

This is why I've never recommended (and never will) simply ignoring your ex woman after the break up, in the hope that she comes back.

It's true that some women do come back if they are ignored after a break up, but it only happens if a woman is still in love with her ex and already regrets breaking up with him.

In almost all other instances, if a woman has disconnected with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy and then broken up with him, she's not going to be very impressed by his actions.

She will aim to hook up with a new guy as quickly as she can, to avoid feeling the pain of being ignored, or because she wants to get revenge on her ex for not even trying to get her back after the break up and simply ignoring her and hoping that she does all the work.

Of course, when a guy tries to get his ex back after a break up, he needs to be CALM and CONFIDENT about it.

So many guys lose their ex girlfriend (or wife) by desperately chasing her after a break up.

That doesn't work.

You have to quickly regain control of your emotions after a break up and then calmly and confidently get her back like a real man.

If you try to hide behind texts or by showing interest from a distance (e.g. clicking like on her social media posts), your ex will most likely be unimpressed and uninspired to chase you and get you back.

Instead, she may just roll her eyeballs and think something like, â€œWhy does he even bother texting me if he's not going to get me back? He's just wasting my time and his. I'm not going to be his friend via textâ€ and she then stops replying to his texts.

Alternatively, she may think, â€œWhy does he keep clicking â€œlikeâ€ on my posts? Does he think I will be impressed? Does he think that I'll message him and ask for him to give us another chance? Is he trying to stay on my mind, so I can't move on? Well, I'll show him. I'll hook up with a new guy and post up photos of me and him on datesâ€ then, we'll see if he clicks like on that.â€œ

If you want your ex back, I recommend that you approach it like a real man, rather than hiding behind texts or cutting off contact and hoping that she makes all the moves.

[image: Be a man and re-attract her]

She might be a little resistant initially, but if you can maintain your confidence and also attract her with your masculine approach, her guard will come down and she will feel attracted.

You've just got to be prepared to take a risk and make it happen.

You can't wait around for her to make things super easy for you by chasing you and begging you for another chance, even though she has little to no feelings for you right now.

You've got to MAKE HER have feelings for you again.

The best, easiest and quickest way to do that is to interact with her (over the phone and in person) and reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

When you do that, her thought processes change and she opens back up to being with you.

You have to be active about getting her back, even if you are hoping to make her take all the risk to chase you and initiate the reconciliation.

To make her want you back, you've got to make her feel so much respect and sexual attraction for the new you (on a phone call and in person), that she can't stop herself from wanting you again.

How else can you make her want you?

3. Let Her See That You're Living a Fun Life Without Her Via Your Social Media Account

If you're worried about contacting your ex, this is a great way to help make sure her guard is down and she is open to you again when you contact her.

Let her see that you're living a fun life without her by posting up photos of you having fun with other people, looking confident and seeming totally happy and fine without her.

Some guys are worried about doing that because they assume it will make her angry and want to get revenge by doing the same.

Yet, that's not how a woman's attraction for a man works.

Women are attracted to confident men who are loved or liked by others and who don't need her approval or encouragement to feel good about themselves.

When your ex sees that you've been enjoying life without her, it is absolutely guaranteed that she will feel some respect and attraction for the new you.

However, be warned!

She may ACT like she is annoyed by it, not impressed by it or even turned off by it.

Why?

Women do that to test a guy's confidence.

Will he suddenly lose confidence in himself because she isn't encouraging him to be happy and live his life?

Will he apologize for making her feel that way (i.e. the pretend anger, disappointed or disgust she is feeling), when she actually feels respect and attraction for him based on how confident and happy she seems without him?

Will he suddenly tell her that he's been sad, missing her and that he wasn't really happy in those photos?

Will he submit to her fake protests, even though she wants him to be a confident, dominant, free thinking man?

Women are always looking to see how men react to their tests.

The men that women respect, feel attracted to and love the most are those who do not fall for the tests that women put them through, but who also still treat a woman well and with respect.

It's not about being arrogant, trying to hurt her or being rude to her.

That's not what women respect or love.

Instead, it's about standing on your own two feet and not needing her approval or encouragement to continue standing and feeling confident and happy about yourself and your life.

So many guys get this wrong when trying to get an ex woman back.

For example: Sometimes a guy might start posting photos of himself looking sad and lonely on his social media pages.

He might say to himself, "When she sees how miserable I really am without her and that my life has come to a standstill since we broke up, she will realize just how deep my love for her really was. Then she'll regret breaking up with me and she will come running back. She will see that I care more about her than anything else and that I need her to be happy. She will realize that no other guy would love her like I do. She will know that I am completely dependent on her for my happiness and that will make her feel special."

Yet, that's just not how a woman's attraction works.

A woman feels attracted to a man who is happy, fulfilled and having a great life without her and feels turned off by a man who sits around feeling sorry for himself and doesn't have much else going on in his life.

Why?

Basically because, when a guy can't move forward in his life without his woman giving him the emotional support that he needs to cope, he comes across as being emotionally weak, needy and insecure, which are qualities that instinctively turn women off.

So, when a woman comes across social media posts from her ex like, "Feeling sad today," or "Had a really boring weekend," or "Same crap, different day," or sees sad, lonely photos of him, she's not going to think, "Aw! he's taking our break up so hard. That must mean he still loves me so much. What have I done? I need to initiate a reconciliation with him right away, before it's too late and I lose him forever!"

Instead, she will likely think something like, "He's being so wimpy and weak-minded. I'm so glad I'm not stuck in a relationship with him anymore. He's clearly not a real man. What was I doing in a relationship with him? I need to find myself a MAN!"

Her guard then goes up and it becomes even more difficult for him to get her back.

So, if you want to encourage your ex to chase you and initiate a reconciliation, you need to get to the point where you're living a fun, exciting life without her and then let her know all about it, via your social media account.

For example: You can do that by posting photos of yourself on your social media pages doing some of the following things:

- Partying and having fun with new friends that she doesn't know yet.
- Doing something exciting you've always wanted to do but have been putting off (e.g. go skydiving, white river rafting, on safari in Africa).
- Traveling in exotic locations while having fun with the locals.
- Having fun doing group activities that include men and women (e.g. mixed sports team, group exercise in the park, wine tasting nights, hiking clubs, pub crawls around your city, salsa dancing classes).

When she can see for herself that you're living a fun life without her, something amazing happens:

Suddenly, you seem more attractive to her and she begins to think, "I thought he'd be feeling sad and lonely without me and that he'd be trying to get me back. Instead, he's having a fun time. I never imagined he was so cool. Why wasn't he more like this when we were together? I want to be a part of the fun life he's living now that he's so much more confident in himself. Hold on! what am I saying? I can't help myself. I want him back."

That's how a woman's attraction really works.

It's not how a woman will SAY that it works because women don't want to tell guys, "Hey, the more confident and independent you behave, the more we find you attractive."

Instead, women go around SAYING that they want men to essentially bow at their feet, buy them gifts, worship the ground they walk on and be super polite, nice, caring and attentive 24/7.

Yet, in reality, women are most attracted to good men who love them and find them attractive, but don't actually need them.

Next tipâ□|

4. Call Her to Make Her Smile, Have a Laugh Together and Then Get Back to Your Life

You can sit around waiting for your ex to chase you and initiate the reconciliation, but if you donâ□□t re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you first, chances are high that you will be waiting for a long time, if not forever.

On the other hand, if you get her on a phone call with you right away, make her smile, laugh and feel excited about talking to you again and then get back to your life and ignore her for a few days, she wonâ□□t be able to stop herself from chasing you.

For example: Imagine youâ□□ve just been talking to your ex on the phoneâ□|

She was laughing, smiling and feeling good.

You then said something like, â□□Okay Jenny, it's been great talking to you. I do miss you at times, but I also accept that we've broken up. I'm heading out to (something cool that you're about to do with friends), but maybe we can say hi again sometime soon. I hope you have a great week.â□□

She will then see that you really have changed (i.e. youâ□□re confident and emotionally independent) and her guard will naturally come down.

Soon enough, she will most likely send you a text to say hi (or text you about something random) and that will be your cue to call her and arrange a meet up.

Remember: Not all women have the courage to openly chase you because they're afraid that you might reject them.

So, if she doesn't text you or call you after 3-4 days, just call her again and get her smiling, laughing and enjoying talking to you again.

Then, when you know that she's feeling attracted and open, suggest catching up in person as friends.

At the meet up, you need to continue building on her initial feelings of respect and attraction for you, until she either tells you that she wants to give the relationship another chance, or she hints at it (e.g. hugs you, tells you that she has missed you, is open to kissing you, touches you, says that she likes the new you) and then leaves it up to you to make it happen.

Donâ□□t Let Her Slip Away!

It would be ideal if your ex came chasing after you and begged for a reconciliation, but you shouldn't have that as your only option to get her back.

Every woman is different and many women simply don't have the courage to risk being rejected by their ex guy, so they wait for him to make a move.

If he doesn't, she decides to move on, rather than risking the potential to be rejected and then be the one who is hurting after the break up.

So, rather than losing her forever, just make her come back by sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again by interacting with her every chance you get from now on.

Then, when she either initiates the reconciliation or opens up to it, you will be sure itâ€™s because sheâ€™s more in love with you now than ever before.

You have made her feel new, exciting feelings that she just can't resist.

It feels good to her.

She wants it.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get Your Ex Back When She Doesn't Want You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

So, how can you get an ex back who doesn't want you?

You want her.

You feel attracted to her, you feel love for her and in your mind, it's not over.

You want her back.

You want to have a relationship with her again, but she doesn't want to have anything to do with you.

She's over it.

How can you get her back?

Here are my 5 tips to help you get her back in this kind of situation...

1. Understand what will make her want you

[image: Understand what will make her want you]

When a guy wants a woman back who doesn't want him, he will sometimes make mistakes such as:

- Begging and pleading for another chance.
- Explaining that he has changed or that he will change and she just needs to give him a chance to prove it.
- Being really nice to her all of a sudden.
- Giving her lots of space and just getting out of her way, waiting for weeks or months and hoping that she changes her mind.

If you've tried any of those approaches to get your ex back, you will know that they don't work.

Sometimes it can work and a guy will get another chance initially, maybe for a few days or maybe even for a few weeks or a few months, but once a woman has learned her lesson, she usually doesn't want to keep making that same mistake.

What is the lesson?

She gave him another chance and he wasn't able to be the sort of man that makes her feel respect, attraction and love.

He just wasn't able to live up to what he promised or the expectations that she had of him.

So, what will make a woman want a guy in that type of situation?

The place to start is by creating a spark of attraction.

For a man and a woman to want to be in a relationship with each other, there needs to be mutual attraction.

If you feel attracted to her and you love her so much, but that's just not enough to get an ex back.

She also has to feel attracted to you too.

She doesn't have to be totally in love with you for you to get her back.

Instead, you've just got to make her feel that spark of attraction.

You've got to make her feel that special thing that brings a man and a woman together and keeps them together.

When it comes to getting an ex woman back, most guys are in a situation where they feel attracted to her, but she doesn't feel the same way.

She doesn't have strong feelings for him anymore or she doesn't have any feelings for him anymore.

So, if she doesn't want anything to do with him, he has to start where it's most important â a spark of attraction.

Luckily for us men, we can literally create feelings of sexual, romantic and loving attraction inside of a woman.

We can literally create that by how we are talking to the woman, how we are behaving, the way that we're using our body language and how we are reacting to her.

For example: If a guy is interacting with his ex woman and he's being insecure and his body language appears nervous, then she's not going to feel attracted to him.

The reason why is that women are not attracted to the emotional weakness in men.

On the other hand, if a guy is interacting with his ex woman and he is displaying confidence in his body language and how he's talking to her, how he's behaving and how he's reacting to her, then she's going to feel some attraction for him.

If he also gets her laughing and smiling, she's going to feel more attracted to him.

If he makes her feel girly in comparison to his emotional masculinity, then she's going to feel even more attracted to him.

If he starts being charming and charismatic, she's going to feel even more attracted to him.

So, if you're in a situation where your ex doesn't want you, you have to focus on the one thing that will make her want you.

That is, a spark of sexual attraction.

If you can create that when you're interacting with her, then she's going to look at you differently.

She's going to stop focusing on the negatives and start looking at you in a more positive light.

She's going to start thinking, "Well, hang on. He's not so bad after all. I'm actually feeling good around him now. Why am I being so harsh on him? Why is my guard up so high? Maybe I can just joke around with him a little bit. Maybe I can flirt with him. Maybe it is okay to hug. Hang on a second. Why am I feeling so drawn to him all of a sudden?"

That's what you need to do.

You need to focus on making her have feelings for you again.

When you do that, she starts to want you.

She changes her mind because you've changed how she feels.

2. Become emotionally attractive again

During a breakup and after a breakup, some guys become emotionally unattractive to their ex.

That means that they become insecure, they become self-doubting, they become needy, clingy, desperate and so on.

All of those things are emotionally unattractive to a woman.

Some guys don't react in that way, so they're able to be emotionally attractive to their ex and get her back.

For example: The guy is able to be confident, emotionally masculine, charismatic and so on. He's able to re-attract his ex.

In other cases, though, where the guy becomes emotionally unattractive and he loses control of his emotions, she won't want him back and as a result, he'll be on his own.

Some guys are able to get over the pain of a breakup immediately, some guys need a few days, some guys need a week, some guys need a month and some guys don't get over the pain of being rejected and dumped for YEARS.

It sticks with them. It stays with them. It messes with their head.

They lose confidence in themselves, they don't feel as attractive to women anymore and they don't feel worthy.

A guy like that will usually worry about getting into a relationship again because he will fear that it will end in the same kind of way.

Each guy is different and your case is unique and how you feel is unique, but if you want to get her back, you must get back to a point where you are emotionally attractive again.

You can interact with your ex and she can sense that you feel good about yourself, you have a lot of confidence in yourself and you have the confidence to joke around with her and make her laugh and feel attracted to you.

She has to get the sense that you aren't lost and you aren't losing it on the inside, you aren't a total mess on the inside.

You are strong, you believe in yourself, you're confident, you feel good about yourself and as a result, she can feel attracted to you.

3. Understand that most guys who get their ex woman back start out in your situation

Pretty much every guy that I've helped to get a woman back has started out in a situation where she doesn't feel attracted to him, she's not feeling much respect for him, she's not in love with him, she's over it, she doesn't want to be in a relationship.

Pretty much every guy starts at that point because most guys don't come looking for help on how to get their ex back when their ex is still attracted to them and still in love with them and still wants to be with them.

The guys who actually need the help are in your situation.

Your situation is unique, the breakup is unique, the connection between you and her is unique, but the solution is the same.

You've got to be able to re-attract her.

If you don't make her feel a spark of attraction again and you don't get her looking at you with attraction in her eyes, then she's not going to be feeling drawn to you.

She's going to have her guard up and she's going to say no when you try to get back with her.

She's going to say things like, "I just don't feel the same way anymore. I'm sorry. It's over. You just have to deal with it. You have to leave me alone. Stop contacting me," and so on.

Guys who get their ex back (who started out in the same or similar position to you) are the ones who focus on making her have feelings for him again.

Sometimes a guy will get his ex back simply by walking away and she will then not be able to handle the pain of a breakup.

She won't be able to deal with the fact that he's not contacting her anymore.

That is true, but those women are the minority.

The vast majority of women do not react in that way.

They simply don't care enough about their ex anymore because they don't have enough or any feelings for him anymore.

They simply move on.

So, if you want to get her back, tip number 4 is very important.

4. Give her the attraction experience that she really wants

Some guys make the mistake of trying to get their ex woman back while behaving in a way that is not attractive to her.

For example: A guy will just send neutral or friendly texts to her, which won't create a spark, or a guy will beg and plead and try to convince and explain and promise that things will be different.

As a result, he'll come across as being desperate and she won't feel attracted to that.

If you want to get her back, you have to understand what type of attraction experience she really wants in a relationship with a man.

For example: Sometimes a woman will break up with a guy because he's just too soft. He's a bit too much of a wimp for her.

She can walk all over him. He's too emotionally sensitive.

She might not tell him about that exactly when she's breaking up with him.

She might say that she just doesn't have feelings anymore or she doesn't want to be with him anymore, but what is going to get her back is if he can show her that he really has changed.

More importantly, she now feels differently around him.

It's not about him saying to her, "Hey – I've changed. I've manned up. I've become more confident now. I won't let you walk all over me. Please give me another chance."

That is not going to be attractive to her.

It's going to appear desperate and she might also see that his efforts are fake.

She will feel as though he's just putting on a front to try to act more manly and act more confident to hopefully get another chance with her.

A woman doesn't want to have that feeling in a relationship where a guy is basically doing anything and everything to please her.

What she wants is a natural feeling of respect, attraction and love to happen when she interacts with her guy.

She interacts with him and he is different now and as a result, she feels differently.

He can now give her the type of attraction experience that she really wanted all along.

He doesn't have to tell her that he can do it.

She can feel it on her own.

All of a sudden, she starts to smile.

She starts to look at him in a more positive light.

She starts to feel drawn to him.

She can see that things are different now.

She feels differently around him.

She feels attracted.

She feels some respect for him again.

She's starting to feel love for him again.

As a result, she starts to want him again.

She opens back up to having a relationship with him.

5. Make her want the relationship rather than pressuring her into it

[image: Make her want the relationship, rather than trying to pressure her into it]

A big mistake that guys make is that they assume the way to get a woman back is to ask for another chance, is to talk about the relationship and say, "Hey – let's give it a go. Let's work on it. Things can be different. I promise. Just let me show it to you. Let me prove it to you."

That is not the approach that works to get a woman back.

It will sometimes work on women who don't have much experience with relationships or women who can't deal with going through a breakup.

That will sometimes work.

Yet, for most women, they'll just say no when a guy is trying to pressure them into a relationship, when they don't even have feelings for him anymore.

If she doesn't feel respect, attraction and love, she is over it. She doesn't want to be in the relationship anymore.

So, when her guy is saying to her like, "Please just give me a chance. Let me show it to you. I promise that things will be different. I've changed. Things are going to be different," and so on, it just doesn't work.

She doesn't feel it.

She's thinking, "Well, it's just too little too late. I don't feel much or anything for you. You want to deal with me, but no – I'm not going to give you another chance."

What you need to do is make her want the relationship rather than trying to pressure her into it.

The only way to make a woman want the relationship is to focus on making her have feelings for you.

Once you've created a spark of sexual attraction inside of her and romantic attraction, you then need to build on that.

Every time you interact with her, use it as an opportunity to build on her feelings for you.

Some guys are able to get their woman back immediately.

Sometimes it takes a couple of interactions and sometimes it takes a few interactions.

Whatever the case is with you, it doesn't matter.

You've just got to focus on what works.

You've got to focus on her feelings because that's all she really cares about now.

She doesn't want to be with you anymore, so she's not going to care about your feelings unless you make her have feelings for you, unless the feelings are mutual.

Learn More?

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more or if you need more help to get your ex back, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, I will take you through the rapid process of becoming emotionally attractive again.

Not only will you get your confidence back with her, but you will also know exactly what to say and do to make her have feelings for you as well.

You will be able to get her to meet up with you, get her to hook up with you, get her to want the relationship again.

This works for a guy even if he starts out at a point where his ex woman hates him and doesn't want anything to do with him.

It also works if her feelings are absolutely dead.

You can bring her feelings back to life.

As a man, you can literally create feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside of a woman.

You Can Change How She Feels About You

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that it's understandable that you might feel a bit down about the fact that she doesn't want you at the moment.

However, you can turn that around.

You can make her feel attracted to you again.

You can make her feel something for you again.

When you interact with her and you make her feel attracted to you and you see the changes in her body language and behavior and energy, it'll all make sense to you.

You will see that you actually have a lot of control over how she feels about you.

Women are mostly attracted to how a man makes her feel when he interacts with her.

If he's being emotionally attractive, she is going to feel attracted to him.

If he's being emotionally unattractive, she's going to feel turned off.

For example: If he's being insecure and self-doubting and he doesn't really feel worthy of her anymore, she's not going to feel attracted to that.

However, if he's being confident and he's making her laugh and smile and he's building on her feelings for him when he's interacting with her, she's going to feel attracted to him.

It doesn't matter if you start out at a point where your ex doesn't want you anymore.

You can make her want you again.

You can create a spark, so stay strong.

Believe in yourself.

Focus on making her have feelings for you again and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

5 Tips on How to Get Your Ex Back When She Has Moved On

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

So, how can you get your ex back if she has moved on?

In this video, I'm going to give you 5 tips on how to get your ex-girlfriend or ex-wife back if she has moved on after the breakup with you.

1. Interrupt the process of her moving on

So, what does it mean to interrupt the process of her moving on?

It's not about being needy and pestering her and saying, "Hey – give me another chance!" or saying, "Hey – please let me show you that things will be different," or, "Hey – I still have strong feelings for you. Can we give this another try? Do you think you're going to break up with the new guy soon? Are you missing me?" and so on.

It's not about doing those sorts of things.

[image: Getting an ex back who has moved on]

Instead, it's about interacting with her and creating a spark of attraction inside of her, then letting that grow inside of her as she thinks about you and misses you.

[image: Getting an ex back who has moved on]

After the call, she then has to live with the fact that she has interacted with you and felt a spark of attraction.

She felt some respect for you.

She felt some love.

She now feels differently about you than she did when she broke up with you.

When she broke up with you, she thought that it was over.

She thought that she was done and that there was no chance that you and her were going to get back together.

Yet, now that she's interacted with you, it doesn't feel like it's over.

It feels like there's something between you because she feels that attraction.

She's feeling drawn to you.

There's something there.

Now, if your ex has moved on with a new guy or she's just very happy without you, it might seem like it's almost impossible to get her to change her mind.

Yet, what you need to do is focus on changing how she feels about you rather than trying to change her mind about her decision to break up with you.

Her decision not to be with you is simply based on how she feels about you.

When she broke up with you, she felt a certain way about you.

When you interact with her again and you make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she's going to feel differently about you.

She's going to start looking at you in a more positive light.

When you do that, you interrupt the process of her moving on.

She thought that it was over.

She thought that it was finished.

She thought that there was nothing between you and her, yet there is.

She is thinking about you now.

She's missing you.

She's thinking about your positives.

She's thinking about things about you that she likes.

She's thinking about how the new you makes her feel now.

You are now able to interact with her and make her feel attracted in ways that you didn't before, when you were in a relationship with her.

You're not the same guy that she broke up with.

You have improved.

You've become a better man and when you interact with her and you let her experience that and see that she actually does feel differently about you now, what happens is that you interrupt the process of her moving on.

2. Make her feel attracted to the new you

To get an ex back who has moved on, you absolutely must interact with her and make her feel attracted to the new and improved you.

Unfortunately, many guys struggle to heal from the pain of being dumped.

As a result, they lose confidence in themselves and when they interact with their ex woman, she can sense that or pick up on it and it turns her off.

She then either doesn't want to talk to him again, blocks him or asks to be left alone.

He then loses even more confidence in himself and not only can't he get her back, but he also struggles to attract a new woman when he wants one.

So, what is the solution in a case like that?

Unfortunately, a lot of guys assume that the solution is to just stop contacting her, stop contacting her for maybe 30 or 60 days and during that time, a guy hopes that he will heal and he'll be ready to interact with her and get her back.

Yet, what I've found by helping guys for many years now on how to get an ex back, is that guys who use the same strategy of not contacting their ex woman usually find it very difficult to get over her during the No Contact period.

What happens is that they spend most of their time missing her.

They really can't focus very well on other things in life because they're just thinking about her most of the time.

He wants to get back with her.

He misses her.

He is worried that she is going to forget him, or that she's going to move on without him.

As a result, he doesn't fully heal from the breakup.

His confidence, his happiness, his sense of identity and sense of worthiness is attached to her wanting him back.

Yet, when she doesn't contact him during those 30 or 60 days, he starts to lose confidence in himself.

He starts to think, "Well, maybe I can't get her back. Maybe she doesn't want me. Maybe I'm not good enough for her."

As a result, he isn't healing and becoming stronger by not contacting her.

He's just becoming more and more insecure.

Then, if he does actually contact her, she will be able to pick up on the fact that he is missing her and he lacks confidence and he doesn't fully feel worthy of her.

She will sense that in the way that he's talking and in the way that he's coming across to her.

Women are very good at picking up whether or not a guy is confident.

If you think about the example of guys meeting women for the first time, women can sense very quickly whether a guy lacks confidence in himself simply by observing his body language.

If a woman isn't sure whether a guy is confident or not, all she really has to do is give him an unimpressed look while she's talking to him and most guys will panic at that point when they're interacting with a woman.

They'll think, "Oh, no! I'm losing her!"

Then the guy will start trying to impress her and she'll realize, "Okay. He isn't so confident after all. He was just acting confident when, in reality, he's putting on a front of confidence and hoping to get a chance with me."

The same thing applies when getting an ex back.

If you're putting on a fake front of confidence, your ex can easily test you and find out whether you truly are confident without her or not.

For example: If you call her up on the phone, she can act indifferent.

She can be cold and distant and even rude, to see how you're going to react.

A confident guy will react by laughing at her and the situation and turning it into something to laugh about together.

For example: He might laugh and then say, "Oh, gee. Well, you're very cheery today, aren't you? You're so much fun to talk to. This is great."

Alternatively, he might say, "Oh, yeah. I forgot. You're my ex-girlfriend. Oh, right. That's why you have to be really cold and mean and bitchy and rude to me. Right. I get it," and have a laugh with her about that.

Alternatively, he might laugh and say, "Hey. It's okay for us to have a quick talk and have a laugh. You don't need to be so serious. Relax. Everything's cool. I'm not trying to get you back. It's all good. So you don't need to put on the mean and nasty ex-girlfriend," or if it's his ex-wife, "The mean and nasty ex-wife attitude.”

Alternatively, he might laugh say, “Oh, someone’s in a bad mood today. Jeez.”

Essentially, by saying something like that to her, she can see for herself that he can handle the fact that she’s being cold, distant or even rude to him.

He doesn’t become angry.

He doesn’t lose confidence in himself and he doesn’t seek pity from her for how he is feeling as a result of how she is behaving.

Instead, he turns what could be an awkward or uncomfortable moment into something that they can laugh about together and more importantly, something that can make her feel a bit more easygoing and lighthearted as she talks to him.

As a result, her guard comes down.

She sees that it’s possible for him and her to laugh together and feel good around each other.

Therefore, she is more open to meeting up with him in person.

She can see for herself that if she meets up with him in person, it’s most likely not going to be awkward and stressful and uncomfortable.

He has the type of confidence to turn an awkward or uncomfortable situation into something that they can both laugh about together.

She thinks to herself that, “Hey...he’s not so bad after all. Things aren’t so awkward between us.”

Then when a guy meets up with his woman in person, he needs to make sure that he creates a spark of attraction in person.

He needs to make sure that he is building on her feelings by the way that he talks to her and interacts with her.

He needs to create that spark of sexual and romantic attraction, that special thing that brings a man and a woman together and keeps them together.

It doesn’t matter if she had already moved on or if she had no interest in him when he initially contacted her.

[image: Getting an ex back who has moved on]

What matters is how he now makes her feel when he interacts with her.

Does he create a spark of sexual and romantic attraction?

Does he create that special feeling that brings a man and a woman together and keeps them together?

If he creates that when he interacts with his ex, she will feel drawn to him.

Her guard will come down and she will want to explore her new feelings for him.

That is how a confident guy gets his ex woman back.

He creates a spark of attraction.

He has the confidence to make it happen.

He’s not afraid of any potential initial resistance.

He makes her have feelings for him again and he confidently guides her back into a relationship with him.

On the other hand, a guy who lacks confidence in his worthiness of his ex will find it difficult to deal with her coldness or distance or rudeness on a phone call.

She will be able to pick up on the fact that he doesn't feel confident when he's talking to her.

As a result, she will lose even more respect and attraction for him.

Women do not feel respect and attraction for guys who are emotionally weak.

Women feel respect and attraction for emotional strength in men.

So, when you're interacting with your ex, you must ensure that you are displaying confidence.

Confidence is one of the things that makes up emotional attractiveness.

Emotional attractiveness is what women place most importance on.

It's essentially how you make her feel when you interact with her.

If a woman is interacting with a guy who's being insecure and self-doubting, then she's going to feel awkward and tense and turned off by that.

On the other hand, if a woman is interacting with a guy who is being confident and he's exuding his natural charisma by being himself and believing in himself and he's also being emotionally masculine, then she's going to naturally feel attracted to him.

Being emotionally masculine is essentially about having that emotional toughness rather than being emotionally sensitive.

So, with tip number 2 here, make her feel attracted to the new you.

If you go in and do that, you need to make sure that you prepare yourself to attract her in the ways that were lacking when you were in a relationship with her.

For example: Sometimes a guy will be in a relationship with a woman and he'll become too neutral. He'll treat her more like a friend and like a buddy, like one of the guys.

He won't really treat her like his woman and make her feel girly and feminine around him.

As a result, the spark between them will start to die out.

It'll start to get boring.

The sex life will dry up and she just won't be as affectionate and loving anymore.

So, when he interacts with her again, he must ensure that he's not being that neutral guy she broke up with.

He's got to be the sort of guy who makes her feel that spark of attraction, that special something that happens when a man and a woman interact with each other and the man is being manly.

As a result, he allows the woman to be feminine and girly.

Women don't go around admitting that they want that, but if you watch women who are the happiest with a guy and they're most excited and turned on, it's when they're allowed to be a feminine, girly woman around him. So that's one example.

Another example is where a guy is being insecure in a relationship and too emotionally sensitive.

When he interacts with his ex woman again, he's going to need to make sure that she senses that he has that emotional toughness now.

He's not the emotionally sensitive guy that she dumped.

3. Don't be her text buddy when she needs comfort

A big mistake that I see guys make when they're trying to get an ex woman back who has moved on is that they will stay in touch with her by text as a friend.

They'll be her text buddy.

Whenever she's feeling a little bit down, she'll send a text and he will reply and talk to her like a friend, say, "Hey – how you been?"

She'll talk about what she's been up to and he'll say something like, "Oh, that's really nice. That's great."

He'll just talk to her in that neutral way. He won't be interacting with her in a way that creates a spark.

Sometimes he might joke around with her and have a bit of a laugh back and forth via text, but it never really goes anywhere.

He'll try to continue texting with her and eventually, she will stop.

The text will go cold and she'll stop replying.

Alternatively, she might reply to some texts, but not all.

He will essentially be placed in the friend zone with his ex.

So, if you want to get your ex back who has moved on, I don't recommend that you remain her text buddy.

It's okay to text back and forth with her a little bit, but make sure that it actually gets to a phone call.

For example: If you're texting back and forth with her and it's going well, just hit call.

The thing is, she may or may not answer the phone. That doesn't matter.

It doesn't matter if you call and she doesn't answer the first time.

If you call her and she does answer, great – get on a call, re-attract her, get her to meet up with you and get her back into a relationship with you, get her to break up with the new guy.

If you try to call her and she doesn't answer, don't worry about it.

Just go through the process again.

Interact with her, press call and hopefully, the next time she answers.

The reason why I say call is that you have to be able to let her see that she feels differently when she interacts with you.

She hears your voice over the phone and she can sense the changes in you.

Whatever mistakes you were making in the relationship that were turning her off, you have now changed those things about yourself and become a better man.

You're able to attract her in ways that you weren't able to do in the relationship or you were able to do initially, but you stopped doing later on in the relationship.

When she interacts with you on the phone and you're making her laugh and smile, she then sees that interacting with you in person isn't going to feel awkward.

It's most likely going to be fun.

She can also see that when she interacts with you on the phone, you're not pressuring her to get back into a relationship with you.

You're simply talking to her and she's feeling good.

She's feeling attracted to you.

She likes the new you and as a result, she opens up to wanting to meet up with you in person.

It may seem comfortable and easy to just stick with text and be patient, but what I've seen by helping hundreds of guys to get their ex back is that being a text buddy just doesn't work.

You've got to move things forward.

When you are interacting with her in person and you're getting her to hug you and kiss you, that's when things are changing.

She is feeling attracted to you in person, there's a physical connection between you and her again and if she has a new guy, then she's going back to her life missing you.

She is around him, thinking about you, comparing him to you, thinking about how much you make her feel attracted now and as a result, she starts to feel drawn to you.

She starts to feel like maybe it isn't over between you and her.

Maybe she should catch up with you again.

Maybe she did make a mistake by breaking up with you.

Maybe you and her should get back together and give it another try.

4. Make her new guy react in an unattractive way

When you interact with your ex and you actively make her feel attracted to you again, her behavior around him is most likely going to change.

She may also tell him that you and her have been interacting lately and she's feeling a bit confused.

As a result, he'll most likely react in an unattractive way.

He may start to become insecure, controlling, jealous and needy.

Then she starts comparing him to you and realizing that he isn't so good after all.

She's feeling turned off by him now.

He is feeling threatened by you because she has feelings for you again.

What you and her had is not over in her mind.

She's starting to feel drawn to you again.

She's confused.

This is why it's so important to interact with her and make her feel attracted to you again.

One of the reasons why is that when a woman breaks up with a guy, she's usually over it. She doesn't feel respect, attraction and love for him and she wants to be out of the relationship.

So, when she breaks up with him and he stops contacting her, most women just use that time to move on.

They don't really care about the fact that their ex isn't contacting them. It doesn't really matter.

In your case, if you're watching this video and your ex has already moved on, you most likely know that.

You most likely tried not contacting her and hoping that she would come back and she didn't.

Alternatively, you may have made the mistake of constantly begging and pleading and chasing and trying to get her back in that desperate way, which also doesn't work.

What does work to get a woman back is where after a breakup, you give her 3 to 7 days of space.

During that time, you improve yourself, you get back to an emotionally attractive place, then you interact with her, you re-attract her and you guide her through the rest of the ex back process.

You make her want the relationship, you reconcile, you get back together, you stay together.

That is what works.

So, if you're watching this video and your ex has already moved on, you most likely did not use that approach.

You most likely went down the route of either ignoring or you were the needy, desperate, insecure, begging, "Please, please, please" type of ex.

As you would know, both of those approaches don't work.

Now that she has moved on without you, you need to make sure that from this moment onwards, you focus on what works.

What works is making her feel attracted to you again, is creating a spark of attraction inside of her and letting that grow as she thinks about you and misses you.

If you do that while she's with a new guy, he will most likely see the changes in her behavior and then react in an unattractive way.

For example: He becomes jealous, needy, insecure or controlling.

Then she starts to think about you in a more positive light.

She starts to think that, "Hang on. Maybe this new guy isn't so good after all." Maybe she should just catch up with you and give you another chance.

5. Believe in yourself and get her back

When getting an ex back, it's so important that you believe in yourself.

You believe in your attractiveness to her, you believe in your worthiness of her and you believe that you can do it.

If you don't believe that you can get her back and you don't believe in yourself, then you're not going to take action when you need to.

You're going to miss out on opportunities to text her and call her and meet up with her and get her to hook up with you.

You're going to be doubting yourself.

Additionally, if you don't believe in yourself, then it's going to come across to her.

She's going to be able to pick up on it.

She's going to be able to sense it.

She's going to be able to see it in your body language.

She's going to be able to hear it in your tonality and she's going to be able to pick up on it based on the words that you use and how you react to her.

She's going to be analyzing how you're coming across.

The easiest way to succeed with women is to believe in yourself.

This applies whether you're picking up new women, you're on a date, you're in a relationship or you're getting an ex back.

You have to believe in yourself.

Women respond positively to guys who believe in themselves.

On the other hand, women respond negatively to guys who don't believe in themselves, guys who have self-doubt and insecurity and nervousness.

It's just not attractive to women.

It's not what their primal instinct of attraction is looking for.

Women are looking for confidence in a man.

So, if you're going to get your ex back, you must believe in yourself.

You must believe in your attractiveness to her, your worthiness of her and that you can actually get her back.

You have to believe in yourself.

Learn More?

I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you need more help to get your ex back and you would like to follow a step-by-step process to get her back, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

The steps of the system apply whether an ex woman has moved on or not.

The same rules apply.

You must focus on making her feel attracted to you again.

Do not worry about any other guy in the picture. What matters is how you make her feel.

It's about you and her. Everyone else is irrelevant.

You've got to make her feel attracted to you.

When she's feeling attracted to you, that feeling inside of her will grow.

She'll start to think about you in a more positive light.

When you do that, you also need to make sure that you have the confidence and the knowhow to guide her through the process.

You've got to know what to say and do at each step of the process.

All of that is explained in the program.

You will learn exactly what to say and do to get her back.

You Can Get Her Back

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that it may seem difficult for you to get her back.

You might doubt yourself.

You might feel like it's not possible for you to get her back when she has moved on.

She seems so happy without you. She seems like she doesn't need you. She seems like she's not interested in you anymore.

If you are focusing on that and you believe in that, then you're not going to have the confidence to take action and get her back.

You're also not going to have the confidence to re-attract her when you interact with her.

What you need to understand is that you actually have a lot of control over how you make her feel.

When you interact with her on the phone or in person, you're either going to be turning her off or turning her back on.

For example: If you are interacting with her and you're doubting yourself, being insecure, just being neutral and are not really being your true confident self, then she's not going to feel a spark for that.

However, if you can interact with her and exude your natural charisma by believing in yourself and letting your real self come through, while also being confident and joking around and getting her smiling and laughing, then she's going to feel a spark for you.

[image: Making your ex feel that special something that brings a man and a woman together and keeps them together]

She's going to feel attracted to you.

When you make her feel attracted to you again, she then has to live with the fact that she does feel drawn to you, that it doesn't feel over.

She thought that the relationship was finished, she thought that she was over you, but something has changed inside of her.

She now feels like she's open to getting back with you.

You can make your ex feel that way.

You can make her feel attracted to you again, so make sure that you stay strong.

Make sure that you believe in yourself.

Make sure that when you interact with her, you are ready to re-attract her.

You are at a place where you are emotionally attractive again.

You're able to make her feel that spark.

You're able to make her feel that special something that brings a man and a woman together and keeps them together.

You make her feel that attraction and you have the confidence to get her back and enjoy a better relationship than you had before.

You can do it, so go and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Does the No Contact Rule Work?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

So, does the No Contact Rule work?

The No Contact Rule is about stopping contact with your ex for 30 to 60 days after a breakup.

What I've found is that in most situations, cutting off contact (and ignoring any attempts from her to contact you) is way too much time.

It results in the woman moving on or getting used to not having her ex in her life and being fine without him.

In some cases, a guy can get his ex woman back simply by not contacting her.

She won't be able to deal with the pain of not having him in her life.

She won't be able to deal with the fact that he isn't contacting her.

It'll hurt her so much that he's just not around and she'll decide that she has to get him back even though he turned her off and she didn't want to be with him at the time of the breakup.

However, in most ex back situations, what a woman does is that she holds on to the reasons why she broke up with a guy.

For example: If a woman broke up with a guy because he was too emotionally sensitive, he was too insecure and became jealous and clingy and needy, then she's going to remember that about him.

It doesn't matter if he stops contacting her for 30 or 60 days. She's going to remember him as being that type of guy.

She'll remember him being that type of guy leading up to the breakup, during the breakup and potentially for a little while after the breakup until he stopped contacting her.

In cases like that, if a guy wants to get his woman back, he has to interact with her to provide evidence to her that he's no longer like that.

It's not about calling her and telling her, "Hey. I'm no longer like that. I'm not insecure anymore. I'm confident now."

That doesn't work.

What it's about is interacting with your ex and letting her experience the new and improved you for herself, letting her see that no matter what she says or does when she's talking to you, you don't get thrown off by it.

You don't lose confidence in yourself.

You always remain confident, even if she is being cold, distant or indifferent at times when talking to you.

You're able to get her laughing and smiling and feeling good when she's talking to you on the phone or when she's talking to you in person.

You're able to create that spark of attraction inside of her.

You allow her to see that you are different and more importantly, she feels differently when she interacts with you.

When a guy uses that approach, he can get his ex back so much more quickly.

He doesn't have to sit around waiting for 30 or 60 or 90 days, hoping that she is going to forget about his negative qualities and want him back, purely because he isn't contacting her anymore.

What I've found by working on ex back cases for many years now, is that some women are ready to get back with their ex right away if he changes and re-attracts her, some women need a few days to calm down and be ready to interact with their ex and some women need about a week to calm down and be ready to interact with their ex.

What I've also found is that when a guy waits too long to contact his ex and start the ex back process, she either moves on or she gets used to not having him in her life and she's fine without him or she actually feels disappointed that he didn't follow through and try to get her back.

So, what I've always recommended is that a guy can either get his woman back immediately if he is able to be that confident, emotionally strong man and re-attract her, or he waits 3 to 7 days.

He gives her that space for 3 to 7 days.

In pretty much every case that I've worked on, a guy has not needed to wait more than 3 to 7 days.

Giving her 3 to 7 days proves the point.

It proves that he's not being needy and desperate and trying to chase her down.

He's in control of his emotions and he's giving her some space after the breakup.

After the 3 to 7 days, what a guy needs to do is interact with her and create a spark of attraction.

[image: Create a spark of attraction after 3 to 7 days]

He needs to make her feel something for him again.

He needs to make her feel that renewed sense of respect and attraction.

As a result, she can see for herself that she feels differently about him now. When she interacts with him, she smiles, she laughs, she feels good.

She feels attracted to him.

[image: Be active during the no contact period]

By the way...

When a guy is giving his woman up to a week of space, he doesn't just sit around doing nothing.

What you need to do when you're giving your woman that initial space after the breakup is get yourself back to a point where you are emotionally attractive to her again.

What often happens is that when a guy gets dumped, he becomes emotionally unattractive to his ex.

Being emotionally unattractive is about being insecure, doubting yourself, being emotionally sensitive, appearing rejected, hurt and lost without her.

It's also about extreme behaviors such as begging and pleading, being clingy, being needy and being desperate.

So, to get a woman back, what you need to do is be emotionally attractive to her again.

Being emotionally attractive is about being confident when you interact with her, feeling worthy of her, being able to joke around and make her laugh and make her feel good when she's interacting with you.

Over the years, many guys have contacted me asking, "Why haven't I got my ex back after ignoring her for 30 to 60 days? I thought that using the No Contact Rule was the best way to get an ex woman back.”

The reason why it doesn't work for so many guys is that the woman isn't attracted to him anymore when she breaks up with him.

Without having feelings of attraction for him, she doesn't really have much or any motivation to want to get back with him.

Why would she want to get back into a relationship when she knows that the guy she dumped isn't going to be able to make her feel attracted in the ways that she really wants him to?

So, a question that I've got for you at this point is that if you have been using the No Contact Rule on your ex-girlfriend or ex-wife, has it resulted in you getting her back?

If not, you really have to have a think about what you're going to do instead.

If ignoring her isn't working and she's totally fine without you, then she doesn't really care.

She's fine, she's over it, she's going to move on, she's not really going to be looking back with much positivity.

She's focused on the negatives.

She's sticking with her decision to break up with you and she's moving on.

If you want her back, you have to make her feel something for you again.

In particular, you have to make her feel attracted to you again.

Sexual and romantic attraction is what makes a man and a woman want to be together and want to stay together.

If your ex doesn't feel sexual and romantic attraction for you, then not contacting her is almost certainly not going to result in her running back to you, begging for another chance and wanting to be with you.

However, when you use a different approach and you interact with your ex and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, then she feels like the relationship between you and her isn't finished.

It's not over.

There's something there.

What you need to do at that point is to build on her feelings for you when you interact with her.

You also need to have the confidence to keep going and push through her potential initial resistance and get her back into a relationship.

Sometimes, for example, a guy got dumped because he used to become very agitated and angry at his woman in the relationship, so when he's getting her back, she'll be a little bit resistant, she'll be cold, she'll be distant, she'll act confused as a way of seeing whether or not he's going to become agitated and angry.

In other cases, a woman will be acting distant and cold and confused about her feelings because she wants to test whether or not her guy now has enough confidence in himself, whether he feels worthy of her.

So, if she's acting distant and she notices that her ex guy is doubting himself, she will see that he hasn't really changed.

He still doesn't have the type of confidence that she's looking for in a guy.

He's not going to be able to make her feel attracted in the ways that she really wants him to.

As a result, she won't want to give him another chance.

He has to be able to show her that no matter what she says or does, he doesn't lose confidence in himself.

Over the years, what I've found is that a very small percentage of guys will get their ex back simply by not contacting her.

However, the vast majority of guys who have contacted me and have said, "Hey. I used the No Contact Approach," then go on to say that it didn't work.

She either didn't contact him or she did contact him and she had already moved on, or she had no interest in being with him when she contacted him.

Alternatively, she didn't contact him and simply moved on without him.

So, it's up to you what you want to do.

You should trust your gut instinct.

If your gut instinct tells you that if you stop contacting her, she'll go crazy and miss you and chase you down, then great – go ahead and use the No Contact Rule.

Just stop contacting her.

Let her live in that misery and she'll contact you and then she'll beg for another chance. Fantastic.

Yet, if your gut instinct is telling you that she doesn't feel attracted to you now, she doesn't want to be with you and she's probably not going to care if you stop contacting her, then I don't recommend that you use the No Contact Rule.

You should trust your gut instinct.

If you're pretty much certain that she's not going to care, then what you need to do is make her care.

The only way to make her care is to interact with her and create a spark inside of her.

Make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Make her have some feelings for you again.

When you do that, it then doesn't feel like it's over to her.

There's something there between you and her.

She's feeling something for you again.

She's feeling drawn to you.

She's thinking about you and missing you.

You have reactivated her feelings and as a result, you have opened up the opportunity of having a relationship together again.

All you need to do at that point is be confident and guide her back into a relationship.

Learn More?

I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you need more help to get your ex back and you'd like to follow a step-by-step system to get her back, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you follow the steps of this system, you will get another chance with her.

This is about getting her back now, not waiting around for 30 days, 60 days or 90 days.

This is about getting her back now.

When you watch the program, you will learn what to say and do to re-attract her, to make her have feelings for you again, to bring her guard down and make her want to have a relationship with you again.

Don't Be Afraid to Contact Her and Start the Ex Back Process

You might be worried that she won't be interested in you if you contact her.

She will.

She might act a little bit cold and distant initially, she might have her guard up, but as long as you are focused on making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the new and improved you, then she is going to feel something for you.

She's going to enjoy talking to you.

You're going to get her laughing and smiling and feeling good when she's interacting with you.

You're then going to get her to meet up with you, you're going to make her feel even more attracted, she's going to forgive the mistakes that you made before, she's going to want to explore her new feelings for you, you're going to hook up with her and you're going to get her back.

She's your woman, so get her back.

Don't sit around wasting time, hoping that she's going to come back if your gut instinct is telling you that she's not going to.

If your gut instinct is telling you that she doesn't care and she's going to move on, I recommend that you do something about it.

Go and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get an Ex Back That You Have Children With

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

So, how can you get an ex back that you have children with?

Here are the 6 things that you need to be aware of.

1. Don't think that you will get her back by giving more

Whenever I've helped a man to get his woman back that he has children with, I've found that the approach he's been using is about giving more.

He wants to show her that he's a supportive, generous, loving, caring dad.

He wants to make her life as easy as possible.

He might take on extra chores, do extra things with the kids, pay more money and generally just try to show her that, "Hey, I can do whatever you want. I'll be there and I'll do anything for you."

Now, while that's great and it's very noble, it's not the one main thing that is going to make her want to be back in a relationship with him.

What is?

Sexual attraction.

Without sexual attraction, a woman doesn't feel like there is any reason to be in a sexual relationship with a man.

She will be in a friendship with a man or baby daddy situation, an ex situation with a guy who's friendly and supportive, but if a man wants to be in a sexual romantic relationship with her, there needs to be sexual attraction.

Most of how women feel sexually attracted to a guy is in how he comes across to her, his conversation style, his behavior and how he reacts to her.

So, say for example, a guy catches up with his ex-woman that he has children with and he hands over the children because he's been looking after them.

When they're about to part ways, he and the woman give each other a hug, yet she gives him a hug like just a pat in the back sort of hug.

It's not a warm loving hug.

What can he do to make her feel sexually attracted to him in that moment?

Well, what he needs to do is to make her feel feminine in comparison to his masculinity.

In other words, make her feel like the woman.

Don't make her feel like they're just neutral friends.

Don't make it feel like it's just a friendly pat in the back sort of hug.

So, he gives her a hug goodbye and she gives him a distant, pat on the back hug then he smiles and says, "What? That's all I get? Is that a pat in the back? Come here. Bring it in for a real hug."

[image: Getting a warm hug from your ex that you have children with]

He then gives her a warm real hug and gets her to give him a proper hug.

As a result, she feels more feminine because he's dominating her, but he's not being an asshole about it.

What women want is a man who can dominate them in a loving way.

It's about being dominant, but also being loving and being a good man at the same time.

I'm not saying she gives you pat in the back sort of hug and then you angrily say, "Oh, what's that?" You know, "Give me a proper hug. Come here."

Reacting like that is not going to make her feel attracted because that's a guy who's losing control of his emotions.

Women are attracted to men who maintain control, who don't get thrown off by a situation and can also make a woman do what they want them to do.

So, bringing it back to what I was saying earlier, don't think that you're going to get her back by giving more.

I've literally dealt with maybe about 50 cases where a man is trying to get a woman back that he has children with and maybe about 95% of the time, guys do this.

The man is just being generous and nice and supportive and giving and taking things off her plate.

He's hoping that she will see that he's just such a great man for her and that she's never going to be able to find another guy who treats her in such a nice, supportive way.

Yet, the thing is that the same rules of attraction apply to picking up new women, being on a date with a woman, being in a relationship with a woman and getting an ex back.

For example: Women don't like it when they meet a guy for the first time and he's just sucking up to them.

He's just buying her drinks and being super nice and polite to her.

That isn't the thing that makes her think, "Wow, I want to have sex with this guy. I want to be in a relationship with this guy."

What does?

Sexual attraction.

Sexual attraction is something that you can CREATE based on your behavior, based on how you talk to a woman.

So, when you're interacting with your ex that you have children with, you need to be creating sparks of sexual attraction inside of her.

When she's feeling that, she's going to feel drawn to you.

She's going to start missing your presence in her life.

She's going to start imagining kissing you again, having sex with you and as a result, she's going to start becoming interested in being with you again.

Now, all that said, I'm not saying that it's wrong to be a good man, to be supportive and be nice to your woman that you have children with.

There's nothing wrong with making her life a little bit easier if you want to do that and there's nothing wrong with being a good dad.

There's nothing wrong with that at all.

Don't get me wrong.

Yet, just don't think that it's going to be the thing that makes her feel like, "Wow, I want to kiss him. I want to have sex with him."

It's just not going to work.

So, what should you do instead?

2. Focus on attraction, rather than pressuring for a relationship

Pressuring for a relationship can happen in obvious and subtle ways.

Obvious is where you're talking about the relationship, trying to work on the relationship, asking for a second chance, asking if the door is still open and trying to get her to commit to the idea of being together.

Subtle, means that it's coming across in your energy.

She can feel it, she can sense it, she can pick up on it.

When she interacts with you and when she notices your body language, when she notices your behavior, she can sense it.

She can sense that you really do want to be in a relationship with her.

You're lost without her, you desperately miss her and you're hoping that she just turns around one day and says, "I miss you. I want to be with you."

She can sense that.

So, what you need to do if you want to get her back is to not be focusing on trying to get the end result of a relationship right now.

You need to be focusing on giving her what she wants.

What does she want?

She wants to feel respect from the man that you are now.

You have changed since the breakup. You've become so much more of a complete man.

You're not making the same communication and behavioral mistakes that you made in the relationship.

You're different now.

She respects you and she can look up to you now.

She also wants to feel sexual attraction, so she can feel sparks of sexual attraction when she interacts with you.

She smiles, she laughs, sparks fly, she feels drawn to you and she finds herself thinking about you and imagining kissing you and having sex with you when you're not around.

She also wants to feel love for you.

She wants to be able to reconnect with her original feelings of love for you.

She wants to start imagining you and her and your child or children being back together in a family unit.

She wants to imagine that going well.

The thing is, she will imagine it going well if she can sense and see and pick up on the changes in you.

If when she interacts with you, she feels attracted, she feels turned on, she feels sparks of love for you again, you don't even need to tell her that you've changed – she will see it for herself.

When a woman is feeling respect, attraction and love again, she starts to imagine positive things happening.

She doesn't focus on the negatives.

It's sort of how things work when you first start dating a woman where you don't really focus on each other's flaws.

You're feeling attracted, you're feeling like you are falling in love and you just don't care about any potential flaws.

You just want to kiss and have sex and hug and be around each other.

Of course, even though attraction makes a woman focus on the positives about a man, you still don't want to be making the same old mistakes as before and making her pick up on flaws that you still haven't fixed.

You want to be fixing those things, but if you are making her feel respect, attraction and love, then she's not going to be focusing on those things as much as she used to.

She's going to be focusing on your positives.

3. Don't let her negative behavior change you

[image: Getting an ex back that you have children with]

When guys are trying to get a woman back who they have children with, the woman will often start behaving in really nasty ways.

She'll be very demanding, she'll be selfish, she'll be bitchy, she'll get angry, she'll be short tempered, she'll say insulting things and she might even try to turn the children against him and so on.

There are many reasons why a woman will do that, but some of the reasons are that she wants to see what your breaking point is.

Sometimes, for example, a woman breaks up with a man and she doesn't really have too much of a reason to break up with him.

She just doesn't feel attracted to him anymore.

He's a good guy and he's trying and he really put a lot of effort into the relationship, but she just doesn't feel much of a spark with him.

She just doesn't feel it anymore so she breaks up with him, then she starts acting like a bit of a bitch in order to hopefully make him get angry and start insulting her or behaving in an aggressive way or doing something where she can say, "There! See? That's why I broke up with you. I knew that you are like that. I don't want you anywhere near the kids. I don't want to see you anymore," and so on.

What some guys do when they're faced with that type of situation (i.e. their ex woman is being nasty, bitch or rude) is that they try to be even nicer to her.

They'll try to suck up to her and be on their best behavior and tiptoe around her and try to say all the right things and be extra nice to her to avoid her getting angry or being negative.

You don't want to do that.

You want your woman to respect you.

Women do not respect submissiveness from men.

They also do not respect being overly aggressive.

So, when I say you shouldn't be submissive and just tiptoe around your woman when she is potentially going to get angry, I don't mean that you should go to the opposite extreme and become aggressive and say, "Hey, stop talking to me like that! Treat me right. Why are you being such a bitch?" and so on.

You need to just remain calm, be positive, be easygoing and not let it affect you.

When you do that, she will tire of being bitchy and nasty towards you.

She will start to see that it's just not worth it because you don't bite.

You don't get affected by it.

You always remain confident, you always remain positive and she just can't break you down.

So, while you are doing that, as long as you are focused on making her feel sparks of sexual attraction for you and reconnect with her original feelings of love for you, then the idea of getting back with you is going to start to feel good to her.

She's going to start feeling like you are someone that she can now respect again. You are someone that she can look up to now and admire.

She is imagining kissing you and being with you when you're not around.

She's feeling that love in heart again.

She wants to be with you.

As a result, she may stop being as bitchy and negative, but you have to understand that women ALWAYS test men.

It doesn't matter if your relationship is good or bad, your woman is going to test you.

Women always test to see where a man's breaking point is. When is he going to become insecure? When is he going to break down?

4. Use meet ups as opportunities to create sparks of attraction

Most guys who are trying to get an ex-woman back that they have children with, have an opportunity to meet up with her on a regular basis.

For example: When the man is taking care of the kids and then he brings the kids back to the woman.

In some of the cases that I've worked on, men have said to me, "Well, I take the kids away for the weekend and then I bring them over to her place and she opens the door, lets the kids in and then just closes the door in my face."

So, what a man needs to do if he's faced with that situation, is not let her continue to repeat that same process.

For example: If he brings the kids over and she opens the door, let's them go in and then closes the door without even saying anything, he needs to make sure that the next time he drops the kids off, he's ready.

The next time he drops the kids off, she opens the door and he smiles and says, "Hey, hey, hey. Before you close the door, I just want to say hi. How are you doing? How are you doing today?"

He has a chat with her and lets her see that he's not being angry, he's not appearing rejected, he's not upset and he's not affected by her negative behavior.

Instead, he's confident and he is being loving, but he's also being dominant. "Hey, before you close the door, how are you doing? How are you doing today?"

He might then talk about where he and the kids went, for example, if they went to a movie and add in some humor when he's talking to her.

He will get her to smile and laugh and feel relaxed and easygoing around him.

He will let her see that things are fine between them, things are cool, everything's fine.

That's what you need to do.

Let her see that you're able to talk to each other, there's no drama, there's no tension and it doesn't have to be awkward anymore.

5. Try to avoid texts as much as possible

Texts are often necessary, especially when you're arranging to pick up the kids and drop off the kids.

If she's in a new relationship, she probably doesn't want to get on the phone and be talking to you when her guy is in the background.

She doesn't want to create problems and so on. That's fine. I totally understand that.

However, in all other cases, you should avoid texts like the plague.

Do not get into texting conversations with her where you're just being friendly and talking to her in a supportive way and being that friendly, supportive, generous ex-guy.

Additionally, don't try to discuss the relationship via text.

If you're gonna talk about the relationship, talk about it in person, but keep it brief and add in humor.

When you're talking about the relationship with her, don't make it serious.

Just joke around, say some serious points in here and there, but make the conversation feel easygoing and like everything's cool between you and her.

There's no awkwardness; everything's fine.

When I help men to women back who they have a child with, I often find that a guy has been really trying hard to get something going via text, to make her feel something via text.

What you need to understand about texts is that they can sometimes create a spark of respect and attraction and love, but for the most part, they don't.

Texts are just words on a screen.

What really crates a spark of respect, attraction and love is where you interact with your woman in person.

She can really see that you have changed, that when she talks to you now she feels different.

The awkwardness, the turn-off feeling that she had just isn't there anymore.

She feels respect for you, she feels attracted and she feels drawn to you who you are now.

That is what works.

Yet, with texts, it's so easy to stuff up.

It's so easy to come across as though you're being needy, you're being insecure, you're trying too hard, you're lonely without her and so on.

It's so easy for her to misunderstand what you are texting her and if you've been texting your ex-woman, you will know that already, right?

You will know that it's difficult to get her to understand what you really mean and sometimes she misunderstands what you're saying and then an argument breaks out via text or she goes cold and stops replying.

That's why I always say do not focus on text when you're trying to get an ex back.

It's so easy to stuff up.

Whereas, the total opposite is true in person.

It's so easy to get things right in person if you have actually made changes.

If you have been improving your ability to make her feel attracted since the breakup, then when you interact with her, it's so easy to get that right.

It's so easy to be more confident than you were before.

It's so easy to get her laughing and smiling when before you were just making her feel neutral or turned off.

6. Let her want the relationship more than you do

Of course, you want her back and that is fine.

You want to get that family unit back. You love her, you miss her, you want to be with her.

That's totally fine, but you've also got to understand how women work.

Women want to be in a position where they are chasing a guy a bit.

I don't mean going overboard with it and playing really hard to get and ignoring her text and acting like you don't give a crap about her.

I'm not talking about that.

I'm talking about you make her feel attracted, but you don't actually chase a relationship.

She's feeling attracted to you and drawn to you, but you're not trying to pressure her into having a serious committed relationship with you again.

She goes away from interactions with you feeling sparks of love and feeling attracted and missing you.

She starts imagining you and her and your child or children being back together in a family unit and then she realizes that you're not chasing it.

You are not trying to pressure her into that.

She then starts to think, “Alright. Well, how can I find out if he wants to have a relationship with me rather than just this fun flirtatious thing that we’ve got going on at the moment?”

She then starts to show you more interest.

She starts flirting with you more, she might touch you more, she might hug you more, she might even give you a kiss.

She wants to see how you’re going to react.

While she’s doing that, it actually makes her fall more in love with you and want the relationship more.

She’s going through the process of wanting you back and getting you back.

So, it becomes about her getting you back.

Learn More?

I hope this video has helped you and if you need more help to get your woman back, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

It’s a 7-step system and when you follow the steps, you will get back into a relationship with your ex.

The same rules apply to a relationship that has no children or has one child or has three or five children.

The same rules apply.

You’ve got to make her feel attracted to you again and you’ve got to make her want the relationship.

When you do that, it becomes so easy to guide her back into a relationship with you.

She wants it, she’s feeling attracted to you, she’s feeling drawn to you and it’s just a matter of hooking up again and getting back together.

Remain Calm and Confidently Get Her Back

One final point that I want to make for you is that while you’re getting her back, you need to remain confident at all times.

She might not make you feel very confident about her feelings for you and she might act a little bit indifferent or even a bit bitchy.

Yet, to successfully re-attract her and get her back, you must make sure that you don’t let that affect you.

Don’t let her see you appearing rejected or sad or depressed or lost without her.

You’ve got to let her see that you are a confident man who believes in himself.

When you are able to do that and are making her feel attracted to you whenever you interact with her, you will be able to get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Never Chase After Being Dumped. True or False?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Never chase after being dumped. True or false?

Well, it's true that you shouldn't desperately chase after a woman when she has dumped you.

However, that doesn't mean that you should just give up and walk away and say, "Well, look. If she comes back, she comes back. If she doesn't, she doesn't."

A guy can say that if he wants to (i.e. if he doesn't really care about his woman,) but what I'm talking about here is a guy who has lost his girlfriend or his wife and he really loves her.

[image: Attracting her back in a calm, confident manner]

It's a woman that he sees as special.

He enjoyed the connection that they had, he still loves her, he's still attracted to her, but he stuffed up in the relationship.

He made some mistakes.

He wants her back and he knows that this time around, he can do a better job.

He can make her feel the kind of respect, attraction and love that she really wanted to feel in the relationship.

So, while you shouldn't chase after a woman desperately when she has dumped you, it doesn't mean that you just give up and don't try to get her back.

Where guys go wrong is that they think that getting a woman back means asking for a relationship, asking for another chance.

That's not how you get a woman back who has dumped you, in most cases.

Sometimes a woman will give a guy another chance if he simply asks for it, but when a guy is being dumped and she no longer wants anything to do with him, she's going to say no if he asks her for another chance.

She will say no if he asks her right away, after a week, after a month and maybe even after a year.

Why?

She doesn't feel attracted to him.

He's feeling attracted to her, he loves her, he wants to be with her, but the feelings aren't mutual.

Luckily for us men though, we can actually create feelings of sexual attraction inside of a woman.

We can create it.

You can interact with a woman and create a spark.

You can get her smiling and laughing and feeling good around you.

You can make her feel attracted to your confidence.

You can make her feel attracted to your emotional masculinity.

You can make her feel girly in comparison to your masculinity.

You can make her feel attracted to your charm and charisma.

You can bring her guard down and open her back up to being with you.

So, rather than chasing a woman and trying to ask for a relationship, what you need to do is focus on the one thing that matters to her.

What is that?

Her feelings.

How does she feel about you?

If she feels turned off by you, she's not attracted to you, she doesn't respect you, she's not really feeling like she's in love with you anymore, then she's going to say no if you want another relationship with her.

It doesn't matter if you say, "Hey – I promise that I'll do better this time. Just tell me what you want me to change. I'll do anything. I have already changed. Just give me a chance to show you," and so on. That isn't what works.

What works is when you interact with your ex and you actively create a spark.

You make her feel attracted to you by the way that you're talking to her, the way that you're interacting with her.

You create a spark.

When you do that, what does she have?

She has feelings for you.

She starts to feel attracted.

She starts to feel some respect for you. She starts to feel sparks of love.

Then, she starts to want to get back into a relationship with you or at least hook up with you and see how she feels.

Here's the thing...

I've been helping guys to get women back for many years now and I've heard of all the strategies that guys use and I know which strategies and approaches don't work for most guys.

The one that doesn't work for most guys in most situations is simply walking away and trying to show her that you don't care when you actually do.

When a woman doesn't feel respect and attraction and love for a guy â□□ in other words, she doesn't have feelings for him â□□ and he just says, "Alright – I'm not going to do anything. I'm just going to cut off contact and show her that I don't care," what does he achieve?

In a very small number of cases, a woman will come back because she's very young and can't handle the pain of a breakup or she's inexperienced and can't deal with the pain of a breakup, or she can't find a replacement guy and then just gets back with her ex for something to do for a while.

That happens in a small number of cases.

That is true, but for the vast majority of cases that I've seen, the woman doesn't come back because she doesn't have feelings for the guy.

He hasn't done anything or he hasn't done enough to re-spark her feelings for him.

He might have been using the approach of trying to convince her to give him another chance, begging and pleading, promising that things will be different, saying that things are different and he just needs a chance to show that to her and so on.

All of those approaches don't work because they don't actually create a spark of sexual and romantic attraction inside of the woman at that point in time.

It's just a guy saying, "Please...give me another chance. I will show you. I'll do it. You can see for yourself. Just give me a chance."

That doesn't make a woman feel a spark of romantic and sexual attraction especially when she has already broken up with the guy.

She has already gotten to the point where she doesn't respect him enough and she doesn't feel enough attraction and she doesn't feel enough love to stay in a relationship.

Now, he's asking her to disregard her feelings and just give him another chance because he wants it.

When getting a woman back, you've got to understand that what matters to her at the moment are her feelings.

When you were in a relationship with her, she cared about your feelings, too â□□ if she was a decent woman, of course. There are some women out there who don't care about their guy.

That is true as well, but the majority of women out there do care about their man's feelings when they're in a relationship with him.

It's a relationship.

You're in love, you care about each other, you look out for each other.

Yet, now that it's broken up, she only really cares about her feelings.

She might be a nice woman and have some empathy and be patient and nice to her ex, but in most cases, the woman just closes up and focuses on her feelings.

She doesn't want to be focused on her ex guy's feelings because that will make her feel pity for him and want to give him another chance for that reason.

So you need to understand that the only thing that really matters to her at the moment are her feelings.

When you make her have feelings for you, then a relationship with you becomes something that she wants.

What's an example of making a woman have feelings again?

One example is where a guy was too neutral in the relationship with his woman.

He didn't really create much of a spark inside of her. He acted and behaved more like a friend with her.

At the start, the relationship was fine because they were having sex and it was all new, but over time, it became boring because his approach to the relationship was about being like a friend. So, there was no spark there.

She didn't feel like she was excited in the way that she was at the start.

To make her feel attracted to him again, he needs to start interacting with her in ways that are going to create a spark.

For example: He uses more humor, he has more of a confident energy, he's more emotionally masculine, which then allows her to be feminine around him and he also adds in a bit of a sexual energy when he's talking to her rather than just talking to her in a friendly or neutral way.

Another example of re-attracting an ex is where a guy became emotionally sensitive and insecure in a relationship.

Then, when he interacts with her, he can show her by the way that he's talking, by the way that he's using his body language, by the way that he's reacting to her and the way that he's behaving that he's so much more emotionally strong now.

He's not the emotionally sensitive, emotionally weak, insecure guy that he became in the relationship.

He is so much stronger now.

No matter what she says or does around him, he maintains his confidence.

He talks to her with so much more confidence. He looks her in the eye with so much more confidence.

When she tries to tease him or make him feel insecure or make him doubt himself, he remains confident.

As a result, she can see for herself that he has changed.

She can also see for herself that she feels differently around him now.

He doesn't have to say to her, "Hey. I promise that I've changed. I promise that things will be different now. Please just give me a chance to show you."

He doesn't have to do that because women can pick up on it themselves.

When you interact with a woman, she can sense for herself whether or not you now know how to attract her in the ways that really matter to her.

When you start attracting your ex in the ways that really matter to her, then you don't need to chase her.

She feels drawn to you.

Her guard comes down.

She opens up and you can get her back into a relationship with you.

Learn More?

I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more and you need more help to get your ex back, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

You will learn how to make your ex feel so much attraction for you, so much respect and so much love, that she will open back up and want to be in a relationship with you.

In many cases, a woman will actually start to chase her ex and try to get back with him.

Whatever happens in your case, you can get her back.

It doesn't matter if she starts chasing you or you need to pursue her. Either way is fine as long as you get her back.

It's not about being desperate and chasing her and pleading with her to give you another chance.

Instead, it's about focusing on what matters the most to her, her feelings.

When you make her have feelings for you again, everything changes.

Her guard comes down, she opens back up and you can get back into a relationship with her.

Desperately Chasing Vs. Calmly and Confidently Pursuing a Woman

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that there's a big difference between desperately chasing a woman who has dumped you versus calmly and confidently pursuing a woman, making her feel attracted and getting her back.

Have you ever heard a woman say, "I like a man who knows what he wants and isn't afraid to go out and get it. He's not afraid to pursue it. He's not afraid to go after it."

That's what women respect.

Women don't respect when a guy is being desperate and needy and crazy and he's losing control because his woman dumped him. That is not what they respect.

Women respect a man who is in control of his emotions.

He's calm, he's confident, he knows what he wants and he knows how to get it and he's not afraid to go after it.

He's not afraid to pursue it.

He's not afraid to potentially come up against some resistance.

For example: When a guy starts calmly and confidently pursuing his ex, he might be greeted with a no at the start.

She might not believe that he can have changed.

She might have her guard up, but when he starts to make her feel attracted in the ways that really matter to her, then her guard comes down.

Then she starts to realize that things are different.

She feels differently around him now.

She feels attracted to him, she feels some respect for him again, she's starting to feel love for him again and as a result, he can get her back.

So, while you shouldn't desperately chase an ex after she has dumped you, that doesn't mean that you simply give up, walk away and expect her to come back even if she's not attracted to you.

If you want her back, in most cases that I've seen, a guy needs to do something about it.

He needs to actively make his ex woman have feelings for him again.

Otherwise, she just moves on.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Blocked My Number. Is it Over?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

No, it's not over.

Your ex blocking your number simply means that you now have to use a different approach to get her back.

Here's what you need to do:

1. Update your Facebook and/or Instagram profile

[image: Post up photos on social media of you having fun with other people]

This is an important step, because now it's the only effective type of communication you have with your ex where you can show her that you've changed.

What you post online from now should show you having fun with other people (e.g. going to parties, events, festivals), so she can see you're not sitting around all day worrying about how to get her back.

If you don't use social media or don't post up photos often, now is a good time to start.

Social media is a very effective tool to get your ex back, so if she has blocked your number and you want her back, you have to adapt and start using it to get the result you want with her.

Important: If she has unfriended you on Facebook or unfollowed you on Instagram, just post your photos as "public" so she can see them from the outside. If she is curious to see what you are up to, she will stop by your profile to have a look.

If you don't use social media, you might have no other way to show your ex what you're up to and how much you've changed, so she will hold onto her negative perception of you that she developed near the end of the relationship and during the break up.

Once you've updated your profiles (or opened your social media account) and added some happy, positive things about you and your life, you should

2. Contact her via social media to ask for one phone call

Once you've updated your profile on social media (i.e. you've posted up photos of you having fun with other people), send your ex a message to ask her for a phone call.

Important: Only do this once you've updated your social media, otherwise almost all women say no because there is no evidence to suggest you have changed or that you are happy without her.

Most women don't believe that a guy has changed simply because he says so and she will also worry that he's just trying to get her back and that everything will still be the same as it always was.

An example of what you can say to get your ex agree to a phone call is: Hey Jenny. I accept that we've broken up, but I just wanted to ask you something over the phone. Don't worry, it's not serious. Can you just unblock my number tomorrow at 6.00pm [make sure you pick a suitable time that you know she's available to talk] so that I can give you a quick call. Then you can go ahead and block me again if you want to.

If she doesn't respond to your message, just go ahead and give her a call at the time you specified in your message.

If she doesn't answer and you discover that your number is still blocked, leave it for a day or two and then send her a message saying this: Hey Jenny I tried calling you the other day at the time I suggested in my previous message to you, but my number was still blocked. I really do need to ask you something over the phone, but I don't want to be a nag about it. How about I try again tonight at the same time? I promise, it's just a quick call to ask you this question and then you can block my number again as soon as I hang up the phone if you want to.

She might then send you a message asking, What do you want to ask me?

Whatever you do, don't make the mistake of thinking, Oh good! She's replying! and then start texting back and forth with her.

Instead, just text her back and say, What I need to ask is better done over the phone. I'll call you at 6. You can then block me again if you like.

In most cases, a woman will be curious about what you want to ask her and she will unblock your number to find out.

When you get her on the phone, make sure that you display confidence by remaining calm and relaxed when she's being cold towards you (e.g. she says, Okay, I've unblocked your number. You have 3 minutes, so make it fast! What do you want?) and then use some humor to get her smiling and laughing and enjoying talking to you, so her guard comes down.

For example, you might say, "3 minutes? Oh well, I guess we can't do what I planned to do on this call" and then she might ask, "What was that?" and you might add, "I was going to read you a 2 hour story. Oh well" and have a laugh with her about that.

In other words, don't take the conversation so seriously.

Look for an opportunity to use humor, so you can get rid the awkward tension between you and her and make her relax and open up a little more.

3. Get her to meet up with you in person to say hello

After a bit more light hearted conversation where you continue sparking your ex's feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again, quickly telling her in a sentence or two what you've been doing to let her see that you've been happy and getting on with your life without her), you can ask her to meet up with you in person.

For example: You can say, Anyway, it's been great talking to you again. It's nice to see that we can be two mature adults around each other and actually have a fun conversation without getting annoyed. Hey, so what I wanted to ask you over the phone is to just meet up in person to say hello as friends. It wouldn't be about us getting back together of course. It's just a coffee to say hi to each other as friends.

In most cases, a woman won't say Yes right away and she will initially be resistant to the idea (e.g. because she doesn't believe that you've changed, she's afraid of getting hurt again, she doesn't want to come across as being too easy or she has a new man in her life).

So, she might say something like, â€œNo, I don't think that's a good idea,â€ or â€œYou said you wanted one phone call and now you're asking me to meet up with you for coffee.

You're pushing your luck!â€

No matter how negatively she responds, don't let that cause you to feel uncertain or insecure.

Remember: Women are attracted to men who can remain confident under pressure, so use any negative reactions from her as an opportunity to make her feel attracted to you.

Just relax and confidently say something like, â€œHey, look it's just a quick cup of coffee as friends. No strings attached. Then, if you don't want to talk to me again after that, I will be totally cool with that and we can part ways as friends, rather than feel angry or annoyed with each other into the future. It can also be the last time we ever catch up in person if you want. If you don't want to ever see me again even as a friend, I will accept that 100% and never contact you again. So, what do you say? Are you in for a quick catch up tomorrow or the next day?â€

She will likely then say â€œYes,â€ and you can then go ahead and arrange a suitable day and time.

You then need toâ€

4. Make her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you at the meet up

[image: Meet up with her and make her feel something for you again]

At the meet up, you have to continue saying and doing the types of things that will make her feelings of respect and attraction for you grow, rather than say and do the types of things that will cause her to think, â€œWhat was I thinking when I agreed to meet up with him again?! He sounded so different over the phone that I mistakenly thought he'd changed, but clearly, he's still the same guy I broke up with. I'm getting out of here and this time I'm blocking his number for good. It's over!â€

For example:

If she is being cold and unfriendly toward you and is saying things like, â€œI shouldn't have come here,â€ or â€œThis is such a waste of time. Let's get it over with so that I never have to see you again,â€ rather than get upset, flustered and start doubting yourself around her, use her negativity against her to make her laugh and show her that you really have changed (e.g. you're more confident now rather than insecure, you're more ballsy, rather than letting her dominate you emotionally).

For example: You might respond by laughing at her attempts to make you feel bad and turning it into something to laugh about together.

You might laugh and say (in a joking manner), â€œSuch a drama queen now, aren't you? We're only having coffee together as friends. Relax. I'm sure you can manage to relax for 10 minutes without causing a scene, right? You will be fine. Just relaaaaax. Look, I'll even put my timer on for you on my phone. Then, after the 10 minutes are up, you can throw a tantrum again if you want, but for these 10 minutes you have to be nice and behave yourself. Cool! time starts now!â€ and have a laugh with her about that.

She will likely feel a bit shocked at you for having the balls to stand up to her in that way, but at the same time, she will also feel curious about your newfound relaxed and confident attitude towards her. This will naturally make her feel some respect and attraction for you again, even if she tries to hide that from you.

When she feels that for you, she then starts to accept that it is possible for you to really have changed. She then stops focusing on the things about the past version of you that she didn't like and starts focusing on things about the new version of you that she does like.

Her guard comes down and she becomes open to interacting with you some more (e.g. over the phone, or seeing you in person again) to see what happens.

At the meet up, it's also very important that you

5. Get her to forgive the old version of you

[image: Forgiving me will make you feel better]

If your ex doesn't fully forgive the old version of you, she might not be able to stop herself from bringing up all your past mistakes every time you do something she doesn't like.

So, you do need to get her forgiveness for who you used to be by apologizing to her in person (keep it brief and to the point when you apologize).

Note: Apologizing to her in person is always better than doing it via text, e-mail and social media, because she can observe your body language, assess the sincerity in your voice and see for herself that you really do mean what you're saying.

However, getting your ex to forgive you is not about groveling and saying things like, "I'm so sorry! I really stuffed up. I hate myself for what I did to you. Can you please forgive me and give me another chance," over and over again, because that will only turn her off even more.

Instead, you need to sincerely and briefly apologize to her once, by taking responsibility for your past mistakes and then asking her to forgive you so that both of you can move forward in your life without the baggage of a bitter break up clouding your future relationships.

You can tell her that when she forgives you, she will feel better about what happened and she will then be able to remember that there were also some good times between you and her.

Once you do get her forgiveness, she naturally becomes more open to you, even if she didn't plan to. All of sudden, she stops thinking of you in a negative way and begins to feel respect and attraction for you once again.

Then

6. End the meet up with a warm goodbye hug and if possible, a kiss and then sex later that day or night

[image: Get a warm, goodbye hug]

It might feel a little awkward for her at the start, but she will like it.

As long as you've been making your ex feel strong surges of respect and attraction for you throughout the meet up, getting a hug goodbye should happen naturally and easily.

Just make sure that you don't skip this part (e.g. because you're worried she will say no, or because you don't want to seem pushy after things have been going so well).

Why is it important to get physical at the end of your meet up?

Having a warm hug goodbye helps break the physical distance between you and her, makes her feel a surge of sexual attraction and most importantly, it confuses her feelings.

All of a sudden, she starts wondering, "Why did that hug feel so good? Why did I enjoy being in his arms again?" and she then becomes open to talking over the phone and seeing you again.

How can you get a goodbye hug from your ex?

When you and your ex are getting ready to leave, you can say something along the lines of, "Okay, bring it in for a warm, goodbye hug since we're never going to see each other again."

In most cases, if you've been sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you throughout the meet up, a woman will be more than happy to give you a hug.

She will also feel a bit sad now that it's possible she will never see you again, so there will be some feeling attached to the hug.

Go ahead and gently take her in your arms and give her a nice, long, warm hug that last for about 5 seconds.

If she seems open (i.e. she remains in the hug and looks you in the eye briefly with a smile), you can then lean in and give her a kiss as well.

In many cases, a woman will then be open to hooking up with her ex sexually that day or night.

However, if you can only get a hug and she's not willing to go any further than that, don't worry about it.

The important thing is that you've broken down her walls of resistance and planted seeds of doubt in her mind about her decision to break up with you.

You can then

7. Get her to unblock your number

If you have shown your ex that you really have changed (via your actions and conversation style), gotten her to forgive you and aren't desperately trying to convince her to give you another chance, she has no reason to keep your number blocked.

For example: You can say, "This wasn't so bad after all, was it?" and let her answer.

Then say, "How about you keep my number unblocked so that we can do this again sometime if you want to? I promise I'm not going to take advantage of you not blocking me on your phone to try and get you back if you don't want that, but we can at least be friends from now on. What do you say? Friends?"

When she agrees to that, get her to unblock you and then say, "Cool! Well, maybe we can text each other from time to time to say hello as friends.

From that moment onwards, don't abuse her good nature and start texting or calling her every day in the hopes that it will make her change her mind about getting back together again.

Instead, call her after a few days and continue building her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel feminine in contrast to your masculine vibe, flirting with her).

Sooner rather than later, she will be the one suggesting a meet up and then you can guide her through the rest of the ex back process and get her back.

Finally!

8. Don't make any of these classic mistakes

Sometimes, a guy might feel so shocked that his ex has blocked his number that he makes a whole bunch of classic mistakes before ever searching and finding my article here.

For example: He might!

- Send her flowers to say sorry.
- Show up at her home uninvited.
- Send long, emotional e-mails, letters or social media messages telling her all about his feelings for her and asking her to unblock his number.
- Send her long messages via social media to apologize over and over again.
- Try to get her friends or family involved.

Yet, rather than make a woman think, "Awww, he's so sweet. What was I thinking when I blocked his number? He must really love me to go to such extreme measures to get to me," she will just feel stressed out and pressured by his desperate approach.

The thing is, if a guy doesn't first improve his ability to attract her (i.e. by changing the things about himself that really matter to her,) a woman usually isn't going to be swayed by his attempts to get her back.

Instead, she's going to feel turned off even more and may say to herself, "I'm glad I blocked his number. I don't have any doubts anymore about being broken up with him. It's really over between us and I wish he would just leave me alone."

If she doesn't feel sexually attracted to him anymore, she might appreciate his romantic tokens (e.g. flowers, love letter e-mails), but it's not going to make her change her mind.

So, if you want your ex to unblock your number and give you another chance, don't waste time making grand romantic gestures or trying to persuade her by getting her friends or family involved or by showing up at her home uninvited.

Instead, you need to show her through your thinking and your behavior that you really changed and become the man that she always wanted you to be.

When she can see for herself that no matter how cold and closed off she's being towards you, you maintain your confidence and make her smile and laugh, her guard will come down.

She will then be much more willing to unblock your number because it feels like the right thing for her to do â□□ not because youâ□□re pressuring her into doing it.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

I Ignored My Ex For a Month and Now She Says That She's Gotten Used to Being Without Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

So, what should you do if you ignored your ex for a month and now she's saying that she's gotten used to being without you?

Here are the 5 steps:

1. Realize why the No Contact Rule doesn't work on most women

There are times when the No Contact Rule works to get an ex woman back (i.e. if a woman is still deeply in love with her ex and can't deal with not hearing from him anymore).

In almost all other cases, if a woman has disconnected from her feelings for a guy, then when he ignores her for a month (or more), it only adds more negative feelings (e.g. anger, annoyance, resentment) and makes her not want to be with him even more than before.

For example: If a woman breaks up with a guy because he stopped making her feel appreciated in the relationship, she usually isn't going to come running back to him if he ignores her for a month or more.

Rather than making her think, "Oh, I miss him so much! What was I thinking when I broke up with him? This time apart has shown me that I was being too hard on him. He is the man that I want," she will instead be thinking something like, "I can't believe he's still doing this to me? He's trying to mess with my head one more time, even though we've broken up. He doesn't respect me at all. By not contacting me, he's showing me how little he cares about my feelings."

If he then calls her after a month to try and get her back, she's usually built up so many walls around her to protect herself from getting hurt by him again, that she will say something along the lines of, "Sorry, but you've been gone for so long that that I've gotten used to being without you. I don't need you anymore. It's over between us. I've moved on and you should too."

A guy might then ask himself, "Why has this happened? What did I do wrong? I thought the No Contact Rule was supposed to make her want me back. That's what everyone says on the internet, so I thought it was true."

Yet, here's the thing!

For a man to get a woman back, he almost always needs to be ACTIVE, rather than PASSIVE about the ex back process.

In other words, he needs to actively interact with her (e.g. on the phone and in person) and actively make her feel strong surges of respect, sexual attraction and love for the man he has become since the break up.

The more she interacts with him and feels good to be talking to him again, the easier it becomes for her to start seeing him as the man he is now, rather than the man she remembers him being before. She can then forgive him for his past mistakes and accept that heâs no longer the same guy she broke up with.

However, if a guy ignores a woman for a long time and then tries to get her back, she will usually be a lot more resistant to seeing him in a positive light again â even if he has truly changed and become a better man.

In some cases, this will be because she has hooked up with another guy and realized that she can be happy without him, so she doesn't feel much or any need to get him back.

So, if youâve ignored your ex for a month and now she says that sheâs gotten used to being without you, what you need to understand is that sheâs had a lot of time to disconnect from her feelings for you.

Yet, that doesnât mean that all hope is lost and that itâs over.

You can still change how she feels, but to do that you have to man up and do something about it, rather than continuing to ignore her and hope that she changes her mind.

You have to start interacting with her right away and make her feel something for you again.

Even if sheâs currently all closed up and is pushing you away, you have to stay strong and use any interaction you have with her (e.g. via text, social media, e-mail and especially on the phone and in person) to actively reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

2. Call her or meet up with her in person to let her experience the new and improved you

Note: The above headline does not say, “Continue to text her.”

I am recommending that you call her or meet up with her in person.

So many guys hide behind texts when trying to get an ex woman back and end up losing her.

You've got to have the balls to call and the courage to re-attract her in person.

That's how a man really gets his woman back.

Regardless of how convinced your ex might be that sheâs gotten used to being without you, if you become a regular presence in her life from now on (e.g. you call her on the phone to chat, you meet up with her for a friendly catch up), she wonât be able to block her feelings for you anymore.

If she interacts with you and experiences the new and improved man youâve become in the month that she hasnât had any contact with you (e.g. youâre expressing your confidence around her now and donât lose your cool when sheâs being cold or unfriendly towards you. Youâre now emotionally independent and arenât just sitting around hoping for a chance with her again), then she is going to feel differently about you.

All of a sudden, she will begin thinking something like, âMaybe him ignoring me for a month wasnât that bad after all. I thought he was playing games and trying to make me come running back to him, but instead heâs obviously used that time to change and become the kind of man I always wanted him to be. I canât be angry with him for that. In fact, rather than feeling annoyed *and resentful, I actually feel respect and attraction for him again. Maybe we can get back together again after all.*â□□

You can make her feel that way if you want to.

So, don't give up just because she said that she has gotten used to not having you around.

You can get her back.

However, as mentioned, don't try to do it via text.

You have to interact with her on the phone (where she can hear the confidence in your tone of voice) and meet up with her in person (where she can experience the new you in person) if you really want to re-spark her feelings for you.

Where a lot of guys go wrong is that they first ignore their ex for a month and then, rather than getting her on a phone call and sparking her feelings of respect and attraction again, they try to get her back via text.

[image: Don't try to get her back via text]

Texts rarely work to get an ex back because they can easily be misunderstood or misinterpreted.

For example: You might think you texted her in a cool, confident way, but she might be sitting there, rolling her eyes and thinking, “That’s it? That’s all he can think of to text me? Does he think that I will tell him that I will miss him now? Well, I’m not going to be that easy. I’m going to ignore his next few texts and see how confident he really is now.”

Then, a guy will often feel like he is losing her, so he will begin being a bit insecure via text, which will turn her off and make her close up even more.

This is why you just have to get your ex on a phone call or meet up with her in person.

It's the only way youâ□□ll be able to convince her (without using words) that you really have changed and become a better man since the break up.

She can hear it and see it for herself and know that it's not an act.

You really have changed and become such a better man that she now feels so attracted to.

3. If she says no to meeting up, just tell her that it's a quick coffee as friends

If a woman has lost a lot of respect and attraction for a guy and is even feeling a little bit hurt or annoyed with him because he ignored her for a month after the break up, she might initially be resistant to seeing him again.

For example: She might say, *â□□Itâ□□s too late. Iâ□□ve gotten used to being without you and I donâ□□t see the point to opening up old wounds again,â□□ or â□□I donâ□□t think itâ□□s a good idea. Letâ□□s accept that we havenâ□□t even spoken to each other for a long time and that itâ□□s better this way.*â□□

Yet, regardless of what excuse your ex might use to avoid meeting up with you, just make sure that you don't take no for an answer.

Remain calm, be easy-going and be nice about it, but don't take no for an answer.

Why?

If you want to get her back, you will have to meet up with her to make that happen, so you've just got to get to a meet up.

So, if you're talking to your ex on the phone and she says something along the lines of, â€œSorry, but I think we should forget about each other and move on,â€ rather than get upset, give up, or seek pity from her because you still miss her while she's doing fine without you and say something you might regret (e.g. â€œHow can you be this cold? Didn't our love mean anything to you? I'm not the bad guy you're making me out to be. I just gave you some space to figure things out without being a nuisance and now you're holding it against me. Can't you see how much I miss you? Don't you even care?â€), you can instead use it as an opportunity to show her the new confident, emotionally strong version of you.

For example: If your ex says â€œNoâ€ to meeting up, you can say to her, â€œLook, I understand that you might initially feel like it's not the best idea in the world for us to catch up, but it's just a quick catch up over a cup of coffee. It doesn't mean that I'm suddenly going to get all emotional on you and assume that we're going to get back together again because we're having an innocent coffee. These days, it's no big deal for ex's to be able to meet up as friends. We're mature adults. We can do that. So, let's try to catch up in the next day or so and have a friendly chat again. What do you say? A quick catch up as friends. No strings attached. Just a fun chat and that's all.â€

Usually, when a guy says something like that to a woman and remains calm, relaxed and confident, she will likely say â€œYes,â€ (even if it's only out of curiosity to see for herself if he's really changed).

Then, just go ahead and make plans to meet her at a time that suits you both.

Just remember though!

When you meet up with her in person, you've got to continue sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you if you want to change how she feels.

4. Build up the sexual tension at the meet up and at least get a goodbye hug

To build sexual tension between your ex and yourself at the meet up, you need to alternate between moments where you're flirting with her, making her laugh, smile and feel attracted and then stopping and going back to talking normally with her for a few minutes (e.g. being more neutral around her).

By going from flirting, to normal conversation and then flirting, time and again, you effectively build up anticipation inside her and make her wonder, â€œWhy am I feeling so excited to be around him again? Am I not really as over him as I initially thought I was? Is he going to kiss me? Why am I even thinking things like this?â€

Now, that is what you should be doing, but what about what you shouldn't be doing at the meet up?

At the meet up, make sure that you don't sit there feeling insecure, doubting your attractiveness to her, being a good little boy who is on his best behavior around her, or allow her to dominate you, push you around, or control you because you feel bad for ignoring her for a month and now want her back.

If you approach the meet up in those ways, she won't be able to respect you and will just think, "This was a bad idea. Nothing has changed and I'm actually better off without him in my life."

So, make sure that you don't waste the meet up with your ex by being unattractive.

Instead, remain confident and believe in yourself (regardless of how challenging, cold or distant she is being) and make her feel excited to be around you again.

Then, when she's feeling happy and you can sense that her walls have come down, you can say to her in a joking, light-hearted way, "See, this isn't so bad after all. We're awesome exes. We've even managed to drink our coffee without throwing it in each other's faces. That has to be something worth celebrating, don't you agree? So, how about we hug on that? Come on over and give me an awkward ex hug" and have a laugh with her about that.

Of course, don't make it an awkward hug.

That was just a joke.

Make it a warm, loving, relaxing hug that makes her think, "Huh? Why do I want him all of a sudden? This isn't awkward, this is nice! I like it!"

If you've built up enough sexual tension, she will want to hug you as much as you want to hug her.

So, just go ahead and pull her gently into your arms and give her a warm, loving, relaxing hug for a few seconds.

In most cases, the hug will then transition into a kiss and often sex.

However, don't focus too much on the sex and instead, just try to get a kiss if you can.

Why?

Her kissing the new you will cause her to remember how good she felt when you and her first kissed.

She then becomes open to getting back together again, because she suddenly feels that being without you isn't as nice as the feeling of being back in your arms.

5. If she doesn't want to get back right away, at least agree to stay in touch as friends

In some cases, a woman might not be open to getting back together again after the first meet up, so don't panic.

She might say something like, "I just don't know if this is a good idea. I don't want to rush back into a relationship with you and then end up having to go through the pain of breaking up again."

Unfortunately, a lot of guys believe that what she is saying is permanent and he can change how she feels.

What he doesn't realize is that her love for him is still there in the background and he just needs to bring it back to the surface by reactivating her old feelings of respect and attraction.

So, he just gives up and walks away from his ideal woman, even though he could have gotten her back if he just focused on making her have feelings for him again.

Don't let that happen to you.

If your ex doesn't want to get back together right away, just remain confident and say to her (in a friendly, easy-going way), "I understand why you feel the way you do right now and that's perfectly fine with me. We don't have to get back together, but I'm sure that we can at least be friends. How about that?"

She will most likely say, "Okay" because you're taking the pressure off her to make a decision about the relationship right away.

Of course, don't then act like a friend.

Being her friend isn't about being just a friendly, nice, ex guy.

Instead, it's about using your access to her to trigger her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you again.

That way, it goes from a so-called friendship to a sexual, romantic relationship once again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Is it Normal For Couples to Break Up and Get Back Together?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, most relationships experience one or more break ups or â€œalmostâ€œ break ups, before they reach a state of true, committed love.

There are some couples that never have any problems, but they are the minority and probably only make up about 5% of couples.

For a relationship to go through the stages of development and get to a point where the couple experiences what I call Blissful Love, they often have to make mistakes, fix those mistakes, forgive each other and then become a better couple as a result.

It doesn't matter if a couple has trouble along the way.

What matters most is that they both (or the one person who is causing the problems) learn and improve, to reach a higher state of mutual respect, attraction and love.

If a couple breaks up at the first, second or third sign of trouble, they will usually run from relationship to relationship their entire life, never really getting to experience what true, committed, unconditional, blissful love between a man and a woman feels like.

Some people say things like, â€œIf you break up even once, it is a sure sign that youâ€™re all wrong for each other. If you then get back together again, it probably won't last and you will not only be wasting time. So why don't you look for another woman, rather than having work at a relationship?â€œ

Yet, what people like that don't realize is that love is a very powerful thing and rather than get weakened after a break up, love can actually get stronger and more meaningful when the couple gets back together and falls back in love.

So, don't feel like you can't get your woman back because some people out there don't believe that it's possible or that it's wrong.

Not only is it normal for couples to break up and get back together again, but you can also make your relationship better than it was before.

Just make sure that you don't make these common mistakes when trying to get your ex back after a break up!

1. Trying to get her back by explaining that it's normal to have break ups

[image: Why won't you just give me another chance?]

Just because you are learning that it's okay and normal to have break ups, don't go thinking that it will be the magic conversation that convinces her to give you another chance.

What will convince her?

Watch this!

You have to focus on making her have feelings for you and if you do that, she will naturally want to give you another chance.

Unfortunately, most guys don't realize that and end up screwing up their chances by trying to explain their way into another chance, rather than triggering her feelings of respect, attraction and love.

A guy might say something like, â€œLook, itâ€™s normal for couples to break up and get back together again. It actually happens all the time. Even celebrities break up and get back together. It's not just us. So, our break up is no big deal. Iâ€™m sure we can work things out if we give our relationship another chance. Just give me a chance to show you that things can be different.â€

Even though what heâ€™s saying might be the truth, saying that to a woman isnâ€™t the key to getting her back.

What is?

Actively make her have some feelings for the new and improved version of you.

Let her see that you now give her the kind of attraction experience that was missing in the relationship (e.g. if you were too insecure, you are now so much more confident. If she didn't feel a spark with you anymore, she now feels turned on and wants to hug you, kiss you and have sex with you more than ever).

The thing is, when a woman breaks up with a guy, itâ€™s usually because there are certain aspects of his thinking, behavior and the way he interacts with her that have caused her to lose respect and attraction for him.

So, when she breaks up with him, itâ€™s mostly based on those things and how it made her feel.

For example: If a man is too emotionally sensitive around his woman and cries like a girl to her when heâ€™s under a bit of pressure, she starts to feel like she has to take care of him like a mother or big sister because he canâ€™t cope on his own.

The more she has to take care of him emotionally, the more dominant she begins to feel compared to him, which causes her to stop feeling like a feminine, sexy woman around him.

As a result, she starts to look down on him and her feelings of respect, attraction and love fade into the background and get replaced with more negative emotions such as irritation and disgust.

If she then breaks up with him and he says to her, â€œJust because weâ€™re broken up, it doesnâ€™t mean we canâ€™t get back together. Break ups between couples are normal. We can do this. We can make things work between us if you give me one more chance,â€ she will assume that he doesn't know what to change to make her happy.

She may then think something like, â€œDoes he really think that Iâ€™m going to give him another chance just because itâ€™s normal for couples to break up and get back together? What about the fact that I just don't feel attracted to him anymore because of the guy he has become? Does he expect me to sweep everything under the carpet and pretend that I donâ€™t care about the fact that his current behavior turns me off? He thinks explaining that itâ€™s normal to have a break up is going to make me change my mind and want him back. Well it doesnâ€™t work that way. If he canâ€™t make me feel the way I want to feel in a relationship, thereâ€™s no way Iâ€™m going to get back together â€œ whether itâ€™s normal or not. I'm just not feeling it. He might be still in love with me, but I'm turned off and I don't see how he could change. I don't even think he knows what I really want.â€

She then asks for space or says that the relationship is over and she doesn't want to try anymore.

The guy is then left confused, frustrated and lost because he has no idea how to start giving her the kind of attraction experience she secretly wants in a relationship.

This is why telling your woman that itâ€™s normal for couples to break up and get back together again is usually not enough of a reason to make her want to do that with you.

On the other hand, if you first make some attractive changes to yourself (based on the things that secretly matter to her), let her experience those changes (she'll be able to pick it up in the way you talk, think and behave around her), and then talk about giving the relationship another chance, she'll be more open to the idea getting back together again.

By the way!

Do you know what part of the overall attraction experience your woman was missing in the relationship with you?

For example:

- Did she get tired of leading you?
- Did you expect her to make most or all of the decisions, or did you feel like she'd be happier if you let her decide on everything?
- Did you become too annoying (e.g. clingy, needy, childish and immature)?
- Did you and her grow apart (e.g. you wanted different things in life, she was maturing faster than you or you were too mature minded for her)?
- Did you stop following through on your big goals and ambitions in life and focus all of your attention on her (causing her to feel smothered)?
- Did you turn the relationship into a friendship because you thought that's how it was supposed to be if you stayed together for a long time?
- Did you rely on her too much to take care of you emotionally, rather than the other way around?

By understanding what was missing in your relationship, you can adjust those things about yourself and get ready to give her what she always wanted.

When she can see that you understand what she really wants, she can relax and allow herself to get back together with you again not because it's normal for couples to do that, but because she feels like it's the right thing for her to do.

Another common mistake to avoid is

2. Letting her see the break up (or break ups) as being a serious sign that you and her could never work

Some men and women mistakenly believe that a relationship is about being happy 100% of the time, agreeing with each other all the time, never making any mistakes and never getting into any arguments.

So, if they have a big fight or disagree about something, it's seen as a sign that they're not compatible and that they should just break up and move on.

Yet, that's not how most relationships work.

The truth is that everyone makes mistakes, so it's immature to break up and walk away from a good relationship just because a mistake was made.

For example: A guy might not be affectionate enough with his woman, which causes her to feel unloved and unappreciated.

Yet, he may also be very goal oriented and working towards providing a good future for himself and his woman.

So, if she only focuses on his lack of affection and breaks up with him because of that (and then refuses to give him another chance), she will be losing out on a great provider who could potentially take really good care of her and their children in the future.

Sheâs not giving him the chance to change and improve himself into the more caring, loving man that she wants, now that he realizes his mistake.

The truth is that a perfect, conflict-free relationship only exists in fairytales.

I know this because I have an amazing relationship with my wife (i.e. we're in love, have awesome sex, respect each other, laugh and enjoy each other's company), but we still have random disagreements.

The difference between her and I and so many other couples though is that we don't run when there is a problem.

Why?

I am the more emotionally stronger one (even though she sometimes says something that annoys me and I want to get angry at her about it) and bring the interaction back to love and laughter, while fixing the disagreement.

That way, any potential fights turn into opportunities to deepen the respect, attraction and love that her and I feel for each other.

In the real world, most couples need to have some arguments, disagreements and even break ups to make the appropriate adjustments to be compatible with each other.

Once they do, the relationship feels amazing and it really is so much easier.

So, ensure that when you interact with your ex, you make her understand that the break up is not the end of the world and can in fact, make your relationship even stronger and better than before.

As long as you can show her that youâve put in the effort to learn from your mistakes and become a better man as a result and you both forgive each other for what happened in the past, then getting back together is not only a good idea, it would actually be a big mistake if you don't.

This time around, your relationship is going to be so much better and feel so much better for the both you.

Another mistake to avoid isâ!

3. Not changing your behavior because you think she will put up with break up after break up for life

[image: Constantly breaking up and getting back together]

In some cases, because a woman really loves her man and doesn't want to lose him, she may be willing to forgive him time and time again.

She might say, âOkay, Iâll give you one more chance, but if you donât change Iâm really going to break up with you.â

When that happens, a guy might get into the habit of taking her commitment to him for granted.

For example: He may think to himself, âSheâs always saying that to me, but she can never stay mad at me for long. I know her. Sheâll throw a little tantrum and maybe even stop talking to me for a few daysâthen sheâll get over it and forgive me. She loves me and she isn't going to break up with me for real.â

What he doesnât realize is that patience and forgiveness has its limits.

Regardless of how much a woman loves a man, if she gets a sense that heâs just making the same mistakes over and over again and not even trying to change and improve himself (because he believes she will put up with it), she will eventually get fed up.

When she breaks up with him and says, “No” to him attempts to get her back, he might think, âHuh? Why doesnât she want to give me another chance? I thought she loved me? Isnât it normal for couples who love each other to get back together after a break up?â

Hereâs the thingâ

Itâs not enough to just want your ex woman back.

For her to want you back you need to show her that youâve stopped taking her love for granted and have actually made an effort to fix your past mistakes.

Note: You donât have to fix everything and be perfect for her to open herself up to giving you another chance.

Instead, you just need to show her that youâve learned from your past mistakes and now behave in a way that is more loving, attractive and respectful.

Of course, don't make the mistake of being super nice to her and trying to suck up to her, because she will see that as desperate and it will turn her off.

Instead, just remain cool and be a better man than you were before.

When she interacts with you and sees for herself that your thinking and behavior has changed and improved, she will start to feel respect for you again.

When that happens, she will also feel attraction for you again, which will make loving you again so much easier.

Fact: Falling Back in Love After a Break Up Can Be an Amazing Experience For Both of You

[image: Let her experience the changes in you for herself]

If a man and a woman break up and then get back together as a new and improved version of themselves, it makes the relationship even better than it was before.

They know they have survived the worst of it and that the love, respect and attraction they feel for each other now is real and enduring.

For a woman, getting back with an ex who has really changed and can now make her feel attracted in new ways is an amazing, unforgettable experience.

It makes her feel like sheâs won the relationship lottery.

So rememberâ

Even though it is perfectly normal for couples to break up and get back together, if you want your woman to give you another chance, you need to focus on making her feel so much respect, attraction and love for you that she can't stop herself from wanting to get back together again.

Don't listen to people who tell you that it's a waste of time and that it can never work.

It can work and you will prove it to them.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Should I Send My Ex a Birthday Card?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, you can send your ex a birthday card, but don't think the card will be the special thing that gets her back.

To change your ex's mind about you and give you another chance, you first need to re-spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love again.

Unfortunately, most guys don't know that they have to focus on making her feel attracted again, so they secretly hope that a birthday card will make her miss him and come running back.

As a result, many guys end up making the some or all of the following mistakes:

1. Hoping that the card will trigger her feelings and she will text or call and want to see him

Although sending your ex a birthday card is a nice gesture, most of the time it's going to have absolutely no effect on her desire to want to get back with you.

For example: If a woman hasn't had any previous contact with her ex that she no longer wants to be with, she's going to look at the card and think something along the lines of, "Oh, that's nice of him to remember," and promptly forget all about it.

She might also briefly think, "He's probably hoping that this will make me call him, because he doesn't have the balls to call me and risk getting rejected. Nice try, but no thanks."

On the other hand, if she really feels bitter and angry about the break up, she may think, "Why is he even bothering to send this to me? Does he really believe that a frikken card is going to make me forgive him for hurting me the way he did? Does he really think that everything can be okay between us by sending a nice card? I hope this isn't his idea of trying to get me back because it's not going to work."

Of course, sending a woman a birthday card sometimes results in a thank you text, but that doesn't actually get her back unless the guy then gets her on a phone call, makes her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for him and gets her to meet up with him in person.

That's what really counts.

So, if you want to send your ex a birthday card, go ahead and do so.

However, don't make the mistake of thinking that it's your only hope to get her back.

In fact, a better option is to get her on a phone call with you where you can easily make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

Doing so makes her feel a renewed sense of attraction for you, as well as making her respect you for having the confidence to joke around and get her laughing, smiling and feeling good.

Then if you ask her to meet up in person, she will likely be more open to the idea (because she can see that things are cool between you and her), compared to if you just send her a card and then wait for her to make the next move.

So, if you're debating whether or not you should send your ex a birthday card, why not give her a call instead?

Don't worry if she might not like it initially.

When you get her smiling and laughing, she will enjoy talking to you again.

For example: When she answers the phone, you can say with a smile in your voice, Hey ex girlfriend! How you doing?"

Let her respond to what you've said and then add in, "I remembered that it's your birthday today, so I just wanted to give you a quick call and wish you a wonderful day.

Let her respond to what you've said and then add in, "By the way! I'll be around later for my share of your birthday cake, so make sure you save me the biggest piece!" and have a laugh with her about that and tell her that you're just kidding.

She'll likely smile or laugh and say something along the lines of, Oh, okay, or (if she still likes you and is hoping to see you), No way! The biggest piece is for me.

You can then chat with her for a little while in an easy-going, relaxed way and then after a few minutes say, Anyway! I hope you have a great day today. Yet, I'm not going to let you get away with eating all that cake by yourself. So, how about we meet up tomorrow for a cup of coffee and you can bring me my slice then?"

She might initially be a bit skeptical about the idea and she may say something like, I don't know if that's a good idea, or I'm not sure that I want to do that.

Just maintain your confidence and in an easy-going voice say, Hey, I promise I'm not going to go crazy and start assuming that just because you said yes to coffee we're suddenly going to get back together again. It's just a catch up between friends to say hello. Besides, I really want some of that cake and I can't exactly give you your birthday hug over the phone either. So, how about it? Coffee tomorrow just as friends, no strings attached?"

Remember: When you meet up with her, you need to continue saying and doing the types of things that will show her that you're a different man now.

You've got to reactivate her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you (e.g. maintain your confidence around her even if she's being cold or distant, tease her and make her feel feminine and girly in your masculine presence).

From there, you can build on that spark of attraction and get her back.

Another mistake that guys make when sending their ex girlfriend (or ex wife) a birthday card is

2. Writing way too much in the card

Some guys will go ahead and fill up the whole card by expressing their feelings and talking about good old memories.

For example: A guy might say things like, Happy Birthday! I know we're broken up but I couldn't let your special day go by without sending warm wishes your way. After all, this is the first birthday we're apart and it's terrible not being able to hold you in my arms, kiss you and spoil you the way I used to do when we were together. I feel so lost and empty without you in my life. I still care for you so much. I know I really stuffed things up between us, but I have changed. Yes, I made some mistakes, but we also shared some great times together too. Remember all those picnics *on the beach, or the way we used to go jogging in the park every morning before work, or how we used to love watching scary movies with all the lights off so that we would get extra scared and then hold each other tight? We were happy once. Anyway, I hope you have a great day!*â€¢

Here's the thingâ€¢!

[image: Missing her ex on her birthday because he sent her a card]

Sending a birthday card CAN work if a woman is still in love with the guy, respects him and feels attracted to him.

She will be reminded of him and miss him and will then likely text him to try to get something happening between them again.

Yet, if he turned her off near the end of the relationship and during the break up process (e.g. he became clingy and needy, he begged and pleaded with her to change her mind, he became too emotional and cried to her), his expression of his emotions isn't going to make her want him back.

Why?

The feelings aren't mutual.

A woman only appreciates an expression of heartfelt, romantic emotions from a man that she respects, feels attracted to and loves.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't bother sending her a birthday card as a way of pouring your heart out to her if you haven't made her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you first.

If your ex doesn't feel much or any respect or sexual attraction for you, then talking about your feelings or good memories from the past just isn't going to matter to her.

In fact, it might even make her feel annoyed because it just highlights to her how badly things turned out in the end.

On the other hand, when you re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you first, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again, even just a little bit.

Another common mistake guys make isâ€¢!

3. Trying to get her to reconsider her decision via a card

Sometimes, if a woman has cut off all communication with her ex (e.g. she's blocked his number on her phone, unfriended him on social media) he might decide that the only way to get her to give him another chance is by sending her a birthday card.

He might then write something along the lines of, *I'm so sorry for everything that happened. It was never my intention to hurt you and I regret it more than anything. I promise you that if you give me one more chance, I'll do whatever you want me to do to make you happy again. Please reconsider your decision and let me make it up to you.*â€¢

Yet, rather than make a woman think, *Oh, how romantic! He's feeling so shy and insecure that he's asking me for another chance via a cute birthday card. What an amazing man!*â€¢ she's instead more likely going to be thinking, I can't believe that he has the nerve to ask me to reconsider my decision via a birthday card! He doesn't even have the balls to look me in the eye and say that he's sorry. Well, if he was hoping I'm going to forgive him and run after him now that he's sent me this card, he's in for a big disappointment. It's going in the bin and I will continue moving on without him

Here's the thing

A card is just a piece of colored paper with some words scribbled on it.

It doesn't tell a woman anything about how her ex has really changed, other than that he thinks he can sweet talk his way back into her heart by sending her a birthday card.

Unfortunately, a card to an ex usually has the opposite effect than intended.

Rather than make a woman forget about his past mistakes and forgive him, she just assumes that he's still the same guy that she broke up with (e.g. insecure, not man enough for her), which isn't going to make her feel motivated enough to want to talk to him on the phone, or see him in person again.

So, if you want your ex to reconsider her decision, the best way to do it is by improving your ability to attract her before interacting with her on a phone call and in person.

Some examples of improving your ability to attract her:

- You are now much more confident and emotionally mature than before.
- You're more emotionally masculine, rather than the emotionally sensitive guy you used to be.
- You believe in your attractiveness and value to her, rather than feeling like you're unworthy of her.

Of course, you could send her a card and she might even call you to say, "Thanks" because she is curious to find out whether she will feel a spark for you over the phone.

Yet, if she picks up that you're still making the same old attraction mistakes that you made before (e.g. being insecure and self-doubting, feeling unworthy of her, giving her too much power, not being man enough to be real), she's going to feel like you tried to trick her with the card and she will then close herself off even more.

So, make sure that if you send her a birthday card, it's only after you've improved your ability to attract her and only to say "Happy birthday."

If you've done that, here's what I recommend that you write.

Hey Jenny

Just thought I'd wish you a happy birthday. Miss you.

Love,

Dan

Just be real, keep it simple and end the card.

BTW: Saying that you miss her and love her is not needy.

It's only needy if you are being desperate and pleading with her.

However, when you have the balls to be real and say something in a calm, confident, matter of fact kind of way, then it's attractive to a woman.

Women respect guys who aren't afraid to express their emotions in a real way, but who (this is important!) don't get all needy, sappy and desperate about it.

So, if you are going to send her a card, keep it simple and be real.

If she has been missing you, then this will be a confidence booster for her to text you or call you.

If she doesn't text you or call you, just call her so she can experience the new you for herself and feel attracted.

Finally, another "birthday card to an ex" mistake that guys make isâ

4. Hoping it will make her miss him because he's not around to share her birthday

If a guy was particularly charming and romantic throughout the duration of his relationship with his ex (especially on birthdays and other special days such as Valentine's Day or anniversaries), he might think that sending her a beautiful card on her birthday will bring back those memories and make her miss him and want him back for her birthday.

He's secretly hoping that she will think, "This card just reminds me of how wonderful he was around my birthdays. Every year on my birthday he had something totally amazing planned for me! I never realized it before this moment, but I miss him so much! My birthday just doesn't feel the same without him. Maybe I should call him and see if we can get together again."

Of course, that will work if she misses her ex and is still in love with him.

Yet, if that was the case for you, then you probably wouldn't be searching for help on how to get your ex back, right?

She would have been sending you texts and you would have met up with her and gotten her back already.

So, unless a woman is missing a guy and is secretly still in love with him, then a card isn't going to make her miss him and want him back.

She will pause for a moment and think about all the reasons why she broke up with him, realize that he probably hasn't changed and then put the card in the bin.

So, if you want to send your ex a birthday card, then by all means go ahead and do it, but you must understand that it's not the secret to getting her back.

What is?

Triggering her feelings of respect and attraction for you on a phone call (e.g. by using humor to break down her defenses, making her feel like a feminine woman through your masculine behavior) and then getting her to meet up with you in person to build on her feelings.

That is what works.

When she sees for herself the positive changes you've made to yourself since the break up, she's going to thank you for giving her the best birthday present ever a new and improved you and an exciting, more attractive and appealing love that she can now experience with you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Broke Up With Me Because She Still Hasn't Healed From Her Previous Relationship

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 common reasons why a woman will use that as a reason to break up are that:

1. She has realized that her ex made her feel more respect, attraction and love and she misses that

Sometimes a woman will break up with a guy (her ex) because certain aspects of his thinking and behavior turn her off and make her feel unhappy in the relationship.

For example: A woman might have initially felt a lot of respect and attraction for her ex guy and may even have thought something like, "He makes me feel so wonderful when I'm with him. I think things could get serious between us. Maybe he is the one."

Yet, over time she may realize that even though he makes her feel good when she's with him, what she wants in the relationship and what he wants are two very different things (e.g. she wants him to commit to her and be more serious, while he prefers to keep things casual and enjoys living a carefree life).

She might then decide to break up with him (her ex) and hook up with another guy (you), who is more down to earth, stable and willing to commit to her.

[image: You just don't make me feel the way he did]

Yet, even though you might be a great guy who is kind and gentle and reliable, something about the relationship just doesn't feel right to her.

She realizes that you don't make her feel the kind of respect, attraction and love that her ex did.

You are a good guy, but something is missing and it makes her want to stop being so affectionate with you and start pulling back.

She becomes confused about her feelings and starts focusing on things about you that she doesn't like (e.g. you let her walk all over you, you're too emotionally sensitive or you're not manly enough with her).

She then compares you to her ex and may start thinking, "Well, my ex didn't want to settle down, but at least he knew how to make me feel like a feminine woman when I was in his presence. My new guy is really sweet, but I just don't feel girly and turned on as easily when I'm with him. In fact, I feel more like a neutral friend or big sister when we're together. There's just no spark between us anymore. I hate to admit it, but I think I made a mistake by breaking up with my ex. I miss the way he made me feel. I want to feel sexual attraction and love for my man again. This new relationship is nice, but I'm bored."

At this point she will likely say, "I haven't healed from my previous relationship. I need time alone," and break up with you.

Yet, here's the thing!

Even though her ex makes her feel a more compelling type of attraction and love, it doesn't mean that he's perfect for her, or that you can't get her back.

When you make some attractive adjustments to the way you think, act and behave around her (e.g. treat her more like a sexy, desirable woman than like a platonic friend), you will be ready to properly re-attract her.

Remember: Right now, she's focusing on all the missing pieces of the attraction experience that she didn't get with you (e.g. her ex was more emotionally strong, he made her feel more feminine and girly, he was more assertive and confident, he didn't let her walk all over him).

However, that doesn't mean that there aren't things about you that are more attractive to her than what her ex can give her (e.g. you're more emotionally mature, you have drive and determination, you're loving and caring, you don't take her for granted, you have good intentions).

So, if you want to make your girlfriend see you as better than her ex, it's very important that you find out what she secretly wanted from you that you weren't giving her and start improving on that right away.

In most of the cases that I've worked on where a guy told me that his woman needed to "heal," it turned out that he was being too much of a softie with her.

In other words, he needed to man up and get into the position of power, rather than being way too nice and sweet to her all the time.

If that applies to you, then make sure that you don't try to get her back by being even nicer and sweeter.

That will not work.

You have to be prepared to attract her in the ways that really matter to her.

Then, when you interact with your ex from now on and she sees for herself that, not only are you great in so many ways that she really loves and respects (e.g. you're caring and loving, you're ambitious and forward thinking), but that you've also changed and improved on some of the things that caused her to feel more attracted to her ex (e.g. you're more confident now and believe in your value to her, you're more assertive and emotionally dominant).

As a result, she won't be able to stop herself from doubting her decision to break up with you.

She will look at you in a positive light and realize that you aren't so bad after all and probably the one for her.

She will then start comparing you to her ex and possibly begin seeing that he's not really as great as she's been making him out to be (e.g. he might be more emotionally strong, but he's not supportive of her dreams and ambitions. He might make her feel more feminine and girly in his presence, but he's also jealous and controlling, or he's abusive or arrogant).

When this begins to happen, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again because you are now giving her the attraction experience she always wanted from you.

By changing and letting her experience a different type of attraction for you, it also highlights her ex's flaws, which makes the ex back process even easier for you.

All of a sudden, she begins to think something like, How could I possibly have thought my ex was a better man than my current boyfriend? I let myself believe in fairy tales by getting back with the ex who doesn't really care about me as much as I care about him. I allowed the best man to slip through my fingers because I thought I hadn't healed from the break up. Will he ever be able to forgive me for being such so selfish and give me one more chance? and then the idea of being with you again feels like something she really wants to do.

Warning: Where a lot of guys go wrong in cases like this is by trying to help her heal by discussing the problems of her past relationship.

It seems like a good idea, but it usually only highlights to her the attractive differences between her ex and you and usually, not in your favor.

Why?

What women feel attracted to, doesn't always make 100% logical sense.

For example: How women feel more sexually attracted to bad boys than to really nice guys.

It seems crazy, but if you think about it, men do the same thing when they feel attracted to bad girls (e.g. pornstars, strippers).

So, if you try to point out his bad qualities and show her that you are so much nicer than him, it's like a plain, unattractive woman trying to convince you that she is more attractive than your favorite female pornstar that you've jerked off to plenty of times.

Attraction doesn't always make 100% logical sense, so you have to be careful and avoid trying to convince a woman to have feelings for you based on your nice, good qualities.

Instead, focus on making her feel attracted to you by displaying personality traits and behaviors that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, emotional masculinity, charisma, humor).

Rather than trying to convince her to not feel attracted to her ex, you should focus on making her feel so attracted to you now that she naturally loses interest in her past attraction for him.

Another reason why a woman might say that she still hasn't healed from her previous relationship is because

2. She's trying to come up with a reason for the break up that he can't fix

Most women know that if they come right out and reveal their true, hidden reasons why they want to break up with a guy (e.g. he's not manly enough, he's too emotionally sensitive, she doesn't feel much of a spark with him), he might try to change her mind by offering to change those exact things.

Some of her concerns are that

- If she tells him that he's not emotionally strong enough for her and that he's too needy, clingy and dependent on her, he might suddenly pretend that he's fixed those things (e.g. by acting tough around her and treating her with indifference), even though deep down he's the same guy and will gradually revert to his old behavior after getting her back.
- He might try to talk her out of her decision (e.g. by begging and pleading with her, promising to do whatever she wants, telling her that he can't live without her).
- She doesn't want to feel like she is going to be responsible for shaping him into the man that he needs to become throughout life.

- He might become angry and in some cases, even violent.

So, rather than have to deal with an emotional man (who is either begging, pleading, crying, or getting emotional) a woman will sometimes say something along the lines of, “Iâ€™m sorry, but I canâ€™t do this anymore. Itâ€™s too much for me to handle. I havenâ€™t healed from my previous relationship. Itâ€™s not you, itâ€™s me. I need time to be alone so I can figure myself out and heal.”

She knows very well that giving her guy a reason like that will make it difficult for him to come up with a way of making things right between them.

Of course, as a desperate measure to make her change her mind a guy might then try to get her to counseling by saying something along the lines of, “Why donâ€™t we go to counseling first and see if that will help you heal before you make any rash decisions about breaking up with me? Maybe you should seek help. I will take you if you want. I will pay if you want. Please, just donâ€™t give up on us now. I love you so much. I will be patient. I will help you through this.”

Yet, since a woman is simply trying to let the guy down easy, sheâ€™s not going to be open to counseling and might then say, “Look, I need some time apart to sort my feelings out. Just give me some space and maybe, sometime in the future, we can get back together.”

Then, when the guy agrees (because he thinks he still stands a chance of getting her back by simply waiting), she will use that time apart to find a replacement guy, or get back with her ex.

Another reason why a woman might say that she still hasnâ€™t healed from her previous relationship is thatâ€¦

3. Sheâ€™s just being a drama queen and making her life more stressful than it needs to be

Some women are addicted to failing at relationships and in life, so they will continue to ruin relationships and push perfectly good guys away.

Itâ€™s just the way they are and it usually has nothing to do with the guy.

The mistake that some guys make is being extra sweet and supportive to a woman like that when she doesnâ€™t even need it (because ruining good relationships and getting caught up in the drama of it is the way that she likes to live her life).

A guy might try to please her by buying her flowers, helping her out financially (e.g. paying for some of her bills) and making himself available to her every beck and call, in the hopes that she will change her mind and realize that he is the one for her.

Yet, rather than make her think, “Iâ€™m being so unreasonable and I almost lost the perfect guy. I should be more sensible and just stop creating drama” sheâ€™ll likely be thinking of still more reasons why she feels turned off by him (e.g. heâ€™s too easy, heâ€™s wimpy and weak-minded, she feels more emotionally dominant than him) and she will then pull even further away from him than she already has.

She knows that pretty much every other guy has reacted in the same way when she has created drama.

Yet, what she is really looking for is a guy who doesnâ€™t get dragged into her drama because he doesn't allow his time to be wasted by that kind of silly behavior from a woman.

Of course, most guys who get dumped by a woman who needs to "heal" are not the kind of guy who will say, "Okay, fine. See ya later. Enjoy your healing."

Instead, they are the type of guy who will try to reason with her, fix the non-existent problem and suck up to her in any way possible to avoid being dumped.

What she wants is a guy who just doesn't get tricked by her silly drama and instead, can make her chase him.

If he can't make her feel that way, she will continue on and ruin other relationships until a guy finally doesn't take her drama so seriously and make her become the one who chases.

So, although it might be hard for you to admit that your ex might be the kind of woman who is in the habit of ruining perfectly good relationships, it's a possibility you need to consider.

For example: Some questions you can ask yourself right now are

- Does my ex have a history of failed relationships where the guy seems to be a decent guy, but she just isn't satisfied with him for some weird or random reason?
- Were there things about my thinking and behavior that turned her off in the relationship (e.g. I was too needy and clingy, I took our love for granted, I allowed her to wear the pants in the relationship), or did she just create drama over insignificant things to see if I'd fall for it and lose confidence in myself?
- Can I easily get myself a replacement woman who is more loyal, respectful and beautiful than her, or do I secretly believe that she's as good as it gets for me?

Finally, another reason why a woman might say that she needs to "heal" as a reason to break up with a guy is that

4. The relationship was a rebound and it has now served its purpose

If your woman got into a relationship with you immediately or shortly after breaking up with her ex, then you were the rebound.

A rebound is usually the guy who is used as a way of getting over her ex and hopefully moving on.

Some rebound relationships work (i.e. if the guy is able to make her feel more respect, attraction and love than her ex), but most fail because the new guy (the rebound) isn't everything a woman really wants (e.g. he's too nice, not manly enough, puts up with her drama).

So, even though the rebound may be a great guy with good intentions, it doesn't mean that his approach will make the woman even happier than she was with her ex.

For example: A woman's ex boyfriend might have cheated on her and dumped her after treating her badly throughout the relationship.

In most cases (to make herself feel better), her rebound guy is going to be someone who is really nice, supportive, generous and caring.

This allows her to feel appreciated, safe and loved after being treated so badly by her ex.

Yet, when her self-esteem is boosted back up by all the nice treatment from her rebound, she realizes that although he is sweet and kind, heâs just too much of a pushover.

She wants a guy who is a good man, but isn't such a wimp around her.

So, even though she doesn't want to be with a guy who is exactly like her ex (e.g. domineering, untrustworthy bad guy), she also doesn't want to be with a really nice guy who doesn't have the balls to stand up to her when necessary.

She wants a man who is somewhere in between her two previous exes.

A guy who loves her and cares about her, but also makes her feel like she needs to continually impress him and live up to his standards.

In other words, a guy who is more of a challenge than a super sweet, supportive nice guy who puts up with her bad behavior and bad treatment of him just to spend time with her.

So, rather than get into long debates and discussions with him about why she wants to break up, she will usually just say, â You know how bad things were between me and my ex. The truth is, I still haven't healed from that relationship and I need time to do that first before I consider committing again. Please understand. You're a great guy, but I'm just not the right woman for you. I'm messed up and I need time to heal.

He might then tell her that he will wait for her no matter how long it takes or that he doesn't care that she is messed up.

He doesn't realize that she's breaking up with him because she secretly isn't attracted to him anymore and is planning on moving on.

The poor guy, right?

I know.

That's why I write so many of these articles and create so many videos.

I hope to reach guys like you and him, so I can help you avoid the pain of trying to get her back in the wrong way (and being continually rejected) and just get her back the easy way.

What is the easy way?

To focus on making her feel attracted to you for real.

Make her have strong feelings for you, so that her ex and other guys no longer seem appealing.

She looks at you and realizes that you have everything she has been looking for.

You are the complete man that she has been looking for her entire life.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get Your Ex Back if She Hates You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

So, how can you get an ex back who hates you?

She can't stand the sight of you anymore, she's had enough, she's telling you to go away and leave her alone and she just doesn't want anything to do with you anymore.

How can you get her back?

In this video, I've got 4 tips for you to help you get your ex back even if she hates you.

1. Understand the truth about hate

[image: You can get your ex to stop hating you]

Hate doesn't last forever if the thing that you hate changes.

In the case of an ex, if you can make her smile, laugh and feel good around the new and improved version of you, it becomes impossible for her to hold onto the hate.

[image: Changing your ex's feelings from hate to love]

She can't help but smile, laugh and feel good.

She can see that you really do make her feel differently now.

Think about something that you hate in life or someone that you hate out there in the world.

If that person or that thing continues to be the same way, then it's likely that your hate will continue.

You might change eventually and think, "Alright, well I don't need to hate that anymore," and you might gradually become more indifferent towards it, but if the thing that you hate changes today or tomorrow, then you can stop hating it right away.

Likewise, with your ex, if she hates the way that you have been going about trying to get her back, then you need to change the way that you've been approaching the ex back process.

That leads me to tip number 2...

2. Quickly change the things about you that turn her off

[image: Stop doing the things that will make her hate you]

When guys are trying to get an ex woman back that hates them, they're usually making mistakes such as:

- Sending her way too many texts.
- Calling her all the time.
- Trying to discuss the relationship over and over again even though she's not feeling attracted.
- Asking her to explain what he needs to change.
- Asking her to try to work on the relationship to give him another chance.
- Asking if the door is still open.

- Pestering her, annoying her and so on.

When a guy is doing those things, he often knows that he's not doing the right thing, but he doesn't know what else to do.

He feels so in love with her.

He feels so hurt by the breakup.

He wants her back.

He just wants to get the relationship back to where it was before, when things were good.

Yet, he doesn't know how to go about it in a way that's going to make her want the relationship as well.

A guy might then think something like, "Okay. If I show her how much I love her and I explain how sorry I am and I explain that things can be different, then she might give me another chance."

Yet, that doesn't work because if a woman doesn't feel respect for her ex guy, she isn't going to feel much attraction for him.

When a woman doesn't feel respect and attraction for a guy, she doesn't feel like she's in love with him. She doesn't feel motivated to want to be in a relationship.

She doesn't respect him because he's being annoying, he's being insecure, he's being desperate in a way and it's turning her off.

So, if a guy wants to get her back and he wants to stop her hating him, he has to start focusing on being a man that she can respect.

What's an example of that?

For example: A guy got broken up with because he became insecure and emotionally sensitive in the relationship. He just lost his confidence.

He may have been confident at the start of the relationship, but somewhere along the way, he started to lose his confidence, he became insecure and he became emotionally sensitive in the relationship.

As a result, he started behaving in all sorts of ways that were out of character for him.

He might have been clingy and needy and jealous and controlling and all those sorts of things.

As a result, his woman is not going to feel respect for him.

She's not going to be able to feel attracted to him and she's not going to be in love with him.

So, if he wants to get her respect back, he has to show her that he has moved beyond the level that he was at when she broke up with him.

He's no longer that insecure guy.

He doesn't have to be perfect.

He doesn't have to be the most confident guy in the world all of a sudden, but he needs to be confident around her no matter what and that leads me to the next tip.

3. Prepare to be tested

When getting an ex back, she is going to test you, especially she used to hate you and now is feeling some respect and attraction for you.

She'll be interacting with you and she'll be thinking, "Well, okay. He's different now. I actually kind of feel good interacting with him, but is this real? Is he really that confident now? Is he really that emotionally strong?"

To find out, she will test you.

Say, for example, you're interacting with your ex woman and you're having a conversation, you're getting her laughing.

What she will do to test you is suddenly stop showing interest in the conversation.

She will change her mood and start to act indifferent.

She might also not laugh at some of your jokes to see how you're going to react.

She wants to see whether you are going to crumble under her pressure.

Is the confidence that you have in yourself now real or are you just putting on a front?

Are you acting confident when, really, on the inside, you're panicking, you feel insecure, don't feel worthy of her and are out of control on the inside?

Are you really confident?

Are you a man that she can respect again?

Are you a man that she can feel attracted to and be in love with?

Another example of this is where a guy got broken up with by his woman because he was taking her for granted.

He may have been a good guy at the start of the relationship, but over time, he started treating her badly.

He didn't really put in a lot of effort into the relationship and maybe talked badly to her, didn't appreciate her, didn't see her enough or didn't give her enough attention if they were living together.

He just didn't make her feel loved and appreciated.

So, when he shows her that he has moved beyond the level that he was at when she broke up with him and he's become a more balanced man now, she's going to test him.

She's going to act like whatever he is doing for her isn't enough.

He will try to make her feel good, he'll try to make her feel appreciated, he'll try to make her feel loved and she will act like it's just not good enough, it's too late and she's not going to believe that he has changed.

She wants to see whether he is going to crumble under the pressure that she's putting on him.

So, when you are getting your ex back who hates you, just be prepared to be tested.

The tests are going to come.

You need to be ready for that.

Don't look at it as, "Oh, no! I'm losing her! I've screwed up! I've messed up. I can't get her back. She seems indifferent. She seems uninterested. I'm losing her. I can't do this."

No.

You've got to remain strong no matter what.

By the way, one of the reasons why you need to remain strong at all times is that women are not attracted to the emotional weakness in men.

So, you need to give her what she wants by being emotionally strong.

She wants to feel attracted to you.

She wants to be able to respect you and you're going to be able to achieve that by being emotionally strong.

4. Be a man that she can be happy with now

[image: Be a man that she can be happy with now]

Leading up to the breakup, during the breakup and after the breakup, you were most likely not being the type of man that she could be happy with.

Yet, what about now? Have you changed?

Have you become the sort of man that can make her smile and laugh and feel respectful of you?

Are you able to interact with her in ways that make her feel attracted, feel like she's in love with you again, feel like she wants to be with you?

That is what really matters.

You've got to make sure that you're not continuing to do the things that were turning her off and making her hate you.

You've got to stop all that and start focusing on being the sort of man that she can be happy with now.

Part of being the sort of man that she can be happy with now is understanding where you went wrong in the relationship, where you were turning her off and improving those things about yourself.

For example: Sometimes a guy feels like he's doing the right thing by giving his woman all the power in the relationship.

He'll let her decide everything, he'll ask her how she feels all the time, he'll be really concerned about how she feels and what she wants and try to do everything for her to make her happy.

Yet, he doesn't realize that that actually pisses women off.

They don't want to be in a situation where a guy is essentially following her lead and making her the boss of the relationship, making her be the one that he is looking up to and respecting and feeling like he needs to follow her.

Women don't want that.

Women do want to be respected. They do want to be loved. They do want to be appreciated, but they also want a man who can take on the position of power.

That doesn't mean that a guy needs to be bossing a woman around and telling her what to do all the time and being a really aggressive type of bossy man.

Instead, it's about being that confident, good man that she can look up to and respect, she can follow, she can listen to, she can be a good girl for.

That's what women really want.

So, part of being the sort of man that she can be happy with now is understanding where you were going wrong in the relationship and understanding what areas you need to fix and improve and adjust to make her feel respect, attraction and love when she next interacts with you.

Let her see that you've gone beyond the level that you were at when she broke up with you.
You've become more of a complete man now.
You've become the sort of man that she can look up to and respect.
You've become the sort of man that she can actually stay in love with.

Learn More?

I hope you've enjoyed this video and if you need more help to get your ex back, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System.
It's a step-by-step system and when you follow the steps, your ex will give you another chance even if she hates you right now.
You will be able to get her to stop thinking about you in such a negative light and start feeling good about interacting with you and being with you.
You'll be able to make her feel respect for you again, make her feel attracted, make her start to fall back in love with you.
You'll be able to get her to forgive the behavior that you were displaying leading up to the breakup, during the breakup and after the breakup.
You'll be able to get her to look at who you are now and focus on how she's feeling about you now.
She will be feeling respect for you.
She'll be feeling attracted to you.
She'll be feeling sparks of love again.
She will be feeling drawn to you.
She will want to give the relationship another chance.

Fact: You Can Change How She Feels About You

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that you can change how she feels about you.
At the moment, it might feel like it's almost impossible to get her to stop hating you.
All the things that you said and you did really annoyed, really pissed her off, made her want to get away from you and not see you anymore.
She doesn't want anything to do with you, but you can change how she feels.
If your ex really hates you at the moment, then when you interact with her and you make her feel respect and attraction for you, what she's going to initially feel is doubt.
She's going to doubt whether it is real.
She's going to doubt whether you could sustain that and you could actually continue being that sort of guy.
Yet, as the conversation and interaction continues between you and her, she'll start to see that it is real.

You are the sort of guy that she can respect and feel attracted to now.

Then she goes from doubt to disappointment.

She starts to feel disappointment because she can see that you are the sort of guy that she can respect and feel attracted to now, so she thinks, “Well, why weren’t you like that during the relationship? Why weren’t you like that when I was breaking up with you? Why weren’t you like that after the breakup? Why are you just doing it now?”

As the conversation and interaction continues and she feels respect and attraction for you, then she’ll start feeling like there’s no point holding on to the doubt and disappointment because it’s obviously real.

She’s feeling sparks of respect for you, she’s feeling sparks of attraction, she’s starting to reconnect with some of the love that she used to feel for you.

From there, she starts to look at you as not being so bad after all and she starts to feel a bit of hope.

She starts to think, “Well, maybe I should give him another chance. Maybe I should just hug him. Maybe I should just go with what I’m feeling and see what happens.”

So, if your ex hates you at the moment, don’t worry.

Hate doesn’t last forever if the thing that you hate changes.

If you’re interacting with your ex and you’re making her feel respect and attraction for you and you’re building on those feelings, then she is going to go through a series of emotions.

She is going to look at you in a more positive light.

She’s going to let go of the hate that she used to feel for you.

She’s going to be able to forgive the way that you behaved.

She’s going to be focused on how good she feels with you now.

As a result, you and her get back together even though it started out as her hating you.

You guided her through the process, you made her feel respect and attraction for you again, you made her reconnect with the love and you got her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get Your Ex Back After a BAD Break Up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

So, how can you get an ex back after a bad breakup?

In this video, I'm going to teach you how to get her to stop looking at the breakup in such a negative light and look at you as the man that she wants to be back with.

How do you do that?

The first step is to stop looking at the breakup in such a negative light yourself.

If you play the break up scenes over and over in your mind, you're going to start to feel down about yourself.

You're going to start to think, "Man, why did I behave like that? Why did I send her that text? Why didn't I just end the phone call before I said all those stupid things? Why did I get angry at her? Why did I do this? Why did I do that?"

You're going to feel down about yourself.

You're going to think about how she reacted and how annoyed she was, how turned off she was and then you're going to doubt that you could get her back.

Yet, that's actually the worst thing that you can do if you want to get a woman back.

Why? To get a woman back, you have to be emotionally attractive to her.

This comes down to how you make her feel when you interact with her.

When she interacts with you, does she feel happy, attracted, respectful of you?

Does she feel sparks of love or does she feel turned off?

Does she feel resentful?

Does she feel frustrated?

Does she feel angry? Does she feel like she just wants to get away from you?

That's what really counts.

Being Emotionally Attractive to Your Ex Again

[image: Being emotionally attractive to your ex again]

So, how can you be emotionally attractive to your ex the next time you interact with her?

Here are a couple of examples...

1. Insecure vs. confident.

If a guy is interacting with his ex-woman and he's being insecure, she's not going to feel emotionally attracted to him.

Women are not attracted to the emotional weaknesses of men, such as insecurity and self-doubt.

On the other hand, if a guy is interacting with his ex-woman and he is being confident no matter what she says or does, then she is going to feel emotionally attracted to him.

She might not admit it and she might try to hide it by acting indifferent and acting like it's not having an effect on her.

However, attraction is an automatic reaction that cannot be turned off.

She might not be happy with how the breakup went and how he behaved, but she is going to feel some emotional attraction for him if he is able to be confident no matter what she says or does.

Another example is where a guy is feeling down about himself versus a guy is feeling good about himself...

2. Feeling down vs. feeling good.

Women don't feel attracted to the emotional weaknesses in men so if a guy is feeling down and he's feeling unworthy of his ex-woman then she's going to be turned off by that.

One of the reasons why emotional attraction is so important in the ex back process is that it's what she cares about.

All I care about is you getting her back, all you care about is getting her back, but what does she care about?

How she feels.

She is an individual and for an individual to want to be in a relationship, they have to feel attracted, feel respectful and feel like they're in love or they could be in love again.

Without those feelings, an individual doesn't want to be in a relationship.

So, if your ex is feeling turned off by you at the moment, doesn't feel like she's in love with you and doesn't feel like she can respect you, then she's not going to feel drawn to want to be in a relationship.

This is why it's so important to focus on being emotionally attractive to your ex again, regardless of how bad your break up was.

It's only when you make her have some feelings for you again that she will be willing to begin looking at you in a more positive light.

To become more emotionally attractive, one of the first things that you need to do is to stop looking at how you behaved in such a negative light.

Stop playing those scenes over in your mind and instead start to laugh at how you behaved.

Why?

If you focus on how badly you behaved, you're not going to feel very confident about your attractiveness to her and you won't feel worthy of her.

As a result, you won't be emotionally attractive.

Remember: Women are not attracted to emotional weakness in men. You've got to be emotionally strong.

So, start to look at the break up in a more light-hearted way and think, "Damn. Why did I say that? Why did I react in that way? Why did I send her that damned text? That was silly."

[Say that to yourself with a smile. Laugh about it. See it as funny or silly that you behave that way. Laugh at how you behaved and reacted during the break up].

After doing that, you then need to focus on the fact that who you were during the break up, isn't who you are now.

You are a much wiser man now.

You are a better man as a result of going through that experience.

You have improved.

You've become a better man.

You're not like other people who continue to make the same mistake over and over in their life and never learn anything about it, never improve.

You have made a mistake, you've learned from it and you've become a better man as a result.

So, focus on who you are now rather than how you were behaving back then and rather than how she was reacting to you back then.

You Are Not Alone

Another thing to do is to realize that it's not just you who has gone through a bad break up or reacted badly to getting dumped.

When someone gets dumped, they don't normally handle the breakup very well.

That applies to men and women all over the world.

It's not just you.

If you think about the top 10 songs on the radio or the top 100 chart, have a look and you'll notice that most of them are about a breakup, wanting an ex back, being hurt by an ex, missing an ex, feeling regret about an ex, wanting to reach out to an ex and so on.

It's not just you.

Even these famous singers go through that experience themselves.

Likewise, if you ever watch those celebrity news shows, you'll see that celebrities go through it as well.

It's not just you.

When someone gets dumped, whether it's a man or a woman, they often behave in a way that they look back on and regret.

They think, "Damn, that was a bad breakup. The way that I behaved was really irresponsible, really immature. I shouldn't have done that. I shouldn't have texted her this. I shouldn't have said that. I shouldn't have arrived at her door and demanded that she speak to me. I shouldn't have been calling her all throughout the night. I shouldn't have done those things."

In your case, whatever you did is what you did.

It wasn't the best thing to do, it wasn't the most productive and effective thing to do, but that is what happened.

If you keep focusing on it and thinking of yourself as being a bad man, not good enough, just someone that should hang his head in shame, then you're not going to be doing what is required to get an ex-woman back, which is to be emotionally attractive.

If you're not emotionally attractive, you're not giving her what she wants.

You've got to remember that it's about her feelings.

If she is going to want to get back into a relationship with you, she needs to be able to feel emotionally attracted to you when she interacts with you.

If you are hanging your head in shame, feeling down about yourself, feeling depressed, losing confidence in yourself, feeling like you're not good enough for her, then you're not going to be coming across in a way that is emotionally attractive to a woman.

So, while you might feel a bit down and regretful about how you behaved leading up to the breakup, during the breakup and after the breakup, it's best to just look at that as a learning experience.

Yes, you might feel sorry about it and yes, you might briefly apologize to your woman when you interact with her, if you haven't done that already.

However, it's not something to remain focused on.

Focus on What Will Work to Get Her Back

[image: Get her back after a bad break up]

If you want your woman back, you've got to be focused on what is going to work, which is to interact with her and be emotionally attractive.

Let her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you when she interacts with you.

Let her feel sparks of love.

Let her start to look at you in a more positive light.

Let her start to look at what happened between you and her as regretful, but at the same time kind of funny.

The way that you reacted, the way that she said this and she did that and the way that you then did this, it's kind of funny.

When you make her have feelings for you again then you are giving her what she wants.

What she wants is to be able to feel good around you.

She wants to be able to feel happy, feel attracted, feel intrigued, feel drawn to you, want to hug you and kiss you and want to be in your arms.

She wants to feel like she is in love with you.

If you interact with your ex and you're being emotionally attractive, she's going to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She's going to start to feel sparks of love.

She's going to start to reconnect with the love that she used to feel for you.

Then, if you don't get her back right away, she's going to be thinking about you.

She's going to be thinking, "Why am I feeling so drawn to him? Why do I want to call him? Why do I want to see him? Why am I worried about losing him all of a sudden? Why do I want to kiss him? Why do I want to be next to him? Why am I feeling drawn to him?"

That is how you get an ex-woman back.

Remember, what is most important to me is that you get her back.

What is most important to you is that you get her back.

That's all you and I care about, but what does she care about?

Her feelings.

She is an individual and unless she feels drawn to you and feels respect and attraction and sparks of love, she's not going to feel motivated to want to get into a relationship.

A woman doesn't want to get into a relationship with her ex where she feels turned off by him, she doesn't respect him, she's not feeling much or any attraction and she's not feeling like she's in love with him.

There's going to be no motivation for her to want to get back into that relationship. Yet when you trigger her feelings for you then you're giving her what she wants and you can get her back.

Learn More?

I hope you've enjoyed this video and if you need more help to get your ex back, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

It's a step-by-step system and when you follow the steps, you will get another chance with your ex even though it was a bad breakup.

She will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She will feel drawn to you.

She will feel sparks of love and she will feel compelled to give you another chance.

You Can Get Her to Forgive You and Take You Back

[image: Get her to forgive you and take you back after a bad break up]

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is that although you made some mistakes leading up to the breakup, during the breakup and after the breakup, it's not the end of the world.

I've helped so many guys who have reacted badly to a break up to then get their woman back by focusing on what matters the most.

What is that?

Her feelings.

When you focus on making her have feelings for you, then it feels unfinished to her.

The relationship doesn't feel like it's complete.

She is feeling drawn to you.

She's feeling attracted to you.

She's feeling respect.

She's feeling love and as a result, it doesn't feel like it's over.

She thought that she was over you.

She thought that the breakup was the final straw and she didn't want to be with you anymore, but she's feeling attracted to you again.

She's missing you, she wants you back.

This is why it's so important to be active and focus on making her have feelings for you again.

When you do that, things change.

She feels drawn to you.

She opens back up and you can get her back even if it was a bad breakup.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get Your Ex Back After Cheating

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

So, how can you get your ex-woman back after you've cheated on her?

The first thing you need to know is that generally speaking, women take cheating a lot better than men do.

A might not show that when you interact with her though, of course.

A woman might be upset and crying and appear angry and as though she could never forgive you, but generally speaking, most women can handle it a lot better than men.

I think part of the reason for that is how women perceive men who have other women interested in them.

Women don't go around necessarily admitting it, but if you look at what happens you will see that women are very attracted to guys when other women are attracted to that guy.

It's the same thing with a male celebrity, if you think about it.

He doesn't even have to be good looking, but the fact that other women find him attractive and that they want to be with him makes the woman find him attractive.

However, if you think about physically unattractive female celebrities, most guys do not give a crap that she is famous.

Most guys do not give a crap how much money she is making.

They do not want to have sex with her because they do not find her physically attractive.

Yet for a woman, if a male celebrity isn't even physically attractive, she is going to find him attractive because other women like him and want to be with him.

When a woman is in a relationship with a guy who is attractive to other women and they want to have sex with him, it makes her feel more attracted to him.

However, if he goes and cheats on her with one of those women, it makes her feel upset.

It can make her feel like she's not good enough and feel as though he may have enjoyed having sex with that woman more than he enjoyed having sex with her.

For some women though, they aren't concerned about the sex.

Instead, they're more concerned about whether you have more of an emotional connection with that woman compared to her.

Each woman handles cheating differently.

However, generally speaking, women can handle being cheated on better than a man in most cases.

They can deal with it, they can forgive him and give him another chance because he is attractive to her and he's attractive to other women.

I can also tell you from personal experience back when I was dating and I had multiple women in my life, I would find myself in a position where I had 4 or 5 women in my life at once.

[image: Dan Bacon - playboy]

[image: Dan Bacon - playboy]

[image: Dan Bacon - playboy]

[image: Dan Bacon - playboy]

Sometimes I would have a girl who would say that she wants to become my number one girl.

She would be excited about that and she would try hard to become my number one.

If you don't know, I'm married now and I don't make my wife feel like she is one of many because she is my number one woman.

Here's a photo around the time that my wife and I met in a night club.

[image: Dan Bacon with girlfriend at nightclub]

She was 20 when I met her and I was 35. We've been together for almost 5 years now and the relationship just gets better and better all the time.

[image: Dan Bacon wife kissing]

However, I just want to point out that when I was dating multiple women at once, they weren't angry about that.

They pretended to be pissed off, they pretended to be angry, but they kept coming back week after week.

Each woman would get to see me once a week and some girls would get to see me twice a week, but they kept coming back.

Now, if you would ask those women when they were in that situation whether they were happy about it, they would say no.

They would say, "Dan's an asshole. He doesn't treat me good enough. It's not fair. He's seeing all these other women. He's bad."

Yet, they kept coming back every week.

Although women won't go around admitting it, women do find men attractive when other women find that man attractive.

It's not the same for us men.

We men can instantly find a woman attractive and want to have sex with her simply based on her appearance.

It doesn't matter if other guys find her attractive.

[image: Insta Attraction]

We have an instant reaction to women because most of our attraction for a woman is based on her physical appearance initially.

Of course, when a guy talks to a woman, that doesn't mean that he's going to continue feeling attracted to her.

He may be turned off by her personality and behavior and not want to have sex with her anymore.

However, the main thing that we find attractive about women is their physical appearance initially.

For a relationship, we also want a woman to be a good woman, to be down to earth, easy-going, intelligent, warm and loving and so on.

On the other hand, what women find most attractive about a man is his emotional attractiveness, who he is as a man, his confidence, his charm, his charisma, his sex appeal.

Do other women find him attractive?

Are other women finding his personality and behavior attractive?

If so, then a woman sees that as a signal that the guy is attractive.

Women have been interacting with him, they've found his confidence attractive, they've found his personality attractive, they have found him emotionally attractive.

Therefore, she doesn't need to go through a long process of trying to find out whether he is attractive to her emotionally.

She can just look at how other women are reacting to him and say, "Wow. This guy is attractive. Other women have interacted with him. They like his confidence. They like his personality. They find him attractive. He is a catch."

So, how all of this relates to getting your ex back when you have cheated on her is that although she might be upset and hurt by the fact that you've cheated on her, the truth is that she doesn't see it as being all that bad.

Even though she most likely won't admit it to you or anyone else, there is a part of her that likes the fact that other women find you attractive.

Depending on the woman, it definitely can hurt her that you cheated on her and it definitely can make her feel like she's not good enough, but there has got to be a part of her that likes the fact that other women want you as well.

That said, cheating on your woman is definitely not a great way to keep a relationship together.

You have made the mistake, but it's not the end of the world. You can fix this situation and get her back.

How do you do that? Here are 6 tips to help you.

6 Tips to Get Your Ex Back After Cheating on Her

1. Apologize and accept the breakup, but tell her that you love her.

You've most likely already apologized to your woman.

If you haven't done that already, go ahead and do that.

Apologize for cheating on her, accept the breakup, but tell her that you love her as well.

It's not about apologizing, accepting the breakup then saying, "See you later. If you don't want to talk to me again, the ball is in your court. I'm gone."

Tell her that you love her.

Throw her a bone.

Give her something to hold on to.

Now, of course, not every guy does that when he's cheated on his woman and she's breaking up with him.

Some guys make the mistake of begging and pleading and apologizing over and over again, sucking up to her, trying to be super nice and trying to convince her that things will be different.

Don't worry if you have made that mistake or have done something similar.

You can still fix the situation and get her back.

What you need to do is what I will explain later in the video.

For now, let's move on to the next tip.

2. Re-attract her and then give her a week of space

After a breakup where you have cheated on your woman, it's best to give her a week of space.

I don't recommend giving any longer than that because giving her a week of space proves the point.

You never need to give your woman more than a week of space after a breakup to then contact her again, re-attract her and guide her through the ex back process.

If you wait too long, what happens is that most women just move on.

They want to make themselves feel better so they hook up with a new guy or they start flirting with guys at work or where they study or through friends and the next thing you know she's in a rebound relationship.

So, what I recommend is that before you give her a week of space, create a spark of attraction inside of her.

Interact with her, make her laugh, make her smile, make her feel attracted to your confidence, make her feel attracted to your charm and charisma that she loves so much about you.

Give her that spark, give her that feeling and then give her a week of space.

3. Attract her if she contacts you during the week of space

If your ex-woman contacts you because she's missing you, you don't have to ignore her texts and continue giving her that full week of space.

Each woman is different.

Some women just need 1 or 2 days and then they're missing you terribly and they want you back. Some women need 3 or 4 days, some women need a full week before they realize that you're not desperately chasing after them.

She feels attracted to you, she is missing having you in her life, she feels like she can forgive you for cheating on her and she wants you back.

Yet, you're not chasing her.

You're not desperately asking for another chance.

You're not blowing up her phone with text messages.

You're not trying to explain yourself and apologize over and over via text messages or emails.

Instead, you attracted her before you gave her a week of space and she's missing you now.

She is feeling like the cheating is something that she can forgive.

Who cares about that other woman that you cheated on her with? She wants you. She feels so attracted to you. Why should other women now get to have you when she wants to be with you?

4. Call her to say hi and make her feel attracted again.

If a guy texts his ex-woman and he tries to get a conversation going with her, she might decide to ignore his text.

She might decide to show him that she's not chasing him and that she's not going to be that easy to get back.

The guy then might make the mistake of thinking that he's losing her and something is wrong and he might start to text her in a bit more of an insecure or desperate way.

Then she really starts to feel turned off by him.

[image: Avoid trying to text your ex back]

There are so many things that can go wrong when you're texting your ex woman, so I always recommend to get her on a phone call.

That way you can instantly create a spark of respect and attraction and love.

You can make her smile and laugh and feel attracted to your confidence.

You can be charming and charismatic and get her to feel that spark, get her to feel drawn to you again, get her to remember how much she feels for you.

5. Meet up with her

When you meet up with her, don't go overboard with trying to make her feel so appreciated now or make her feel so wanted because it can come across as appearing desperate.

Also don't go overboard with apologizing.

You don't want to apologize over and over again and be bowing your head in shame.

That isn't going to make her feel respect and attraction for you.

It isn't going to make her feel like she can look up to you and you are her man.

If you go too far with that sort of stuff, it can come across as though you're groveling like you're trying to suck up to her and that you desperately need another chance with her.

If your relationship was the type where you were in the position of power and she enjoyed that, you don't want to be coming across as though she has all the power now.

If she's the sort of woman who likes a guy to be in a position of power, then she's not going to want to see you groveling and sucking up to her.

So, make sure that you don't go overboard with trying to apologize and make her feel really special and wanted now.

6. Get her to realize that we all live and learn

Yes, you made a mistake by cheating on her.

It wasn't the best thing to do.

It wasn't the nicest thing to do.

It potentially made her feel upset and unloved and not good enough for you.

You made that mistake.

However, everyone makes mistakes throughout life.

Sometimes when you make a mistake, it's a wake-up call for you.

It's a crossroads moment in your life where you realize that you shouldn't be like that.

You know that it was a mistake you don't want to repeat.

You feel much better not being that sort of guy.

You want to be the sort of guy who sticks with his woman, who is faithful to his woman.

You want to be the sort of guy who has a relationship with a woman that gets better and better over time.

You look at her and you find her so attractive. She's more than enough for you.

Of course, don't go overboard trying to say that stuff to her.

If you are going overboard and saying all these things to her, saying that, "I've realized so much. You're just the best. I don't need any other woman. I just want you," and you're coming across as desperate, it's not going to make her feel respect, attraction and love for you.

So, just make sure that you maintain your cool.

Telling her that we all live and learn and getting her to realize that people make mistakes is important because it gives her a reason to try, especially if when you're talking to her she can think about a mistake that she has made or something that she has learned along the way and how it made her become a better person.

She can realize that she's not such a bad person for making that mistake she made in the past.

It actually made her become an even better woman.

It made her become who she is today.

Likewise, your mistake has made you become a better man.

It has made you become who you are today.

You are a better man as a result of making that mistake.

You certainly won't make that mistake again in future.

You have no desire to and you know that it's just not going to happen again.

However, just focusing on talking about that is not the one thing that is going to make her want you back.

What is?

Attraction.

You need to be making her feel attracted to you again.

You need to be making her feel that spark when she interacts with you.

When she interacts with you, sparks fly, she feels respect, she feels attraction, she feels love, she feels drawn to you, she wants to hug you, she wants to kiss you, she wants to be in your arms.

That is what makes all the difference.

Learn More?

I hope this video has helped you and if you need more help to get your ex back, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System.

It's a 7-step system and the same rules apply whether you've cheated on her or you haven't cheated on her. The same rules apply.

What you need to do to get her back is the same.

You need to go through the same series of steps and you need to make sure that you're making her feel attracted and drawn to you again.

You need to make sure that she's feeling that love, she feels drawn to you, she wants to be with you, she wants to be in your arms again.

A Mistake That Can Be Fixed

[image: Get your ex back after cheating on her]

Okay, so one final point that I'll make for you in this video is that, yes, you've made a mistake and yes, she may be upset, but it's not the end of the world.

You can change how she feels about you.

You can get her to smile and laugh and feel happy with you again.

You can get her to look at the mistake you made as something that was a learning process, it didn't mean anything to you and she is what you want.

However, just make sure that you don't go overboard saying that she is the one that you want and you don't want anything else and your life is horrible without her and you just want to be with her and, "Please, please, please give me another chance."

Women don't respect desperation, so just maintain your cool, focus on making her feel attracted and get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get Your Ex Back and Never Lose Her Again

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

So, how can you get your ex back and never lose her again?

It's one thing to get a woman back after a breakup, but keeping her is a different story.

How can you make sure that once you get your ex back, you and her don't break up again, she wants to stay with you, she wants to stick with you, she's in love with you and only wants to be with you?

1. Prepare to attract her in the ways that will make the difference

When some guys are trying to get their ex back, they are offering her things that she's really not that interested in.

She doesn't find it attractive. She doesn't find it inspiring and motivating and it doesn't make her want to get back with him and kiss him and hug him and never want to leave him again.

So, if you're going to get her back and keep her once you get her back, you need to make sure that you are prepared to attract her in the ways that will make the real difference.

For example: If you make the mistake of turning the relationship into a friendship, then you really need to make sure that when you interact with her from now on, she feels a sexual and romantic spark with you.

If you became insecure in the relationship, then you really need to make sure that you are prepared to be totally confident around her.

This means that if she's testing your confidence by acting difficult or being indifferent around you, you need to be prepared for that.

You can't become insecure and let her see that you just don't have the confidence that she's looking for in a man.

If you took her for granted, then you need to allow her to see that you are more of a balanced man now.

You're not going overboard by showering her with gifts and being super nice to her all of a sudden because that would be desperate.

Instead, you are more of a balanced man now.

She can see that.

She can sense it.

She knows that if she were to get back with you again, you're not going to take her for granted.

You've learned your lesson, you have become a better man as a result and you are now a more balanced man.

Another example, if you became emotionally sensitive in the relationship.

You need to make sure that you are emotionally strong now.

Nothing affects you and makes you start to doubt yourself and feel like life is unfair or she's being unfair or it's just all too difficult.

You are so strong that you are emotionally bulletproof.

Nothing that she says or anyone else says makes you doubt yourself and feel insecure.

You don't need her to be nice to you and reassure you in order for you to feel good about yourself.

You're emotionally strong no matter what.

Another example: If you weren't affectionate enough in the relationship, then you need to be a more balanced man.

It's not about going overboard and being super affectionate and coming across as desperate. You just need to be more balanced.

Finally, another example: If you were too clingy.

In that case, you need to stop being so emotionally dependent on her.

You need to be following through on your big dreams, goals and ambitions in life rather than putting too much focus on her.

So, those were some examples of what I mean by preparing to attract her in the ways that will make a difference.

For example: If you turned the relationship into more of a friendship and then you started offering to be nicer to her, to take her on holidays and vacations, to listen more and things like that, it's not going to make the difference.

That's not what she's looking for.

You've got to find out exactly where you were going wrong with her and get things back into balance.

If you were being too much of a friend around her, being too neutral and there wasn't really much of a spark, then you need to focus on making her feel that spark when she interacts with you, whether that's via text, on the phone, via social media or in person.

She needs to be able to feel a spark of romantic and sexual attraction for you.

That is what's going to make her realize and believe that things will be different now.

You don't have to promise it to her, you don't have to say "Hey, things will be different, I promise. It's going to be different this time. I'm going to do this and do that."

You don't even need to tell her.

When you interact with her, she can already sense it; she's picking it up.

She can sense the changes in you.

She can see it.

More importantly, she can feel it.

She feels differently around you now.

When you interact with her, sparks fly.

She feels respect for you, she feels attraction and she feels love.

She wants to hug you, she wants to kiss you, she wants to be close with you. That is what is going to make the difference.

2. Start the ex back process

[image: Start the ex back process]

When it comes to getting an ex back, so many guys make the mistake of just cutting off all contact and waiting around.

A guy hopes that if he stays out of her life, she's going to realize what a great guy he was and she's going to come back to him.

Yet, what I've seen by helping guys to get women back for many, many years now is that cutting off contact and just waiting around doesn't work in approximately 95% of cases.

Why?

There's no attraction.

In the 5% of cases where a woman still feels attracted to her ex-guy and she just can't deal with the pain of not having him in her life, then cutting off contact and waiting around will work.

She'll be sitting around and missing him and she won't be able to move on. She'll think, "I'm just going to get back with him because I can't deal with his pain."

Yet, in 95% of ex back cases, that just doesn't apply.

The woman doesn't feel attracted to the guy anymore.

He turned her off, she broke up with him and she's moving on.

She might feel a little bit of pain and a little bit of regret that she got into a relationship that broke up, but when she thinks about it, she'll realize that she doesn't feel attracted to him, she doesn't really respect him and she's not in love with him anymore so there's no point getting back together.

On the other hand, when a guy doesn't sit around wasting time cutting off contact and just hoping that she comes back and he does something else instead, then things change.

What does he do?

He interacts with her and actively creates a spark with her.

He actively makes her have feelings for him again.

He makes her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

When she interacts with him, she feels something.

She feels respect, she feels attraction and she feels love.

All of a sudden, she starts to think, "Why am I feeling so drawn to him? I thought that I was over him. I thought that we were finished, but now it feels like there's something there between him and I. Why am I feeling drawn to him all of a sudden? Why do I want to hug him? Why do I want to be in his arms again? Why am I imagining kissing him? Why am I thinking about us having sex again? Why am I worried about losing him all of a sudden?"

The reason why is that the guy actively made her have feelings again.

When she broke up with him, she was over it.

She was turned off by him, she was no longer attracted to him, she no longer respected him and she had fallen out of love with him.

So, if a guy then just cuts off contact and hopes that she would change her mind, what I've found is that in approximately 95% of cases, she doesn't change her mind.

She doesn't come back and get into a relationship with him.

What I've found is that sometimes a woman will contact the guy and she will just send him a text or contact him out of the blue because she's curious.

She wants to see if he has moved on or if he's just sitting around missing her and hoping that she changes her mind.

Yet, that doesn't get her back.

It might get her to contact him, but if he's not even prepared to make her feel a spark, then he doesn't get her back.

What I've seen is that in most cases where a guy doesn't go through the ex back process and instead just sits around hoping that she'll contact him and want him back, is that the woman either gets over him and moves on and gets into another relationship.

Alternatively, the guy loses so much confidence in himself because he's sitting around worrying all the time that when she eventually does contact him, he doesn't know how to deal with it.

He's nervous, he's anxious, he's being super nice to her, he's been hesitant and cautious with his words and she feels turned off.

She feels turned off by his lack of confidence.

He doesn't have the balls at that moment to say something a little bit daring to joke around with her, to make her feel a spark, so the interaction feels awkward and boring and tense, then she just moves on.

What I recommend is that, if you want to get your woman back, it's fine to give her a little bit of space.

What I've found is that 3 to 7 days is enough because it proves the point.

When you stop contacting your ex for 3 days or for a week, it shows her that you're not being needy and desperate and bombarding her with text and phone calls. You're in control of your emotions.

So, when you don't contact her for 3 to 7 days, she then sees that, okay, things have calmed down.

You're not being desperate, you're not being needy and clingy and being a pain in the butt.

You are giving her space.

Then what you need to do is interact with her and create a spark.

Actively make her have feelings for you again and guide her through the ex back process.

3. Re-attract her

When it comes to re-attracting an ex, unfortunately, a lot of guys make mistakes with that as well and they end up losing their chance with a woman who would have otherwise given them a chance and gotten back into a relationship.

Here are some examples:

1. Being too neutral.
2. Overacting when trying to seem fine without her.
3. Using obvious tricks like texting her about good memories.

So, with being too neutral, a guy will talk to his ex-woman and there won't be much of a spark there. He'll just be talking to her as though she's a coworker or she's a neutral friend.

There's no sexual spark between them.

He might be afraid to be talking to her in a way that would suggest they are attracted to each other because he doesn't want to get rejected by her.

She's already dumped him and said no to giving him another chance so he feels a little bit unworthy of her.

He hesitates, he loses confidence in himself.

That's not going to work.

You can't be neutral and expect a woman to be excited.

You've got to create a spark if you want her to feel that excitement and feel drawn to you.

The other example is overacting when trying to seem fine without her.

This is a bit of a newbie mistake because if you think about it, it seems like a good idea to act like you don't care about her anymore and your life is just so amazing without her in it.

So, some guys will make the mistake of talking about how happy they are since the breakup, that the breakup was the best thing that ever happened to them and they're just so happy and enjoying life so much now that they're not in a relationship anymore.

Now, the mistake there is going overboard with it because it causes a woman to think, "Oh, really? You're really that happy without me. Okay. Well, I'll show you."

Then she goes and hooks up with a guy or she stops replying to your texts or she says no when you want to try and catch up with her and so on.

Women do respond well when they see their ex happy and enjoying life without them, but when he goes overboard and tries to be vindictive and manipulative by rubbing it in her face by what he says, then it's a different story.

It doesn't make her feel attracted.

Instead, it makes her want to get revenge.

The other example is using obvious tricks like texting her about good memories.

As you would most likely agree, women aren't stupid.

Well, there are some stupid women, of course and we men are the superior species.

No, let's just get real here.

Men and women are pretty much equal when it comes to intelligence.

So, when a guy uses really obvious manipulative tricks like texting her about good memories, then women see right through it.

If a woman doesn't feel respect, attraction and love for her ex-guy anymore, then she's going to look at his texts in a negative way.

For example: If a guy was being insecure leading up to the breakup, during the breakup and after the breakup, then a woman is most likely going to be remembering him as being insecure.

If he was being clingy and needy, then she's most likely going to remember him in that way.

So, if he doesn't do anything to make her feel attracted to the new and improved him before he sends her a text about a good memory, how do you think she's going to look at it?

She's going to be thinking that he's just trying to use tricks on her, he's trying to manipulate her, he's trying to get her to remember the good times because there haven't been good times for a long, long time.

All she can remember is him being insecure and clingy and needy.

Now he's sending her a text about good memories, so she's most likely going to think about it in a negative way.

She's going to imagine him lying in bed alone, feeling all lonely and missing her, thinking about the good times and then sending her a text about it.

She assumes that he's most likely totally in love with her and missing her like crazy.

When she looks at the text, she doesn't think, "Wow, I've got to get back with him because we had some good memories."

Women aren't stupid.

She's most likely going to be focused on what she experienced with him leading up to the breakup, during the breakup and after the breakup.

He hasn't done anything change her perception of him yet, so a text about a good memory will usually just be seen as a cheap shot to make her feel something.

What he needs to do is to be able to create a spark with her when he interacts with her, rather than just hoping that bringing up a good memory will make her want him back.

If she was turned off by him leading up to the break up, during the break up and after the break up, she's not going to be turned on by him simply as a result of him bringing up a good memory.

If he wants her to change how she feels, he needs to be able to let her see for herself that things are different.

Whenever she interacts with him, she feels differently now.

She feels sparks of respect and attraction and love for who he has become since the break up.

She smiles, she laughs and she enjoys being around him.

That is what counts.

4. Get her back by giving her a next level attraction experience

So, if you want to get your ex back and never lose her, you need to be prepared to give her a next level attraction experience.

If you kind of made her feel happy in the relationship, then this time around you need to make sure that she feels really happy.

Of course, this doesn't mean that you need to do so much more work and you need to put in so much more effort. Women aren't happy when a guy essentially becomes their slave and is doing everything for her. Initially, a woman might take that and use a guy for it, but it's not what makes a woman truly happy.

What makes a woman truly happy is when you make her feel so much respect, attraction and love for who you are as a man that she wants to be a good woman for you.

She wants to do nice things for you, she wants to give you a massage, she wants to cook for you, she wants to be sweet, warm and loving to make you happy.

That's what makes a woman really happy.

It's not what women will necessarily go around and admit because they will be embarrassed about that, but if you notice the women who are the happiest with their men, you will see.

She is doing good things for him, she's being a good woman for him, she gets happiness out of being a good woman for him.

So, when I say that this time around you need to make her so much happier and this time around you need to give her a next level attraction experience, it doesn't mean that you have to put in more work. It just means that you have to approach attraction, respect and love differently.

5. Deepen her feelings by continuing to improve your ability to be attractive

An example of this is where a guy is a good guy and his woman does love him, but he lacks emotional masculinity.

He just doesn't have that emotional toughness about him.

As a result, his woman will lose interest in him over time.

If she finds that, generally speaking, she's more emotionally tough than him or he is too emotionally sensitive, it's going to wear on her.

She may put up with it initially when the relationship is new and she's enjoying having sex with him and going out on dates with him and enjoying the start of a relationship.

However, over time, she'll start to withdraw.

She'll start to feel like she's not truly in love with him.

She might love him as a person, but she's just not going to feel like she's in love with him.

He lacks that emotional masculinity.

He lacks that emotional toughness of a man.

Of course, he may have been like that at the start of the relationship which most guys are able to do, but he most likely lost his way which most guys do.

The reason why is that a woman will often be a lot easier at the start.

She'll be more forgiving, more attentive, more gentle and nice at the start of a relationship.

Then she'll start to pour on the tests.

She'll test his confidence, she'll test his will, she'll test his emotional toughness and if he fails and starts becoming emotionally weak or insecure or unstable, then she starts to lose interest.

So, when you get your ex back, you need to make sure that you are focused on deepening her feelings for you by continuing to improve your ability to be attractive to her.

You have to become and be the man that she wants to stay with.

This doesn't mean that you have to put in loads of work and bow at her feet and do everything for her.

That's not the approach that I teach.

It's about being the sort of man that she can look up to and respect, she can feel attracted to and she can be totally in love with, not just love as a person and kind of feel okay with.

It's not about a guy worshipping the ground she walks on, bowing at her feet, doing everything for her and putting in loads more work into the relationship than she does.

Instead, it's about being in a position of power.

You are still a good man, you still treat her well, but you are in the position of power.

She gains pleasure and happiness by treating you well.

It makes her happy to be a good woman for you.

That is the type of relationship dynamic that lasts.

When you see a woman who's happy for life, she's with a man that she can look up to and respect, she feels attracted to and she's in love with.

Learn More?

I hope this video has helped you and if you need more help to get your ex-woman back, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System.

It's 10 hours of video and when you watch the program, you will learn exactly what to say and do to get her back and keep her.

The ex back process that you will learn is about making her have strong feelings for you again, making her want the relationship so much and then getting her back and keeping her in a relationship.

You Can Get Her Back

One final point that I want to make for you is that it's actually very common for relationships to break up, get back together and stay together.

So many relationships out there in the world go through a breakup or two, sometimes even three and get back together.

The ones that work are where the man understands where he has been going wrong, makes some adjustments and then starts giving her the attraction experience that she really wants.

He does that, rather than giving her the attraction experience that he thinks should make her happy (e.g. being a neutral good guy, doing loads of things for her, sucking up to her, letting her have her way all the time).

He changes his approach to her.

He starts being the sort of man that she can look up to and respect.

She starts feeling like a girl again around him, which is what women really want to feel.

Again, they won't necessarily go around saying that because they're embarrassed to admit how they really want to be in a relationship, but just have a look at the women who are the happiest, the women who look at their man with loving eyes, the women who cuddle into their man's arm.

It's the women who have a man who is in the position of power, who is being a man that she can look up to and respect, feel attracted to and be totally in love with for life.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get Your Ex Back Long Distance

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

So, how can you get your ex back if you're in a long distance relationship?

Here are the 12 things that you need to know...

1. Focus on what you can control

When you're in a long distance relationship, you don't really have a lot of control over what she does with her life.

For example: If you're living in another state, another country, if you're deployed in the military or if she's away for work, then you can't really stop her from going out and partying with their friends.

You can't be around to make sure that no other guys are hitting on her.

However, what you can control is how you make her feel.

When you interact with your ex, how do you make her feel?

Are you making her feel turned off by you?

Are you making her feel neutral, like just a friend or are you making her feel attracted and turned on by you again?

Sometimes in a long distance ex back situation, the woman isn't very open to communicating with her ex-guy.

So, it's not always possible to talk to her on the phone a lot or have video calls and things like that.

However, you need to make sure that you take advantage of whatever opportunity you have to make her feel attracted to you.

That may be with a text message, it may be with a phone call, it may be with a video call or it may be with social media.

It might also be a combination of all those things.

If you're going to be successful at getting her back, your focus needs to be on how you're making her feel.

Your actions, your communication style and how you're presenting yourself via social media or on video messages is going to make all of the difference.

If you're making her feel romantically and sexually attracted to you again, then she's going to start feeling drawn to the relationship.

She's going to miss you.

She's going to wish that you and her were in the same city or same town or same home together so you could be together in a real, close relationship.

2. Don't contact her too much

[image: Don't contact your ex too much when you're long distance]

I definitely recommend that you remain in contact with her, but since you and her have broken up, you need to ease up on the contact.

If you are going to contact her, just do it sparingly and make sure that every time you contact her, there's something in the way that you're communicating to her that's going to make her feel a spark of respect or attraction for you.

It's going to make her have feelings for you.

That's what really matters.

You want to be in a relationship with her, but what does she want?

If she's going to be in a relationship with you, she needs to have feelings for you.

She needs to be feeling respect for you.

She needs to be feeling attracted.

She needs to be feeling sparks of love.

She needs to be feeling like she's missing you and wishing that she could be with you.

That's not going to be there if you're contacting her too much and if you're contacting her just in a friendly way.

So, if your ex is still open to communicating with you, I definitely recommend that you keep the lines of communication open, but don't overuse it, especially if you're using text and email to communicate with her.

You really need to limit the amount of time and effort that she has to put in to communicating with you.

What you want is that when she does communicate with you and interact with you, that she feels a spark of attraction, of respect and love.

She actually feels happy and she enjoys interacting with you.

As a result, she starts to miss your presence in her life.

3. Don't try to have long conversations via text or email

[image: Don't try to have long conversations with your ex via text or email]

When you're long distance, it might seem like the only way that you can have a real conversation with her is to send her a long email or a long text message or a long social media message.

Yet, it just doesn't feel good to a woman when her ex-boyfriend or ex-husband is ranting on and on about his feelings and the relationship and how he thinks about himself and her and so on.

She just doesn't want to have to go into that much effort to be communicating with her ex.

What she wants to experience are sparks of respect and attraction and love.

She wants to feel happy and excited interacting with you rather than feeling like it's a chore.

4. Don't ask if she's dating anyone else yet

Now that you and her are broken up, she's most likely going to start dating a new guy or dating new guys to get over you and make herself feel better.

You won't get any benefit out of asking her about that and wanting to know details.

What you need to do as a man is always believe in your attractiveness to a woman.

Never doubt it for a second.

Never look at another guy as being competition to your woman.

You've got to see yourself as the man.

You've got to look at every other guy as not being on your level, like there's no one like you.

You are the man.

You're the best.

You're the best guy that she could ever meet.

End of story.

If you question that and doubt yourself as a result, then you're not the best man she could ever meet, but if you believe it and you act upon it, then you become that man and you are that man.

It's not about saying to her, "Hey, I don't care if you're dating any other guys. No one is like me. I'm so good. You know, look at me. I'm the best."

It's not about saying anything like that.

It's simply about having that mindset where you know that you are one of a kind, that you are a great man.

Yes, you made some mistakes in the relationship, but who hasn't?

Pretty much everyone has stuffed up a relationship at some point in their life.

If you listen to the latest songs coming out on the radio, you'll see that pretty much all of them are about wanting to get an ex back or missing an ex or being hurt by an ex.

It's all about that.

So, don't think that it's just you who has stuffed up a relationship and is wanting your ex back.

Pretty much everyone goes through it.

It's totally normal.

It's totally natural.

The thing that you need to do though is to focus on what you can control.

You've got to focus on how you're making her feel and one of the ways to make her feel respect and attraction for you is to not look at other guys as being competition to you.

You've got to have that relaxed confidence in yourself.

5. Don't appear emotionally weak or needy

If your ex is still open to communicating with you and you're having conversations with her, just make sure that you're not coming across in a way where you need her reassurance, you need her emotional support or you're lost without her, you're sad without her, you're depressed without her.

You don't want to be giving her the impression that you need her to start showing you signs of interest and being nicer to you and giving you hope before you can feel confident again or before you can feel happy again.

You've got to make sure that she can see that you are happy with or without her.

It's not about saying to her, "Hey, I don't need you. I don't care about you. I couldn't give a crap if we got back together."

It's not about saying any of those things.

It's just about having that relaxed confidence in yourself and letting her see that you're not lost without her, that your life is moving on.

You don't have to go and hook up with new women or get into a new relationship or anything like that if you don't want to.

If you want to get into a new relationship or date some new woman while you're waiting for you and her to be able to be in the same city and be together again, then that's fine.

However, you don't need to do that to show her that you're moving on.

It's more about how you come across when you interact with her.

How you talk, how you behave, how you react to her, she's going to be able to pick up on that.

Women are very good at picking up on the subtle cues that men give off.

This also applies if a man is faking the fact that he is moving on without her and that he's fine.

A lot of guys who are in long distance ex back situations talk about how they are living their life and they try to make their ex-woman feel jealous, but she can pick up on the fact that he's just faking it.

She can tell by the way he reacts to her and responds to her and talks to her that he's desperately missing her.

He is lost without her.

He doesn't want to be with any other women but her.

She can pick up on that.

So, don't fake it.

It's got to be real.

6. Give her hope for the future

Now, let me be very clear here.

Giving her hope about the future is not about explaining things to her.

It's not about trying to paint a picture of you and her being together and being so happy and living together forever and all that sort of stuff.

It's not about telling her your feelings for her or your plans to succeed at work or in your business or whatever you're doing.

It's not about that.

What is it about?

It's about her feelings.

That's what really matters when getting a woman back.

She needs to have hope for the future based on the fact that she now feels a lot of respect, attraction and love for you whenever she interacts with you.

So, when she feels that, she starts feeling hopeful about a future with you.

She starts to imagine being back in a relationship with you.

She starts to picture herself going out to dinner with you, going to the movies, going to the beach, kissing, having sex, hanging out and watching TV and so on.

She starts to imagine all those sorts of things.

However, if you don't focus on making her have feelings for you first and you're just trying to talk to her about a relationship and tell her how much you want to be with her, then she's not going to be imagining those things.

She's going to be feeling turned off by your approach and she's going to be imagining you becoming more and more desperate and needy and clingy and insecure.

She's going to imagine a really difficult situation.

What you need to make her see is that things feel good between you and her now.

Whenever you and her interact, she smiles, she laughs.

She feels attracted.

She feels respect for who you are now.

She feels sparks of love for you and it feels good to her.

That is what gives her hope for the future.

7. Be patient

This is one of the difficult parts about a long distance ex back situation.

When a guy is getting his ex back that he lives in the same town or city as, he can get her back pretty much right away or within days or within weeks.

However, in a long distance ex back situation, sometimes it takes months because you're just not going to be able to meet up with her until then.

For example: A man is deployed in the military, his wife is overseas working, she's overseas studying abroad or she has to be in another country because of a family issue and she can't come back for many months.

Whatever your situation is, the fact is that in long distance ex back situations, you need to be patient.

However, you need to make sure that while you're being patient, you're not just sitting around and not improving your ability to attract her.

You've got to be improving your understanding of what it actually takes to make a woman feel respect and attraction and love for you when you talk to her.

For example: If a guy is talking to a woman and he's being insecure and he's talking about how difficult his life is and he needs her to give him emotional support, then she's not going to feel attracted to him.

It doesn't matter how good his intentions are with her, how much he loves her and how good of a guy he is.

None of that matters because she just doesn't want to be his emotional support system.

She doesn't want to be with a man who needs her to be constantly lifting him up and patting him on the back and saying, "Everything is going to be okay."

On the flip side, if a man is interacting with a woman and he's facing challenges in life, but she can see that he's taking those challenges on and he's using those challenges as opportunities to become a stronger and better man, then she feels attracted to him.

If he's focused on solutions rather than complaining and whining and seeking pity, then she feels attracted to him.

So, with long distance ex back situations, while you need to be patient in order to get her back, you also need to make sure that you are living your life and you're continuing to become a better man.

I don't mean to continue to become a better man by focusing on superficial things like going to the gym more, getting a better haircut or some other superficial thing.

There's nothing wrong with going to the gym or getting a better haircut, but what really matters to a woman is emotional attraction, how you make her feel when you interact with her.

Do you make her feel turned on and excited and drawn to you?

Does she feel that lust and mystery about you?

Does she feel excited to want to be touched by you?

Does she feel drawn to want to hug you and be in your arms or does she just feel neutral when she talks to you?

Does she feel like there's no real spark there between you and her?

Worse, does she feel turned off when she talks to you?

Does she feel like, "Ah, you just don't get it. You haven't even changed. You're still basically the same. You're turning me off in the same old ways with your communication mistakes and you just don't understand what it's going to take to make me feel attracted. You don't get me."

So, be patient while getting your ex back long distance, but just make sure that you are improving your ability to make her feel attracted to you.

If you try to get her back and are behaving in unattractive ways, it's just not going to work.

8. Regain the position of power

The way to do that is to make her feel attracted to you again and to want her, but not need her.

You're not chasing the relationship.

You're not still hurt by the fact that she dumped you and she rejected you.

You're doing fine without her.

She's feeling attracted to you again.

She's feeling drawn to you, but you're not chasing her.

You don't actually need her.

You want her, but you don't actually need her.
When you make a woman feel that way, she is thinking about you.
She's missing you, she's imagining being with you, she's feeling drawn to you, she's imagining kissing you and hugging you and having sex with you.
She's imagining being back in a relationship with you.
Yet, she's also noticing that you're not chasing her.
You're not pressuring her to get into a relationship with you.
You're not putting that focus on your feelings in trying to work things out.
You're just making her feel attracted.
She can see that you do want her, but you don't actually need her.
When that happens, you take back the power.
You are a valuable man.
She's attracted to you, but you're not chasing her.
She wants something from you now.
She feels drawn to you.
She imagines being back with you.
She wishes that she could be back in your arms now.
Therefore, you have something that she wants, but you're not giving it to her because you're not chasing a relationship.
You're simply making her feel attracted to you again.

9. Don't be embarrassed about going to meet her

It's obvious that if you go to her town, city or country then you're going there to meet up with her.
So, you don't need to make up lies or look for excuses as to why you're going to be in her town city or country.
You simply have to say to her that, yes, you're going there because you want to catch up with her and say hi, but you're also interested in going there because you want to do XYZ (whatever that is for you).
For example: You might want to travel around that local area. You might want to go to some sort of event there, but let her know that "Hey, one of the main reasons I'm heading over there is because I want to catch up with you and say hi."
Just let her know that you're catching up just as friends and that there's nothing wrong with exes catching up to have a bite to eat or have a coffee to say hi.
There is nothing wrong with that.
It's totally normal and natural.
You don't need to make up excuses or lies and get all weird about it.
Women hate it when guys want something, but they're coming up with all sorts of weird excuses and lies and behaviors that cover up their true intentions.

Women see that as creepy and their guard goes up.

She starts worrying about what you're really going to do when you get there.

Does she have to protect herself? Are you going to hurt her? Are you going to go crazy when you meet up with her? Why are you acting all weird?

Why are you covering up the fact that you're heading to her town or city out of all the cities in the world and you're saying that you're not going there to meet up with her?

Just say to her, "Hey, one of the main reasons I'm heading there is I want to be able to catch up and say hi, you know, grab a bite to eat or grab a coffee, just as friends. I'm also going to be doing this and this, but hey, I'd love to be able to catch up and say hi."

Just own it.

10. Re-attract her at the meet up

Now, what I was just saying in the previous example is that you're going there to catch up with her just as friends.

Yet, you don't actually catch up with her just as friends.

Don't act like a friend who has no sexual interest in her at all.

Saying that you're catching up just as friends gives her a reason to meet up with you.

She can see that, "Okay, he's not trying to desperately get me back. He's calm. Everything is fine. I can catch up with him."

Yet, when you meet up with her, you need to make sure that you are making her feel sexual and romantic attraction for you.

You need to be making sure that you're turning her on by the way that you're interacting with her.

11. Hook up with her or leave her wanting more

[image: Hook up with your ex or leave her wanting more]

This really depends on whether you can catch up with her more frequently or if it's going to be really difficult for you to catch up with her again.

Some guys who are trying to get their ex-woman back long distance can catch up with her once a month or so and it's not really much of a big deal because they are 100 miles away or 100 kilometers away.

Yet some guys are thousands of miles away, thousands of kilometers away and it's not easy to catch up with her.

So, if it's really difficult to catch up with her, then you need to make sure that you try to hook up with her sexually.

You need to make sure that you try to get to a kiss and then you try to get her back to your hotel or back to her place so you can hook up.

If you can see her more regularly, then make her feel attracted and turned on and give her a hug goodbye and then just leave her wanting more.

She will walk away feeling attracted to you, feeling respect for you and feeling sparks of love for you and she'll be thinking, "I want to see him more. Why didn't he kiss me? You know, why am I feeling attracted to him all of a sudden? Why do I want to have sex with him? Why do I want to see him again?"

Then what happens is she starts texting you, you can get her on a phone call, you can attract her more and you can get her to meet up with you and hook up with her that time.

12. Don't chase a relationship

When you make her feel attracted to you again, she's going to be so much happier if you allow her to chase the relationship rather than you trying to pressure her into committing.

Although modern women get involved in careers and seem very focused on being professional and following through on their dreams, what most women really want is to be focused on love.

Most women love the idea of focusing their attention on being in love.

So, if you make your woman feel attracted to you again and you're not chasing a relationship and she has to do that, it's enjoyable for her.

She is feeling so much for you.

She's feeling attracted to you.

She's feeling drawn to you and she's thinking about you all the time.

You're not chasing the relationship so she's thinking, "How can I get him to show more interest? How can I get him to catch up with me again?"

She then starts texting you more, calling you more, showing more interest and she hopes that it leads to you and her catching up again and hooking up again.

She gets to chase you and get you back.

She's feeling so attracted to you.

She's feeling so in love with the new you.

She's feeling so excited about the fact that she now sees you as the one who got away.

She's looking at you as someone who she wants in her life.

You are not the same as you were when she broke up with.

You have changed so much.

You know how to make her feel so attracted now.

The things that you were saying and doing in the relationship that were turning her off, you just don't do that anymore.

You're so much more of a complete man now.

Learn More?

I hope this video has been helpful for you and if you need more help to get your ex-woman back, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

The same rules apply to getting an ex back when you live in the same area or if it's long distance.

You have to re-attract her, you have to get to a meetup and you have to make her want the relationship again.

You Can Get Her Back if You Focus on What You Can Control

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is to acknowledge the fact that long distance relationships are not as easy as local or live-in relationships.

Your challenge of getting her back is more difficult than a guy who can see his woman more regularly.

That is true.

However, what I said at the start of the video is what you really need to remember.

You need to focus on what you can control.

What you can control is how you are making her feel by the way that you talk to her, by the way that you react to her, by the way that you behave and the way that you come across.

The way that you are presenting yourself to her, the way that you're talking to her, that is what makes her feel something for you rather than making her feel turned off, feel neutral or feeling attracted and turned on by you again.

That is what matters.

Your situation is a bit more difficult than guys who can meet up with their ex more regularly, but you've got to just focus on what you can do and what you can do is make her have feelings for you again.

When you make her feel respect, attraction and love for you, she starts to think of you as the one that got away.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Get Your Ex Back if She is Dating Someone Else

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

So, how can you get your ex back if she's dating someone else?

In this video, I'm going to cover 9 points that you need to be aware of that will help you get her back.

1. Don't see him as being better than you

I understand that you might be hurt by the fact that she broke up with you and she's now with another guy.

You might also have seen her looking so happy and into her new guy.

You might be imagining that he's making her feel so much more attraction than you and she's so much happier with him than she ever was with you.

Yet, thinking in that way is not going to help you get her back.

What you need to do is think like a champion.

A champion doesn't see his opponents as being better than him.

I'll give you three examples.

The first example is Cristiano Ronaldo. He is a champion football player (or soccer player, depending on what country you're from).

In an Italian interview, Cristiano Ronaldo was quoted as saying, "For me in my mind, I am the best. I might not be, but in my mind I am the best."

Number two, Conor McGregor, double champion with the UFC.

He has said things like, "These people are not on my level. No one thinks like me, no one talks like me, no one moves like me, they're not like me. I am the UFC."

He talks about himself as though he is the best fighter and no one is on his level and he really believes that. It's a champion mindset.

I don't recommend, of course, that you go around talking like a Conor McGregor.

He goes around saying it because it sells fights. It's part of the fight business.

People get amped up. They want to see him lose and tune in to watch his fights and they become some of the most watched fights in UFC history.

The third example of a champion is myself and I'm laughing here because I don't normally refer to myself as a champion when I'm talking to other people.

It's just how I think about myself.

I think about myself as being a champion at picking up women.

I've had my choice of women for so many years. I've picked up so many beautiful women, catwalk models and pulled so many women back for sex, had multiple women in my life at once and of course, I also picked up my wife.

When I met my wife, she was 20 and I was 35.

Here's the thing though...

When I met her in the nightclub, how many guys do you think I noticed in the nightclub that night?
Zero.

It's a champion mindset.

I did not see any other guys in the club even though there was probably hundreds of them there.

I do not see other guys as being competition for women when I'm around.

I am the man.

Of course, it's not something that I go around saying.

I was laughing a little bit earlier because it's not something that you can go around saying about yourself.

If you say that, people start putting you down.

They say, "Oh, you know, you're ugly, you're not tall, you don't have muscles. How can you say that about yourself?" and so on.

The same thing with other champions apart from Conor McGregor where he can go around mouthing often.

It's a big part of his appeal.

Most guys who have that champion mindset just go through life and they just know that they're the man.

So, how this applies when getting your ex back if she's dating someone else is that you don't look at that guy as being competition to you.

Don't look at him as being on your level.

You're so much better than him.

You are the man.

There's no one else like you.

You are literally the greatest guy in the world.

If you think about her new guy as being better than you, then you've already lost.

You've got to think like a champion.

You've got to see yourself as being better than him.

You've got to see yourself as being such a great man that that guy is not even on your level.

Yes, she might be feeling attracted to him now and she might be enjoying the start of the relationship, but he's going to stuff up.

No one is as good as you.

That's how you need to be thinking.

Of course, you also need to back that up by being able to make her feel very attracted to you, which I'm going to talk about as we continue in this video.

2. Understand why she really broke up with you

[image: Understand why she really broke up with you]

If you're going to be able to attract her and make her see you as being better than him, you really need to understand why she broke up with you.

Sometimes a woman will break up with a guy and she'll give him examples of why she has broken up with him and she'll be quite direct about it.

However, in many cases, women give vague reasons and they don't really explain why the guy is being dumped.

For example: She will say, "I don't know how I feel anymore. I just need time by myself. I don't think I want to be in a relationship anymore. It's not you, it's me. I need to figure myself out," and so on.

Yet, that doesn't give a man any details or instructions on how he can actually re-attract her, which is the point.

She doesn't want to have to explain to him, "Hey, you know, by the way, the reason why I'm breaking up with you is that you're just not manly enough around me. You're too emotionally sensitive. You're too insecure. I need you to have a bit more balls. I need you to put me in my place in a dominant but loving way."

She's not going to say that because she doesn't want to, number one, teach the guy because then she fears that she's going to have to teach him for the rest of their life together.

Number two, she doesn't want to feel like it's fake.

She doesn't want to feel like he's acting more manly all of a sudden to try to impress her when it's not real.

She doesn't want to feel like he's going to put on this act and then he's going to fall back into his old ways again and she's going to have wasted time being in a relationship with him.

So, why did your woman break up with you? What were some of the real reasons?

For example: Another reason why a guy will get broken up with is that the woman feels like it's just too much of a chore being with him.

He needs her emotional support, he's often insecure and sad and doesn't know how to deal with challenges in life and puts that on her.

Another reason might be that he's a good guy, but he's just too neutral. There's just no spark there.

He's treating her well, he's doing right by her, he's listening, he's being a good boyfriend or husband, but there's just no spark there because he's too neutral.

He lacks that masculinity in his conversation style, in his behavior and in his actions that will create a spark.

He doesn't make her feel like a feminine woman around him.

She feels more like a buddy, or a friend, or worse, she feels like a big sister or kind of a sister figure in his life.

If the new guy isn't making the mistakes that you made and he's attracting her in ways that she wished you would, then she's going to feel more drawn to him.

She's not going to feel like there's enough of a reason to leave him and get back with you.
So, make sure that you are preparing to properly re-attract her the next time you interact with her.
That is what makes all the difference.
Next...

3. Don't let her see that you are upset or lost without her

[image: Don't let her see that you are upset or lost without her]

It's fine to feel upset and feel sad about losing your woman.

There's nothing wrong with that.

If you listen to most of the songs on the radio, you'll realize that they're pretty much all about wanting to get an ex back, missing an ex, being hurt by an ex, etc.

It's not just you who wants an ex back.

Wanting an ex back is a totally normal and natural thing that pretty much everyone on the planet who experiences relationships goes through.

So, there's nothing wrong with you feeling a bit hurt after being dumped and feeling rejected that she doesn't want to get back with you, also feeling hurt that she's with a new guy.

There's nothing wrong with that.

However, the problem is where you let her see that when you interact with her or you let her pick up on that via your posts on social media.

What she needs to see is that you're not lost and lonely and rejected and depressed and confused without her.

She needs to be able to see and sense when she interacts with you that you are fine, that you're not going around in circles without her.

She also needs to see that you're not negatively affected by the fact that she's dating a new guy.

I don't mean that you should be saying things like, "Oh, wow. I'm so happy for you. I hope it works out. I hope you live happily ever after. All I want is for you to be happy."

I'm not talking about acting like you care and you want her to succeed in a relationship.

No acting.

What you need to be able to do is let her sense and pick up that you genuinely are okay without her.

You don't have to tell her that because women are very good at picking up the subtle signals and cues and hints from a guy's body language and conversation style to determine how he really feels about something.

So what you need to do, if you haven't done it already, is stop discussing the relationship with her and stop chasing a relationship with her.

Without saying it, let her sense that you don't even see the other guy as being on your level.

You're not affected by him.

You don't feel inferior.

You don't even place him as being on the same level as you.
She is your woman and you and her supposed to be together.
He is just there for now and he will be out of the way soon.
You are going to re-attract her and you're going to get her back.
Now, a big part of doing that is to not let her see that you're affected negatively by the breakup or by the fact that she is with a new guy.
It's also about not chasing the relationship and appearing like you really need it to feel better about yourself.
Instead, you need to focus on attraction.
That leads me to the next point.

4. Get ready to give her the full attraction experience

Generally speaking, most men get broken up with because they're on one extreme or the other. They're either too insecure and too soft and too gentle and too insensitive and too nice, or they're too arrogant, selfish, heartless and mean and rude and things like that.
So, if a guy has been taking his woman for granted and he didn't really treat her well and, you know, she was basically his last priority and that's how she felt, then he wasn't offering her the full attraction experience of being with a guy.
Likewise, if a man was too soft and gentle and sweet and trying too hard and sucking up to her and he was emotionally sensitive and insecure, then he also wasn't giving her the full attraction experience of being in a relationship with a man.
What a woman really wants to experience is a relationship with a good man, who makes her feel sexually attracted, who makes her feel like she can look up to him and respect him and who makes her feel like she's in love.
She doesn't want to guy that she can walk all over and she also doesn't want a guy who treats her like crap and just expects her to put up with it for life.
To get an ex-woman back who is now dating another guy, you need to prepare to give her the full attraction experience.
You do not have to be perfect at it.
You don't have to be Mr. Perfect all of a sudden.
You just need to be better.
You just need to be able to interact with her and let her sense and pick up that the missing pieces to who you are, are now filled in.
You're more of a complete man now.
If she interacts with you and she picks that up (and she will, women are very good at picking it up), she will then start to think about you in comparison to him.
If he has been making mistakes (most guys do) and turning her off, then she'll start to see him as being a less favorable option compared to you.
She'll start to realize that when she interacts with you now, she feels attracted to you, she feels respect, she feels love, she feels like you finally get her, you understand what she really wants from a man.

Whereas when she's with him, yeah, he's being nice to her, yeah, they're going out in dates, yeah, it felt good at the start, but she's starting to notice that he doesn't really understand her.

He does have missing pieces.

He's not a fully complete man.

This is why it's really important that you understand where you went wrong with her, so you can fill in the right missing pieces.

A lot of times when I'm helping guys to get women back, they're trying to get the woman back by offering her things that she doesn't even care about.

For example: A guy got broken up with because he was too insecure and wasn't manly enough and he's trying to get her back by being even nicer to her, talking about the connection that they had and trying to get her to remember the good times.

Yet, she just doesn't care about that because she doesn't really feel attracted to him.

He just hasn't been manly enough for her.

He's being too insecure and emotionally sensitive.

What he needs to do to be able to let her see that the missing pieces are being filled in is that he needs to interact with her and let her see that he's not insecure anymore.

It's not about telling her, by the way.

As I said earlier, women are very good at picking it up when they talk to you.

When a woman talks to you and she's being difficult and testing you, she can see by the way that you react to her, whether or not you feel insecure.

She can hear it on a phone call or she can observe it in your body language and your conversation style when she's interacting with you in person.

So, if you want to get her back when she's dating a new guy, you've got to make sure that you are preparing yourself to properly re-attract her.

You've got to make sure that when she interacts with you, she picks up on the fact that, "Hang on. You aren't so bad after all. You actually feel really good to interact with now."

She feels respect for you, she's starting to look up to you, she feels attracted to you, she's starting to feel sparks of love for you again.

After an interaction with you, she goes away imagining being back with you, she's imagining hugging you and kissing you and having sex with you and being in love with you again, then she starts to think, "Well, why aren't we together? Why am I with this new guy? You know, why do I feel so drawn to my ex all of a sudden? Maybe it's a sign that we're meant to be together. Maybe he is the one. I don't want him to be the one that got away. I'm so confused now. What am I going to do? Maybe I should just see him. Maybe we should be together. Maybe we are meant to be together. I've got to follow my heart."

5. Use the friends angle, but don't act like a friend

[image: Use the friends angle, but don't act like a friend]

One of the ways that you can get your ex back when she's dating a new guy is to take on the friends angle.

For example: You stay in touch as friends. You are okay to catch up and have a coffee or a bite to eat as friends.

Yet, when you catch up with her or you interact with her on the phone, do not act like a friend.

Don't talk to her in a neutral way and just say, "Hey, how are you doing? How's your life been going? Yeah, how's work? Oh, yeah. I've been working on this and I went to the gym the other day and this happened and that happened."

That's not going to make her feel attracted.

Neutrality doesn't make women feel attracted.

You can't be neutral and expect a woman to feel excited and turned on and wanting to kiss you and have sex with you.

You've got to push your buttons.

You've got to mess with her a little bit (e.g. playfully tease her, joke around with her, put her on the spot at times).

You've got to make her feel attracted and turned on by the way you are now behaving around her.

So, when using the friends angle, make sure that when you interact with her, you make her feel sparks of sexual attraction and love and you make her feel respectful of you.

Don't talk to her in a neutral way or be really nice and talk about her relationship and hope that it all goes well and things like that.

Be a man that she can feel sexually attracted to again.

Be a man that she feels love for.

That's what really counts.

6. Don't respect her new relationship

She's your woman, not his, so don't worry about him.

Don't look at him as a guy who is better than you and he has to be with her now because she broke up with you and she's so happy with him now.

No.

You don't have to respect their new relationship and give her years to be with him and then hopefully she breaks up with him and you can get her back.

Years later, you're probably going to have found another woman already.

So, don't waste time with respecting her new relationship.

Sure, be patient, be calm and be easygoing about it, but be assertive at the same time.

Get what you want.

You want her back, so don't avoid catching up with her because you think it might be disrespectful.

Don't worry about the other guy.

He's with your woman. She is not his woman. She is your woman. So claim her, get her back.

By the way...

She might seem happy in the new relationship, but often that is as a result of her being in a relationship with you and then breaking up and not wanting to feel like she's starting all over again.

She likes the idea of being happy in a relationship, so she wants to get the relationship to be the way that it used to be with you when things were good.

She wants to go back to being happy and being in a relationship that is working.

So, it might seem like they're moving very fast and they're so happy together, but the guy is most likely making mistakes or he's going to make mistakes.

For example: He's most likely going to start to become insecure and clingy or needy or he's going to take her for granted and start treating her badly.

He might become boring and neutral and turn her off.

He might be too focused on his work and not giving her enough time or he might be too focused on her and she starts to feel smothered by the relationship.

Many guys out there struggle to keep a relationship together once they get it, so don't assume that they're going to stay together forever.

After all, 100% of her relationships have failed so far, so this one is most likely going to fail as well.

So, don't look at him as though he is making her happy and she seems happy, so therefore I need to get out of the way and just respect her relationship is the right thing to do.

If you want to do that, then fine. Go for it. Let them have their space.

However, if you want to get her back, what I've seen work when I help guys to get a woman back who is dating a new guy is where the guy interferes.

You mess up her new relationship.

You destroy it.

How do you destroy it?

Next point...

7. Meet up with her and re-attract her

When you meet up with your ex-woman and you make her feel respect for the new version of you and you make her feel sexually attracted and sparks of love, she starts to feel confused.

She starts to wonder why she's feeling so attracted to you when she thought she was happy with him.

She then starts to think, "Well, hang on. Is the relationship with you over or is there still something there?"

Why is she feeling drawn to you all of a sudden?

Why has she gone away from catching up with you and been laying on her bed thinking about you and remembering the good times?

Why is she imagining being in your arms all of a sudden?

Why is she imagining kissing you and having sex with you?

Why is she imagining being back in a relationship with you?

It must mean something.

She then starts to feel confused and as a result, she may break up with that guy or she might start seeing you on the side or she might start behaving differently around him, which will make him insecure.

If she starts talking about the fact that you and her met up and now she's feeling confused, he might become insecure about that, he might start trying to put you down and say bad things about you.

He might become emotionally sensitive and clingy and needy and that's going to turn her off.

It's going to make you seem more attractive.

So, rather than respecting her relationship and just staying out of the way, I recommend that you meet up with her and you mess up her new relationship.

Don't worry about the new guy.

She's your woman, right?

You want her back.

You and her are supposed to be together, so respect that.

Don't respect some random new relationship that she's having with a guy that you think she shouldn't even be with.

You think she should be with you, so make it happen.

8. Don't point out his faults to her in order to make him look bad

When I say don't respect the relationship that she's in now, I don't mean start bad mouthing him.

I don't mean that you should start putting him down and trying to make yourself look good in comparison to him.

That only makes a woman feel more attracted to him than to you.

What a champion does or what an alpha male does is that he doesn't see other guys as being competition for what he wants.

You don't even need to put that guy down.

It's pretty damn obvious that you're better than him.

You're the greatest guy in the world.

Of course, you don't go around saying that, but it's just a mindset that you have, a belief that you have about yourself.

When you go about your life with that mindset running through your body, you get things done.

You go after what you want, you get your woman back, you get the promotion at work, you get things done.

However, when you go through your life with a mindset of, "I'm not good enough. Other guys are better than me," you procrastinate, you miss out on promotions at work, you miss out on the girl that you want and so on.

So, don't actively try to put him down or make him look bad by talking yourself up.

Just let her sense that you know you are a great man by the way that you talk to her, by the way that you behave, by the way that you react to her.

I'm not talking about acting arrogant and acting like you're really cool and that you're the best guy in the world.

What I'm talking about is having a relaxed confidence about yourself where you don't even need to prove yourself.

You're just so damn good.

At the same time, though, always remember to make other people feel good in your presence.

In this case, it's your ex-girlfriend or your ex-wife.

You also need to make sure that she feels good about herself when you're interacting with her.

You don't want to come across as though you're so good and she's just nothing compared to you.

You want to come across as though you have that confidence in yourself, but you also have the charm and the class to be able to make her feel good in the moment as well.

You give her some compliments and you don't try to put her down or make her feel inferior compared to you.

9. Be calm, but don't wait around doing nothing

When I help guys to get their woman back, the biggest mistake that I see them make is just waiting around not doing anything.

Guys will cut off contact and go cold, you know, just go silent for 30 days or 60 days or another large amount of days.

They are hoping that by being out of sight and out of mind, she's going to miss him.

Yet, it just doesn't work if one ingredient is missing.

That is...

Attraction.

If your ex woman doesn't feel attracted to who you are now and she's turned off by who you were when she broke up with you, then she's not going to feel motivated to want to get back with you.

What works is when you interact with your ex and you make her feel attracted to the new you.

You interact with her and she feels respect for you, she feels attracted to you, she feels sparks of love, she knows that things are different now.

There's something between you and her that isn't over.

The relationship isn't finished.

Something is there.

Trust Your Gut Instinct Feeling

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is to talk about the fact that some people disagree with getting a woman back and some people think it's a great idea.

Some people say, "Hey, just move on. Don't worry about her. If she's with a new guy, then stuff that bitch. Who cares? If she loved you, she wouldn't have done that."

Whereas other people might say, "If you love her and you know that the relationship can be better, then go ahead and get her back."

Everyone's going to have their opinion about it and you can have your opinion about it and not have to worry about what everyone else is saying.

If in your gut you feel like you want to get her back and that the relationship would be better this time around, then get her back.

What happens when a guy gets his woman back when he does it right is that he goes through a transformation.

The breakup was a wake-up call.

He was making mistakes and he turned her off. She then broke up with him.

Now, he has an opportunity to either wallow in self-pity and feel sad and depressed and lose confidence in himself or become a better man.

You might be a great man already, but you can be better.

The mistakes that you made in the relationship, you don't need to make those mistakes anymore.

You can become a more complete man.

You can become the sort of man that she really wants to be with.

You can become and be the sort of man that makes other guys pale in comparison to you. You can make this new guy seem like a mistake and you as being the one that got away.

So, if you want to get her back, go ahead and do it.

Don't sit around thinking that you need to wait for her to hopefully break up with this guy one day.

You can make her feel attracted to you again.

You can make her have strong feelings for you again and want to be with you.

Learn More

I hope this video has been helpful for you and if you need more help to get your woman back, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

It's a 7-step system and the same rules apply whether she is dating a new guy, single, whether you have children with her, you don't have children with her, she's studying, she works or she's this age or that age.

All of that does not change the fundamentals.

What you need to do to get her back is the same.

You need to make her feel attracted to you again and you need to make her want the relationship.

You need to make her feel drawn to you.

When you do that, getting her back is simple and easy.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

10 Signs Your Ex's Rebound Relationship Will Fail

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your woman broke up with you and got into a relationship right away or very quickly, then it's a rebound.

Yet, how can you find out if it's going to fail?

Additionally, how can you make sure that it's going to fail?

The good news is that I have some tested techniques that you can use.

So, in this video, I'm going to cover 10 signs that your ex's rebound relationship will fail.

In some of those signs, I'm also going to give examples of techniques that will help you speed up the process of her breaking up with him, so you get her back.

Sign number one...

1. She's using him to get over you

[image: She is using him to get over you]

Some women just get into a rebound to help themselves get over their ex.

They don't want to go through the pain of missing their ex so they get someone new in his place and they try to be happy and enjoy the relationship and give the new guy the impression that she's happy and give her ex the impression that she's happy.

So, this is a sign that your ex's rebound relationship may fail because if her primary reason to be with him is to avoid the pain of the breakup and to help herself get over you, then her intentions with him aren't so sincere.

She may give off the impression that she's really happy, but if she's using him to get over you then she's not truly committed to the relationship.

2. He's the complete opposite of you

If your woman has gotten into a relationship with a guy who is pretty much the complete opposite to you, then it's highly unlikely that their relationship will last.

For example: Some guys get broken up with because they're either too soft or too hard with their woman.

Too soft, the guy is too sensitive, too insecure, too nice, too giving, too sweet and things like that.

The woman gets bored of it because he lacks balls and he's just too nice to her and she walks all over him.

In terms of being too hard, the guy is too selfish, doesn't really care about her, treats her badly and makes her feel like she's not even a priority in his life.

So, what often happens with the rebound is that a woman gets with a new guy who does the complete opposite to her ex-boyfriend or husband.

If her ex-boyfriend was really mean to her and treated her bad and took her for granted, then she'll usually hook up with a guy who treats her like a princess.

Yet here's the thing...

If she stayed in a relationship with a guy who took her for granted and treated her badly, then she's not going to be the sort of woman who wants to be with a guy who treats her like a princess and basically worships the ground that she walks on.

What she will want is a guy who sits somewhere in the middle; is a balanced man.

In other words, he's not too much of a wimp and he's not too much of an asshole.

He's a strong man, but he's a good man.

So, if the guy that your woman has hooked up with is the complete opposite of you, then he's going to be on one extreme or the other.

He's going to be either too soft or too hard and eventually she's going to get bored of that and the relationship will fail.

3. You are now able to give her the attraction experience she really wants

For example: If you got broken up with because you were too insecure and that turned her off, then you weren't giving her the attraction experience that she really wants to have in a relationship with a man.

Just like pretty much every woman on the planet, she'll want to be with a confident man who believes in himself and maintains his belief no matter how she behaves.

So, if you interact with your ex and she can see and she can sense and she can pick up that you're no longer insecure, then she starts to think about you differently.

By the way...

It's not about telling her that you're no longer insecure and you're very confident now.

It's simply about allowing that to come across when you interact with her.

That leads me to another point.

A lot of guys ask me, "When my woman is in a relationship, should I maintain communication with her or should I just cut her off and wait for the relationship to finish?"

It's a personal choice.

If you're not in a rush to get her back and you don't care that she's in a rebound relationship and you're going to go and hook up with other women, then it's fine for you to cut off communication with her and just wait for her to be broken up with this guy.

However, if you do want to get her back, then what I recommend is that you maintain communication with her.

The main reason why is that you can interact with her and let her see and sense and pick up that you can now give her the attraction experience that she really wants.

She can pick up some of that via text, but it's way better to be able to talk to her on the phone and meet up with her in person.

If she talks to you on the phone and meets up with you in person, then she can really see that she feels differently around you now.

When she talks to you, sparks fly and she doesn't feel turned off anymore.

She feels happy, she feels attracted, she feels drawn to you.

Of course, at this point some guys ask me, "How am I going to get her to meet up with me? She's got this new guy, she's happy. This other guy might get angry," and so forth.

Don't worry about the other guy. She's your woman. He's just with her for now.

Yes, you stuffed up in the relationship, she broke up with you, but you and her are meant to be together, right?

That's what you want. You want her back, so don't worry about the other guy.

What you need to be able to do is get her to meet up with you just as friends, just to catch up and say hi for 10 minutes. Get her to agree to that.

For example: If you get her on the phone and have a chat, get her laughing and then suggest catching up just to say hello as friends.

Let her know that you respect the fact that she's in a relationship now but you want to catch up just for 10 minutes as friends.

If she says she can't do that or she doesn't know or gives excuses and tries to avoid the catch up, simply say to her, "Okay. I tell you what, let's just catch up for 10 minutes as friends. When we catch up, if you decide that you never want to speak to me again after that, you've got my word, I won't contact you again."

You say that to her so she's got an out.

She's got a reason to catch up with you and she's got an out.

Yet, when she catches up with you, it's not going to be the last time that she catches up with you because you're going to make her feel attracted again.

She's not going to say that she never wants to speak to you again.

You're just saying that on the phone to get her to have a reason why she can catch up with you and what might be of benefit to her (e.g. you're saying that you're never going to contact her again).

If you don't think that you can get your ex to meet up with you, at least get her to feel attracted to the new you over the phone when you talk to her.

As I said, you can make a woman feel some attraction via text, but it's minimal because it's just words on a screen.

Imagine if you weren't watching this video and you were reading it as an article.

You wouldn't know who I am.

The message wouldn't be coming across in the same way it does on video.

You wouldn't know if I was confident or not. You wouldn't know if I was sincere.

Yet, when you're watching the video now, you can clearly see, "Okay, this guy is a confident guy, he's sincere, he wants to help me, he has the answers."

It's different. It's different than words on the screen.

If you just send your ex texts, she has to think about how you might say that if you said it to her in person.

She also has to think about whether or not you're putting on an act of being confident and being happy and things like that.

Yet, when she talks to you on the phone and meets up with you in person, she can experience it for herself.

This is why it's so important to improve your ability to give her the type of attraction experience that she really wants.

If you want to get your ex back from a rebound, you've got to make sure that you level up.

You don't stay at the same level that you've been at since the breakup or stay the same as you were in the relationship.

You've got to level up in terms of your ability to make her feel attracted, to make her feel a spark with you.

After you've interacted with your ex on the phone or in person and she has realized that you can now give her the attraction experience that she really wants, then things start to change.

She starts to experience the pain of losing you. She starts to feel confused.

She starts to regret not being with you.

She starts to miss you.

She may begin to feel like she's making a mistake by being with the new guy.

She's thinking about your good qualities and how she misses them.

She wishes she could just call you or at least see you in person.

When you make your ex feel that way, you speed up the process of her rebound relationship failing.

4. Realize that 100% of her relationships have failed so far

She doesn't have the best track record for relationships.

So, what makes you think that her current relationship is going to be the one that lasts?

If you think about how happy she used to be with you, then you'll realize that things can change.

She may seem happy with this new guy, but things can change.

Feelings can change.

5. If he makes classic relationship and attraction mistakes

One of the things that can cause a rebound relationship to fail is when a guy makes some of the classic relationship and attraction mistakes.

For example: He gives her too much power or he doesn't give her any power and he's too controlling.

He is very insecure and sensitive or he's very arrogant and heartless.

He takes her out on lots of expensive dates trying to impress her or he doesn't do anything for her and basically doesn't give a crap about her.

Many guys have trouble keeping a relationship together once they've gotten into it.

So, if this guy makes some or many of the classic relationship and attraction mistakes, then the rebound relationship is going to fail.

6. If he becomes insecure about you

[image: If he becomes insecure about you]

If you interact with your ex again and you make her feel attracted and let her see that you can actually give her the attraction experience that she really wants now, she will start to change how she thinks and feels about you.

She may begin to talk to her rebound about you and say that you used to make all these mistakes and now you're being nice to her on the phone and you're trying to get back and she's confused and she doesn't know what to do.

If the guy then becomes insecure about that and tries to control her and tell her that she shouldn't be interacting with you and starts comparing himself to you and putting you down, then she will start to see you as more attractive in comparison to him.

The way that a woman's attraction works is that women are attracted to the emotional strength of man and turned off by the weakness.

Women are always attracted to the most confident guy.

I'm not talking about the most arrogant guy or the loud guy or the show-off type of guy.

What I'm talking about is a guy who has relaxed confidence; a guy who believes in himself no matter what a woman says or does.

Additionally, he believes in himself no matter what anyone says about him, no matter what happens in life.

He always maintains belief in himself.

If you look up confidence in the dictionary, it's essentially about having "belief in oneself and one's abilities."

So, in terms of getting your ex back, it's about having belief in yourself and your ability to make her feel attracted to you and fall in love with you again.

If you have more belief in yourself than her rebound, then you are going to look more attractive to her.

7. The relationship is moving very fast

This doesn't always mean that a rebound relationship will fail.

Sometimes a woman breaks up with a guy and gets into a new relationship very quickly and it does work.

Yet, in most cases, it doesn't work because the woman is simply amazed and happy at the fact that the new guy is giving her the missing pieces to the attraction experience that she didn't get with you.

However, she soon realizes that he has flaws too and often those flaws are a real turn off to her.

For example: He's too arrogant, he's too nice, they have very different beliefs, they have different long-term goals, he expects her to change way too much about herself, he has annoying habits and so on.

What you need to understand (especially in the age of social media), is that some women like to give off the impression that they're in a new relationship and they're happy because they want to please friends and family.

She doesn't want to look like she's just hooking up with a new guy.

She might feel embarrassed about the fact that she's broken up a relationship and she's with a new guy right away.

So, to maintain her self-image as a good woman, she wants to show that she's happy and she's in a relationship and she's serious.

She's not just sleeping around.

Yet, if you remember the fact that 100% of her relationships have failed so far, then this one most likely won't work.

She is giving off the impression that she's so happy, she wants to be with him, they might be talking about getting married and moving in together, but if he is like most guys out there, he's going to make mistakes.

She might have gotten lucky and found the right guy.

That's true as well.

Some rebound relationships end up being lifetime relationships.

That's the reality.

Yet, most rebounds fail because what happens is that women go after guys or they accept guys who are going to give them the missing pieces of the attraction experience they didn't get from their previous relationship.

Often, it's a guy who has been her friend for a long time.

It's a guy at work who can't really pick up other women and he's just been in the friend zone with her, he's really nice, he gives her compliments all the time and he's basically been hoping and waiting that she breaks up with you.

Now that she's broken up with you, he's moved right in and she wants to give him a chance because you may have treated her badly and he's going to treat her really nice right now.

So, if the guy that she's with now doesn't really know how to attract women, then he's not going to know how to maintain and build on her attraction in the relationship.

It's going to get stale.

She's going to get bored of the fact that he is buying her things all the time, taking her out to nice dinners and basically worshiping the ground that she walks on.

She might feel flattered at the start and it will be a good self-esteem boost for her, it might make her feel more attractive and desirable than you, but she will know in her heart that she doesn't really love the guy. She doesn't really want to be with him for life.

8. She's not ready for real love

[image: She is not ready for real love]

Sometimes a woman will get into a rebound relationship right after a serious breakup, but she won't be ready for real love and a real relationship.

She will have her own emotional issues. She'll be hurt from the breakup and she might also make relationship mistakes herself.

For example: She might be too argumentative, she might be selfish, she might be boring, she might be all sorts of things that can turn a guy off.

So, if she isn't perfect relationship material herself, that can also lead to the relationship falling apart.

It's not always the rebound guy's fault.

Sometimes it's going to be her fault.

Sometimes she's going to bring issues and emotional baggage into the relationship and ruin it herself.

9. If she's doing it for revenge

Sometimes a woman will get into a rebound relationship purely to get revenge on her ex-boyfriend or husband.

This will often happen where the ex-boyfriend or ex-husband has treated her badly.

He may have taken her for granted and made her feel worthless or unloved or unappreciated, so she then gets into a rebound.

She tries to use that to get revenge on her ex-guy.

She wants to make him feel hurt and sad and depressed and lonely and rejected. Therefore, she won't be sincerely interested in a new guy.

It's possible that she may fall in love with him and he may be perfect for her and they may live happily ever after, but if she is using the rebound guy as revenge against you, then it's most likely not going to last.

She most likely just quickly selected him or she accepted him.

By selected, I mean she gets on a dating app and selects some random guys or goes out to a bar and selects some random guy to be her new guy.

In terms of accept, she accepts one of the guys hanging around, waiting in the wings, the guy at work, the friend who's been hoping that she might become single one day.

So, what should you do if your ex is using a rebound to try to get revenge, or to try to make you upset and jealous?

What you need to do is laugh at the situation.

Don't take it seriously.

Don't let it affect you.

If you don't let it affect you and you don't take it seriously and you just find it funny, then she sees that she hasn't gotten the result that she wanted by hooking up with this new guy.

Now, a word of warning...

I don't recommend that you laugh at the situation in any other case.

I'm only talking about laughing at the situation and not taking it seriously and just saying, "Yeah. Cool, whatever. I hope it all works out well for you. See you."

I'm only saying to say that to her when she's trying to get revenge on you. She's trying to be vindictive and manipulative and mess with you.

In every other case, what I recommend is that you just say, "Yeah. That's cool. Good for you. I hope it works out well."

Just be normal about it.

Don't go overboard and say, you know, "I hope it goes really well for you. I'm happy for you. I just want you to be happy," all that sort of stuff and don't bad mouth the other guy.

Don't be saying, "Well, you know, that guy is nothing compared to me. You've gone from me to now dating a loser? Ugh. You need help, girl."

You don't want to go to either extreme there where you're being too soft or you're being too hard.

In every other case (except when she is being vindictive and trying to mess with you by hooking up with a new guy), what you want to be is balanced, where you just say to her, "Yeah, cool. I hope it works out well for you."

Here's the thing though...

Outside of saying that very simple thing to her, everything else that you say to her needs to be about what?

Re-attracting her, creating a spark with her, making her laugh and smile when she interacts with you, letting her see that you now understand the attraction experience that she really wants to have in a relationship.

When she can pick up on that as you're talking to her, then she starts to think about you differently, then the new guy starts to look less attractive in comparison to you.

So, just a reminder, only laugh at the situation and laugh at her and show her that you don't give a crap if she's trying to get revenge on you, if she's trying to mess with you and she's trying to be a bitch about it.

In every other case, just be cool about it and then focus on re-attracting her, so the other guy doesn't seem so good after all, in comparison to you.

10. She is still communicating with you

This isn't going to apply to every guy especially when a guy's woman is now in a rebound relationship.

However, according to a survey that I've been running on my website, anywhere from 69% to 70% (the numbers tend to change) of men say that their ex-woman is still willing to communicate with them.

So, if your ex is still willing to text with you and get on the phone with you, it can be a sign that she's still interested.

In some cases, though, it's just the woman stringing her ex along for an extra self-esteem boost, but your gut instinct will tell you whether or not she is doing that because she's stringing you along or because she's interested and potentially missing you.

If she's not missing you, what do you need to do?

You need to interact with her and create a spark with her.

Create a spark of attraction again.

Let her see that you now understand how to give her the type of attraction experience that she really wants.

The things that were missing when you talk to her and interact with her, the feelings that weren't being sparked, they are now being sparked.

You are more of a complete man now.

You're not on one side or the other where you're too soft or you're too hard.

You're a complete man. You're that balanced good man who is also emotionally strong.

You interact with her and she feels something.

She feels sparks of love and respect and attraction.

She can't help it.

When you make your ex-women feel that way, then you speed up the process of her rebound relationship failing.

Focus on Doing What Works and You Will Get Her Back

I've been helping new men to get their ex-woman back for many years now.

What I've seen work time and time again is where a guy interacts with his ex-woman and he creates a spark.

He interacts with her and lets her see that things are different now.

When she interacts with him, she feels differently.

I'm not talking about talking to her and saying that you're different now, that things will be different, that you promise that you can make her happy now that you've changed.

What I'm talking about is interacting with her and letting her sense that for herself.

Women are very good at picking up on the subtle cues that men give off during a conversation and interaction.

Women are very good at picking up whether or not a guy is confident or insecure.

It all comes down to how you're talking to and interacting with her.

When you talk to your ex and you're turning her off, are you making her feel neutral or are you turning her back on?

What's most important, obviously, is turning her back on.

You've got to create that spark.

If you're just talking to her and making her feel neutral, then she's not going to feel a spark and she's not going to feel motivated to want to get back with you.

She's going to be feeling attracted to the new guy, but neutral with you.

Likewise, if you're interacting with her and you're turning her off because you're being insecure, you're doubting yourself, you're talking about the relationship, you seem depressed and so on, then she's going to be turned off.

She's definitely not going to be motivated to want to get out of her attraction experience and go into a turn-off experience.

What she wants to feel and experience when she interacts with you is attraction.

She wants to feel drawn to you, she wants to feel like there is something there between you and her, the relationship isn't finished, there's something there.

Waiting Too Long to Re-Attract Her

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is to talk about one mistake that guys make over and over again when their woman is in a rebound.

What do they do?

They wait around, cut off contact and just hope that she comes back one day.

The guy doesn't do much or anything to improve his ability to attract her.

So, if she does happen to contact him one day, she will sense and pick up that he hasn't really changed.

He's still offering her the same unsatisfying attraction experience.

When she interacts with him, sparks of attraction don't fly.

She can sense that he hasn't really been moving on and is basically just been waiting around for her.

To get a woman back who's been in a rebound relationship, you don't have to hook up with new women or get into a new relationship yourself.

You can do that if you want to, but I've seen so many guys get their ex-woman back when she's been in a rebound and he hasn't slept with any other women.

You might want to do it though to even the playing field and make yourself feel better. It's up to you.

However, the most important thing that you need to do is improve your ability to attract her.

You've got to improve your ability to give her the type of attraction experience that she really wants.

What are the missing pieces from the attraction experience that you were offering her in the relationship?

For example: Were you too soft or too hard? Where were you going wrong and have you honestly fixed that about yourself yet?

Once you have improved your ability to attract her again, I recommend that you start the ex back process.

Interact with her, create a spark of attraction, let her see that you can offer her the attraction experience that she really wants and then get her to meet up with you, guide her back into a relationship.

Remember, she's your woman, not his.

Get her back!

Learn More?

Okay, I hope this video has been helpful for you and if you need more help to get your ex back, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you'll learn exactly what you should be saying and doing to get her back.

It's a step-by-step process and this process applies whether she's single or in a rebound relationship.

The same rules apply.

It's a 7-step process and when you follow the 7 steps, regardless of her new guy, you'll be able to get her back.

Do not look at the new guy as competition.

Don't look at him as being better than you.

You are better than him, you are the man, she is your one and you are going to get her back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Make Your Ex Chase You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

In this video, I'm going to provide you with six proven tips on how to make your ex chase you.

1. Understand that you don't have to disappear from her life to prove that you're not needy

A lot of guys worry that if they remain in contact with their ex-woman, it will make them appear needy, desperate and insecure.

Yet, it doesn't have to be that way.

Imagine this...

Imagine that you broke up with her.

She then gave you a few days of space and that proved the point to you that she wasn't being desperate and needy and chasing you down.

She then reinitiated contact with you and rather than trying to get you back, she just talked to you in a way that made you feel attracted to her again and miss her.

If you went to bed all alone and were thinking about her and missing her, you might not want to get back with her right away.

You might think, "Well, no. We're broken up. I'm going to stick with that."

Yet, if you keep waking up alone and without her there and you continue to miss her and want her back in your life, you may then look at your phone again and read through some of the messages that she had sent to you and think about some of the moments that you and her had on the phone talking to each other.

[image: Missing an ex and wanting her back again]

You might then want to start getting her back.

Now, the whole time, she hasn't appeared needy and desperate and insecure.

She didn't beg for another chance and instead she just interacted with you, made you feel attracted to her and made you miss her.

You can do the same thing to her.

Obviously, in your case, she's the one who broke up with you. That there was an example of if you had broken up with her, just to show you how it would work from the other side.

So, what I recommend is that a guy gives his woman 3 days of space after a breakup and then he starts the ex back process and gets her back.

However, if a guy has been really needy and desperate and was begging and pleading for another chance when she broke up with him, I recommend giving her 7 days.

That's it though.

Giving her 3 days or 7 days, depending on the breakup, proves the point.

You don't need to waste any more time than that.

You've already shown her that you're not begging and pleading and chasing her down.

You have stopped contact for 3 days to 7 days and that is enough.

What you need to do then is start re-attracting her and making her want you and miss you when she interacts with you.

When you do that, she starts to want to get back with you.

You are not her safety net or her Plan B.

You become her Plan A.

You become the guy that she wants to be with.

Every time she interacts with you, she's feeling attracted.

She is feeling something for you again.

She's feeling drawn to you and she wants to get back with you.

However, if a guy is interacting with his ex-woman and he's turning her off, then he is going to be her Plan B or safety net.

He might not even be her Plan B, by the way.

If he's turning her off by talking about the relationship all the time, asking for another chance all the time, sucking up to her, being really nice, acting like just a friend, then she's not going to be feeling sparks of attraction for him.

She may string him along and act like there's a chance for him, but because she's not feeling attracted to him, she's not going to get back with him.

She's not going to start chasing him and wanting to get back with him if he's turning her off like that.

By the way, if you've been trying to get your ex-woman back and you've stopped contact and have been waiting and hoping that she comes and chases you, then you will realize that that approach doesn't work.

Most guys don't get their ex woman back simply by cutting off contact and waiting.

Why?

Attraction.

It's all about attraction.

If your woman doesn't feel attracted to you and you just disappear from her life, how much is she going to care about that? She's not feeling attracted.

She doesn't have those feelings.

She's not feeling drawn to you and you start contacting her.

Most women just say, "Great. Cool. Thanks for making the breakup easy for me," and then she interacts with a guy who makes her feel attracted and she hooks up with him.

Then, when she thinks about her ex-guy who turned her off leading up to the breakup and most likely turned her off during the breakup and after the breakup, she's not going to be feeling that urge to chase him because she doesn't feel attracted to him.

However, if the guy interacts with her and makes her feel attracted again, then things start to change. Then she starts to miss him.

He starts talking to her in ways that make her want him and miss him and her guard comes down.
She starts to feel drawn to him.
She starts to feel as though the relationship isn't complete.
She still has feelings for him.
She wants something from him.
She wants to be around him and explore these new feelings that she has for him.

2. Realize that you are in control, not her

It may seem like she is in control because she broke up with you and doesn't want to be with you anymore.
You may have asked her for another chance and she said no, so it feels like you've got no power and control.
Yet, you do.
To get a woman back, what a man needs to do is focus on what he can control.
What he can control is how he is making her feel.
When you interact with your ex-woman, are you making her feel attracted to you now or are you turning her off?
For example: If a guy is interacting with his ex-woman and he is coming across as insecure and self-doubting, if he's texting her way too much, if he's trying to have discussions via text, if he is asking for another chance all the time and so on, then he's not going to be making her feel attracted and turned on.
Yet, if he interacts with her in ways that make her laugh and smile and feel attracted to who he is now after the breakup, then things start to change.
She starts to have feelings for him again.
She starts to feel like the relationship isn't finished.
There's something there.

3. Let her see that you aren't that bad after all

Right now, your ex-girlfriend or fiancée or wife might have a negative perception of you.
She might think that you used to be attractive to her but then you turned into this sort of guy or that sort of guy and you're no longer attractive to her.
You made all these mistakes. You did this and you did that and it's just ruined now, so there's nothing that you can do to change how she thinks about you.
Yet, that's not correct.
You can change how she thinks about you and feels about you.
Why?
Who you are now is not the guy that you used to be when she broke up with you.

Who you are now is the man who has learned from the experience.

You've become a better man already and you've got to continue to become a better man day by day. You're always improving.

So, when you interact with her and you make her feel attracted to who you are now, she's going to realize that you aren't so bad after all.

There is something between you and her.

Every time she interacts with you, sparks fly.

There's something there.

Now, one thing I want to point out for the men watching this is that you do not have to go and date other women to prove your value to her.

You do not have to go and get into a new relationship and show her that, "Hey, I've got all these women in my life and I don't need you," to show that you're valuable.

You do not need to do that.

All it takes is you interacting with her and making her feel that way based on how you now talk to her.

How she feels when she talks to you now is different compared to how you used to make her feel.

Of course, if you interact with your ex and you haven't done anything to improve your ability to attract her, then she's not going to be feeling that.

She's going to be thinking, "Well, it's still just the same. He doesn't get it. He doesn't know how to make me feel attracted. The same mistakes are still there. When he talks to me, I'm still feeling turned off by the way he says this or that. I still feel like my guard is up. I still feel like I've got too much power here. I still feel like he's sucking up to me," and all those sorts of things.

You don't want her thinking and feeling in that way.

What you want is for her to be thinking "Ohh...there's something still there between us," or feeling surprised by how strongly she's feeling for you all of a sudden, feeling confused about her decision to break up with you.

She thought that it was over.

She thought that she made the right decision, but her heart is telling her something different now.

4. Make her feel understood

Now, don't get me wrong here...

I'm not talking about making her feel understood in a nice, sweet, caring, thoughtful, attentive type of way.

What I'm talking about is making her feel understood from an attraction perspective.

What type of attraction experience does she really want in a relationship with a man?

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she might say things like, "It's not you. It's me. I just need time to find myself. I'm not sure if I want to be in a relationship at the moment. I just don't have strong feelings for you anymore. I love you but I'm not in love with you."

That doesn't tell you anything about what type of attraction experience will make her want you again. For example: Sometimes a woman breaks up with a guy because he's either too soft with her or too hard with her.

Too soft, the guy is too gentle, too sensitive, too sweet, too nice, too giving and so on. She needs a guy with a bit more balls, a guy with a bit of backbone who doesn't let himself get walked all over by a woman.

On the other hand, sometimes a guy is too hard with her. He's too selfish. He's too heartless. He doesn't really give a crap about her. She is essentially his last priority at times. That's how she feels anyway. He goes too far with that.

So, when I say that you make her feel understood, I'm not talking about nice, thoughtful, sweet, attentive, deep and meaningful conversations.

What I'm talking about is that you understand what type of attraction experience she really wants from a relationship.

Then you start giving her that when you interact with her.

You start letting her experience that as she talks to you.

She starts to pick up on it.

You don't have to tell her that you know how to give her the type of attraction experience she wants now.

You just start giving it to her.

If you tell her, "Hey, I've realized that you wanted me to be more ballsy and that's what I'm doing now," then what does she feel?

She feels like it's an act.

She feels like, "Ugh. You're just doing this to impress me."

Women hate that.

Women want a guy to become and be the man that he should be because that's who he is.

He is becoming a bigger and better man all the time.

She doesn't want to feel as though she is leading you along a path and you're doing everything for her and you're basically willing to change and be anything that she wants in order to be with her.

She doesn't want to be your leader.

Women don't want to be in that position.

A woman doesn't want to feel responsible for your identity as a man or for your direction as a man.

She just wants you to understand how to be that man and start doing it so she can experience it.

When you understand the type of attraction experience she really wants and you start interacting with her and allowing her to experience that, then she starts to change how she feels about you.

All of a sudden, she feels drawn to you and she starts chasing you because you are the guy who understands her.

By the way...

This really works well when a woman is interacting with other guys after the breakup.

When she interacts with other guys after the breakup with you and she realizes that they don't understand her in the way that you do, then you are more attractive in contrast to those guys.

Those guys seem clueless compared to you.

They seem awkward and uncomfortable to her because when she interacts with you, it's clear that you get her.

You understand her.

You understand the sorts of things that she wants to hear a guy say.

You understand the sorts of behaviors that she wants to see coming from a guy when she's behaving in a certain way.

You understand what she really wants.

5. Don't give her an ultimatum of a romantic relationship or nothing at all

Giving a woman an ultimatum of, "Hey, I want a relationship with you or nothing," may seem like a good idea because it sounds like you're being strong and standing up for yourself.

"Hey, I don't take crap. You either want to be with me or nothing."

Yet, it doesn't work when the woman doesn't feel attracted to the guy.

If a woman is attracted to a guy and she can't let him go and she doesn't want to be without him, then him giving her an ultimatum of a relationship or nothing will work in many cases.

However, most ex back cases are where the woman doesn't feel attracted to the guy anymore.

If your woman still feels attracted to you and she couldn't deal with the thought of losing you, then you wouldn't be watching this video, right?

You'd already have her back because it would be an easy case of simply contacting her and getting her back.

Yet, she doesn't feel attracted to you now, right?

That's why an ultimatum won't work.

When your woman doesn't feel attracted to you, giving her the ultimatum of, "Hey, I can't be friends with you. I can't have anything else but a relationship. If you can't give me that, then don't contact me at all," just doesn't work.

The reason why is that women don't want to feel like they're being forced into kissing a guy, having sex with a guy, going on a date with a guy or being in a relationship with a guy when they don't feel attracted to him.

A woman wants to feel naturally attracted to you and have things unfold and happen naturally.

This is why you'll hear women say that they don't like things to feel forced and they want things to just happen naturally.

So, how do you make your ex chase you without giving her a relationship ultimatum?

What you need to do is interact with her and make her feel attracted to you.

Let her see that you aren't so bad after all.

Let her see that you aren't being desperate and needy.

Instead, you are a valuable man and she's feeling attracted to you when she interacts with you.

When you do that, your woman then doesn't want to lose you, especially if she can see now that you understand the type of attraction experience that she really wants to have in a relationship.

If she can see that you get it now, then she's not going to want to lose you.

It's so difficult for a woman to find a guy who understands the type of attraction experience that she really wants in a relationship.

So, even though at the moment your ex might be turned off by you and not chasing you, when you interact with her, you make her feel attracted, you make her see that you aren't so bad after all and that you understand the attraction experience that she wants in a relationship, then it's not over.

There's something there between you and her.

She feels attracted to you.

She feels drawn to you.

She feels confused about why you seem so attractive all of a sudden and other guys don't seem as interesting.

6. Don't waste time hoping that she comes back

I've been helping new guys to get women back for many years now.

I've seen all the different types of cases.

I've heard about all the different types of techniques and strategies that guys use and the one that fails the most is simply ignoring the woman and hoping that she comes back.

It might seem like a good idea to just cut off contact with her and let her see that you're not chasing her and then she's going to feel shocked and worried and it's going to really hurt her that you're not chasing her.

Then she's going to start chasing you.

That might seem like a great idea yet it just doesn't work without attraction.

If your woman doesn't feel attracted to you, then she doesn't feel motivated to want to chase you down and get you back.

Of course, some women will chase their ex back even if they don't feel attracted at the start, but those women are very young or very inexperienced with relationships.

If a woman has had some experience with relationships and she has gone through a breakup before, she will know that the pain of the breakup goes away after a while.

She may also know that going back to an ex that she doesn't feel attracted to doesn't work.

What works is when a woman goes back to an ex who now knows how to attract her in the way that she really wants.

Then it's an exciting reunion.

The guy really loves her and wants her back.

She has broken up with him. She goes away. They interact again. She feels so attracted to him now because he understands what she really wants and the relationship dynamic is so much better now.

There's mutual attraction.

It's no longer one-sided like it was near the end of the breakup where it was only him feeling attracted to her.

Now, it's mutual attraction, mutual respect and mutual love.

What I found is that when a guy interacts with his ex-woman and makes her feel attracted again, she usually comes back right away or within days.

Yet, when guys just wait around for weeks or months hoping that their ex-woman will come back, she usually just moves on.

There's no attraction to make her feel motivated to come back.

She doesn't feel like the relationship is unfinished.

She feels like it's finished because she broke up with him, she doesn't feel attracted to him, she's getting on with her life and she doesn't really feel like she's missing him.

Yet, when the guy interacts with her and makes her feel attracted again, then it feels unfinished.

Then it feels like there's something there.

Something isn't complete.

She's feeling drawn to him.

Her heart is telling her that she should be interacting with him.

She should be meeting up with him.

She should be in a relationship with him.

She should just try it.

Now, what really works at that point is where the guy has made her feel attracted again and is not chasing her and being desperate and needy.

So, she's feeling drawn to you, she's feeling attracted, she's missing you, she's wanting you, but she's also seeing that you're not being desperate about it.

You're not talking about the relationship all the time.

You're not asking for another chance all the time.

You're not saying, "Hey, is the door still open? I want you back so bad. My life is hopeless without you."

You're not saying any of those things.

You're a valuable man who is making her feel attracted and for her, that space in between you and her doesn't seem necessary anymore.

She's feeling attracted to you.

You're feeling attracted to her.

Why aren't you back together?

She sees that you're not chasing her.

You're not trying to desperately get her back and you're not turning her off when you interact with her, so she starts to pursue the relationship.

All of a sudden, the tables have turned and she's chasing you. She wants to be back with you.

Your Power to Attract Her

[image: Get your ex to chase you and want you back]

One final point that I want to make in this video for you is to remind you not to underestimate your power to attract her.

You have a lot of control over how you make her feel.

When you interact with her, you're either turning her off or you're making her feel attracted to you again.

It all comes down to how you're talking to her, how you're behaving and how you're interacting with her.

When you make her feel attracted to you again and she sees that you're not desperately trying to get her back but she's feeling drawn to you and she's missing you and wanting to be with you again, she naturally starts to pursue the relationship.

Before she knows it, she's chasing you and you've got the power back.

Learn More

If you'd like to learn more about how to get your ex to chase you and want you back, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

It's 10 hours of video and when you're finished watching the program, you'll be ready to interact with her and make her feel attracted to you again.

When you text her and talk to her and interact with her, she will feel attracted and drawn to you.

She will start to want you again.

She will start to miss being with you and as a result, she'll begin to pursue the relationship.

She will chase you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Tell My Ex That I Want a Relationship, Without Scaring Her Off

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How can you tell your ex that you want to have a relationship with her without scaring her off?

Here are the five things that you need to do.

1. Stop asking for a relationship

[image: Stop asking for a relationship]

A mistake that guys make when they're trying to get their ex woman back is to ask for a relationship before they've even re-attracted her.

For example: A guy will be saying things like, "Can I get another chance with you? Is the door still open? Can you think about it? I promise that things will be different this time," and all those sorts of things.

Yet, it doesn't work.

For the man, he wants the woman back because he feels attracted to her and he has feelings for her.

Yet, she's thinking, "Why should I give you another chance?" and may even say that to him.

What guys do then is they start coming up with all reasons why she should give him another chance.

"Remember the good times. We used to be so good together. We had so many good times together. After all we've been through, we can't just give up on our love now," and things like that.

However, it just doesn't feel right to the woman because she doesn't feel attracted to him yet.

She's thinking, "Well, yeah. Things may have been good in the past but what about now?"

When she interacts with you, she's not feeling a spark of attraction so she doesn't feel motivated to want to give the relationship another chance.

This is why point number two is...

2. Get her to feel attracted to you again

[image: Get her to feel attracted to you again]

Every guy is different and every woman is different. Every relationship is different and every breakup is different.

However, when it comes to re-attracting your ex, it's the same thing.

What I'll show you here is what I call the masculinity scale.

This pretty much explains everything about where guys go wrong when trying to re-attract their ex and also why guys get dumped by their woman in the first place.

On the left hand side are the guys who got dumped for being too much of a wimp, being too much of a wuss.

What that means is that the guy was too insecure, too emotionally sensitive and he just wasn't man enough for her.

Now, to the right hand side is the arrogant asshole type of guy and each guy is going to be different.

Some of the guys who took their woman for granted are not all the way to the right end of the scale, where they were a total asshole to their woman and the worst boyfriend or husband in the world.

Every guy is going to be somewhere along the scale to the right or the left and that will be the reason why the woman felt turned off by him.

So, with the guys on the left in the wimpy and wussy category, they got dumped for not being enough of a man for her.

The guys on the right, they got dumped because they were too aggressive, too heartless, too cold and too selfish.

The ideal man there in the center with his woman is a man who is confident in himself but is not arrogant.

He respects himself but he also respects her.

He is emotionally fearless and emotionally balanced.

What I mean by that is if you think about the guys on the left hand side, they're usually going to be emotionally sensitive.

Guys like that will either withhold some of their true feelings or they'll go way overboard and be pouring their heart out all the time.

They'll be needy of their woman. They'll need her reassurance that she loves him in order to feel good about themselves.

On the other hand, guys who head to the right hand, extreme of the masculinity scale, tend to be quite heartless or selfish.

For example: A guy might expect a woman to do everything for him and put up with his bad behavior.

He might focus way too much on work or he might be the type of guy who plays lots of video games and doesn't really give his woman much attention at all. He expects her to put up with that and if she doesn't like it, she can go get stuffed.

Obviously, that isn't the ideal type of man for a woman.

So, when it comes to re-attracting your ex, it's about being that ideal man, not being on one extreme or the other.

By the way...

Where masculinity comes into this scale is that if you think about the guys on either extreme end, you'll realize that they both lack masculinity.

The guy on the left is just too soft and sensitive and wimpy, which is a lack of masculinity (i.e. balls, emotional toughness).

The guy on the right might seem masculine because he's arrogant, he's being an asshole and taking his woman for granted, but what you'll find is that it's due to insecurities and emotional issues that he has.

For example: He had a troubled childhood, he might have been dumped by a woman in the past and really hurt by that and now he's trying to get revenge on a new woman.

He might also be kind of selfish towards a woman because he is afraid of giving too much of himself to her and then getting rejected.

So, going back to the center now, the ideal man, an ideal man is emotionally strong. He's emotionally balanced.

He isn't afraid to express his emotions but he doesn't do it in a needy, insecure or wimpy type of way.

He doesn't have insecurities and as a result, his woman can look up to him and respect him as her man.

3. Talk to her as though everything is cool between you and her

If you want to have a relationship with your ex again, you should be talking to her as though there isn't a problem between you and her.

It's almost as though you and her haven't broken up.

Rather than talking to her as though you're the rejected ex and you're trying to get another chance with her, talk to her with the confidence that you had when you and her were cool with each other, when you were in love, when she was attracted to you and when things were good.

That's how you should be talking to her.

When you talk to her in that manner, she naturally feels respect and attraction for you.

The situation between you and her doesn't feel so awkward.

Of course, some women will test their guy when he starts talking to her with that type of confidence.

She might say, "Well, you talk to me like everything's fine," or, "Hey, we're broken up so, you know, we shouldn't be joking around like this," or, "Don't talk to me as though everything's fine."

Essentially, she just wants to see whether you are going to buckle under that pressure. Are you going to crumble under that little bit of pressure that she's putting on you?

She wants to see how much of a man you really are right now.

You've been challenged by the breakup, you are the one who got rejected and dumped and now you want her back.

What she wants to see is that you can maintain your confidence in yourself, that you don't become insecure and become that needy, insecure, self-doubting ex.

Women are not attracted to emotional weakness so you need to be strong.

4. Start by hooking up again

[image: Start the relationship by hooking up again]

If you want to start the relationship again, do it without the discussion of, "Hey, can we have a relationship?" or "I want to be together forever," and all that sort of stuff.

Do it by re-attracting her and hooking up with her sexually and being the ideal man.

Be the sort of man that she can look up to and respect.

Be the sort of man that she can feel happy around.

Be the sort of man that she can feel attracted and in love with again.

If you do that and you hook up with her, then the relationship just naturally gets back together.

5. Don't rush to get her to commit

Women are turned off by desperation and neediness from a man.

They want to see that a man is confident in himself regardless of how a woman is behaving.

If you hook up with her and the relationship gets back together, don't rush to get her to commit to that.

Don't put pressure on her to commit to being your girlfriend again or your wife or your fiancée, if that applies to you. Just get back with her, believe in yourself, be the ideal man and continue on having a relationship together.

The relationship that you have this time around will be better than it was before because you are going to be an improved man.

You're not going to be somewhere on the left hand side or the right hand side of the masculinity scale.

You're going to be right in the center.

You're going to be that ideal man that she can respect, feel attracted to and be in love with.

Asking Rather Than Attracting

[image: Asking rather than attracting]

To close up here, one final point that I'll make is that a lot of guys fail at getting their woman back because they keep asking for a relationship rather than making her feel attracted again.

When I've worked on ex back cases, I've often found that the woman is giving signals to the guy that she's open to having a relationship but she just wants him to make her feel attracted to him first.

For example: She might say, "Look, I love you as a person but I'm just not in love with you anymore," or, "What we had was good, but I'm just not feeling the spark anymore."

She's essentially saying, "Hey, create a spark with me. Make me feel attracted to you again. I haven't fully closed the door on us yet so just create that spark."

Yet, the mistake that guys make is that they just keep asking for the relationship.

"Come on. Please don't forget what we experienced in the past. I love you so much. You mean everything to me. I'll do anything. I promise that I'll change. Things will be different this time."

No.

She doesn't want a promise about how things could be or might be.

She wants to see that things are different now.

When she interacts with you, she's got to be able to feel that spark.

If you can do that, her guard comes down and you can guide her back into a relationship.

Learn More

I hope this video has helped you and if you need more help to get your ex back, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

It's 10 hours of video and when you watch the program, you'll learn exactly what to say and do to get her back.

You will learn how to make her feel respect for you, make her feel attraction and fall back in love with you again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Will My Ex Come Back if I Stop Chasing Her?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

So, will a woman come back to you if you stop chasing her?

Not necessarily.

First of all, you shouldn't ever be chasing a woman to try to get a chance with her.

This rule applies when you're picking up women, when you're on a date with a woman, when you're in a relationship with a woman and when you're trying to get an ex-woman back.

You shouldn't ever be chasing and trying really hard.

When a guy is trying to pick up women, he's trying really hard to get a chance with a girl, it turns her off because women aren't attracted to that type of desperation.

Women want to interact with a guy who feels confident about himself and he knows that he's attractive to her.

He knows that he is good enough for her.

They want to see that confidence coming across.

Likewise, on a date, a woman doesn't want to see a guy trying really hard to impress her, to hopefully get a chance with her.

She's already on a date with him, so he just needs to relax and be confident and go through the process, hook up with her and get a relationship started.

When in a relationship, if a guy is trying too hard to impress his girlfriend or wife and she notices that, it turns her off.

She starts to lose respect for him. She thinks, "Why is he being like this? Why doesn't he feel good enough? Why does he lack that self-esteem? Why does he lack that confidence?"

In terms of getting an ex-woman back, she has already broken up with you, so she's turned off by you at the moment.

Now, if you make that worse by chasing her, what do you think the chances are of you getting her back?

It just goes down all the way to pretty much close to zero.

You've got to stop chasing.

That's number one.

What Should You Do Instead?

[image: Pursue her in a calm, confident manner]

Rather than chasing her, you need to only pursue her in a calm, confident manner.

In some cases, that involves a man stopping contact with his woman for 3 to 7 days.

You don't need to cut off contact for any longer than that because a week already proves the point.

It proves that you're not being desperate and needy and you're not pestering her anymore.

During that time, what a lot of guys find is that their woman contacts them.

She may be curious as to why he isn't contacting her all of a sudden or she may get worried that he might be moving on without her.

Yet, if you stop contacting your woman for 3 to 7 days and she doesn't reach out you, what do you do then?

What you need to do is after a week, get in contact with her.

Be calm, be confident and guide her through the ex back process.

Get her to meet up with you, re-attract her when you meet up with her and guide her back into a relationship.

By the way, what I'm talking about here are real relationships or marriages where the man and woman fell in love, they're in a sexual relationship together and for whatever reason, the relationship then fell apart.

If you want to get a woman back after the breakdown of a real relationship, all you need to do is stop contact for 3 to 7 days and in most cases, that proves the point.

You do not need to wait any longer than that.

Waiting Too Long to Get Her Back

What I found is that when a guy waits way too long to contact his ex-woman, she gets over him and she moves on.

In many of those cases, the guy hasn't even really changed.

He hasn't put in the effort to become more confident and improve his ability to attract her when he interacts with her.

So, when he eventually contacts her, he's still basically the same guy.

He's still hurting from the breakup, he's still been missing her and he's just been hoping that by not contacting her, she might miss him and come back to him.

The Connection You and Her Shared

If you and her did experience love together, she felt attracted to you and you had a connection before, then it isn't 100% destroyed.

It may feel like the relationship is over and there's no chance of making her feel attracted to you again and making her feel love for you again, but there is.

When a woman loves a guy and she feels attracted to him and then gets turned off by him, she can get turned back on by him if he changes his approach.

Initially, if you change your approach, she might be a little bit stubborn about it, she might play hard to get and she might act as though it's not working on her.

Yet, in almost every case that I've worked on, the woman does that for one of two reasons.

One, she wants to test the guy's confidence and see if he crumbles when she doesn't show interest and show that she's attracted, or two, she doesn't want to seem too keen and show interest in the relationship and then get rejected by him.

What's she afraid of is that he will get her interested again, she'll show interest in the relationship, she'll open back up to it and then he'll reject her.

She goes from being the one who dumped him and feeling okay about herself as she moved on from the relationship to now being the one who got dumped and she's feeling horrible about herself.

So, for those two main reasons and other minor reasons, many women won't openly accept and be excited about getting back together immediately.

This is why you shouldn't focus on what your ex woman is doing.

You shouldn't focus on what she is saying.

Don't focus on how she's behaving, what she said in a text, how she responded to you, how she reacted to you.

Don't focus on that.

Why?

Often she'll be reacting and responding and behaving in a way to throw you off or to protect her own self-esteem and ego.

What you need to focus on is what YOU are doing.

If you are interacting with her and you are making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, then that's what she feels regardless of what she's showing.

She might put on a bit of a front to act like she's not feeling much, but if she's interacting with you and catching up, then she's feeling something.

What you need to do is calmly and confidently guide her back into a relationship with you.

Getting Her Back is a Normal and Natural Thing to Do

One final point that I want to make in this video is that there's nothing wrong with a man wanting to get his ex woman back.

The only problem is where a man needs to get his woman back because he feels horrible without her, his life is a mess without her, he's lost without her, he needs her acceptance and approval and attention to feel good about himself again.

When a man is in that state of mind, he is naturally unattractive to women, not only to his ex but to women in general.

Women do not want to feel responsible for a guy's confidence.

Women do not want to feel responsible for a guy's sense of identity and worthiness in this world.

Your ex woman wants you to be confident when you interact with her.

She doesn't want to feel that pressure from you, where you need her to be gentle with you, to be nice to you, to be open, to be straightforward when she talks to you.

She wants you to be strong without her reassurance.

If you can be like that when you interact with your ex, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you.

All you have to do then is guide her through the ex back process.

Be the confident one.

Be calm, confident and guide her through the process.

Learn More

Okay, I hope this video has been helpful to you and if you need more help to get your ex woman back, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, it will take all the guess work out of getting an ex back.

You'll know exactly what you should be doing, what to say to her, how to get her to meet up with you, how to get her to feel attracted to you when you catch up with her, how to hook up with her again, how to get the relationship back together.

You'll know exactly what to do at each step along the way.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

What Breadcrumbs From Your Ex Really Mean

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

When a man is trying to get his ex-woman back, he may receive what are called breadcrumbs from her.

Breadcrumbs are essentially any messages, calls or contact from your ex where she doesn't ask to give the relationship another chance.

For example:

An ex woman might contact her ex man and say, "Hey," via text.

She might say, "Hey, how you doing?" or even say, "I miss you," but not actually ask for another chance or say that she wants to have a relationship again.

She might ask him a question about something random, like, "Hey, I left some things at your place. Can I pick them up?"

She might also click like on something on social media and so on.

So, what do those breadcrumbs mean when you're trying to get an ex back?

The answer is that it depends.

[image: Getting breadcrumbs from your ex]

Sometimes a woman is giving breadcrumbs to her ex-man because she wants to mess with his head.

She wants to string him along and keep him interested while she looks for another guy or she wants to say, "Hey, how you doing?" and see that he's willing to text back and forth with her and show interest in her as a person so she can feel good about herself.

Other times, a woman is doing it because she actually wants her ex-guy back, but she wants him to take the lead.

You see, women always breadcrumb, whether you're picking them up for the first time or you're trying to get them back after a break-up.

It's kind of like when women go out to bars and nightclubs and they've dressed themselves up to look pretty.

They will stand around in groups and they'll look at guys from time to time and they hope that a guy has the balls to come over and start a conversation.

She gives him that breadcrumb by showing a little bit of interest.

It's just the way that women are.

Now, in terms of getting an ex-woman back, sometimes a woman is hoping to get her man back, but she doesn't want to seem too desperate.

She doesn't want to show too much interest.

She doesn't want to make it seem like she wants him back 100% because she's worried that he might reject her.

When she broke up with him, she was in the position of power.

She got away from the relationship without feeling the pain of being rejected.

She didn't get dumped.

He got dumped, so he had to deal with that pain of all that.

If you've ever been dumped by a woman that you really love, you know that it doesn't feel very nice at all!

So, in some cases, a woman will try to avoid that type of pain by only giving breadcrumbs, only giving subtle signs of interest in the hope that her ex-guy has the balls to face up to a potential rejection from her or a potential acceptance from her where she opens back up to talking to him, meeting up with him, hooking up and getting the relationship back together.

The Number One Mistake Guys Make

Before I continue, I want to share the number one mistake that guys make when they get breadcrumbs from their ex-woman.

Pretty much every time I've seen a case where a woman is giving a guy breadcrumbs and you text back and forth with her, what does he do?

He asks her out via text.

He asks for another chance via text.

He asks to meet up via text.

He doesn't get her on a phone call to joke around with her and create a more easy-going vibe between himself and her before suggesting catching up.

After some neutral chit chat via text, he pretty much goes straight for the kill and tries to get her back via text messages.

The thing is, when a woman shows some interest via breadcrumb texts, phone calls or in-person conversations, you have to use that as an opportunity to spark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

You've got to make her feel attracted to you again, rather than just texting her like a friend or making the classic mistake of going straight for the kill and asking for a relationship or to meet up before you've even sparked her respect and attraction for you again.

So, the number one breadcrumb mistake that guys make is asking for either a relationship via text or they ask to meet up via text.

It's just the worst possible approach that you could take.

The same thing applies when a guy meets a woman for the first time and he gets her number, he then texts her and tries to ask her out on a date.

You've got to have the balls to get on the phone.

As the man, you have to be the strong one and guide her back into a relationship with you.

You've got to be the strong one who makes it happen rather than expecting her to do everything for you or to make it really clear that she wants you back or to call you up and say, "I miss you. Let's meet up."

You've got to be the stronger one.

I don't know about you, but personally, I've looked through thousands of online forum posts where people are trying to get their ex back.

I look at what women are saying when they're trying to get their ex back and I look at what men are saying.

It's actually quite sad to see sometimes where a woman is hoping to get her ex-guy back, but he's not picking up on her subtle signs (i.e. breadcrumbs).

Then you see forum posts by guys saying, "My ex-girlfriend (or ex-wife) contacted me saying, 'Hey, how you doing?' If she doesn't want me back, why is she contacting me back at all? I should just block her on everything. Why is she trying to mess with me like this?"

He's really upset at how she is going about the ex back process, not understanding that generally speaking, women don't like to be the ones taking the lead; especially in ex back cases.

Most women don't want to have to be the more emotionally courageous one to follow through and get a guy back.

Some guys may think, "Well, screw her then. If she's not willing to call me and ask me to meet up with her and ask me to give the relationship another chance, then I don't want anything to do with her."

Well, if that's your approach, no problem. Go ahead with that. Go ahead, meet other women, move on without her and just screw her, stuff her.

Yet, if you're the sort of guy who actually wants to get your woman back, you have to be more courageous than that.

You have to be the one who is strong enough to take the lead.

Get her on a phone call, get her to meet up with you and get the relationship back together.

When I've helped guys to get their woman back and I've heard about these breadcrumb situations, I often find that the guy makes a classic mistake of not using the breadcrumb as an opportunity to spark attraction with her and actually get her back.

For example: Some of the screen caps of text message conversations that I've seen where guys are trying to get their ex back, usually include the woman asking something random or talking about something random and then the guy entertaining that.

He starts talking to her about that topic of conversation.

He starts expanding on that topic of conversation and answering all of her questions and looking really keen and interested about that.

He talks to her as though they're pretty much just friends and there's no spark between them and texts go back and forth for minutes or sometimes hours and even days at times and then the woman goes cold.

He then feels hurt by that and wonders why she is doing that to him.

Why does she breadcrumb him like that?

Why does she pull him back in only to then push him away and reject him again?

Well, she didn't actually reject him.

What happened is that he made the classic mistake of texting back and forth too much without actually getting to a phone call and getting her to meet up with him.

In some of the examples that I've seen, a guy has texted his woman, saying, "Hey, we shouldn't be talking about this via text. Can we get on a phone call?" and then the woman says "No."

Why?

He's asking her, rather than just calling her.

He's basically saying, "We shouldn't be doing this via text. Can we get on a phone call?" which is asking her for permission.

That's not how you do it.

Women don't respect guys who feel like they need permission to do something simple like call.

So, you just call her.

Don't worry if she might not like it initially.

She will feel respect and attraction for the fact that you're being a man about it and getting things done, rather than waiting for her to lead you.

So, if you're texting back and forth with her, you just call her up and if she doesn't answer, you just text her "Lol" and you add in something like, "Oh, I forgot that you're a shy girl."

Make it her problem.

She's the shy one.

She's the one who's reluctant to get on a call because she's worried that she might have feelings for you.

You've got to be in that power position where you have the confidence to mess with her like that in a playful way.

Alternatively, rather than just calling when you're texting back and forth with her, you might say, "Enough of this texting. I'll give you a call in a minute" and then call her approximately a minute later.

If she doesn't answer, just don't text her anymore for that night or that day.

Then if she texts you back the next day, just say, "Lol...not more of this texting stuff," and then give her a call about 10 to 15 seconds later.

Use Breadcrumbs as an Opportunity to Get Her Back

For the guys who actually want to get their ex-woman back, what I want you to understand is this...

You need to use breadcrumbs as an opportunity to create a spark of attraction inside of her. Then, you need to go through the ex back process and get her back for real.

Don't get stuck texting back and forth with her.

Don't over analyze what she's texting you.

"What does that mean? She said this and then she had an exclamation mark and she didn't put a smiley that time. She put a smiley this time and she said this word and that word. What could it mean?"

Don't worry about that stuff.

Don't worry about what the woman is doing.

Always focus on what you are doing because you are the man.

You're the one leading the dynamic.

The same principle applies when you're picking up women, when you're on a date with a woman, when you're in a relationship with a woman and when you're getting a woman back after a breakup.

Don't focus on what the woman is doing.

Don't over analyze what the woman is doing.

Just focus on what you are doing.

Make her feel respect and attraction for you and guide her through the process.

You are the man.

You are the one who is in control of the dynamic.

Don't Wait For Her to Lead You

One final point that I'm going to make in this video is that every woman is different.

Some women (when they breadcrumb a guy) are doing it to mess with him.

Some women are doing it because they want a guy back.

Some women are doing it because they're bored.

Yet, all of that doesn't matter.

It doesn't matter what type of woman she is.

What matters is what you are doing because you are the man.

As a man, you don't wait for women to lead you.

You are the one who calls the shots.

You are the one with the balls.

You are the one who makes things happen.

You are the one who remains strong when a woman is testing you by being difficult.

If you can do that, women respect you. They respect your masculinity. They respect your confidence.

When that happens, a woman's guard comes down.

It's very easy to do.

It's easy to be a man that a woman can look up to and respect.

It all comes down to how you think, how you talk, how you behave and how you react to her.

If you react to her with confidence and assertiveness and light-hearted attitude and you don't get insecure and feel awkward when she does things, then she's going to respect you.

However, if she gives you breadcrumbs and you are way too nice to her via text, answering all of her questions, being extra courteous to her and you become insecure when she tests you, then she's not going to respect you.

Yet, if she still has a place for you in her heart and she hasn't fully closed off to you, then the reality is that she's waiting for you to change how she's approaching you, how she's reacting to you.

She's waiting for you to make a change in how you're talking to her, how you're interacting with her so she can then be a different woman.

She can be the woman who respects you.

She can be the woman who is attracted to you.

She can be the woman who says yes when you want to catch up with her.

She can be the woman who comes over and gives you a hug at a meet up when you say, “Come here, bring it in for a hug.”

She can be the woman who sits next to you when you’re catching up.

She can be that woman who looks up to you and respects you and feels attracted to you and is open to the idea of getting back with you.

All it usually takes is a spark of respect and attraction and a woman becomes open to going through the process with you.

You’ve just got to be confident enough to go through that process.

You’ve got to know what you’re going to do at each step.

It’s not just about calling your woman up and hoping that everything goes well or meeting up with her and hoping that you get back together.

You’ve got to know how to make her feel respect for you on the phone.

You’ve got to know how to make her feel attracted to you in person.

You’ve got to know how to do these things.

So, if your ex is giving you breadcrumbs at the moment, don’t overthink it.

Don’t think badly of her for doing it either.

Just know that it’s an opportunity for you to create a spark of respect and attraction with her.

You can use the breadcrumbs as an opportunity to interact with her and let her see that you behave differently now.

You talk to her differently now.

She feels different when she interacts with you. She feels attracted, she feels respect, she feels drawn to you.

That is what counts when getting a woman back.

When you’re making her feel that way, her guard comes down and you then can guide her through the ex back process.

Learn More and Get Her Back

I hope this video has been helpful for you and if you need more help to get your ex-woman back I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn exactly what to say and do to get her back.

You will learn the seven-step process that you need to follow to successfully get a woman back.

Don’t get stuck at step one or step two and overthink things and over analyze what she’s saying or doing.

Go through the process and you’ll get her back.

It's very easy to do.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Why is My Ex Being Cold, Distant and Rude?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

So why is your ex being rude or mean to you?

Many guys have contacted me and talked about their ex-girlfriend or ex-wife, and said it was like she changed into a completely different person after the break-up.

“She used to be so loving and warm and caring and she actually gave a crap about me, but now she treats me like dirt. She is rude to me, she’s mean, she’s cold, she’s distant.”

So, why is that?

Why is your ex being rude to you?

Here are five possible reasons why it’s happening to you.

1. She’s trying to get you to react in an angry or insecure way

[image: She is trying to get you to react in an insecure or angry way]

Sometimes when a woman breaks up with a guy who is a good guy and she doesn’t really have much of a reason to break up with him, she’ll start being cold, mean and bitchy.

She’s hoping that he reacts by becoming angry or he becomes insecure and starts begging and pleading with her to give him another chance to open back up to him or to not forget about the love that they shared.

This often happens to guys who are very nice and they’re supportive of their woman and they essentially are being a really good boyfriend or a husband but she is not feeling the spark of sexual attraction that she wants for him.

It’s good to be a good man to a woman but when you’re leaning towards just being really nice to her all the time and being supportive but you’re not a dominant man, then she’s going to start getting bored of that.

It’s not about being an overly dominant or domineering man and saying to a woman like, “Sit over there. Alright, go make me a coffee. Make me food. Rub my feet. Suck me off. Get down on your knees right now.”

It’s not about being overly dominant, but women do respect a guy who has some dominance; a guy who can stand up to her in a loving, but assertive way.

So when a guy is too nice to his woman, he’ll often get that where she breaks up with him and she’s saying, “It’s not you, it’s me,” and that essentially means that she’s not feeling the spark.

She might then start to be cold and mean and bitchy and rude to her ex because she’s hoping that he can give her a reason to hate him, he can give her a reason to say, “See? That’s why I’m breaking up with you.”

If he becomes really angry at her and sends her insulting texts or if he becomes insecure and starts begging and pleading, she can say, “The way that you’re acting here makes it clear that we’re not supposed to be together. You’re not the right guy for me. I’ve had enough of this. I don’t want to hear from you anymore. Please leave me alone,”.

She can then feel good about herself for breaking up with him.

She doesn't have to feel so guilty about dumping a good guy.

Now, I know that some guys who are here that might think, "Damn. So, women want me to be a bad boy? Do I have to treat women badly? Is that what I have to do to be successful and not get broken up with?"

No.

That's not what women are looking for.

What the majority of women want is a good guy who has some dominance.

He has the ability to be dominant at times.

Not all the time, but at times.

When a guy is too soft with his woman, he's too nice, he's too supportive, too helpful and he listens too much to her drama, then she starts to get bored.

Likewise, if a woman is treating a man badly and he just puts up with it and keeps giving and giving even though she's not being nice to him, she loses respect for him.

She looks at him as being a guy who doesn't have much of a backbone.

She doesn't want to be able to walk all over him like that.

She wants him to be able to stand up to her in a loving, but assertive way.

She wants a guy who understands that women do want a good man but they want that man to also have some balls, to not let themselves get walked all over by a woman.

When she throws a tantrum and demands things, she doesn't want a guy to be giving in all the time and bowing down to her and being submissive.

She wants a guy who is able to stand up to her in a loving, but assertive manner.

So, to answer the question of, "Do you need to be a bad man to keep a woman?" the answer is obviously no.

Don't confuse the idea of a woman dumping a good guy as meaning that they want a bad guy.

In most cases, when a good guy gets dumped, it's just because he was too soft with his woman.

He was too gentle, he lacked assertiveness, he lacked confidence and it turned her off.

2. You keep asking for a relationship before re-attracting her

[image: You keep asking for a relationship, before re-attracting her]

To get an ex-woman back, you have to focus on re-attracting her first.

You've got to make her feel respect for you as a man.

You've got to make her feel sexually attracted to you and when you do that, she will start to reconnect with the love that she used to feel for you.

She'll also feel more love for you.

She'll feel more attracted because you will have gone up one, two, three, maybe even 10 levels as a man in terms of your emotional attractiveness to her.

A big part of emotional attractiveness is about your style of confidence and how that makes her feel. There are all different types of confidence that a guy can have.

A guy can be a good guy with a bit of confidence, a good guy with very assertive confidence, a good guy with situational confidence (e.g. he's confidence at work, but he's not confident in social situations).

There's also the bad boy type of confidence, the arrogant guy and so on. There are all different types of confidence.

So with your woman, if she broke up with you and one of the reasons why is that you became insecure in the relationship, she's going to feel more attracted to you if you get rid of your insecurity and become a more confident man.

The reason why she will feel more attracted is that you used to be at a certain level of confidence and she felt attracted to that.

So, when you step up one, two, three, four, even 10 levels of confidence, she is going to feel a different type of attraction for you.

It's like a different flavor.

It's a different sensation.

It's a different experience for the woman to be around a guy who has a particular type of confidence.

So, what you need to do is focus on re-attracting her first rather than asking for a relationship.

You've got to work out what you need to improve to attract her and then start doing that when you interact with her.

She will pick up on it.

You don't even need to tell her about it and say, "I've changed this and this and this."

Just let her experience it.

She'll pick it up.

Women are great at reading between the lines and noticing the subtle behaviors of men to assess for themselves whether or not a guy is this or that.

Once you've re-attracted her, then she's going to be naturally interested in having a relationship with you.

However, if you're asking for a relationship before you've even re-attracted her, then it should be no surprise that she's being rude to you.

You want her back. You're attracted to her. You have feelings for her but she doesn't feel the same way.

She said that she's broken up with, you keep coming at her asking for a relationship.

What do you expect her to do?

Be nice for the next 10 years and say, "Oh, look. You know, I'm just not interested in a relationship right now. You're a great guy. Thanks for calling me for the 100th time. I hope you have a nice day."

She has to get the message through, so she's going start being rude to you.

She's going to start trying to push you away because you haven't transformed yet.

You haven't gone up the levels that you need to go up to be more emotionally attractive to her.

You haven't even done that yet.

You may have done a little bit of it, but it's not enough.

If you haven't got her back yet, it's not enough.

You've got to step up to the plate and become a bigger better man than you have been before.

You may be a great man now already, but it's not good enough to her.

You've got to step up and become more emotionally attractive.

Emotional attraction is about who you are as a man and how that makes her feel (e.g. your confidence, your charisma, your ability to use humor, how you pass her tests when she's trying to mess with you and your general ability to connect with her and have a good conversation, have good feeling emotions flow when you're interacting with each other).

Before I move on to the third possible reason why your ex may be rude to you at the moment, I want to address whose fault it is.

Whose fault do you think it is when a woman is acting rude to her ex-man?

There is no clear answer to that.

Sometimes it's the woman's fault because she's a mean, nasty woman and sometimes it's the man's fault because he's doing all the wrong things when he's trying to get her back.

It's making her feel annoyed and frustrated so she tries to be rude to him to get him to react badly.

Now, if you want to get an ex-woman back, you shouldn't be trying to blame her or women in general.

You shouldn't be focusing on saying things like women are all bitches, they're untrustworthy, they're disloyal, they're selfish, they're mean and so on.

You also shouldn't be beating yourself up and thinking that you're unlovable and unworthy of her.

You are worthy of her.

If you want to get her back, you must focus on getting her to respect you as a man, getting her to feel sexually attracted to you.

When you do that, she has feelings for you.

Her guard comes down.

She starts to reconnect with how she used to feel for you.

She starts to look at you in a different way.

Of course, some women are a bit more stubborn and cold and tough compared to others.

Even if you get her to respect you again and make her feel attracted to you, she may continue to behave in a cold, mean or rude way at times to test you.

She wants to see whether you're new found confidence is real.

She wants to see whether you really can handle a woman like her.

She tested you out in a relationship and it turned out that you couldn't handle a woman like her.

Yet, how about now?

Are you strong enough now? Have you transformed? Have you built the type of confidence that could handle a woman like her?

That is what counts.

3. She can sense that you haven't changed

Women are very good at sensing whether or not a guy has changed the things that are important to her.

When it comes to attraction between men and women, women place a lot of importance on a guy's emotional attractiveness.

So, if she interacts with you via text on the phone or in person and she can sense that you haven't changed yet and you probably don't even know how, she's going to remain closed off.

She may even try to be rude to you to get you to turn her off even more so she can feel validated and feel right about breaking up with you.

4. You're just texting her

Text messages and emails can easily be misinterpreted and misunderstood.

Have you ever sent an email to someone and they took it the wrong way or a text that you sent to someone and you meant something one way, but they took it another?

It's so common.

The reason why is that according to many scientific studies, most of human communication is based on tonality and body language.

When you're sending texts back and forth or emails and there is no tonality to what you're saying, there's no body language there, what does she do?

She has to guess at the kind of tone you would be using if you said that to her.

She has to guess at what kind of body language you would use if you were saying that to her face to face.

Now, if your woman has broken up with you and she's turned off by you and you're being insecure when she broke up with you, how do you think she's going to be perceiving your texts?

She's most likely going to be looking at those texts and imagining that you're still being insecure.

Since insecurity isn't attractive to women and it's a big turn off, she's not going to feel motivated to be nice and pleasant to you via text.

She's turned off by what she is seeing as insecure text.

She thinks that you're being needy or clingy or you're trying too hard and she feels turned off by that so she starts being rude to you via text.

If you try even harder to impress her, she sees that as you being insecure and it turns her off even more.

So, this is why when getting a woman back, a guy should not focus on trying to get her back via text.

You can use text to create a spark with her and say a few things but if you want her back for real, you've got to get her on a phone call and you've got to meet up with her in person so you can re-attract her for real.

She can see your body language and your tonality in person.

She can observe your confidence in action.

She can feel it.

She can experience it.

It's real.

It's right there in front of her.

No matter what she says or does to try to make you feel insecure, you remain confident.

She can see it on your body language. She can hear it in your tonality.

She can pick up on it based on your choice of words, how you react to her, how you respond to her.

She can see it.

When that happens, she naturally feels respect and attraction for you, then you can actually get her back.

When a woman feels respect for ex-man and she starts to feel attracted to him as well, she then starts to reconnect with her feelings of love for him.

She starts to experience the new and improved version of him.

It's exciting for her if he's gone up a few levels in terms of confidence and overall emotional attractiveness.

It's interesting.

She feels different.

She feels more drawn to him.

She feels turned on.

She feels like it would be exciting to hug him, to kiss him, to have sex with him again even if she just wants to do it to see how it feels and see how she feels afterwards.

Yet, in the process of going through with that, she falls back in love with her ex-guy and he gets her back.

5. She is over you and won't change unless you do

When a guy is seeking help to get his woman back, it's usually a case where his woman is over it.

She's over him.

She doesn't want to get back with him and she's had enough.

So, if that applies to you, don't worry.

Most guys who get their ex-woman back start at that same place.

She doesn't want anything to do with him.

She says, "Leave me alone. I'm over it. I don't have feelings for you anymore. Don't even try to get back together with me. It's done."

Some guys believe that what she is saying is 100% correct and permanent.

Some guys believe that they don't have any control over how they make her feel.

They don't understand that a woman's attraction is not set in stone. It's fluid. It's changeable.

For example: If a man is interacting with his ex-woman and he's being insecure and begging and pleading or he's apologizing over and over again, he's not going to be making her feel respect and attraction.

She's not going to get turned on by that emotional weakness and the sucking up type of behavior.

Yet, if he switches his approach and starts focusing on getting her to respect him and feel sexually attracted to him, then she stops talking about it being over.

She becomes open to going through the ex back process with him.

The Truth About Relationships

One final point that I want to talk about here in terms of an ex being rude is that sometimes it's a bit of a wake-up call about relationships.

Before you and her got into a relationship, you were an individual and she was an individual.

When you are in a relationship, even though it might have felt like you and her were one, you were still two individuals.

You were two individuals in a relationship and you're both deciding to be together. Therefore, the relationship stays together.

Now that you've broken up, she's an individual and you're an individual.

You want to be in a relationship but she doesn't.

Sometimes what happens is that when a guy gets broken up with by his woman, he can't believe how rude she's being, how mean she's being, how cold she's being after all he did for her, after all they went through.

They used to be so in love.

She used to say, "I want to be with you forever. I want to grow old with you. I want to start a family with you," and all that sort of stuff.

Now, she's being rude.

Now, she's being a bitch.

Now, she's being cold.

Well, that's the wake-up call, which teaches you the truth about relationships.

You're actually an individual, she's an individual and relationships only stay together if there are mutual feelings.

If you want to get ex-woman back, you've got to make her have feelings for you.

You've got to focus on making her respect you as a man, making her feel sexually attracted when she interacts with you and if you do that, she then wants to get back with you.

She starts feeling drawn to you.

Her guard comes down and if you can be confident and guide her through the ex back process, you can get her back.

Learn More?

I hope this video has helped you and if you need more help to get your ex-woman back, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

It's 10 hours of video and when you finish watching the video, you'll be ready to contact your ex, get her to meet up with you, re-attract her and get the relationship back together.

When you watch the video, you'll feel more confident than you've ever felt in a long time.

You'll feel emotionally strong, you'll have new techniques that you can use to make her respect you, make her feel attracted to you and make her love you again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	---------------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Flirting With Your Ex Via Text (8 Examples)

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

In this video, I'm going to give you eight examples of how to flirt with your ex-girlfriend or ex-wife via text.

With these examples, they can create a spark of attraction with your ex, but I don't recommend that you just stick to text.

Simply focus on getting a bit of a spark going and getting her laughing while texting with you.

You text something that creates a spark and after maybe a couple more texts, you move to a phone call then you get her to meet up with you.

You re-attract her at the meetup and you get the relationship back together by going through the full ex back process.

Don't just get stuck with texting because so many guys lose their ex-girlfriend or wife by sticking with text and they hope to somehow, get a text from her one day where she says, "I miss you. I want you back."

Yet, what often happens is the guy texts with her for a long time, she gets bored and he thinks that he's lost her.

He then stops trying, or he starts asking her why she has stopped texting and then she gets turned off by his insecurity.

Text Examples

With these examples, use them to flirt with your ex via text and then get to a phone call, get to a meetup and then go through the full ex back process.

So, with the first example, she texts you, "Do you miss me?" and you reply, "Who is this again?"

Alternatively, you can reply with, "Who is this?" and 5 to 10 seconds later, you can text her the emoticon with the smile and a tongue sticking out 🤪☺☺☺

The next example, she texts you and says that she's had a horrible day at work and is complaining about what's going on at work and things like that, but you can see that she's just being dramatic.

She doesn't really care about it and she's just letting off steam like a typical woman venting about her day.

You can reply with, "Sucks to be you," and add in the emoticon with the smile and the tongue sticking out 🤪☺☺☺

The next example, she texts you, "What are you up to today?"

You then reply with, "It depends," and she might reply with, "On what?" and you text back, "Whether you're cooking for me tonight or not. I miss your lasagna," and add in a "Haha."

Next example, you text her, "How was your day?" and she replies with, "Not telling," and then you can text back, "Oooh, mysterious woman. Haha."

Next example, if she is complaining about her work day, you can text, "Lol...that sounds like fun," or "More drama at work? You're such a drama queen these days."

Number six, if she asks, "How are you today?" you can reply, "Bad," and then she might reply with, "Huh? Why?" You then reply, "Just kidding. Having an awesome day. You?"

Number seven, she texts you, "How are you?" you can reply with, "I can't tell you. That's confidential information."

You might want to add on an "Lol..." on the end of that if you think that she might take it the wrong way.

Finally, number eight, if she texts you, "Do you miss me?" You can reply with, "Only as much as you miss me," and add on the winky smile emoticon on the end ð□□□

The Art of Flirting With Your Ex

So what makes this flirting and makes it enjoyable for a woman is that you're not taking the text conversation so seriously.

You're not being one of those ex-boyfriends or ex-husbands that wants to have serious conversations with her via text.

You're not being super nice all the time and you're not being predictable.

You're mixing things up and are giving her the opportunity to feel a bit shocked and a bit thrown off.

For example: She texts you and asks, "Do you miss me?" and you reply back with, "Only as much as you miss me," and give her the winky smile ð□□□

What you're saying is that you see her asking you the question of, "Do you miss me," as her actually missing you.

She will read between the lines with that and know what you mean.

Women are great at reading between the lines and that's why they love flirting with guys.

Most guys, when they talk to women, they like to be very straightforward as if they're talking to another guy, which is boring for women.

She asks, "Do you miss me?" and he just says, "Yes. How about you? Do you miss me?" It's a straightforward conversation.

Yet, what women love is when a guy not only has the balls to say something a little bit quirky, a little bit witty, or a little bit daring,

He has the social intelligence to flirt with her in a time when they are broken up.

That's attractive to a woman â□□ confidence, social intelligence and the ability to make her laugh.

No doubt you've heard many women say, "I like a guy who can make me laugh." It's a universally attractive trait.

Flirting 101

One of the things that you need to understand is that flirting is like a mental dance between a man and woman.

You say something where you're playfully teasing her and you're messing with her and she will act shocked or as though it's not having an effect on her.

She then wants to see that you maintain your confidence and you don't suddenly become insecure and think you'd blown it with her.

When she sees that you maintain your confidence, she feels respect and attraction for you.

Sometimes when you flirt with a woman, she will be very easy and open and she'll flirt right back with you.

Yet, sometimes, she will act as though it's not working on her.

She will act as though she's shocked by something that you've said.

She wants to see how you are going to react.

Are you going to lose confidence in yourself?

Who is the tougher one of the two of you?

Who is the more emotionally strong one?

That's the mental dance that I'm talking about.

The reason why it's so attractive to women is that it signals to the woman that the man would be able to handle himself in other social situations.

She feels safe about his ability to interact with people, interact with challenging people and get by in the world.

She knows that if other people put pressure on him and are challenging towards him, he's going to be able to maintain his confidence and therefore she feels safe with him.

Being able to survive and get along with people triggers an instinctive primal type of attraction inside of a woman.

Women always test a man's ability to remain confident to find out if he can handle being put under pressure.

This is why a man will talk to a woman in person and everything will seem to be going well.

They'll be getting along, they'll be laughing together, and suddenly she'll start to lose interest.

Suddenly she'll start to pull away.

She will have said something that made him feel insecure (and she noticed that he became insecure) or he will have said something and she will have reacted in a way where she was testing his confidence and he would have failed that test.

Women are essentially looking for confidence.

They want you to have balls.

It's not about being disrespectful to women though.

It's just about having the balls to joke around, to not take things so seriously, to not worry about losing your chance with her.

That's a really big one; not worry about losing your chance with her.

Some guys don't want to send anything to their ex that might make her a little bit shocked or thrown off because they think it might cause them to lose their chance with her.

However, you just can't think like that when you're getting a woman back.

You have to have balls.

You have to know that you are the man and that she is feeling respect and attraction for you even if she acts like she isn't.

Of course, sometimes a woman isn't feeling respect and attraction for a man, and that's pretty obvious.

However, if you're joking around with her and you're being confident, then she is going to feel respect and attraction for you even if she acts like she isn't.

Don't Flirt Too Much Though

Don't get me wrong here.

What I'm not saying is that every text you send your ex must be flirting and funny, or that you must always make fun of her or not take a conversation seriously.

When you flirt with a woman, you should go by the 80/20 rule.

80% of the time just text with her normally or talk with her normally if you're talking to her in person and 20% of the time add in flirting.

That said, when you're trying to get an ex back, I don't recommend that you text back and forth with her for too long.

In many cases that I've worked on where a guy is trying to get his ex-girlfriend or ex-wife back, he gets stuck in text conversations that go nowhere.

She texts him something and he texts back and then they get a conversation going.

Eventually, there are misunderstandings and the conversation becomes frustrating.

He says something and she takes it the wrong way or she says something and he starts becoming insecure and think, "Oh, what does that mean?" and then he becomes insecure in the way that he texts her.

He starts asking insecure questions and then she feels turned off and the whole thing's a mess.

So what I recommend if you actually want to get your ex-girlfriend or ex-wife back is that if you are going to use text, then just keep it short.

Use text to create a spark and say a few things back and forth if you have to, but get to a phone call.

Pick up the phone, press call for her number and if she doesn't answer, just try her again in an hour.

If she doesn't answer in an hour, try her the next day, but don't get stuck texting back and forth with an ex.

Don't Accept a Texting Relationship

It might seem easy or comfortable to just text her, but it's a bad idea.

One of the reasons why is that just texting an ex can often lead to a guy getting led on/strung along.

For example: She is showing some interest via text but secretly, she's also looking for a new guy, or hooking up with a new guy, or she's not even enjoying the texts that he's sending her.

See the thing is when you get a text from your ex, she may text something and put a smiley face on it or an exclamation mark, and you may read that as her smiling and feeling really happy when she's texting back and forth with you.

Yet, in reality, she could actually be sitting there rolling her eyes and sending a text back and putting a smiley face on it.

As you may have noticed, many women use emoticons and emojis when they are chatting and they “LOL” and they “Haha,” even though they’re not LOL-ing in real life.

She may be totally bored by a text conversation, but it’s coming across as though he’s making progress with her because she LOL-ed or she put an exclamation mark on the end of a text.

You shouldn’t read too much into what your ex is saying via text because it doesn’t really count that much.

Texting back and forth with your ex is not the ex back process.

The ex back process is where you re-attract her in person and she forgives your past mistakes.

She stops thinking about you as being the guy that you used to be and she’s focused on the new you.

The relationship that you and her have now feels better than it did before.

She starts feeling attracted to you in new ways, she starts feeling respect for you in new ways, she wants to give it a try.

It feels good to her to give the relationship another chance.

It’s not about you trying to hopefully get a chance with her and, “Please, I promise I’ll do anything,” and, “I’ve changed all these things about myself. Now do you like me?”

It’s not about that.

It’s about you re-attracting her in person, and then she wants to get back with you.

She starts to feel drawn to you, she respects you, she starts to have feelings of love for you again.

You then reconcile, get the relationship back together and you continue on.

As you would understand, you can’t achieve that via text, so just make sure that if you are trying to get your ex-woman back that you don’t hide behind texts for a long time.

[image: Re-attract her in person]

Use texts to create a bit of a spark, get her on a phone call, then meet up with her, re-attract her for real, reconcile the relationship and continue on with her.

Don’t Take Her Texts Too Seriously

One final point that I want to make here for you is that when you’re texting back and forth with your ex-woman, don’t take it too seriously.

I know that some guys who heard the texting examples earlier on in the video might have thought, “Oh, I don’t know if I could send that to my ex-woman. She’d be angry at that, or she might take that the wrong way.”

You need to not worry about how she is going to take things.

You need to be the stronger one.

You need to be the one with balls.

You don’t need to be suppressing your masculinity, being a good little boy and being on your best behavior around your ex or when you're texting with your ex.

Women don't respect submissive behavior from men.

Women respect balls.

So, don't worry about whether she might take something the wrong way.

If she does, just "Lol" and say, "Relax. I'm joking."

Same thing if you're talking to her in person. If you say something in person and she seems to take it the wrong way, you can say, "Relax, girl. I'm just joking. Chill out," or you can say, "Relax. You take things too seriously."

Put her back in her place in a loving, but dominant way like that.

You've got to have balls if you want to get your ex back.

Don't be afraid of her.

Be a good man, be respectful and all that nice stuff, but have balls. Women respect it, even though they might act shocked to test your confidence.

So, when you're going to flirt with her via text, just don't be afraid to say something.

Don't be afraid to be a little bit daring.

Don't be afraid to joke around.

Don't be afraid to have a bit of fun.

Don't feel like you're not worthy of joking around with her now that you're broken up. Yes, you are.

The thing is women love to flirt and they know what flirting is.

Most guys don't really understand flirting, and they think that it's either pointless, silly talk or unnecessary play.

Most guys just want to get to the point because that's how we men speak to each other. So, when a guy meets a girl, he wants to be able to say, "Hey. I like you. I feel attracted to you. I want to be in a relationship with you."

Yet, that's not how a woman wants the interaction to go. She wants to be able to flirt and test his confidence.

When it comes to getting an ex back, many guys just want to say, "Hey. I want you back. I love you. I promise that things will be different. I've changed. You mean everything to me. Please give me another chance."

Yet, what you've got to understand is that when getting a woman back, you've got to make her feel attracted to you.

You've got to have the balls to get her to respect you again.

So, when it comes to flirting with your ex via text or in person, just know that it's okay to do.

Relax, enjoy yourself and have the courage to say things that might make her feel a little bit shocked temporarily.

Then she sees that you're joking and then she laughs as well.

When your ex can see that interacting with you is fun and it's not so serious all the time, then meeting up with you and getting back with you starts to feel better for her.

She feels as though it's not awkward anymore.

You're not desperately asking for a relationship.

You're not putting a lot of pressure on her.

You're making her feel good.

You're making her feel attracted.

You are making her smile and you are making her respect you.

Need More Help?

[image: Flirt with her and then get her back]

By the way, if you need more help getting your woman back, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back: Super System.

It's 10 hours of video and when you watch the 10 hours of video, you'll learn the 7-step process that you need to go through to get a woman back.

You will learn exactly what to say to her, how to behave around her, and how to make her really want to give the relationship another chance.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

The Balls to Call Your Ex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The balls to call your ex is often the difference between whether a guy gets his woman back or not.

When I help guys to get their women back, I often find that the guy has either been ignoring his woman and hoping that she comes back on her own, or he's been sticking with text and hoping that he can somehow change her mind via text.

What happens is that when a guy ignores his woman and doesn't contact her in the hope that she changes her mind, in most cases, the woman just moves on.

He hasn't done anything to re-spark her feelings of attraction, so there's nothing really motivating her to want to come back.

Of course, some women do come back when they're ignored because they can't deal with the pain of a break up or if they can't find someone new, so they go back to their ex.

Yet, for most guys who are trying to get an ex-woman back, they're not in that situation where the woman isn't going to be able to deal with the pain of a breakup and come running back because she misses him so much.

Most guys who are looking for advice on how to get a woman back have ruined her feelings.

She doesn't feel respect. She doesn't feel attraction and she's not in love anymore, so ignoring her just helps her move on.

Trying to Change Her Mind Via Text

What a lot of guys do is they hope to somehow change her mind via text, build up a connection again and make her miss him via text.

Some guys will text their ex girlfriend (or wife) as though they are a friend.

Some guys will text where they're trying to explain where they went wrong, apologize and ask for another chance.

Some guys even try to ask their ex-woman out on a date via text.

In most cases, what I've seen by helping so many men to get their women back, is that a guy who's focusing on trying to get his ex-woman back via text usually gets stuck in text conversations that go nowhere.

Alternatively, sometimes a guy contacts his ex woman via text and she shows a bit of interest, so what does he do then?

He texts back.

She then texts back and he texts back and that goes on for maybe a day or two or a couple of weeks even, at times.

Then the woman loses interest and she goes cold.

A guy will usually then think, "Damn it! I've ruined my chance. I can't get my ex back. She's not interested anymore," and in most cases, he will just stop contacting her in the hope that something changes.

Yet, all along, what would have worked is that if he just had the balls to call her.

Re-Attracting Her on the Phone

[image: Get your ex laughing and smiling on the phone]

A call (where you make her feel respect and attraction for you again) can everything so quickly.

She can go from being cold and closed off, to warm and open just by hearing your confidence coming through the phone and laughing when you joke around with her.

Of course, I understand that some guys who are trying to get their woman back are blocked so they can't call, but every other guy who isn't blocked by their ex-woman can call, and they should call.

The reason why is that you can create a spark of attraction when you talk to her on the phone.

You can make her feel respect, attraction and love for you again, in a way that you cannot do via text.

You can create a spark of attraction by using humor, being confident, being masculine in the way that you speak to her, and passing her tests.

So with humor, it's about having the balls to joke around with her, rather than being so serious, cautious or polite while talking to her.

This particular joke that I'll say now is not going to apply to every situation, but it's an example.

The example is, a guy calls up his ex-girlfriend and says, "Hey, ex-girlfriend. What's going on?" and refers to her as his "ex girlfriend" rather than using her name or just saying hi.

He starts off the phone call in that playful, easygoing type of way and she with most likely smile or laugh, or at least feel impressed by his confidence and willingness to joke around, even though they are broken up.

Another example is where a guy calls up his ex-woman, and she happens to be cooking at that point in time. He can say, "What are you cooking? I'm hungry. I hope you're making extra for me," and then have a laugh with her about that.

The next example is being confident.

You are already demonstrating confidence by calling her, so that already gets you some points.

You also just need to maintain your confidence as you talk to her, so she can feel that coming across.

In terms of being masculine in the way that you talk to her, it's about having that subtle assertiveness and strength in your voice while still being a good man.

In terms of passing her tests, women always put men through tests.

One test that a guy may encounter, for example, is where a woman will show some interest one minute and be uninterested the next.

She'll be open and talking and then she'll become cold and distant.

She'll be interested in meeting up and then she'll change her mind.

Many guys will lose confidence in those moments and they'll start to feel as though they can't get her back.

A guy will feel like he's unworthy, that it's just too difficult. He will believe that she's not interested and he's not going to be able to get her back because she isn't being as open and friendly as before.

Yet, what she's looking for is for him not to crumble under her pressure. She wants him to remain strong, so she can feel attracted to his confidence and respect him for that as well.

These sorts of things create a spark of attraction and make her respect you.

When that happens, her guard starts to come down a little bit.

The more attraction and respect that you can make her feel, the more her guard comes down, and the more she becomes willing to reconnect with her feelings, and become open to getting back with you.

Focus on Attraction

Where a lot of guys go wrong is that when they're talking to their ex-woman on the phone, they want to talk about the relationship or ask for another chance.

What you have to understand is that before you get her respect back, make her feel attracted to you and she then starts to have proper feelings for you again, she's not really going to want to discuss the relationship.

In some cases, where a woman has feelings for a guy and she misses him, then it's okay to talk about the relationship over the phone.

She'll want to talk about it because she has feelings for him, and she'll be open to discussing whether or not she's willing to give him another chance.

Yet, if you're in a situation where your ex doesn't have feelings for you anymore, what you've got to do is create a spark of attraction.

You've got to get her respect back.

Let her see that you're not intimidated.

Let her see that you're not trying to get into a deep and meaningful conversation with her about the relationship.

Let her see that you're not trying to suck up to her, get her to hopefully forgive you and give you another chance.

The reason why is that before you make her have feelings for you, she's not going to be at that place emotionally.

She won't be ready to say yes to giving you another chance.

Some of the guys that I've helped are reluctant to call their woman because they've tried to talk to her on the phone in the past, tried to discuss the relationship, tried to get another chance and she was just cold and distant.

That's what I'm talking about here though.

It's not a surprise that a woman's going to be like that if she has broken up with you, doesn't have feelings for you and has put that wall in between you, saying, "We're broken up. I don't want to be with you."

The way to bring that wall down is to make her have feelings for you again.

Once she has feelings for you, then she has a reason to want to talk to you about the relationship, to meet up with you.

So when you talk to her on the phone, it's very important that you create a spark of attraction and then have the confidence to actually follow through the rest of the ex back process.

Don't just get her on the phone, make her laugh and then she goes cold and you hang up and think, "I can't get her back. It's too difficult. She doesn't want me."

No.

You have to be stronger than that.

You have to go through the entire ex back process.

You have to keep going until she's back in your arms and she's your woman.

Don't give up.

What if She Doesn't Answer Your Call?

A common question I get about calling an ex-woman is, "What if she doesn't answer? What do I do then?"

If she doesn't answer, what you need to do is try to call her again in an hour.

Of course, make sure that you're trying to call her at a time that you think she's going to be available.

Alternatively, you call her and if she doesn't answer, you call her the next day at a time that you think she will answer.

If she doesn't answer the second time, you send her a text message.

Send her something like this, "Hey, Jenny. It's Dan here. There's just something quick I wanted to ask you over the phone. I guess you're busy at the moment. I might try calling you another time then."

In most cases, what a woman will do is respond to that text, saying, "It's fine. Call me now," or if she's being cold and bitchy she might say, "What do you want? Just say it via text."

It really depends on your woman, but at the end of the day, you've got to get her on a phone call.

If your ex is cold and bitchy and she says, "What do you want? Just say it via text," you can just reply back to her, "Hey – it would be better to say it over the phone. I'll give you a call now," and then give her a call 10-30 seconds later.

The reason why a call is so important is that she can hear your confidence over the phone.

You can get her to laugh.

You can get her to see that you're not trying to discuss the relationship and get her back over the phone.

What you're doing is making her have feelings for you and relax.

She's bringing down her guard, and is opening back up to you.

That's what's important.

Then what you need to do is get her to meet up with you and go through the rest of the ex back process.

Afraid That She Might Reject You?

Of course, some guys aren't ready to contact their ex-woman.

They are really hurt by the breakup.

They feel insecure.

They don't feel worthy of her anymore and the idea of calling her up makes them feel anxious or nervous.

Additionally, when I help guys get their woman back, I often hear guys say to me, "I don't think I should call her because she prefers text," or, "I don't think I should call her because it might annoy her."

What I always say is if texting isn't working to get her back, why continue it?

If you can attract her on a phone call and get her to meet up with you, why not do that?

She may initially feel a bit annoyed or frustrated that you've called her, but when you are being lighthearted and using humor, she will start to relax.

When she can see that you're not intimidated by the phone call, you're being confident and you're also creating a light-hearted vibe between you and her, she will relax.

She will forget about the fact that she usually prefers to talk to you via text.

She'll be smiling, laughing and feeling new emotions with you over the phone.

Likewise, when you meet up with her in person and you make her feel respect for you and attraction, she's not going to get angry and say, "Hey, we should be doing this via text."

What you've got to understand is that texts almost always make the process of getting an ex-woman back more difficult.

She can play hard-to-get, ignore some of your texts and also feel turned off by what she sees as you being insecure via text.

You may have felt confident when you sent a text but she might read it as you being insecure.

The reason why is that she remembers how you behaved leading up to the breakup, during the breakup and potentially after the breakup.

If you haven't got her respect back yet and you haven't made her feel attracted to you again, she's going to be looking at your texts in a negative way.

This is why it's so important to get on a phone call, and then meet up with her in person.

Hiding Behind Texts

Hiding behind texts usually leads to a guy losing his woman.

He will say, "Well, she prefers texts, and it might annoy her if I call her."

You can't worry about those things.

If you want her back for real, you've got to focus on what actually works to get a woman back.

What works is getting her on a phone call and you being able to make her feel respect for you, make her feel attracted and get her to meet up with you.

When you meet up with her, you re-attract her, get her to feel good around you again and you get the relationship back together.

She's Probably Not Going to Help You Get Her Back

What you've got to understand is that when you're trying to get a woman back, she doesn't always have your best interests at heart.

This is why a lot of guys find themselves feeling shocked or confused by the change in behavior of their ex-wife or ex-girlfriend after the breakup.

She goes from being a loving, warm, caring woman to being cold, closed off and not really caring about him at all.

That's her way of trying to get herself to move on from the breakup.

It's also a way for a woman to make a guy behave in an angry or insecure way, so she then has more reasons to justify breaking up with him.

So, when you're trying to get a woman back, you've got to remember that she's not necessarily going to be trying to help you get her back.

In most cases, she has broken up with you and is going to move on unless you have what it takes to get her back.

You've got to have the balls to call her.

You've got to have the balls to meet up with her.

You've got to have the balls to make her respect you again and make her feel attracted to you in person.

That is what counts.

Don't Wait For Obvious Signs From Her

So many guys that seek my help are in a situation where they've been hoping that their woman makes it really obvious that she wants to give him another chance.

They're hoping that they can somehow explain to her that they've changed and things will be different, or if they ignore her, she will magically change her mind.

Yet, that's not the approach that works.

The approach that works is having the balls to make something happen.

It's the same as picking up women, if you think about it.

When women get dressed up and they go out to bars and night clubs, what do they do they do?

They stand around.

They wait for men to come and approach them.

They're not going around saying, "Hey! Does any man here want to sleep with me? I've got nice tits and I give good head. Any guys want to sleep with me tonight?"

They're standing there and acting as though they're not even interested in guys.

That's what women do.

They're waiting for a guy who has the balls to come over and make something happen, even though they aren't making it obvious that they are interested.

The same principle applies to the ex back process with a woman.

You've got to have the balls to make something happen even though she might not be making it obvious or clear that she wants you back.

So many cases that I've worked on, the woman actually did want the guy back, but he was hesitating. He was ignoring her, he was texting every now and again and he wasn't following through to go through the full ex back process.

When I pushed him to do that and he got her back, he then finds out that she actually did want him back and she was missing him.

That's the thing you've got to understand about women.

They have some similarities to us but they are very different.

Women go about their dating and relationship life differently.

It's the same with sex.

Women walk around acting like they're not interested in sex, but they're just as interested in sex as men are.

Yet, they go about it in a different way.

You shouldn't wait around hoping that your ex woman makes it really obvious that she wants you back and she calls you up and says, "Hey! I miss you. Can we catch up? Can we get back together?" or she just arrives at your door one day and just says, "I'm here. I want you back. I miss you."

That does happen in some cases (easy cases), but not in most of the cases where guys actually need help to get an ex woman back.

When guys are looking for help to get their woman back, they're usually in a situation where the woman has lost respect for them, has lost attraction for them and has fallen out of love with them as a result.

So, if you want to get your woman back, you need to have the balls to make something happen.

You need to have the balls to get her respect back, get her attraction back and go through the ex back process with her.

Easy to Use, Step By Step Plan

By the way...

If you need help with having that type of confidence and knowing what to do each step of the way as you get your ex back, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back: Super System.

When you watch the 10 hours of video, you'll become emotionally strong. You will become more confident than you've felt in a long, long time.

You will feel worthy of her again.

You will know that you can get her back.

You will remember that you are a cool guy and that you do have what it takes to make her feel attracted to you again.

When you watch the program, you will also learn new ways to attract her, new ways to make her feel respect for you and new ways to make her fall back in love with you again.

So just to close up here, I want to point out again that some guys are blocked by their woman and they can't call her but every other guy who isn't blocked should be calling.

For the guys who are blocked; I also can help with that as well.

The techniques in my proven to work ex back program, get her to unblock you, get her to re-add you on social media, get her to agree to meet up with you, that can be done.

Those are difficult cases, but you can still get through it.

You can get her to unblock you, you can get her to be willing to text with you, and then get on a phone call and meet up with you.

You can do that.

What you need to understand about women is that they are actually quite flexible when it comes to men.

Your woman might be behaving in a cold way towards you now.

She might be distant.

She might not be very agreeable and might not be going along with what you want to do.

However, that's because you'd be using an approach that is causing her to react in that way.

For example: Asking for another chance, talking about the relationship, texting back and forth with her, acting like just a friend, and so on.

What you need to do is focus on getting her to respect you as a man.

Make her feel attracted to you.

Get her to start reconnecting with her feelings.

You have to have the balls to make that happen and you have to have the balls to lead the way.

Even the most cold, bitchy closed-off woman can bring her guard down if a guy uses the right approach with her.

If he's not intimidated by her, if he is able to use humor to lighten the mood, if he's able to get her to respect his confidence and get her to feel like a woman when she's interacting with him.

Your Opportunity to Transform Into the Man You Know You Can Be

Actually, one extra point that I'm going to add in here is that getting an ex-woman back is actually a great opportunity for you to transform, and become a bigger and better man that you ever have been before.

You have been challenged by this breakup.

She has dumped you, she is not getting back with you and you're stuck.

You're either going to continue on being the way that you are and not get her back, or you're going to transform.

You're going to step up to the plate and become a bigger, better man than you ever have been before.

You may be a great man already, but you can be better.

You may be a confident man already, but you can be more confident.

You may be emotionally masculine at work or around your friends, but what really counts is are you emotionally masculine around her?

In other words, do you have balls around her?

Do you have the balls to call her?

Do you have the balls to get a meet-up?

Do you have the balls to re-attract her and get her back when you meet up with her?

That is what counts.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Are You Communicating Weakness or Being Needy if You Contact Your Ex to Get Her Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Thereâs absolutely nothing wrong with trying to get your ex back.

It doesnât mean you are weak or needy if you want her back.

You will only appear needy or weak if approach the ex back process in a needy or weak way.

So, whatâs the difference between a guy who is being needy and one who is not?

Examples of Being Needy When Trying to Get an Ex Back

A guy who is being needy will try to get a woman back byâ|

1. Begging and pleading for another chance

The shock of losing his woman forever might cause a guy to react in a way that goes against his better judgment.

Suddenly, he panics and says things like, âPlease baby, donât walk away from what we had together. I need you so much. You mean everything to me and without you my life is empty! I know I stuffed up, but Iâm ready to change and become the man you want me to be. I beg you! Please just give me one more chance. I promise you wonât regret it. Please!â

Yet, rather than make a woman think, âHe must really love me if heâs willing to beg me for another chance! This is amazing! He must be the one!!! Clearly his intentions are good, so Iâm going to get back with him because of that,â sheâs likely just going to pull away from him even more.

Why?

A womanâs attraction to a guy is based mostly on his ability to make her feel like she can look up to him and respect him as a man.

So, when a guy is begging and pleading and being emotionally weak and needy, heâs actually making her feel the opposite of the way he needs to make her feel to get her back.

Watch this video for more infoâ|

By begging and pleading, heâs turning her off further, when what he should be doing is quickly re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for him again, so she naturally becomes unsure about her decision to break up with him.

All of a sudden, she stops looking at him in a negative light and starts enjoying interacting with him.

Yet, most guys donât do that when their woman attempts to dump them.

[image: Most guys lose it and become emotional when a woman dumps them]

Most guys lose it and become insecure, desperate or become very self-doubting all of a sudden, which turns the woman off even more.

So, even though his intentions are good and he just wants things to work out between them, his approach is unattractive, so she goes through with the break up and feels good about it.

Note: In some instances, a woman might give a guy another chance if he begs her for it.

When a woman does that, she usually has very little experience with relationships, or she feels bad for him and wants to give it a try.

Yet, it usually only lasts for a few days because she realizes her mistake and breaks up with him again.

If you want to get your ex back for real and keep her in a relationship, you've got to do it properly.

The proper way to get an ex back is to focus on making her have feelings for you by quickly changing your approach to be more attractive and appealing to her.

Not in a desperate, hurried way, but in a relaxed, confident, easy-going way.

As long as you are relaxed about the ex back process, you will not appear needy or weak.

However, if you panic and try hard to impress her and hopefully get another chance, she will pick up on your desperation and it will turn her off.

2. Trying to convince her to give you another chance before letting her experience the new you

Another common example of communicating weakness or being needy when contacting your ex to get her back is trying to convince her to give you another chance, before she's had a chance to experience the new you.

For example: A guy might call his ex on the phone and rather than use that time constructively to trigger her feelings of respect and attraction for him again (e.g. by using humor to break down her walls, flirting with her, remaining confident and unfazed when she tries to put him off by being cold, distant or even rude towards him), he instead tries to convince her to give him another chance by telling her how much he cares about her and how much she means to him.

Yet, here's the thing!

Regardless of how much he loves her or how convincing his arguments may be, a modern woman doesn't have to stay with a guy if she doesn't want to.

She has the freedom and right to break up with a guy and move on, so she uses that to take care of her own personal happiness and well being, rather than sticking with a guy out of guilt or pity.

So, to get a modern woman back, it can't just be all about how much you love her, or reminding her about how good things used to be in the past.

What matters to her is how you make her feel right now.

If you're being needy and telling her how much you love her and want her in your life, it's not really going to matter to her because she doesn't have strong enough feelings for you yet.

You have to reawaken those feelings inside of her, rather than trying to get her back into a relationship right away.

Another example of neediness when a guy tries to get his ex back is!

3. Being desperate

For example: A guy might!

- Send his ex loads of text messages or long e-mails apologizing and promising to change.
- Bombard her with gifts, flowers or chocolates.
- Enlist friends, co-workers and family to put in a good word for him.
- Rush to buy her a ring and then propose to her.
- Pour his heart out to her and cry to show her how badly the break up is affecting him.

He's hoping that when she sees how desperate he is to get her back, she will feel flattered, give him another chance and everything will be okay between them once again.

However, it rarely plays out that way (unless the woman is young and inexperienced, or just gives him another chance to dump him again because she likes to do that to guys).

Most women just feel turned off by the desperation and use it as a reason to want to remain broken up.

Another example of neediness isâ□!

4. Doing whatever she wants or demands just to get another chance with her

Another way a guy might communicate weakness or being needy to an ex, is by being a good little boy around her and saying and doing whatever she wants him to do (even if it's totally unreasonable), in the hopes that his behavior will convince her to give him another chance.

For example: A woman might belittle him in front of other people, by saying, "Tell everyone how you stuffed things up between us. Tell them how badly you treated me. Tell them!â□ □

If he then tells the people listening all the things he did, she loses respect for him for being such a pushover and letting her belittle him in that way.

Alternatively, a woman might make a bunch of unreasonable demands of her ex (e.g. tell him to only call her on a specific day or else she wonâ□ □t answer his calls. Tell him not to contact her for a few weeks or months because sheâ□ □s too busy to talk to him. Only talk to him if he pays her bills or runs errands for her).

If he just takes whatever she throws at him and never stands up to her (or laughs at her for being so silly and unreasonable), rather than get another chance with her, his behavior actually convinces her even more that she made the right decision by breaking up with him.

Hereâ□ □s the thingâ□!

Contrary to what many guys believe, if a woman feels that sheâ□ □s more emotionally dominant than a guy, she wonâ□ □t be able to respect him.

It's politically correct for women to go around saying that men should essentially bow down at women's feet and respect them as the masters of the world.

Yet, in reality, women don't want their man to bow down and follow her orders.

Women want to be respected, but they want you to respect yourself more.

Getting Her Back the Masculine Way

There's nothing wrong with contacting your ex and getting her back in a masculine way.

How can you do that?

1. Calmly and confidently guide her back into a relationship by getting her to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction to the new and improved version of you

[image: Calmly and confidently get your ex back]

For a woman to open herself up to the idea of getting back together with her ex, she needs to be able to look up to, respect and feel attracted to him first.

So, a masculine guy focuses on triggering her feelings by behaving in ways that he knows are naturally attractive to women.

For example:

- He shows her his confidence by not feeling nervous or unsure of himself when she is being cold, or saying things like, “Do you really think I’d give you another chance with me after everything that happened between us?” or, “I don’t feel attracted to you anymore.”
- He uses humor to diffuse a tense situation and get her laughing, smiling and feeling good when she’s in a bad mood.
- He stands up to her in a lovingly dominant way if she tries to dominate him during conversation (e.g. he laughs at her attempts to boss him around).
- He’s not afraid to make her feel sexually attracted to him again by flirting with her and making her feel sexually aroused.

When a guy approaches the ex back process in this way, he is effectively telling his ex (without using words), “Look how different I am from the guy you broke up with. I’ve changed and I’m no longer hiding from my true potential as a man. I’m a new man and I believe in myself and in my value to you. So, even though I really want you back, I’m also happy and fulfilled without you in my life. It’s okay if you don’t want to get back with me. Other women love the new me.”

Reminder: You don’t say that kind of thing to your ex woman.

Just let her get that sense based on how confident you are now.

When a guy interacts with this ex woman in that way, she feels attracted to his confidence and emotional strength and can’t stop herself from looking at him with new eyes because he is now behaving like the kind of man that she can look up to and respect.

Another way to get her back in a calm, confident, masculine way is to

2. Get her to forgive the old you

Getting an ex to forgive you is a very important step to getting her back because it changes how she thinks about you, looks at you and feels around you from then on.

For example: A guy might say (in a relaxed, confident, masculine way), “Look, I know that I messed up and I’m sorry about it. I accept responsibility for my actions. However, holding on to all that baggage isn’t going to allow you to move on and have healthy relationships in the future. The mature way to handle this is if we both forgive each other by acknowledging that people can make mistakes and learn from those mistakes. I made mistakes and I’ve learned from it. You don’t need to take me back, but at least do the right thing by yourself and me by forgiving me for losing my way and making those mistakes. Even though it’s over now and we’re not getting back together, *we did share some good times together, so we don't have to think of the relationship in such a bad way. It was a good learning experience for both of us. When you forgive me for those reasons, not only will you feel better about what happened, but we can also move forward as just friends. So how about it? Can you forgive me for both our sakes? Can we just let the past go and look at each other for who we have become? I'm not asking you to get back with me at all. It's just the mature thing to do to forgive each other and be able to move on with a clear head.*â□□

The cool thing about asking an ex to forgive you like this, is that she suddenly stops looking at you in such a negative way.

She stops focusing about all the mistakes you made and she starts feeling impressed by what she perceives as your emotional maturity.

Her defenses begin to come down and she starts to feel drawn to the new version of you.

As you can see, there's nothing needy about that!

You're just being a confident, mature man and allowing her to go through the natural ex back process in a calm, easy-going manner.

Little does she know though, it's actually helping you to get her back!

3. Focus on getting her smiling, laughing and feeling good

A big mistake that a lot of guys make is feeling like they have to be serious and be on their best behavior around their ex woman to avoid annoying her.

Some guys also feel like it's important to have long discussions about the relationship and what went wrong, but it just doesn't work to get a woman back.

The best approach to interacting with an ex that will not only make her drop her guard and open back up to the idea of getting back together again, but will also make her feel attracted to your masculinity and confidence, is to make her laugh, smile and feel good when she interacts with you.

No matter how negative sheâ□□s being towards you, if you just relax and use humor to diffuse the tension, she wonâ□□t be able to stay closed off for very long.

Her guard will come down and she will open back up to you.

4. Build up some sexual tension and release it with a hug, kiss and also sex if possible

One of the easiest ways to build up sexual tension with a woman is to flirt with her, make her laugh, smile and feel attracted during interactions and then stop.

Just go back to talking normally for a minute and then do it again.

Then, go back to talking normally for about 5 minutes and give her some more flirting and humor to loosen the vibe and make her feel great around you.

This builds up the exciting feeling of anticipation inside of her and gets her wondering, *â□□ Why am I feeling so drawn to him all of a sudden? Is he going to kiss me? Why am I even thinking like this around him? We're supposed to be broken up! I don't want to be broken upâ□□ I thinkâ□□ oh, why do I want him all of a sudden?*â□□

That's how you want her to be thinking because then, getting back together, becomes something that she wants too.

Then, it's not you being needy and needing her back.

It's about you and her wanting to be back together and enjoying the process of making it happen.

For example: Imagine you and your ex are having a catch up in a little coffee shop and you've successfully built up the tension between you and her.

She's smiling, laughing and possibly even giving you other signs that she's attracted (e.g. playing with her hair, licking her lips, touching you often, talking about how you and her used to have great sex).

Whatever the case, it's up to you to take the lead and release the sexual tension that has been building up between you, by giving her a hug and maybe even a kiss.

You can do that by confidently saying to her, "I'm so glad we're not like those crazy ex's who are always fighting and acting like brats with each other. You and I are cool ex's."

She will most likely smile and agree or playfully tease you by saying that she's a cool ex, but you're not.

You can then say to her, "We're cool ex's. I think something like that at least deserves a hug. So, come here. Bring it in for a hug."

If you've built up enough sexual tension, she'll want to hug you as much as you want to hug her.

So, just go ahead and pull her gently into your arms and give her a tight squeeze for a few seconds.

If she seems open, lean in and give her a kiss.

If she pulls away from the kiss or avoids it, just move back and continue building the sexual tension between you and her and try again later if it looks like she's keen.

From there, you can head off to your place or hers for sex.

Once you and your ex have had sex, she becomes open to getting back together again because her emotional walls are no longer blocking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

You just need to lead the way and make it happen.

You Have to Believe That You Can Do it

In many ex back cases, the difference between a guy getting his girl back or not comes down to his level of belief that he can do it.

A guy who believes that he can get her back will take action in a confident, forward moving manner, whereas a guy who doubts that he can get her back will tend to waste time giving her space or turning her off by seeming insecure and self-doubting.

It's not needy to get her back in a confident, calm, relaxed manner.

Where some guys go wrong is assuming that the way to show an ex woman that he isn't needy is to not try to get her back at all, or to show her that he doesn't care about her anymore.

He just gives her space and hopes that she comes back.

Yet, when a woman has lost respect and attraction for a guy and has pushed her feelings of love into the background, him ignoring her or pretending not to care isn't really going to matter that much to her.

Instead, sheâs just going to take his actions as a sign that itâs 100% over between them and sheâll move on and possibly even hook up with and fall in love with another guy.

So, why would a guy try to get his ex back in these ways if they almost never work?

A lot of boils down to not having any masculine role models in his life who can explain to him that loving a woman isn't weak.

Instead, insecure guys (especially on online forums) might tell him that he needs to show her that he doesn't care to prove to her that he's not needy.

Yet, that's just insecurity trying to cover up insecurity.

You donât need to put on an act of not wanting her.

You do want her and that's okay.

The problem is when you need her and can't live without her.

That's needy.

So, donât listen to what other people say when they tell you that youâre communicating weakness or being needy if you contact your ex to get her back.

Theyâre only saying that because they donât know how to be a confident man and give a woman the attraction experience she really wants in a relationship.

They also donât understand that love the second time around, can be even more amazing than the first.

However, you do know that now and you can prove them wrong by getting your woman back today.

You just have to believe that you can do it and then do it.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me Because I Was Too Emotionally Sensitive

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's how to get your girlfriend back after she broke up with you for being weak and too emotionally sensitive...

1. Identify the real reason for your emotional sensitivity

There are many reasons why a guy might be emotionally weak or sensitive in a relationship with his woman (e.g. he doesn't believe he's good enough for her, he's afraid of losing her and not being able to find another woman who will want him, he's insecure about his future prospects, he wasn't loved as a child, he has been dumped by women he really loved).

Guys don't always have strong male role models who help educate them about women and about how to be a confident, emotionally masculine man.

So, most of the time, a guy will get a lot of his information about what a woman wants in a man, from TV talk shows, sitcoms, movies, from women's magazines or the internet and lastly, from women themselves.

Getting advice from women about how to be successful with women is usually a recipe for rejection.

Watch this video for some classic examples of how women lie to men about what they really want!

Due to political correctness and the desire not to teach men how to attract them for sex and a relationship, women usually say the opposite of what they really want in a man.

For example: A guy may have heard a woman (on TV or in real life) say something like, "In today's world, there's nothing wrong with a woman having a successful career and being the boss, while the man stays at home and takes care of the family. If I want my man to stay home and raise the children, he should do it. I don't think there's anything wrong with a househusband who does all the cooking and cleaning" or "I don't like macho guys who are always so strong and in control. I just want to find a nice guy who can cry and share his emotions with me for a change."

If a guy is inexperienced in relationships or doesn't really know how to attract and pick up women on purpose (i.e. he relies on getting lucky), he may file this piece of "important" information from women in his mind for future use when he finds himself in a relationship.

When he finally finds himself a woman, he will likely do what he believes is the right thing (e.g. allowing her to be the more dominant one and make all the decisions in the relationship for both of them).

He may also be of the mindset that being emotionally masculine (i.e. having the ability to handle a problem without becoming overwhelmed by it and not breaking down like a woman does) is wrong and will be seen as heartless or uncaring by his woman.

In his mind, he's thinking that he's being the perfect modern man because he's so nice, sweet, sensitive and caring.

Yet, in most cases, rather than think, “My guy is every woman’s dream! He’s just so perfect. I’d better hold on to him,” a woman will usually be thinking, “I need a real man. I don’t think he has it in him to be like that. He’s just so sensitive—almost like a woman. For once, I’d like to be able to sit back and enjoy being a woman around him, knowing that he is taking care of things. I’m tired of always being the one who has to lead, make all the big decisions and be his shoulder to cry on. Isn’t it supposed to be the other way around? Aren’t men supposed to be the tough ones? I’m tired of taking care of him like he’s a little boy. This just isn’t working out. I need a man.”

Even though she might have initially liked his emotional sensitivity at the start (especially if her ex boyfriend didn’t express his emotions at all), she will become sick and tired of it.

Women want a man who is balanced, rather than a guy who is on an extreme end of the personality scale (e.g. a really nice guy or a bad boy).

The ideal man is a good man who is emotionally strong and isn’t afraid to express his love for her, but who doesn’t actually need her to feel confident about himself.

He is a man of purpose (i.e. he has big goals that he is following through on that are important to him), so he doesn’t rely on her for his sense of identity and worthiness in the world.

He is his own man, while also being a good, loving man to her.

That’s what women want.

So, if your girlfriend broke up with you because you were weak and too emotionally sensitive, it could be because you (like most guys who get dumped for that reason), truly felt as though you were giving her the attraction experience she really wanted.

You might have thought that she’d love how emotional you were and see it as cute, adorable or real.

Yet, she saw it as weak and it turned her off because women are attracted to emotional strengths in men and turned off by emotional weaknesses.

Women don’t go around saying that though.

Unfortunately, most of the things women say about what they want from a man aren’t really true (e.g. “I want a nice guy who listens, does what I tell him to do and treats me like a princess” and then she dumps a guy for being like that because he seems desperate).

The fact is, although women won’t openly admit it, for them to be able to feel respect, attraction and love for a man, they need him to be the more emotionally strong and dominant one.

Some women do have more of a masculine personality and feel happier taking on the masculine role in a relationship, but the majority of women don’t.

So, if you want to get your girlfriend back, you have to identify your reasons for being emotionally weak and sensitive and take action to change and become the kind of man she can now look up to, respect and feel attracted to.

One of the ways you can do that is to

2. Become emotionally stronger

[image: Become emotionally stronger]

In a relationship, a woman wants to know that her man is emotionally strong enough to handle whatever life throws at him.

If he can remain calm under pressure (e.g. when he's faced with tough decisions, something bad happens or she teases him or insults him) and not become overwhelmed with emotion like a woman, she will naturally feel a profound respect and attraction for him.

On the other hand, if a guy falls apart, becomes overly emotional, insecure, anxious and loses his confidence when he is faced with a tough decision or some other challenge in his life, a woman will perceive him as being emotionally weak and her respect and attraction for him will begin to fade.

She may then begin to think, "Is a weak-minded, wimpy guy the best that I can do for myself? Do I have to settle and just put up with it? No! I don't want to spend my life with a man who isn't going to be emotionally strong enough for me. I'm capable of taking care of myself, but that doesn't mean I want to do that when in a relationship with a guy. I want a guy I can look up to and depend on to be strong when things get rough. I want to be his girl and feel safe in the knowledge that he's in the lead and taking care of both of us," and she will then break up with him and try to move on.

So, if your girlfriend broke up with you because you were weak and too emotionally sensitive, one of the ways to get her respect back, is by interacting with her and showing her that you're emotionally stronger now.

Naturally, that doesn't mean you put on an act and pretend to be a tough guy by treating her badly, being rude or being heartless about things.

It also doesn't mean that you say something along the lines of, "You broke up with me because you said I was weak and too emotionally sensitive. Well I'm not that guy anymore. I'm emotionally strong now. How about we get back together now that I've changed?" because she's not going to believe you.

The best way to show her is by maintaining your confidence and being calm and in control, no matter what she says or does (e.g. insults you, teases you, says she has no feelings for you, mentions other guys who like you) to try and goad you into reacting like the old you (e.g. get upset, beg and plead with her to give you a chance, cry).

When you can do show her that you have changed (rather than tell her), she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you whether she likes it or not.

Initially, she may act as though the new man that you've become does not impress her, but deep down she'll probably be feeling surges of respect for you for facing your insecurities and taking positive steps to improve yourself and become a better man.

Remember: You don't need to be perfect to get her back.

You just need to be better than you were and then getting back together again becomes something she wants too.

The next step to getting your girlfriend back after she broke up with you for being weak and too emotionally sensitive is to

3. Interact with her on a phone call to make her feel respect and attraction to the new and improved you

If you want to get your girlfriend back, don't go around thinking, *â€œThere's no hope. How can I expect her to want to give me another chance after I turned her off by being so weak and emotionally sensitive? It's just too late. She won't even want to talk to me over the phone or in person, so I have no chance. I just don't know what to do. Is it really possible that she might want to talk to me again, or should I give her a few weeks/months of space to let things calm down between us? Maybe if I give her space, she will realize how great of a guy I was and reach out to me.*â€œ

Yet, that approach rarely works.

In almost all ex back cases, if a guy wants his woman back, he has to actively go about getting her back, rather than just ignoring her and hoping that she comes back on her own.

If she is turned off by you, she isn't going to be in a hurry to get back with you until you show her that she can feel turned on by you again.

To do that, you need to interact with her over the phone and show her your confidence and emotional strength by using humor to pass her tests (e.g. she acts cold, bitchy or distant to see if you're still the same emotionally sensitive guy she broke up with) and change her perception of you.

The more you can remain calm (no matter what she says to throw you off) and continue making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you, the more respect and attraction she will feel for the new and improved you.

She will sense your strength without you having to say, "I'm stronger now. I'm not sensitive like I used to be. Please give me another chance."

She will naturally open up to the idea of giving you another chance because she will notice that you've manned up and are no longer the weak, emotionally wimpy guy that she dumped.

So, rather than looking for excuses to get off the phone as quickly as possible, she will think something like, *â€œOkay, well this is a surprise. I like it. He's more confident and fun now than he was at the very beginning of our relationship when he was still on his best behavior and trying to impress me. Regardless of what I do to make him crumble and revert back to the weak, wimpy, emotionally sensitive guy I broke up with, he remains calm, relaxed and confident. I would never have believed it if I hadn't experienced it for myself, but he really has changed. He's now the kind of man I always wanted him to be. I'm actually starting to believe we can work things out between us after all. Maybe we don't need to remain broken up. Maybe it would be fun to get back together and experience the new him. I like it that's for sure.*â€œ

So, don't waste time feeling hopeless and giving your girlfriend lots of unnecessary space to get over her negative feelings for you and remember the good times.

If she can't experience your confidence and emotional strength first hand (i.e. on a phone call or in person), she's just going to assume you're still the same weak, emotionally sensitive guy she broke up with and she'll usually just try to forget about you and move on.

You need to get her on a phone call with you right away and re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for the new you.

Howeverâ€¦!

4. Don't try to get her back right away. Just meet up with her in person to let her experience the new you

Itâ€™s only natural that if things are going well between you and your girlfriend over the phone, you will want to say something like, â€œHey, this is great. Iâ€™m so happy that weâ€™re talking again. As you can tell, Iâ€™ve figured out where I went wrong and Iâ€™ve definitely learned my lesson. How about we give our relationship another shot?â€

Slow down.

Take it easy.

A better way to go about getting her back is by meeting up with her and allowing her to experience the new and improved you in person.

The more that she can see your confidence and emotional strength in action (e.g. when sheâ€™s sitting opposite you in a coffee shop and pretending not to have feelings for you anymore. When sheâ€™s flirting with other guys in front of you. When you're ordering coffee or food from the waiter), the more her respect and attraction will grow.

Then, getting back together with you will be something she actually wants to do too because it feels good to her.

She is proud of who you have become and can actually start to look up to you as a man that can be relied on, rather than a man that she needs to carry throughout life.

So, let her experience the new you and want you back before asking for a relationship.

If you try to make her commit to getting back together again right away, sheâ€™ll likely dig in her heels and say â€œNo,â€ because a phone call is usually not enough to fully reactivate her feelings for you.

This is why meeting up with her is a very important step to getting her back, because she will then be able to really see that you have changed and she now feels better around you.

From there, you need toâ€¦!

5. Get her to forgive the old you

[image: Get her to forgive your past mistakes]

Forgiveness is an important step to being able to fully start over with your ex girlfriend and have an even better relationship this time around.

So, if she doesnâ€™t forgive you, it will make the process of getting her back a lot more difficult because she will keep her guard up and won't allow herself to feel much (or any) respect, attraction and love for you.

If you don't get her to forgive you and begin asking for a relationship, a woman will usually say things like, â€œI donâ€™t know. How can I trust you? What if I say yes to getting back together again and then you go back to being weak and emotionally sensitive as soon as we have an argument? I donâ€™t have the energy or desire to go through that again.â€

So, make sure that you get her forgiveness first.

How can you do that?

By saying something along the lines of, â€I now understand why you broke up with me. Looking back at myself and how weak and emotionally sensitive I was, I can only laugh at myself when I admit that it was really me. How silly of me. I mean, how could you not feel turned off by me when I was being like that? I know understand that it was immature of me to behave in that way. I also accept that it might be difficult for you to believe that I have changed, but I have. So, can you forgive me? Can you let go of the past and allow us both to move forward in a mature, positive way? Iâ€™m not asking you to forgive me so that we can get back together again. I just want you to forgive me so you can let go of the grudge you hold against me in your mind. Let go of the baggage so you can feel free and light as a person, rather than being angry at me or hating me for who I became. Then, we can at least be friends from now on, rather than being ex’s who hold grudges against each other. I mean, I made a mistake. I get it. So, it’s not something that you need to hold against me. If you do hold it against me, it will only hurt you. You will feel so much lighter and happier if you can just forgive me for making that silly mistake.â€

If you can get her to the point where she really does forgive you, it makes her drop her guard and allows her to feel comfortable around you again.

She no longer stops herself from feeling attracted to you, or feeling respectful towards you.

Then, when she interacts with you and sees that you really have changed, the idea of being your girl again doesnâ€™t seem as far-fetched to her as it did before.

Remember: If she loved you before, it means that the love will still be there in the background and waiting to be reactivated.

You can switch her feelings back on by being confident, easy-going and relaxed and making her laugh and feel good to be around you again.

If you do that, she will stop thinking of you as the emotionally weak and sensitive guy you used to be and start falling in love with the strong man that you are now.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Broke Up With Me Because She Said I Deserved More

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

3 common reasons why a woman will say that to her man areâ€¦!

1. She treated him badly and he put up with it because he saw her as being way more valuable than him

There are guys go through their entire life never feeling good enough for a beautiful woman (e.g. he believes that he's not good looking enough, doesn't have enough of money, is too overweight or skinny).

So, when a guy like that hooks up with a beautiful woman, he may begin to think, â€œWhatâ€¦s a beautiful woman like her doing with a guy like me? I really got lucky here. My luck probably isn't going to last forever with her though. I have to make sure that no matter what, I treat her like gold and make her feel like sheâ€¦s the most important and special person in the world to me.â€œ

He may then begin to suck up to her, put up with her bad treatment or try to buy her love with gifts and financial assistance (e.g. paying her bills, paying her rent), because deep down he doesn't believe that he deserves her.

He hopes that if he is super nice to her, she won't break up with him and find a guy who (in his eyes) is better than him (e.g. better looking, richer, more successful, has bigger muscles).

He also hopes that if he puts up with her bad treatment of him, she will take pity on him and won't have the heart to ever leave him because he's so good to her.

[image: Putting up with her bad behavior because he feels that she is more valuable than himself]

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that lacking confidence in himself and feeling unworthy of her love actually turns her off more than any other fault he may have.

Why?

A woman likes the idea of being with a man that she feels will be the envy of her friends, family and other women, because he is always confident in himself and believes in his attractiveness and value to her.

No matter what anyone says or does to put him down, or what he is going through in life, he always feels confident about himself and knows that he is worthy of her and of anything else he wants in life.

A woman wants to be able to feel proud of her man, respect him and feel attracted to him, rather than look down on him and feel pity for him based on how insecure and self-doubting he is.

So, when a guy allows his woman to walk all over him, treat him badly and disrespect him because he doesn't believe in himself and his worth to her, instead of thinking, â€œAwwwâ€¦! heâ€¦s just such a great guy. Look at how badly Iâ€¦ve treated him and yet he still loves and adores me. Iâ€¦d better hold on to him, because Iâ€¦ll never find another guy who will love me the way he does!â€œ she will think something like, â€œHeâ€¦s really sweet, but I can't spend my life with a man who has so little respect for himself that heâ€¦ll allow me to treat him so badly. I know that he means well and that he really cares for me, but thatâ€¦s not enough. If I can't look up to him and respect him, I just can't imagine myself building a life with him either. Itâ€¦s best if I break things off and find myself a real man who I can look up to and respect.

So, if your ex broke up with you because she said you deserved more, to convince her to give you another chance, you need to make sure that she feels like she'll be winning by being your girl again.

She needs to feel good (e.g. respectful, sexually attracted, hopeful), rather like she's settling for second best.

The only way to make her feel that way, is by being confident around her and standing up to her (in a loving yet firm way) when she's being cold, distant or treating you badly in some other way.

On the other hand, if you continue to put yourself down in terms of value and possibly even saying to yourself, "Why would she want me back? I'm not worthy of her love. She's too good for me" your lack of confidence will keep turning her off.

When that happens, it simply won't matter to her that you still care about her and want her back. She will see that as your issue and something that only you want, rather than it being a mutual thing. A relationship needs to have mutual respect, attraction and love for it to last.

It can't be one-sided and all about you wanting to be with her.

So, if you want your ex back, you have to believe you are good enough for her, rather than feeling like she'd be doing you a favor by being with you.

If she gets the sense that you are lost without her and need her, she will see that as desperation, insecurity and lack of self-worth and it will turn her off.

To get her back, you have to know that you are good enough for her and then just relax and confidently interact with her from now on.

Just know that she is lucky to have a man like you who is still interested in her.

Don't tell her that though.

Just let that kind of confidence shine through in how you talk, behave and act, so she can see that you are a confident man who believes in himself.

If she sees that, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you again.

She will see that she is lucky to have a man who is not only so confident in himself, but he's also a really good, honest guy who loves her and is committed being with her.

2. She cheated on him (often more than once) and didn't want to break his heart by telling him

[image: She cheated and didn't want to break his heart by telling him about it]

Sometimes a woman will get into a relationship with a guy even though she doesn't believe he's the one for her.

For example: A woman and a man might get to know each other through work, university, or because they hang out together in the same social circle.

The man feels sexual romantic feelings for the woman and wants to start a relationship with her, but she doesn't feel the same way about him and she initially says no.

He doesn't give up and over time, her resistance starts to crumble and she begins thinking things like, "Why am I being so stubborn? I know I don't really feel a lot of sexual attraction for him, but heâ€¦s a nice guy. I could definitely do a lot worse than him. What the heckâ€¦! Iâ€¦m going to say yes next time and see what happens from there. Maybe heâ€¦s the guy Iâ€¦ve always wanted. Maybe you can build a great relationship from a friendship.â€¦

Essentially, what sheâ€¦s experiencing is what I call the â€œGrow Onâ€œ effect (i.e. she wasnâ€¦t attracted to him at the start, but he slowly grew on her over time).

Although some relationships can't work when started with the Grow On effect, they usually end up in a break up when the woman gets bored of his unattractive approach (e.g. he's too nice, too neutral, gives her too much power).

So, if the guy fails to nurture and grow her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him, the Grow On effect wonâ€¦t last.

As soon as another man comes along and makes her feel strong surges of sexual attraction for him, it usually doesn't take long before sheâ€¦s kissing him and having sex with him.

This doesnâ€¦t necessarily mean that sheâ€¦s a bad person (although there are some untrustworthy women out there who enjoy cheating on their guy).

Instead, it simply means that sheâ€¦s not getting the attraction experience she wants from her man, so she starts looking elsewhere to fulfill her sexual and emotional needs.

At the same time, she doesnâ€¦t want to hurt her guy, so rather than break his heart by telling him that she met someone else, a woman will usually just break up with him and say something like, â€œYouâ€¦re a great guy. I really do care about you, but you deserve more. Iâ€¦m just not capable of giving you the kind of love you want from me. I think itâ€¦s better if we break up.â€¦

In a case like that, to get her back, the guy needs to make her feel so much respect and attraction for him as a man, that the idea of losing him forever because of a casual attraction she may have felt for other guys will make her feel sick to her stomach.

Heâ€¦s got to get her to the point where she wants him back for her own selfish reasons.

For example, he re-attracts her and she then begins thinking things like, â€œItâ€¦s nice when other guys flirt and give me attention, but what I have with my guy is a cut above the rest. Itâ€¦s so special and so valuable that nothing else comes even close to being good enough. Maybe I just need to give him another chance. Otherwise, I will probably lose him. He is more attractive now and women are going to notice that. I've got to get him back now.â€¦

So, if you serious about getting your ex back, just know that she may be the sort of woman who may cheat again.

Some women are natural cheaters and enjoy playing the field, dating and having sex with many different guys (even when in a serious relationship).

If a woman like that gets to the point where she feels bored with her guy, she will usually cheat and then break up with him by saying that he deserves more from a woman and she can't offer him that.

Note: A woman might also say, "You deserve more" to avoid getting into a big argument with him (e.g. by pointing out how he has turned her off), or to not have to deal with him becoming emotional and begging, pleading and crying with her for another chance.

He might then make the mistake of giving her a few weeks, or even months of space to "figure herself out," in the hope that she misses him and comes running back.

Sometimes, a cheating woman will do that because she just wants to mess with his head even more. However, in most cases, she will just move on and fall in love with a new guy to avoid having to back to a guy who didn't make her feel much attraction and love.

If you want to get your ex back, it's almost always better to actively make her have strong feelings for you, rather than just staying out of her life and hoping that she doesn't find a guy who is more attractive and interesting.

If you want, you sit back and hope she will come to her senses one day and come back to you, but it doesn't usually happen when a woman dumps a guy and gives the reason of, "You deserve more."

In cases like that, the woman is essentially saying, "Look you're too soft and sweet for me. You are a great guy, but I need a guy with more balls. I need a guy who will put me back in my place, rather than letting me walk all over him."

She doesn't want to tell you that because she doesn't want to give you the secret to re-attracting her.

So, she just tries to make you feel good about yourself by saying something like, "You deserve more" rather than telling you that your soft, gentle and wimpy approach to her turns her off.

Another reason why a woman will say, "You deserve more" as her break up reason is that

3. She was initially attracted to his nice guy approach because her ex boyfriend treated her badly

[image: She was initially attracted to his nice guy approach]

Sometimes, a woman might still be emotionally hurt from a previous relationship, so she hooks up with a guy who is the opposite of her ex and uses him to make herself feel whole again.

For example:

- Her ex was overly domineering and controlling, while her new guy allows her to make all the decisions in the relationship.
- Her ex was mean and disrespectful towards her, while her new guy is nice, sweet and treats her like a princess.
- Her ex was untrustworthy (e.g. he broke his promises to her), while her new guy is honest and reliable.
- Her ex was sexually bold and exciting, while her new guy is stable and predictable.

Initially, the idea of being with a good guy who is the opposite in almost every way to her ex will appeal to her because her self-esteem has taken quite a beating.

However, as soon as she starts to feel good about herself again, she begins to see that he's not really the guy for her.

She realizes that even though he treats her like a princess, unlike her previous ex who treated her so badly, she needs a man with more balls and who is not a pushover like him.

Yet, rather than hurt him by saying why she is really breaking up with him (i.e. he lacks balls around her), she will let him down gently by saying something along the lines of, "I'm sorry. I really do care for you, but I truly believe you deserve more from a woman. I can't give you that because (of some excuse), but you deserve it. I know you will find a woman who will give you that one day. I'm sorry that I can't.

The guy is then left thinking, "Huh? I'm a great guy and she doesn't want me? What is going on here? Do women want a bad boy or a jerk or something?"

No.

If your ex broke up with you because you were too much of a nice guy, you don't have to become a jerk and treat her badly to get her back.

Instead, you simply need to show her that you're now more confident, ballsy and assertive, while still being a good guy.

In other words, become a more balanced, well rounded man, rather than being on either extreme.

Show her who you are now every time you interact with her on the phone (e.g. by using humor to get her out of a bad mood when talking to you), or in person (e.g. by calmly, but confidently standing up to her if she tries to test you by being rude or disrespectful towards you).

When she sees for herself that you have transformed yourself into the type of man she always wanted you to be, she will start feeling attracted to you in the ways that have always been secretly important to her.

Her guard then comes down and the idea of losing you starts to make her feel scared, sad and worried.

She realizes that you are now a complete man and that other women will begin to notice that and want you.

3 Things to Avoid Doing if You Want to Get Her Respect, Attraction and Love Back

The quickest way to get your ex to want you back is by reawakening her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you.

You can do that by showing confidence every time you interact with her and making her laugh, smile and feel happy.

On the other hand, the fastest way to turn her off even more is by making any of the following common mistakes

1. Saying that you don't want anyone better and that she is more than enough for you, because you don't know the real meaning of what she is saying

Although a woman will sometimes break up with a guy by saying, "You deserve more," it's usually just her way of letting him down easy, so she doesn't have to give him a long explanation or get into an argument about the break up.

So, when a guy says, "No, no! Don't say that about yourself! You are perfect for me. You are everything I've always wanted in a woman and more," rather than make her change her mind, she will be thinking, "He just doesn't get it. Maybe I'm the perfect woman for him, but he's definitely not the right guy for me and until he can give me the attraction experience I really want (e.g. become more ballsy, stop being so wimpy and weak-minded, find a purpose and direction in his life) I will be moving on.

Remember: To make your ex change her mind and make her want you back, you have to make her feel the way she really wants to feel around you (i.e. respectful, attracted, happy and excited), rather than telling her about how good she makes you feel.

Getting her back is not about telling her how much you love her and need her.

She already knows that.

She is breaking up with you because you don't make her feel the way that she really wants to feel around a man (e.g. because you might be too insecure, lack balls around her, are too nice to her).

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Telling her that you're lost without her and need her, to hopefully make her realize that she is good enough for you

When a woman breaks up with a guy by saying that he deserves more, he might try to persuade her to change her mind by saying something like, You are saying that I deserve more because you don't realize how much I need you and how important you are in my life. You mean the world to me. Everything I do is for you. Can't you see that? Please baby, give me another chance with you. I'm lost without you in my life. I need you. You are so important to me. My life isn't enjoyable without you in it. I need you. I feel lost without you. You are everything to me.

Although a woman appreciates it when a guy places a high value on her and loves and respects her as his woman, she doesn't want to take on the role of being his sole purpose in life.

So, when a guy is begging, pleading and crying with her and saying that he needs her and can't go on without her, rather than feel flattered by his neediness, she instead feels turned off by it.

Why?

A woman doesn't want to be responsible for supporting a guy emotionally and making him feel worthy, happy and confident in his life.

She wants him to be happy, confident and have high self-esteem on his own and for his own reasons, rather than needing her to give him that feeling.

If she has to do support him emotionally in that way, not only can't she relax and be a feminine woman around him, but at the back of her mind she's also usually wondering, Will I have to take care of his emotional well-being for life? Is he going to become even more insecure and emotionally sensitive over time? Have I got myself a man here, or is he a boy in a man's body? and she pulls away from him even more.

So, if you want your ex to want you back, focus on getting to the point in your life where you truly believe that you can be happy with, or without her.

You do not have to waste weeks, months or years to achieve that.

You can literally change your way of thinking within days and be ready to get her back.

Don't waste time trying to slowly heal yourself or become emotionally independent.

Do it quickly or else she will most likely move on and close herself off to you even more.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Trying even harder to impress her by helping her financially, doing favors for her and being even nicer than ever before

Sometimes a guy might try to make his ex woman change her mind about breaking up by overwhelming her with attention, gifts and romantic gestures.

He might make himself available to her every beck and call, help pay for her bills and run errands for her.

Secretly, heâs hoping she will realize how necessary he is for her survival and she will then give him another chance with her.

Yet, although a woman might smile and look happy when he does something nice for her, what he doesnât realize is that these feelings are only temporary.

If he doesnât do anything else to regain her respect and feelings of sexual attraction for him as a man (e.g. by becoming more emotionally strong and confident, being more ballsy around her), sheâs not going to change her mind based on his niceness or generosity.

The fact is, a woman doesnât love, respect and feel sexually attracted to a guy because of what he can do or buy for her.

So, donât waste time offering your ex the type of things that aren't actually going to make her fall back in love with you.

Instead, focus on making her feel respect and sexual attraction for who you are as a man now (e.g. you are more confident, charismatic, emotionally masculine, ambitious).

The more she can see that youâre not the same guy she broke up with, the more she will begin thinking that she doesnât deserve you.

Then, she will jump at the idea of getting back with you because she will feel like she just won the relationship Lottery!

You know that you are a good man and she knows it too.

However, to get her back, you have to focus on making her feel respect for you (i.e. look up to you) and sexual attraction (i.e. the desire to have sex with you).

That is what really gets an ex woman back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Broke Up With Me Because She Didn't Feel Like Her Heart Was in it

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 common reasons why a woman will say, â€œI feel like my heart isn't in it anymoreâ€ and then break up with her man are that:

1. He hasn't been able to attract her in the ways that she really wants

For a guy to maintain and build on his woman's feelings of love, respect and attraction over time in a relationship, he needs to be able to attract her in the ways that she really wants.

Sometimes, a guy will try to make a woman love him in ways that he thinks are important (e.g. buying her flowers, doing lots of nice things for her, being romantic all the time, spending all of his time with her).

Yet, if that's not the way that she wants to feel attracted to her man, it just won't mean much to her at all.

She might see it as sweet and kind, but it won't make her melt and feel madly in love with the guy.

So, what will?

Some of the things that a woman may want from her guy are that:

- He is loving, caring and attentive, but he doesn't let her push him around and get away with bad behavior or be disrespectful towards him.
- He maintains his confidence when she tries to make him feel insecure by teasing him, throwing a tantrum or creating drama.
- He uses humor to change her mood from angry to happy, rather than getting dragged into her fake drama and losing control of his emotions.
- He makes her feel like she's the sexiest, most desirable woman in the world in his eyes, rather than treating her like a neutral friend that he wants to hang out and do "guy" things with.
- He has a plan for his life (and by association hers) and he's motivated, focused and active in pursuing those plans, rather than being a grown man who still behaves like a teenager (e.g. immature, doesn't take responsibility for his life, wastes his spare time by watching too much TV or playing video games for too long).
- He believes in himself and in his value to his woman and the world, rather than feeling like he's not good enough for her, or like everyone else is better than him.
- He is secure in his masculinity and doesn't doubt that his woman will remain faithful to him, rather than being a jealous and controlling boyfriend who constantly lives in fear that some other guy might attract her away from him.
- He's a real man all the time, rather than be domineering at home with her and then submissive when he's around other men.

- He knows that in order for a woman to want to stay with him for life, the attraction between them needs to be mutual, rather than him feeling attracted to her, but not doing anything to make her feel the same way about him.

These are just a few of the things that a woman looks out for in her relationship with a man.

So, the question that you should ask yourself is, â€œDid I do those things for her or did I do pretty much the opposite most of the time?â€

Note: Admitting that you made a mistake doesn't mean you're a bad guy, or that you can't change and then give your ex what she really wants from you.

In fact, when you discover where you really went wrong, you can then quickly make attractive adjustments to yourself and interact with her to re-attract her.

When you interact with your ex on a phone call and in person, she will be able to sense the changes in you simply by listening to how you talk and observing your body language.

You don't even need to tell her that you've changed.

She will notice it herself.

When she does, she will feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and open back up to having feelings for you again.

Approaching the ex back process that way means that you don't need to beg and plead for another chance.

She wants to give you another chance because her heart suddenly is in it.

She feels drawn to you and wants to explore how she feels around the new you, which leads to hugging, kissing and having sex again.

Another reason why a woman might say to a guy that her heart wasn't in it is that

2. She thought she'd be happy to settle down with him, but it's just not exciting enough

Gone are the days where a woman would stay in a relationship with a guy regardless of how unhappy she felt, simply because it was expected of her (i.e. for the sake of her family and because it was frowned upon socially).

In today's world, a woman will break up with a guy if he can't make her feel the way she wants to feel in the relationship with him (e.g. he's nice, but he just lacks the confidence of real man, so she doesn't feel attracted to him).

A modern woman is continually influenced by what she hears from friends and acquaintances, reads on the Internet and in women's magazines and sees on TV sitcoms and movies.

When she watches TV, she sees dramatic relationships full of excitement and spontaneous, wild sex, women dumping guys and moving on to a better life and celebrities talking about how much happier they are being single.

It's not like what women were exposed to in the 1800s or early 1900s where it was all about being a loyal, stick-by-your-man kind of woman.

[image: Please don't leave me!]

These days, women are essentially free agents and can get up and leave if they don't feel like they're in love.

So, when a woman finds herself in a relationship that's lukewarm at best (e.g. they feel more like friends), she's usually been so negatively influenced by what she's seen, heard and read, that thinks something like, "My relationship has become so boring. I don't know if I'm ready to settle down and be stuck with just one guy for the rest of my life if it feels like we're just nice friends. I used to think he was the one, but my heart just isn't in it anymore. I don't feel the spark. I don't feel butterflies in my stomach when I'm around him. I'd be better off being single and playing the field. After all, I'm still young and there are just so many eligible guys out there, so why settle for one who doesn't make me feel attracted and in love?"

Here's the thing!

In a relationship, it's the man's responsibility to maintain and build on the love, respect and sexual attraction between him and his woman.

If he fails to do that (e.g. because he takes her love for granted and just assumes that the relationship will stick together because it used to be so good) she will eventually begin to feel frustrated and want out.

Initially, she may just hint at her unhappiness (e.g. by saying things like, "Why do we always do the same things? It's just so boring," or "Wouldn't it be nice if we did something wild and crazy in the bedroom for once?" or, "I'm starting to feel like one of your buddies. Can we do something romantic for a change rather than go to a sports game/stay home to watch TV/play video games again?") in the hopes that the guy will catch on and do something to spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for him.

If she notices that nothing changes, she will then break up with him and look for excitement elsewhere (e.g. by finding a replacement guy, going out partying with her single friends, having a lot of casual sex).

Some guys might ask, "Why doesn't she just say exactly what she wants if she's unhappy? Why must she play games and hint at things? Why not just be clear and tell me what to do?"

The thing is, a woman doesn't want to give her man too many instructions on how to talk and behave in the relationship with her, because if she does, she will then feel like she's forcing him to be someone he's not, which takes the romance out of what he does.

In her mind, she may then begin to see him as somewhat of a "robot" who does whatever she wants, which then makes her lose respect for him.

When she reaches that point in the relationship, rather than stick around feeling bored or unhappy, a woman will usually just break up with her guy and move on.

So, if your ex broke up with you because she didn't feel like her heart was in it, to get her back, you need to re-spark her feelings by making her feel respect and attraction every time you interact with her.

You can do that by maintaining your confidence with her and using humor to get her laughing and smiling to melt her defenses, especially when she's being cold or aloof towards you.

You can also do it by being emotionally masculine around her and making her feel feminine and girly compared how masculine you think, talk, behave and act now.

The more she can see that youâre not the same guy she broke up with (e.g. boring, predictable, always on your best behavior around her, hesitating, insecure, self-doubting), her curiosity will get the better of her.

She will want to hang out with you more to experience the new and improved you for herself.

It is intriguing, exciting and enjoyable for her to experience herself around the new you and watch how she feels.

As she is doing that, she will naturally convince herself that she wants to hug you again, kiss you and have sex with you.

When that happens, the relationship automatically gets back together and you continue on together from there.

Another common reason why a woman might say to a guy that her heart wasnât in it is thatâ!

3. He always treated her so well even though she treated him badly

[image: He treated her so well, even though she always treated him so badly]

One of the biggest reasons why a woman will lose interest in a guy is if she starts to feel more emotionally dominant than him.

This usually happens when the guy is super nice and sweet around his woman and allows her to get away with treating him badly.

For example: A woman might throw tantrums, talk rudely to him, refuse sex or insult him when she doesnât get her own way.

She may belittle him in front of others (e.g. call him an idiot or a loser, say that heâs useless, compare him to other guys in a negative way) and generally treat him like crap.

In some cases, a woman will even flirt with other guys in front of her man just to get a rise out of him.

Yet, rather than calmly, but confidently standing up to her and making it clear that heâs not going to put up with her bad behavior (which will cause her to feel surges of respect and attraction for him), a guy might try to be even nicer to her in the hopes that sheâll eventually feel guilty and begin to treat him better one day.

Women hate that because it shows her that the guy has no backbone and is unwilling to stand up for himself, which makes her feel unsafe around him.

Although women donât go around admitting this, they actually want a guy who will confidently, but lovingly put her back in her place when she gets out of line.

So, if a woman feels more emotionally dominant than a guy and feels like she can walk all over him, it becomes very difficult for her to respect him.

If she canât respect him, she also canât feel enough sexual attraction for him anymore.

Then, if she tests him (i.e. by treating him badly) and he just puts up with her bad behavior, she will begin to think something like, âThis isnât working out. Heâs just not the man I need him to be. I can't look up to him and respect him, so why stick around? and she then breaks up with him.

Here's the thing!

Even if a woman initially acts like she enjoys doing it, she doesn't actually want to be with a guy she can dominate.

She wants to be with a guy who knows how to confidently lead the way in the relationship, take charge and allow her to relax into feeling totally feminine and girly around him.

So, when you next see your ex, don't be afraid to stand up to her and show her that you're no longer the kind of man she can push around and disrespect.

It's not about being rude to her, being aggressive or anything silly like that.

Instead, it's about standing up to her in a calm, confident, loving, but assertive manner to remind her of her place in the relationship (i.e. beneath you in terms of dominance).

It's not about making her feel beneath you in terms of value, intelligence or worth.

Instead, it's about making her realize that she is beneath you in terms of dominance.

Remember: That's what she actually wants.

So, you will get more respect and attraction from her if you confidently laugh and tease her when she's being rude towards you (and even hang up the phone or walk away from a conversation if necessary), than if you try to placate her by being nice, sweet and submissive.

Let her see that you have more balls now and she will naturally feel attracted to you again.

Another reason why a woman will say something like, "My heart just isn't in it" when referring to the relationship is that!

4. She cheated on him, felt more for the other guy and now doesn't see the point in sticking with the relationship

Sometimes, a woman might cheat on her guy (e.g. because the relationship has become boring, she's an untrustworthy woman, he doesn't know how to give her the attraction experience she really wants) and then realize that she felt more for the other guy and is probably better off without her boyfriend/husband.

She may then let him down gently by saying something along the lines of, "You're a really great guy, but I just don't feel like my heart is in the relationship anymore. I need some time apart to figure things out."

In some cases, a woman may even say, "Maybe sometime in the future we can get back together again," as a way of softening the blow and giving the guy some hope, so that he will let her go without a fight.

However, she knows that she's just going to hook up with the other guy as soon as she breaks up with him and is only saying things like that in the hope that he'll think all she needs is time apart.

He may then generously give her 30, 60 or even more days of space, while all the while he's likely thinking, "This is exactly what our relationship needs to get back on track. As soon as she realizes how much she misses me, her heart will be mine once again!"

Yet, when he eventually contacts her after a few weeks, or even months, rather than tell him she wants him back, a woman will usually say something along the lines of, â€œIâ€™m sorry. You took so long to get in touch with me, so I assumed you had forgotten about me and moved on. Iâ€™m with another guy now and Iâ€™m happy. Please accept that what we had is over and focus on finding yourself another girl too. You and I are never going to get back together again. Please don't contact me again. I don't want this ruining my new relationship. Goodbye.â€

Finally, another common reason why a woman might say that her heart wasn't in it is...

5. The love was good at the start, but he didn't deepen it over time, so it faded away

In a relationship, it's the guy's responsibility to guide both himself and his woman into deeper feelings of love, respect and sexual attraction.

If he fails to do that, the relationship will slowly grow stale and then it will likely go from sizzle to fizzle in no time at all.

A relationship is almost always feels great in the beginning.

A couple is usually full of hope and excitement for the future and any flaws that might be present are often overlooked or ignored, because the exhilaration of new love is enough to make them both think, â€œItâ€™s okay. Nobody is perfect. Our love will overcome any obstacles we might encounter in the future. I love her/him for who she/he is, flaws and all.â€

Yet, once the initial thrill wears off, those seemingly insignificant flaws suddenly become glaring, obvious problems.

For example: In the beginning of the relationship, a guy might come across as being mysterious to his woman because he doesn't open up emotionally.

Yet, over time, she may realize that what she initially thought was an attractive quality (e.g. because she read about all those mysterious strangers in romance novels when she was a teenager), is now something that she feels turned off by.

Rather than feel excited about how mysterious he is, she starts to see him as being someone who doesn't have the emotional range to commit to a relationship because of his deep insecurities (e.g. he was hurt as a child, dumped a woman he really loved, abandoned).

Initially, she might try to push him into opening up to her, but if she sees that he can't or won't, her feelings for him will begin to fade and eventually she'll break up with him.

When the guy then sees that he's losing her, he might desperately try to make her have feelings for him again by completely opening up about his emotions and possibly even crying to her.

Although she might be supportive as he cries, she will secretly be disgusted and deeply turned off by his emotional weakness.

To be politically correct, women often say that it's okay for a man to cry, but in reality, women find it absolutely unattractive when a man can't control his emotions to the point where he ends up crying like a little boy.

Alternatively, rather than crying, a guy might become very romantic and sweet by sending her love letters, a poem or flowers.

He may also start promising to change and ask something like, “What do you need me to do to make you change your mind? Just name it. I will do anything for you. Please just give me one more chance and I promise things will be different this time. I love you with all of my heart and soul.”

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that romantic gestures mean nothing if a woman doesn't feel respect and sexual attraction for a guy.

Romance has to be wanted by both sides. It's not a one-sided thing.

A woman has to feel respect and sexual attraction for a guy to be wooed or seduced by his romantic gestures.

So, when a guy desperately tries to be romantic to get a woman back after a break up, it almost always backfires and makes her feel even more repelled by him.

She may even label his romantic gestures as “selfish,” because she can see that it's all just about him trying to get what he wants from her.

He needs her back and is willing to say and do pretty much anything to hopefully win her over.

Yet, she sees right through it and remains cold, closed off and emotionally numb to his attempts to get her back.

So, if you want to get your ex back, make sure that you're making her feel useful emotions such as respect, attraction and happiness when she's around you.

The more positive she feels when she's interacting with you or around you (because you make her laugh and smile, have changed the things she wanted you to change and are a better man now), the more her heart will open up to you again.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Can I Get My Ex Girlfriend to Open Up to Me and Let Me Into Her Heart Again?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Your girlfriend's heart will remain closed off to you until you can actively make her feel a renewed spark of respect and attraction for you when you interact with her on a phone call or in person.

On a phone call or in person, she will be able to feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, which will make her open up and let you into her heart again.

However, even though it would be nice (because it's so easy) you can't fully reopen her heart via text, e-mail or social media messages if she has dumped you after losing a lot of respect and attraction for you.

Texts and messages just aren't enough when she is done with the relationship, completely turned off by you and no longer wants to give you another chance.

If she only â€œkind of dumped you and is still in love with you, then it's fine to send her a text, e-mail or social media message to say sorry and ask to see her again.

Since she still loves you, she will be open to communicating with you and won't look at your texts or messages in a negative light.

On the other hand, if your girlfriend has properly dumped you and no longer wants to be with you, she will be looking at your texts and messages with suspicion.

You might act confident and emotionally strong via text, but she will be thinking, “Well, would he have the balls to say that to me in person?” or, “That sounds nice, but I doubt he really means it.”

This is why the only way to fully reopen her heart is to let her experience a spark of respect and attraction for the new and improved you over the phone, or preferably face-to-face.

It's only in those interactions that she can personally sense and notice the changes in you.

When she sees that, she can then believe that you are different to the guy she broke up with and deserve another chance.

Avoid Sending Her Long Texts, E-mails or Social Media Messages

[image: Don't send her huge walls of text]

Women hate getting long, written (or typed) messages from an ex guy that they no longer have feelings for.

To a woman, it's like receiving a message from an emotional woman or a confused guy who still hasn't yet worked out how to be an emotionally strong man who can get to the point and not go on and on about his feelings in a letter, text or message.

Women actually see long texts, messages or letters as being a selfish act because the guy is essentially talking about himself, what he wants, what he has realized, what he wants her to realize and so on.

It's all about him getting what he wants from her (even though he might include loads of compliments to her in the texts or letters), so she sees it as a selfish act.

For example: A guy might text his ex woman something likeâ€

â€I just want to say that Iâ€m really sorry for what happened between us. No matter what you might think of me, I need you to know that I would never intentionally do anything to hurt you. You mean the world to me and Iâ€ve felt like half a man since we broke up. Just thinking of you feeling sad makes me feel sick to my stomach. I am so sorry for what I put you through. I was so wrong to act in that way. I canâ€t go on like this knowing that you despise me. Please give me a chance to make things right between us. Yes, I stuffed up, but Iâ€m truly a changed man and Iâ€ve learned from my mistakes. Will you please consider letting me into your heart again? I promise I wonâ€t let you down again.â€

Although his intentions may be good, if his ex doesnâ€t see, hear and experience these changes first hand (i.e. over the phone and in person) she will likely just assume the worst of him and see his actions as selfish.

After all, she has lost respect and attraction for him and that caused her to break up with him, so at this point, she just doesnâ€t care what he wants.

Rather than give him the benefit of the doubt and say to herself, â€That was a really well worded text! He seems like he means it! Maybe I should give him another chance. After all, a text is everything! Who cares if what he is texting doesn't match up to who he would be in person. He texted so well!â€ she will likely think, â€Anyone can type â€Iâ€m sorryâ€please give me another chance," but itâ€s just a bunch of useless words on a screen. Actions are what count and right now, him sending me a text/e-mail/social media message to ask for forgiveness and tell me how much he still cares, is not the type of thing a man who feels genuine remorse would do. Instead, itâ€s something a coward would do because heâ€s hiding behind a screen and hoping I wonâ€t catch him out. He's hoping that he can trick me with his texts, rather than facing up to me on a call or in person. If he was genuinely sorry for what happened and if he had really changed, he would have the balls to call me up, or see me in person and show me. I donâ€t believe that heâ€s being sincere and I donâ€t care that he still loves me. My feelings for him are dead and itâ€s going to take a lot more than a text/e-mail/social media message to bring them back.â€

So, if you want to get your girlfriend to open up to you and let you into her heart again, donâ€t put yourself in a position with her where she feels as though you're hiding behind texts and trying to achieve your own selfish aims with her.

You have to make her see that you really have changed before she will allow herself to open her heart up to you again and the easiest way to let her experience the new you is on a phone call and face-to-face.

Over the phone, a woman can hear the sincerity and confidence in your voice.

Likewise, if you are feeling insecure and nervous (e.g. stumbling over your words around her, only saying what you think she wants to hear so that she will give you another chance with her, doubting your attractiveness to her), she will pick up on that too.

For your girlfriend to open up and let you into her heart again, she needs to be able to see that you believe in your attractiveness to her no matter what she says or does to make you feel insecure.

Of course, be relaxed about it when you display that kind of confidence.

Don't act arrogant and don't say that you believe in your attractiveness to her.

Just relax, believe in your attractiveness to her without putting on any kind of act.

Let her sense and feel that confidence coming from you as you interact with her on the phone.

Then, get her to meet up with you in person.

Face-to face, she can pick up on your body language (e.g. Are you relaxed and at ease around her, or are you fidgeting and avoiding eye contact? Do you believe in yourself, or are you secretly panicking and hoping that she gives you another chance even though you don't feel worthy anymore).

Face-to-face, she can also observe your behavior and determine whether you've changed some of the things that caused her to break up with you.

For example: If a guy displayed unmanly behavior around his girlfriend before (e.g. he often acted a little too cute like a girl would, he was too emotionally sensitive, he let her dominate him too easily), she will be looking to see if he's now a more masculine guy.

If he was too emotionally sensitive before for example, she might treat him coldly or say things to get under his skin (e.g. "Nothing you can ever do will make me give you another chance," or "You look ugly today," or "Why are you wearing that? It's gross") to see if he will respond the way he used to.

If he remains calm, laughs off what she is saying and just believes in his attractiveness to her, she will naturally open up to him again.

So, if you want your girlfriend to take you seriously, you have to let her see that you have already changed the things that were turning her off.

Letting her see and experience that in person will convince her more than anything you could ever write in a text, e-mail or social media message.

Remember: Written text messages have only been around for a little while.

As for writing letters, that may have been around for thousands of years, but it's still not as effective as talking on the phone or in person.

Why?

When a woman has lost respect and attraction for a guy and broken up with him, she no longer looks at his texts, letters or messages with feelings of love in her heart.

Instead, she looks at his communication with suspicion and feels turned off anytime she notices insecurity, self doubt or desperation.

She may continue texting back and forth with him for a while, but she will know that he is turning her off more and more as it goes on.

In his mind, he may be thinking that he still has a chance because she is texting back and forth with him.

Little does he know, women hate it when guys (especially guys they've broken up with) send long texts, e-mails or messages explaining their feelings, talking about the relationship and trying to get another chance.

So, don't waste time trying to get your girlfriend to open up to you and let you into her heart by sending her messages, because sheâs most likely not going to believe you or give you the respect you deserve.

Instead, get her on a phone call and start triggering her feelings for you again, by allowing her to experience the new you.

Then, meet up with her in person and shock her (in a good way) by thinking, talking and acting in a completely different way from what she is expecting (e.g. Relaxed and confident vs. tense and insecure. Laugh at her attempts to make you feel uncomfortable vs. losing your composure and getting upset, anxious or agitated).

When she can see for herself that youâre not going to crack under her fake pressure and revert back to the old you, she wonât be able to stop herself from opening up to you again, because you are now the man she wanted you to be all along.

Attraction is Key

[image: Attraction is key to getting your girlfriend back]

Everything that you say or do around your ex girlfriend from now on will either turn her off further or turn her back on and make her open up to you again.

Don't worry though...

Re-sparking your girlfriendâs feelings of respect and attraction is easier than you might think.

As long as youâre saying and doing the types of things that are instinctively attractive to women (e.g. being more confident around her, using humor to lighten the mood between you and her, especially when sheâs being cold and unfriendly), she wonât be able to stay closed off to you for very long.

On the other hand, if you fall into the trap of trying to get her back by making some of the following mistakes, sheâll just keep pushing you away and saying things like, âNo. I donât have feelings for you anymore. Please accept that and leave me alone.â

Mistakes such asâ|

1. Trying to make her feel pity for you

[image: Why are you being like this. I love you so much. Please just be straight with me. Tell me how you feel!]

Sometimes a guy might say to his girlfriend, âHow can you do this to me? Did what we had mean anything to you? I gave you my whole heart and youâre ready to walk away just like that. How can you be so cold and closed off? I wish I could be like you and switch my love off, but Iâm not. I actually care about what we had. How can you not care? Doesnât it matter to you that I still love you and that I will never be able to move on and find another woman because of my feelings for you?â

Heâs likely hoping that by making her feel sorry for him, she will change her mind and give him another chance.

Yet, it just doesnât work like that.

A woman doesnât want to be manipulated into giving her ex another chance simply because he can't deal with the idea of being dumped by the woman he loves.

Additionally, when a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her ex, she stops caring about how he feels or what he wants.

What he wants just doesn't matter to her so much anymore.

Sometimes, the woman doesn't allow herself care at all because she doesn't want to be dragged back into a relationship that she knows will just end in another break up.

She worries that he might get her back into a relationship, make her love him again and then dump her.

Then she will be the one who is feeling horrible.

So, she tries to stick with her decision to break up with him and focus on the unattractive qualities he has been displaying since the break up (e.g. insecurity, self doubt, anger, desperation).

When he tries to make her feel pity for him, rather than make her change her mind, she just uses his desperation as another reason to close up even more and try to move on without him.

So, don't bother trying to make your girlfriend feel pity for you and focus instead on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Another mistake that guys make when trying to get an ex woman to open her heart up again is

2. Sending her flowers or a poem to be romantic

Some guys assume that to get an ex back, they need to become very romantic and show her how sweet they really can be.

The thing is, almost everyone has seen a movie or TV show where the guy gets dumped and then gets his woman to let him into her heart again by sending her bunches of flowers, serenading her with a romantic song (often outside her bedroom window when she's on the 2nd floor of a house), or writing her an emotional love poem.

Yet, real life is not like the movies.

Yes, a woman might enjoy getting flowers or a love poem, but deep down she's usually going to think, "That's nice, but all he's really doing is putting a band aid over a big wound and hoping that it will be enough to heal the pain. Flowers and poetry are fine if we hadn't broken up because I would see it as romantic. Yet, him trying to patch things up in this way simply highlights to me that he doesn't get why we broke up and what I really need from a man. He doesn't understand that a woman doesn't care about romance unless she feels respect and sexual attraction for a guy. Without respect and sexual attraction, romantic gestures are awkward, weird and unwanted."

So, even though your intentions are probably in the right place by trying to be sweet to your ex girlfriend, she won't necessarily see it that way.

If you want to get your girlfriend back, you need to show her through your thinking and your behavior that you've changed and become the man she always wanted you to be.

For example: Can you maintain your confidence around her, even when she's being cold, distant or even bitchy towards you, or does she make you nervous now?

Do you make her feel feminine around you by being masculine in how you think, behave and talk, or are you always being a nice, neutral guy because you're afraid of being the man around her?

Have you identified her real reasons for losing respect, sexual attraction and love for you, or are you just hoping that saying "I'm sorry" will be enough to change her mind?

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Asking her to tell you what she needs you to change

[image: I will change whatever you want. Just tell me]

Naturally, when a guy gets broken up with and doesn't immediately know why, the next logical step will be to ask his ex girlfriend.

Yet, asking a woman what you need to change is the worst thing you can do.

Why?

When a guy says, "Please forgive me. Just tell me what you want me to change and I'll do it," what a woman usually hears is, "Please teach me how to be a man because I haven't got a clue. I need you to take the lead in the ex back process and tell me what to do and I'll be a good little boy and follow your instructions."

As you may already have guessed, a woman doesn't want to do that for her man.

She just wants to be in love naturally, rather than trying to make a relationship work with a guy who doesn't yet understand how to be the man she needs.

4. Saying that you will do whatever she wants

Just like the mistake above, telling a woman you will do anything she wants you to do is the quickest way to turn her off further.

Why?

If a woman has to tell a guy what to do, she fears that she will end up taking on the dominant role in the relationship, while he will then take on a more submissive role and essentially becomes her woman (or her "bitch").

When the roles in a relationship get switched like that, a woman automatically stops feeling feminine and girly around her man and she starts looking down on him for not being man enough to take the lead and be the man in the relationship.

This causes her to lose even more respect and sexual attraction for him.

She then stops wanting to have sex with him and will even begin to despise him for being such a wimp around her.

5. Telling her how lost you are without her

Sometimes a guy might try to convince his ex to give him another chance, by telling her how lost he feels without her.

For example: A guy might say, "Please baby, don't do this to me. Can't you see that I'm broken without you? I just can't function anymore now that we're no longer together. Please think about what you're doing to me. I need you. Please have a heart and think about giving me another chance. You are everything to me. Without you, my life just doesn't make sense. I need you in it to feel whole again."

In most cases, rather feel flattered that her ex is so dependent on her, a woman just feels even more turned off by him. Why?

Even though a woman definitely wants to be loved and appreciated by her man, she doesn't want to be his main reason for living, or his main source of happiness.

If she senses that he can't be a man without her, she will feel as though he isn't an emotionally strong man and it will cause her to lose respect and attraction for him.

The fact is, most women want to be with a man who is confident, happy and forward moving with, or without her.

So, the best thing you can do to get your girlfriend to open up and let you into her heart again is to make sure that you become emotionally independent (i.e. you have a strong purpose in life outside of just wanting to be in a relationship with her. You are making progress towards achieving your big goals in life that are important to you. You have hobbies, interests and friends of your own).

When she sees that you're a happy, more balanced man and moving on with your life without her, she will begin to feel some respect and attraction for you again.

6. Talking about her heart

When a man asks a woman things like, What do I have to do to make you open up to me and let me into your heart again? it's actually a turn off to pretty much every woman on the planet.

It's just too soppy and romantic for most modern women.

Additionally, coming from an ex boyfriend that she no longer feels a lot of (or any) respect and attraction for, it's not something that she is eager to hear.

So, rather than make a woman think, It's so amazing that he's such an emotionally sensitive guy. I find that so attractive. He's like a woman and I like women. I don't like men who are manly. I like men who are sensitive like a woman! she will think something like, My heart? What is this? A romantic movie or real life? A masculine man would never talk about me letting him into my heart again. Ewww! Even if I had any doubts about breaking up with him, when he talks like that it just turns me off even more. He talks like a woman or like a tacky character from an old school romantic movie. It's so outdated.

The bottom line is this:

If you want your girlfriend to open up to you and let you into her heart again, you're going to have to do it by focusing on making her feel respect and sexual attraction for you again.

You can do that by behaving and talking in ways that display confidence, masculinity, charisma and wit.

Don't try to win her over with sweet words about being let into her heart again.

In most cases, when guys talk about their ex girlfriend's heart, they have usually been dumped for being too much of a softie to begin with.

So, don't become even softer and more romantic by talking about her heart and being a hopeless romantic.

It just doesn't work.

What does?

Show her that you are now the confident, emotionally strong and masculine man that she always wanted you to be.

Thatâ□□s the key to her heart.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

5 Reasons Why Your Ex Doesn't Want to Work On the Relationship and Give You Another Chance

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your ex doesn't want to work on the relationship and give you another chance, here are 5 possible reasons why!

1. She can see that you don't even know what to change to make her happy

In most cases, a woman won't just break up with a guy without first giving him at least a few chances to change and improve the things about himself that have been making her feel unhappy.

For example: When a woman starts noticing things about her guy's thinking and behavior that turn her off (e.g. he has become too insecure or emotionally sensitive), she may initially try to get him to change by discussing her feelings and making suggestions on how he might improve himself.

For instance, if she feels that the relationship is becoming too boring, she might say things like, "Why don't we do something different this weekend? A friend of mine is throwing a party that we've been invited to. Do you want to go?" or "I'm tired of watching TV all the time. Why don't we try something different for a change?" to motivate her guy to spice things up a bit.

If he takes the hint and starts being a bit more fun around her (e.g. surprising her after work by whisking her off for a dinner date, planning the occasional weekend away, taking up a hobby that they can do together), things will settle down and she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him for being man enough to understand the problem and caring enough to fix it.

However, if he fails to get the message and continues turning her off, she will then start getting into arguments with him and maybe even throw angry tantrums as a way of getting her point across.

[image: Is this as good as it's going to get?]

If that also doesn't work, a woman will usually get to the point where she starts thinking, "Is this as good as it's going to get between us? I guess he's just not capable of changing and becoming a better man. I'm not happy settling for second best like this. I have to move on and find myself a guy who can give me what I really want in a relationship."

She will then either break up with him, distance herself from him and hope that he loses interest or she may even cheat on him and tell him about it as a way of breaking up the relationship.

Here's the thing!

Most guys are good guys and they don't intentionally go out of their way to make their woman feel unhappy.

It's just that quite often, a guy simply doesn't realize what he's doing wrong in his relationship and has no idea how to fix it.

He might have gotten the relationship off to a good start, but he simply loses his way and ends up turning her off completely.

Some guys are proactive about it and seek help online to fix their relationship problems before it's too late, whereas other guys just let it unfold and hope for the best.

Some guys also just write it off as the woman being crazy, having emotional problems, needing to see a therapist or being unreasonable because she used to be so loving, caring, forgiving and warm.

So, a guy like that will see the problems in the relationship as her fault because he assumes that she is messed up emotionally and is taking it all out on him.

If she senses that he doesn't get that her arguments and tantrums are a warning and that he is blaming the problems on her, she gets even more angry and frustrated.

When she decides to break up with him, he may then panic and try to offer to change anything she wants if she'll just give him another chance, or he may start offering to change things about himself that she doesn't really care about.

For example: A woman might want her guy to become more assertive, take the lead in the relationship and make things a bit more interesting between them by being more ballsy in how he approaches her, but he may offer to spend more time at home with her, take her on nice dates and treat her even more nicely in the hopes that the extra attention will make her happy.

When she realizes that he doesn't even know what to change to make her happy, she will just break up with him and try to move on.

So, the first step to making your ex want to work on the relationship and to give you another chance is to fully understand what she really wants you to change about yourself.

Then, the next time you interact with her (e.g. on a phone call, or in person) she will recognize that you truly understand where you went wrong and are no longer the same guy that she broke up with.

When she can see that you've figured out where you went wrong and have already taken steps to improve yourself, she will instinctively feel herself respecting you once again.

When she respects you, she can also feel sexually attracted to you and when she feels these two things, the idea of working on the relationship and giving you another chance starts to make sense to her again.

However, if you are just trying to get her back by attempting to convince her that you will change, you will most likely get rejected.

Another reason why your ex might not want to work on the relationship and give you another chance is...

2. You're asking her for a relationship before making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again

[image: I care about you so much. Please give me another chance]

Note: Flowers and other sweet gestures don't mean anything to a woman unless she has sexual and romantic feelings for you.

One of the most common reactions that guys have when they get broken up with is to quickly try and convince their ex to give them another chance.

Sometimes that will include him buying her flowers, gifts or writing her a letter to express his love for her, in the hope that she realizes how much he loves her and how silly she would be to let him go. Alternatively, a guy might plead with his ex to talk to him about the relationship in the hopes that they can iron things out between them.

Yet, if he doesn't first spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him, she will usually just keep saying things like, "Forget about it. I don't want to work on the relationship and I don't want to give you another chance. What's done is done and it's time that we accept that we're not right for each other and move on. We had our chance, it didn't work and now it's over. Please just accept that."

So, don't make the mistake of getting into long discussions about the relationship with your ex in the hopes that you can talk things out enough that she eventually says, "Yeah, you're right! We are meant for each other. Let's get back together!"

If you want her to want to give you another chance, you have to focus on making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

You can do that by making her smile, laugh and feel good when she's talking to you (especially when she is being cold towards you), so she can be reminded that you are the more dominant one in the relationship and are not intimidated by her recent rejections of you.

You are confident in your attractiveness to her, you know that you're the man and you know that she loves you.

When you have that kind of confidence, you will naturally talk, behave and take action in a way that is naturally to her (and to other women).

You will be the kind of confident guy that all women love to be around.

For example: If your ex says something like, "I don't want to work on the relationship. I've tried for so long to help you understand how to be the man that I want and I'm now at the point where I've given up. It's too late for us. I think it's better that we go our separate ways," rather than get upset and emotional about it, you can use it as an opportunity to make her smile and laugh by reacting in a way that she isn't expecting.

For example: You might say in a joking way (be playful, light-hearted, easy-going), "You know how hard of hearing I can be sometimes. I missed the first 100 times you told me it was over, but I think I've got it now. I hear you loud and clear! We're finished! It's over! Goodbye and good riddance!" and then have a little laugh with her about that.

You can then say something like, "Seriously though, I understand why you don't want to work on the relationship and give me and you another chance at being together. I made a whole bunch of silly mistakes like (mention a few e.g. I took you for granted, was immature and childish, became boring and predictable), but I'm not that guy anymore. I don't expect you to believe me right now, but that's okay. I know that actions speak louder than words, so I will let my actions speak for themselves from now on. All I ask is that we stay friends and then see what happens from there. I promise, no more pressure to get back together again. If you eventually decide that you don't want to be friends with me anymore, I will respect your decision and leave you alone. I'll stop contacting you completely and I will get out of your life 100% if that's what you want."

You have my word on that. So, what do you say?

In this way, not only are you making her smile and laugh by making a joke about your past behavior, but you're also showing her that you're an emotionally mature man who has taken responsibility for what happened between you and her and are respecting her right to be able to move on if she wants to.

All of this means that you take the pressure off your ex to give you another chance right away and you focus instead on letting her experience the new and improved you for herself, at her own pace. She then stops putting up walls every time you interact with her, which then allows her heart to feel some of the positive emotions she's been trying not to associate with you anymore (e.g. respect, sexual attraction, romantic love).

From there, just focus on making her feel good when talking to you (e.g. get her laughing and smiling) and she will naturally feel a desire to work on the relationship and give you another chance.

Another possible reason why your ex keeps saying, No, to the idea of working on the relationship is

3. You haven't gotten her to properly forgive your past mistakes yet

To make your ex open herself up to the idea of working on the relationship and giving you another chance, you have to get her to forgive you for real.

She can't just say, "Yeah, I forgive you" and not mean it.

If she doesn't forgive you for real, she will continue focusing on why you and her shouldn't be together anymore and will be looking for reasons to reject you.

Any time that you do something she doesn't approve of, she'll say to herself, "See? He's still the same jerk I broke up with. He was just putting on an act to make me give him another chance and now he's back to his old ways. Well, that's the last time I put up with this. I'm walking away from this relationship and I'm not going to ever make the mistake of giving him another chance again, no matter how much he tries to sweet talk me."

On the other hand, if you can get her to the point where she really does forgive you, it makes her drop her guard and allows her to see you in a more positive light.

She stops seeing you as the emotionally unattractive guy she broke up with and starts to look at you as the new you; a guy she can actually feel respect, attraction and love for again.

Another possible reason why your ex doesn't want to work on the relationship and give you another chance is because

4. You've been trying to get her back via text

Naturally, if a woman is refusing to meet up with you in person, or even talk to you on the phone, the best way to break the ice and make her open up a little can be via text messages.

However, only using text as your main way of trying to get her back simply doesn't work.

Hereâ€¦s whyâ€¦!

If your ex doesnâ€¦t even want to answer your calls right now, what makes you think she will be happy that youâ€¦re asking her for another chance via text?

Instead of thinking, â€¦Thatâ€¦s so sweet. Even though Iâ€¦ve been ignoring his phone calls and refusing to see him in person, he hasnâ€¦t given up on our love. Heâ€¦s doing whatever he can to make me want to work on the relationship and give him another chance. So, how can I refuse?â€¦ she will think something like, â€¦Once again heâ€¦s only thinking about what he wants. What I need hasn't once entered his mind. He hasnâ€¦t even realized that Iâ€¦m still mad at him for what happened between us. He's just trying convince me via text that he is the man I should see myself with for life, even though he hasnâ€¦t yet shown me that he really has changed in the ways that are important to me. Of course, I haven't told him about the subtle things about him that turn him off, but that's up to him to figure out if he wants me back. Heâ€¦s just hoping a few messages via text will wipe the slate clean and then we can go back to the way things were. Well, heâ€¦s got another thing coming! Itâ€¦s over and he can send me texts until his fingers turn blue, but I am done for now. Itâ€¦s going to take more than a silly text to make me believe that he really has improved as a man and change how I feel about him.â€¦

That may sound like a crazy, emotional and even selfish woman, but it's pretty standard.

She has dumped her guy and he wants her back even though he really hasn't even changed.

He's just hoping that she falls for him over text, forgives his mistakes and wants to be with him again.

What a lot of guys don't realize is that SMS texts were only invented back in 1992, whereas vocal communication between humans has been going on for a long, long time.

Texts on a little screen don't have the same impact as words spoken over the phone, or in person where she can see your body language and assess how you are reacting to her.

Texts aren't you.

They are just words on a screen trying to represent you, but never, ever coming close to expressing the real you like what would be expressed on a phone call or in person.

You can get a positive reaction from an ex via text, but if you want her back for real, you have to re-attract her on a phone call or in person.

Only then can she really get a clear picture of who you are now and see that you have changed.

When you do that, she will naturally start to have feelings for you again.

In most cases, an attempt to get an ex back needs to start off with an apology over the phone (unless you live together of course) and then be followed through with a meet up, where she can observe your confident body language and see that you really are a different man now.

When you make her have feelings for you again, you then donâ€¦t have to ask her to work on the relationship because itâ€¦s something she wants without you needing to motivate her.

Giving you another chance becomes something she feels good about.

She wants you back for her own reasons, rather than because youâ€¦re trying to convince her that she has to be with you based on the fact that you were once in love.

The thing isâ€¦!

Sometimes a guy feels that because he and his woman loved each other before, he is somehow entitled to her love and a relationship with her for life.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that people stay together if it feels good for the both of them, not because it used to feel good.

He doesn't own her and she can choose to leave him if he isn't giving her the attraction experience she really wants from a relationship.

So, if you want your ex to want to work on the relationship, don't hide behind texts in the hope that she will think, â€œEven though he's not really doing anything to show me that he's changed and that he's the emotionally strong, confident man I really want him to be, I should just get back with him. Based on the fact that we had feelings for each other once, I'm going to put all my needs, wants and desires away and give him another chance. Who cares if he hasn't changed and will continue turning me off? He has been sending me a lot of texts. That means everything to me! Texts are everything!â€

Texts are nothing without feelings of romantic and sexual attraction running through her veins.

So, get her on a phone call with you right away and spark her feelings for you (e.g. by using confident humor to break down her walls).

Then, get her to meet up with you in person where she can experience the full force of the new you (e.g. you're more emotionally masculine now, you make her feel girly in comparison to how masculine you think and talk, you confidently stand up to her when she tries to make you feel insecure by acting like she's not interested).

That's what really works to get a woman back.

She doesn't want to sit down, talk and work on the relationship.

That sounds like too much work and it is too much work!

You've just got to get back to making her feel love, respect and attraction for you again based on how you interact with her.

Something else that makes a woman not want to work on the relationship and give you another chance isâ€¦!

5. She hasn't experienced the new and improved you, so she still sees you as being the guy she broke up with

[image: She hasn't experienced the new and improved you yet]

If a guy keeps saying and doing the same old things that turned a woman off, it makes sense that she's not going to want to give him another chance to keep experiencing the same old things!

So, here's the thingâ€¦!

If you want your ex to want to work on the relationship and give you another chance, you have to make sure that when you interact with her (over the phone and in person) you're letting her experience the new you, rather than the guy she originally broke up with.

For example: Imagine that you're meeting your ex for a quick cup of coffee to catch up and talk as friends.

To prove to herself that she's wasting her time and that you're still the same jerk she broke up with, she might test you by being cold, unfriendly, moody or even argumentative.

The old you would naturally take this as a sign that she's not interested anymore and you would probably feel anxious, nervous and may even think that she is just being stubborn and unreasonable.

Yet, that's not really the case at all.

She's just testing to see if you can handle the heat, or if you will crumble under the pressure she is putting you through.

She wants to see that you believe in yourself and your attractiveness to her no matter what she says or does.

Remember that.

If you remember that, the new and improved you will actually feel glad that she is testing you, because you will have the perfect opportunity to show her your improved confidence and emotional strength, by using humor to get her out of her bad mood and back into feelings of love, happiness and relaxation around you.

The more she can see that no matter how much she tests you, you don't revert back to being the guy she broke up with, the more respect she will feel.

As her feelings of respect grow, so to will her attraction for you and then, the desire to work on the relationship will become so strong that she just has to give you another chance.

She will want to give you another chance, because it will feel enjoyable and arousing to talk to you, be around you and have you back in her life.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Do I Get My Ex to Be Interested in Us Being a Couple Again?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

To get your ex interested in being a couple again you need to:

1. Understand how to make her feel attracted to you again

Right now, you may not know all of the secret reasons why your ex felt turned off by and decided to end it.

She probably didn't give you a full explanation when she broke up with you and instead said something along the lines of, "I just don't feel the same way about you anymore," or "I need some time to find out what I really want to do with my life."

As you would know, vague reasons like that don't help you get her back.

and women do that on purpose.

They don't want to give you things that you can cling on to or say that you're working on to get another chance.

Instead, most women want to just leave you and move on, unless you are able to figure out how to properly re-attract them.

To get clear about what you need to start saying and doing to properly re-attract her, ask yourself:

- What is it about me that turned her off?
- What do I think I was missing?
- Did she want me to behave in a way that I wasn't aware of?
- Was I trying to get her to accept things about me that just aren't attractive to her?

For example: A guy might initially attract his woman because he's confident, emotionally strong and independent.

Yet, after they get into a relationship together, rather than maintain her feelings of respect and attraction for him by continuing to be the confident, self-assured guy that she fell for, he becomes insecure, jealous and controlling.

He starts to track her every move, questions her about her friends and constantly asks her if she still loves him.

Over time, she begins to wonder, "What happened to the confident man I fell in love with?" and she starts to feel turned off by his needy, insecure behavior.

He then gets angry at her for changing how she feels about him and expects her to just accept him as he is, even though he's no longer the confident guy that she fell in love with.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that women simply cannot retain feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for a guy that lacks confidence.

Some women (usually unattractive women, or women who are only staying with the guy until something better comes along) will put up with a lack of confidence and insecure behavior.

However, relationships like that can end in a second if the woman finds a confident man who is able to make her feel the way she really wants to feel when in a relationship.

She can go from putting on her act as though everything is okay, to a sudden break up by saying something like, "I'm in love with someone else. I can't be with you anymore" and leaving her guy behind in ruins.

It's a horrible thing to go through, but it's also a very important wake up call for you as a growing man.

It doesn't matter if you're 50, 40, 30 or 20; you are always capable of growing up further and becoming an even more attractive man to your woman.

There is always an opportunity for you to be more emotionally masculine and confident around your woman and in life.

When you do that, you always become more attractive to your woman and generally speaking, life becomes easier and more enjoyable for you.

So, if a guy got dumped for losing his confidence in the relationship, he needs to go back to being the self-assured, emotionally mature and independent guy she originally fell in love with and then stay that way when they become a couple again.

Another example of what may turn a woman off in a relationship is when she tests her guy (e.g. by throwing tantrums, being moody and sulky) and he just accepts her bad behavior, rather than standing up to her and putting her back in her place in a loving, but assertive manner.

A guy who doesn't understand how to be the man in a relationship might say to himself, "I don't want to upset her even more, so I'm just going to be extra nice to her and hopefully she will calm down and then everything will be okay again."

Yet, that kind of thinking just makes a woman lose respect for him because if he's not being man enough to stand up to her, it makes her feel more dominant than him emotionally and also makes her feel like he isn't someone that could keep her safe around challenging people.

When that happens, she stops feeling respect for him because she is the one with the most power in the relationship and doesn't feel like he could protect her or make her feel safe.

Think of it this way!

If a boss submits to his employee and is nervous around him, it will be a lot more difficult for the employee to then look up to him and respect him.

In the same way, in a relationship with a woman, the man needs to be the boss, otherwise the woman loses respect for him.

Being the boss doesn't mean that he has to be overly domineering and controlling, make all of the decisions, or treat her disrespectfully.

Instead, it simply means that he is always the emotionally stronger one who takes on the role of leading the way to a better life for both of them.

If he doesn't do that and allows his woman to dominate him emotionally and make all the decisions for both of them, she will struggle to feel respect for him, because in her eyes, she's the boss and he's the employee, so to speak.

If a woman doesn't respect her guy, it then starts to feel weird to submit to him sexually.

She feels awkward about opening her legs and letting a guy who is less powerful than her have his way with her.

It just doesn't feel right.

When she feels that way, she stops feeling attracted to him and then begins to disconnect from her feelings of love.

So, if you want to get your ex to be interested in being a couple again, you've got to change the things that really matter to her so she can feel naturally attracted to you again.

Where a lot of guys go wrong is by asking an ex woman to give him another chance, even though he doesn't know what parts of the attraction experience she was missing with him or how to give that to her.

For example: If one of the things about him that turned her off was his inability to plan and invest for the future, she isn't going to want to take him back if he offers to take her on a romantic holiday.

It's just not the thing that really matters to her.

Alternatively, if one of her reasons for breaking up with him was that he was moving too fast for her, then asking her to marry him isn't going to make her want him back.

Remember: Your ex will be interested in you and her being a couple again if you change what she really wants.

That is what counts, so focus on that, rather than trying to get her back in ways that simply don't matter to her.

After understanding how to properly re-attract her, you need to

2. Interact with her on a phone call or in person to create a spark of attraction

Even if she is currently saying things like, â€œLeave me alone. It's over between us and I'm not interested in us being a couple again,â€ it's up to you to be strong enough to change how she feels.

Of course, you can't do that if you are not interacting with her and are just sitting around hoping that she changes her mind.

Watch this video for more info...

So, it's very important that you get your ex on a phone call (and preferably meet up with her in person), where you can let her experience the new and improved version of you (e.g. by maintaining your confidence when she's being cold and unfriendly, showing her via your body language that you don't feel intimidated by her when she tries to create drama and blames you for everything that happened).

Keep the conversation light and easy-going and steer clear of trying to make her feel interested in getting back together again.

Asking for another chance at a relationship only works if a woman is missing her ex, is still in love with him and hasn't been able to move on.

On the other hand, if she has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love, then him bringing up all the happy memories from the past and asking for a relationship will make her think, â€œHeâ€™s right. We really did have a lot of good times together and then he stuffed it all up by becoming needy and insecure/not being serious about our future together/becoming too annoying/making me carry his emotional baggage. Thinking about how happy we used to be in the beginning only makes me feel sad and disappointed about the way things turned out. I know he means well, but Iâ€™m just not interested in being a couple again. It sounds like too much work because he clearly doesn't understand what I need from him. He's just interested in getting me back to feel better about himself. I'd be better off trying my luck with a new man, who will hopefully be able to attract me in the ways that really matter to me.â€

So, if you want your ex back, donâ€™t waste time trying to convince her that youâ€™re the right guy for her based on good memories from the past.

How you make her feel now and from today onwards on is what really counts and makes her become interested in being a couple again.

For example:

Do you make her feel respect and attraction by not become nervous or unsure of yourself when she is being difficult and refusing to give you another chance, or do you turn her off by being self-doubting and insecure?

Do you make her feel feminine and girly by being emotionally masculine around her, or does she dominate you because you let her call the shots when youâ€™re interacting on the phone or in person?

Can she see that youâ€™ve changed and improved on the things about you that were turning her off (e.g. insecurity, possessiveness, immaturity, neediness), or are you still stuck at the same level you were at when you broke up?

Remember: A woman needs to feel respect and sexual attraction for you based on who you are right now, not who you used to be.

So, forget about all the good times you shared together in the past and start interacting with her and making her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you right now.

Who you are now and how that makes her feel is what really counts.

3. Meet up with her in person and get her to forgive your past mistakes

[image: Make her feel attracted to you again and get her back]

For your ex to be interested in being a couple again, you have to get her to forgive you for your past mistakes.

How can you do that?

By getting her to forgive you for her own benefit.

You can do that by telling her that if she forgives you, itâ€™s going to make her feel better about herself.

Tell her that when she can truly let go of her negative feelings about you and what happened, she will be able to move forward without carrying a whole bunch of anger, bitterness and mistrust with her into a future relationship.

Rather than feeling weighed down by the emotional baggage of her past relationship with you, she will be able to say to herself, “Yes, we broke up, but it’s a lesson learned and at least we were mature enough to deal with what happened and part as friends, rather than letting one bad relationship make me jaded towards all men in the future.”

Note: When you say something like that to her, you’re not actually encouraging her to move on and find another guy!

You’re simply giving her the opportunity to move forward without carrying the excess baggage from her past relationship with you.

When you give her permission to move on and be happy with another guy if she wants to, something interesting happens!

She doesn’t want to.

Suddenly, she stops thinking of you as the guy who stuffed up and broke her heart and she starts seeing you as the man who is confident enough in himself and in his value to her, that he can let her go if it is what she really wants to do.

Without even realizing it, she stops being so defensive around you and begins to feel good about forgiving you.

It makes her feel emotionally mature and more open and loving towards you, rather than acting cold and holding a grudge against you.

4. Focus on getting her smiling, laughing and feeling good around you

It has been said that laughter is the best medicine and this is definitely the case when it comes to making an ex feel interested in being a couple again.

So, make sure that whenever you interact with your ex (whether it’s via text, e-mail, on social media and especially over the phone and in person) you make her smile, laugh and think, “I’m having such a great time talking to him. I never thought it was possible to feel like this after what happened between us, but I think I’m falling for him again.”

When you make a woman smile and laugh when she’s being cold towards you, or is creating drama by saying things like, “I don’t see us being a couple ever again,” she can’t hold onto her negative opinion about you for long.

It makes her respect you and see you as the man.

She begins to think, “Hmm, interesting. This isn’t how I thought he’d react. I was expecting him to become nervous and insecure around me, not laugh at my attempts to make him uncomfortable and then turn things around to make me smile and feel good to be talking to him again. What has gotten into him? Have I unleashed the real man with him? Other women are going to notice this and like it. Maybe I need to give him another chance, rather than losing him and letting some other woman experience his new found manliness.”

She then opens up to being a couple again and stops playing so hard to get about it all.

So, if you want her back, make sure that you use humor to break down her walls and allow her to see the strong man that you've become all of a sudden.

When she feels sexually attracted to you, but isn't kissing or having sex with you, it will build sexual tension.

She will wonder what it would be like to kiss you and have sex with you and will be hoping that it happens.

So, go ahead andâ€¦!

5. Release the built up sexual tension with kissing and sex

[image: Get to kissing and sex to fully reconnect]

If youâ€¦ve triggered your exâ€¦s feelings of sexual attraction over the phone and during your meet ups with her (e.g. by flirting with her and using humor to create sexual tension, by making her feel girly and feminine in contrast to your masculine vibe), she will probably be giving you clear signs that sheâ€¦s feeling open to you again (e.g. touching you often, playing with her hair, laughing at your jokes, licking her lips, appearing to be aroused or turned on).

When that happens, itâ€¦s up to you to be the man and take the lead, rather than expecting her to say something like, "Kiss me!" or, "Let's go back to my place and have sex."

Just be the man and release the built up sexual tension between you and her by giving her a hug and then following through with a kiss.

If that goes well, you can then suggest going back to your place, or hers and then hook up sexually.

Remember: No matter how great things might be going between you and your ex, she wonâ€¦t be interested in being a couple again until you and her have had sex again.

Sex gets rid of the uncertainty about how you feel about each other and opens the door to discussing giving the relationship another chance.

What's really cool is that when you re-attract her in person and then have sex with her again, she begins to feel a new type of respect, attraction and love for you.

It's a more meaningful, complex love that makes her feel like real love does exist and maybe you and her have found it.

On the other hand, if youâ€¦re just ask her for a relationship upfront rather than re-attracting her first, hooking up and then talking about what might be next for you and her, she will probably just keep saying, â€œNo. Iâ€¦m not interested in you anymore. Please just move on. It's over.â€œ

So, donâ€¦t waste anymore time sitting around and wondering, â€œHow do I get my ex to be interested in us being a couple again?â€œ

Instead, focus on using every interaction that you have with her from now on (e.g. via text, e-mail, social media, over the phone and in person) as a way of re-sparking her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you.

Let her experience the changes that youâ€¦ve made to yourself since the break up (e.g. youâ€¦re now more confident and self assured, you give her the attraction experience she always wanted from you) and then meet up with her, make her feel attracted and have sex to get rid of the distance between you.

When you pass that stage of the ex back process, everything changes.

Suddenly, her doubts about you begin to fade away and the idea of losing you starts to bother her.

She worries that another woman would really enjoy being with the new you and that it might hurt her to see you hook up with a new woman, who may be more attractive than her.

So, she holds on and tries to give the relationship another chance.

By the way!

If she doesn't want you to kiss her, or if she refuses to go back to your place right away, don't worry about it.

It simply means that she is testing your confidence to see if you'll become nervous and doubt your attractiveness to her, or you simply haven't built up enough sexual tension and she's just not feeling it yet.

The key is not to give up.

Just keep making her feel attracted to the new you and before you know it, you'll be a couple again.

Getting back together is an amazing feeling for both the man and woman.

So, if you want her back, just know that she is going to enjoy the process too.

Falling back in love is a beautiful thing and usually makes a couple go on to stay together for life, as long as the guy really has changed and can now make her feel the way she always wanted to feel with him.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Can a Woman Go From Truly Loving a Guy to Not Caring About Him After a Break Up?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

When a woman goes from saying, “I love you and want to stay with you for life,” to saying, “Leave me alone. I never want to see you again,” it’s understandable that a guy might ask, “What the? How can she go from truly loving me to not caring about me so quickly?” It hurts, but there is a reason why she is doing it.

Here’s the thing:

It’s not that she doesn’t care about you anymore.

She does.

Yet, she is simply trying to avoid giving you any positive signals that there’s a chance to get back together with her again because she doesn’t see much or any hope for you and her anymore.

Based on the mistakes you made in the relationship and after the break up (e.g. begging, pleading, crying, getting angry, trying to convince her to change her mind rather than changing how she feels first), she doesn’t believe that you have what it takes to change and be the man that she wants now.

However, that doesn’t mean she’s going to stay stuck thinking like that forever.

In fact, you can change how she feels pretty quickly.

How?

By making her feel the type of attraction experience she always wanted to feel with you, but was missing in the relationship so far.

For example: Sometimes a woman wants a man to be more ballsy with her, but he’s just too soft, nice and self-doubting around her and she doesn’t like it.

She feels turned off by the fact that she feels stronger than him emotionally and just wishes that he’d man up and make her feel like a real woman.

So, if a guy like that tries to get her back by telling her how much he cares about her, how he promises to change, or worse, by asking her what he should change it’s just not going to happen.

Instead, she will lose even more respect for him because he’s not being his own man.

He’s simply trying to follow her instructions and hoping that it will please her enough to want to give him another chance.

Yet, that’s not what a woman wants.

After a break up, a woman wants you to figure out by yourself (not with her help, instructions or advice) where you went wrong and make the necessary adjustments to your thinking and behavior because you want to improve yourself, not just because you’re trying to impress her.

If you just say and do whatever she tells you like a puppet, it won’t feel real to her.

It will feel as though she is manipulating you into being someone you’re not, or that you are putting on an act to win her over.

So, she will wonder, “What happens when he’s had enough of doing whatever I tell him? Is *he just going revert to his old, unattractive behavior again? Will I have to keep instructing him on how to be the man I need for our entire lives? Can't he just be his own man and work it out, rather than looking to me for guidance? I don't want to be that person for him. I want a man that knows how to be a man. So, I just have to remain broken up from him. I need a real man.*â□□

Thatâ□□s not what you want her to be thinking.

You want her to make her reconnect with her feelings of love, respect and attraction for you and feel drawn to you in a new and exciting ways.

That's is the best, easiest and most effective way to get a woman back after a break up, especially if she has changed and become cold to you lately.

As long as you focus on giving her the missing attraction experience she always wanted with you when you next interact with her, she will feel a spark and her perspective of you will immediately begin to change.

She will start to care about you and the relationship again and will feel drawn to you for her own reasons.

4 Common Mistakes That Cause a Woman to Act Like She Doesnâ□□t Care After a Break Up

[image: Don't do this to me, please!]

When a guy is thinking, *â□□I donâ□□t understand how a woman can go from truly loving a guy to not caring about him after a break up,*â□□ itâ□□s not unusual for him to make some of the common mistakes mentioned below.

For example:

1. He tries to make her pity him

He might say something to her like, â□□How can you go from truly loving me one day to not caring about me at all? Was your love even real, or were you just pretending to care? Well, I just want you to know Iâ□□m not like that. My love for you was 100% genuine and the thought of losing you forever is so sad. I canâ□□t eat or sleep because I keep thinking about how you could be so indifferent towards me when you used to tell me how much you loved me. I canâ□□t accept that you donâ□□t care about me anymore just because weâ□□ve broken up. Youâ□□re not that cold and heartless, are you? Do you actually enjoy seeing me like this? Please donâ□□t throw away what we had together like it meant nothing to you. All I ask is for you to give me one more chanceâ□□! *please!*â□□

Yet, even though the guy is being honest about his feelings, trying to make his ex feel bad for causing him pain isnâ□□t what will make her reconnect with her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for him and make her want to give him another chance.

To her, his behavior just comes across as being selfish and possibly even a little bit immature and childish.

[image: How can you do this to me?]

She will think something like, â□□Why is he being so selfish? He doesn't care about me. Itâ□□s all about him and how he feels. Not once has he stopped to ask himself what he did to make me break up with him. Instead, heâs just going on and on about how terrible he feels and what a bitch I am for not caring about him anymore. He just doesnât get it. Heâs acting like a little child and hoping that if he makes me feel guilty enough, I will then take pity on him and get back together again. Doesnât he realize that his insecure, needy behavior is actually turning me off even more? If he could just admit his mistakes and show me that heâs making an effort to change, I would open back up to him without a second thought. He doesnât understand how easily we women can change, if the guy is able to change. All heâs doing is using emotional blackmail to try and make me change my mind, which makes me want to get away from him even more. I guess he just doesnât know how to be the man I want him to be and by the looks of it, he never will. I seem to have made the right decision by breaking up with him. I now just need to distance myself from him even more and find a man that knows how to make me feel the way I want to feel when Iâm in a relationship with him.

Hereâs the thingâ!

A woman doesnât want to feel like sheâs doing her ex a favor by being with him.

She wants to feel like heâs the kind of guy she can look up to, respect and be proud to call her man (i.e. because he has made the necessary adjustments to his thinking and behavior and is making her feel attracted in ways that she never thought possible), not like she has to take care of him because heâs too emotionally weak, insecure and lost without her.

So, if you really want make your ex reconnect with her true feelings of love for you again, donât try to make her feel sorry for you.

Instead, focus on making her feel respect and attraction for you again and show her that youâre now the man she always wanted you to be (e.g. by maintaining your confidence around her, using humor to get her out of her indifferent state when talking to you, talking to her as though you and her are totally cool with each other).

When she can see that you really are a different man now and are able to get rid of the awkwardness between you and her, she will be happy to allow herself to reconnect with her true feelings of love for you again.

It will feel right to her and like something she wants, rather than feeling like sheâs being blackmailed into being with you again.

2. He feels like she has to treat him well because they were once together

Sometimes, when a guy asks, *âHow can my ex go from truly loving me to not caring about me after the break up?*â itâs because he feels entitled to her love and a relationship with her.

At the back of his mind, he may be thinking, âIf she really loved me before, then itâs only right that she treats me well now. That love has to count for something after all, right? It canât be okay for her to treat me badly now just because weâre broken up. Thatâs not right. She owes it to me to give me another chance. After all weâve been through, she canât just turn her back on me like this.

Yet, what a guy like that doesnât realize is that a man and a woman only stay together if today feels good and their future also looks promising, not because it used to feel good, or because they used to love each other before.

In the old days, a woman would stick with a guy she didn't truly respect, love and feel attracted to her because it was taboo to get a divorce.

However, that's not the way the world works anymore.

These days, if a woman loses too much respect and attraction for a guy, she can break up with him or divorce him if she wants to.

He doesn't own her and it's no longer shameful to break up, so women are free to leave a guy and open themselves up to a new man who will hopefully do a better job of maintaining her feelings love, respect and attraction.

Today's woman can now choose to get in and out of relationships as often as she wants, until she finds the right man for her.

So, if you want your ex to reconnect with her original feelings of love for you, you have to show her that you really have changed, rather than expecting her to treat you well and give you another chance based on the fact that she loved you before.

Another common mistake from guys who are trying to get their woman back after a break up is

3. He doesn't realize that her reasons for acting cold are to avoid giving him hope

[image: She doesn't want to give him false hope]

In most cases, when a woman breaks up with a guy, she will go through a period where she tries to decide whether or not she can see herself giving her ex another chance.

For example: She may ask herself questions like...

- Will he change and become the man I want him to be, or is he just going to remain the same, because he doesn't even know what really caused me to break up with him in the first place?
- Do I feel good when I interact with him now (e.g. because he maintains his confidence and makes me smile and laugh), or does he turn me off by behaving in unattractive ways (e.g. begging, pleading, whining, being self-doubting and insecure)?
- Does he understand what really caused us to break up and is he taking positive steps to change and improve himself, or does he assume that I'll just give him another chance based on my past feelings for him?
- Do we have the same long-term goals, dreams and plans for the future (e.g. to move in together, get married, start a family, see our children become parents, enjoy being grandparents, have a relaxing retirement), or do we want different things?
- Does he make me feel respect and attraction for him because he displays some of the behaviors and personality traits that are naturally attractive to women such as confidence, emotional masculinity, maturity, or does he make me feel annoyed, stressed out and turned off because of his insecurity?
- Is he the kind of man I can look up to, respect and feel proud to call my man, or do I feel a bit embarrassed to admit that we're a couple?
- Will he be able to give me the attraction experience I've always wanted, or is he just going to keep saying and doing the same old things as before, but hoping for a different reaction from me?

If she discovers that there are more noâ€s than yesâ€s, she will naturally begin to disconnect herself from any positive feelings of love she may still be feeling for him.

She will then become cold and distant towards him, because she doesnâ€t want to give him false hope.

The guy may then ask, â€How can a woman go from truly loving a guy to not caring about him after a break up?â€ and feel like she never even loved him at all.

Yet, thatâ€s usually not the case.

A woman simply doesnâ€t want to waste her time with a guy, if she gets a sense that he hasnâ€t changed since the break up and wonâ€t be able to change in the future.

If she senses that sheâ€™s with a guy who is unwilling to man up and become the man she needs, she will just disconnect her feelings for him and open herself up to meeting a new man.

So, if youâ€™re serious about getting your ex back, you have to focus on letting her experience the new and improved you.

When you interact with her on a phone call or in person and she can see that you maintain your confidence around her (especially when sheâ€™s being cold and distant), her icy approach will melt and she will become open to you again.

She will then begin to feel motivated to give you another chance because it feels good to her too.

On the other hand, if she interacts with you and you keep making the types of mistakes that turn her off (e.g. allow her to dominate you emotionally because you fear losing her, become insecure by her coldness, act extra nice around her in the hopes that she will open back up to you), she will just maintain her Ice Queen persona and try and push you away for good.

The final common mistake of guys trying to get a woman back after a break up isâ€

4. He doesn't realize that there is no reason for her to change her mind if he hasn't truly changed his ways

[image: Please change your mind]

Albert Einstein supposedly said, â€Insanity is doing the same thing over and over again and expecting different results.â€

In the same vein, if you donâ€t take a different approach to making your ex reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, chances are sheâ€™s not going to change her mind.

For example: A guy might try getting his ex back by begging and pleading with her, offering to do whatever she wants him to do and telling her how much he loves her and how he canâ€t believe that she has gone from love to not caring about him after the break up.

Heâ€™s basically hoping one of these things will break through her defenses and cause her to think, â€Heâ€™s right! Itâ€™s not possible to go from truly loving him to not caring for him so quickly. I am just kidding myself. My feelings for him are still there, stronger than ever and I donâ€t want to lose him. We should get back together again.â€

Yet, she just keeps saying, “No” whenever he asks for another chance.

Then, rather than thinking to himself, â€Okay, this approach isnâ€t working. What do I need to do to really change how she feels?â€ he just keeps begging, pleading, trying to convince her, asking, going on and on about the same old things.

She then gets to the point where she shuts herself off from him and seems like she doesn't care and possibly never even loved him enough to want to care.

Yet, she's just turned off and annoyed by his hopeless approach to getting her back.

So, if you want to make your ex change how she feels, you need to start saying and doing the things that will renew her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

That is what counts.

If you interact with her and talk and behave in ways that naturally attract women (e.g. maintain your confidence, make her smile and laugh, make her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculinity), she will feel excited about reconnecting with her original feelings of love, respect and attraction for you.

On the other hand, if you keep making the same old mistakes over and over again, she won't see any reason to go back to loving you.

So, make sure that you stay positive around your ex, regardless of how she is behaving (e.g. being cold and distant towards you, saying she doesn't have any feelings for you anymore).

When she can see for herself that you're not reacting like she's expecting you to (i.e. you remain confident when she tries to make you feel insecure), she won't be able to stay disconnected from the respect, attraction and love that's lying dormant in her heart.

Instead, she will want to be close and get physical with you again, because it will now feel so much more enjoyable for her to be around the new and improved you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How Can I Get My Ex to Respect Me Again?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways to get your ex to respect you againâ€¦!

1. Stop saying and doing the things that will make her lose even more respect for you

A woman's respect for you is changeable and is based on what to say and do around her and in life in general.

For example:

- When you interact with your ex, are you confident and emotionally strong, or are you being insecure and self-doubting?

If you're being insecure and self-doubting, she won't be able to respect you.

Women only respect and look up to men who are confident and believe in themselves no matter what a woman says or does.

So, make sure that from now on, you always remain confident and believe in yourself around her regardless of how challenging she is being.

- Who is the more dominant one in the relationship?

If you let her dominate you, push you around and control you with her confident personality, she won't be able to respect you.

For example: She blames you for everything and you keep apologizing and trying to please her.

Women don't respect that.

In cases like that, a woman wants a man to laugh at her (in a loving way, not in an insulting way) and her idea of everything being his fault.

She also wants him to be able to bring the interaction back to feel good emotions, laughter and love, rather than him taking her drama and false accusations so seriously.

For example: He remains calm, laughs and says, â€œOh, weâ€™re talking about this again, are we? Wow, I haven't heard you blame me for that before. Please tell me all about it!â€œ and then has a laugh with her about it, rather than taking it so seriously.

Alternatively, he says, “Yes, it's all my fault. I'm the worst boyfriend (or husband) in the world. I should probably win a prize for that. Where's my trophy?” and then have a laugh with her about that.

- Do you complain about how difficult things have been for you since the break up, as a way of making her feel pity for you, or do you show her (via your actions) that although you still care for her and would love to get back together again, you don't need her to feel happy and fulfilled in your life?

A woman can't respect you if she senses that you need her to love you, approve of you and give you attention in order for you to feel good about yourself.

Women respect men who are happy, confident and forward moving in life (e.g. about his big goals and ambitions) with or without her approval.

A woman wants a man to love her, care about her, respect her and appreciate her, but she doesn't want to be his reason for living or the person who needs to constantly lift his spirits and make him feel confident and happy.

- Are you going after your big dreams and goals in life, or are you hiding from your true potential as a man because you're afraid to take a risk or afraid to spend time on anything other than her?

[image: Are you following through on your dreams and goals?]

Women hate it when a guy is either too afraid to follow through on his dreams, or too needy of her attention to spend time on his dreams and goals.

Women respect men who have the balls to stand up and go after their big dreams, goals and ambitions in life.

Men like that make women feel safe, proud and respectful because he is someone that she can look up to, rely on and feel happy to be associated with in life.

So, if you're asking, "How can I get my ex to respect me again?" you've also got to ask yourself, "Have I been continuing to turn her off by what I've been saying and doing?"

When you start being the sort of man that she can look up to and respect, she will naturally begin to look at you differently and feel a renewed sense of respect for you.

She will then begin to feel attracted to you again, even though she previously thought she was over you and wouldn't ever have feelings for you again.

Why?

Attraction is a natural, automatic reaction that humans have to each other under the right conditions.

When you display traits that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, determination, emotional maturity), attraction happens automatically.

Women don't have to think about it because it's an automatic, instinctive reaction to attractive traits.

She may wonder why she is feeling attracted to you all of a sudden, but she won't be able to control it.

She will look at you as being an attractive man and as a result, her thought process about you will be influenced by that attraction.

She will look at things about in a more positive light and look for reasons why she is feeling so attracted to you all of a sudden.

In the case of getting an ex back, this is what works.

Another way to get her respect back is to

2. Let her experience the new and improved you on a phone call and in person

[image: Make her laugh and smile on the phone before suggesting a catch up]

Sometimes, when a woman is being cold, distant and even little bitchy to her ex guy, he might decide that he needs a way to get through to her that will make her listen.

For example: He may begin toâ€¦!

1. Send texts or e-mails to explain what he has learned since the break up

For example: He may text or e-mail something along the lines of, â€œI know I messed up badly. I was too immature/needy/insecure/took you for granted. I understand that now and I really have changed. I know that you feel like you canâ€™t respect me anymore, but if you just give me one more chance, I promise you that things will be different this time. Iâ€™ve really learned from my past mistakes and Iâ€™m not that guy anymore. Please believe me. I have honestly learned my lesson and have changed. Let me prove it to you by giving me one more chance.â€

Although the guy might be 100% sincere and honest, it just doesn't work on most women.

Why?

If he has ruined her feelings of respect and trust for him, sheâ€™s not going to believe him.

Instead sheâ€™s going to just roll her eyes and think, â€œNo you haven't. I don't believe you.â€

Why?

A woman is only going to believe it if she can experience it herself on a phone call and in person.

If a guy is trying to explain how much he has changed, the woman can actually refer to that as being selfish.

Why?

It's all about him, what he has learned, how sorry he is and his need to get her back.

To get a woman back, you have to focus on making her have feelings for you, rather than on explaining how much you've learned, promising to change and asking for another chance.

If you make her have feelings for you again, she will want to give you a chance for her own reasons (i.e. she is attracted to you again, she wants to be physical with you, she doesn't want to lose you).

Another mistake that guys make is toâ€¦!

Ignore her for weeks or months to show that he's not desperately chasing her

A guy might say to himself, â€œIâ€™m in her bad books right now and anything I seem to say or do just sets her off. Itâ€™s probably a good idea for me to back off for a while and give her some space to cool down. Then, not only will she respect me again for being a gentleman and giving her time to figure things out, but she will also feel respect for me for not chasing her like a desperate, needy guy.â€

Yet, that approach almost never works.

Hereâ€™s whyâ€¦!

Ignoring a woman who doesn't have strong feelings for you for weeks or even months is usually a waste of time.

In most cases, rather than miss a guy who is ignoring her, a woman will think, â€œCool, thanks for giving me space to move on! Now I can finally focus on getting on with my life and finding a guy who can give me what I want.â€

Why does she react in that way?

Essentially because she doesn't have feelings for him anymore and he's not doing anything to make her have feelings again.

He's just ignoring her and hoping she will one day realize how much she still loves him and come running back.

Yet, instead of coming back to him, a woman will usually use the time apart to get over him and find another guy to hook up with.

Why?

He ruined her feelings, she broke up with him and he hasn't even done anything to reactivate her feelings again.

He's just hoping that ignoring her will do the trick, but what he doesn't realize is that trick usually only works on women who still have feelings for their ex.

It rarely, if ever, works on women who break up with a guy because they no longer have feelings for him.

So, if you want to get your ex to respect you again, don't waste a lot of time over-texting her or ignoring her and hoping that she will change her mind.

You have to get her on a phone call and then meet up with her in person, so that she can hear, see and experience the new and improved you for herself.

3. Tell her that the mature thing for her to do is to forgive you for her own benefit

Getting your ex to forgive you is a very important step to getting her respect back.

So, when you interact with her (preferably over the phone or in person), you need to let her know that forgiving you is something that will actually benefit her as much as it will benefit you.

For example: Say to her, â€œI know I stuffed up, but I'm taking responsibility for my actions and doing whatever I need to do to change and improve myself as a man. Not to get you back, but because I know it's the right thing to do. I don't expect you to believe me that I have changed and are no longer the guy you broke up with, but it's important that you forgive me so that we can both move on with a clean slate. If you hold on to your anger and other negative emotions towards me, you'll just be taking all that baggage to any future relationships that you might have. Doing so will only cause more problems for you because you won't be able to open up your heart again. However, if you can forgive me now and are sincere about it, you will feel lighter right away. You will be able to see that I did make mistakes and I did learn from them, so it's okay to forgive me and move on, rather than holding it against me for life.â€

Important: When you say this to her, it actually makes her start to feel respect and attraction to the new you.

Why?

When she forgives you, she stops looking at you in a negative way because she separates the old you and new you in her mind as two different people.

If you the new you is a man who is worthy of her respect, she gives that to you and as a result, she can then easily feel attracted to you when you display attractive traits (e.g. confidence, humor, emotional masculinity, charisma).

4. Make her smile, laugh and feel good when interacting with you, especially when she is being cold or distant

One of the quickest ways to melt a woman's resistance and make her begin feeling respect and attraction for you again, is by making her smile and laugh when she's interacting with you.

Laughter takes the edge off any bitterness or negativity towards you and it stops you and her from acting like or feeling like strangers.

When a woman is smiling and laughing while talking to her ex guy, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to think, "I don't respect him anymore. It's over. I don't want to talk to him."

Instead, she begins to think, "This is nice. I can't believe I'm enjoying myself talking to him again. I actually feel positive emotions for him again, rather than wanting to be as far away as possible from him like I used to."

When she begins to feel like that, she is open to being guided back into a relationship.

So, make sure that you focus on making her laugh and smile, rather than trying to have serious, deep and meaningful conversations about the relationship.

By the way!

Here's an example of how to make her laugh when she's being cold and distant towards you.

Imagine that you call her and she says something rude like, "What do you want?"

Rather than let that throw you off and make you feel uncomfortable, simply turn it into something that you can both laugh about.

For example: When she says, "What do you want?" you can say in a joking way, "Some of your delicious, home made lasagna, garlic bread and a cold beer please" or, "A large pizza and a bottle of coke, thanks" and have a laugh with her about that.

She will feel attracted to the fact that you have the confidence to joke around with her, even though she was being cold and unfriendly towards you.

She will also realize that you've changed (i.e. because you're not reacting in the ways she is expecting you to), which will make her feel respect and attraction for you again.

5. Be a self-approving, masculine man

Women naturally respect men who don't seek the approval of women or anyone else to feel good about themselves.

This doesn't mean that you should be arrogant, rude, behave badly or look down on anyone.

Instead, just decide that you approve of yourself, you love yourself and you know that you are a good man who is worthy of love, attention and respect.

You don't need the love, attention and respect of others to feel good about yourself, but you deserve it.

As a result, you will naturally exude the type of confidence that makes women and people in general respect you.

People can sense that you're not a self-doubting, confused man who needs people to say, "Hey, you're okay" or, "Hey, you're cool" in order to feel good about himself.

He knows that he's okay. He knows that he's cool.

That's a self-improving, masculine man.

So, while you do want to get your ex to respect you again, you shouldn't actually need her respect to feel worthy, good about yourself or secure.

When you become your own man in this way, not only do you automatically become more attractive to your ex, but you also realize that you don't need her to feel happy or fulfilled in your life.

That is attractive to her and to other women.

When your ex notices that you are being respectful towards her, but that you don't need her to show you respect to feel good about yourself, she will respect you.

It's pretty cool how it works.

All of a sudden, she can't stop herself from thinking about you in a more positive light because you are now behaving like the kind of man she can actually look up to and respect.

She then feels drawn to you in a way that feels good to her and becomes open to the idea of reconnecting with her old feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

So, if you want to get your ex to respect you again, start by respecting yourself.

Be a self-improving, masculine man.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex is Being Stubborn

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 possible reasons why your ex is being stubborn:

1. You are turning her off, but expecting her to be open

When the woman he loves is saying things like, “You need to leave me alone. I’m just not interested in you anymore,” or “Look, just accept that it’s over between us and move on,” it’s understandable that a man might feel as though she’s just being stubborn.

He may even think to himself, “Why won’t she listen to me? Why won’t she at least give me a chance to talk to her and explain? After all the love we shared and all the good times we had, how can she just shut me out like this?”

[image: Can't you see that I'm trying to make this work?]

He might then text her, or call her on the phone and say something like, “Why are you being so stubborn? Can’t you see that I’m trying to make things right between us? Why can’t you just give me a chance to explain and fix things between us?”

Unfortunately, he is making the mistake of assuming that just because they were in love before, she is now obliged to continue being with him for the rest of her life, regardless of how badly he screwed up.

Obviously, a relationship between a man and a woman doesn’t work that way anymore.

In the past, a woman was a man’s property and had to stick by him for life even if she was unhappy because it was shameful for her to leave her man.

In today’s world, a woman can decide to be in a relationship, or leave a relationship simply based on how she feels.

In other words, as long as she is feeling the way she wants to feel in the relationship (attracted, in love), she will choose to stay with her man.

However, if she starts to lose too attraction for him because of his actions and behavior (e.g. he becomes too insecure and wimpy, he forces her to take on the more dominant role in the relationship, he is too controlling, he treats her like one of his male friends), she can then choose to break up with him because he doesn’t own her and she can do what she pleases.

So, if you want to make your ex stop being stubborn and listen to you again, you need to stop saying and doing things that will turn her off the idea of being with you.

For example: When you interact with your ex

- Do you make her smile, laugh and feel happy to be talking to you, or do you make her feel stressed out, annoyed and defensive?
- Do you show her (via the way you talk, act, behave and respond to what she says and does now) that you’re no longer at the same level you were at when you broke up, or are you still behaving in some of the old unattractive ways you previously displayed when you were together (e.g. getting into arguments and fights with her, losing control of your emotions around her, making her feel responsible for your emotional pain)?

- Do you make her feel feminine and girly in your presence, or does she feel more like she is the boss and you don't have the balls to handle a girl like her?
- Do you listen to what she is saying, or are you just nagging, whining and complaining every time you interact with her?

Here's the thing:

If you continue turning your ex off with your behavior, you can't expect her to care about you or the relationship any longer.

Remember: Women can choose whether or not to be in a relationship based on how they feel.

So, if you want her back, you've got to change your approach to her:

When you make some attractive adjustments to your behavior (e.g. you make her smile and laugh when you interact with her, you make her feel feminine and girly in your presence, you let her vent her feelings at you if she needs to, without getting frustrated or defensive about it), she won't be able to stay closed off for long.

She will start to think, "Interesting. He's not trying to force me to listen to him anymore and he's even listening to me for a change. I never thought it was possible for him to change like this. He's being so mature and emotionally strong about the whole thing now. He's actually becoming a man. I wonder what else about him has changed? Will he be more confident in other areas of life now? Is he someone I should let go, or should I hold onto him in case I never find a man like him again? He's obviously proved to me that he has the capacity to learn, grow and change. He's probably a keeper. I can't just let him go."

She then drops her guard and opens herself to up to you again.

Then, when you interact with you, rather than feeling like she wants to run away because you're dragging her down with your emotions and expectations, she feels excited to be around you.

She feels relaxed, happy and at ease because you're no longer needing her to listen.

Instead, you are focusing on what matters most to her (i.e. her feelings), rather than trying to get her to focus and listen to you explain yourself.

Another reason why your ex might be behaving in a stubborn way towards you is:

2. You are expecting her to change her mind about the break up, without changing how she feels first

[image: Why are you being like this?]

If you're talking to your ex in person, texting her or calling and expecting her to say, "Oh hi babe. Of course I'm ready to hear what you have to say. No problem about any past mistakes, as long as you are sorry now, we can forget about everything and get back together again. I don't need to know that you've really changed. Don't worry about me. I will just forgive you and give you another chance based on all the explanations and apologies you are giving me. I love you!!!" you're in for a big disappointment.

The thing is, you can't expect your ex to listen to you if you don't change her feelings for you first.

You have to re-spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love, so that she can stop feeling so angry, closed off and unwilling to hear what you have to say to her.

How can you do that?

Understand where she is coming from (i.e. the real reasons she broke up with you) and then make some changes and improvements to yourself.

Then, when you interact with her (e.g. via text, e-mail, on social media and especially over the phone and in person) you can show her that youâve changed the things that were turning her off and alter how she feels.

For example:

- If you were overly protective and controlling, start being more relaxed and easy going around her.
- If you and her were always getting into arguments, turn potentially flammable situations into something you can laugh about together.
- If you were too selfish with your love and she felt like you were more of a âlove-takeâ, rather than a âlove-giveâ kind of person, start being more emotionally generous. Focus on making her feel good about herself, rather than just looking out for yourself.

When you change the real things that caused her to break up with you and let her experience the new you (i.e. by interacting with her on a phone call and especially in person), her feelings for you will begin to change.

She will begin to respect you again for being man enough to take responsibility for your past actions and then having the courage and integrity to make some real changes.

Then, the idea of getting back together again wonât seem impossible to her anymore and she will stop being so stubborn about it.

3. She doesn't believe that you can change, so she needs to see it in action first

[image: Come on. Give me a chance here]

In most relationships, a woman wonât just break up with her guy before she gives him at least one or two chances to change and improve.

For example: If a guy is too much of a nice guy, which then causes him to be submissive around other people (especially other men), his woman might try to encourage him to stand up for himself more.

She might then say things like, âDon't let everyone walk all over you. You're way too nice and your friends and family use that against you to get you to do what they want, or to make you feel bad about yourself around them. Why can't you see that your friends are constantly using you or taking advantage of you? Haven't you noticed how you are always the one who pays for drinks or meals when you all get together? It's okay to say no and let them pay once in a while,â or âYour coworkers are taking advantage of you. You put in way more effort than them and they get just as much credit. You work late and take care of things that aren't even your responsibility. You have a life too you know!? You can actually say no sometimes. It's not going to be the end of the world if you stand up for yourself. You have to get them to show you some respect. I don't like how much you work and how little time you have for me or even just to relax or exercise or do normal things. You're always so busy because you take on so much work.

If he listens to her and regains his power and self-respect around people, her feelings of respect and attraction for him will grow.

On the other hand, if she notices that no matter what she says to him, he always falls back to his old pattern of submissive behavior, she will begin to lose respect for him and her feelings of love and attraction will begin to fade.

If he then senses her pulling away from him, he might say something like, I'm sorry. I know I should be more assertive. Just give me one more chance and I promise you, this time I will change. Please don't give up on me.

If she gives him another chance and he doesn't change, she will break up with him and then try to move on.

He will try to convince her that he is serious this time and she will think something like, He just wants me to listen to his excuses and promises as usual. I bet he's going to tell me that this time he's definitely, 100% sure to change. I don't believe him anymore. I've heard his promises before and nothing ever changes. I don't believe he even knows how to change and become the kind of man I want anyway. He doesn't have anyone in his life that can help him. He's lost. If he wants me to listen to him, he needs to show me that he's really changed this time. Seeing is believing. I'm not falling for his old 'I promise this time it will be different' act again.

If you want your ex to stop being stubborn and to listen to you, don't make the mistake of telling her you're going to change.

You have to actually change and let her experience it on a phone call or in person.

Remember: Actions speak louder than words.

You need to show her via the way you think, talk, behave, interact with her and respond to what she says and does, that you really have changed this time.

Where a lot of guys go wrong, is by thinking that because everything he's tried so far (e.g. begging, pleading, being nicer to her) hasn't worked to get her back, then her mind is made up forever.

She can change her mind about you.

Yet, you need to change first.

Important: Don't change and say, "Okay, I've changed. Now will you take me back?" because that's not what she wants either.

She doesn't want it to be about you getting what you want.

You have to change and then interact with her to let her experience what she wants (i.e. you as a new, improved man).

That way, it's about her feelings, wants and needs, rather than about you doing whatever she wants to get her back.

She doesn't want to feel as though she is controlling your life or shaping your identity against your will.

She just wants to see you change and then re-attract her, without essentially saying, “Okay, now am I good enough? Now will you give me another chance?”

Just be the new, improved version of yourself and let her feel attracted to you and want to give the relationship another chance because of that.

Another reason why your ex might be behaving stubborn is thatâ€¦!

4. You allow her to have too much power over you

A guy sometimes puts on his best behavior around his ex (e.g. being extra nice, doing whatever she wants, listening, caring, being generous and basically sucking up to her) in the hope that it will show her how much he cares.

For example: A guy might say to himself, “If I want her to give me another chance, I need to do things her way, or else itâ€™s the highway for me. Sheâ€™s going to cut me off completely and Iâ€™m going to lose her. I canâ€™t let that happen. So, Iâ€™m going to be on my best behavior and let her call all the shots. I will show her that I am willing to do anything for her. That will then show her how much I care. Then, she will take pity on me and give me another chance.”

Yet, in most cases, the opposite is true.

A woman might give the impression that she wants to be the one dictating the pace or the one in control, but she’s not going to respect a guy who falls for it and follows her every order, no matter how ridiculous she is being.

For instance, a woman might say to a guy, “I will speak to you next month after I finish my project at work.”

If he obeys her and, after a month, texts her to ask, “Are you finished your project yet? Is it okay if I call you now so that we can talk about our relationship?” she’s going to feel turned off by his lack of balls for following her crazy order.

It doesn’t matter how busy she is at work (or at university), a woman always makes time for a man that she cares about, even if it’s just a 10 minute conversation while getting a bite to eat, or having a coffee.

So, if a guy follows her order of giving her a month of silence, she will lose respect for him.

She will feel as though he doesn’t have the balls or the social skills to laugh at her order and say, “You and I can catch up and have a chat. It’s only 10 minutes. Both of us can spare 10 minutes. Besides, if you don’t want to talk to me after that, I will respect it and give you space.”

Of course, if he re-attracts her at the meet up, she is going to be open to talking to him again.

However, if he’s sucking up to her, being on his best behavior and being hesitant with what he says, she’s going to feel turned off by his lack of balls around her.

Having balls around her is not about being disrespectful, rude or selfish in anyway.

Instead, it’s about having the balls to not take her drama so seriously and simply guide a conversation back to smiling, laughter and feel good emotions.

If you take a woman’s drama too seriously, she won’t be able to respect you.

Without respect, there is no attraction and without attraction sheâs going to refuse to reconnect with her feelings of love for you because it just doesnât feel right to her anymore.

You might then label her as being stubborn, but sheâs not.

Sheâs simply feeling turned off by what she perceives as your emotionally weak behavior.

Remember: A woman wants to be with a man she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love (i.e. a guy who confident and emotionally strong enough to take the lead in the ex back process and get her back), not a guy who stresses her out because he needs her to help him become a better man.

So, donât wait for your ex to stop being stubborn and start listening to you before you make a move.

Instead, take the lead and show her that youâre a new man now.

Youâve become a better man since you and her split up.

You are not the same guy anymore.

You really have changed and whenever she interacts with you, she feels that and it makes her old feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you come rushing back.

When that happens, she will stop being stubborn and she will start wanting to be around you and explore her new feelings for you.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Girlfriend Said She Needs a Man, Not a Boy

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

7 possible reasons why a woman might say that to her guy are...

1. He doesn't make her feel feminine and girly because he tends to think, talk, behave and act like her, or like a boy

Sometimes, a guy just doesn't know how to be a mature, emotionally strong and masculine man in a relationship with a woman.

For example: Since a woman enjoys talking about her feelings all the time, gossiping on the phone with her girlfriends and even have a good cry once in a while, he assumes that it's okay for him to do that too.

He may even think that it's a way of showing his woman how connected he is to her by thinking, talking and behaving like her.

He wants to show her that they are soul mates and think, feel and experience life in the same way.

Yet, that's not what a woman wants.

She wants a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy who wants to be like her or who wants to act like a little boy who needs his mommy.

Here's an example:

For example: A woman might be having a bad day and then start to rant and rave about her work, the state of her life and her feelings in the moment.

She might say something like, "My life is such a mess! Nothing is going right. I hate my job. I'm tired of always trying to make everyone else happy and putting myself last. I've had enough!"

In most cases, she's just letting off some steam and simply wants her guy to listen to her while she vents her feelings.

What she doesn't want though, is for her guy to copy her, react like one of her girlfriends (e.g. by getting overly emotional, or by throwing a tantrum of his own).

She doesn't want to see him react and start saying things like, "I can't deal with seeing you this way. I can't handle it when you're upset. It makes me feel so depressed" or "Stuff the world! Society sucks. I hate working. Why is life so difficult? We should just run away and live off the grid" or, "You need to quit your job. They just don't appreciate you" or "Why are you always getting mad? Can't you see that I have problems too? I'm in a bad space too. What about my feelings for a change?"

What he doesn't realize is that she is just venting her feelings like a woman (i.e. rambling on about her feelings, without actually want to get to a solution or change anything).

She just wants to express her feelings and as a result, behave like a girl/woman.

She doesn't want to say, "Okay, here's what I'm going to do to fix the problem" and be all serious like a man.

She just wants to be an emotional girl for a moment.

Yet, she doesn't want her guy to copy her and be an emotional girl too.

She also doesn't want him to take her rant too seriously, become upset and say things like, â€œHow can you say that your life is a mess? I thought we had something special between us. Are you happy with me? Are we okay? I love you more than anything. Please tell me that we are okay.â€

When a guy reacts in this way, rather than make a woman feel loved, understood and happy, she feels turned off at a deep level.

Why?

For a woman to maintain her sexual attraction for her man, she has to feel as though he is the emotionally dominant one in the relationship.

She has to see that he is in control of his emotions and life, rather than being like a woman, or a little boy, who is always losing control of his emotions, throwing tantrums, crying, being insecure and needing her to constantly reassure him that everything is okay.

When a woman feels emotionally more dominant than her man, she begins to lose respect for him.

Without respect, she can't feel sexually attracted to him and eventually she will disconnect with her feelings of love for him.

When that happens she will say something like, â€œI can't take this anymore. I need a man, not a boy. It's overâ€ and break up with him.

2. He lacks confidence in social situations

Where a lot of guys lose the respect of their woman is by lacking confidence in social situations, especially around other men.

For example: He's

- Allows all kinds of people to push in front of him in a queue. Of course it's okay to let thugs push in front, because there's no need to get into a fight over it. Yet, when everyday people push in front and the guy just lets it happen, a woman loses respect for him.
- Gets stuck with paying all or more of the restaurant bill every time he goes out with his friends, or always ends up shouting way more drinks than his friends.
- Avoids making conversation with anyone else other than his woman.
- Allows other guys to get away with flirting with his woman. Again, he doesn't have to get into a fight over it or approach guys who look at her. Instead, it's just about guys hitting on her right in front of him and him then looking like he doesn't belong and she's no longer his woman.

When a woman sees that her man doesn't have the balls to stand up for himself socially, she will begin to question whether he is man enough for her.

Here's the thing

A woman is always watching to see how much of a man her guy really is because it's about her feeling safe in this world.

She wants a man that can handle difficult people and situations (without having to get into fights) and be respected, rather than feeling like she's with a guy who needs her to protect him and shield him from challenging people and situations.

So, if she notices that her guy doesn't have the confidence to be a man socially and even allows other people (especially other men) to boss him around, she will perceive him as being emotionally weak and will lose respect and attraction for him.

She may then begin to think, "I need a man, not a boy" and will start closing herself off from him emotionally until she decides to fully break up with him.

3. He is afraid to follow through on his big goals in life and is always making excuses or wasting time hanging out with her

[image: Lack of purpose in life]

Most guys will say that they have a big dream in life, but few will actually set real goals and then keep following through until they achieve it.

So, when a guy has a girlfriend that he really loves, he might use the importance of his relationship with her as an excuse to avoid making any of his dreams come true.

For example: He might say to himself, "I'm very lucky to have found her. She is the most important thing in my life and nothing else matters. She is my real dream come true. I don't need to do anything else in my life because I have her. I don't care about the dreams I used to have. Besides, I can't be bothered pursuing that now. I am happy with her. She is all that matters."

Yet, what a guy like that doesn't realize is that being emotionally dependant on a woman and making her his purpose in life is the fastest way to lose her respect.

Why?

A woman doesn't want to feel responsible for a man's emotional state in a relationship.

She also doesn't want to be his sense of identity in this world or reason for living.

She wants him to be happy, confident and forward moving in his life, with or without her support or reassurance.

Of course, in pop songs, romantic movies and TV shows, you will see women swooning and falling in love with guys who only focus on them.

That's just for the lonely women who wish they had a guy who would pay them some attention and for the lonely guys who wish that women in real life would enjoy it when they pursued so desperately.

In real life, women want a man that they can look up to and respect because he is following through on his big goals, dreams and ambitions in life.

Women still want their man to love them, appreciate them and spend time with them, but not to make his whole life about the relationship.

He needs to have a strong identity and purpose outside of the relationship with her, as well as with her.

Not just with her.

Here's the thing:

A woman knows that there are many very intelligent men out there who have dreams, but don't have the balls or the awareness (of what women really want in a man) to actually follow through on those dreams.

The rare men are the ones who follow through on their dreams and make their mark in the world, with or without a woman's reassurance.

That is very attractive to women because it allows a woman to feel safe and trust in her man to guide them to a better future together.

She doesn't want to have to be the strong one and make sure that their future is secure, while her guy makes excuses about why he's not getting anywhere in his life.

Another reason why a woman will tell her ex that she needs a man, not a boy is that

4. He still thinks, behaves, talks or acts like a boy when other guys his age act like men

[image: He still acts like a boy, when other guys his age act like men]

Sometimes, a guy likes the idea of living a carefree, irresponsible life (i.e. like a boy or a teenager).

For example: He might...

- Spend most of his time watching TV, playing video games, listening to music or hanging out with friends.
- Avoid getting a serious job and depend on his family, or his woman to help him out financially.
- Still live at home with his parents, even though he's more than old enough to be on his own or sharing a place with housemates.
- Act recklessly (e.g. by getting drunk and driving his car, getting into fights with other guys over unimportant things, take too much drugs to make sure that he is always high and can't really work on important things).
- Is immature and doesn't care about grown up stuff, even though he's in his 20s, 30s, 40s or 50s.
- Flirts with other women and tries to hook up with them behind her back.
- Gets into silly fights with her, throws tantrums and acts like a child who always needs to get his way.

His woman will say something like, "Why don't you stop acting like a child and start thinking about what you want to do with your life? Most guys your age are making important, significant things happen in their life. How much longer are you going to mess around and do nothing?" but he just says something along the lines of, "You're being such a drag. Why don't you lighten up for a change? You're just so serious. Life isn't that serious. I don't have to grow up if I don't want to. Society sucks. People don't know what I know. They're all sheep following the crowd."

Yet, while he's messing around and not taking responsibility for his life, he doesn't realize that his woman is gradually losing all of her respect and attraction for him.

Why?

Mainly because he's not achieving anything in his life, which makes her feel like she doesn't have a future with him.

She feels more like his mother that has to take care of him, rather than his woman.

While he is right about not having to take life so seriously (life really should be fun), he does need to take responsibility for the future if he wants her to stick around.

Women need a guy who can make her feel safe and if he doesn't, she will take on that responsibility herself and then dump him, or she will leave him for a guy who is making things happen in his life.

Another reason why a woman will tell her ex that she needs a man, not a boy is thatâ€¦!

5. He cries to her

Thereâ€¦s no denying that life can get tough sometimes and itâ€¦s only normal that a guy might find himself bogged down with worries at some point (e.g. he loses his job, heâ€¦s faced with a serious illness, his business is going under, a family crisis).

When things go wrong like that, itâ€¦s understandable that a guy might feel upset and he may want to talk about it with his woman.

That's totally fine.

Yet, thereâ€¦s a big difference between discussing his problems in a calm, rational and composed way and falling apart, crying and whining about his life to her like a woman or a boy would.

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

Problems are a normal part of everyoneâ€¦s life.

However, in order for a woman to maintain her feelings of respect and attraction for her man, she needs to be able to see that, no matter what life throws his way, he is man enough to remain mentally strong and in control of his emotions.

More importantly, she wants to see that he can quickly start to focus on a solution and then take action to follow through on that solution.

She doesn't want him to remain stuck in being upset, confused, angry or disappointed for too long.

She is fine for him to feel the emotion temporarily, but to then get on with fixing the situation or acting on the solution like a man.

Women don't go around explaining this to men (because they don't want to teach guys how to be men), but it's what they secretly want.

The more a woman feels like she can depend on her man to be a man all the time (without her teaching and guidance), the more she will be able to respect him, feel sexually attracted to him and love him.

On the other hand, if he falls apart and comes crying to her every time heâ€¦s faced with a hiccup along the road (e.g. he has a disagreement with his landlord, he loses a promotion at work), she will think that heâ€¦s being immature and childish and then begin to lose respect for him.

She will then think something like, â€œWhy is he always crying to me? Canâ€¦t he just man up and find a way to deal with his problems without whining like a little boy? This isnâ€¦t working for me anymore. I need a man, not a boy,â€œ and she will break up with him.

Remember: Women naturally look for emotionally strong men who can handle the challenges of life head on.

At the same time, women try to avoid emotionally weak men who crumble under pressure because they don't want to end up having to take care of a wimpy, insecure guy who needs his mommy to protect him from the big, bad world out there.

Another possible reasonâ€¦|

6. He begged and pleaded when she broke up with him

Sometimes, the shock of being dumped can cause a guy to react in a way that goes against his better judgment and he will act completely out of character.

For example: Although a guy might never consider begging and pleading, when his woman is saying things like, â€œIâ€™m tired of trying to make things work. Itâ€™s over between us,â€ he may lose control and say something like, â€œPlease donâ€™t do this! I can change. Just give me one more chance and Iâ€™ll do whatever you want me to do to make it up to you. Just tell me what will make you happy and Iâ€™ll do it. I beg you! Please babyâ€¦| donâ€™t walk away. I canâ€™t be without you. I need you. Please!â€

Yet, rather than make a woman think, â€œAwww, thatâ€™s so sweet. I feel so flattered that heâ€™s prepared to beg and plead to stay with me. I guess he deserves another chance for that. I can definitely teach him how to be the man that I need him to be. It's time for me to become his teacher and guide him through the process of becoming the man I need. Yippee!â€ she will just feel even more turned off by him.

Why?

She starts to think things like, â€œI need a man, not a boy. This guy is too emotionally weak for me. At the first sign of trouble, heâ€™s falling apart and expecting me to give him another chance out of pity. I donâ€™t want to be with him because I feel sorry for him. I want to be with him because he makes me feel safe, protected, taken care of. I want to feel like I can 100% depend on him when times get tough. If he canâ€™t cope with a break up, how will he handle something more serious in life, like his finances, our family or our future? Based on his current behavior, it seems to me that I would have to take care of him instead. I will need to give up being a man's girl and have to become his mother. He just doesnâ€™t understand how to be the man that I need him to be, so I need to get out of this relationship while I still can.â€

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦|

If a woman has to explain to a guy how to be a man, she will automatically start feeling attracted to other men who donâ€™t need her to explain it.

To her, he will seem like a confused guy who hasnâ€™t fully grown up and she will then say something like, â€œIf you canâ€™t figure out where you stuffed up by yourself, Iâ€™m not going to spell it out for you. Itâ€™s not my job to teach you how to be a man. I need a man, not a boy that I have to lead.â€

So, even though a guy might have good intentions (by begging and pleading and asking her what to do) because he wants things to work between him and her, his approach is all wrong.

Heâ€™s trying to get her back by displaying traits and behaviors that actually turn women off (i.e. lack of masculinity, insecurity, submissiveness, emotional weakness), so itâ€™s simply not going to work.

Finallyâ€¦

7. He doesn't yet know what it means to be a masculine, mature man

[image: He doesn't know what it means to be a masculine man]

When a woman breaks up with a guy by saying, "I need a man, not a boy," he might make the mistake of thinking that being a man is all about showing how much he can take care of her.

He may then decide to show her that he can take care of her by being available to her every beck and call, taking care of her financially and sometimes, even getting into fights with other guys over her, to show her what a physically strong guy he is.

He hopes that it will show her that he's willing to do anything for her, but women don't respect that kind of insecure, reckless behavior from men.

She doesn't want a guy to take her so seriously that she is essentially using him as a weapon (to fight other guys) or as a way to get through life (e.g. by getting him to pay her bills, run errands for her).

She wants a man with self-respect who will love her, appreciate her and respect her, but not become her willing slave.

If she feels like she can push him around, or as though she has to play referee when he loses control of himself (by getting into arguments and fights) to prove to her how "manly" he is, she won't be able to look up to him and respect him and feel attracted to him.

Remember: Being a masculine, mature man in a relationship is not about being aggressive or controlling.

It's also not about building bigger muscles, growing a beard or any other superficial masculine thing.

It's about who you are on the inside and how that comes through in how you think, feel, behave and act around her and in life.

It's about believing in yourself as the leader of the relationship and taking on that role (without ever questioning yourself and wondering if it's okay to be the man/the leader), while also respecting her and caring about her.

You have to be the type of man she can look up to, respect and rely on to be a man all the time (i.e. always be confident, emotionally strong and masculine, while also being attentive, loving and gentle when needed).

Don't worry "it's easy."

You simply have to start letting go of your boyish ways, one by one.

You can still have fun, enjoy life and be silly at times, but make that 20% from now on.

80% of the time, you should be serious, forward moving and responsible so you can actually be the sort of man that she and other people can look up to and respect.

If you don't do that, she won't be the only woman dumping you.

Some women do put up with having a boyish man for a boyfriend or husband, but most women don't.

The women who do, usually end up cheating on their boyish man and then leaving him.

If you want a woman to love you, respect you and feel attracted to you for life, you've got to be a man, not a boy.

When you start thinking, talking and behaving like a mature, emotionally masculine man from now on, you ex won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

She will start to feel the doubts creeping into her head (e.g. â€œDid I make a mistake breaking up with him?â€ or, â€œWhat if he meets another woman and I lose him forever?â€ or, â€œWhat if he really has changed now and I lose a great man? Will I ever be able to find a real man like him? Should I just give him another chance and see how it goes?â€).

When that happens, she will stop being so cold towards you and she will open up again.

She will then allow herself to feel respect, attraction and love for you again for being man enough to figure things out by yourself and become the man (not boy) she always needed you to be.

By the way!

If you decide to learn more from me or anyone else, don't tell her that you're getting help.

Women don't want to know that you're learning or getting help to be a real man.

They just want you to learn it and then start being that man, without essentially saying to her, â€œNow do you like me? I've been learning to be a man. I'm now more of a man? Is that good mommy?â€

She just wants you to take on the role of being a man and stop looking to her to give you approval.

A real man approves of himself and doesn't need a woman to pat him on the back and say, â€œGood boy.â€

So, if you are serious about getting her back, make sure that you continue learning how to be a man and then just start being that man.

Don't hope to get a pat on the head from her.

Instead, start being the kind of man that she can look up to and respect.

She will then be hoping to cuddle into your arms and look up to you as the man she now respects, trusts, loves and wants to be with for life.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Is My Ex Leading Me On?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

6 signs that suggest she is leading you on and has no current intention to get back with you, are:

1. She goes out partying with her single girlfriends quite often

Nightclubs, bars and parties are designed for drinking, partying, dancing and finding someone to hook up with.

Women often say, "I just go out to dance" or "I don't give out my number to guys in bars or clubs," but that's what women say to avoid looking easy.

What you always need to remember about most women when it comes to men, is that they will often say one thing and do a completely different thing altogether.

Watch this for some examplesâ€¦!

So, if your ex is going to clubs and partying with her single girlfriends, she is looking to get some action whether she admits that or not.

Of course, that doesn't mean your ex has to stay home, be a good little girl and not have any fun just because she's thinking about getting back with you.

However, if she's regularly going partying with her single girlfriends, she's probably not going to sit alone in a dark corner drinking orange juice and saying, "No, no. I don't want to dance or have fun. I'm considering getting back together again with my ex and it wouldn't be fair to him if I enjoyed myself without him. So, you guys go ahead and have a good time. I'll just sit here all by myself and watch you."

Instead, she is more than likely going to be having a drink or two (and in some cases, get pretty drunk) and flirting with guys who are there with the intention of hooking up with a woman for sex.

[image: Nightclubs are for fun, partying and hook ups]

Also, did you know that when a woman drinks alcohol her testosterone levels go up, which in turn increases her libido and makes her less sexually inhibited (i.e. she's more open to the idea of having a one night stand than she would be if she was sober)?

So, unless your ex is the type of woman who doesn't drink alcohol, if she is going partying with her single girlfriends, she will usually be sipping down a few drinks and becoming more open to flirting with guys and seeing where things go.

She might say to you that she's not interested in dating anyone right now, but as you know â€¦ women often say one thing and do another when it comes to men, so you can rely on her to be 100% truthful about that.

After all, if she is your ex, she knows that she doesn't have to be loyal to you.

She might give you the impression that she is being loyal, but she knows that she is an individual and can do whatever she wants with her life.

To lead you on and make sure that you don't get angry at her or try to stop her from going on, she might say that she's not interested in seeing anyone.

Yet, if she goes out and a guy that she meets displays some of the traits that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, charm, emotional masculinity, makes her laugh and smile, charisma) she probably won't be saying â€œNoâ€ to him if he tries to touch her, kiss her and have sex with her. Hereâ€™s the thing!

When a woman is committed to getting back together with her ex, she will make every effort to fix her relationship with him, rather than make things worse by going partying all the time with her single girlfriend or having sex with other guys.

So, if youâ€™re wondering, â€œIs my ex leading me on?â€ and sheâ€™s going out partying with her single friends all the time, thereâ€™s a very good chance that the answer is, â€œYes.â€ If that's the case for you, what should you?

Do the same.

Make her jealous.

You don't have to hook up with any women, but at least go out and have fun, post up some photos on social media and let her see that you're not sitting at home alone feeling sad, lonely and unloved.

When she sees that, she will almost certainly contact you and you can then make her feel attracted on a phone call and get her to meet up with you in person.

Another sign that your ex might be leading you on isâ€

2. She tells you that she doesn't want to be with you now, but maybe some time in the future

[image: Maybe we can get back together some time in the future]

If a woman isn't leading you on, she will say something direct like, â€œLook, itâ€™s over between us and thereâ€™s no chance of us getting back together again. I donâ€™t want to lead you on and give you false hope. So, forget about me and move on, okay?â€

Yet, most women won't be that direct when breaking up with a guy.

Why?

Common reasons why include:

- Sheâ€™s afraid that he might break down and start begging, pleading and crying with her to change her mind.
- She fears that he might become angry and possibly even get violent with her.
- Sheâ€™s a nice person and she doesn't want to hurt his feelings, so she tries to break away from him gradually rather than all at once.
- Sheâ€™s angry with him over what happened between them in the relationship and she wants to hurt him by leading him on.
- She wants to give herself some time to find a replacement guy, before she breaks up with him for real.

So, rather than just tell her ex that itâ€™s over, a woman might instead say something like, â€œI donâ€™t want to be with you right now, but maybe we can get back together some time in the future.â€

Iâ€™m just not in the right space at the moment for a relationship. I need some time to sort things out in my life,â€ as a way of letting him down easy.

Her guy might then think, â€œCool! Well at least thereâ€™s hope. She didnâ€™t say itâ€™s over. So, I will wait for her.â€

He might also tell her that heâ€™ll wait for her for as long as she needs because he loves her so much and respects her need for space.

Yet, giving a woman too much space just doesnâ€™t work in most ex back cases.

Watch thisâ€¦!

If you give her too much space and she secretly doesnâ€™t have strong feelings for you, a woman will almost always use the time to find a replacement guy.

She will then be able to avoid the pain of you breaking up with her, by finally breaking up with you and saying, “Iâ€™m with someone else now. Iâ€™m sorry. Please stop contacting me.”

Another sign that she might be leading you onâ€¦!

3. She says that she wants to focus on her work (or studies) this year and after that, you and her can discuss the possibility of a relationship

Some guys will demand that she gives an answer now, while other guys will promise to wait and then go ahead and give her all the space she needs.

He then has to live the entire year with the fear that she might meet another guy, so he will constantly check her social media profiles to see if thereâ€™s any sign of new men in her life.

Alternatively, he might think to himself, â€œWhat an amazing woman. She really wants to make a success of herself. I totally respect that and I donâ€™t want to be the one to get in the way of her dreams. Iâ€™m just going to stick around and be her friend and help her out as much as possible. Then, once she accomplishes her goals and realizes that I was the one who stuck with her through it all, she will naturally want to get back together with me. She will be able to see that no-one would ever love her as much as I do and stand by her the way I have.â€

He might then focus on being her nice, sweet, platonic friend who is extra nice to her and runs errands for her, pays some of her bills (e.g. rent, university fees), helps her with work and is her shoulder to cry on when sheâ€™s feeling down or overwhelmed.

Yet, just because heâ€™s being so nice to her, it doesnâ€™t mean that sheâ€™s going to want him back as her boyfriend (fiancÃ© or husband), or that sheâ€™s not going to hook up with another guy in the meantime.

She could be genuinely busy with work (or study), but if she meets a guy who is more interesting to her and triggers her feelings of sexual attraction (e.g. because heâ€™s confident, charismatic, charming), then sheâ€™s going to have to consider hooking up with him.

She might be able to fight the urge, but if sheâ€™s not getting sex from you and is feeling horny, she might just go ahead and let him take her out on a date.

So, remember thisâ€¦!

It's totally fine to remain friends with your ex, but you have to make sure that you are actively making her feel sexually attracted to you during that time.

For example: Being confident at all times, being charismatic, making her laugh, flirting with her, making her feel girly in comparison to how masculine you are.

However, if you only focus on making her feel neutral, friendly feelings for you by being a nice, supportive friend, she might keep leading you on, but that won't stop her from having sex or falling in love with a new guy.

So, don't fall into the friend zone with your ex.

Instead, use every interaction you have with her as a way to actively spark her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you again.

Another sign that your ex might be leading you on is that

4. She shows interest in you via text, but won't meet up with you

One of the easiest ways for a woman to lead a guy on is by sticking to texting without ever wanting to talk to him over the phone or meet up with him in person.

For example: A woman might text her ex and say things like, "Yesterday I was having lunch at that little Italian restaurant we used to go to and I thought about all the good times we shared there. Maybe we can do that again sometime. I miss you."

Naturally, when a guy reads a message like that, it's only normal that he might think, "This is great! Clearly she still has feelings for me. She misses me!"

If he then responds by saying something along the lines of, "I feel the same way! Why don't we get together at that restaurant and see where things go from there?" she will likely just respond with something like, "Sure, that sounds great, but I'm really busy at the moment. Maybe in a few weeks time when things have settled down at work/with my studies."

Then, after a few weeks if he tries again to meet up with her, she will likely give him some other excuse to avoid actually meeting up with him in person.

Why?

Often, a woman will do this because she's already seeing another guy and just doesn't want to come out and say it.

She feels bad for hooking up with a guy so quickly after they broke up, so she just leads her ex on and tries to be nice to him.

In other cases, a woman will continue texting to give herself an ego boost, to get emotional revenge on him for hurting her or just for something fun to do.

As you may have experienced, a woman can often change and become a completely different person after breaking up with you.

When with you, she was so sweet and innocent, but now that you're broken up, she can turn into somewhat of an enemy who actually wants to hurt you.

Not all women are that mean of course, but many guys do encounter a complete change in their woman after a break up.

This is why texting is a horrible way of getting a woman back.

Rather than wasting time with texts, just get her on a phone call right away, where you can spark some of her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, showing her that you've changed) and get her to agree to see you in person.

Another possible sign that she's leading you on is

5. She says that you deserve better than her

A nice way that a woman might lead a guy on is by saying something along the lines of, I love you too much to get back with you. You deserve a woman who is better than me. Someone who can love you the way you should be loved, rather than be stuck with a girl like me who doesn't know what she wants in her life. Why do you even bother with me? I'm not good enough for you.

In most cases, when a guy hears something like this, rather than think, Hmmm she has a point there. I can easily get another beautiful woman. Why am I bothering with a woman who isn't giving me her full love and devotion? She's right. I'm moving on. Bye! he thinks something like, I don't care what she thinks. I love her more than any other woman. She is special to me. She is so amazing that she cares about not being good enough for me. What more could I ask for? She cares about me. She must really love me to be willing to put my happiness before her own. I just have to get her back. I want to take care of her and treat her well. She's such a great woman.

He then plays into her hands by not moving on and simply waiting around for her to change her mind and come running back to him.

In cases like this, a guy will often buy a woman flowers, a ring, pay for her rent or offer to take her on an expensive holiday.

He's trying to show her how willing he is to take care of her, in the hope that she then realizes how lucky she is and gives him another chance.

Yet, that's not how it works.

A woman doesn't want to feel as though she is being bought.

She wants to feel like she is with you because she feels respect, attraction and love and actually wants to be with you.

She doesn't want to feel as though she is just going to stick around because of all the nice things you can do for her.

Of course, some selfish women do that to take advantage of their guy for a while, but the relationship never lasts.

So, if your ex is saying something along the lines of, You deserve better than me, it's very likely that she's leading you on.

She's probably using that excuse to keep you at arms length while she moves on and finds a replacement guy.

If you want her back, make sure that you aren't desperately chasing her and are instead allowing her to miss you and want you back.

Another possible sign of leading you onâ€¦!

6. She says that she doesn't love you the same way anymore, but needs more time alone to figure things out

When a woman says something like, â€œMy feelings for you have changed. I don't love you anymore. I can't decide what I really want right now. Just give me some time to think about it and figure things out in my life. Then, we'll see what happens from there,â€ a guy may then think to himself, â€œWell that's not so bad. At least she's trying to sort through her feelings for me. I can be patient. After all, she means the world to me. She's worth the wait. I don't want any other women besides her, so I'll just back off for a while and give her the space she needs. Then, when she's ready, she will call me up and we can get back together again.â€

He might then cut off all communication with her (e.g. he stops texting, e-mailing, calling, interacting with her on social media and he doesn't see her in person) for 30 to 60 days (some guys wait even longer than that) in the hopes that the time apart will make her realize how much she misses him and she will then come running back.

Yet, in most cases, giving a woman a lot of space usually only plays into her hands.

Rather than sitting around thinking, â€œThis is terrible! I miss him so much! I know I said I don't love him anymore, but I was wrong. I want him back now! I need to call him right away so that we can get back together again,â€ a woman is usually thinking, â€œThis is perfect. Now I can focus on getting on with my life, without having to deal with him calling me and pestering me about getting back together again,â€ and she just moves on.

If her ex then gets in touch with her after 30 or 60 days, she will say something like, â€œSorry. It's too late. I'm seeing someone else now and I'm really happy. It's really over between us now. You need to move on and forget about me.â€

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't let her lead you on with the, â€œI need some space. Maybe we can get back together again sometime in the future,â€ line.

In most cases, space is just a way to keep you out of her life so she can move on.

If you give her more than 7 days of space at a time, it usually leads to her moving on with another guy or having enough time to get over you and say, “No, I've made up my mind. We are finished. We're not getting back together and nothing you can say will change my mind.”

So, to get her back, you need to actively focus on triggering her feelings of respect and attraction for you again, so she will want to change her mind.

You can't do that if you're not interacting with her though.

So, make sure that you don't just sit back and wait (e.g. for 30 or 60 days) for your ex to tell you when she's ready to give you another chance.

Instead, use every interaction you have with her (e.g. via text, on social media and especially over the phone and in person) to get her smiling and laughing.

This makes her drop her guard and be able to say something like, â€œI've had enough time apart. I think we should get back together again. I miss having you in my life.â€

Love is Like a Dance

Most men hate dancing and don't even want to think about it, but dancing actually a great metaphor for how to succeed with women.

For example: When a man is dancing with a woman, she really likes to be able to follow his lead.

A man taking the lead doesn't mean that he has to do all the work and put in all the effort.

Instead, he should either know what he wants to do and do it, or just follow his instinct and do whatever he wants while dancing with her.

If he is able to lead with confidence in that way, a woman can then relax (rather than having to think, plan and act like the leader) and just focus on doing all sorts of fancy, sexy moves as she expresses her femininity.

If you've ever seen a woman dancing with a man who is calmly and confidently leading, you will have noticed how happy she was.

It's the ideal scenario for women because they get to be the girl, or the woman, rather than having to take on the more dominant, manly role and lead the way.

So, how does all that relate to getting an ex back?

Well, even though your ex might not admit or even know it, what she really wants is for you to lead her back into a relationship, so she can be your happy, girly, sexy woman again.

She's not going to tell you what to do to get her back though, because that would be leading you and would ruin the ideal masculine/feminine dynamic that a woman wants to experience with a man.

Just like with a dance, a woman will either get very frustrated that her man can't lead, or she will smile from ear to ear and be very happy, excited and attracted to him if he has the confidence to just lead the way.

The same applies with getting her back.

You just can't expect your ex to lead you back into a relationship.

As a man, that's your role.

So, how do you lead the way?

Start saying and doing the type of things that will make her feel respect for you, feel attracted to you and begin to love you again.

By actively making her feel attracted, you are leading the way and helping the relationship get back together.

For example: You make her laugh and smile on a phone call and then say, "Hey, so anywayâ€¦we should catch up and have a coffee tomorrow or the next day" and she then says, "I'm not sureâ€¦maybe it's not a good idea."

Do you follow her lead?

No.

You say, "Ahh, come onâ€¦it's just a coffee. We're mature enough to catch up for a coffee as friends. It doesn't mean that we're getting back together. It's just catching up for a quick coffee and laugh. We can do that."

If you have been attracting her on the phone call and making her feel respect for you, she will agree and go along with meeting up with you.

As a result, you will be leading the dance.

It's not difficult to lead the way with a woman.

Women naturally want to be with a man that they can follow the lead of.

It doesn't mean that you have to make all the decisions, do all the work or put in loads of effort.

You just have to believe in yourself and assume the role as the leader or the man in the relationship and move things forward, while also being loving, respectful and considerate of her feelings and her needs.

If she wants to make a decision and lead the way on something, you let her.

Yet, just don't fall into the trap of needing her to lead or allowing her to walk all over you and make all the decisions.

Believe in yourself and assume the leadership role as the man because that's how women want it anyway.

Women want you to lead the way.

They like it.

So, when a guy asks, â€œIs my ex leading me on?â€ it's usually because he has been waiting around for weeks, months and in some cases, even years, hoping that his ex will lead him back into a relationship with her.

Yet, that's not how it works.

If a man wants a woman back, he needs to have the emotional courage to remain confident all the way through the ex back process, rather than expecting a woman to go easy on him and make it completely obvious that she wants him back.

The truth is, when a guy has the confidence to take the lead and go after the woman he loves, it actually makes a woman feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

She begins to see him in a more positive light and all the negative things that she's been holding on to about him and the relationship begin to fade away and get replaced by new, positive emotions such as respect, attraction and love.

Her guard naturally comes down and she will usually just go along with it, hook up with him and get back into a relationship, because she can see that he's now the kind of man she can look up to, respect, feel desire for and love.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

4 Things to Remember When Seeing Your Ex Again

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

When seeing your ex again, it's very important that you use the opportunity to show her that you're no longer the same guy she broke up with.

This naturally re-sparks her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and gets her to open up to giving the relationship another chance.

How can you show her that you've changed and become a new man?

By remembering the following:

1. She will be impressed if you are emotionally stronger than her, while also making sure that she feels good about herself too

Where a lot of guys go wrong when seeing an ex woman again, is worrying too much about what she might say or do at the meet up, rather than focusing on what he is going to do to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

Many guys assume that the woman is totally in control of the ex back process (i.e. she decides how often they can see each other, how long it will take for her to forgive him and want him back, what he needs to do to please her).

A guy will assume that what he has to do is be really nice to her, follow along with all her demands and hope that she eventually takes pity on him and gives him another chance.

Yet, that approach usually leads to the woman losing respect for the guy because she can see that he's not being his real self and is being extra nice, considerate and generous as a way of sucking up to her.

That's not what makes a woman feel respect for a guy.

She wants to see that he is being a good man, but he's not desperately putting up with her bad treatment of him in the hope that she will eventually take pity on him and give him another chance.

She wants to know that the man she is with is someone she can respect, look up to and feel proud of, rather than a guy that makes her feel pity and disappointment due to his lack of a backbone.

So, a woman will test her ex guy to see if he's emotionally strong enough to take control and guide them back into a relationship, or if he's going to lose confidence and fall apart at the first sign of resistance from her.

For example: To test him, a woman might act cold and distant towards her ex when they meet up.

She may even say things like, "I don't know why I'm even here. This is just a waste of my time. We have nothing to talk about anymore," or "I don't know why I'm bothering with you after everything you put me through. I should have my head examined for even talking to you on the phone, let alone meet up with you."

Naturally, hearing her say these types of things might make a guy feel upset and he may think to himself, "This is hopeless. She doesn't have feelings for me now and I'm just annoying her even more. I don't know what to do to make her give me a chance to show her that I've really changed this time."

Then, rather than use her coldness as an opportunity to show her the new him (e.g. by cracking through her defenses and making her laugh, smile and feel good to be around him again), he instead begins to feel anxious around her.

He might then react by being extra nice to her in an attempt to get on her good side.

For example: He mightâ€¦

- Plead with her to give him a chance to show her that heâ€¦s changed.
- Pay for everything (e.g. drinks, meals) as a way of impressing her.
- Try to calm her down by promising to do anything she wants him to do.
- Take the blame for everything that happened between them (e.g. he may say things like, â€œIâ€™m so sorry. It was all my fault. I was a real jerk to you and I deserve it now that you’re angry at me and don’t want to get back together. It’s all my fault.â€)

However, rather than make a woman think, â€œAwwwâ€¦ heâ€™s being so sweet. He really does care about me. Look how nice he is, even though Iâ€™m being such a bitch towards him. I have to make it up to him by giving him another chance. I knowâ€¦ Iâ€™ll tell him that all is forgiven and then we can get back together again. Yayyy!â€ she will simply feel turned off by him.

She doesn’t want to see him becoming weak when she tests him like that.

She wants him to have the balls to joke around with her and bring the interaction back to a more fun, easy-going vibe, rather than being so serious and depressing.

For example: She says, “I donâ€™t know why Iâ€™m even here. This is just a waste of my time. We have nothing to talk about anymore” and he jokingly says, “Yeahâ€¦ what are you doing here? I guess it means you still love me” and then laugh at her (in a loving way, not in a condescending way) and laugh at the situation they are in.

[image: Get your pretty butt in the kitchen and make me some food]

Alternatively, he might say something like, “You know what you’re doing here” and she then says, “What?” and he says, “You’re here because you want to cook me some dinner. I’m hungry. Get your pretty butt in the kitchen and make me some food” and then has a laugh with her about that.

Obviously, he’s only joking.

What’s important is that he has the balls to joke around in a moment like that, rather than worrying that if he says something “wrong” she will leave and never come back.

Worrying like that is needy and it turns a woman off.

A woman doesn’t want to feel as though you need her reassurance, love, attention and approval to feel okay about yourself.

She also doesn’t want to feel as though she is the one in control of the relationship.

She wants you to take control, but still be a loving, good man while you do it.

It’s not about being rude to her, insulting her or disrespecting her.

Instead, it’s about having the emotional strength to not take what she is saying so personally and just bring the interaction back to laughter and love.

After all, when you’re both laughing and feeling love, you’re not going to want to be breaking up and steering clear of each other.

She's going to enjoy being around you and because she feels so good around you, she will want to give the relationship another chance.

She will want it for her own, selfish reasons (i.e. because you make her feel respect, attraction, love and happiness now), so she will be open and interested in seeing you again and keeping the relationship together.

Another thing to remember when seeing your ex again is thatâ

2. Improving your physical appearance is usually the least important thing to a woman

[image: She is much more interested in your confidence than your muscles]

When a woman breaks up with a guy and says something like, âI just don't feel the same way about you anymore,â or âI don't feel attracted to you in the same way I did at the beginning of our relationship,â or âThe spark between us has died,â a guy might make the mistake of thinking that if he changes his appearance (e.g. wears better clothes, loses some weight or builds some muscle, changes his hairstyle), her old feelings for him will come rushing back to her again.

Yet, that's not how it works.

Although, a woman might say, âWow, you're looking good. I can see you've been really busy working out at the gym since we broke up. I love your new look,â his appearance is not the main thing that will make her feel attracted to him again.

Why?

Even though a woman may appreciate that a guy has made an effort to improve himself physically, she's more interested in seeing that he's improved himself emotionally.

For example: If a woman broke up with a guy because he became too wimpy or weak-minded in the relationship with her, that's what is going to be most important to her.

If he's wearing nice new clothes, sporting a fashionable haircut and has big muscles, but is still the same guy emotionally that she broke up with, she won't think, âSure my ex is still at the same level he was at when we broke up, but he looks better now with new clothes/with his big muscles. So, I'm just going to overlook the fact that I can't respect and feel attracted to a wimpy, weak-minded man and get back together with him because of the superficial changes he made.â

Instead, she will think something like, âIt's a pity that he didn't put as much energy into improving the things about himself that really matter to me (e.g. his emotional strength, his ability to make me feel respect and attraction for him as a man). If he had, I wouldn't think twice about getting back with him. I would just give him another chance. I won't tell him this, but the way he looks on the outside isn't as important to me as the way he is on the inside (i.e. confident, emotionally strong, emotionally masculine).â

The thing you need to get clear on, is that what matters most to a woman is how you make her feel when she's interacting with you.

That principle applies when meeting new women for the first time, being on a first date, having sex and when in a relationship.

It always applies, even if you are married, have children and have been together for years.

She has to feel respect, attraction and love for who you are when you interact with her.

For example:

- Can she relax into being fully feminine in your presence, or does she feel more like your boss and like she has to lead you and tell you what to do?
- Can she respect you, look up to you and feel proud to be with you, or does she feel like she's too good for you and doesn't want to be associated with you?
- Do you make her feel turned on and excited to be interacting with you, or does she feel bored, annoyed or indifferent?
- Do you make her smile and laugh, or do you make her focus more on all the negatives of your relationship and why she broke up with you?

Those are some of the things that matter much more than what a guy looks like on the outside.

Women will often go around talking about a man's appearance (e.g. talking about abs, biceps, shoes), but what really matters is how confident and emotionally strong a man is on the inside.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should let yourself go, avoid exercising, wear old, scraggy clothes and let your hair grow down to your knees and never wash it.

It's totally fine to take care of your appearance, but just know that it's not the most important thing to a woman.

What matters is how he makes her feel based on his attitude, his way of thinking and his behavior.

In other words, does he have an insecure attitude, think in an insecure way and behave in an insecure way, or is he confident?

When seeing your ex again, she will look to see how confident you really are, even though she isn't giving 100% clear signals about whether or not she wants to get back with you.

That's what matters.

Another thing to remember!

3. Focus on making her smile, laugh and feel good, rather than getting into deep, serious conversations about the relationship

[image: Focus on making her feel good]

When seeing your ex again, it might be tempting to want to talk about what happened between you and her.

For example: A guy might want to repeatedly apologize to her and explain why he behaved the way he did and how much he regrets hurting her.

He may also tell her how much he still cares about her and wants her back and remind her about how good things used to be between them in the beginning.

Yet, getting into deep, serious conversations about the relationship with your ex before you've fully reactivated her feelings (of sexual attraction, respect and love) for you, will just make her focus on the fact that things really are bad between you and her.

Rather than make her think, “This is good! At least we’re finally clearing the air between us,” she will be thinking, “There are too many painful memories for me. I don’t know if I can move past what happened between us. I think seeing him again was a bad idea. It only made me remember how bad things turned out in the end. We’re not right for each other and seeing him again is making that clear to me.”

So, if you don’t want your ex to be thinking like that, make sure that you focus instead on making her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you again.

It’s not about constantly cracking jokes and being silly around her.

Instead, it’s simply about not being so serious and harping on and on about the past.

When she’s smiling, laughing and enjoying being in your presence, it becomes difficult for her to keep thinking, “He stuffed up. I’m not going to forgive him for that.”

Instead, she thinks, “I never expected to be able to relax around him and enjoy myself like this. It actually feels pretty good to be around him again. I guess things aren’t that bad between us after all.”

So, if you want to re-spark your ex’s feelings of respect and attraction for you again when you see her, don’t try to convince her that you’ve changed with endless logic, reasoning and discussions about the past.

Finally, another thing to remember when you see your ex again is

4. If you can’t hook up with her sexually, at least get a warm, goodbye hug and make it last for at least 5 seconds

[image: Get a warm, goodbye hug]

It might feel a little bit awkward initially, but it’s worth it.

Having a warm hug goodbye helps you and her break the physical distance between you, feel rushes of love and attraction and more importantly, it confuses her.

She starts thinking, “Hmm...why did that hug feel so good?” and she then becomes open to texting you, calling you and seeing you again.

Make sure that you are the one initiating the texts, phone calls and suggestions to meet up.

Ask on a phone call rather than text though, because most women play hard to get via text when dealing with an ex.

However, whatever you do, just make sure that you don’t end the meet up without getting physical (i.e. hugging, kissing, having sex).

If you can only get to a hug, do that, but if you can go further – by all means, do that.

In some cases, a woman will be open to hooking up with her ex sexually when they meet up again.

In other cases, a woman will usually take on a “This was nice, but let’s wait and see what happens” approach, because she doesn’t want to come across as being too easy.

So, a way to continue building on her feelings for you and build up the sexual tension is to get her to give you a goodbye hug.

For example: When you and her are getting ready to leave, you can say something along the lines of,

â"â"Okay, bring it in for a warm, goodbye hug since we're not going to see each other again.â"â"

In most cases, if youâ"â"ve been making her feel surges of respect and sexual attraction for you throughout the meet up, a woman will be more than happy to give you a hug goodbye.

So, just go ahead and give her a nice, long, 5-second squeeze in your arms.

If she gives you a quick hug and pulls away after a second, you can laugh and say, â"â"You call that a warm goodbye hug? Come here and let's have a proper hug goodbye. We're mature enough to do that, right? Relax girl, relaxâ"â" and then bring her in for another hug.

She then feels attracted to your confidence, masculinity and fearlessness when it comes to love, so she drops her reservations about seeing you again.

Then, if you suggest meeting up again soon, she will be open to the idea of seeing you again.

By the wayâ"|

If possible, pull back from the hug and lean in for a kiss.

A kiss changes things pretty quickly.

All of a sudden, you go from ex's to lovers again and it's then a lot easier to transition to sex and then back into a relationship.

If you don't move in for a kiss though, don't worry.

Just do that the next time, or suggest heading back to your place or hers (after the hug goes well) and then do it there.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

Should I Give Up On My Ex Girlfriend?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends on how serious you are about getting her back.

If you sincerely want her back, then no â€œ don't give up on her.

Just use a different approach to give her the attraction experience that she wanted from you all along.

For example: Some of the ways that you can do that includeâ€œ

- React differently to what she says and does (e.g. if she acts cold and indifferent towards you, rather than get upset about it, you remain calm and confident and turn her coldness into something for both of you to laugh about).
- Focus on making her smile, laugh and feel happy to be around you, rather than getting into serious conversations about the relationship, or trying to make her change her mind by begging, pleading and telling her how much you still care about her.
- Make her feel feminine and girly when she interacts with you, rather than making her feel neutral, or even worse, making her feel more emotionally dominant than you and allowing her to call the shots. Even though she is your ex and is acting like she has the right to call the shots, she will actually respond more positively to you if you regain the position of power. You've got to do it in a relaxed, easy-going way though. It's not about demanding to be in position of power again.
- Show her via your thinking, behavior and actions that youâ€œve fixed some of the issues that turned her off (e.g. If you were insecure and self-doubting, you are now more confident and self-assured. If you were too nice and allowed her to dominate you with her confident personality, you are now more ballsy and emotionally masculine and you stand up to her or laugh at her (in a loving way) when sheâ€œs being pushy).

When your ex girlfriend can see that youâ€œre not the same man she broke up with, it becomes difficult for her to hold on to her negative feelings about you.

She is forced to reevaluate her perception of you and has to admit to herself that you're not like you used to be.

You really have changed and the changes feel attractive to her.

She then drops her guard and you can then guide her back into a relationship with you.

Getting Her Back For the Right Reasons

[image: Getting her back for the right reasons]

If you don't really want your ex girlfriend back and are only trying to hook up with her one last time to feel good about yourself, then you're not really going to get the confidence boost you are seeking.

Why?

Your confidence in yourself needs to be independent of her validation.

If you need her acceptance to feel confident about yourself, then you're not confident â€œ you're insecure.

The way that a real man manages his confidence is by being a self-approving, masculine man.

He doesn't need other people to approve of him to feel confident or good about himself.

He approves of himself and knows that he is a good man, he is valuable, his is loveable and doesn't need anyone woman or person to keep reassuring him of that fact.

He knows it.

Here's the really interesting thing thoughâ€¦!

When a man knows that he is worthy, loveable and attractive (because he decides so. He approves of himself), he actually gives off the type of confidence and has the kind of swagger that women find naturally attractive.

He might not look very good physically, but women will say, "There's something about him. He's sexy."

Yeah, he's a self-approving, masculine man.

He isn't looking to people around him to say, "Hey, you're okay. You're worthy."

He just approves of himself and as a result, he has a calm, easy-going, loveable type of confidence that not only makes women feel attracted to him, but makes other guys respect him too.

So, if you want to get your ex back because you need her to make you feel good about yourself again, it's going to backfire.

Women can smell insecurity a mile awayâ€¦and it doesn't smell good at all.

Women are naturally attracted to confidence in men and naturally turned off by insecurity.

So, if you want to succeed at getting your ex girlfriend back, make sure that you understand how to be a truly confident man, rather than trying to gain confidence by way of her showing interest in you again.

If your ex girlfriend picks up on your insecurity and realizes that you need her back to feel good about yourself, she will close up.

Have You Been Making the Ex Back Process More Difficult For Yourself?

[image: Have you been making the ex back process more difficult for yourself?]

Getting an ex woman back is fairly easy in most cases.

I know this because I've been helping men get women back for many years now and I have heard back from 100s of men who've successfully gotten a woman back.

In most cases, the woman hates her ex and doesn't want anything to do with him anymore.

Yet, he gets her back.

You can do that too.

However, if you are making any of the following classic mistakes, you will simply be making the ex back process harder than it is or you will be ruining your chances with her altogetherâ€¦!

1. Using the No Contact Rule (ignoring her for 30-60 days)

Sometimes, when a guy is trying to get his ex woman back after a break up and she is ignoring him (i.e. by not responding to his texts, e-mails or social media messages and not answering his calls), or by being cold and unfriendly, he might make the mistake of thinking that cutting off communication with her for 30 to 60 days is the only way to make her miss him and then want him back.

However, in most cases, that tactic just doesn't work on women after a serious break up.

Why?

To begin with, when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's usually because she has lost respect and attraction for him over time.

Unless she is still secretly in love with the guy and is hoping that they will get back together again, or if she is struggling to find herself a replacement guy, ignoring her for weeks or months isn't going to worry her.

Of course, a woman may wonder why her ex isn't contacting her, but if she's sure that he can't change and become the kind of man she needs him to be (e.g. become truly confident, emotionally secure, emotionally mature), she's just going to focus on moving on quickly and finding a replacement guy.

So, if your ex girlfriend doesn't have feelings for you right now, ignoring her for 30 or 60 days isn't a very good idea, because you will just be making it easier for her to get over you and move on.

If you don't want to give up on your ex girlfriend, the best way to get her back is to be active about it.

Actively re-spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and actively guide her back into a relationship with you, before it's too late.

Watch this!

Whether you're interacting with her via text, on social media, over the phone, or in person, make sure that you're making her smile, laugh and feel happy to be in contact with you again.

The more respect and attraction you make her feel when you're interacting with her, the more that her defenses will come down and open she will become to the idea of getting back together again.

On the other hand, if your main method of trying to get you back is to ignore her for 30 or 60 days, she may just use that time to get over you and find herself another guy who makes her feel exciting lust and new love.

A lot of guys wonder, "Should I give up on my ex girlfriend?" when they are using the no contact approach to getting an ex back.

A guy will hope that cutting off communication will do the trick, but it just doesn't work on most women.

You've got to actively make her feel something for you again and when you do that, she starts to change her thinking and behavior.

She goes back to looking at you as a potential boyfriend again, or at least wants to hook up with you one last time sexually to see how she feels.

Here's another mistake the makes the ex back process harder than it actually is!

2. Trying to text her back

Texting an ex girlfriend when she refuses to talk to you over the phone or see you in person, is a good way to break the ice and get her to open up to you a little bit.

Yet, itâ€™s not the main platform to use to apologize to her and ask her for another chance.

Apologies need to be done over the phone, or preferably face-to-face where a woman can hear the tone of your voice, or observe your body language and see that youâ€™re being sincere.

As for getting another chance with her, itâ€™s not something you actually need to ask her.

Instead, you need to make her feel so much respect and attraction for you again that giving you another chance is something she wants because it feels good to her.

Getting back with you becomes her desire, her need and her want.

She wants you back for her own reasons, rather than to help you feel good about yourself again,

So, donâ€™t hide behind texts in the hopes that your ex girlfriend will suddenly say something like, â€œI miss you so much! Letâ€™s do this. Iâ€™m ready to be your girl again.â€

Some women do respond well to the texting ex back approach, but most don't.

In most cases, a woman will just get annoyed and bored of receiving endless messages from her ex boyfriend and she will stop responding to him altogether.

Alternatively, she will text back and forth for a while and in the meantime, focus her energy on meeting new guys, having sex and falling in love with someone new.

She will then either stop replying to her ex's texts or she will text him something like, “Sorry, but I've met someone else. Please stop texting me. Thank you for respecting that.”

Her ex is then left feeling devastated that, after all his effort texting back and forth with her, she has gone and had sex with a new guy and moved on.

So, make sure that you donâ€™t try to get your ex girlfriend back purely by texting her.

Texting your ex after breaking up should only ever be used as a stepping stone to getting her to talk to you on the phone and in person.

On a phone call, itâ€™s a lot easier to re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her smile and laugh) and getting her to agree to see you in person.

When she meets up with you and realizes that youâ€™re no longer the same guy she broke up with (e.g. youâ€™re more confident and emotionally strong now, you have a clear purpose and direction in life, youâ€™re more ballsy and can stand up to her) she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling attracted to you again.

You can then kiss her, have sex with her and get the relationship back together.

That's what works.

Something else that makes the ex back process more difficult than it actually isâ€

3. Asking for another chance before reactivating her feelings

If a guy asks his ex girlfriend for another chance before he fully reactivates her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for him, she will usually push him away and say things like, â€œNo, Iâ€™m just not interested in you anymore,â€ or â€œYou need to accept that weâ€™re never going to get *back together again and move on.*â€œ

Why?

He has feelings for her, but she doesn't have feelings for him.

For a relationship to get back together, there needs to be mutual feelings.

It doesn't have to be exactly mutual, but she needs to have some feelings for you (e.g. she is 60% into the idea of getting back with you).

If you try to get her back when she's at 0% or 30%, then you're going to be making the ex back process more difficult than it needs to be.

She's going to be saying, "Noâ€œI'm not interested. Please respect that and leave me alone."

So, if you want another chance with your ex, you need to reactivate her feelings for you first.

For example: Some of the things you can do that will reactivate your ex girlfriend's feelings of respect and attraction for you are:

- Understand her true reasons for breaking up with you (e.g. you were needy and insecure in the relationship, you were too timid and allowed her to dominate you, you stopped making her feel girly and feminine in your) and then quickly begin fixing those things about yourself, so that when you interact with her (e.g. on a phone call, or in person) she will sense that you've changed.
- Make her smile and laugh when she interacts with you, rather than getting into arguments, debates or getting dragged into her drama.
- Make her feel feminine and girly in your presence (e.g. she feels like a girl in comparison to how masculine you think, talk, feel), so that she will want to interact with you more, rather than just making her feel like a neutral friend.
- Get to the point where you feel happy and fulfilled in your life with or without her (e.g. focus on your big dreams and goals, have fun going out with friends), so that you're not emotionally dependent on her to make you feel good about yourself.

You don't have to be perfect to re-attract your ex girlfriend.

Instead, you just need to be at a different level from where you were when she broke up with you.

Then, when you interact with her again and she sees that you're a new man, her walls will come down.

Even if initially she tries to stop herself from reconnecting with her positive feelings for you, she won't be able to resist the new you for long.

All it usually takes is a spark and most women will begin to open back up to communicating and seeing you in person, where you can then guide her through the rest of the rapid ex back process.

So, if you're still wondering, â€œShould I give up on my ex girlfriend?â€œ the answer is *â€œNo.*â€œ

If you want her back, just start showing her that you are now the man she always wanted you to be (e.g. confident, charismatic, emotionally strong, emotionally mature) and get her back into your arms where she belongs.

Don't tell her that you've changed.

Show her.

An ex girlfriend doesn't want you to try to explain all the things you've learned and changed.

She just wants you to change, interact with her and make her feel differently (i.e. respectful of you, attracted, in love) around you from now on.

If you can do that, you won't have to give up on her because she will be your girlfriend again and the relationship will be better than it was before.

You can do that.

You are capable of learning, changing and being a better, more attractive man to her from now on.

If you do that, her feelings for you will automatically change.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

	WATCH VIDEO (FREE)
----------------------	--------------------

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

She Broke My Heart, But I Still Love Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you want her back, here are the 5 steps to follow!

1. Make Your Heart Unbreakable By Becoming Emotionally Independent First

Right now, the idea of getting over your broken heart and living a happy, productive and independent life without your ex might seem impossible.

When in your situation, a guys may think something like, “Being with her was the only thing that made me happy. Without her in my life I feel hopeless. There’s no point in doing anything anymore. I just want to be with her. I never thought she’d break my heart and leave me like this. I still love her, but I don’t know what to do to get her back. I’m stuck.”

If you can relate to that, you need to make a change.

Feeling like you need her back to feel whole again, or to give your life purpose and meaning is going to ruin your chances of getting her back.

[image: Please give me another chance. I need you in my life]

If she interacts with you and senses that you need her back to feel better about yourself again, she will close up and feel turned off by your neediness.

So, if you want her back, you first have to become emotionally independent and accept that it’s possible for you to live a happy and fulfilled life without her.

How can you do that?

By seeing your purpose in life (i.e. your biggest goals, dreams and ambitions) the most important thing to you, rather than looking at her for your sense of identity or purpose in this world.

It’s okay to make a woman the most important person in your life, but not the most important thing.

She won’t want to hear that she is the most important person to you until you reactivate her feelings for you and make her want you back.

Watch this!

When you have re-attracted her and are back in a relationship again, she will then feel good about being the most important person to you because she will be starting to feel the same way about you too.

So, if you want to get her back, make sure that you’re not going into the new relationship relying on her to give you a sense of identity and purpose in life.

You need to become emotionally independent because if you do, you will become attractive to her again.

You will automatically be more confident, have higher self-esteem and will be a man of purpose that she can look up to and feel proud to be associated with.

When you interact with her (e.g. on a phone call, or in person) and she realizes that you’re getting on with your life without her and are content and happy without her, she will begin to wonder, â€œDid I make the right decision to break up with him? Should I give him another chance? Heâ€™s definitely not the same insecure, self-doubting guy that I broke up with. He is more confident, self-assured and emotionally masculine now. I think I made a mistake breaking up with him. I wonder if he will forgive me for breaking his heart and allow us to start fresh in a new relationship together?â€

Nextâ€

2. Understand What Type of Attraction Experience She Really Wanted From You

Women rarely admit the subtle reasons why they dump a guy.

For example:

[image: Understand exactly how you turned her off]

- He doesn't stand up to her and put her back in her place in a loving, but assertive manner. Instead, he puts up with her bad behavior, which makes her feel unsafe about his ability to handle other challenging people in life (e.g. at work, friends, family).
- He doesn't get along well with most of her friends and family because he's too shy, is very opinionated or rude, is anti-social or thinks negatively of most people he meets.
- He has stopped being the confident guy she first met and has become very insecure and emotionally sensitive.
- He has stopped being a masculine guy and often copies her way of being (e.g. gossiping like a girl would, being emotional like a girl, giggling like a girl with her, being too cute to the point where he ends up acting like a boy not a man).
- She feels stronger than him emotionally, so it feels weird to submit to him sexually. She's submitting to a force that is less powerful than her.
- He hasn't reached her level of social intelligence yet (i.e. she is more mature, more experienced and more aware of social psychology than he is), so he ends up coming across as uncool or awkward in social situations.
- She fell in love with him at the start because he didn't need her and it was fun to chase him, but he ended up changing completely and becoming a needy, clingy boyfriend (or husband).

So, if you want to get her back for real, you've got to change the things that really matter to her.

Changing things that she doesn't care about (e.g. adding a bit more muscle by working out that gym, being even nicer to her, buying her a gift) isn't going to work if that isn't what she felt turned off by about you.

On that note, buying an ex woman a gift never works to get her back.

I've personally worked on 100s of ex back cases and in the cases where a guy has bought his ex woman a gift, paid her rent or bought her a ring, it has never worked.

What works is to actively make her feel attracted to you again.

If she's going to give you another chance, she will be getting into a relationship with you, not with a gift.

It's about how you make her feel when you interact with her on a phone call and in person.

That is what counts, so focus on that.

Nextâ€¦!

3. Get Clear On Why You Forgive Her For Breaking Your Heart

As painful as it might feel, you need to ask yourself, â€œDo I honestly still love my ex and feel that there is a real future for us together, or do I only want her back because I'm lonely without her? Do I want her back because I worry that I won't be able to find another woman as good as her, or can I easily attract new, quality women whenever I want?â€

If you honestly believe that sheâ€™s the one for you and that you and her can build a happy and lasting future together, then itâ€™s very important that you:

- Fully forgive her for breaking your heart.
- Make some attractive changes and adjustments to the way you think, act and behave, so that when you interact with her from now on, youâ€™re giving her the attraction experience she really wants (e.g. if you were insecure, you are now truly confident and emotionally strong).
- Forget about the past and move forward together with a clean slate (i.e. if you get into an argument with her, donâ€™t bring up how she hurt you in the past).
- Focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you when you interact with her from now on (e.g. via text or e-mail, on social media, on a phone call, or in person).

On the other hand, if you only want your ex back because youâ€™re afraid you wonâ€™t be able to get another, better woman than her, but in your heart you know sheâ€™s not a woman of good character (e.g. she's disloyal, enjoys lying), chances are high that if you take her back, she will likely just break your heart again (e.g. by treating you badly, cheating on you with another guy).

If you can't easily attract new women, watch this videoâ€¦!

If you can easily attract new women, but want her back because you believe she is the right woman for you, then read onâ€¦!

4. Interact With Her and Reactivate Her Original Feelings For You

To get your ex back, you have to be active about it, rather than being inactive.

Instead of waiting around and hoping that sheâ€™ll call and say something like, â€œIâ€™m so sorry for the way I treated you. You deserved so much better than that. Can you ever forgive me for hurting you like that? Would you ever be able to give me another chance? I love you, miss you and want you backâ€ youâ€™re actively interacting with her every chance you get (e.g. via text, on social media, over the phone, or meeting up with her in person) and making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

How can you do that?

By focusing on saying and doing the types of things that will make her laugh and smile and make her think, *â€œHeâ€™s so confident and emotionally strong and mature now. I feel great when Iâ€™m around him. I wonder if he can forgive me so that we can work things out between us.*â€œ

Remember: You need to show her (via the way you think, talk, behave and interact with her) that you really have changed.

You can tell her that you've changed and expect her to believe it.

Women don't believe it when a guy says he has changed.

Women believe it when they can see (based on how you now think, talk, feel, behave, act) that you really have changed and transformed into a better man.

If you want to get her back, you have to focus on allowing her to experience the new and improved you.

Part of doing that is not discussing your feelings to her and explaining how she broke your heart.

You want to show her that, even though you were clearly hurt when she broke up with you, it's not something that is affecting you now.

Now, you are emotionally strong and emotionally independent and don't need her love and acceptance to feel worthy and to have a sense of identity and meaning in this life.

You are your own man now.

That's what she wants to see.

That is what will impress her and make her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys aren't aware of this, so they make the classic mistake of seeking pity from their ex woman for their broken heart.

For example: Sometimes, a guy will hope that if he can make his ex woman feel enough pity for him, she will feel guilty about what she did to him and come running back.

He might say something like, *â€œYou broke my heart, you know? I wasn't able to eat or sleep properly for months. I was destroyed and you didn't even care. You just started getting on with your life without me, as though our relationship and love didn't even mean anything to you. How could you do that? Didn't I mean anything to you? I still feel hurt about what you did. I don't think I will ever properly recover from it. I've always loved you more than life itself. You mean everything to me, but clearly you don't feel the same way about me.*â€œ

It seems like it might work, but it doesn't.

A woman wants to be with a man because it feels right (i.e. she respects him, looks up to him, feels sexually attracted to him and loves him), not because sheâ€™s doing him a favor or feeling guilty for breaking his heart.

At the end of the day, she is an individual and isn't obligated to take care of your feelings or give you another chance.

She will only care about you and want to be back with you if you make her have feelings for you again.

It has to be about her getting what she wants, not you getting what you want so you can feel better about yourself again.

So, a better way to talk about what happened is to simply say something like, “Yeah, it sucked when we broke up, but I quickly accepted it. I love you, but you and I are broken up and I accept that. Now I’m fine to just see you as a friend and nothing else.”

Alternatively, a great way to spark her feelings of attraction for you is by using humor to make her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you.

For example: You might say something like, “Yeah, that sucked when we broke up, but I forgot about it the next day and within a few days I couldn’t even remember your name. Who are you again?” and have a laugh with her about that.

Alternatively, you can say, “Yeah, I was a bit upset when we broke up, but when I realized it meant that I didn’t have to eat your cooking anymore, I was so happy. You’re a very pretty girl, but you’re a horrible cook” and have a laugh with her about that.

Of course, you can then say, “I was just kidding. I loved your cooking” and add in, “So, when are you going to come over and cook me some dinner? I’ll have some wine here and you can cook me up your special lasagna” or something like that.

Making light of what happened shows her that you’re emotionally stronger now and have the balls to joke around with her, rather than being on your best behavior and being super nice, or being needy and talking about your painful feelings all the time.

When you show her that you’ve changed and are no longer stuck at the same level you were at when she broke up with you, she won’t be able to stop feeling drawn to you again.

Finally!

5. Get the Relationship Back Together, or at Least Get Back Into Each Other’s Life as Friends For Now

Sometimes a woman might not want to get back together right away and will say something like, “I’m not sure if it’s a good idea. Things turned out pretty badly for us the last time. I broke your heart. What if you can’t honestly forgive me for hurting you? Will you end up holding it against me every time we disagree or get into an argument? I don’t know if I want to risk that. I don’t want you seeking emotional revenge on me for hurting you.”

So, if she has her guard up for any reason and isn’t open to having a relationship with you at this point, just aim to be friends for now.

For example: You might say to her, “Okay, I accept how you feel. Let’s not try to have a relationship right now. We can still be friends though. There’s nothing wrong with that. We can catch up for a coffee and say hi as friends. Then, if we both decide that we can fully get over what happened between us in the past, we can give the relationship a real try. If not, we will go our separate ways and I won’t contact you anymore. In the meantime, we can just be friends only and take it from there. Let’s meet up for a coffee sometime this week.”

Most of the time, a woman will usually say something like, “I suppose we can be friends,” or “Okay, I guess we can do that.”

However, don’t make the mistake of thinking that being her friend means you have to be a good little boy around her and that youâ€¢re not allowed to flirt with her or make her feel sexually attracted to you.

Where a lot of guys go wrong when they get the chance to stay friends with their ex, is to actually act like just a friend.

They donâ€¢t use the opportunity to re-spark her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction and end up being a nice, sweet, platonic friend in the hopes that one day she will realize what a great guy he really is for hanging in there.

Yet, that rarely only happens when a woman is secretly still in love with her ex and wants him back.

In a case where a woman doesnâ€¢t feel a lot of respect, attraction and love for a guy (i.e. because heâ€¢s not doing anything to actively spark her feelings for him), itâ€¢s unlikely that sheâ€¢s going to be the one who turns a comfortable friendship into a romantic relationship.

Instead, she will enjoy depending on him when she needs something (e.g. to borrow some money from him, to ask him to housesit for her, a shoulder to cry on when sheâ€¢s feeling blue, run errands for her), but chances are high that sheâ€¢ll be going out with other guys behind his back.

Then, one day, she will say, â€¢Iâ€¢m with someone else now and he doesnâ€¢t want me to hang out with you anymore. So, Iâ€¢m sorry, but Iâ€¢m going to have to break off our friendship,â€¢ leaving him saying, â€¢I donâ€¢t believe it! She broke my heart again! I still love her. I still want her back, but she doesnâ€™t care. I was so good to her. I was such a great friend. I supported her and now she does this to me?â€¢

Donâ€¢t let that happen to you.

The point of staying friends with your ex is for you to reactivate her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you and to go back to being in a sexual, romantic relationship with her.

So, stop worrying about the past and how she broke your heart and start focusing on a positive future with her where the love, attraction, respect and trust between you and her is stronger than ever before.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

My Ex Doesn't Know What She Wants

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why your ex doesn't know what she wants are that!

1. She Isn't Attracted to You Anymore, But Can't Work Out How to Leave You Without Feeling the Pain of a Break Up

If a woman is inexperienced with relationships and this is her first serious relationship, she may not know how to handle the pain of losing her man.

She will think something like, "I know that he doesn't make me feel the way I want to feel when I'm with him, but when we are apart it still hurts to be broken up. I hate waking up alone and knowing that I don't have a guy to go watch a movie with, or a guy who will call me up and tell me how much he cares for me. I feel so empty and alone now. I just don't know what I want. On the one hand, I know it's better to stay broken up with my ex because he's just not giving me what I want in a relationship, but on the other hand I don't know how to handle this pain. I don't know what to do. Maybe I should string him along until I find a replacement guy."

Alternatively, she may think something like, "I'll just stay in touch with my ex and see if things change between us. Maybe he will improve and we can get back together again. In the meantime though, I should look for a replacement guy, so I don't have to be the one who is alone after we really break up."

So, if your ex is saying, "I'm confused. I don't know what I want," it will be because you haven't been making her feel the way that she really wants to feel in a relationship (e.g. respectful, attracted, like a feminine woman).

However, you can change how she feels by making some adjustments to the way you think, talk, behave and interact with her from this point onwards.

Watch this!

When you change the way you interact with her in a way that makes her feel respect and attraction for you again, her feelings will automatically change.

She suddenly starts to think, "I feel different all of a sudden. I'm now worried about losing him to another woman. I'd better stop saying that I don't know what I want and get back with him as quickly as possible, before he gets tired of me and finds another woman."

Then, getting her back becomes easy and effortless and you and her get into a new, improved relationship that feels way better for her than it ever did before.

However, if you remain unaware of the things that turn her off about you (e.g. she feels more dominant than you, she can't look up to you and respect you as her man, you aren't confident enough around other guys or her friends), she will just keep saying things like, "I still don't know what I want. I guess I'm just not that into you anymore. Maybe we should just stick to being friends from now on. I don't know. Just give me time to think about this. Maybe we can get back together in future, but not now."

She then tries to find a replacement guy, so she can then say, "Sorry, but I have a new boyfriend now. I'm happy with him, so please leave me alone."

Another reason why your ex doesn't know what she wants is

2. She Thought That She Wanted to Settle Down, But Now She Just Wants to Be Single

[image: She thought she wanted to settle down, but now just wants to be single]

Initially, a woman might get into a relationship with a guy with the intention of settling down.

If the sex is great, the dates are fun and she gets along with her man very well, it's only natural that she will dream about being with him for life.

Yet, that dream will only last if the guy is able to build on her feelings of respect, attraction and love over time.

Watch this

Most couples just don't get to the stage of blissful love because the guy becomes insecure, takes his woman for granted and doesn't even know how to deepen her feelings over time.

So, if a woman breaks up with a guy and feels better on her own, she might then decide that she prefers being single.

Then, if her ex attempts to get back together with her, she will say something like, I don't know what I want. I'm not sure if I want to be in a relationship with you, or anyone else right now.

For example: Some of the things she may be thinking are

- I thought I wanted to settle down, but then our relationship got into a rut. It felt boring and routine. It made me realize that settling down and being a couple isn't as much fun as I thought it would be.*
- He hasn't been giving me the type of sexual experience I had hoped for, so the idea of being single and having sex with other guys feels exciting to me again. I hope that I can meet a man who actually knows how to maintain and build on my attraction and love for him.*
- He took me for granted and expected me to just stick around and put up with his bad behavior towards me, just because in the beginning we said we would be together forever.*
- He stopped being the guy that I fell in love with in the beginning. He used to be confident and self-assured and now he is insecure, needy and clingy.*
- I just realized that I'm too young to settle down. I actually feel quite jealous when I hear what all my single friends have been up to while I was stuck in a relationship.*

Here's the thing

If a woman is happy in her relationship with her man, nothing that her single friends get up to would be able to make her feel jealous or dissatisfied.

I know that because I'm happily married and my wife actually feels sorry for her single girlfriends because they're not experiencing what she is with me.

Most of her single girlfriends enjoy their single life, but they really do want to have a man that they can stick with.

They know that they can't get to other levels in life (i.e. getting engaged, married, having children, being a grandmother), if they are sleeping around with new guys all the time.

My wife loves being married and is so happy and I feel the same way.

Personally speaking, I really enjoyed my single life before I met her, but being with her is so much better.

Being in a relationship with mutual respect, attraction and love is amazing.

You don't want to be single again because what you have together is way better than anything you've experienced with anyone else before.

It's real love.

So, if you can give your ex that kind of relationship experience, she won't want to be single and will simply want to be with you.

Here's the thingâ€¦!

Relationships usually start out pretty well, but it's what happens after the initial excitement of being with someone new that counts (i.e. after 2-3 years).

Just because things felt great at the beginning of your relationship and even though she might have said things like, â€œI want us to be together forever,â€ it doesn't mean that she has to stick with that statement if you are unable to keep the spark alive and not ruin her feelings by becoming insecure, taking her for granted and so on.

So, if she's feeling more drawn to the single life than to you at the moment, you need to show her that being with you will be so much better.

How can you do that?

By actively sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you again every time you interact with her on a phone call or in person (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, making her feel feminine and girly in your presence, showing her that you're a new man).

When she feels more attracted to you than she ever has before (i.e. because you are now making her feel attracted in new and exciting ways), she will quickly change her mind about being single and want to be with you again.

Another possible reason why your ex doesn't know what she wants isâ€¦!

3. She is Being Influenced By Her Single Girlfriends

[image: She is being influenced by her single girlfriends]

Sometimes, when a woman starts dating a guy, she might become a bit neglectful of her single girlfriends and they will then start resenting her guy.

Alternatively, if a woman's friends notice that she is unhappy in her relationship with the guy, they will usually blame him and take her side.

So, when she breaks up with him, her friends might try to prevent her from getting back together with him by saying things like, â€œWhy do you want to get back with that guy? He's no good for you. Look how much fun we've had together since you broke up with him. Isn't this better than being in a boring or unhappy relationship with him? Think of everything you missed out on by being with him,â€ or â€œHe's not good for you. He made you unhappy and he even tried to stop you from seeing your friends. What kind of guy does that? He's insecure and controlling. You deserve better than him. Why get back with him when we're all having so much fun together? Besides, there are so many good guys out there that you can choose from. Find a new guy. It will be fun.â€œ

Itâ€™s only natural that she may then think, â€œHmmmâ€ my friends have a point. I wasnâ€™t really happy in my relationship. Maybe being single is better. Maybe I can meet another guy who make me feel the way I want to feel. Right now, hanging out with my single friends and having fun sounds good, but at the same time I do still miss my ex sometimes. I donâ€™t know what I want.”

If she spends a lot of time with her single girlfriends, they will try hard to get her to hook up with new guys, so she can move on without you.

So, don’t waste time ignoring her and hoping that she comes back on her own.

Watch thisâ€œ

If you want to get your ex back, you have to show her (via the way you talk, think, act, behave and interact with her) that being with you is a lot more fun, enjoyable and attractive to her than hanging out with her single friends.

Then, what her friends say about you and the single life wonâ€™t really matter to her, because she will be thinking, â€œIt feels so good to be back with him. I feel happy when Iâ€™m with him and sad when weâ€™re apart. I know what I want now. I want him!â€œ

Another possible reason why your is saying that she doesn’t know what she wants isâ€œ

4. She Likes Another Guy and Isn’t Sure How to Tell You

In some cases, a woman might already have found herself a replacement guy, but is too afraid to tell her ex about it in case her reacts badly (e.g. he gets angry and possibly tries to hurt her, threatens or gets into a fight with the other guy, or becomes emotional and starts begging and pleading with her to change her mind).

So, rather than risk getting into a difficult situation, she will say something along the lines of, â€œIâ€™m really confused right now. I donâ€™t know what I want. Just give me some space to sort things out in my mind and then we can see what happens.â€œ Secretly, she may be hoping that heâ€™ll make one of the classic mistakes that guys make and give her 30 to 60 days of space, which will be enough time for her to move on and hook up with the guy she likes.

Then, when her ex contacts her, she can let him down easily by saying something like, â€œIâ€™m sorry. You just took too long to contact me. I havenâ€™t heard from you in 30 (or 60) days. I thought youâ€™d moved on, so I gave up on us getting back together again. Iâ€™m with another guy now and Iâ€™m happy. Itâ€™s too late for you and me. Please respect my new relationship by staying out of my life. We aren’t getting back together. Goodbye.”

Another possible reasonâ€œ

5. You Don’t Give Her Any Space to Miss You

Sometimes, a guy wants an ex woman back so badly that he might say to himself, â€œI need to strike while the iron is hot and she still has some feelings for me. I canâ€™t give her a chance to get over me and find another guy. So, Iâ€™m just going to keep texting her, calling her and seeing her in person to make sure that I stay on her mind. Eventually, she will see that Iâ€™m not going to give up on our love. She will realize that my feelings for her are true and then she will want to give me another chance.â€œ

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

Just because a guy is able to remain in constant contact with his ex, it doesnâ€™t mean that her feelings of respect and attraction for him are being re-sparked.

In fact, if all heâ€™s doing is bombarding her with texts, e-mails and phone call, without actually doing anything else to actively trigger her feelings for him, she's not going to feel very motivated to get back with him.

Rather than make her think, â€œOh okay, I see now that my ex must really care about me if heâ€™s being so persistent. I guess we should get back together then,â€œ she will be thinking, â€œWhy is he smothering me like this? Does he honestly believe that if he keeps hounding me in this way Iâ€™m going to make up my mind about him? The only thing his constant contact is doing is making me feel annoyed and like I would be better off without him. I need space from him so I can figure out what I want.â€œ

So, if you want your ex to get back with you, you need to give her a chance to miss you.

That way, she can start thinking, â€œI havenâ€™t heard from my ex for a while. Why isnâ€™t he calling me? Could he have hooked up with another woman? That doesnâ€™t feel good to me. I want him back. I don't want some other woman taking him from me.â€œ

The best approach is to give her 3 to 7 days of space (anything longer than 7 days is a waste of time and can actually cause her to move on) and then get her on a phone call where you can arrange a meet up.

At the meet up, focus on making her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her smile and laugh, showing her that youâ€™ve changed) so that she drops her guard and opens back up to the idea of getting back together again.

3 Mistakes to Avoid if You Want Her to Make Up Her Mind and Get Back With You

Itâ€™s only natural that when a woman is saying, â€œI donâ€™t know what I want,â€œ a guy might feel frustrated and want to convince her to give him another chance right now.

Yet, sometimes the convincing can actually backfire and may even cause the woman to decide that she doesnâ€™t want to be with him after all.

So, if you want to get your ex back, try to avoid making these classic mistakes that other guys makeâ€¦

1. Pleading with her

A common reaction that many guys have is to plead and beg with an ex for a second chance.

For example: A guy might say to her, â€œPlease baby, donâ€™t give up on us! I know I messed up, but I can fix this. Just give me one more chance. I promise this time things will be different between us. I know I can make you happy.â€œ

Yet, begging and pleading simply turns a woman off even more and makes her feel like she's making the right decision to break up with you.

Why?

Women are not attracted to the emotional weakness in men (e.g. a lack of self confidence, desperation, inability to handle what life throws at him).

So, when a guy begs and pleads with a woman for her to give him another chance, rather than making her think, “Okay, let’s give it another shot,” she will be thinking something like, “Doesn’t he know that women are not attracted to emotionally weak and wimpy guys? When he behaves in this way, it just turns me off even more. I need a man who can be emotionally strong and confident and can cope with his problems without falling apart like this. He’s clearly not a man yet and has some growing up to do. I am not waiting around for him to grow up. I need a real man now, not in 5 or 10 years time.”

It doesn’t matter if the man is 20, 30, 40 or 50 – the woman is still going to see him as needing to grow up.

He can have a great job, have paid of a house and drive a nice car, but that doesn’t make him what women refer to as a real man.

The most important quality of a real man is emotional strength.

Women want to be with a man who is emotionally stronger than themselves, not a guy that they need to take care of and be gentle with.

So, don’t waste time pleading with your ex to take you back.

Instead, a better way to react when she’s saying, “I don’t know what I want,” is by accepting her indecision in a confident way without making a big fuss about it.

Then, focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you, by displaying some of the traits and behaviors that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, charisma, maturity, determination, emotional masculinity) from now on.

You can do that via text, on the phone and in person, but in person is preferred because she can get a full sense of who you are now by looking at your body language, listening to your tonality and watching how you react to her.

If you quickly transformed into more of a real man, she will want to give the relationship another chance.

Another classic mistake than many guys make isâ€¦!

2. Asking her to tell him what he needs to change

A guy might say, “Just tell me what you want me to do and I’ll do it.”

Yet, she doesn’t want to take on that responsibility for his development as a man.

She wants him to get help from other men in his life (e.g. a dad, grandfather, brother, uncle, friend, coworker) or seek professional help (e.g. learn from me), but not tell her that he’s seeking help.

She just wants him to figure out how to be the kind of man that she wants and then start doing that.

She doesn’t want to hear about his struggles and how he’s trying to learn how to be a better man.

She just wants him to be a better, more attractive man now, so she can give him another chance.

Another classic mistake that many guys make isâ€¦!

3. Telling her how much he cares, rather than making her care by reactivating her feelings

He might then say to her, “I know that you are confused right now, but just think about what we had together. Our love was truly special. You know I still care about you. Yes, I stuffed up, but I won’t make the same mistakes again. I promise you. Just give me one more chance to show you that we were meant to be together. You mean everything to me and I don’t care about anything else besides getting you back.”

Here’s the thing though!

A woman doesn’t care how much a guy still cares for her if she doesn’t have feelings for him anymore.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don’t waste your time telling her how much you still care for her, unless you make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you first.

If she’s not feeling enough respect and attraction for you right now, knowing that you still have feelings for her just isn’t going to matter to her.

On the other hand, when you re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you, she won’t be able to stop herself from letting her guard down and giving you another chance because it will feel good to her to do so.

She will stop saying, “I don’t know what I want,” and will instead say something like, “I’ve made up my mind. Let’s give our relationship another chance. You’re the one that I want and I can’t imagine life without you.”

She will know what she wants (i.e. you) when you actively make her have feelings for you again.

If you wait around and hope that she figures herself out, you will be disappointed.

Most guys lose their woman by waiting and hoping that she comes running back.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Make Your Ex Want to Start From the Beginning Again

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 ways to make your ex want to start from the beginning again...

1. Show Her That You Can Now Make Her Feel Attracted in the Ways She Secretly Cares About

Quite often, when a guy gets broken up with, his first reaction is to rush off and make his ex a bunch of promises about changing certain things about himself that he assumes she wants him to change, but that secretly don't really matter to her.

For example: A guy might say to his ex, I'm so sorry for everything I've done to cause you pain. I know I wasn't the boyfriend/fiancé/husband you deserved and I promise you that if you give me another chance, things will be different this time. I'm going to make sure that I give you all the love and attention you deserve. I'm going to treat you like the queen you are to me. Whatever it is that you want, I will do it for you. Please baby, just give me a chance to show you that I'm a changed man.

Yet, if what caused his ex to break up with him was his insecure, needy, clingy behavior, then she's not going to want him to become even more attentive towards her.

So, rather than make her think, It looks like my ex is taking our break up seriously and he's promising to change. I broke up with him because he was too clingy and needy, but seeing as he is going to be even more clingy and he's prepared to smother me with his undivided attention, I think we should get back together again, she will be thinking, He doesn't have a clue why we really broke up, so he's offering me things that I don't care about. He just doesn't get it.

In cases like that, she wants the man to relax and believe in his attractiveness to her no matter what she says or does.

She wants to see that he is confident and he confidently and calmly believes in himself without her supportive words, reassurance or encouragement.

If he can exude that type of confidence, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for him again and start to believe that he really has changed and is no longer the insecure, needy guy he was.

[image: Offering her the wrong things while attempting to get her back]

So, make sure that you're not trying to get your ex back by offering her things that she secretly doesn't care about or feels turned off by.

If you try to get her back without changing the things that she really wants, she will just keep saying things like, No. I don't want to start from the beginning again. Just accept that it's over between us. Please leave me alone. It's over.

Remember: Everyone makes relationship mistakes sometimes, not just you.

What you've been through is perfectly normal and pretty much everyone goes through it at some point in their life (or many times if they don't learn and improve).

The mistakes you made with her don't mean that you're a bad, unlovable, problematic guy. It simply means there were certain things about your behavior, attitude and thinking that caused your ex to feel like she wasn't getting the attraction experience she really wanted from you, so she ended the relationship.

For example: If a woman broke up with a guy because he was too emotionally dependent on her and made her his reason for living, to get her back, he can't offer to be even more attentive towards her. Instead, he needs to show her that he's now emotionally independent and even though he wants her back, he doesn't need her back to feel happy and fulfilled in his life.

He has gotten clear on his big goals and ambitions in life and has started to make progress.

When she can see for herself that he's no longer the same guy she broke up with and has become a more balanced man, she will begin to feel respect and attraction for him again and then the idea of starting from the beginning again will actually sound good to her.

Another example is if a woman broke up with a guy because he wasn't emotionally open enough for her.

She felt like he was always closed off to her and that she couldn't connect with him at a deep level.

Naturally, if he wants to get her back, he cannot promise to take her on an expensive holiday, or buy her expensive gifts because that's not what she cares about.

Instead he needs to show her that he is now a masculine man who can tell a woman that he loves her in a fearless way, without becoming needy and talking about his feelings all the time like a woman.

That last point is very important.

If a woman breaks up with you because you didn't open up emotionally, make sure that you don't go overboard and start talking about your feelings 24/7.

Just remain being the cool, confident guy that you are and also add in some emotional openness.

Women hate it when a man turns into a woman and starts talking about his feelings all the time, being emotionally sensitive and losing track of his manhood in a desperate attempt to save his relationship with her.

A woman wants you to relax, remain confident in your attractiveness to her and just be fearless in your expression of love and emotion, while not acting like a woman or a desperate guy.

So, if you want to make your ex want to start from the beginning again, focus on changing the way you interact and communicate with her from now on in ways that she truly cares about.

When you start giving her the attraction experience that she wanted from you all along, a woman naturally begins to feel more respect and attraction for you and her guard comes down.

She then begins to ask herself, â€œMaybe it is possible to start from the beginning again. Maybe we can make this work after all.â€œ

2. Don't Ask For a Relationship Right Away

If you're interacting with your ex (e.g. via text, e-mail, on social media, on the phone, or even in person), it might be very tempting for you to want to push her into agreeing to give your relationship another chance, especially if sheâs saying things like, âI miss you.â

However, although you might be tempted to say something like, âI miss you too. Letâs go on a date and see what happens,â or, “I love you more than anything. What can I do to change your mind and give us one more chance? Please baby. Just give me another chance.”

Yet, if you push her to get back into a relationship with you before sheâs ready, she may close herself off from you and pull away.

Hereâs the thingâ

If a woman doesnât feel ready to commit to the idea of being in a relationship again, suggesting that you and her get together for a “date,” rather than a “meet up” or “catch up” or “coffee to say hi” will likely just scare her away.

She may begin thinking, âHeâs asking me out on a date, so he will be trying to pressure me into getting back together again. Iâm not ready for that. I donât know how I feel right now. Iâm scared.â

Donât put that kind of pressure on her.

Instead, just agree to catch up and say hi and then see how you both feel for one more week.

If she decides that she doesnât want to continue, tell her that you will accept that, but to give the catch up a go and then see how things go for one more week.

For example: You might say to her, âLetâs meet up for some coffee and have a chat as friends It doesnât mean that weâre going to get back together again. We will just catch up and say hi and then see how we feel for one more week. After a week, if you say that you donât want to ever see me again, I promise I will leave you alone.â

If she can sense that you are sincere, a woman will usually then say something like, âOh, okay. I suppose we can do thatâ or âAs long as you donât pressure me to get back together again.â

Then, make plans to meet up with her right away at a time that suits you both.

At the meet up, donât get all serious on her and start saying things like, âI really miss you. I canât forget what we had together. Letâs start from the beginning again. You and I belong together,â because if you havenât yet fully reactivated her feelings of respect and attraction, you may scare her off.

Remember: If you donât reactivate youâre exâs feelings of respect and attraction for you first and you push her to get back together, she may say something like, âI may not be fully over you, but that doesnât mean I want to be in a relationship right now. You let me down and I donât know if I can forgive you for that yet.â

So, make sure that when you meet up with her, rather than try to convince your ex to want to start from the beginning again, you focus instead on re-sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again.

When you do that, getting her back and keeping her in a relationship will be very easy for you.

3. Don't Behave Like a Platonic Friend

Taking things slow with your ex is one thing, but where some guys go wrong is by falling into the Friend Zone with their ex.

For example: A guy might say to himself, If I'm going to make my ex want to start from the beginning again, I will need to be on my best behavior and not do anything that might scare her off. As long as I'm nice to her, she will see that I'm a good guy and will then want to get back together.

He may then use every interaction he has with her as a way of showing her what a nice, helpful, reliable friend he really is.

What he doesn't realize is that being a nice friend to a woman is not going to make her think, What was I thinking when I decided to break up with my ex?! He's such a sweet, dependable guy. I must have been crazy to let him go! Fortunately, I've finally come to my senses. We can now start from the beginning again and this time I'm never going to let him go.

It would be nice if women thought that way about men, but they don't.

Although a woman might appreciate the fact that her ex is being a nice, sweet friend to her, if he's not actively making her feel respect and sexual attraction for him, she's not going to feel motivated to want to get back with him.

Instead, she might just enjoy having a reliable handyman/shoulder to cry on/emergency partner for a party, while continuing on kissing, having sex and falling in love with other guys.

When that happens, her ex might ask, Why did you sleep with another guy? I thought we were on the right track. I did everything I could.

Yet, he didn't.

What he failed to do was focus on making her feel sexual attraction for him again.

He focused on being a Mr. Nice Guy, a helpful ex, a friend to call, rather than actively making her have sexual and romantic feelings for him.

After all, that's the essential difference between a relationship and a friendship between a man and a woman.

If you want your ex back for real, don't act like a platonic, non sexual friend.

Watch this for more info!

By all means, take things slow with your ex if you need to.

Be her friend, but just make sure that you're not a platonic, non sexual friend who just wants to be nice to her and support her.

You need to actively make her feel respect and sexual attraction for you again by using every interaction you have with her to make her smile, laugh and feel excited to be around you.

That's what works to get a woman back.

So, don't pretend that you don't find her sexually attractive anymore and don't avoid making her feel sexually attracted to you.

Show her (via the way you think, act, behave and interact with her) that you're a confident, emotionally masculine man who has the ability to reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

4. Get Her Back

[image: Get her back and get on with your life together]

As the man, itâ€™s up to you to be emotionally strong enough to handle the ex back process and guide her back into a relationship.

You can't rely on the woman to be the strong one and make everything happen for you and her.

If you wait around for her to take the lead, a woman will eventually think, â€œObviously my ex is not going to make a move, so I guess I need to focus on fully getting over him and moving on. Itâ€™s clear that weâ€™re only going to be friends from now on. There's no spark anymore and he's not trying to make it happen, so it's over.â€

When a guy doesn't get another chance with his ex woman, itâ€™s usually because heâ€™s been waiting for her to take the lead and tell him that itâ€™s okay for him to get her back again.

Yet, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

To get your ex back, you need to be a man about it.

You have to take control of the ex back process, rather than expecting her to be the strong one who gets you and her back together.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

7 Tips On How to Get Your Ex to Respond to Your Texts

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your ex is currently not responding to your texts, it means that you have turned her off in some way via text.

Don't worry, you can fix it and get her to start responding to your messages again.

From now on, make sure that youâ€¦

1. Don't Send Her Huge Walls of Text

Many guys send their ex walls of text, telling her all about their feelings.

For example, a guy might text something like:

"I need you to listen and let me explain things to you. You won't answer my calls, so I'm just going to send this via textâ€¦"

[image: Don't send her huge walls of text]

He then unloads a huge text that goes on and on and on about his feelings, the mistakes he made, how sorry he is and how much she means to him.

Yet, rather than make a woman think, "Wow, my ex must really still love me. Look at all the long text messages heâ€¦s sending me telling me all about his feelings. Surely that means we are meant to be together! It's a sign! He's the one! I was wrong to break up with him because I stopped feeling respect, attraction and love for him. How wrong of me. I'm such a bad person. As long as he loves me, what does it matter how I feel? I get it now! Itâ€¦s all about him and his feelings! Yes! How silly of me to think about myself. We need to be together purely based on the fact that he cares about me so muchâ€¦" she will think something like, "Does he really think that I give a damn about how he feels right now? He just doesnâ€¦t get it! I hope he doesnâ€¦t expect me to respond to this huge wall of text."

When a guy uses long texts as a way of communicating his feelings to his ex, it highlights to her that he canâ€¦t handle the situation like a real man.

For example: Rather than apologizing to her once, making some attractive adjustments to his thinking and behavior, re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for him and guiding her back into a relationship, he hides behind walls of texts and hopes that something makes her think, "Wow! Yes, we need to get back together right now!"

Watch this video to understand what you should do if you actually want to get her backâ€¦!

Most guys get stuck at the apology and explanation stage of the ex back process and never end up getting their woman back.

What they don't realize is that when a woman loses respect and attraction for a guy (e.g. because he became very insecure in the relationship) and then breaks up with him, she no longer cares about his feelings and wants to focus on making herself feel good.

So, if you want to get your ex to respond to your texts, make sure that you only text her short messages that will make her smile or laugh.

Focus on making her have feelings, rather than trying to discuss your feelings with her and hope that she takes pity on you or that she reads something in your text and realizes that you are the one.

Your ultimate goal should be to get her on a phone call with you as soon as possible, so you can then re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for and get her to meet up with you in person.

That's what works to get a woman back.

Hiding behind texts or hoping that texts will win her back is a failing strategy and almost always results in the woman moving on with another guy and then blocking her ex's phone number.

Another texting mistake to avoid from now on isâ

2. Don't Ask Her For Another Chance Via Text

Sometimes, a guy might believe that he stands a better chance of getting his ex back, if he explains to her (via text) that he's figured out where he went wrong and then asks her to give him another chance.

He will think something like, "If I explain that I now understand what I did wrong and that I've changed, she will feel understood and then she will be more open to giving me another chance. I have to ask her for another chance. It's my only shot. She will see that I am sincere and then give me another chance."

Yet, it rarely, if ever, works.

Why?

If a woman currently has little or no feelings for her ex, getting a text from him saying something like, "I'm so sorry about what happened. I've really changed. I'm not that guy anymore. Please will you give me another chance? I miss you" is unlikely to make her think, "Now that you've apologized and told me how much you've changed, everything is all better again. Of course I'll give you another chance!"

Instead, because a woman can't see a guy's body language, hear the tonality of his voice, or judge his actions and behavior in person or on a phone call, she only has her past experiences with him to judge him on (e.g. he used to be insecure, clingy, controlling or took her for granted).

Based on that, she'll be thinking something along the lines of, "Does he really think that I'm going to believe he's changed just because he is saying so via text? I've been through this before when we were still together. He would promise me that he'd changed and then always goes back to his old habits later on. Well, this time I'm not falling for it. Besides, he doesn't even have the balls to talk to me face-to-face and instead sends me a text. That's definitely not a sign of a guy who has really changed. He's hiding something."

Why will she be likely to think in that way?

Simple.

Texts don't show how you are truly feeling, so they have to be interpreted by the receiver based on their current perception of you.

If she currently thinks of you in a negative way, she's going to look at your texts in a negative way.

This is why asking your ex for another chance should be done in person and only after you have first reactivated her feelings of respect and attraction for you on a phone call.

3. Don't Be Emotionally Needy Via Text

Being needy is essentially about focusing on your feelings and needing the other person to understand, reassure you, take pity on you, be gentle with you or support you, before you can feel okay about yourself.

Women hate guys who are like that because it makes a woman feel like she's with a boy, rather than a man.

Women love men who are happy, confident and forward moving in life with or without her reassurance, support or attention.

This is why it's important that you don't communicate in a needy way via text.

Unfortunately, many guys don't seek help to get their ex woman back until they've tried everything they think might work (e.g. begging, pleading, explaining their feelings via text), so they waste a lot of time and end up turning her off even more.

For example: Sometimes, when a woman doesn't respond to her ex's texts, he might react by becoming needy and desperate.

He might text her something like, â€œWhy won't you answer me? Can't you see that I'm truly sorry for hurting you? Please just reply. I can't stand your silence. It's driving me crazy! Please baby, don't ignore me. I can't deal with not hearing from you like this.â€

He might also tell her how much he loves her and how he needs her back again because without her, his life is meaningless or not worth living.

Yet, rather than make her think, â€œLook how much he needs me. He's so loving and committed to me. That's what matters. I've been such a bitch to my ex. It doesn't matter that he still hasn't changed. He loves me, which is all that counts. I should get in touch with him and give him another chance,â€ his behavior usually just makes her lose more respect and attraction for him.

Why?

It's a woman's natural instinct to be more attracted to the kind of man who has the emotional strength to cope with the challenges that life throws at him.

So, when a guy is making himself look emotionally weak and needy in her eyes, she feels turned off by him.

Remember: Text her as a way of getting her on a phone call with you, where you can actively spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you by making her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with you again.

Then, get her to meet up with you in person.

That is what works.

4. Use Humor to Get Her Smiling and Laughing

One of the biggest mistakes that guys make is being too serious with their ex via text.

For example: A guy might text his ex as a way of having a serious meaningful conversation with her.

He's hoping that if she notices how serious he is being about getting her back, she will be more willing to talk to him over the phone and even meet up with him in person.

Yet, it usually just makes a woman want to stop texting because it's just not fun.

So, if you want her to respond to you, don't waste time trying to have a serious conversation with her.

Instead, focus on making her smile and laugh, so that she begins to think, "This is interesting. He's funny. I wonder what has gotten into him? Maybe he's learned his lesson and changed. Maybe I should meet up with him and see what happens."

When you use humor and get your ex smiling and laughing, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to hold on to her negative feelings about you.

She starts feeling respect and attraction for you again and her guard comes down, making her more open to the idea of talking to you on the phone.

So, don't be afraid to use a bit of humor to break the ice when you text your ex, especially if she's currently not responding to your texts.

5. Don't Instantly Reply to Everything She Sends

Sometimes, a guy will think something like, "If I don't reply to my ex immediately, she might think that I'm not interested in getting back together again. Even worse, she might decide that I'm being rude to her and she may then stop texting me altogether. I have to reply immediately to show her how much I care and how serious I am about getting her back. I don't want her to get the impression that I'm moving on without her."

He will then try to instantly or very quickly respond to every text he gets from his ex.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that by making himself so available to her, she is likely thinking, "Why is he responding so quickly? Is he just sitting around waiting for me to text him? Doesn't he have a life? When does he sleep, or eat, or go out with friends, or go to work? No matter when I text him, he's always available. That's just weird."

So, even if you're excited that your ex is suddenly texting you back (especially if you've been trying to get her to respond to you for a long time), don't make the classic mistake of instantly replying to every text within seconds or minutes.

For example: If you're at work, out with friends, or busy in some other way, it's perfectly okay to get back to her at a later time.

It's not rude and she's not going to suddenly stop texting you if you get back to her after an hour.

Instead, she will actually start to want to get your reply and will be wondering what you're going to say.

This then makes her think about you and imagine that you might be hanging out with friends, a new girl or doing something so interesting that you don't have time to reply to her.

She then starts to think about you in a positive way and begins to miss you.

However, be warned!

Don't delay your texts for too long.

Just be natural about it (i.e. reply immediately, after 5 minutes, 30 minutes, an hour or even the next day sometimes).

Keep it natural and don't try too hard to seem unavailable.

Some texts are fine to reply immediately or quick to (e.g. when you're chatting), while others can wait (e.g. she asks what you've been up to).

6. Keep Your Texts Short and to the Point

If you're going to get your ex back, it's most-likely not going to happen via text.

I know that because I've personally worked on 100s of ex back cases and what always works is getting the woman on a phone call and then meeting up with her in person.

The guys who struggle to get their ex woman back are those who hide behind text or assume that she wouldn't want to talk on the phone or meet in person, so they just stick with text.

If you want her back for real, you're going to need to talk to her on the phone and then meet up with her in person.

However, when you are texting, make sure you keep your texts short and to the point.

Why?

Women hate it when men text like a girl and go on and on about things.

On the other hand, women love it when men have the balls to text short and to the point, while being witty or easy-going about things.

For example:

Her: So, what have you been up to lately?

You: I'm not sure if I should tell you.

Her: What? Why? Tell me.

You: Well, okay, but only over the phone. I don't want a record of it in writing. Will call you.

Then, call her and joke around about what you've been up to.

For example: She asks what you've been up to that is so secretive that you can text it and you say, "I was involved in a hit and run accident" and she is then shocked and asks something like, "What? You killed someone or you hurt someone? What happened?"

You then laugh and say, "No, I was just kidding. I just thought I'd mess you with you for a laugh. Anyway, how you've been?" and continue on the conversation in a confident, easy-going way, before you suggest catching up in person.

Finally!

7. Don't Hide Behind Texts. Get to a Phone Call and Meet Up

It's easy to fall into the habit of texting your ex without ever working up the courage to call her, or see her in person.

You might think that it's best to take things slowly because you don't want to scare her off. You might also hope that when she's ready, she will tell you that she wants to get back with you. Yet, a woman will rarely make the first move with her ex, unless she is still truly in love with him or can't find a better replacement guy to move on with. Instead, she will wait for him to take the lead in the ex back process and get them back into a relationship together. If he does, she will know that he is man enough for her, so she will then relax her guard and allow herself to respect him, feel attracted to him and love him again. On the other hand, if he just hides behind texts, she will gradually lose respect and attraction for him and want to find a real man (rather than a text man) to give her heart to. So, if you want to get your ex back, don't think that it's all going to happen via text. To get her back, you need to be fearless enough to get her on a phone call with you and then to meet up with you in person. Remember: A text is just a bunch of words on a screen.

Anyone can type, I'm sorry, I or I've really changed, via text, but if a woman can't hear the tone of your voice, or see your body language, she's probably just going to assume the worst (i.e. that you're still the same guy she broke up with).

The most respect and attraction is experienced when a woman talks to you on the phone or in person, not via text.

Regardless of how often you text, or what you text her, nothing that you say in a text message can be powerful enough to convince your ex that you're no longer the guy she remembers.

So, don't make the classic ex back mistake of hiding behind texts and then wondering why nothing is happening.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Understand the Mixed Messages That Your Ex is Giving You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The secret is to not try to understand them.

If you try to understand a woman's mixed messages and she notices that you're trying, she will give you even more mixed messages.

Why?

Women are turned off by self-doubt in men, so if you're doubting your attractiveness to her, she's going to be feeling turned off.

She will then give you more mixed messages because she won't be feeling enough attraction and will continue to test your confidence to see if you change and man up.

Women want you to be strong, not weak and doubtful.

You've got to believe in yourself and your attractiveness to her no matter what she says or does.

Don't ever doubt yourself.

That's the kind of confidence that women love in a man.

It's not about telling her, "Hey, no matter what you say or do, I'm going to keep chasing you."

No.

It's about simply remaining confident and you guide her back into a relationship with you in a calm, easy-going manner.

If you maintain your confidence, she will notice and she will feel respect and attraction for you because of it.

However, if you're always trying to understand her mixed messages and are doubting yourself as a result, she will notice and she will feel turned off by you.

Believe in Yourself and Focus on Reactivating Her Feelings

[image: Believe in yourself and reactivate her feelings]

Although it would be nice if a woman was perfectly honest and clear about her feelings (e.g. she simply came out and said, â"¢ Yes, I still care for you and I want to get back together againâ"¢), it rarely happens.

In most cases, a woman will give her ex mixed messages and see if he can maintain his confidence as he continues to reactivate her feelings.

If he does that, her guard will come down and she will begin to give him clearer signals and even open up and admit that she misses him, still loves him and wants to get back with him.

On the other hand, if a guy just waits around hoping that his ex will suddenly realize how much she misses him and then declare her undying love for him, he will usually be very disappointed.

In most cases, a woman will simply move on without her ex man unless he actively gets her back.

Watch this video for more info!|

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't waste time analyzing the mixed messages that she is giving you.

Instead, just focus on re-sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you by talking and behaving in ways that are attractive to her.

For example: When you interact with your ex!

- You are now confident, emotionally strong and self assured, rather than insecure and self-doubting.
- You are emotionally masculine and dominant, rather than being afraid to stand up to her (in a loving, but assertive way) when she tries to dominate you with her confident personality.
- You are focused and determined to succeed in life, rather than giving up at the first sign of difficulty.
- You make her laugh and smile when you interact with her, rather than making her feel bored, annoyed or uncomfortable around you.
- You make her feel feminine and girly in your presence, rather than making her feel turned off by you.

Remember: How you make your ex feel about you when you interact with her is the most important part of getting her back.

It's about making her have feelings for you again.

That is what counts.

If you interact with her and talk and behave in ways that naturally attract women, she will feel attracted to you.

So, don't take it too seriously if your ex gives you mixed messages when you are doing everything right.

A woman will instinctively test a guy to see if he's genuinely confident and emotionally strong, or if he's only putting on an act of confidence to get her back.

Women feel an instinctive need to be with a guy who is genuinely confident and able to handle the challenges of life, because it makes her feel safe about a future with him.

So, you need to maintain a positive attitude regardless of how she is behaving (e.g. being nice and sweet one minute and closed off and distant the next, saying she still cares for you and then saying that it's over, responding to some texts, but not all).

When she can see that you're not the same guy she broke up with, her guard will come down and she will reconnect with her feelings for you.

She will want to be close to you and get physical again, because it will now feel so much more amazing for her based on the changes you've made to yourself.

Women thrive on a man's confidence.

It turns them on at a deep level and satisfies them during sex.

By the way!

Real confidence and emotional strength is not something that can be faked.

If a guy fakes confidence, his true emotional state will come through in subtle and obvious ways when he interacts with his ex.

For example: When a guy is talking to his ex and she says something like, “I’m not sure how I feel about you right now. Maybe I love you, but maybe I don’t.”, he might pretend to be more confident than he really feels, by acting that he doesn’t care about how she feels about him and that he’s totally fine without her.

He might say something like, “Ahh, it’s okay. I don’t really care anyway. It’s fine with me if you love me and it’s also fine if you don’t. Don’t think I’m going to wait around for you forever to make up your mind. I have a life that I’m getting on with. I’m doing fine without you.”

He’s likely hoping by pretending not to care about her decision, she will realize what a great guy he really is and change her mind now before she loses him.

Yet, in most cases, a woman (especially when she has had a bit of experience with men and breaks ups) will simply test the guy to see if he’s really as confident as he seems, or if he’s only pretending.

For example: She might say something along the lines of, “Well, you’re obviously happier now without me in your life. It’s clear to me now that you never really loved me. No problem then! I won’t bother you again. From this moment onwards you’re free of me. Goodbye.”

If he then panics and quickly says something like, “No, no – wait. Please don’t be like that! You know that I still love you. I’ve always loved you. You’re my only true love. It’s just that you not being able to decide whether you love me or not is killing me. I don’t want a life without you in it. Can’t you see that? I haven’t moved on with any other women because I just want you!” she will see that he really does care and was simply putting on an act.

On the other hand, if you are genuinely confident, when your ex tests you by giving you mixed message, you can react by confident, calm and in control.

So, she says something like, “I’m not sure how I feel about you right now. Maybe I love you, but maybe I don’t.”

You can then say, “I know that I love you. If you love me, that’s great and if you don’t love me, well, I’m sure I’ll get over that. At the end of the day, I have more going on in my life besides a relationship with you. So, even though I do want you back, I don’t need you back to feel happy and fulfilled. My life goes on and I’m happy about where my future is heading. It would be nice if you and I were together, but if you don’t want that, I accept that and won’t try to change your mind about it from now on.”

All of a sudden, she will feel a tremendous amount of respect you because you’re being so honest, while also being a loving, considerate man.

You’re not freaking out emotionally.

You’re in control, you’re not being needy and are expressing yourself in an emotionally mature, honest way.

You also have the class to make her feel good at the same time, rather than calling her names, insulting her or suggesting that she has a problem.

A lot of guys say things like, “You have issues. You need to go see a doctor or psychologist and get help” when their ex woman is giving them mixed messages.

What these guys don’t realize is that she is simply testing his confidence and will stop that when she proves himself to be consistently confident no matter what she says or does.

That’s what women are looking for.

They want to feel safe with a man who is truly, genuinely confident in himself and his attractiveness to her, rather than getting stuck with a guy who will need her to carry him throughout life, be gentle with him emotionally and constantly encourage him.

Mistakes That Slow Down or Ruin the Ex Back Process

There is actually an ex back process that will work for your specific situation.

Watch thisâ€¦!

You’ve got to go from one step to the next in a way that will work for your, unique relationship.

Don’t waste time remaining stuck at a certain point (e.g. ignoring her) and hoping that she wakes up one day, misses you like crazy and then guides you back into a relationship.

If you want to get her back for real, be sure to avoid the following mistakes...

1. Waiting for extremely obvious signals of interest from her before you feel confident enough to make a move

[image: Mistakes that slow down or ruin the ex back process]

Sometimes, a guy can waste a lot of time (i.e. weeks, months and even years) waiting for his ex to give him an obvious sign that she’s interested in getting back with him.

Secretly, he is hoping that she will say something clear and obvious like, “I really miss you. I think breaking up was a mistake. Want to get back together again?”

He can then say, “Yes! I miss you too. Let’s get back together again,” and then everything will be perfect and they will live happily ever after.

Yayyyy!

Yet, real life is not like a children’s fairy tale or a Hollywood romantic comedy.

In the real world, even if a woman still has feelings for her ex and is actually hoping that they will get back together again, she will rarely give him an obvious signal to let him know.

Why?

In addition to not wanting to help him feel confidence, a woman also doesn’t want to make herself seem too desperate and easy.

So, rather than make it obvious that she still has feelings for her ex, she may even pretend to have no feelings for him at all.

For example: If a guy calls up his ex, she will act cold and aloof and may even say things like, “Why are you calling me? Have you forgotten that it’s over between us?” or “What do you want? I have nothing left to say to you.”

If he buckles under the pressure and loses confidence in himself, she then can’t fully respect him and feel attracted to him.

She then feels disappointed because he is ruining their chance of getting back together, by not realizing that she is secretly hoping that he changes the mood of the conversation and gets her to drop her guard.

For example: He uses humor to get her laughing and change the seriousness of the conversation, by saying something like, "Oh, is this not Pizza Hut? I was calling to order a large Pepperoni. I was just about to say â□□ that's pretty bad customer service you're offering there. I was going to ask to speak to the manager" and then have a laugh with her about that.

Then, say, "Anyway, just kidding â□□ how have you been?" and have a chat with her.

You might eventually say, "By the wayâ□□I still want a pizza. How about you â□□ hungry? We should catch up and say hi tonight. We can grab a pizza and talk and after that, if you want to leave â□□ I will be totally fine with that. Let's catch up tonight."

Then, catch up with her, fully re-attract her, hook up with her sexually and get the relationship back together.

That's how it's done.

However, if you wait for a clear signal from your ex before you make a move, you may be waiting for a long, long time and she might just move on with another guy instead.

2. Hoping that she will take the lead and guide you back into a relationship

When a woman breaks up with a guy who has ruined her feelings for him (e.g. he became very insecure), she will usually try to move on without him.

In cases where the woman still wants to give the relationship another chance, she will give him mixed signals and wait to see if heâ□□s man enough to take the lead and do what he needs to do (i.e. reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love) to confidently guide her back into a relationship.

Where many guys go wrong is by hoping that woman will take the lead and basically tell him what she wants him to do to get her back.

Giving mixed messages, she will say, "I'm not sure yet. Give me a month of space and then we can talk," so he believes her and follows her lead.

Meanwhile, she's sitting around thinking, "Why is he obeying me like that? Doesn't he know that we can get back together if he actively changes how I feel? Doesn't he know that if I meet a guy who is interesting and attractive, I'm probably just going to hook up with him instead and then try to move on? Doesn't he realize that I can't promise my loyalty to him now that we're having space? Does he just expect me to follow through on my promise like a man would? Doesn't he realize that I'm a woman and I make decisions about relationships based on how I feel on any given day, not on what I said I would do weeks prior?"

Most guys don't understand that women really are very different to men.

So, some guys will think something like, â□□I donâ□□t want to come across as being pushy. Iâ□□m sure my ex will appreciate it if I just let her call the shots from now on. When sheâ□□s feeling ready, she will tell me and we can then get back together again. I show her that I'm willing to wait. She will tell me what she wants when she is ready.â□□

Yet, thatâs not how to get an ex woman back.

She wants you to lead her back into a relationship by reactivating her feelings and remaining confident in yourself at all times.

A woman will rarely take on the dominant, masculine role of the man to get the relationship back together again.

Instead, she will usually sit back and wait to see if he is emotionally strong enough to take on the leading role in the ex back process.

If he does, she will be able to respect him again.

When she respects him, she will feel attracted to him and then she will then be able to reconnect with her feelings of love.

On the other hand, if he waits around hoping that she will be the leader, she will lose more respect for him for not having the balls to take the lead and get her back.

When that happens, she will give him even more mixed messages than before (to test his confidence), while at the same time, focusing her attention on moving on and finding a replacement guy who is man enough to lead the way in a relationship with her.

So, if you want to get your ex back, donât wait for her to take the lead and explain how the ex back process will work for you and her.

Watch the video above and you will realize that women usually SAY one thing and DO another.

So, donât expect her to give you advice on how to get her back, or for her to follow through on her promise to have some space and then get back with you.

Youâve got to be man enough to take the lead and make things happen.

3. Feeling unwelcome to flirt with her and actively make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you

Some guys make the mistake of thinking that flirting with an ex is wrong.

A guy might think, âIf I flirt with my ex, she might get angry and she may then stop wanting to talk to me or see me again. I canât take that risk. Besides, sheâs always giving me mixed messages, so sheâs probably not open to me flirting with her right now. If I just treat her like a friend, she will eventually relax and open up to me and then we can take it from there.â

Yet, thatâs not how it works.

If a guy is not actively making his ex feel respect and attraction for him, his friendly, non-sexual, Mr. Nice Guy, approach will simply make her feel nothing for him.

Nothing.

Zero.

Zilch.

Nada.

If you want to get a woman back, youâve got to actively make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

If you donât do that, she simply opens herself up to meeting new guys, having sex and falling in love again with a guy who isnât afraid to make her feel exciting, sexual feelings of lust and desire.

She might SAY to you that she's not interested in meeting other guys, but she will then DO the complete opposite.

That's just how women are.

Women don't want you to follow their lead.

They want you to be the kind of man that they can follow along with.

That doesn't mean you have to think of everything, make all the decisions and do all the work.

No.

Instead, it just means that you need to believe in yourself no matter what she or anyone says about you.

Be a man that she can look up to and respect and she will then gladly follow along as your loving, loyal and supportive woman.

However, if you don't believe in yourself, she will naturally want to get away from you because you will make her feel unsafe in this world and unsafe about her future.

So, don't be afraid to flirt with her and make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

Remember: A romantic relationship between a man and a woman has to have a basis of sexual attraction and respect.

If that isn't there, it's a friendship and it won't last.

After all, she has sexual needs and so do you.

If there is no mutual sexual and romantic attraction, one of you will be unhappy and then cheat or leave.

So, don't bother trying to understand the mixed messages your ex is giving you and then being on your best behavior in the hopes that this will impress her and make her want you back.

Instead, focus on actively making her have feelings of respect and attraction for you again by flirting with her, making her laugh and smile and showing her the new and improved version of you every time you interact with her (e.g. via text, e-mail, social media, on the phone, or in person), and then confidently guide her back into a relationship with you.

Initially, she may continue to give you mixed messages to test your confidence and see if you will become insecure.

So, just maintain a confident, positive attitude and continue on until you are hugging, kissing, having sex and are back together in a real relationship.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

6 Tips For Getting an Ex Back After Being Apart For Years

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you want to get an ex back after being apart for years, here's what you need to do...

1. Improve Your Ability to Attract Her Before You Contact Her

The key to getting your ex back after being apart for years is to make sure that when you contact her, you are now ready to give her the attraction experience she always wanted from you.

For example: You are now much more confident, self assured and emotionally mature than before.

If you try to get her back while making the same old attraction mistakes that you made years ago (e.g. you give her too much power, you feel unworthy of her, you are afraid to laugh at her when she is being mean or bitchy), she isn't going to feel motivated to want to get back with you.

When you talk to her on the phone or in person, you've got to be able to let her see that you really have changed and become a better man (e.g. you're more confident, charismatic, self-assured, charming, interesting) than before.

If you haven't changed and she can sense that you would probably make the same mistakes as you did in the past, she's not going to be very interested.

She will think something like, "Does he seriously think that I'm going to give up my great life to get back into a relationship with him, when nothing about him has really changed? He's still at the same level he was at when I broke up with him years ago. Now, after I've managed to get over the pain of our break up, he wants me to go back to being with a guy who still doesn't have what I want. What? He must think I'm crazy!"

She'll then give an excuse like, "Aww, that's so sweet of you, but I'm seeing someone else now. Sorry, I wish you all the best in your search for love" or "Thanks, but I'm in love with another guy and we're going to get married soon."

So, if you want to get your ex back after being apart for years, make sure that when you contact her, you're not the same guy she broke up with.

For example: A guy might have been insecure in his relationship with his ex, which was one of the main reasons she broke up with him.

If he calls her up after a long time of being apart to try and get her back, she will naturally test him to see if he's changed (e.g. by pretending not to remember him, being cold and unfriendly towards him, telling him how great her life has been since they broke up, talking about a guy she is seeing).

If he's unable to handle her confidence tests and gets upset, loses his nerve, or keeps his sense of humor constrained because he's trying to be on his best behavior, she will realize that he hasn't changed and she won't be interested in getting back together again.

On the other hand, if he remains emotionally strong and confident and uses humor to attract her and lighten the mood, she will drop her guard.

She will continue to test him during the call and assess whether or not he has become more of a man, or if he's still pretty much the same.

If she gets the sense that he has matured, she will be more open to meeting up with him in person to experience the new him.

Another example is when a woman broke up with a guy because he didn't have any direction in life.

He was just wondering aimlessly from dead-end job to dead-end job without following through on any of his big dreams or goals.

If he contacts her and she discovers that he's still not making much progress in life, she's going to feel even more turned off by him than before.

She will think something like, "I can't believe that after all this time, he hasn't made something of himself. He has no big goals, no dreams and no ambitions. I don't want to get dragged into a life with an uncertain future by getting back into a relationship with him. I need a man that I can look up to, respect and rely on to be able to take care of both of us. I don't want a guy that needs me to take care of him emotionally and give his life some purpose. I want a man that has big goals, dreams and ambitions that he's actually following through on."

She will then reject his attempts to get her back and will ask that he just leaves the past in the past.

So, if you're serious about getting your ex back after being apart for years, you must improve your ability to attract her based on the man you are now.

When she can see for herself that you really are different now, her guard will come down and she'll open herself up to the idea of getting back together with you.

2. Let Her See, Via Your Social Media Account(s), That You've Been Living a Fun Life Without Her

[image: Post up photos on social media of you having fun with other people]

One of the best ways to attract your ex, is by making sure that you focus on being happy, fulfilled and enjoying a fun life without her.

Then, make sure that you let her see it for herself via social media.

If she's not your friend on Facebook, just make sure that you post your photos and set it to "public" rather than "friends" so anyone can see it from the outside.

Trust me, women always stop by to check out their ex's profile on social media.

If she's having a boring day or suddenly thinks of you and wants to look at your photo to reminisce, it's important that you portray that right type of image to her.

For example: You can do that by posting photos of yourself

- Having fun with friends and/or other women.
- Having fun in exotic places that you've traveled to since the break up with her.
- Achieving something big (e.g. getting your black belt in a martial art, winning a prize, taking your first solo skydive).

When she can see for herself that you are confident, happy and getting on with life without her, she becomes more open to meeting up with you because you clearly don't need her in your life.

Women hate to meet up with ex's who desperately need her back to feel good about themselves.

On the other hand, most women are open to meeting up with an ex if they can see or sense that he's happy, loved by others and has been enjoying a fun life without her.

Essentially, she wants to know that he might want her back, but he doesn't need her back to help himself feel okay.

The next step is to

3. Contact Her Via Social Media to Say Hi as an Old Friend

Make sure you post up the fun photos first!

Don't contact her if your photos are just lonely ones (e.g. you on your own, photos of landscapes and buildings that you've seen while travelling alone).

If you have fun photos, you are ready to contact her.

For example: You might send her a message like, Hey ex girlfriend Long time no speak. I thought I'd get in touch to say hi as a friend. Life has been good. How've you been?

If she hasn't heard from you in a long time, she may think, Wow, this is unexpected. I wonder what he wants with me after all this time, and she will then look at your social media profile to see what you've been up to since you and her broke up.

When she sees that you haven't been lonely without her and have been getting on with your life, she will feel comfortable replying to you.

Then, when she responds to you, ask her for her phone number (i.e. in case she's changed it since your break up, if you've misplaced it), so that you can call her up to have a quick chat.

If you already have her number, you can message her and reply to what she said, while also adding in, "Hey, I might give you a call to say hi sometime. I'm sure we can have a chat and laugh as old friends."

If you don't have her number, just ask her for it as I mentioned above. Say, "Hey, what's your number? I'll give you a call sometime to say hi. Just as a friend of course."

Initially, she might be a bit resistant to the idea and may say things like, I'm not sure, or I don't think it's a good idea.

Whatever you do, don't lose your composure and start saying things like, Please, I really want to talk to you, or Please, I've missed you so much. I just want to hear your voice again because that type of needy behavior will turn her off.

Instead, just show her that you're now an emotionally strong and confident man by saying something like, Hey, it's just a quick call between old friends to say hi. We can do that, right? It's no big deal! It could be fun to say hi, even if just for a couple of minutes.

In most cases, a woman will then give you her number.

Then, once you have her phone number, just go ahead and call her up that day or the next.

Remember: The main reason why it's important to get you ex on a phone call is to re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for the new you and then get her to agree to meet up with you in person.

Where a lot of guys go wrong, is by wasting too much time texting or messaging an ex back and forth in a friendly way, without getting her on a phone call or arranging an in-person meet up.

Guys also try to ask for a meet up via text, which almost always fails.

You've got to have the balls to ask on a call.

Hiding behind texts with an ex usually leads to the woman losing interest or getting turned off by what you're texting (e.g. talking about the relationship, asking her too many questions).

Unfortunately, many guys feel afraid to pick up the phone and call their ex because it's been too many years since they broke up.

A guy will think something like, It's just been so long since we've seen each other. What if I call her and she hears my voice and decides that she doesn't want to see me again? At least she's texting/messaging me now. Texts are better than nothing. Maybe we can just text as friends for a while and then when she feels comfortable, she will ask to speak to me on the phone.

Yet, that rarely, if ever, happens.

In most cases, a woman will simply get turned off or bored of receiving endless messages from her long-ago ex and she will stop responding to him.

In other cases, she will continue texting, but will also continue moving on with her life without him (e.g. having sex, dating and falling in love with other guys).

So, if you want to get your ex back after being apart for years, make sure that you don't waste a lot of time texting or messaging back and forth.

You've got to get her on a phone call with you as quickly as possible, so that you can re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you and then arrange a time to meet up in person.

That's what works.

Okay, so after contacting her via social media

4. Get Her On a Phone Call With You and Make Her Laugh, Smile and Feel Good

Once you get your ex on a phone call, don't waste the opportunity by being too nice or neutral with her.

You've got to use the phone call to show her that you've changed (via the way you talk with her and the way you respond to her) and spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

A good way to do that is by making her laugh and smile.

For example: Imagine that you're talking to your ex on the phone and she asks, So, what have you been up to since we broke up?

Rather than reply with something mundane like, Oh, I've been busy with work mostly. How about you? which will only make the conversation between you and her seem forced and guarded, you can instead say something that will make her laugh and get her thinking, Wow, this *is different! He is so much more confident now. Heâ€™s funny. Iâ€™m enjoying talking to him again. Maybe I should start seeing him again?*â€”

So, when your ex says, â€œWhat have you been up to since we broke up?â€” you might say something along the lines of, â€œI can't believe you don't know what has happened. Itâ€™s been all over the news. Selena Gomez was been stalking me for months. I wasn't able to get her to leave me alone. I had to get a restraining order to keep her away. It has been a rough couple of months. Don't you watch the news?â€” and then have a laugh with her about that.

She will laugh, her guard will come down and rather than feeling tense about talking to her ex after being apart for years, she will feel like you and her are picking up from where you left off when things were good between you.

You can then say, â€œJust kiddingâ€” me and Selena Gomez are cool. We're just friends. Anyway, how about you â€” how's life?â€” and then let her tell you some things about what her life has been like since.

Note: Obviously you don't have to use the Selena Gomez example if that wouldn't be appropriate for you and her. It's just an example to help you understand how to approach the conversation (i.e. use humor, be relaxed, don't be so serious).

You can then tell her some of the real things that you've been up to and say something like, “Anyway, I think it would be fun to catch up and say hi in person sometime. What you do think?”

If you've been making her laugh and relax, she's almost certainly going to agree because she will sense that catching up with you would feel good, rather than awkward or weird.

5. Get Her to Meet Up With You in Person

[image: Meeting up with an ex for coffee]

Sometimes, a woman will instantly agree to meet up with an ex that she hasn't seen for years.

Yet, in most cases a woman will initially be resistant to the idea (e.g. because sheâ€™s afraid of getting hurt again, she has a new guy, she doesn't believe that youâ€™ve changed, she doesn't want to seem too eager right away).

The main thing to bear in mind is that no matter how much sheâ€™s saying things like, â€œNo, I don't want to meet up with you,â€” or â€œThatâ€™s a bad idea. We should just let sleeping dogs lie,â€” you must remain calm, relaxed and confident as you continue sparking her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Once you respark her feelings, her guard will come down and she will become open to meeting you with you.

If she initially resists, you can then say something like, â€œHey, itâ€™s just two old friends getting together to say hello after a long time. Iâ€™m not asking you to be my kidney donor; itâ€™s just a coffee and a laugh! Come onâ€” letâ€™s try to catch up and say hi sometime this week.â€”

She will most-likely say, â€œOkay,â€” or â€œI suppose that would be fine.â€”

Then, just go ahead and make plans to meet up with her at a time that suits both of you.

6. Guide Her Through the Rest Of the Ex Back Process

At the meet up, make sure that you continue saying and doing the things that will turn her feelings back on for you (e.g. being confident, charismatic, funny, charming, emotionally masculine).

When you respark her feelings of respect and sexual attraction in person, it makes her see you in a different light.

Her walls come down and the thought of hugging you, kissing you, being in your arms and being your girl starts to feel good to her again.

She might initially try to fight her feelings for you by saying to herself, â€œWhat are you doing? Itâ€™s been over for a long time. You canâ€™t get back together after being apart for years.â€

Yet, her heart will be full of new, exciting emotions for you that she wonâ€™t be able to ignore.

You then just need to guide her through the rest of the ex-back process and show that things really are different now.

Let her see that you're not the same guy she broke up with before.

She will then realize that if she lets you get away this time, she'll be missing out on the greatest love of her life.

So, donâ€™t be afraid to take a chance.

×

[image]

Almost there! Please complete this quick form to gain instant access.

[image: Dan Bacon]

Simply enter your email address and click the orange button to gain free, instant access!

WATCH VIDEO (FREE)

Yes, I want free tips via email from Dan Bacon. I can unsubscribe at anytime with a click. Privacy policy.

How to Know if Your Ex is Truly Over You or Not

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

A woman can't ever be truly over you if she once loved you.

She will always have a place for you in her heart and you can reactivate her original feelings for you again if you interact with her and let her experience the new and improved version of you that is so much more confident, masculine and charismatic.

You have improved since the break up, right?

Of course you have.

You are now a better, more emotionally attractive man than you were before, so she is going to feel attracted to the new and improved you, even if she tries to hide it.

This is why it's so important to interact with her on the phone and in person to let her experience the new and improved you.

If she won't answer your calls or see you in person, you can start with text.

If she's blocked your phone, you can start via social media.

If she's blocked you via social media, you can get her to unblock you.

Whatever your starting point is, you must get to the point where you can interact with her on a phone call and in person.

That's when you can truly reactivate her feelings and make her reconnect with her old feelings of love for you.

3 Ways to Reactivate Your Ex's Feelings For You

[image: 3 ways to reactivate your ex's feelings for you]

How she feels about you now is not how she will feel about you when you interact with her and re-attract her.

So, don't worry about if she's over you right now. That doesn't matter.

What matters is that you interact with her and make her reconnect with her feelings for you.

3 ways you can do that is by:

1. Making her feel feminine and girly in your presence

In a relationship, it's the man's responsibility to maintain and grow the love and attraction between him and his woman.

A big part of that is continuing to make her feel like a real woman around him (i.e. she feels feminine and girly, she's free to be emotional, she feels like his girl rather than his friend or buddy).

If a guy stops treating his woman like a sexy, attractive, feminine woman that he desires and can't keep his hands off and instead treats her more like a friend or a roommate, she will eventually start to resent it.

A woman knows that her physical appearance is the most attractive thing to a man, so if her own man stops making her feel as though she is physically attractive, she will feel horrible about herself and want to get that validation from other men (i.e. she will cheat on him or break up with him and then hook up with another guy).

This is why it's so important to always look at your woman as your girl.

Look at her as a sexual being, or sexual object, while also being respectful, loving and caring towards her.

Don't fall into the trap of just treating her like your buddy or partner in life.

Look at her as your girl, so she can look up to you as her man and feel girly and feminine around you as a result.

Why is that important?

The less feminine and girly a woman feels around her man, the less sexual attraction she feels for him.

Her attraction literally shuts off and she starts to look at him as being annoying and a turn off.

Over time, she may begin to say to herself, “Why do I feel this way with him now? It used to be so good. I want to be with a man who knows how to make me feel desirable and turned on. I just don't feel attractive in this relationship anymore. We're more like friends than anything else. He just doesn't understand how to treat a woman like a woman” and she will then break up with him.

So, if you want to reactivate your ex's feelings, you must ensure that you are making her feel feminine and girly every time you interact with her from now on.

How can you do that?

Essentially, by being more emotionally masculine than her, thereby allowing her to fully relax into being a feminine, girly woman around you.

For example: She complains about her hard day at work and starts gossiping about people at her office and you laugh (important) and say, “Oh, you're such a drama queen, aren't you? There's always some big problem going on in your life every day” and then laugh at her in a loving way.

She then feels as though there is a clear difference between you and her (i.e. you are a man who doesn't complain and gossip like a girl and she's a little drama queen who always seems to have some problem going on in her life).

Another example is where you and her go to a café and you say, “Okay, let's sit over there” and choose the table, rather than needing her to be the leader and asking, “Where do you want to sit?”

The more you make her feel girly and feminine in comparison to your masculinity, the more she will start thinking, “I thought I was over him, but I'm not. I still love him. Why do I find him sexy all of a sudden? Why am I feeling this way?”

Another way to reactive your ex's feelings is to

2. Use Humor to make her smile and laugh to bring down her guard

Another very effective way to make a woman reconnect with her feelings is by making her smile, laugh and feel happy to be interacting with you again.

When she is laughing and smiling, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to hold on to negative feelings for you and she unavoidably drops her guard and opens herself up to the positive feelings that sheâ€™s been ignoring for so long (e.g. love, respect and attraction).

Hereâ€™s an example of how to use humor to diffuse a potentially difficult situation between you and your ex.

Imagine that youâ€™re talking to your ex on the phone and she says something like, â€œIâ€™m sorry, but Iâ€™m truly over you now. You need to forget about me and move on.â€

She will likely be expecting you to get upset and possibly even react by begging and pleading with her for another chance, telling her how much you still love her, or possibly even getting angry with her.

Instead, you can shock her (in a good way) by being emotionally strong and taking the risk to joke with her by saying something like, â€œForget about what? Sorry, who are you again? I forgot who I was speaking toâ€ and have a laugh with her about it.

Sheâ€™s asked you to forget about her and youâ€™re playfully saying that youâ€™ve forgotten who you were speaking to, as though sheâ€™s not that important and you werenâ€™t really paying attention to the phone call.

